
This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

GoogleTM books

<https://books.google.com>

B 1,387,223

WALKER'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

OF THE

ENGLISH LANGUAGE,

ADAPTED TO

The Present State of Literature and Science.

By B. H. SMART,

AUTHOR OF BEGINNINGS OF A NEW SCHOOL OF METAPHYSICS; A PRACTICAL GRAMMAR OF ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION; THEORY AND PRACTICE OF ELOCUTION, &c.

Eighth Edition.

LONDON:

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL AND CO.; HAMILTON AND CO.; WHITTAKER AND CO.;
E. HODGSON; SMITH, ELDER AND CO.; HOULSTON AND SONS;
C. TEMPLEMAN; J. VAN VOORST; BICKERS AND SON;
W. KENT AND CO.; DEIGHTON, BELL AND CO., CAMBRIDGE.

1874.

820.3
W18

LONDON:
PRINTED BY WILLIAM CLOWES AND SONS,
STAMFORD STREET AND CHANCERY CROSS.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

AN English Pronouncing Dictionary, to be a complete work of its kind, must reflect in full extent the spoken language of its day,—must exhibit, with marks of distinction to those which are low, fantastic, or obsolete, all words that occur in the oral discourse of well-bred, courtly, English people, using the language of their forefathers, with such additions to it as the growing science, literature, or fashion of the time may prescribe. Acting under such an impression when I undertook to remodel and augment Walker's Dictionary for the original proprietors of that work, I so far carried out my own views as to produce what in fact was a new Dictionary; and the success that has followed it, notwithstanding the difficulties and unavoidable inaccuracies attendant on the execution, is a proof that, with respect at least to my plan and purpose, the remodelled Dictionary was an improvement on its predecessor.

Ten years, distributing several thousands of copies, have elapsed since the first publication of the work. During this time, science has made greater efforts, opinions have been more busy, hypothesis has put forth wider pretensions, and the arts have effected greater revolutions, than perhaps during any former period of like brevity. These features of the age have had a correspondent effect upon our language: epithets belonging to old opinions have been revived in order to illustrate modern doctrines; new words have been invented or borrowed to suit new systems; and terms of familiar use have been twisted to new and peculiar senses, in order to accord with altered views. The Dictionary would be left behind the age, if it did not reflect these changes; and it is hoped that the augmentations and corrections now appended to, or incorporated with the work, will make good the pretensions of its title-page for several years yet to come.

It was perhaps to be expected that the most striking feature in the pages of the remodelled Dictionary would be copied by subsequent publications of its kind; and if this had been done with an acknowledgement, such as was also due for appropriating the amalgamated Keys of Greek, Latin, and Hebrew names, no honest principle would have been violated which literary men and their publishers are bound to observe in availing themselves of others' labours. I am content however to receive, though paid so crookedly, this evident tribute to the merit or utility of what has been appropriated; especially as no approach has been ventured, by any Pronouncing Dictionary, to the stores I had previously accumulated. The additions now made carry the work still further from the reach of present competition; while the extension given to the Etymological Index of Terminations, will compensate for the absence of foreign roots in the body of the Dictionary. The learned inspector will not want those roots, because the definitions are so framed as to remind him of them: and to the unlearned, the previous Indexes will be a much better guide to etymologies, than any assistance that could be furnished in the columns of the Dictionary and its Supplement. The Supplementary Index, which my Son has continued, is adapted, like the first, for the inquirer whose education may not have fitted him to derive benefit from etymological works of more learned pretensions; and it is with a view to his clearer information, that a quaint or inelegant rendering of the words that stand as roots into English, is preferred to one that would have taken up more space, without furthering the real object of the Index.

The Epitomized Edition of this Dictionary having been prepared four years after the larger-sized work, embodies many of the words now given in the Supplement of the latter; and I beg to state, as to the smaller work, that no other of its kind and size comes near to it in copiousness. I also beg to urge, in favour of my qualification to edit these Pronouncing Dictionaries, what I thought it right to state in the Preface to the smaller one, that "I am a Londoner, the son of a Londoner, and have lived nearly all my life in London." The Editors of Pronouncing Dictionaries have, with few exceptions, been Irishmen or Scotchmen: my prototype Walker, I am informed, was a Yorkshireman; and the information must be correct, or surely he would not have marked all words in ook,—hook, cook, look, &c.,—to be pronounced with the long sound of the vowel digraph, as in food, pool, boot, &c., and not, as we always hear those words in London, with the short sound, as in good, wool, foot, &c. This Northern peculiarity, along with others of Provincial origin, is unconsciously copied by Provincial Editors of subsequent Dictionaries, who pay more deference to Walker's correctness of ear, than my experience warrants me in conceding. At all events, if his ear was correct for the pronunciation of his day, it may be fairly questioned in many cases when applied to words as they are now heard.

As, beside pronunciation, the Dictionary pretends to exhibit improvements in many points of literary importance, I cannot conclude without acknowledging the aid I have received from other quarters. There are two gentlemen to whom, in common with all who have had occasion "antiquam exquirere matrem," I stand much indebted. I have the pleasure of being acquainted with both; but my tribute is public, not private. With regard to Mr., now Dr. Charles Richardson, I have already made confession of the relation in which my humble labours stand to his: (Note [200] page xlix. ensuing.) And with regard to the Rev. Dr. Bosworth, I consult my own interest in stating that his Anglo-Saxon Dictionary and Anglo-Saxon Grammar have been among my best aids in the progress of my labours. There still remain recent works of the highest character to be mentioned among my guides; but Dr. Ure's Dictionary of the Arts and Sciences, and Professor Brande's Dictionary of Science, Literature, and Art, are so well known, that, without any confession, it will at once be supposed I have neglected no assistance which these works supply to a modern lexicographer.

London, 1846.

ORIGINAL PREFACE.

THE following "PROSPECTUS" was affixed to this work during its publication in Parts :—

"The undertaking for the Original Proprietors of WALKER'S DICTIONARY was simply to improve the last Edition of their Work; but, in fulfilling this task, MR. SMART has really produced a new Work, of which the chief features are:

"1. A more accurate analysis of the sounds of the language, with correspondent Schemes and Principles of Pronunciation.

"II. A method of indicating the pronunciation of words, which, by renouncing altogether the pretence of exhibiting no more letters than sounds, is less barbarous to the eye, and at once intelligible.

"These are the altered features of the work as a 'Critical Pronouncing Dictionary:'—other improvements of a higher kind are attempted :—viz.,

"1. To exhibit words in such a manner as to make those of the same family throw a light on each other's meaning and application.

"2. To furnish as much insight into the etymology and composition of words as can be given to a mere English inspector.

"3. To mark, in instances that require it, the change from ancient to modern usage, and to distinguish words that are obsolete or obsolescent, technical, unusual, partially authorized, or vulgar.

"4. To restore from Johnson's Dictionary the obsolete words which WALKER omits, because they are necessary to the reading of authors of the Elizabethan age; and to insert, from TODD, WEBSTER, and other sources, ALL the important words which the progress of literature and science has accumulated since the days of JOHNSON.

"5. To define, with cautious exactitude, words applied to the assumed data in all general or abstract reasoning, and which refer in any way to the process itself: because, in a Dictionary meant for general use, it is deemed highly important to indicate the fact, that words are not merely the expositors, but are also the INSTRUMENTS of thinking."

I record this Prospectus not merely as a statement of the objects proposed, but to justify the title, Walker remodelled, which the proprietors give the work, and my own claim, notwithstanding that title, to be considered its author, and not the mere editor. I have indeed copied from Walker the method of referring, throughout the Dictionary, to principles of pronunciation laid down at the commencement;—I believe his Dictionary owes its reputation to the obvious excellence of this plan;—but judging those principles susceptible of material improvement with respect both to the discrimination of the sounds, the method of indicating them, and the manner of developing the rules, I have entirely re-cast and re-written the whole of that part of his work: And, with regard to the Dictionary itself, I believe a single glance at its pages will be sufficient to show that, whether for the better or the worse, it is different in plan and execution not only from Walker's Dictionary, but from all its predecessors of like bulk and similar pretensions. In other dictionaries of this kind, the uniform practice has been, to take the definitions implicitly from Johnson ; but the etymologies and authorities were necessarily omitted ; and, hence, words are very often jumbled together whose different origin he distinguishes, and senses are brought forward which, being unsupported by examples, are not unfrequently obscure, and almost always deficient in the appearance of connection and easy transition. In the absence of authorities, I have thought it necessary to give the best clew I could to all the possible senses of a word, either by stating the general meaning first, and hence deducing its ascertained special applications, or by first laying down its literal or primitive use, and hence obtaining its derivative or figurative senses. It seldom happened that, in accordance with this intention, I could take the definitions exactly as I found them. I had besides to introduce, in the best way I could, some twenty thousand words which are not to be found in Walker : of these, a very few do not appear in any other dictionary ; the rest being supplied by Todd, Webster, and other collectors : but though the materials were provided to my hand, the arrangement, in a work of this limited compass, required much contrivance, and was attended with considerable anxiety. I found in fact that I could not act up to my own views without throwing the scissors quite aside, and working wholly with my pen ; and there is not, in consequence, a single page of this Dictionary which I have not written out and sent to the printer in manuscript. The opinion, moreover, which I entertain of the relation between the reasoning process and the instrumentality of language,—an opinion not new, perhaps, but, if just, not sufficiently indicated or insisted upon in lexicography,—rendered it necessary that I should pay a more than usual attention to certain terms which have reference to the relation I speak of, or remarkably display the wrong notions we are apt to acquire by not regarding it. On this point, without explaining myself further in the brief limits of a preface, I may refer my reader at his leisure to such heads as Thinking, Idea, Sense, Consciousness, Notion, Opinion, Truth, Moral (Certainty), Reason, Logic, Syllogism, Essence, Axiom, Science, Knowledge, Philosophy, Physics, Metaphysics, Fatalism, Foreknowledge, Freewill, Nature, Chance, Good, Evil, &c.

In short, having ventured to innovate on the plan of other dictionaries, which, like this, sacrifice higher pretensions to convenience of bulk, I wish, as I must be responsible for the defects, to put in my claim to the merits also, if haply any merits should be found. For this meed I have toiled hard and earnestly, and not, I can assure my reader, as a mere mercenary labourer. I feel it due to my Son to add that I have not worked alone : he has been my co-operator throughout the whole, and has often assisted me in more essential respects than those of collation or transcription.

EXPLANATORY TABLE

OF

CONTENTS, ABBREVIATIONS, AUTHORITIES, &c.

. As the following work varies in many respects from its predecessors, some preliminary notices may be necessary for enabling the inspector to make a full use of its contents

INTRODUCTION to the Schemes and Principles of Pronunciation		Page i
Scheme of Vowels—Scheme of Consonants.....		ii, iii PRINCIPLES.
PRINCIPLES OF PRONUNCIATION. The Vowel Elements	Prin. 1-55	p. iv-viii
The Consonant Elements	56-79	ix-xi
Seat of Accent.....	81-84	xii, xiii
Secondary Accent.....	85	xiii
Effect of alien laws on the national accent	86-90	xiv, xv
Syllabication	91-95	xv-xvii
Rules for the less regular sounds of letters	97-166	xviii-xxxiv
Irreducible irregularities—changes of pronunciation—the general principle by which a sensible speaker regulates his practice.....	167, 168	xxxiv
Pronunciation of Greek and Latin words of recent introduction....	169	xxxv
Pronunciation of half-naturalized French and Italian words.....	170	ibid.
Silent but significant letters	171	xxxvi
Synepy	172	ibid.
Rhythm and Modulation.....	173	xxxvii
The different sources—compared with modern languages—whence the rhythm of Greek and Latin was derived, as anciently pronounced..	174	ibid.
The nature of accent—the condition and effect of accent in ancient pronunciation—the contrasted effects in modern languages	175	xxxviii
Non-accented words—Emphatic syllables	176, 177	xxxix, xl
PRINCIPLES OF REMEDY FOR DEFECTS OF UTTERANCE.
Vulgar and Rustic, Provincial and Foreign habits.....	178	xl
Hints to Cockney speakers	179	ibid.
— for Londonizing a rustic utterance.....	180	xli
— for softening an Hibernian brogue.....	181	ibid.
— for reducing broad Scotch	182	ibid.
— to Foreigners	183	xlii
Defects of Articulation	184	ibid.
Stammering	185	xliii
PRINCIPLES OF ORTHOGRAPHY	186-196	xlv-xlvii
With respect to the Orthography of Participles, the inspector will find some additional instruction under "Participle" in the Dictionary.
PRINCIPLES OF ETYMOLOGY.....	Prin. 197-200	p. xlvii-xlix
The Inspector is referred to the Dictionary for such information as belongs to this head, but is not placed under it: thus the irregular inflections of verbs are placed with the verbs; the rule for using the subjunctive mood occurs under "Subjunctive;" and for Shall and Will under "Shall."
Index of the more important Common Terminations		p. xlix-lxiv
The Inspector is admonished that the Dictionary furnishes the counterpart to this Index, by directing especial attention to all parts of words which are of the nature of common prefixes, including not only real prefixes, such as Ad, Ana, Ayo, Be, Cala, Fore, Hyper, Hypo, In, Un, &c. —not only foreign or English words which transmit their meaning to many compounds, as Arch, Capital, Mono, Quater, &c. —but all words whatever which, having initial syllables common to many other words, have likewise common root, and fall with them into families or classes. This reference to the common parts of words, final and initial, will, it is presumed, be highly useful, inasmuch as few compounds can occur, though not inserted in the Dictionary, that will not be explained by it.
Supplement to the previous Index		p. lxxv-cxxviii

EXPLANATORY TABLE OF CONTENTS, &c.

CRITICAL PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE	p. 1-696
697 In the arrangement of the words, the strict alphabetical order must be expected only among those printed in the larger capitals: the subjected words, whether in small capitals or small letters, are given in such order as other purposes require. For further instructions on this point, and for the meaning of the Italics, the double accent ("), and other indicatory expedients, see the commencing page of the Dictionary. The Inspector is further admonished, that words formed with the prefix Be- are kept distinct from those that alphabetically intervene; also that those which commence with Ch are kept mingled, but kept distinct, according to the three different sounds to which the letters Ch are liable. In a Dictionary meant, as this is, for general use, a great many words are inserted which in reality are not English, but, being used in English discourse, stand nevertheless in need of explanation. For the reading of old authors, and also for tracing the meaning of numerous modern terms, many obsolete words are inserted, and likewise many which occur only in technical, local, or inferior use. That these may not be confounded with words of ordinary use or general good acceptance, an indication is added, such as Obs. (for Obsolete), Her. (for Heraldry), &c.; or the name of the author in best repute who uses the word. See the Abbreviations and Authors' Names below.
Supplement to the previous Dictionary	p. 697-749
Observations on the Pronunciation of Greek, Latin, and Scripture Names	751
A Key to the Pronunciation of Greek, Latin, and Scripture Proper Names	753-789
APPENDIX—on the Pronunciation of Modern Foreign Names in English Discourse ..	790-792

ABBREVIATIONS.

Anat., Anatomy	Disus., Disused	Lat., Latin	Sp., Spanish	pr. , pronoun
Archit., Architecture	Far., Farriery	Law	Unus., Unusual	v. a. , verb active
Astrol., Astrology	For., Fortification	Med., Medicine	Vul., Vulgar	v. n. , verb neuter
Bot., Botany	Fr., French	Mil., Military		part. , participle
Build., Building	Geol., Geology	Min., Mineralogy		pret. , preterit
Carp., Carpentry	Ger., German	Obs., Obsolete		adv. , adverb
Col., Colloquial	Gr., Greek	Obsol., Obsolescent	art. , article	prep. , preposition
Crystal., Crystallography	Her., Heraldry	Phar., Pharmacy	s. , substantive	conj. , conjunction
	Ital., Italian	Poet., Poetical	a. , adjective	interj. , interjection
	Loc. Local: Mod. Modern: Prov. Provincial: Tech. Technical.

NAMES QUOTED AS AUTHORITIES FOR UNUSUAL OR OBSOLETE WORDS.

With the Date, in round numbers, near which the persons flourished as living authors.

* * When the author is little known, the Dictionary gives the date only, without the name. Modern authors, (as Darwin, Burke, &c.) though sometimes quoted, are not inserted in this list.

Addison.....	1710	Drayton.....	1620	Pearson.....	1660
Ainsworth, (Dictionary).....	1730	Dryden.....	1630	Petty, (Sir William).....	1630
Arbuthnot.....	1720	Eliot.....	1750	Philips, (John).....	1700
Ascham.....	1560	Eliot, (Dictionary).....	1540	Philips, (Ambrose).....	1710
Atterbury.....	1710	Evelyn.....	1670	Pope.....	1720
Ayliffe.....	1700	Fairfax, (poet).....	1620	Potter, (Archbishop).....	1720
Bacon.....	1600	Fell, (Bp.).....	1660	Prior.....	1700
Bailey, (Dictionary).....	1740	Feltham.....	1670	Raleigh, (Sir W.).....	1610
Barret, (Dictionary).....	1590	Ford, (dramatic poet).....	1630	Ray, (naturalist).....	1670
Barrow.....	1660	Fuller.....	1060	Richardson, (novelist).....	1750
B. & F. (Beaumont & Fletcher).....	1600	Gay.....	1720	Sanderson, (Bishop).....	1640
Bickerstaff.....	1700	Gayton.....	1650	Sandys.....	1630
Boyle.....	1760	Glanvil.....	1670	Selden.....	1620
Bramhall, (Bishop).....	1650	Goldsmith.....	1770	Shaftesbury, (Earl of).....	1700
Brewer.....	1640	Gower.....	1360	Shakspeare.....	1600
Broome, (or Brome).....	1630	Gray.....	1750	Sherwood, (Dictionary).....	1630
Brown, (Sir Thomas).....	1640	Grw.....	1670	Sidney, (Sir Phil.).....	1580
Bryant.....	1770	Hakewill.....	1630	Skelton.....	1500
Burnet.....	1690	Hale, (Judge).....	1650	Smollett.....	1760
Burton.....	1610	Hales.....	1630	South.....	1690
Butler, (Bishop).....	1740	Hall, (Bishop).....	1610	Southern.....	1730
Butler, (Samuel: Hudibras).....	1670	Hammond.....	1650	Spelman, (antiquary).....	1630
Camden, (antiquary).....	1600	Harris.....	1750	Spenser.....	1580
Carew.....	1590	Harvey.....	1630	Sprat.....	1670
Chapman.....	1600	Herbert.....	1630	Styrie.....	1640
Chaucer.....	1370	Holder.....	1650	Suckling.....	1640
Chesterfield, (Lord).....	1740	Hooker.....	1600	Surrey, (Earl of).....	1590
Chesney.....	1720	Howell.....	1650	Swift.....	1720
Chillingworth.....	1640	Hudibras, (by S. Butler).....	1670	Tatler, (Steele, &c).....	1710
Clarendon, (Lord).....	1660	B. Jon. (Ben Jonson).....	1610	Taylor, (Bishop).....	1660
Clarke.....	1720	Knolles.....	1610	Temple, (Sir W.).....	1650
Cockeram, (Dictionary).....	1610	L'Estrange.....	1670	Thomson.....	1730
Congrave.....	1700	Locke.....	1690	Tillotson.....	1670
Cotgrave, (Dictionary).....	1620	Marston.....	1600	Tusser, (Husbandry).....	1570
Cowel, (Law).....	1610	May.....	1630	Walton, (Izaak).....	1660
Cowley.....	1630	Middleton.....	1600	Waterhouse.....	1660
Daniel.....	1630	Milton.....	1670	Watts.....	1720
Davies.....	1610	More, (Sir T.).....	1520	Wieliffe.....	1350
Denham.....	1630	More, (Henry).....	1670	Wood, (Anthony).....	1680
Derham.....	1720	Mortimer, (Husbandry).....	1720	Woodward, (naturalist).....	1700
Dehby, (Sir Kenelm).....	1650	Mountagu.....	1650	Worcester, (Marquis of).....	1650
Donne.....	1620	Norris.....	1700	Wotton, (Sir H.).....	1620
		Peacham, (Emblems).....	1610	Young.....	1740

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

SCHEMES,

AND

PRINCIPLES OF PRONUNCIATION.

ὅτι ἀναγκασίαι τρεῖς ἡλαχίστα τὰ πάντα ἅμα εἰς τὴν ἀκοήν, φθίγγει τι καὶ χροὸν καὶ συλλαβήν ἢ γράμμα.—Plutarch. de Musica.

IN language spoken as in language sung, there are three things which reach the ear simultaneously, tone or modulation, time or rhythm, and syllable. In each of these respects, every language agrees with others generally, but differs in certain characteristic peculiarities. It is to the English language and its oral characteristics that the Schemes and Principles are to be adapted; and that quality or element which happens to be mentioned last in the quotation given above, properly comes first under consideration.

A syllable is not always, nor usually, an ultimate element of speech: we begin, then, with vowels and consonants, which are the elements of syllables.

The vowel sounds of the English language are, in strict theory, only seven, which, beginning with that requiring the narrowest opening of the mouth, proceeding to the broadest, and thence to that which most contracts it at the sides, are, ē, ā, ur, (the r mute, but giving to the u the sound heard in urgent), ah, (the h mute, but signifying the Italian sound of a), awe, (the w mute, but signifying that the previous letter has the broad sound called the German a), ō, and ǫ. But these seven sounds, modified, qualified, and compounded, give existence to fifty-five varieties of vowel sound, as exemplified in the former of the two schemes in the ensuing pages. The consonant sounds are twenty-two in number, but, for practical reasons which appear in the Scheme, (see Elements 63, 64,) they are considered as being twenty-four. These elements of syllables, then, although only twenty-nine in strictness, are laid down practically to the amount of seventy-nine. The order of the alphabet is not followed either in the Schemes or in the Principles, but an order better suited on many accounts to the purposes in view, the relations of the sounds of letters in their alphabetical order being reserved for the head of each respective division in the Dictionary.

SCHEME OF THE VOWELS.

•• For further information respecting each sound, see its correspondent number in the Principles following the Schemes.

Note that a, e, i, o, u, y, w, h, so printed, are mute, though in general significant: (171:) Note further that the mark (˘) changed to (˙) as ā to ä, signifies a change in the quantity of the correspondent accented vowel; that an Italic letter implies a change or corruption in the quality; and that no change of indication implies that there is no change of quantity or quality, the difference in such case being merely that of remitted accent.

THE ALPHABETIC VOWELS.

By nature long, though liable to be short or shortened.

Accented Vowels.	Unaccented Vowels.
1. ā, ā̄, ā̄̄, as in gāṭ, gāṭ, pāy.	2. ä, ǟ, ǟ̄, as in ä-e'rial, re'-täl, gate'-wäy.
3. ē, ē̄, ē̄̄, as in mē, mē̄, meat.	4. ē̄, ē̄̄, ē̄̄̄, as in dē-fy', pōd'i-grēe, gal'-lēy.
5. ī, ī̄, ī̄̄, as in wīd, dēfīd, dēfī̄.	6. ī̄, ī̄̄, ī̄̄̄, as in ī-de'a, for'ti-fīas, for'ti-fī̄.
7. ō, ō̄, ō̄̄, as in nō, bōat, fōz, sōul, [blōw.	8. ō̄, ō̄̄, as in ō-pey', fol'-lōw.
9. ū, ū̄, ū̄̄, as in cūbe, dūe, sūt.	10. ū̄, ū̄̄, as in ū-surp', a'-gūe.

THE ESSENTIALLY SHORT VOWELS.

11. ä, as in män, chapman.	12. ǟ, ǟ̄, as in äc-cept', chap'-män.
13. ē̄, as in lēnt.	14. ē̄̄, as in si'-lēnt.
15. ī̄, as in pīt.	16. ī̄̄, as in saw'-pīt.
17. ō̄, as in nōt, cōmmon.	18. ō̄̄, ō̄̄̄, as in pōl'-lute', cōm-mand', com'-mōn.
19. ū̄, as in nūt, cūstard.	20. ū̄̄, as in wal'-nūt, cir'-cūs.
21. ȫ, as in g'öd, hōd: an incidental vowel.	22. ȫ̄, as in child'-hōd: an incidental vowel.

THE REMAINING INCIDENTAL VOWELS.

By nature long, though liable to be shortened.

23. ǟ, ǟ̄, as in papä, the interj. ǟh.	24. ǟ̄, ǟ̄̄, as in pā-pä', man'-nd, Messi-ǟh.
25. ǟ̄̄, ǟ̄̄̄, or ǟ̄̄̄̄, as in läw, the noun sub. [ǟ̄̄̄̄, &c.	26. ǟ̄̄̄̄, as in jack'-däw.
27. ȫ̄̄, as in pööl.	28. oō̄̄, as in whirl'-pool, cuc'-koo.
29. oī, oȳ, as in toil, boy.	30. oī̄, oȳ̄, as in tur'-moil, foot'-boy.
31. oū, ow̄, as in noun, now, brown.	32. oū̄, ow̄̄, as in pro'-noun, nut'-brown.

THE VOWELS WHICH TERMINATE IN GUTTURAL VIBRATION.

By nature long, though liable to be shortened.

33. ar, equivalent to ǟr, as in ardent.	34. ar, ar, equivalent to ǟr, ǟr, as in ar-cade', dol'-lar.
35. er, ir, as in ermine. [virtue.	36. er, er, ir, as in com'-merce, let'-ter, na'-dir.
37. or, equivalent to ǟur, as in order.	38. or, or, as in stu'-por, or in saī'-lor.
39. ur, as in urgent.	40. ur, as in sul'-phur.
41. ǟre, equivalent to ǟur. as in mära.	42. ǟre, equivalent to ǟur, as in wel'-fare.
43. ēre, equivalent to ēur, as in mēre.	44. ēre, equivalent to ēur, as in at'-mosphēre.
45. īre, equivalent to īur, as in mīre.	46. īre, equivalent to īur, as in em-pire.
47. ōre, equivalent to ōur, as in mōre.	48. ōre, equivalent to ōur, as in there'-fore.
49. ūre, equivalent to ūur, as in mūre.	50. ūre, equivalent to ūur, as in fig'-ure.
51. ȫre, equivalent to ȫur, as in pȫre.	52. oor, equivalent to oour, as in black'-a-moor.
53. ower, equivalent to owur, as in power.	54. ower, equivalent to owur, as in caul'-i-flower.

55. (˙) a slight semi-consonant sound between ǟ and y consonant, heard in the transition from certain consonant to certain vowel sounds; as in lute, (l'üt̄,) jew, (j'üt̄,) nature, (na'-ch'oor,) g'arment, k'ind.

SCHEME OF THE CONSONANTS.

* * For further information respecting each consonant, see its correspondent number in the Principles following the Schemes.

Note that, as in the former Scheme, t, u, so printed, are mute but significant. Note, likewise, that two or more ways of marking a sound (s, or c, or ss, for instance for the 59th) imply no difference in the sound itself.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 56. h | as in hand, perhaps, vehement. |
| 57. w , beginning a syllable without or with aspiration | as in we, beware, sweet, wheat, equiv. to hwēat. |
| 58. y , beginning a syllable | as in you. And this sound is always to be understood as present in ū, ū, ūre, which are equivalent to yōō, and yoor. |
| 59. s and ss ; also c or sc before e or i . | as in sell, sit, mass; cell, face, cit, scene, science. |
| 60. z , zz , ze | as in zeal, buzz, mazz. |
| 61. sh | as in mish'-ūn, so spelled to signify the pronunciation of mission. |
| 62. zh | as in vīzh'-ūn, so spelled to signify the pronunciation of vision. |
| 63. ch , tch | as in chair, each, match. |
| 64. j ; and also g before e or i | as in jog; gem, age, gin. |
| 65. f , ff , fe | as in fog, cuff, life. |
| 66. v , ve | as in vain, love. |
| 67. th | as in thin, path. |
| 68. th , the | as in then, with, breathe. |
| 69. l , ll , le | as in let, mill, sale. |
| 70. m , mm , me | as in may, hammer, blame. |
| 71. n , nn , ne | as in no, banner, tune. |
| 72. ng | as in ring. |
| 73. r , rr , as audibly beginning a syllable; or being one of a combination of consonants that begin a syllable. | as in ray, erect, florid, (=florrid,) torrid; pray, spray. Under other circumstances, the letter is a sign of mere guttural vibration. |
| 74. p , pp , pe | as in pop, supper, hops. |
| 75. b , bb , be | as in bob, rubber, rob. |
| 76. k , ck , ke ; also c final, and c before a , o , or u , or a consonant | as in king, hack, bak; antic, cat, cot, cut, claim. |
| 77. g , before a , o , or u , or a consonant .. | as in gap, got, gun, guess, plague, grim. |
| 78. t , tt , te | as in ten, matter, mate. |
| 79. d , dd , de .. | as in den, madder, made. |

In this Scheme the letters q and x are dispensed with; for k or c can always be used to indicate the sound of the former, and ka, kah, or z, the sound of the latter. See, however, Prin. 158.

The elements forming the syllables into which all words of really English origin are resolvable, are presumed to be, practically, as many as these tables exhibit. By spelling words as the examples indicate, with such marks for some of the vowels, and such choice of letters for some of the consonants as are exhibited above, the true pronunciation of the language may be shown without requiring a constant reference to these schemes after once attentively examining them. The only key words the inspector is likely to need, are the following from the Vowel Scheme. gāw'-way: chāp'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōōd: yōō, i. e. jew, a, e, i, &c. mute; and the following from the Consonant Scheme, mīsh'-ūn, i. e. mission: vīzh'-ūn, i. e. vision: thīn: thēn; which will accordingly run at the foot of the left and right hand pages throughout the dictionary.

☞ The words serving for examples in these schemes are such as in no instance admit of more than one accent. In the dictionary, when a word admits of more than one accent, the principal accent is denoted by the double accentual mark ("). See Prin. 85.

PRINCIPLELS.

1. PRINCIPLES OF PRONUNCIATION.

Audible Elements of Syllables as exhibited in the Schemes.

1. ā, â, äy. The English alphabetic accented a, in the mouth of a well-educated Londoner, is not exactly the sound which a French mouth utters either in fée, or in fête, being not so narrow as the former, nor so broad as the latter. Moreover, it is not quite simple, but finishes more slenderly than it begins, tapering, so to speak, towards the sound ê.

2. á, â, äy. This tapering off into ê cannot be heard in the unaccented alphabetic á, owing to its shorter quantity. It must be noted, besides, that letter a very seldom retains its alphabetic sound when unaccented, but, being final in a syllable, almost uniformly deviates into â, the 24th element. (See 98.) Cases in which it retains its distinct alphabetic sound, under the circumstance in view, are instanced below.*

3. ē, ēe, ēa, is the slenderest of the English vowels, corresponding to that which in most other languages is denoted by i.

4. ê, êe, êy, differs from the preceding by its short quantity. The quantity, however, is not always equally short:—in pedigree, for instance, (pronounced pêd'-ê-grêe), it is not so short in the third syllable as in the second. Generally it is as short as î, with which it is identical, except that î is essentially short, while the unaccented alphabetical ê is by nature capable of quantity. The word indivisi- bility (pronounced in'-dê-vîz'-ê-bîl'-ê-tî-ty) must, in strict theory, be said to have one and the same vowel sound in each syllable; but practical views rendering the distinction necessary, we consider the vowel in three of the syllables to be essentially short, and the vowel in the remaining four to be naturally long, although, from situation, quite as short as î.

5. î, îe, îy. This sound is diphthongal. In the mouth of a well-bred Londoner it begins with the sound heard in ur, but without sounding the r, and tapers off into ê. Some allege its composition to be â and ê, but this is northern; while others make it to be â and ê, which is still more rustic. The affirmation ay is, however, a union of the sounds â'-ê, at least as that word is commonly pronounced; though in the House of Commons, in the phrase, "The ayes have it," it seems to be an ancient custom to pronounce the plural word as uniting the sounds âw'-iz, or as it might be written ays rhyming with boys.

6. í, íe, îy. This unaccented sound differs from the foregoing by the remission of accent only; and for this reason, that the alphabetic í being diphthongal, the letter i cannot at the same time claim its alphabetic sound, and suffer a contraction as the other vowel letters do, but if, like them, it suffer contraction, it can be only by losing its diphthongal nature. If, for instance, we shorten the í in dî-lute, as we shorten ô in dô-main, we must drop one part of its sound; hence the usual pronunciation is dê-lute; and if we shorten the same sound, namely, î in palatine, we shall for the same reason, reduce the sound of the word to palâin. Accordingly, letter i or y, being unaccented when final in a syllable, or followed by a consonant and final e mute, although required by the general rules of the language to be sounded alphabetically, that is, by the rules which embrace all the vowel-letters without stopping to regard exceptions, falls in fact under a special exemption to the general laws; i or y under the circumstances stated, being regarded as more regularly, because more commonly pronounced ê or î than í. (See 105.) The words which escape the operation of this special or exceptive rule as regards letter i or y, are however so numerous as to render the point not a little puzzling, and

* The unaccented a in aerial, archaism, chaotic, &c., keeps its sound on account of the vowel in the next syllable; in bifurcate there seems a propriety in keeping it distinct, at least if we recollect that the word might have had, and perhaps more correctly, the form bifurcate; and this example will serve for others of a similar description. Acron-matic is an un-English word, and may keep its middle a distinct till it becomes familiar to our mouths. So likewise aura, ayra, which are decidedly Latin, may have their final a pronounced as Englishmen are accustomed to pronounce the final a of Latin words till use makes them English, and gives to their final a that easier sound we hear in comma. A secondary accent, if it does not decidedly shorten the syllable by attracting the consonant, an effect especially observable when the word is related to another word in which the a is followed by a consonant and e mute. Thus the a in operate is pronounced as clearly as in to operate; and the a in discourage scarcely deviates from the sound it has in discourage.

some remarks are subjoined at the foot of the page to assist in clearing the difficulty.⁶

7. ô, ôa, ô, ôa, ôa, is like the French ô. In a Londoner's mouth, it is not always quite simple, but is apt to contract toward the end, finishing almost as oo in too.

8. ô, ôa, in remitting the accent, and with accent its length, preserves its specific quality, with no liability to the diphthongal character to which the accented sound is liable. The o in to-bad-co, o-pin-ion, fellow, (=fello), &c., is corrupted only by vulgar speakers.

9. û, ûa, û, though for practical purposes reckoned among the vowels, is, in truth, the syllable yô, composed of the consonant element 58, and the vowel element 27. Hence the rule that "the article a must take the form am if the next word begins with a vowel," does not apply to words beginning with û: for we might as well say "an youthful face," as say "an useful book."

10. û, ûa. Although a diphthong can scarcely lose in length without losing its diphthongal character, yet a syllable composed of a consonant and a vowel may in general be something shortened. The syllable under review, may be as short as it can be made in mon-ô-ment, cu-b-cute, red-i-dûe, &c., provided it lose it in no other respect; for the smallest corruption of its sound in such situations, carries with it an impression of negligent vulgarity. Yet there are situations in which the full sound both of û and ûa cannot be preserved without an appearance of pedantry. See 61, 62, 63, 64, 69, 73.

11. â. This sound, which is properly deemed the second sound of letter a, differs in quality as well as in quantity both from â or â and â:—it is much nearer the latter than the former;—indeed so near, that in theory they are considered identical; but it is not, practically, so broad as â. The word fat in a Londoner's mouth has even a narrower sound than fat (a coxcomb) has in a Parisian's. Perhaps in no language but our own is there that complete shutting in or stoppage of a sound at the next instant from its utterance, which is the characteristic of this and the following five sounds. At the same time it must be confessed that when f, s, or n, follow the letter, we are apt, even in London, to give a slight prolongation to the vowel, which would, in other cases, be quite rustic; as in graft, glass, plant; which slight prolongation was once universally accompanied by a decidedly broader sound, such as might be signified by grâft, glâss, plânt. Among speakers of the old school, this is yet the mode of sounding a in such situations; but metropolitan usage among educated people has for a long time inclined to change a practice, which the orthography of the words manifestly does not warrant; and as, of two opinions or tastes, it was necessary to embrace one, the author of this dictionary takes, with Walker, the side of regularity. But Walker is a bigot: he allows of no compromise between the broad â, with which a vulgar mouth pronounces ass, and the sound, narrower, if possible, than the a in at, with which an affected speaker minces the same word. Surely in a case like this, there can be no harm in avoiding the censure of both parties by shunning the extreme that offends the taste of each; and this medium sound in the case in question, may safely be affirmed to be the one actually in use by the best speakers wherever letter a marked in this dictionary, as in Walker's, to be pronounced â, once had the sound â.

12. â, â, unaccented, differs in quality from the preceding by verging toward the sound û; its distinct utterance being near to â, its obscure or colloquial utterance carrying it entirely into û. In final syllables the more obscure sound prevails; in initial syllables the more distinct.

13. â, in theory, is reckoned the same sound as â. That it does not differ from it in quality may be perceived by the effect of a cursory pronunciation of ch'-mâte, u'ti-mâte, &c., which reduce into ch'-mêt, u'ti mêt. And hence we may perceive how mî'-ny and â'-ny, as they were originally pronounced, have been shortened by their frequent occurrence in discourse into mî'-ny and â'-ny. See 119.

6. It may be stated in the first place, that the special or exceptive rule (namely that i or y unaccented and final in a syllable, should be sounded as a unaccented in the same situation) almost uniformly applies: when the syllable itself is not a final or initial syllable; we may now and then hear the long sound of i or y preserved in such instances as explan-ation, in-hal-ation, con-fa-er, ref-fu-ful, emp-ty-mn, &c.; but these are of comparatively rare occurrence. So also the special rule almost uniformly applies to the final y of final syllables, and would also apply to letter i in the same situation, if in our language, it were usual to spell a word with i final. The exceptions are verbs formed from the Latin io and terminating in fy, as dî-fy, gl'o-rî-fy, &c., along with u'ti-fy, u'-cu-py, proph-e-y. (The verb, not the noun prophecy;) classical plurals, as liter-ati, ge-ni, &c., the Latin adverb al-ti, and perhaps a few others of a similar kind, which preserve the long sound of the final y or i in spite of the absence of accent. Such exceptions are easily distinguished from the general practice of the language, so that thus far the dominion of the special rule is clear and unperplexed. But when we inquire what is to be the sound of i or y unaccented and final in an initial syllable, as in di-late, hy-pothesis; or how it is to be sounded before a consonant and e mute in a final syllable, as in gentile, servile, maritime, brigantine, we come to a difficulty which no rule can remove; and the inquirer must be sent to the dictionary to learn, in each particular instance, what is conceived to be the practice of the best speakers. It might be said that letter i being the only letter in an initial unaccented syllable, has its alphabetic sound: as in i-dea; but even here we meet with imagine and all its compounds as exceptions, and the word g-cleped, the only word in the language in which letter y is both initial in the word and final in the syllable. It might be said that i, in the unaccented initial syllables bi, tri, di, has its alphabetic sound; but the speaker who, following this rule, should make the i long in di-vide, di-norce, di-vulge, di-cris, would show himself either ignorant of usage, or one, that, in small matters, thought it important to distinguish himself from others. Again, it might be said that unaccented i in a final syllable after a consonant and e mute, is short when the preceding is the accented syllable; as in rep-tile, off-ice, sport-ive, &c., but here, once more, there are too many exceptions to allow much stress to be laid on the rule. The accent being further back, we might say that in the final syllable cide, e. g. regi-cide, the i is always long, as it likewise is in ire, ise, and ice, when the accent is not on the preceding syllable, as in ac-rus-pire, ex-qual-ise, re-al-ise; but when we come to ice, ile, ime, ine, ite, &c., as in sac-rifice, con-sul-dice, in-fan-tile, pul-er-tie, pan-ton-ime, mis-er-tine; con-cubine, dis-cipline; up-er-ite, dis-cour-tie; we find all rule fail, and practice alone determines.

14. ē, unaccented, is liable to be sounded ī; nor must this be considered an inelegance in such words as helmet, duel, boxes, &c., which may be sounded hel-mīt, du-īl, box-iz, &c., although not so marked in the dictionary. But it is vulgar negligence to say ai-lūnt, providēnce, divi-dūnd, &c., instead of ai-lēnt, provi-dēnce, divi-dēnd, &c. Again, the i is quite sunk in grovel, (grov-vl), widen, (wid-dn), &c. (114) With these exceptions, which the references in the dictionary will indicate, every irregularity in the sound of unaccented ē must be guarded against as a vulgarism.

15. ī, in theory, is reckoned the same as ē; and that it does not much differ in quality may be perceived by the word count-terfēt, in which ē in the last syllable shortens its-lf into ī. The pronunciation of the word chemistry (chim-īs-trēy) appears less irregular when the identity of ē and ī is considered. No doubt the current pronunciation was established by the old way of spelling the word; but if we deem the e in the modern spelling to be shortened into ē, we get the actual pronunciation thus: Chē-mistry, chēm-istry=chīm-istry.

16. ī, unaccented, differs from the foregoing by the remission of accent only.

17. ō, in theory, is reckoned the same as ā; and that it does not differ in quality may be perceived by observing that salt, fault, &c., though pronounced sālt, fālt, &c. in slow utterance, are liable to be shortened into sōlt, fōlt, &c. It is further observable that before ss, st, and th, letter o is frequently sounded ā; for example, in moss, glass, &c., to-t, cost, &c., broth, cloth, &c. This practice is analogous to the broad utterance which letter a is liable to receive before certain consonants, (see 11,) and the same remarks will apply in the present case as to the one referred to, namely, that though the broad sound is vulgar, there is affectation in a palpable effort to avoid it in words where its use seems at one time to have been general. In such cases a medium between the extremes is the practice of the best speakers.

18. ō, ō, differs in quality from the preceding by verging toward the sound ū, more or less according as the pronunciation is solemn or colloquial. In final syllables the sound ū under the character o is, in general, so decided, that even in the most solemn speaking any other sound would be pedantic. In such case not ō but ū might indicate the pronunciation; for instance, wanton might be marked wun-tūn. For the sake of consistency, however, the deviation of the sound from ō into the obscure sound is signified in the usual way, namely, by the italic ō. In initial and other syllables, the sound preserves its character with some distinctness, as in pōllut, pōmpos'ity, dēmōnstrā-tion; yet even in these we find a great tendency to the sound ū, and in the prefix con-, the tendency is still stronger. This is the reason that, in the dictionary, the o in this prefix is marked as the unaccented short o in final syllables. It might have been marked in the same manner when unaccented in the prefix con-; and the only excuse for not so marking it, is, the difficulty of fixing what by its nature is vague and fluctuating. Further it is to be observed, that o before n is frequently sunk entirely in final unaccented syllables. See 114.

19. ū, ur, (without sounding the r), and d, are all, in theory, the same, the last however more or less approaching the sound ā, according as the speaker is more or less distinct. They are all modifications of what may be called the natural vowel,—that is to say, the vowel which is uttered in the easiest open position of the mouth.

20. ū, unaccented, differs from the preceding only by the remission of accent. All the vowel letters under a variety of circumstances, are liable, when unaccented, to fall into this, the natural vowel.

Here finish what may be considered the regular sounds of the vowel letters, of which each has four, namely, its alphabetic sound accented and unaccented, and its essentially short sound accented and unaccented.

21. ō. This sound, essentially short, is, in other respects, identical with the 27th sound ō, the most contracted sound of the language. In most dictionaries, the sound which in this one will be marked ō, is considered a third sound of the letter u, and marked accordingly. There is great probability that, of the two short sounds of u, namely that in dūll, and that in hūll, (bōol), the latter was once as frequent as the former:—in the provinces it is much more frequent even to this day. But since, in London, this sound of short u is now limited to a few words, (see 117,) the best way of signifying its sound in those few will be to spell them on the same principle as good, wood, wool, took, &c., and signify the essential shortness of the sound by the appropriate mark.

22. ō, unaccented, differs from the preceding only by the remission of accent.

23. ā, ā. In almost all languages but the English, this is the alphabetic sound of letter a. In our prosodies, it goes by the name of the Italian a. Finishing with guttural vibration, and so forming the 33d element in our scheme, namely ar, it occurs frequently in our language. It also generally occurs instead of ā, when followed in the same syllable by th, or th, as in pāth, fāth-er; and it used to occur instead of the same short sound in such words as fast, mass, &c. (see 11,) but the practice as regards the class of words last alluded to, is almost lost in well-bred society. In a few words, however, it still decidedly keeps its place in the situation referred to; as in gūlānt', com'māndānt'.

24. ā, ā, differs from the preceding not only in quantity but in quality, by verging to the natural vowel, and in colloquial utterance quite identifying with it. (See 19.) It fluctuates between ā, and this natural vowel, (19,) just as ā fluctuates between ā and ū. (See 12.) The sound occurs very frequently under its appropriate letter: for the letter a is peculiar in this respect, that instead of retaining its specific alphabetical sound like e, i, o, and u, when final in an unaccented syllable, it almost always drops into the natural vowel, to restrain it from which (except in a few cases specified in the note at 2) would be a puerile nicety; for instance in d-bound, ide-ā, trd-duce, surd-ble. Hence, although we name one of the articles, ā, yet, in using it, we say d book, d chair, &c. Of the other article the, it is likewise to be observed that, coming before a consonant, we pronounce the letter e with the sound of the natural vowel: for though we say thē empire, thē hour, we do not say thē book, thē hand. See 176.

25. ā, āu, or āw, corresponds in theory with ō, (17,) and being followed by guttural vibration, identifies with or. (37.) In our proodies it goes by the name of the German u, though it is still broader than the German sound; and in this as in most of our pronouncing dictionaries, it is marked as a 4th sound of letter u. But in addition to this mark throughout the following dictionary, those words which require letter u to have this sound, (all, bu'll, cull, &c.) will be spelled on the same principle as awl, basel, brawl, crawl, &c. There are many words in which this sound, though accented, is almost shortened into ō, in which case instead of āw, the sound will be signified by ā.

26. āw, unaccented, differs from the preceding by the remission of accent, and such shortening of its quantity as it will bear.

27. ū, is the sound of letter u in the Italian and many other languages. Except in quantity, it is identical with 21. Articulated with consonant y, it forms the English sound of letter u; and as this articulation is often of necessity dropped, (for instance in true, brutal, &c.,) the letter u in such cases is pronounced as in Italian.

28. oo, unaccented, differs from the preceding by the remission of accent, and such reduction of quantity as it will bear, so as not to identify with ū:—for whirlpool must not be pronounced as if it were whirlpull. Where, however, it is not followed in the same syllable by a consonant, as in cuckoo, luxury, (lück'-uh'-oo-rē.) it may be as short as utterance can make it.

29. oi, oy, is a diphthongal sound whose component parts are ā and ē. Consequently the pronunciation of boy might be indicated by bāw'-ē, and of oil by āw'-īl, rapidly uttering the two syllables in the time of one. But vowel sounds that go to the formation of one and the same syllable, are practically deemed one vowel though of a compound nature,—in other words, they are single though not simple. In this way is ī considered a single vowel, and in this way will the present sound be considered, and will be signified throughout this dictionary in the way authorized by the orthography of the language, just as element 25 is signified by the digraph aw, and element 27, by the digraph oo, which, as sounds, are single and simple, though in the usual way of spelling words they are more frequently found under the two characters than under one.

30. oi, oy, unaccented, differs from the preceding by the remission of accent, but its diphthongal nature prevents any perceptible difference in quantity.

31. ou, ow, is a diphthongal sound whose component parts are ā and oo; at least, is the former of the two component sounds nearer to ā, than āu, though Walker makes the combination to be āu and oo. In accordance with the remarks lately made, (see 29,) ow will be considered a single though not a simple sound, and will be signified throughout the dictionary not by marks to which the eye is unaccustomed, but in the way authorized by the orthography of the language. It is true that the same letters are sometimes sounded ō or ō; as in soul, blow, and follow; but in this case the proper pronunciation will be indicated by omitting the w, or else marking it as silent.

32. ou, ow, unaccented, differs from the preceding only by the remission of accent.

33. ar, is the element 23, namely, ā, terminating in guttural vibration. A vowel terminating in this manner, according to the idiomatic pronunciation of the English language as heard in well-bred London society, is properly considered as a single though not a simple element. For with us, the letter r is sometimes a consonant, as in ray, tray, stray, tarry, merit, (see 73, and 129,) and sometimes a guttural vowel sound. In the former capacity, it is formed by a strong trill of the tongue against the upper gum; in the latter case there is no trill, but the tongue being curled back during the progress of the vowel preceding it, the sound becomes guttural, while a slight vibration of the back part of the tongue is perceptible in the sound. That the trill of the tongue may be used wherever the following dictionary indicates the guttural vibration, is not denied; but it cannot be used at such places without carrying to correct ears an impression of peculiar habits in the speaker,—either that he is foreign or provincial, Irish or Scotch, a copier of bad declaimers on the stage, or a speaker who in correcting one extreme has unwarily incurred another. The extreme amongst the vulgar in London doubtlessly is, to omit the r altogether—to convert far into fā, hard into hā, cord into cā, lord into lā, &c.;—an extreme which must be avoided as carefully as the strong trill of the r in an improper place.

34. ar, ar, differs from the preceding both in quantity (though this cannot be much) and in quality, by verging toward unaccented ur. Indeed when the letters ar occur in a final unaccented syllable, as in dollar, it would be a puerile nicety to attempt distinctness; and in such a case the pronunciation of the syllable might be marked as if it were written ur.

35. er, ir, which lies between ār (41) and ur, (39) and in mere theory would not be distinguished from the former, is an element of syllables, which, orally, the vulgar-bred Londoner never uses:—he is “your sarvant” or “your servant;” he speaks of “murcy” and of “vurtue;” and says “it is urksome to be restrained from murth;” but servant, mercy, virtue, (ver tue.) irksome, (erksome.) and murth, (merth.) are delicacies of pronunciation which prevail only in the more refined classes of society. Even in these classes, sur, durt, and hurd, &c., are the current pronunciation of sir, dirt, bird, &c.; and indeed in all very common words, it would be somewhat affected to insist on the delicacy referred to. It will be observed that letter i in the situation we have in view, is precisely equivalent to letter e. If the sound of i which we hear in sit, took a correspondent long sound in sir, this sound would be ē, and the word be pronounced sēre, forming with the guttural vibration the 43d element of our scheme.

36. e, er, ir, unaccented, is scarcely ever heard without some corruption of its quality in a final syllable, where the letters er, ir, or, ur, yr, will almost necessarily be pronounced ur.³⁶ This necessity is less in some words than in others;—in commerce, for instance, than in letter, and accordingly in instances like the latter, the less distinct sound of the vowel will be indicated by an italic letter. It may be mentioned in this place that bre, cre, gre, tre, as final syllables, are all deemed equivalent to ber, ter, &c. (159.)

37. or, which is equivalent to āur, occurs frequently in the language, often requiring to be distinguished from the element 47. For instance, form, (fāurm), meaning figure, must be distinguished in pronunciation from form, (fō'urm), meaning a bench: see 130.

38. or, or, unaccented, is seldom distinct; for this sound, which under the remission of accent always verges toward ur, in most cases sinks completely into it. We may be justified in saying ca'lor, stu'por, &c., with that attention to the final syllable which preserves the sound; but the same care would be pedantic or puerile in error, orator, &c.

39. ur, is the natural vowel terminating in guttural vibration.

40. ur, unaccented, differs from the preceding only by the remission of accent.

41. āre.	it is only by being followed by guttural vibration that these sounds differ respectively from	1. ā.
42. āre.		2. ā.
43. ēre.		3. ē.
44. ēre.		4. ē.
45. īre.		5. ī.
46. īre, unaccented.		6. ī, unaccented.
47. ōre.		7. ō.
48. ōre.		8. ō.
49. ūre.		9. ū.
50. ūre.		10. ū.
51. ōōr.		27. ōō.
52. oor.		28. oo.
— 53		29. oi.
— 54		30. oi, unaccented.
53. ower.		31. ow.
54. ower, unaccented.		32. ow, unaccented.

³⁶ Thus the last syllables of robber, nadir, author, sulphur, satyr, are quite undistinguishable in pronunciation; nor is it easy to make the last syllable of dollar differ from these. Walker accordingly marks them all alike. The same practice is not followed in this dictionary, not from any difference of opinion regarding the practical effect, but from a conviction that the effect will follow whether it be exactly marked or not.

³⁷ 34 The sounds terminating in guttural vibration, corresponding with 29, 30, in the opposite column, which might be expected in these vacant spaces, do not, in fact,

Identical. however, as they are, except as regards the peculiarity noticed, the practical necessity for considering them distinct elements will be perceived in the comparison of the first syllables of various, se-rious, fi-ring, to-ry, su-ry, with the first syllables of va-cant, se-cant, fi-nal, to-tal, su-gitive: an identity of these syllables in pronunciation is decidedly provincial; the true utterance of the former is vāre-ious, se-ri-ious, &c. The difference in view will be rendered intelligible to those familiar with French pronunciation, by comparing the sound of dear pronounced correctly as an English word, with that of dire pronounced correctly as a French word. In both, the vowel commences after the d precisely in the same way, but in the French word it remains pure, unmixed with the r, which begins a new syllable formed with what is called the mute e, the word being pronounced dē-ŕd or nearly so; while in the English word, the sound of the r (not the trilled r as in French) blends itself with the e during its progress. So also in dear-ly, care-ful, &c., the addition of a syllable beginning with a consonant distinct from the r making no difference to the previous syllable, the r in that previous syllable blends itself with the vowel exactly as in dear, care, &c.; and the only difference between dear-ly, care-ful, &c., and various, se-rious, fi-ry, to-ry, su-ry, &c., is, that in the latter, the r, besides blending itself with the previous vowel, is also heard in the articulation of the vowel which begins the following syllable. Of this blending of the r with the previous vowel, it is further to be observed that the union is so smooth in polite utterance as to make it imperceptible where one ends, and the other begins; while in vulgar pronunciation the former vowel breaks abruptly into the guttural sound or into the vowel d used for the guttural. Among mere cocknies this substitution of d for ar or ur, is a prevailing characteristic, and should be corrected by all who wish to adapt their habits to those of well-bred life. It is moreover remarkable of these elements, that each will pass on the ear either as one or two syllables, and this is signified in the schemes by the equivalent indication āur, īur, &c., where the mark of accent placed over the former part, gives it the appearance of the first of two syllables, while the omission of the hyphen shows that the whole is pronounced as one:³⁴ see 134.

55. The last element in our vowel scheme is so short and slight as to be lost altogether in the mouth of an unpolished speaker, who says loot, joo, na'-choor, (or more commonly na'-chur), garment, kind, &c., for lute, (l'oot), jeur, (j'oo), &c. On the other hand there are persons who, to distinguish them occur in the language, the combination of letters, oir having, with us, no sound peculiar to itself: see 132 hence, the elements numbered 53, 54, are those which come next in order.

54 It has been said, there is a palpable difference between the vowel sound in payer, player, slayer, and that in care, fair, hair, share. What difference may be made in New York I know not; but I know that none is made in London nor can be made without that peculiar effect which shows an effort to distinguish what in general is necessarily undistinguishable.

selves from the vulgar, pronounce y consonant distinctly on the occasions (see 61, 62, 63, 64, 69, 76, 77) which call for this slighter sound of y or ē. This affected pronunciation (for such it certainly is) may be signified by spelling the words as follows, observing that the initial consonant letter is to be sounded, not named, and the y articulated as in the pronoun you: — *y*oot, *y*oo, nd'-ch yoor, g yar' ment, k yind. The affected pronunciation, he it observed, is to be avoided with as much care, as the slight sound, which in the mouth of an elegant speaker naturally slides in between the consonant and the vowel, is to be imitated.

56. h. The first element of the second scheme is, in reality, neither a vowel nor a consonant: for a vowel is an utterance of voice receiving its peculiar character from the position of the organs, two such sounds uttered in one syllable being a diphthong; and a consonant is an action of the organs of speech accompanied by breath or voice: but the element now under consideration is a breathing simply; it is a propulsion of breath, which becomes vocal in the sound that follows it. this following sound being hence called aspirated. And the sound which follows is in our language always a vowel, except w and y: for w is aspirated in wheat, whig, &c., which are pronounced hwēat, hwīg, &c.; and y is aspirated in hew, huge, &c., which are pronounced hyō, hyōge, &c. It is to be further observed that the aspirate is never heard in English, except at the beginning of syllables; and that, in the following and all their derivatives, letter h is silent: heir, honest, honour, hostler, hour, humble, and humour.⁵⁶

With respect to all the following consonants, h, i, e. a breathing, is a common material or element of those of the one sort, namely the breath consonants; and a vowel sound, ō, ē, or the natural vowel, is a common element or material of all the other sort, namely, the voice consonants.

57. w, is a consonant having for its basis the most contracted of the vowel sounds, namely ō, which sound, being partially obstructed by an inward action of the lips, and then given off by an outward action, is changed from a vowel to a consonant. A comparison of the French word oui, as a Frenchman pronounces it, (viz. oo-ē), with the English word we as an Englishman pronounces it, will show the difference between the vowel and the consonant. The same difference may be shown by a comparison of the phrase an oozy ditch, with the phrase a wooer. In the former the article an is properly used; in the latter the article a.

⁵⁶ In some pronouncing dictionaries herb and hospital are included among the words whose initial h is silent; but the h may be aspirated in these and their derivatives without the least offence to polite ears; and even in humble and humour the sounding of the h is a fault, if a fault, far less grating than it would be in heir, honest, and the other words stated above. When h begins a syllable not initial, it must nevertheless be sounded: as in perhaps, behest, abhor, vehement, brethemoth, &c. It is only when it does not begin a syllable that it is uniformly mute; as in buhl, dahlia, ch! ah! brahma, halcyon, &c.

58. y. is a consonant, having for its basis the slenderest of the vowel sounds, namely ē, which sound being partially obstructed by an inward action of the jaw carrying the back of the tongue against the soft palate, and then given off by an outward action, is changed, by those actions, from a vowel to a consonant. A comparison of the phrase an ear, which takes the article an, with the phrase a year which takes the article a, will show the difference between the vowel and the consonant. This consonant enters into the composition of the element 9, namely ū; and when very slightly uttered with little of the organic action, and therefore resuming much of the character of a vowel, it is the element 55.

59. s and ss; also c or ac before e or i. This consonant consists of breath made audible in a hiss, by forcing it between the tip of the tongue and upper gum, kept in gentle contact.

60. z, zz, zz, is the same as the preceding, only that the breath is vocalized, and, instead of a hissing, is therefore a buzzing sound.

61. sh, is a consonant that consists of breath, made audible in that sort of sound by which in a whisper we require silence, to produce which, the tongue instead of touching the upper gum, as in the common dental s, is curled back in such a manner as to leave space for the breath to effuse around its sides and top. This is one of the sounds after which it is not easy to sound the consonant y in fluent union, and accordingly this last-mentioned element is, in polished pronunciation, either quite sunk after sh, or is reduced to the element 55. For example, in the word sure where the s very irregularly has the sound sh, the sound ū loses one of its component parts, and the word is pronounced shūr. Again in the word Asia, where the s acquires the same sound, viz. sh, the i instead of that decided sound of y which we hear in spane, million, &c., (spān'-yēl, mīl'-yūn), has the slighter sound which in this dictionary is marked ('). And in the frequent termination tion, where the t acquires the sound sh, the sound y, which the i by its position would represent, is entirely absorbed. It is a point of some nicety to say when the absorption of the y should be entire, and when it should not, but retain just so much of its effect as to identify with element 55; and indeed the determination one way or the other often depends on the more or less colloquial manner of the speaker. The word social for instance, is, in common discourse, pronounced sō'-shāl, but with the careful utterance of measured speech, sō'-sh'āl. Thus much is certain, that where custom has not decided on the entire absorption of the sound, there is a grace in suffering it to slide lightly in.

62. zh, is the same as the foregoing, only that the breath is vocalized, and the whispered hush destroyed. No English word commences with this sound, but in French it is not uncommon at the beginning as well as at other parts of words; as in jumble, giant. Like the preceding element it does not readily take the consonant y into fluent union, and accordingly it either absorbs the y entirely, or reduces it to the slighter element (').

63. ch, tch. This is not a simple element, although convenience requires it to be so considered. It is formed of t and sh, the 78th and 61st elements, a reference to which will stand instead of further explanation. Like the preceding two elements, it is unable to take the consonant y into fluent union, and therefore, like them, either absorbs it entirely, or reduces it to the slighter element (').

64. j; and also g before e or i. Neither is this a simple consonant, but is formed of the same elements as the foregoing, only that these elements are vocalized, namely, t by becoming d, and sh by becoming zh. (See 79 and 62.) It is unable like the three foregoing consonants to take the consonant y into fluent union, and therefore, like them, it either absorbs the y entirely, or reduces it to the slighter element ('). Be it observed that the letter g, though generally soft before e and i, is hard in the words at 77: (the note.) On the other hand, it is soft before ao in gaol, which is much better written jail; and quite as irregularly in judgment, abridgment, &c., when so spelled; but these, in this dictionary, are written judgement, abridgement, &c. (See 196.)

65. f, ff, fe, consists of breath made audible by being forced between the upper teeth and under lip, the articulation being completed, as in all other consonants, by the separation of the organs.

66. v, ve, is the same as the foregoing, only that the breath is vocalized.

67. th, consists of breath made audible in a hiss, by forcing it between the tongue and teeth while the tip of the tongue is placed between the teeth.

68. th, th, is the same as the foregoing, only that the breath is vocalized.

69. l, ll, le, the most harmonious of the consonants, is an utterance of voice with no other organic obstruction than a contact between the tip of the tongue and the upper gum, the voice not being forced between as in z, nor kept in a murmur within the mouth as in d, but uttered as freely as the position of the organs will permit. Though the smoothest of the liquids, and readily flowing into consonant y, if the latter come in another syllable under the remission of accent, as in flial, million, blissful, valuable, (fīl'-yāl, mīl'-yūn. bīl'-yūs, vāl'-yoo-able, &c.) (146) yet it does not allow this sound to be completed immediately after it in the same syllable. To say lūte, lū'-cid, lū'-na-tic, with the ū as perfect as in cūbe, cū'-bic, is northern, or laboriously pedantic in effect; and the practice of good society is, l'oot, l'oo'-cid, l'oo'-na-tic, &c., avoiding at the same time the vulgar extreme lōōt, lōō'-cid, lōō'-na-tic, &c.

70. m, mm, me, is an utterance of voice through the nose while the lips are joined, the articulation being completed by separating the lips.

71. n, nn, ne, is an utterance of voice through the nose while the tip of the tongue touches the upper gum, the articulation being completed by the separation of the tongue and gum.

72. ng, is an utterance of voice through the nose while the back of the tongue touches the soft palate, the separation of the tongue and palate completing the articulation; which separation must take place without compression of the voice at the back part of the mouth; for this will be to add the sound of g, a practice common in the north-west of England, where they say kīng-g, lōng-g, &c., for kīng, lōng, &c. A comparison of sīng-er with fīng-er, (sīng-ger), in one of which the g is not, and in the other is to be added, may render the nature of the fault plain. Let it be observed, that the sound is not a compound of n and g, but is quite distinct from both; that it takes place generally when letter n is followed by g, unless the g has its soft sound as in change; and even when the g belongs to another syllable as in fīng-er, un-quent; unless that following syllable be accented as in un-god'ly, in which case n generally preserves its proper sound. See 158. Lastly, concerning the sound under consideration, it is to be noticed that it never comes at the beginning of syllables.

73. r, rr, is an utterance of voice acted upon by a trill or trolling of the tongue against the upper gum. It entirely refuses to take y after it in the same syllable,—at least in fluent union; and the words rue, rude, brew, &c., are pronounced rōō, rōōd, brōō, &c. Even when the letter which has a claim to be sounded yōō is in the following syllable, as in vir-u-ent, er-u-dite, ser-u-la, it is not possible to give the distinct sound without pedantic effort, and an approach to the sound, signified by 'oo, (55, 28,) is all that correct utterance requires. The trill in which the utterance of this consonant element mainly consists, is often faultily produced by the back of the tongue against the soft palate: so formed, it makes the noise called the burr in the throat, a characteristic of Northumbrian pronunciation, and not unfrequent in particular places, and in many families elsewhere.—As to the smoother sound of letter r, which it takes at the end of syllables when another r or a vowel does not follow in the next, see from 33 to 54, both inclusive.

74. p, pp, pe, is an utterance of breath confined within the mouth by the close junction of the lips, and therefore quite inaudible, till the lips, by their separation, explode either the breath simply, as in up, or the breath vocalized, as in paw.

75. b, bb, be, is the same as the preceding, except that the breath kept within the mouth is vocalized, and therefore not inaudible, but heard in a murmur before the lips separate.

76. k, ck, ke; also c final, and c before a, o, u, or a consonant: to all which different modes of denoting the same element might have been added q, whose regular sound is always that of k, (see 185,) and whose place throughout the dictionary, in marking words as they are pronounced, will be supplied by k. The element which is liable to be thus variously signified is an utterance of breath confined at the soft palate by the close junction of the back part of the tongue, and quite inaudible till the organs separate either to explode the breath simply, as in êke, or the breath vocalized as in key. The present and the following element having their seat at the soft palate, just in the situation where the vowel ê is formed, have a natural alliance with this sound, and do not unite melodiously with either â, î, or er, unless a slight sound of ê is suffered to slide in: but though, on the one hand, the entire omission of this sound gives a harshness and a vulgarity to the utterance of such words as card, kind, kerchief, on the other, so decided an introduction of ê or y consonant, as is signified by k_yard, k_yind, k_yer-chief, carries with it an affected air and must be avoided. This slight sound of ê will in the dictionary be signified by the appropriated mark, namely (^), in a few only of the examples which admit of it, from which the practice may be extended to others under the caution just given.

77. g, before a, o, or u, or a consonant. This is the same as the preceding, except that the breath kept behind the soft palate is vocalized, and therefore not inaudible, but heard in a murmur before the organs separate. As when preceded by k, so when preceded by g, the sounds â, î, and er, suffer a slight sound of ê to intervene in order to render the junction smooth: hence, guard, guise, girl, &c., have their pronunciation indicated in the dictionary, thus: g^u^ard, g^u^ise, g^u^erl, &c. From the few words thus marked, the practice may be extended to others, under the caution suggested above.—Before e, i, and y, letter g is said to be soft: in fact, it is then the appropriated sign of an element wholly different: see 64: yet the rule that makes it so, is far from being uniform, as the list of the principal exceptions at the foot of the page will evince.⁷⁷

78. t, t, t, is an utterance of breath con-

77 In the parent language of modern English, g seems to have been regularly hard before e, i, and y, and it is still so in geck, geese, grid, and its relations, got as a verb, and its compounds and relations, and also as a common termination as in drugget, if not preceded by d; in gew-gaw, finger, monger, and generally, in the termination ger, in old Saxon words, and others not related to words in which g is soft, or in which the g is not preceded by d; in gib, gibbet, glibber, glib-rish, gibbous, giddy, gig, giggle, giglot, gild, gill, (of a fish,) gimblet, gimmal, gird, and its relations, girl, girth, gittern, begin, and its relations; also in the same termination, viz. gin, in biggin, piggin, nuggin: gire and its relations, as grift, &c.; giz-zard; together and its relations, as altogether. In seeming imitation of these, g is sometimes made hard in words of modern introduction, as in gingham; it is hard in huggis; it is hard in ginglymid: and by those who affect, as in the last instance, to distinguish Greek from other words adopted in English, it is frequently made hard in a similar manner contrarily to the practice of those who speak English unaffectedly. (See 169.)—To say that g is hard in sing-er, wring-er, wrong-er, wrong-est, ring-ing, fling-ing, spring-y, string-y, and other words of correlative pronunciation, would be a wrong way of expressing what is meant; for, in fact, the g is neither hard nor soft in these instances, but, with the a, forms a digraph denoting the 72nd element of the scheme. But the g is articulated with its hard sound in long-ger, stron-ger, youn-ger, lon-ger, stron-ger, youn-ger, as above in fla-ger, moa-ger, (contrarily to analogy in the adjectives:) for in these and other instances which will be met with, the a by itself without the g stands for element 72. Generally, it is a rule that g is hard in any common termination affixed to a word in which it was previously hard; as in ruq-ger, drag-ger, drug-ger, dug-ger, drug-gist, way-gish, dig-ging, rig-ging, finned behind the tongue by a close junction of the tip of the tongue and the upper gum, the breath therefore being quite inaudible, till the organs separate to explode either the breath simply as in ât, or the breath vocalized as in too.

79. d, dd, ds, is the same as the preceding, except that the breath kept behind the tongue is vocalized, and therefore not inaudible, but heard in a murmur before the organs separate.

80. Such are the elements of English pronunciation; and a good pronunciation is the use of these elements exactly where the custom of good (that is well-bred) society places them, however at variance such custom may often be with the rules of orthography. Now, while it is the purpose of a dictionary like this to show how the language is spoken, the principles on which it rests should show how it would be spoken if the general laws prescribed by the genius of the language were uniformly acted upon. What those laws are, the two schemes at the beginning in a great degree exhibit: and if the vowel letters always had their long alphabetical sounds, when accented or final in a syllable, or followed by a consonant and final e mute;—their short alphabetical sounds when unaccented under the same circumstances, (always excepting a which becomes â when final in an unaccented syllable:)—if the vowel-letters uniformly had their essentially short sounds when followed in the same syllable by a consonant without final e mute, with such exceptions only as the scheme in other parts exhibits, (e. g. when the consonant-letter is r;)—if, moreover, the incidental vowel-sounds never occurred but under the characters used in the scheme, and that when the characters occurred the sounds always occurred with them;—if our language could boast of this degree of regularity, little more would be required to complete these “Principles of Pronunciation,” especially as, crag-gy, drag-gy, spring-gy, fug-gy, wug-gy. On the same principle, the g may be hard in larynx, gr-nl or larynx, gr-an, from their relationship to larynx, (lar'-ingks;) and similarly in similar cases.

80 At this stage in the work I have undertaken, it will be a proper question for my reader or inspector to put, and therefore a proper one for me to answer,—“What have been your opportunities to know that these are the elements of English pronunciation?”—to which I reply,—I do not undertake to say that English is spoken every where with the e sounds and none other,—in Dublin, for instance, in Edinburgh, in Glasgow, and in New York,—but that these are the elements of English pronunciation according to the usage of the well-educated in the British metropolis. My confidence in my judgement on this point is thus grounded: I was born and bred at the west end of London; I appeared before the public five and twenty years ago, as soon as I became of age, in a “Practical Grammar of English Pronunciation,” a work more elaborate than the subject needed; from that time to the present I have been employed, seldom out of London, as a teacher of elocution in the first families or the kingdom, not excepting the family of the highest person; during the same time, I have been engaged on frequent returning occasions as a lecturer on elocution at all the literary and scientific institutions of the metropolis; and my intercourse with men of letters, at public and other conversations in London during the same period, has been constant. In connection with a duty accepted in a professional capacity, I hope there is nothing indecorous or frivolous in the statement of these facts.

84. A third tendency of English speech, is, to throw the accent back or forward, (that is, enclitically or proclitically,) on the syllable that precedes or follows such syllables as are common to a great many other words, because in fact that syllable distinguishes the word from others that have the common parts. We say book'-case as a distinction to watch'-case, knife'-case, &c.; we say arch-duke' as a distinction to arch-bishop, arch-dracon, &c. In the same way, we say abili'ty, with a recollection of civili'ty, gentili'ty, and the multitude of words which have the same termination; man'tacal, with a recollection of cardi'acal, heli'acal, &c.; sati'ty, with a remembrance of vari'ty, im'pety, &c.; spon-tane'i'ty, with a remembrance of de'i'ty, &c.; and thus throughout the common terminations of the language. So the common prefixes ad, be, con, in, re, mis, &c., are generally without accent; unless common parts should come into comparison by means of the prefix, as in comparing ap'ply and mis'apply; for then the accent shifts to the prefix. Hence, the accent is on the prefix in af'ter-thought, af'ter-piece, &c.; for the comparison is with thought and piece, simply. In many compounded words the accent is variable, because, at one time, one part of the compound will occur to the mind as common to many other words, at another time, the other part. When, for instance, we are counting—thir'-teen, four'-teen, fif'-teen, &c., the former syllable will be accented; but in using one of the words separately, either the last syllable will be accented, or each syllable will be pronounced as a distinct word. In fact, with regard to many compounded words the accent is by no means fixed, and with regard to others, they are called compounds only because the parts happen to meet frequently; such words, for instance, as bull'-end, bulk'-head, co'-heir, henceforth, high-way, good-will, &c., which may be marked as single words to the eye, but are pronounced as if they were two, with little tendency to unite their parts by a decided accent on either syllable. Walker says that Amen is the only word in the language which has two consecutive accents; but if such words as the foregoing are admitted to be single words, it would be easy to produce many hundreds that are in the same predicament. Even of words that have a fixed syllable for the seat of accent, occasions will sometimes arise to change that seat: see 177.

Secondary Accent.

85. It is likewise a tendency of English speech to use a secondary accent in place of the primary, when the latter deserts its usual seat, or to assist it in the enunciation of a word too long to be uttered easily or agreeably with a single accent. Grammarians and dictionaries have indeed hitherto taken little or no notice of any but the primary accents of words; yet, that the secondary accents are important and influential in regulating the other elements of utterance, will, it is presumed, be acknowledged when they are exhibited with the care and attention which have been paid to them in preparing the following dictionary.⁸⁵ A secondary accent is often observable in words of only three syllables: this frequently happens with verbs through the general tendency of all words to the antepenultimate accent, and the convenience which has been felt with respect to verbs in particular of having their accent lower. Hence such verbs as the following have manifestly two accents. To At'-ver-tise, To Con'-tro-vert, To Com'-pre-hend, To Con'-tra-vene. The first of these words, if we are to believe dictionaries, always had its principal accent on the last syllable, till of late years, but it also had a secondary accent on the first syllable, and that these have now changed places will be manifest to any one who will listen to the actual pronunciation of the word in London. The same kind of change might be pointed out in many other words. So likewise such words as Ab'-sen-tee, Can'-non-nade, Cav'-al-cade, Com'-mo-dore, Cas'-ta-ner, have two accents; on the last syllable, because that was the original place of the accent; on the first from the general tendency of the language to the antepenultimate accent: and the difference as to the place of the primary or secondary accent is nothing but a preponderance in each instance of the one principle or the other. The operation of the same principles may be observed in words of more than three syllables, as in Ag'-o-no-the'te, To at'-le-go-rize, Cor'-i-ca-ture, To an'-i-mal-ver'i. Is it not palpable in all such cases that the place of both accents ought to be marked? For though it is true that the force of one of them is not indispensable and may be remitted, it is equally true that its effect is very generally felt in the rhythm of the word, and still more generally in the distinctness it gives to the syllables under it. In the foregoing instances, the secondary accent seems to have been introduced in order to take the deserted place of the primary, or to prepare for its introduction to a seat where the genius of the language appears to desire it. In other instances, the purpose of the secondary accent seems to be that of assisting the primary in the easy and agreeable pronunciation of a word. If the following words, for instance, were uttered with the one single antepenultimate accent according to the first general tendency, they would be difficult and inharmonious; from which effects they are saved by the co-operation of two accents, principal and subordinate, which divide each word into two equal harmonious parts: ad'-ci-clen'-tal, man'-i-fes'-tor, ut'-a-man'-tine, at'-a-bis'-tor, ag'-ri-cul'-ture, ol'-i-gar'-chy:—of which two accents, it is sometimes difficult to declare the one that ought to be the principal, for we may say, ben'-e-fac'to, or be'-ne-fac'-tor, dis'-pen-sa'-tor, or dis'-pen-sa'-tor, just as may happen to suit the drift or rhythm of the passage. In general, the principal accent inclines to the earlier syllable in such substantives as these terminating in er or or, while it always goes to the latter in substantives terminating in tion, as in ben-e-fic-tion, dis-pra-sa-tion, (89.) By the tendency to lay the accent on the syllable preceding a common termination. (84.) the principal accent will be on the antepenultimate of in-com-pat-i-bile, and the sense of rhythm will give a secondary accent to the first syllable. The same tendency will draw down the principal accent still to the antepenultimate of in-com-pat-i-bil-i-ty, while the former accent will remain as a secondary accent, assisting that on the first syllable in the rhythmical division of the whole word. And that these secondary accents really belong to the words, and ought to be marked as well as the principal, will appear from a comparison with other words in which the custom of the language will not permit the assistance of secondary accents to render the pronunciation rhythmical and easy: such words, for instance, as necessarily, refractoriness, derogatoriness, incorrigible, &c.

⁸⁵ It is not presumed, however, that entire consistency will be found: on some words only one accent may be marked, which differ in no perceptible circumstance from others that are marked with two; and vice versa. But the discrepancy, it is hoped, is never such as to lead to any practical mistake.

86. The foregoing are the natural tendencies of our language with regard to the seat of accent in polysyllabic words; and in adopting words from other languages, if we were anxious to give consistency to our own, we should oblige them to yield to these tendencies. Such, however, is not the principle or feeling of the learned and fashionable of this country, who love to display their familiarity with Greek, Latin, French, and Italian, by neglecting or thwarting the genius of their own tongue, and therefore never miss an opportunity of using a strange or novel accent. The mischief would be less, if they who regulate their pronunciation by the rules of other languages, were themselves consistent. We have apotheosis and metamorphosis with a Greek accentuation, which happens in these instances to fall in with the tendency of our own; (81;) but we have most other words of the same form, in all of which the Greek penultimate is long, with the accent on this syllable in conformity with Roman practice. Custom may perhaps have decided one way or other for the majority of the instances; but in instances that rarely occur, or that hang doubtful, which practice shall furnish the rule? Surely the tendency of our own language should be favoured, and on this ground anacrophoresis is marked for an antepenultimate accent in the dictionary. Another class of words which hang in doubt between a tendency of our own language, and a practice grounded on classical laws, are those terminating in ean. By the tendencies of our own language, (see 90 and 81,) these should be accented on the antepenultimate, but the practice of scholars is to accent them on the penultimate; as European, Antipodean, Albionian. Here, again, however, we are involved in new inconsistencies: Herculean, is separated from the Greek family it belongs to because it happens to have been Latinized, and falls into our own idiom, with no thanks to those who make the concession. Elegiac is another exception to Rule 90 from the undue weight of classical authority. Looking beyond these examples to the words at large, which we derive from Greek, Latin, French, and Italian, an Englishman will be glad to find that generally his own idiom at last prevails, in spite of the learning or more commonly the vanity of those who oppose it. Thus for instance orator and amazon are accented according to the genius of our language, (81,) in spite of their different accentuation in Latin. So likewise de-file as a noun, begins to lose its French accent on the ultimate, which till within a few years was universal. But chagrin, profile, routine, oblique, contour, &c., abdmen, urmen, bitumen, horison, dedrons, indecdrons,⁸⁸ elegiac, inimical, ambages, &c. at present refuse the accent, which by the first general law (81) an English speaker would infallibly give them, if he feared not to endanger his literary reputation. The same sort of struggle, which may be remarked in the attempt to settle the accent of words immediately brought from other languages, is likewise going on with many that have been long naturalized, and then corrupted by fashionable affectation. Thus, however much we may be inclined by the second general law (82) to say disputable, advertisement, comparable, incomparable, acceptable, confessor, successor, &c., though that law prevails in the majority of instances, and nothing but fashion has carried the accent back in these and other instances, yet in polished society we feel ashamed of pronouncing otherwise than disputable, advertisment, comparable, incomparable, acceptable, confessor, successor; our shame diminishing as fashion seems inclined to change, and our scruple to the natural accent being therefore less, with regard to some (successor and acceptable, for instance) than others: (See Accept and Successor in the dictionary.)

⁸⁸ "Nothing," says Walker, "can show more with what servility we sometimes follow the Latin accentuation than pronouncing this word with the accent on the penultimate. In the Latin decorus the o is long, and therefore has the accent; but in dedecorus the o is short, and the accent is consequently removed to the antepenultimate: this alteration of accent obtains likewise when the word is used in English, and this accentuation is perfectly agreeable to our own analogy; but because the Latin adjective indecorus has the penultimate long, and consequently the accent on it, we must desert our own analogy, and servilely follow the Latin accentuation, though that accentuation has no regard to analogy; for why dedecorus and indecorus, words which have a similar derivation and meaning, should have the penultimate of different quantities, can be resolved into nothing but the caprice or custom; but that so clear an analogy of our own language should be subservient to the capricious usages of the Latin, is a satire on the good sense and taste of Englishmen. Dr. Ash is the only one who places the accent on the antepenultimate of this word; but what is his single authority, though with analogy on his side, to a crowd of coxcombs vapouring with scraps of Latin?" I agree with Walker, but like him, I cut to the fashion: we are literary tailors, and must suit our customers or lose them. Nor, though I join in his opinion, can I share his anger: I could as soon adopt Webster's peevish definition of a dandy, "A male of the human species who dresses like a doll, and carries his character on his back."

87. Similar remarks apply to many words that, if left to themselves, would probably have fallen into two significant rhythmical divisions by means of a secondary accent assisting the primary. If, for instance, we feel a propriety in saying ol'igarchy, or industrial n'er-man'cy, &c., why may we not give the same rhythmical division to geology, theocracy, astronomy, gengnasy, catastrophe, logomachy, cacophony, cacography, and the like? It might be enough to say, that, in the majority of similar words, the custom of educated speakers has determined otherwise, induced in some instances by authority derived from the original languages; in others by the predominance of the first general tendency (81) over the fourth (85.) But in these instances the principle seems to be the one investigated in 84:—for the terminations logy, crazy, graphy, gnasy, strophe, machy, ferous, metry, phony, trophy, are common to a great many words; and he who has had reading enough even in English to know this, refers each word to its class, by throwing back the accent from the common termination to the syllable introducing it, and saying geology, theocracy, orthography, catastrophe, logomachy. As to the words having the other terminations, dory, mancy, &c., all that can be said is, that they are governed by the rhythmical law, in preference to the one here spoken of. Dictionaries indeed often appear undecided with regard to words in mancy; but it is evident that either one principle or the other should direct the accentuation of the whole of them; and since the rhythmical one is fixed with regard to those in common use, the same principle should be followed in accenting the less common words.

88. It is to be observed, indeed, that whenever a general tendency is frequently crossed, through whatever cause, by words which have some characteristic in common, a rule is generated with regard to such words, by which, rather than the more general law, we are apt to be led when we meet with words of the same kind. The words satanic, pathetic, harmonia, &c., are abbreviations of, or at least are related to, satan'ical, pathet'ical, harmon'ical. Dropping the last syllable, if they retain the accent at its original seat, they become exceptive to the first general law; but the number of such words establishes a new law or tendency, namely, that words in ic shall have the accent on the previous syllable; which law we may make all words of that form obey, unless custom has previously decided otherwise; as it has in rhet'oric, arith'metic, po'litic, &c., over which the more general law is still in force. It is further remarkable of this class of words in ic, which bear the penultimate accent, that the accented syllable is almost always short. See 93.

89. So again, the universal curtailment of tion into one syllable, by our present mode of pronouncing it, (namely shūn, 147,) has brought the numerous words of that termination out of the pale of the first general law, by which they had the antepenultimate accent, and given them a law for themselves, namely, that without exception they are to be accented on the penultimate. Of these words in tion, it must further be remembered that, if a vowel precede the common termination, the vowel, if a, e, o, or u, will be last in the previous syllable, or, in other words, will be long under the accent; as in affecta'tion, comple'tion, (though discret'ion, &c. will be met with, exceptively,) locomot'ion, distribut'ion; but if the vowel be i, it will not be last in the previous syllable, but will be shortened by the instantaneous junction of the consonant-sound next to it; as in recognit'ion (= recognish'un.) See Prin. 95. Another remark concerning these words in tion may be added, namely, that when they consist of more than three syllables, (reckoning the common termination as only one,) they readily take assistance from a secondary accent.

90. There are other terminations with regard to which the same effect, or nearly the same effect, has taken place as with regard to tion; such, for instance, as in the words naut'seate, ro'seate, glu'zier, confu'sion, logic'ian, nox'ious, in which we find the consonant immediately preceding the liquidized vowel e or i, to have changed its original sound for that of sh or zh, (see the reason of this, 147,) and to have absorbed or almost to have absorbed the liquid e or i. Other words, as a'st'heist, rega'tia, harmoni'ous, exhibit the same liquidizing of the e or i, and the same reduction of two syllables into one, or almost into one, (146,) although there is no change of sound in the previous consonant, nor any consequent absorption of the following vowel. These liquid terminations almost always have the accent on the syllable immediately preceding them, with a long quantity if the vowel be a, e, o, or u, with a short quantity if i or y. (See 95.) And though they cease to be under the first general law, in proportion as the last two syllables melt into one, yet the original place of the accent may be said to have been determined by that law. There can be no doubt that all words terminating in -an are, in like manner, inclined by the genius of our language to have the accent on the previous syllable, as in ce'ru'-le-an, marmo'-re-an, hyperbo'-re-an, Cerbe'-re-an, hercu'-le-an; but classical custom here intervenes, and accents the majority of them on the penultimate. See 86.

Syllabication.

91. The division of a word into syllables, with a view to its proper pronunciation,⁹¹ can seldom be attended with doubt, except when an accented vowel is separated from the next syllable by only one consonant-letter, or by a consonant combination not necessarily distributable into two syllables. The doubt in this case will be, whether the accented vowel-letter is, or is not, to be esteemed final in the syllable, and, consequently, is, or is not, to have that short and altered sound which an added consonant unaccompanied by an e mute produces. And note that in our language a single consonant, if it go to a former syllable, is precisely the same in effect as if it also began the next syllable: thus can-on is exactly pronounced as cannon, cal-id as callid, &c.: we have nothing of the Italian mode of doubling an articulation orally. A speaker, then, with regard to the syllabication of words, may say appd'-rent or appar'-ent, sa'-crament or sac'-rument, pa'-tron or pat'-ron; nor can the doubt be removed by any general rule, since, in this as in other cases, any statement that may be laid down in the shape of a law is liable to so many exceptions, as leaves the point after all in possession of mere usage; for the ascertaining of which the dictionary must be consulted. It belongs, however, to this department of the work to state, as under the foregoing head, such general tendencies as can be ascertained, liable as they are, even to a greater degree than the laws for the seat of accent, to be crossed and thwarted by accidental causes.

⁹¹ As a division for this purpose differs from a division for the purpose of exhibiting the etymological parts of a word, it is proper to warn the inspector that the former is the purpose of division throughout the whole dictionary, and that the actual division, therefore, is frequently different from that which a view to the original parts of the word would suggest: thus, as'-ci, and bi'-parous, on dividing the first syllable in pronunciation, would, for an etymological purpose, be divided thus: a'-sci, bi'-parous.

92. With regard, then, to the case in question, namely, an accented vowel separated from the next syllable by only one consonant, or by a consonant combination not necessarily distributable into two syllables, the general rule or tendency of the language is, that the consonant or consonants go to the following syllable if the vowel is in the penultimate,—in other words, accent makes, if possible, a penultimate syllable long. But the consonant, or one of the consonants, goes to the former syllable, if the vowel (unless that vowel be u) is further back than the penultimate,—in other words accent tends to shorten all vowels except u, when further back than the penultimate. For instance, it is the tendency of the language to say appd'-rent, rather than appar'-ent, and pa'-tron, than pat'-ron; but con'-ical rather than co'-nical, and sac'-rument than sa'-crument. And the rule applies to syllables under a secondary as under the primary accent, as in dem'-onstra'-tion, sem'-atol'-ogy.⁹²

93. So numerous, however, are the instances

⁹² The force of a tendency is often most manifest where it breaks the force of other tendencies. We might certainly expect that natural and national would have no difference from nature and nation except the added syllable, but the tendency u dir-er view changes the first syllable of each word by assigning the consonant to it. It would be more regular, that is, it would better accord with other tendencies of the language, to divide the following words thus in pronunciation. Com-pu-nion, dis-cree-tion, glad iate, retal-iate, cal-iant, im-pet-uous, u-nion; but the division which accords with the actual pronunciation is com-pa-nion, dis-cree-tion, glad iate, retal-iate, cal-iant, im-pet-uous, u-nion. The force of the tendency subduing the predilection for Latin quantities might be shown by countless instances. It will be sufficient to mention indolible as being so divided by all unaffected speakers; and stan-ina by all speakers, although they say stan-ines in the singular.

in which the penultimate syllable is short under the accent, that, if we acknowledge its original tendency to be long, we must also acknowledge the existence of causes that frequently counteract that tendency, independently of caprice affecting particular words. It should seem, for example, that the termination ic, is, in many instances, an abbreviation or ical; e. g. generic is shortened or seems to be shortened from gener'-ical. Now, as in gener'-ical, the antepenultimate accent shortens the vowel according to the general law, (92,) so when the word is shortened, the short accented vowel remains; and this practice taking place in many similar words, a law or tendency arises to shorten the penultimate syllable of words in ic.

94. Other words having the penultimate accent, though not abbreviated from originals in our own language, are shortened from correspondent words in Latin: e. g. rap'-id from rap'-idus, doc'-ile from doc'-ilis, at'-om from at'-omus, hul'-it from hulb'-itus, &c. And not only do we preserve in the English abbreviations the short sound we are accustomed to give in the first syllable of the Latin words, but the practice generates a rule or tendency for all words of similar form or origin; as frig'-id, fel'-id, deb'-ile, spir'-it, &c. from fr'-igidus, fel'-idus, deb'-ilis, spi'-ritus, &c. So likewise we have proc'-ess in spite of the alphabetical o in the verb To proceed. The truth is, that while the rules belonging to the classical languages are often suffered, in single instances, to interfere with the tendencies of our own, the tendencies of our own, on the other hand, as frequently affect our pronunciation of Latin. Thus a schoolboy is generally allowed to say Nom. La'-pis, Gen. Lap'-idis, &c. Nom. No'-men, Gen. Nom'-inis, &c., regardless of the Latin quantities in lāpis, and nominis, and guided only by the lengthening tendency of the penultimate accent, and the shortening power of the antepenultimate in our own language.⁹⁴ This inattention to every thing but the seat of the accent is quite justifiable as regards English prosody; since with us an accented is always, for prosodical purposes, a long syllable, and an unaccented one short; (e. g. whether we say lap'-is or la'-pis, no'-men or nom'-en, the words will be what are deemed trochees in English.) It is easy to see then that in the syllabication of la'-pis as an English word, of mis'-d-mer, of lap'-idist or lap'-idary, of nom'-inal, &c., we are guided by our own general law, since that law is apt to interfere even when we pronounce Latin; and equally plain is it that short and long in Latin should not, as indeed they do not in general, influence the syllabication of words in English: for to our prosody it would make no difference if we said lap'-is, instead of la'-pie, ⁹⁴ At the Charter-house they are free from this negligence, and perhaps at many other places since the example has been set. No doubt the change is an improvement. But if it be supposed that at the Charter-house, or elsewhere, in consequence of this change, they have succeeded in recovering the rhythm of ancient Rome or Athens. It may be safely said the supposition is grounded on mistake. See 175.

and no'-minal instead of nom'-inal. Yet, in particular instances, there can be little doubt that the short quantity of the first syllable in Latin has been regarded in determining the pronunciation of the word in English; for instance, in phal'-ox, ten'-or, sut'-yr. But in ad'-tor (to give one example for many) our own idiom predominates, and makes the penultimate long in spite of the short vowel in Latin, in our English pronunciation of which the short vowel is, in fact, almost always made long. In dram'-a, on the other hand, the first syllable is short in English, though long in the original languages. Yet, even in pronouncing it as a Latin word, most English tongues, although they say dram'-ma in the nominative case, pronounce dram'-atis, dram'-ata, &c. in the oblique cases; and the English word drama seems to have received its pronunciation from these.

95. With regard to words that have, or that had, their accent higher than the penultimate, we may also expect other and wider causes of non-compliance with the general law, than mere caprice affecting individual words. We shall find, for instance, that if the concluding syllables of a word flow so liquidly into each other, as to produce a doubt whether they are two syllables or only one, the tendency of the language is, to give the consonant to the latter part of the word, and leave the vowel-letter of the preceding accented syllable in its long alphabetical sound, unless that vowel-letter be i. Examples, a'-li-en, na'-tion, de'-vi-ate, d'-lio, da'-bi-ous; but am-bi'-tion, bi'-i-ous, i'-i-ot, &c. Yet even with regard to a, e, o, and u, under the circumstance in view, the general rule sometimes vindicates its way; as in em-pad'-ion, glad'-iate, battal'-ion, gad'-e-ous, re-lu'-i-ate, val'-i-ant, gym-na'-i-um, impet'-u-ous, dis-cres'-tion, on'-i-on, (the on in which last word is pronounced as un.) The truth is, however, that the two concluding syllables of all such words are in pronunciation only one; by which oral shortening, those of them which were exceptive to the general law are brought within its pale, while those which were not exceptive are thrown out of it. Thus na'-tion adhe'-sion, no'-tion, fu'-sion, &c., have the accented vowel long, agreeably, it may be said, to the general effect of the penultimate accent, while vis'-ion, embi'-on, vis'-ious, &c. have their accented vowel short, and thus form another and a large class of exceptions to that general rule.

96. The tendency of accent to shorten all the vowel-letters but u, when further back than the penultimate, will also generally fail of its effect in derivative words that previously had the vowel long. For instance, a, e, i, and o, remain long in bla'-mable, d'-cency, br'-bery, po'-tentate, on account of their relationship to blame, de-cent, bribe, and po-lit'-ic; though such relationship does not always avail against the contrary tendency; for the a which is long in na'-ture and na'-tion, is short in na'-tural and na'-tional; and it is with difficulty that pal'-trimage, however related to pal'-tron, is restrained from becoming pal'-ronage.

The laws (as far as any can be said to exist) which determine the seat of accent, and the assignment of a consonant in pronunciation to its proper syllable, having thus been investigated, we are now to proceed with such further rules for the sounds of letters as are not included in the two schemes, and the corresponding sections that immediately follow them.

Rules for the less regular sounds of Letters.

Since almost all the general rules are implied in what has preceded, the following statements are to be considered supplemental or exceptive.—The order of the schemes will be regarded as far as can conveniently be done.

97. Letter a, as sounded in the last syllable of the childish words papa, mamma, is irregular, and the practice of so sounding it when final in an accented syllable is scarcely carried farther, in words purely English. A-y, boa, ha! and some words of a similar kind, must however be placed among these exceptive examples. For the still broader sound of a in wa-ter, a reason is given hereafter. (140.) Even in Italian words, if not of recent adoption, and in the Italian names of Shakspeare's plays, the best practice is to use the English a; particularly when the orthography has been in any degree changed, as in inam'-orato, from the Italian innamorato. The same may be said of accented a before a consonant and final e mute:—to this part of the rule the word gape used to be an exception, but among very good speakers is an exception no longer. As to have (see 189) and are, they are pronounced as if spelled without the final e; and so is the participle bade, under the influence of a principle to be noted hereafter. (135.) Some people pronounce the plural of staff (staves) with the Italian a, but the practice is not general. Mule in some compounds, as Male-administration, is pronounced and often written mal.

98. But when a, final in a syllable, is un-accented, its alphabetical sound occurs by exception only, and not by any general rule; for the general rule is to sound it d. (24.) Accordingly, it is only in a few words, generally where diæresis occurs, that the a unaccented is pronounced alphabetically. See these exceptions more particularly indicated in the note. (†.)

99. As to unaccented a, when followed by a consonant and final e mute, or by any vowel which usually keeps it long, although in the majority of cases an elegant pronunciation will retain the a in its alphabetical sound, yet in some words of very common occurrence there would be pedantry in scrupulously avoiding the short and easier sounds which the organs are inclined to adopt. For instance, in cabbage, courage, palace, furnace, &c., although the a in the last syllable may be marked d, yet the shortening of this sound brings it to g, (see 13,) and this again easily slides into i or ä, so that for common pronunciation the words might be marked cäb'-idge, cür'-ridge, päl'-läs, für'-nis. In the same manner the final syllables of căp-tăn, vîl-lăn, easily shorten so as to reduce the words to căp-tîn, vîl-lîn, &c.⁹⁹

100. The digraphs ai, ax, ex, ei, ea, ee, ao, and aw, are all either regularly or irregularly sounded â. By regularly is meant that there are more words in which the combination has the sound â than words in which it has any other sound; by irregularly is meant, either that the combination has some other sound more frequently, or that it seldom occurs, and consequently is an unusual way of indicating the sound. The first two combinations are given in the scheme as among the usual ways of indicating the sound â or ä, and in spelling words as they are pronounced, these as well as the others will be used; but none beyond these. In the very irregular orthography of our language, however, these are far from being the only circumstances or the only characters under which the sound in question occurs. Those irregular forms which are not noticed here, will occur for notice under other rules. It is sufficient to state in this place that the combination ey, when under the accent, is also regularly sounded â, as in they, prey, &c.; but that the other five digraphs, which, standing at the head of this section, are not printed in capitals, are to be considered irregular indications of the sound. The first of these, however, namely ei, takes the sound â so often, that it is almost its regular sound: e. g. in veil, vein, deign, weight, heir, &c.:—the second, ea, takes it in some words of very common occurrence; as in great, steak, break, brar, pear, to wear, to tear; also in sea-sant, the law adaptation of faisant: the third takes it in e'er and ne'er, contractions for ever and never; the fourth takes it in goal, the only word in which the combination occurs, which word, moreover, is much better written jail; and the fifth takes it only in the word gauge.

101. Letter e final in a syllable is always sounded regularly when sounded at all, but no letter in the language is so frequently mute. In the unaccented syllables of able, idle, ruffle, tackle, ripple, rattle, drizzle, it seems to answer no other purpose than to keep the syllable in countenance, a syllable indeed without a vowel except to the eye.¹⁰¹ At other times the letter though mute is not without effect; (see 171.); and even when without effect it must not in every case be deemed an irregularity. (See 189.) There is reason to think that, in the original pronunciation of the language, final e was not so often a mute letter, but had its proper sound in that as in other situations. At present, the irregularity lies not in sinking but in sounding it. Scarcely in any word purely English is it sounded when it comes last. The chief exceptions are words that come without alteration from the classical languages, as epit'o-me, rect'pe, sim't-le; though even here we meet with words that conform to our own practice, as bubon'cele, hydro'cele, and all other words compounded with the Greek word cele, (ke-le), a tumor. Of those classical words that sound the final e, it is to be observed, that not only do they retain its sound in the plural, but they refuse to have that shortened sound which we hear in alleys, valleys, beauties, (al'-liz, &c.) and require a certain pro'longation, which gives them a very different effect from ordinary English words: *for instance, antipodes, manes, sound the final syllable êz. This, however, is further to be remarked, that if the word should be an English adaptation of a classical word,—e. g. satellite from the Latin satelles,—as the singular must be sounded according to common rules, so likewise must the plural; though the English word satellites happening to identify in spelling with the Latin plural, Pope has taken the liberty in one of his lines to pronounce it as a Latin word. In our language the regular way of signifying the sound ê in a final syllable is by the letter y either alone, as in truly, or along with the letter e, as in gal'-ley. The last mode will be adopted throughout the dictionary in spelling words as they are pronounced. With regard to mute e after r in certain unaccented syllables see 159.

102. Letter e followed by a consonant and final e mute is irregular in there, where, ere, and were; and also in allege, college, sacrilege, privilege. The last words, if custom would permit, ought to be spelled as they are pronounced, alledge, colledge, sacrilenge, and privilege.

103. The digraphs taking the sound ô are xx, za, zi, z, az, ai, ie, co, ey, ay; and taking the unaccented sound, namely ê, are xx, ia, uy. The first of these, ee, is sounded ô, with scarcely any exception; the next, ea, has other sounds and particularly ê; but ê is its usual sound; the next, ei, though very frequently sounded â, (100.), is still more frequently sounded ê, as in seize, cei-ling, deceit, &c.; the next two, a and æ, are found only in classical words, as Cæsar, adile, fatus, which it has been recommended to spell as English words with plain e; ai has the sound e in demain; the next, ie, although its regular sound is î, (106.), takes that of ô in several words, as ⁹⁹ To mark these vague and fluctuating differences accurately would be a vain pretence. To exhibit that pronunciation which belongs to familiar and consequently negligent utterance, is surely improper in a dictionary which pretends to furnish the standard sounds of words. Something must after all be left to circumstances; and if, where circumstances may and generally do corrupt the distinct sound of a letter, an italic character is given as a hint of that liability, or a reference is made to such remarks in the principles as the present, it is presumed that as much will have been done as the exigency permits.

¹⁰¹ A consonant is commonly defined, a letter that cannot be sounded without a vowel. Sheridan, in his pronouncing dictionary, acting on this received definition, annexes all such consonant combinations as drop the sound of their vowel to the syllable standing next them, and so to the eye sweeps away a syllable. Would it not have been better to reject the definition than to support it by what is only an apparent conformity? The definition states an untruth: a consonant can be uttered without any sound but its own, however obscure, be it of the voice or breath, that murmured sound may be. A-ble, e-rit, ma-son, bro-ken, &c., although heard with only one vowel, are as manifestly two syllables to the ear (all our poetry proves it) as any disyllables in the language.

-rief, field, fend, reverie, &c.; the next three, eo, ey, ay, have the sound \bar{e} only in people, key, ley, egypt, and quay. But when the combination ey is unaccented its regular sound is \bar{e} ; (see the concluding part of 101.) The next combination, ia, takes the sound \bar{e} in parliament, miniature, because the words, originally pronounced in four syllables, have in the currency of discourse dropped the third; and the last, uy, in pla-guy, ro-guy, &c., occurs in consequence of retaining the silent u in order to keep the g hard.

104. Letter i or y under the accent, and final in a syllable, or followed by a consonant and e mute, is irregular in no word purely English except the verbs to live and to give, (see 189,) and the noun shire; but there are several semi-French and other foreign words in which the French sound of i is retained; as marine, police, profile, &c.: to which are to be added such words as are noticed at the conclusion of section 115. The word oblige, which formerly classed with marine, &c., is now pronounced regularly.

105. But when i or y final in a syllable or followed by a consonant and final e mute is unaccented, it resigns its alphabetical sound so generally, that its proper, can no longer be called its usual sound in that situation; and imagine, y-cleped, pi-azza, li-tigious, hy-pocrisy, co-vi-d-ity, ti-mid-i-ty, servile, practise, treatise, respite, favourite, genuine, opposite, which are pronounced \bar{e} -magin, \bar{e} -cleped, $\bar{p}\bar{e}$ -azza, &c., servil, practis, treatis, respit, &c., are specimens of the usual way in which all similar words are sounded; to which the instances referred to at (*) are exceptive. According to this special rule, unaccented i may be said to be sounded regularly when it follows these examples; but as this is not its regular sound according to the more general rules of pronunciation, so throughout the dictionary, whenever in a subjected word letter i drops its alphabetical sound, and like the foregoing examples takes that of \bar{e} or \bar{i} , it is printed in italic.

106. The digraphs taking the sound \bar{i} , are ie, ye; ei, si, uy, ai, ay, ey, eye, oi. The first of these, ie, though often sounded \bar{e} , has \bar{i} for its regular sound, and ye, its equivalent, has the same sound regularly, as in dye. The third in the list, ei, has two other sounds, both more frequent than \bar{i} ; (103, 100;) which sound it takes only in height, heigh-ty, and sleight, unless we add either and neither; but usage as well as regularity favours the sound \bar{e} in these two words; the fourth, si, occurs in guide, gule, &c. where it is evident that the u is inserted merely to keep the g hard, as it is likewise in the proper name, Guy. There is not the same reason for the insertion of the silent u in buy; but it is easy to see how the use of the digraph in some instances might have led to its adoption in others where the sound was the same. The digraph ai, has the sound \bar{i} only in the word aile; the next digraph in the list, ay, is a single word, and is pronounced $\bar{a}\bar{e}$, which is not quite, but very nearly identical with \bar{i} , (5;) but aye signifying ever is pronounced regularly, that is $\bar{a}\bar{e}$. The next digraph, ey, is heard in eyas; and the next, eye, is a single word, and classed with no other; which is to be observed also of the very irregular word choir, in which oi are sounded \bar{i} .

107. Letter o final in a syllable, or followed by a consonant and e mute, resigns in so many instances its alphabetical sound, that the general rule becomes doubtful till the exceptions are ascertained. Do, to, two, and who, prove, move, behave, (properly written behoove,) and lose, are words in such common use, and are the parents of so many derivatives, that the sound \bar{o} seems almost as proper to the letter o as its alphabetic sound; and hence it was formerly used without scruple in many words where modern practice has discontinued it; as in dome, Rome, and gold. Still we pronounce the word bosom with the contracted sound, where, however, the best practice is to shorten it into \bar{o} ; and the same pronunciation we give to the o in woman, changing the sound \bar{o} in the plural of the word into \bar{i} . In gamboge, the long sound of the same vowel is fixed; and in whore, though the same sound of the vowel is by no means universal or even common, yet it is sanctioned by good authority, and may be adopted, so Walker says, when we wish to soften the coarse effect of a coarse word. Thus much for the proneness of o to be sounded \bar{o} . But the liability of this letter to take the sound \bar{u} is still greater, affecting it both in situations where we might expect it to be sounded \bar{o} , as in some, and in those where it would be regularly sounded \bar{o} . (116.) The words dove, lore, glove, shove, and above, where it has the sound \bar{u} , stand in curious contrast with grove, clove, rove, &c., on the one hand, and with prove, more, &c., ($\bar{p}\bar{r}\bar{o}\bar{v}$, &c.) on the other. As for gone, shone, trode, which merely drop the mute e, their contraction comes under the sanction of a general principle, (135,) and so likewise does that of done, the change in whose vowel-sound, namely of \bar{o} into \bar{u} , supposing the shortening into \bar{o} to have previously taken place, is common to many other words. (116.) The word one is another irregularity, but not wholly unaccountable. (141,) and come and some ($\bar{c}\bar{u}\bar{m}$, $\bar{s}\bar{u}\bar{m}$) are two more anomalies. In all these instances the change of sound occurs under the accent. It is less remarkable that the o in purpose should, through the frequent occurrence of the word, and the absence of accent from the syllable, have sunk into the natural vowel, or that stone, as a common termination in touchstone, limestone, &c., should incline to be sounded stün; but the caprice of custom can alone account for the discordant spelling and pronunciation of ped-gö-gue, demagö-gue, dialö-gue, &c., in which we are not only wholly silent but wholly useless.

108. The combinations taking the sound \bar{o} , are oa, or, ou, ow; eo, ew, ea, au, oo. The first, oa, has \bar{o} for its regular sound, and is a very common way by which the sound is denoted in the language; as in boat, coat, &c. The second, oe, has likewise \bar{o} for its regular sound in words purely English, as doe, foe, &c. under the form \bar{o} in adopted Latin words, it is an equivalent for letter e, where, indeed, this letter ought to take its place. (103.) The next two, ou, and ow, whose regular sound is the 31st element in the scheme, are nevertheless to be conceived regularly sounded in soul, moulder, four, pour, &c., follow, hollow, &c.; the u or o in such words being esteemed mute.¹⁰⁰ Of the remaining combinations, eo, ew, ea, and oe, the first is sounded ō only in yeoman and its compounds; the second only in sew, and sewer; the third in bureau, beau, and its compounds; and the fourth only in brooch, door, and floor.

109. Letter u final in a syllable, or followed by a consonant and e mute, loses its alphabetical sound on many occasions owing to the peculiar organic composition of that sound, (9,) and the difficulty of preserving it entire in connection with certain other sounds. By referring to principles 61, 62, 63, 64, 69, and 73, it will be seen why the letter u is not regularly sounded in sure, (shūr.) pleasure, (plēzh'our.) nature, (nā'-ch'oor.) jeu, (j'w), lute, (l'ūt,) rude, (rūd.) &c.¹⁰⁰ The same principles do not account for the great irregularity of bury and business, but the nature of the sound u in some degree explains it. In the frequent use of the words, and the attempts at rapid utterance, the last part of the sound u was dropped: this reduced the words to a pronunciation bordering on be'-ry and be'-siness, which at length was further shortened into bēr-ry and biz-iness. The shortening of the unaccented sound into i in the last syllable of lettuce, and of mini'-ute, is explicable in the same manner. In the verb to conjure, with the accent on the first, the last syllable is pronounced as if the e were absent.

110. The combinations taking the sound ū are ue, ui, eu, ew; ieu, eau, eo, iew. The first four of these have ū for their regular sound; as in cur, suit, feud, new, &c.; the fifth, ieu, has the sound in adieu; the sixth has it in beauty and all its compounds; the seventh in frod and compounds, better written feud, &c., and the eighth in view. In some words the digraph ue is quite idle. See 107 and 189.

111. Pursuing the order of the scheme, we come next to vowels which are rendered short by the effect of consonants that follow them.

¹⁰⁰ When, however, ou or ow, being sounded ō or ō, occurs in a subjected word in the dictionary, in order to distinguish it from the same digraph, sounded as in noun and now, it is printed, as all letters that take irregular sounds, in italics; while ou, ow, sounded as in the last two instances, retain the Roman character.

¹⁰⁹ Webster goes much further than I do, and denies that u, as in union, unite, is preserved entire in such words as cube, chuse, durable, human. I know not the practice of New York, but I am confident that in London, among all speakers above the vulgar, the u has the same sound in all these words, with the sole difference of remitted accent, and shorter quantity in unite, and of added guttural vibration in durable. It is true our vulgar say dourable, toob, (tube), doe-ty, (duty), nuo, (new), &c., but even they preserve the alphabetic u in the other instances given above. Webster says that when he was in England, "he was particularly attentive to the public speakers in regard to this point, and was happy to find that very few of them made the distinction here mentioned,"—that is, made a difference between u in cube, and u in rude.—Credat Yankous.

The vowel-letters, as we have seen, are not short before a consonant if e mute is added; the reason of which is, that the e was originally sounded, and made with the consonant a distinct syllable, leaving the previous vowel final in the foregoing syllable. Thus, too, the vowel is long in chaste, laste, &c., because the words were originally chā-ste, tā-ste, &c.;—so likewise in bathe, &c., because the consonant is double only to the eye. But the long vowel in change, strange, &c., and in ancient, angel, chamber, amb-ace, Cambridge, and cambric, is clearly irregular. The long and broader sound of a, namely ā, which many speakers use in plant, ass, fast, castle, basket, mastiff, &c., is likewise irregular, and is daily growing less prevalent in well-bred society. (23.) Before th, however, except in hath, rath, rather, gather, lather, fathom, mathematics, the long broader sound universally prevails; as in path, lath, further, &c., and likewise before lf, lv, and lm, the l being silent. (139.)

112. But the chief defection of letter a from its short sound before a consonant, occurs in words where, dispensing with the significant u, it is nevertheless sounded ā. This takes place in all, ball, &c., (excepting only shall, and the name of the street Pall-mall, which, they say, is derived from pellere mallo, to strike with a mallet, and is pronounced as if written pell-mell;)—in always, thralldom, and all words in which the digraph ll was formerly used; in appal, as being confounded with such words; in talk, fulcrum, &c.; in salt, malt, &c.; (though in these the sound is generally shortened into ō, and will be marked not ā, but ā: see 25;) in bald, scald, &c.; in pa'sy, palter, paltry, &c., and generally in words where the l is followed in the same syllable by another l, or by any other consonant-letter whose sound does not bring the lips nearly or quite into contact, or draw out the mouth at the corners. (See 142.) In halm and shulm the lips are brought into contact, and the words would doubtless have been pronounced correspondently with balm, if the spelling had always been uniform; but they are likewise spelled harm and sharm, which latter spelling, and not the former, determines their pronunciation. The letter a is likewise liable, in general, to its broad sound, when it is preceded by a letter sounded as consonant w, whether the letter w is present or not; as in wan, was, swab, wanton, witch, quantity, gunty, &c.; which are sounded, wōn, wōz, &c., (140.) provided (as with regard to vowels affected by l) no consonant follows which brings the lips together, or draws out the corners of the mouth. (142.) The words to chap, a chap, and chaps, where letter a is fixed in the sound ō, are irregular on no assignable grounds. In scallop, the double l explains, though it does not justify, the broad sound of the same letter. In chap, chaps, (the jaw or jaws,) the broad sound is a confirmed irregularity:—in the verb to chap, to break into clefts, and the substantive, a chap, derived from it, the irregularity has for some time been less prevalent, and a speaker may pronounce them regularly without seeming pedantic.

113. The regular short sound of e before a consonant seldom fails in an accented syllable. Yet custom has substituted the sound i for e in the musical term clef, in English, and in pretty. But when not under the accent, although the preservation of the distinct regular sound is an elegance in the pronunciation of many words, (14,) yet in others, where there is a tendency toward the sound i, there would be stiffness and pedantry in scrupulously adhering to regularity; for instance, whenever letter e makes an additional syllable with s in forming the plural, or the genitives of nouns, or the third person of verbs; as in box-es, fa-cies, Gour-ges, he practis-es, he debui-ses. In all such instances, the e may very properly be sounded i, as it may likewise in the last syllable of helmet, poet, linen, covet, &c., although marked in the dictionary for its regular sound.

114. But before d, l, and n, in a final unaccented syllable, e is very frequently sunk entirely; as is likewise i in a few words before l and n; (115 towards the end;) and o very generally before n. (116 at the end.) The following are specimens of words in which this kind of suppression occurs: Wronged, praised, caged, smoothed, called, formed, planned, barred, stabbed, plagued; fabled, sparkled, handled, baffled; stuffed, (stufft, 143,) backed, kicked, tripped, faced, dressed, rushed; gravel, weasel; evil, devil; bidlen, sudden, golden, lessen, heathen, choarm, strengthen, hasten, denizen; basin, cousin, raisin; bacon, beckun, pardon, reason, mason, lessen. Nay, the irregularity extends to the words victual and Britann, as if they had been written vit-tel and Brit-en, and then corrupted in sound as the previous words. Alluding to such suppression of the vowel in the final syllable of some words, and its preservation in others, Walker says that "nothing is so vulgar and childish as to hear swivel and heaven with the e distinct, and novel and chicken with e suppressed." Either the remark is a little extravagant, or our prejudices are grown a little more reasonable since it was written. Still it is true that we cannot oppose the polite and well-bred in these small matters, without some detraction from their favourable opinion; and the inquiry when we are to suppress the vowel in these situations and when we are not, will therefore deserve the best answer it is capable of. The suppression, then, of e before d, takes place in verbs on all occasions when it can take place; it cannot take place in afforded, wanted, &c. because the sound of the e is necessary to that of the d; but in followed, blamed, dressed, placed, taxed, &c., however harsh may be the clustered consonants in consequence of the omission, yet the omission is indispensable, if we desire to conform to customary pronunciation. How far this conformity is desirable in the public reading of the Scriptures, or of set forms of prayer couched in language venerable for its antiquity, is another question; though even here, it is presumed, few judicious readers would go so far as to say hurl-ed, stray-ed, justif-éd, set-tléd, and averm-béd. In adjectives, on the other hand unless they are participles as well as adjectives, the almost uniform practice is to preserve the sound of e before d, as in naked, wicked, rugged, wretched, &c. This will explain the two different ways of sounding the adjective picked: for in the phrase a picked point, the adjective is not related to any verb, and therefore sounds the e; but when we say, a hundred picked men, the same spelled word is related to the verb to pick, and therefore sinks the e. It is true that according to this rule we ought to sink the e in the adjectives of the following phrases, a blessed day, a learned man, a curst thought; yet custom, ever capricious, makes them exceptions, and sounds the e. It is further to be observed that, in the compounding of words, both the original and the exceptive principle relax in favour of a more current or more harmonious pronunciation. Thus though we say, an aged horse, with the e sounded, yet we say a full-aged horse with the e sunk; on the other hand, though we say, an amazed look, with the e sunk, yet we say amazedly and amazement, with the e sounded. With regard, in the next place, to the suppression of e before l in a final unaccented syllable, the practice, where it does occur, is an exception rather than a rule, it being the custom of good speakers to guard against it, except in shek'-el, hu'-zel, cri'-zel, ea'-sel, ma'-vel, ra'-el, sniv'-el, shriv'-el, sniv'-el, driv'-el, shov'-el, grov'-el, cha'-tel, which, as to the last syllable, are pronounced in the same manner as the last syllable of tackle, dazzle, &c. (101.) Lastly, with regard to the suppression of e before n, unfortunately for the euphony of our language, it takes place by rule, as it should seem, rather than by exception; for though after a liquid (except in fallen, stolen, and swollen) the sound is always preserved, as in sullen, flamen, linen, barren; yet, when any other consonant precedes, usage has hitherto been, and is still, adverse to the sound of the e, except in sudden, kitchen, hyphen, chicken, ticken, jerkin, urpen, marten, leven, sloven, paltens, milten, and one or two other words in less common use; taking no offence at the ugly combinations of sound which occur in all other similar words, such for instance as, dead'n, madd'n, gold'n, black'n, rah'n, ta-k'n, sick'n, sha-p'n, les-s'n, kitt'n, heav'n, ra-r'n, &c., which are but a small sample of the numerous words in the language, that, terminating in en, come under the rule; and when to these we add such as, terminating in in and on, sink the vowel in the same manner, as ba'-s'n, cous'n, ba'-c'n, reus'n, &c., it will be seen that the blemish, if a blemish it is, extends over no limited space in the language.¹¹⁴

115. The regular short sound of i before a consonant generally gives place to the long

¹¹⁴ I say, "if a blemish it is," because after all our judgement seems to be formed from a partial view of the facts. Take the words individually, and no one can doubt the ugly effect of these suppressions; but mingled with other words and forming with them a texture of sounds, why should kl, tl, sn, in, dn, &c. be more inharmonious in the situations alluded to, than when they meet accidentally, as they must meet, by the juxtaposition of words and syllables: as in deck less, sit low; husa-not; let not; sadness, &c.?

sound before ld and ml, (compare 138,) as in child, mild, &c., faul, kind, &c., which are pronounced as if written chiled, miled, &c., fiacd, hiacd, &c., sinking the e as in the pronunciation of the participles of verbs. But this exceptive principle does not include even all purely English words, e. g. grind, wind, where the i is regular; and much less such as are of recent classical origin, as abscond, rescind. Neither should it include the title Chi'de, where we may suppose to have once been Chif-de. The regular short sound of i also fails in sign, &c., where the g is silent, (157,) in high, sight, &c., where gh are silent, (162,) and in the individual words indict, (the last syllable,) isle, island, viscount, in all of which the following letter being silent, accounts in some degree for the irregularity. (139.) The long sound of i in Christ, in climb, and in pint, are less explicable on any principle derived from the practice of our own language. In tithes, &c. the i is properly lengthened by the e mute, for th, though double to the eye, is a single consonant to the ear. In unaccented syllables the only failure of the sound is in evil, devil, ruins, basin, and cousin, in which it is quite sunk; (114;) but the practice as to letter i extends no further except in mean society: Lat'n and pu-p'l, for instance, instead of Lat-in and pu-pil, are decided vulgarisms. The irregular sound of i and y, in squirrel and panegyric, we may hope in time to hear reclaimed, a correspondent reformation having taken place in spirit and miracle, which were once, but are not now, pronounced spër-rit, and mër-racle. Sir-up, still pronounced sür'-rup, may be sounded regularly without pedantry. Bombasin, palanquin, Brazil, glucis, &c. have the i pronounced ë, because in fact they class with antique, profile, &c., (104,) and still keep in part their foreign pronunciation.

116. The defection of letter o from its regular short sound appears in many and various instances. Some cases of this kind we might expect from the proneness of o to be sounded ö, where we might look for its regular alphabetic sound. (107.) Hence we are prepared for the short sound of oo in wom-an, bos-om, Wolf, Wolery, Wolverhump-ton. In the first syllable of Worcester and worsted, the vowel sound, irregular in the same way, terminates in guttural vibration, and, being in this manner prevented from shortening, identifies with ö. (130.) Passing from these instances we come to host, post, most, ghost, &c., which instead of having the regular short sound as heard in cöst, frost, öst, öst, are pronounced with o in its long or alphabetical sound; perhaps because they were once pronounced in two syllables in correspondence with their old spelling ho-ste, po-ste, &c. Yet this cannot be the reason that gröss deviates from the regular sound which we hear in möss, cröss, dröss, &c. As to the lengthened sound which some speakers give the vowel in these last instances, (e. g. māss, crāss, &c.)—since the lengthening does not change the specific nature of the vowel, we do not notice it here. (See 17.)

Again, when o is followed by ll, ld, lk, and tl, its defection from its short into its alphabetical sound is so frequent, that döll, töll, &c. seem less regular than röll, drol, bröll, stroll, old, odd, gold, yuk, cölt, dölt, &c.; and this prevalence of the long sound before l extends to many words in which the l is single, as in bol-ster, para-sol, pai-rol. A cause for this long sound of o before l is endeavoured to be assigned at 138. Yet in other words the same lengthening and change of sound takes place in o where no cause can be assigned, as in both and comb: while in tomb and womb the change is not into ö but into ü. The alphabetic ö in pörl, fört, förm, (a bench,) förge, pörch, hörde, &c., as it is not a deviation from ö, but äwr, is noticed in another place. (130.) But these are not all the ways in which o deviates from its regular short sound: it very frequently takes, not its own short sound, but ü. This may in some degree be accounted for when preceded by the sound of w, (see 141,) as in won, wonder, worry, onc, and once, (i. e. won, wonce;) but is less explicable on any general principle in other instances, such as combat, constable, borough, shovel, cozen, doh, brother, &c. In most of such instances it is impossible to use the regular sound without offence to ears habituated to the usual sounds, though the force of the more general rule will now and then detach a straggler, and if the word frequently occurs, reduce it at last to regularity. There was a time when sovereign and comrade were always pronounced with the o as short u; but since the former word has been the name of a current coin, the regular sound of the o has been getting into use, and bids fair to be completely established. The word cony belongs to this class; but in slow solemn utterance may have the regular sound of o. These observations have all had reference to accented syllables. Letter o, unaccented and followed by a consonant without e mute, always tends to be sounded ü; (see 18;) and in final syllables either takes this sound entirely, as in arxton, hoizon, frlon, demon, unison, &c., or is sunk entirely, as in baccon, reason, poison, prison, &c.

117. The regular short sound of u before a consonant fails in bull, full, pull, and all their derivatives, and in many words, not really derivatives, but appearing to be so; viz. bullace, bullet, bulwark, bullion, fuller, fullage, fullery, Fulham, pulpit, pullet. In all these words, u has the sound ö, as it had in many words now obsolete, and still has in butcher, puss, pudding, cushion, cushot, sugar, cuckoo, huzzur, huzza! hurrah! push, bush, and in the verb to put; but not in the substantive put, the name of a game at cards, or applied in derision to a countryman. Among these words we must be careful not to mix any of classical derivation, as fulsome, and fulminate; but confine the sound to the few words noted above, and to their compounds.

118. The sound which, in spelling words as they are pronounced, will be indicated by ö, appears, from the preceding section, to have been one of two short sounds pertaining to the letter u; and there is reason to think it was formerly much more prevalent in the language than it is now. Hence a doubt might at that time have existed, which of the two should be deemed its regular short sound. That doubt, however, can exist no longer. The latter sound under the character u occurs in so few primitive words as the language is now pronounced in good society, that it is clearly an irregular sound compared with that we hear in dull, gull, but, hush, &c. The sound, then, appears to have no regular mark of indication in the ordinary spelling of our language: for the regular sound of the digraph oo, though identical in quality, is essentially a long sound, while that which is indicated by these letters in a few words of the language is essentially short. Nor are the words exceptive under any general principle, save those only in which oo are followed by k, which consonant uniformly shortens the sound; as in book, look, took, &c. The other words in which the short sound is denoted by the letters oo in the ordinary spelling of the language are wool, wood, good, hood, stood, foot, and their compounds; to which we may add soot; for though this word, probably from being coufounded with those which are spelled with u, long exhibited the anomaly of being pronounced sūt, it is now, by the best speakers, classed with the words preceding it. Cooper and its compounds are doubtful, except in common speech, which, in London at least, invariably shortens them. Blood and flood not only shorten the vowel, but change it into ū, with little chance of regaining the more consistent short sound: so also does and dosh, originally pronounced dōōz and dōōsh, are now sounded dūz and dūsh; which changes appear to have arisen from confounding these with words that, being spelled with u, renounce the more ancient short sound of that letter, in order to take the other short sound, now considered the regular one. But would, could, and should, although they shorten their original vowel sound, do not change it for another. See 127.

119. The practice of sometimes shortening the long sound of a vowel combination into the sound identical in quality is not peculiar to the digraph oo, but occurs with other combinations. Thus the sound ā in sail, sail, says, again, against, is shortened amongst the best speakers into the identical sound ē. (13.) Thus the sound ae of ae in the last syllable of surfeit, surfeit, foreign, &c., in been, in breeches, in dignities, civis, envies, pities, envied, pitied, &c. is shortened into the identical sound ī. (15.) Thus the sound ā in laudanum, laurel, and cauliflower, is shortened into the identical sound ō. (17.) And in the same manner it has happened that ā in ale, in many, and any, has been shortened into ē.

120. Other combinations of vowel letters have short sounds, because one of the letters being quite disregarded, both as to the sound it generally claims, and as to any effect it might have on other letters, the remaining letter receives the sound which under the general rules it is entitled to. This constantly takes place in the unaccented termination ous, which is always pronounced ū. So also, though the syllable is accented, the i in plaid and railery is quite disregarded. It is the same with the a and o in Dæd'alus, An'o-barbus, æc'o-nom'ics, an'fat'ida, where the syllable is shortened because the accent, principal or secondary, is higher than the penultimate; (92;) to which examples we may add fat'id and Mick'aelmas. Thus again the a is disregarded in head, dead, breath, death, measure, pleasant, weapon, &c., and also in dearth, earl, heard, search, &c. where, though the guttural vibration restores quantity to the vowel combination, it does not give it its regular quality, the sound being er, (35,) and not ear. (43.) Thus, too, the i is disregarded in nonpareil, heifer; the e in foreign, forfeit; the o in leopard, seoff, jerp'ard; the i in friend, fieldfare; the u in buill, buill; the a in the last syllable of marriage, carriage; the u in conduit; in cough and trough; in lough and shough; the w in knowledge; and the o in country, cousin, coup'le, doub'le, cour'age, nourish, touch, young, &c. And as, in the last examples, the combination ou is under the accent, we need not be surprised that, in an unaccented syllable, the o is almost uniformly disregarded; as in Sidmouth, Weymouth, &c.—indeed, the preservation of the full sound of unaccented ou, as in pronoun, is by exception rather than by rule. Again, in the plurals of words which are formed by changing y when pronounced ēy, into ies, the e is quite disregarded, as in duties from duty, pronounced dū'tiz. It is only when y in the singular has its long sound, as in ally, that the digraph ie in the plural has the regular sound indicated at 106.

121. Other combinations of vowel-letters have short sounds, because one of the letters is used merely as the significant or idle attendant on a consonant, and in that capacity not intended to bear a sound itself. Thus, in vengeance, allegiance, &c., the e or i is a significant attendant on g, implying that it must have its soft sound, and it leaves the a unaffected to take the sound ā. In piquant, the u, a constant follower of q, and generally taking the consonant sound w, is an idle attendant on that letter, and the a, as in the former instance, is left unaffected. The u in guess, guess, guill, guine'a, is merely significant of the hard sound of g; and the u in biscuit of the hard sound of c. In guard, &c., the w occupies the same place without the same reason, for the g would be hard without it: it is probable, however, that the w was not originally mute: See 145. And in gier'agle the i is idle, for the g would be soft without it: the absorbing of i when pronounced as y consonant is however to be expected as a natural effect when soft g precedes. As to the concurrence of vowel-letters in the final syllables eal, ial, ein, ian, ion, ous, ious, in line'al, soci'al, Tartare'an, Greci'an, trunche'on, nati'on, herbage-ous, capaci-ous, &c., the e or i must be considered as belonging to a former syllable, at least originally, and its liquidizing into y consonant in some of the instances, and entire absorption into the previous sound in others, is to be spoken of hereafter. See 146, 147, 148.

122. Next to the short vowels, the order of our scheme brings us to the incidental vowels that are essentially long. The first of these, â, (23,) never occurs without guttural vibration by any general principle of the language; except when letter a is followed by th, or by lf, lm, lv, the l being silent: (see 97, 111, 139:) except also when the digraph au is followed by n and another consonant; as in aunt, haunt, askaunt, flaunt, jaunt, haunch, paunch, launch, jaundice, laundress, daunt, saunter. In all these words, and also in laugh, draugh, draught, good usage is in favour of this, instead of the broader and usual sound of the digraph ow: yet the more partial rule is difficult to maintain, and will perhaps at last merge in the general principle. Vaunt and avaunt are decidedly within the pale of the latter: haunt and flaunt are with difficulty restrained from it by those who would be thought to speak better than the vulgar; and craunch, draugh, and draught, seem likely not only to desert the broad sound, but also to give up the letter u; when the next declension would be, to narrow the â into ä. Such is no doubt the process that demand and command have undergone, and hence the reason that speakers of the old school, and the vulgar universally, pronounce the a broad in both these words. The a in can't and sha'n't is also broad in consequence of lengthening the vowel to compensate for the omitted sounds. These are accidental instances of the occurrence of the sound â. But though, without guttural vibration, it is scarcely to be heard with a general law in its favour, the unaccented sound ä occurs constantly as the regular sound of letter a when not under accent, and not followed in the same syllable by a consonant. See 24 and 98.

123. All the other incidental long vowels, viz. âw or âwe; ö; oi or oy, ou or ow; are denoted by digraphs which are then only regularly pronounced when they take the sounds in question; as the sounds in question are then only regularly denoted when they occur respectively under these digraphs. An exception scarcely needs to be made to the last part of the observation, because the sound âw is found under au as well as under aw, the w and a, as vowel-letters, being equivalent. The irregular sounds of these digraphs have in general been noticed in some of the preceding sections. The digraph au, as we have just seen, (122,) has a less regular sound in aunt, haunt, &c. Oo can scarcely be called irregular when it takes the short and in other respects identical sound ö; (118;) but it has a sound decidedly irregular in blood and food; (118;) in brough; (108;) and also in door and floor, which are to be noticed hereafter. (132.) We proceed next to

124. The digraph oi, which is irregular in choir, originally written, and still pronounced, quire. In fortoise, both the o and the final e are disregarded, while the same digraph oi, in avordupois, connoisseur, turquoise, chamois, adroit, and dévoir, is pronounced variously, not from any principle of our language, but from awkward attempts at reconciling foreign with native sounds. Leaving the customary pronunciation of such words to the dictionary, we come next to

125. The irregular sounds of ow and ow. The former of these is irregular in a great many words, where, as we have lately seen, (120,) the o is quite disregarded. It is also irregular in words derived immediately from the French; as in group, soup, rouge, route, &c., as well as in some genuine English words; as through, wound, you, youth, &c., to which, as ow is but another form of ou, we may add flow, &c.: in all of these the sound of the digraph is ö. Another sound of this digraph, namely ö, as in soul, mould, shoulder, poultrie, &c., (108,) in blow, slow, crow, flown, growth, &c., is deemed irregular only as compared with its sound in fool, mound, out, &c., and in move, cow, down, &c. (See 108, and the correspondent note.) In unaccented syllables, the sound ö may be deemed the usual pronunciation of ow or ou; as in fellow, window, &c., borough, furlough, &c., in all of which the u or w is mute, and the o alphabetical. Another irregular sound of ow, viz. âw, occurs in ought, bought, thought, &c. (126.) Another, viz. ö, in would, could, and should; and another, viz. ö, in cough, trough, &c. (120.)

126. The irregular modes of denoting the sounds âw, ö, oy, and ow may next be stated, though it will, for the most part, be but a repetition of what has already been shown. And first with regard to the sound âw, this, as we have seen, is often found under a written simply; that is, without the w; (112;) it is also found under ow followed by gh, the t only being sounded, in ought, bought, brough, fought, thought, nought, sought, wrough; and (an irregularity not yet noticed) it is likewise found under the combination oa in broad and groat, and under ao in extraordinary, a contraction of extra-ordinary.

127. With regard to the sound ö, we have seen that it is often to be found under u, as in rude, ruler, &c. for the reasons assigned at 109; and the same reasons will explain why it is found under ew, ur, and ui in brew, drew, &c., true, rue, &c., bruise, fruit, &c. For these combinations would have had their regular sound ü, if r had not preceded. It is likewise found, as recently stated, (125,) under the combination ou, in words of obvious French origin, and in the native words through, you, youth, wound, (the subst.) and uncouth. To these belong would, could, and should, from which, however, the currency of speech has not only subtracted the t, but the long sound of the vowel, and reduced the words in pronunciation to wöod, cöod, and shöod. In countchouc, the sound in question is heard long in the first syllable, and short in the other, and the a in the first syllable is dropped. It is found under eo in galleon, under oe in shoe and canoe, and under oeu in manœuvre.

128. With regard to the sounds oi or oy, (29,) ou or ow, (31,) though the letters, as we have recently seen, are sometimes irregularly pronounced, yet the sounds are never irregularly denoted; that is to say, they never occur but under those characters.

129. The order of the vowel scheme next brings us to inquire, how the vowel letters, whether single or in combination, are sounded in connection with the letter r. The inquiry is partly answered by the scheme itself, to which all that follows to the end of 134 must be considered supplemental or exceptive. In mā'r-ry, ā'r-id, bā'r-ry, pēr-il, spīr-it, līr'-ic, ōr-id, fūr-id, hūr-ry, &c. the vowel before the rough r has the short sound it would have before any other consonant; and in the frequent terminations ary and ory, as in mercēnār-y, nuglōr-y, the a and the o have the same obscure short sounds we hear in the unaccented syllables of chapman and common. It is true that in char'-ry, slar'-ry, lar'-ry, stir'-rer, pur'-ring, words immediately allied to the verb to char, (to burn wood,) to the nouns slar and lar, and the verbs to stir, to purrr, we preserve the long guttural sound proper to the latter words; but the practice does not extend beyond these and similar instances; and the verb to larry, which has no relationship to lar, is pronounced tā'r-ry. As to such irregularities as asquīrrēl, panegyric, and sirup, which are sounded as if written squr-rēl, paneger-ic, and sur-up, they have been already noticed in a proper place. (115.)

130. The letters ar, er, ir, or, and ur, have no general deviations from their regular sounds which are not noticed in the sections from 33 to 40 inclusive. As exceptive to the rules there given, it remains to be stated that in char, (work done by the day,) and in scarce, the letters ar are sounded āre; that in war, quar, and all words in which the sound w precedes, they are pronounced or, according to a principle to be stated hereafter; (140;) that er are irregularly sounded ar in clerk and sergeant, and formerly, but not now, in merchant, Derby, and several other words; that ir in words of very common use, as already noticed, (35,) are sounded ur; that or are sounded ōrs in port, whether as a word or syllable, (except in important, importunate, and their immediate relations,) in borne, frorne, fort, form, (meaning a bench; for form meaning figure is regular,) ford, forge, force, forth, hurd, porch, worn, sworn, sword, corps, divorce, barndland; (116;) that the same letters, viz. or, are sounded ōr in worsted and Worcester, (see 116;) and that in word, work, world, worm, worae, woot, wooth, worship, &c., they are sounded ur, according to a principle to be stated hereafter. (141.) To these we may add, as also sounding or like ur, attorn, attorney, and a word whose pronunciation offends against all principle, namely, colonel. (See the word in the dictionary.)

131. The vowel combinations that, followed by r, take the sounds ar, er, or, and ur, are such, in general, as would have been sounded ā, ē, ō, and ū, in connection with any consonant letter but r. In the words heart, hearten, and heartth, the e is evidently disregarded; the former a is disregarded in the last syllable of beazar; the a after e in earl, earn, earth, dearth, heard, hearse, pearl, search, &c., in correspondence with the practice noticed at 120. Many speakers pronounce fearful as clashing with these words when used in the sense of terrible, but, in the sense of timorous, it is pronounced regularly by all speakers; so also in tierce and fierce many speakers disregard the i. The o before u is disregarded by general consent in a numerous class of words, as jour'-nal, jour'-ney, scourge, &c.; a practice in unison with a still wider principle in clum'our, va'pour, col'our, &c., because in these the syllable is unaccented. (120.) In guard, guardian, the letter u, necessary and significant although silent when used after g and before e or i, is evidently a mere idle letter; (121;) while the e in grandeur, originally sounded in a distinct syllable, has liquidized into y consonant, and is commonly absorbed by the sound imparted to the previous d. (148.) In centaur, where the digraph au takes its regular sound āu, the last syllable identifies with the 38th element, or.

132. Respecting the literal combinations are, ere, ire, ore, ure, oor, oir, our, and ower, it is to be observed that are is irregular when it is the plural of am, art, is, the e being disregarded; ere is irregular in there and where, and also in ere, (adv.,) by being pronounced āre; also in were the verb. (and indeed in ere the adverb when unaccented,) by being pronounced er; ire is pronounced ur in sapphire and in satire, not without the sanction of a principle; for the syllable being unaccented, the final e is dropped as it is in many other similar cases, (105,) and the remaining letters ir are then necessarily sounded ur; (36;) ore is sometimes sounded irregularly in where, (107,) and it is always irregular in the colloquial pronunciation of forehead; ure is liable to be sounded oor in all cases where sounds of difficult junction with ūre (i. e. yoor) precede; (see 61, 62, 63, 64, 69, 73;) oor is sounded ōre in door and floor, and vulgarly, but not politely, in moor also; oir is a combination found in no word purely English except choir, and this was originally written as it is pronounced, viz. quire; in avoirduois the same combination is sounded er, and in devoir, memoir, &c., it is sounded wāur; our and ower are sounded irregularly on the occasions that render ow and ow irregular; (see 125;) thus the digraph our is sounded ur in scourge, journal, journey, courteous, courtesy, and tourniquet; it is sounded oor in your, tour, fourbe, amour, and by some speakers in tourney; it is sounded ōre (which is scarcely to be deemed an irregular pronunciation) in four court, gourd, course, source, puur, tourney, &c.; and this is likewise the sound of the combination ow'-er in all words where the digraph ow was sounded ō previously to the addition of er, as in sower, one who sows; shower, one who shows; lower, the comparative of low, or to lower, a verb signifying to bring low; while the verbs to shower, signifying to rain, and to lower, signifying to look black, are pronounced regularly.

133. The literal combinations taking the sounds äre, äre, ire, öre, üre, ör, and ower, have been already pointed out in various sections. Thus, by referring to 100, it will be understood that air, ayr, or ayer, and eyr, have äre for their regular sound, as in fuir, Ayre, and gayer; but that ear, eir, and eer, as in beär, heir, and ne'er, (though the cause—i. e. nëver, në-ür—is evident in the last instance,) have that sound less regularly. By referring to 102, it will in like manner be understood that eer, ear, and ær, have äre for their regular sound, as in deær, fear, ærie, but that ier takes the same sound with something less of legal claim in tier, fierce, and grenadier; for, by referring to 106, it will be found that this combination has ire for its regular sound; as in fiery and wery. Again, by referring to 108, it will be seen that the combination oar has öre for its regular sound, as in hoär, soär, &c.; that owr and ower, as in fowr, slower, may also be conceived to indicate the sound regularly, by supposing the u and o silent; but that oor in door, and ewer in sewer, one who sews, take the same sound irregularly; to which last example we may add sewer, a drain, if the common pronunciation, shöre, is to be admitted. By referring to 110, it will be understood that the literal combinations urr and ewer have üre for their regular sound, as in surr, one who sues, and fuwer. From the vowel scheme it will also be apparent what are the regular sounds of oor and ower, while by referring to 127 we learn why the combinations ewer and our take the sound oor in some few words, as in brewer, tour, amour, &c. It has likewise been shown that the literal combination our has owr for its regular sound, and that there are no literal combinations but our and ower that stand for the 53rd and 54th elements.

134. From the view which has just been taken in various places of the vowels terminating in guttural vibration, it will be readily understood that the unaccented final syllables ar, er, ir, &c. (which it will be remembered are all sounded ur) must combine in such a way with a previous vowel sound, that each will in every case form with it one of the elements included between 41 and 54 in the scheme. Hence the reason that pay-er and may-or; li-ar, buy-er, and high-er; slow-er and grow-er; su-er and new-er; tru-er, brew-er, and do-er; baw-er and flow-er; are perfect rhymes to mare, hire, lore, cure, pour, and hour. Further, as äre and öre are equivalent to ëur and öur, (see 43 and 47 in the scheme.) and unaccented ar (34) almost or quite identifies with ur, the following and all similar words may be esteemed quite regular in pronunciation, if the a or u, which we consider silent in deal, coal, mould, &c. is assigned to the guttural r:—fëar, bö'ard, cö'arse, cö'urse, cö'urt, bö'urn, fö'ur, &c.

133 Sewer, a drain, by those who wish to avoid the vulgarity of the common pronunciation, and yet not deviate into a sound wholly unlike it, will be classed with these words, and pronounced söur, though without the reason (namely, the previous r) which justifies this mode of sounding ewer in brewer.

Our progress through the schemes here brings us to the consonant-elements; but it will be advisable to interpose in this place the statement of a few principles that have a general reference, some to grammatical distinctions, and some to the euphony of the language, as well for the purpose of explaining a few of the apparent irregularities in what has preceded, as of smoothing the way to some that are to follow.

135. In the first place it may be mentioned, as a general tendency of the language, that verbs having a long vowel in the present tense shorten it in the preterite and past participle. Thus, bite becomes bit, lend becomes led, &c. Hence, when this is not done by the spelling of the word, it is done by the pronunciation. Thus eat in the present becomes ëat in the past; read, rëad; hear, hëard; gö, göne; shine, shöne; do, (dö), done, (dün) &c. The verb trëad is short in the present, but the same tendency has evidently produced tröd in the past. The verb bëat, it is true, is an exception to the rule, (for where shall we find a rule of pronunciation in our language that is not crossed in some particulars by mere caprice?) but it is an exception which is not regarded in all parts of the empire, the sentence they played with me, and I bëat him, being a very common one out of the pale of the higher classes in London.

136. Another tendency, not merely of our language, but of language generally, is, to shorten the primitive elements of compound words. By this, the smaller elements are united into larger, and new words continually formed; so that every struggle against this tendency is a struggle to reduce language to a chaos of minute parts. In this direction does the mere etymologist labour when he would have us, by our pronunciation, signify the original parts of words. Contrary, however, to his habits, we contract sheep and herd into shepherd, vine and yard into vineyard; and, guided by the same principle, we pronounce with shortened vowels the words breakfast, förhead, housewife, zealous, knowledge, &c. The same principle often causes farewell to be sounded fär-well.

137. Among the modes by which, in our language, we distinguish from each other nouns and verbs that are the same, or almost the same in form, one is to give certain consonant letters a sharp hissing sound in the noun, and a vocalized sound in the verb. Thus the noun advise is distinguished from the verb to advise; use from to use; grease from to grease; house from to house; mouth from to mouth; excuse from to excuse, &c. It ought further to be understood that verbs have generally a tendency to vocalize se in their termination, whether they have correspondent nouns or not. With regard to those that have correspondent nouns, we may observe, that the difference of accent is sometimes added to the difference of sound, as in ref'use and to refuse; pre'mise and to promise. The vulgar, then, are in the right when they say prac'tice and to practise; but here, as on other occasions, the caprice of fashion interferes, and in this one instance obliges us to pronounce noun and verb, though differently spelled, in all respects alike. On the other hand, in the verbs to suffice and sacrifice, the principle has been allowed to communicate a most irregular sound to the letter c. This, if not altered in the verb, certainly ought not to be adopted in the noun sacrifice; yet such is the practice of most speakers, and according to this practice is the word marked in all former pronouncing dictionaries. And as there is a tendency generally in verbs to vocalize the terminal ce, so words immediately derived from such verbs have the correspondent s vocalized; as from accuse, (accuze,) accuser, accusative, &c. The same principle is acted upon in nouns and verbs ending in th; as mouth, to mouth; and frequently e mute is added to the verb to signify this difference.¹³⁷

138. The foregoing tendencies of pronunciation have their origin in grammar, the following arise from the nature of the sounds, and the action of the organs in passing from sound to sound. First, we may consider the peculiar nature of the consonant l as the cause of many of the irregularities in the letters pronounced with it. It is almost a vowel; the tip of the tongue applied to the upper gum is all the obstruction interposed to the voice in sounding it; which free utterance of voice, blending with a previous vowel, easily produces a longer and broader sound than would be likely to occur with a different consonant. It is certainly possible to sound a before l precisely as it is sounded before t; but it is not possible to make the syllable āl so long as we can make the syllable āt:—the t, then, has a sound of its own; and the two sounds, viz. of the vowel and of the consonant, (ā and ul,) have a natural tendency to blend and form a long syllable, in the same manner that all the vowels blend and form a long and generally a broad syllable with r. This may account for the long sounds of the vowel-letters in all, salt, bald, false, &c., roll, old, cult, &c. And in the same way we might account for the long sound of i before ld, in wild, child, &c., but the effect in this case is attributable rather to the joint power of the two consonants, which is here that of a syllable standing separate from the i; as when from the verb to file we form the participle fil'd. So likewise the i is long in find, blind, &c., the nd being esteemed to stand separate from the i; as when from the verb to fine we form the participle fin'd.

139. Generally, it is a principle that a vowel, losing in pronunciation the consonant that follows it in the spelling, becomes, on that account, long; as the vowels in démense, impugn, sign, sigh, isle, indict, viscount, impugn. Moreover, the highly vocal character of l is the reason that it often melts altogether into the previous vowel, which is then almost always long; as in calf, safe, calm, balm, almond, &c.; talk, walk, fulcon, auln, &c.; folk, yolk, &c.; to solder, &c.

140. If one consonant has a tendency to change the character of the previous vowel, another will be found frequently to alter the vowel that follows it. Such is a common effect of the consonant w. It contracts and then widens the aperture of the mouth, (57,) and the opening thus formed is precisely that which is required by the broadest vowel in our language, namely ā. Hence the word wa-ter is uttered with less effort than wait-er, the broad sound of the a following the previous outward action of the lips more naturally, that is more readily, than its narrow alphabetical sound. In this way we may account for the pronunciation of a large class of words, water, war, warm, quart, &c., where the vowel is long; wad, wan, was, swam, waddle, watch, quantity, quality, &c., where the vowel, identical in other respects, is short. In wrath, the a ought to be sounded ā, (122,) yet we sound it āw; which broader sound has no doubt been produced by the presence of w to the eye, though it is silent to the ear.

141. But if, through the cause assigned, the regular sound of a after w is āw, or ō, how shall we distinguish in pronunciation the letter o, when it comes after w, from the letter a? We must change the sound of the o to make won distinct from wan, and word from ward. This necessity seems to account for the practice which prevails, with some classic exceptions (aliquot, for instance,) of sounding o after w as short u: and the rule, be it observed, includes one, once, &c., which are pronounced as if spelled with w. Yet the adverb only, originally written one-ly, does not follow the present pronunciation of its primitive, and hence it should seem that the present was not the original pronunciation either of one or of its compounds.

142. But though, from the causes assigned in 138 and 140, the consonant l has a tendency to give letter a a broad sound by coming after it, and w a tendency to give it the same broad sound by coming before it, yet these tendencies often yield to the more general rules of the language, as in smallet, where the l is single in the first syllable, because the other l belongs to the next; and sometimes there are organic causes which partially counteract them. If l is to be followed by a labial or labio-dental consonant, the broad sound of the vowel will frequently be prevented, the transition to such a consonant from a narrow vowel (as in Alps, Abion, Alfred) being easier than from a broad vowel. By something of a similar cause the broad sound of a is prevented in wax, wag, twang, waft, &c. In other cases we must ascribe the more regular sound of a to the prevalence of classical over vernacular habits. In aliquant, for instance, the regular sound of the a in the last syllable is more prevalent among good speakers than the idiomatic.

143. But the irregularities of the vowels

¹³⁷ In a doubt respecting the orthography of certain words, the principle here exhibited may determine the writer: thus, if he doubts whether to spell chace or chase, license or licence, let him adopt the former mode for the noun, the latter for the verb: the pronunciation under each mode of spelling is the same. Expense, which has no correspondent verb, is spelled by the best writers with an e, from the low Latin expensa.

produced by organic causes are very few, compared with those of the consonants arising out of that source. The ready transition from one action of the organs to another must be, and always has been, regarded in every language; nor would ours with respect to its consonants be more irregular than the ancient Greek, if, like the Greek, it were permitted to signify by a change of letter every change of sound prescribed by the necessities of fluent pronunciation. In Greek, the slender with the middle and the aspirated consonant was constantly interchangeable, not only in pronunciation, but equally and correspondingly in the spelling. The latter liberty is not given to our language, bound as it is to furnish to the eye of the etymologist a constant clue to the origin of every word. But the other liberty it cannot be defrauded of; and hence arises the discrepancy, in great part, of our spelling and pronunciation. It is evident that p and b cannot be made distinct in cupboard without much effort; that z must be vocalized, that is, converted into t, when it follows in the same syllable certain consonants requiring voice; as in tubs, lads, hags, gloves, &c.; as, on the other hand, z must be aspirated when it follows a consonant articulated only with breath, as in Chintz. It is equally plain that d must lose its voice, that is, be converted into t, when, by sinking e in the termination ed, it follows a consonant without voice; as in trac'd, chap'd, pick'd, shap'd, dress'd, tas'd, &c. The discrepancy of the spelling and pronunciation in all such cases should surely be considered the fault of the former, if a fault, in not conforming to the latter, than of the latter in not conforming to the former. Why should the pronunciation of a language be obstinately uncouth, because its spelling is obstinately tied to foreign or obsolete etymologies? It is possible, with a great deal of pains, to pronounce suggest and exaggerate so as to preserve to each g its regular sound; but surely the elegant, because the easy pronunciation of these words, is that which runs both letters into the same sound, namely, that of j. So it is possible to preserve the sound of the first p in sapphire, the first t in Matthew, the first s in mission; yet no speaker does so. Further, it is possible to sound ph as f before th in diphthong, tripthong, apophthegm, &c.; but a cause, similar to that which in Greek brought the two aspirated consonants together, forbids that, as English words, they should have the ph so sounded. In the original pronunciation of Greek there can be no doubt that β, ϕ, and φ were consonants of the same organic formation, as were also δ, τ, and θ: with us, likewise, b and p are related to each other in the same way, and also d and t: but, as we now pronounce Greek, the relationship of φ to β and τ, and of θ to δ and τ, is quite lost; the sound f is organically essentially different from b and p; and the sound th organically, essentially different from d and t. Therefore, though διδόσκειν was the only way in which the word could be easily, gracefully, pronounced by an ancient Greek, it does not follow that dif-thōng is not a harsher and more uncouth pronunciation than dip-thōng; or that we are justified in twisting our organs to say ap'-dī-thēm, (apophthegm), when ap'-d-thēm is the easier and current pronunciation. To the general principle here investigated all words may therefore be referred which are apparently irregular in sound from the change of kindred consonants into each other, or the dropping of such consonant sounds as, if retained, would obstruct the fluent action of the organs. The dropping of the t in Christmas is explicable on this general principle; and indeed the more particular investigations or statements with respect to the consonants, which remain in order to complete the rules supplemental to the schemes, are almost all resolvable into the principle thus generally treated in the present section.

144. Surely it is due to our native language, when we adopt foreign words, to dissolve all such combinations of sound as are quite abhorrent to its genius, or to the course of improvement observable even in words of native growth. If we are justified in having dropped the initial sound of wrong, wreal, wrack, &c., gnaw, gnarl, gnat, &c., knave, knave, &c., it would be inexcusable not to comply with the custom which drops the first consonant sound in Cesar, Cleislas, bellum, pneumatics, Psyche, &c. It is not so easy to say why phthisis and its compounds should, after sinking the first consonant sound, namely f, refuse the modern pronunciation of the Greek θ; nor is it a justification to say that t is probably much nearer to the ancient θ than th, unless in all other words we so pronounced the Greek consonant. The irregularity is, however, established, nor would much be gained by opposing it.

145. In this place, previously to noticing other changes in the sounds of consonant-letters which arise in the transition from sound to sound, it will be proper to point out certain changes from vowel into consonant sounds which have their origin from the same cause. We have seen (57 and 58) that w and y are consonants which have the vowels o and e for their bases; and the latter being convertible respectively into the former by a superadded action of the organs, we may expect such conversion to take place, whenever the added action would assist the transition from the previous to the following sound. Let it be supposed that the u in suave, curras, languid, quibble, was originally sounded ū or û: it is easy to conceive, first, the dropping of a part of that sound, so that the words should be soo-ā'-sive, coo-ē'-ras, &c., and then that the oo should become w, by the addition of that action which the passage from the consonant previous to the vowel after it naturally produces. It is further worth notice, that any remaining difficulty in pronouncing the sounds thus brought together leads to another step, namely, that of rejecting the w altogether. On board of ship, where the word buoy is always occurring, it is called a boy, though the slow correct pronunciation is bwoy. In the same way the sound of u is always sunk in the names Greenwich and Dulwich, as it likewise is in moord and two. There is every reason to think the u was originally sounded in bug, guard, &c., where at present it is a mere idle letter; and also in guess, guide, &c., where, though not idle, it is silent. In unguent, language, &c., it is still sounded, and by many speakers in conquer, though the more usual pronunciation drops the u, which is likewise the practice in ciquet, harlequin, masquerade, piquant, quadrille, and a number of other words chiefly of French origin. In adunque, the u are mere idle attendants on q: (compare 121.)

146. The conversion of the vowel sound é into the consonant sound y takes place in the same manner, that is to say, whenever the sound before, and the sound after, naturally produce it; and the partial or total absorption of the sound often follows this effect. In vitre-ous, curi-ous, &c., the sound é in the second syllable is preserved from the nature of r, which refuses to take y after it in fluent union. In perme-ate, athe-ist, lin-eal, geni-al, radi-ant, trivi-al, copi-ous, it is likewise preserved, but not so completely that English organs, in pronouncing these words, are not sensible of a tendency to shorten the last two syllables into yate, yist, yal, yant, &c.; and when the more liquid l precedes, as in malle-able, Al-lal, mil-lion, bi-tious, &c., the conversion of the sound é into y consonant is complete. In Hallelujah, the j unusually stands for i, and in that capacity, namely, as equivalent to e, is pronounced y. So likewise the e in bludg-eon, dung-eon, &c., is in a situation to take the sound of y consonant, which sound, however, in these and similar instances, is not heard, the preceding consonant sound being of such a nature as to absorb the sound of y; just as, in the common termination tion, the sound sh which the t assumes has swallowed up the following i, the syllable being completed by on sounded as in the last syllable of common. The sounds which precede, and which absorb or tend to absorb the consonant element 58, this element, on the other hand, producing or tending to produce changes in some of those preceding consonants, are points, which, as they ought to be well understood, will justify the investigation contained in the following section.

147. Let any English mouth fluently pronounce the phrase "I'll meet you," without accent or emphasis on you, and there will be heard, in the transition from the t in meet, to the y in you, a slight interposed sound of sh, or the element 61. So likewise in saying, "Would you favour me?" there will be heard, in the transition from the d in would, to the y in you, an interposed sound of the vocal sh, that is, of the element 62. The cause is, that the speaker having to touch the upper gum with the tongue in sounding t or d, and then to utter the y lightly, is more negligent in the transition than he would be if the word you were accented or emphatic; and the sound sh or zh in consequence slides in. It would indeed be possible, as with the accented, so with the unaccented word you, to prevent the intrusion: but what the speaker would gain in accuracy by such care, he would lose in ease and fluency of transition. So likewise it is possible to preserve the pure sound of the t and d in nature and verdure; yet nothing is more certain than that they are not preserved pure by the best and most careful speakers; and the t or d being converted, or almost converted into tsh or dsh, (63, 64,) the y which enters into the composition of ü, (=you=you) is absorbed by (or perhaps it should be said, enters into the composition of) the new formed element. Moreover t and d are not the only dentals:—s and z are likewise formed by touching the upper gum; and the letter c, followed by e or i, is equivalent to s; and x is equivalent to ks. Neither is the consonant element 58 found only under its proper character y, or heard only in the alphabetic sound of letter u, or in the pronoun you, but it is likewise very frequently found under e and i, in such common terminations as run, eous, eal, &c., isle, ion, ious, &c. Now, supposing the words nauseate, rus-ate, right-ious, hid-ious, nation, glazier, ocean, social, soldier, grundleur, noxious, luxury, were originally pronounced nāusc'-yātē, rōz'-yātē, ritē'-yūs, hīf'-yūs, nāt'-yūn, glāz'-yer, ōc'-yān, sōc'-yāl, sōld'-yer, grān'-jur, nōck'-shūs, lūck'-shoō-rēy,—we can easily conceive how, in English mouths, they come to be pronounced, or have a tendency to be pronounced, nāush'-yātē, rōzh'-yātē, rit'-sh'ūs, (=rit'-ch'ūs), hīd'-zh'ūs, (=hīf'-j'ūs), nā'-shūn, glā'-zh'er, ō'-sh'ān, sō'-sh'al, sōlē'-jer, grān'-jur, nōck'-shūs, lūck'-shoō-rēy. Admitting the tendency, then, to these corruptions, the question occurs, is a speaker justified in yielding to this tendency? In many words, it cannot be doubted that he must yield to it, if he wishes to escape the ridiculous effect of pronouncing as nobody else pronounces; in other instances, he may decidedly adopt the more regular sounds; but in the majority of cases his best course will be neither to yield decidedly to the practice, nor very carefully to avoid it, this being one of the cases in which the extreme either way has a bad effect. The pronunciation contemplated by this general direction cannot always be marked in the dictionary with precision; and where this cannot be done, the regular pronunciation of the word, if it will bear a regular pronunciation, is always given in preference: but to all the instances admitting a discretionary application of the rule, as well as to those in which the irregular pronunciation is decidedly adopted, the reference to these remarks is appended, and the inspector will hence be enabled to apply the rule as circumstances may require.—As to the word sure, in which the interposed sh usurps the proper sound of s, see 149.

148. With regard to such words as come under the predicament considered in the previous section, it is another nice point to know when the absorption of the consonant element 58 should be total, when partial, and when not at all. In the dictionary, the partial absorption is signified by the mark (?), the note of the 55th element; if the sound of y is to be completely heard, the proper letter indicates the sound; if to be completely absorbed, the word is spelled accordingly.

149. The words sure and sugar, pronounced shūr and shūg'-ar, were not brought forward among the examples in 147, because, admitting to a certain extent the legitimate operation of the principle there investigated, it affords no excuse for the corruption of s before ū in an accented syllable; and these two words with their compounds, and also sewer, a drain, if it must be pronounced shūr, (see, however, note 123,) are therefore to be set down as decided irregularities, and will come under a general notice with others of a like kind hereafter. (167.) At present, we are considering such irregularities as may in part be justified by the ease or melody gained. Abscision and transition are commonly pronounced contrarily to rule, the element sh, which gives the short sound to the i in the second syllable, being vocalized. This occurs through the unconscious predetermination of the ear, that since the syllable began with the hissing non-vocal consonant s, it ought, for the sake of variety, to finish with a consonant of a different kind. In other words which exemplify a similar irregularity there is less excuse: for instance, in Grenwich and Dulwich, which vocalize the ch. In Ostrich the ch used to be vocalized, but the practice now wavers. Spinach is another example; but this word is often written as it is pronounced, spin'age.

150. The ear instinctively avoids, if possible, a quick repetition of similar sounds. Hence some other apparent inconsistencies in the practice of the best speakers. The word pronunciation is regularly pronounced prō-nūn'-shū-ā'-shūn, and by all speakers would probably be so sounded, if it were related to any such verb as to pronounce, in the same way that association and enunciation are related to associate and enunciate. In the absence of any such related verb, most speakers say prō-nūn'-cē-ā'-shūn, and so avoid the double occurrence of the sound sh in the same word.

151. The letter which most frequently changes its naturally aspirate for a vocal sound is s. Some of the occasions for this change have been already noticed: see 137, 143. The reason that s often becomes vocal in the prefix dis is noted in the dictionary, at the particle Dis. At present, it is to be stated that s is always vocalized, that is, pronounced as z, when, in forming the plural of a noun or the third person of a verb, it can be so pronounced. It cannot be so pronounced in trifles, chiffes, shakes, hopes, hats, lights, &c., because the preceding consonant element is non-vocal; but in faces, causes, churches, kisses, boxes, &c., a vowel sound intervenes between the final s and the previous non vocal consonant, and s, in consequence, is vocalized. Hence it is also always vocal in the classical plurals ma'-nes, antiq'-o-ies, &c. So likewise when s is not a sign of number, case, or person, it is often attracted to its vocal sound by the neighbourhood of vocal elements, whether vowel or consonant; as may be perceived by comparing manul, proposal, pismire, chiasm, baptism, raisin, dismal, disorder, dismay, observe, absolve, pal y, easy, cavement, in which it is vocal, with pistol, baptist, clasp, floutson, disturb, opismathy, upis, tipay, in which it is non-vocal. But the effect, though real in these and similar instances, must not be depended on; neither must a rule which obtains in some other languages, namely, that s is vocal between two vowels, be counted on with much certainty in ours: for though it is vocal in please, phrase, cause, chrese, wise, those, loser, muse, causation, acquisition, &c., it is very often non-vocal in situations perfectly similar, as will be seen in the next section: while, on the other hand, even the doubling of s, or the equivalent digraph ss before e or i, do not always prevent the change into the vocal s, as is proved by the words dissolve, possess, desert, discern, &c. Still less must we expect to find s, when single at the end of words, always, though it is generally, non-vocal when used otherwise than for denoting the plural number of a noun or the third person of a verb: for it is vocal in has, is, us, was, his, all of them words in the most common use. Moreover, even in the middle of some words, s often changes its aspirate for its vocal sound in passing to the plural number, as in houses, pronounced how'-zēz, in the singular number of which, house, the s is aspirate.

152. In spite of the tendency of s to become vocal in the situations indicated in the previous section, it preserves its aspirate sound in bas, obese, geese, precise, gouse, boose, dose, (the subs.) house, mouse, obluse,—nay, even in many verbs, as to cease, to cause, notwithstanding the strong general tendency to the opposite practices: (137.) It is always non-vocal in adjectives terminating in -sive and in -ose, as in suasive, jocose; always in the prefix mis-, and more frequently than otherwise in dis-. It is non-vocal, for the most part, at the end of words when not forming the plural number; as in yes, thus, us, thux, &c. It is non-vocal in mason, garrison, basin, absurd, absorb, ministry, heresy, &c., notwithstanding the neighbourhood of vocal elements which so often draw it into its other sound: nay, even in absolution, though vocal in absolve.

153. Even the organic necessity which vocalizes s after some of the vocal consonants (143) is not imperative as to all consonants of that kind. The s, for instance, which is vocal after l, n, and r, in ells, tens, and curs, is not of necessity vocal as it is after b, d, g, and v, in subs, maids, drags, loves, &c. Accordingly, we find that else, dense, curse, differ from ells, tens, curs, by having the s non-vocal, though to the ear they differ in no other respect. Here, then, we find the mute e used for another significant purpose, namely, to keep s after the liquid consonants from taking its vocal sound. The Latin verb para, a part, in which we make the s vocal, and the English verb to parse, which is derived from it, exemplify the same difference; nor is it advisable to confound this difference by pronouncing the latter like the former.

154. The letter x is nothing but ks, (or cs, which to the ear is the same,) under that single character. Hence, it is liable to the same changes of sound that ks might be liable to, if used instead of it. Thus, for instance, in execr', exalt', example, anxiety, luxurious, auxiliary, &c. the vowel in the neighbouring accented syllable draws the s into its vocal sound, (151,) and because the s is vocalized, the k is of necessity vocalized too. (143.) The same takes place in exhibit, exhale, in spite of the aspiration added to the adjoining vowel. But the s is not thus attracted when the next following syllable is unaccented. (exemplary is an exception, from its relationship to exemplar;) nor even when the next vowel is accented, if the k and s included in x should seem, by the meaning or form of the word, to belong both, to the previous syllable; as in tax-a-tion, tax-a-tious, dox-o-gy. In executor, there is a tendency to vocalize the included s, because the accent is on the following syllable; but the relationship to the verb execute counteracts this tendency. In anxious and luxury, the vowel coming after the elements ks is unaccented, and therefore neither consonant is vocalized; but the s becomes liable to another transition, namely, into sh, falling as it does under the predicament investigated, 147:— (see the pronunciation of luxury among the examples in 147:) the pronunciation of anxious is angk'-sh'us, in which we remark another conversion, namely, of n into ng; for which see 158. In Xenophon, and all words commencing with x, the x loses one of its component parts, and the word is pronounced as if written with a s; a practice justified by the principle laid down at 144.

155. Among the irregularities of the consonants, it may seem that we ought to reckon every occurrence of a single sound where there are two or more letters, or of two or more sounds where there is but one letter. This, however, is only analogous to what is constantly occurring among the vowels, where ai, ee, oa, au, oo, &c., denote single sounds in pail, free, boat, law, moon, &c., and i denotes a double sound or diphthong in bi-ble, bite, &c.: yet we consider the pronunciation of all those words to agree with the spelling, and consequently none of the letters to be sounded irregularly. So we consider bb, ff, ss, cc, sh, th, ph, ng, to be sounded regularly in abb, off, mass, scene, shall, thin, phrase, ring, &c., although under each combination there is but one sound; and x to be sounded regularly in mix, j in jig, &c., although under each letter there are two sounds. The effect, whether we consider it regular or irregular, which combination produces among the consonant-letters, will be best understood from the table at the foot of the page, which exhibits all the combinations of two in the same syllable that occur in the language.¹⁵⁵ One general remark may suffice for the double letters, bb, dd, ff, gg, occurring in the same syllable among the words in the several classes of the table,—namely, that the regular sound is that of the single letter, or, in other words, the doubling of the letter in our language adds nothing to its sound. As to the remaining combinations, those will stand in need of no remark or animadversion which retain sounds exactly corresponding in number and nature to the letters individually: it is only when, in consequence of combination, a sound is dropped or acquired, (as shown, in the table, by the italic letters,) that a remark or a general principle will be needed; and the following sections contain the remarks or principles hence arising.

156. When two consonant letters come together that are articulated by contact in the same part of the mouth, as m and b; m and p; l and n; or that are sounded in the same region, as m and n; or that are followed by a sound that more readily joins itself to the former of the two consonants than the latter, as l when it follows sc or st; m or n when it follows st or st; g when it follows rt; and o when it follows sw or tw:—in such cases, the latter of the two consonants is generally dropped in pronunciation. Examples: lamb, (see the table

155
Class
I.	Bb, lb, mb, rb,	as in ebb, bulb, lamb, succumb, curb.
II.	Lc, nc, rc, sc;	as in adduce, dance, aducous, force, scan, scene, sceptic, muscle.
III.	Bd, dd, ld, nd, rd;	as in bdellium, add, held, would, mind, bird
IV.	Ff, lf, rf;	as in cuff, self, calf, surf.
V.	Dg, gg, lg, ng, rg;	as in sledge, egg, bilge, ring, range, forge.
VI.	Ch, sch, dh, gh, ght, ph, phth, rh, sh, th, wh;	as in child, chaise, chasm, scheme, schism, schedule, buddha, ghost, though, laugh, lough, bought, draught, phlegm, diphthong, phthisis, rheum, rash, thin, then, eighth, Thomas, while, who
VII.	Ck, lk, nk, rk, sk;	as in block, hulk, task, folk, bark, work, skill
VIII.	Bl, cl, dl, fl, gl, hl, kl, ll, pl, rl, sl, tl, xl;	as in blame, claim, muscle, rid-dle, fling, glut, bull, pic-ble, ball, ply curl, sly, lyle, aisle, settle, bumble, drizzle.
IX.	Gm, hm, lm, rm, sm;	as in phlegm, drachm, helm, calm, harm, smith, prism.
X.	Cn, gn, hn, kn, ln, mn, nn, pn, rn, sn;	as in Cneus, gnome, sign, bagnio, John, Ansel, kills, auln, hymn, monomies, inn, pneumatics, turn, snort, demise.
XI.	lp, mp, rp, sp;	as in help, hump, ademption, carp, span.
XII.	Br, cr, dr, fr, gr, pr, rr, tr, wr;	as in bring, fibre, cry, acre, dry, children, from, gray, maugre, pray, apron, err, trail, theatre, wrong.
XIII.	Bs, cs, ds, fs, gs, ths, ks, ls, ms, ns, ps, rs, ss, ts;	as in rubs, politics, buds, chiefs, dogs, rings, wreaths, sticks, Ellis, else, hams, tens, tense, maps, psalm, curs, curse, mass, rats.
XIV.	Bt, ct, ft, lt, nt, pt, rt, st, tt, xt;	as in debt, acqueduct, indict, Ctesias, haft, often, hilt, leut, rapt, Ptolemy, receipt, port, mortgage, still, bundle, Christmas, chestnut, glisfen, butt, text.
XV.	lv, rv;	as in shelve, calve, starve.
XVI.	sw, tw;	as in swerve, sword, twenty, two.
XVII.	Av,	as in phalanx.
XVIII.	Cs;	as in Cesar.

¹⁴⁶, class I.: succumb, and other derivatives from cumbo, are exceptions;) muscle, (class II. and VIII.); bastle, (class VIII. and XIV.); hula, hymn, (class X.); ademption, (class XI.); often, in which last (see 114) e is silent, mortgage, Christmas, chestnut, glister, in which last (see 114) e is silent, (class XIV.); word, two, (class XVI.) This practice is justified by the general principle laid down at 143.

157. Similar causes, or such causes as are referred to at 144, or, in many instances, the liquidizing nature of l, which often melts entirely into certain neighbouring sounds, (139), will often produce the dropping of the former of two consonants in pronunciation. Examples: bedellium, would, (see the table ¹⁵⁵, class III.); calf, (class IV.); phthisis, (class VI.); talk, folk, (class VII.); isle, aisle, (class VIII.); phlegm, drachm, calm, (class IX.); Cneus, gnome, sign, bagnio, kneel, auln, mnemonics, pneumatics, demesne, (class X.); wrong, (class XII.); psalm, (class XIII.); debt, indict, Ctesias, Ptolemy, recept, (class XIV.); calve, (class XV.); czar, (class XVIII.) Among these examples, it can scarcely be said that s in isle, in aisle, and demesne is dropped through an organic indisposition to unite with the t or the n; and it is probable that these words would never have been found among the instances, but for etymological causes. The same may be observed of the c before t in indict.

158. In scanning the remaining examples distinguished from the rest by containing italic letters in the table ¹⁵⁵, we shall find one or the other of these effects:—a change produced in the sound of one or both consonants in consequence of the combination:—the formation of a digraph, the letters of which are not meant to have separate sounds, but the two to answer the purpose of a single character for a single element. Leaving other examples for subsequent sections, it will be sufficient in this to draw attention to the following:—aduncous, (class II.); ring, (class V.); bank, (class VII.); prism, (class IX.); rubs, buds, digs, rings, wreaths, ells, hums, tens, curr, (class XIII.); phalanx, (class XVII.) With respect to all these examples, except ring, bank, aduncous, and phalanx, the change produced in the sound of one of the consonants, namely, of the s, by the proximity of the other consonant, has been accounted for: prism is sounded pizm, by the rule 151, which rule, as well as 143, accounts for the same change in rubs, &c., in wreaths, (of which the th is vocal), in ells, tens, curr, &c.; while 153 lays down that rule of orthography which restores s to its regular power in else, tens, and curr. It remains then to speak of the effect produced on the n by the g, k, c, and x, in the other words, or simply by the g and k: for c hard is but another form of k, and x is the same as ks: moreover, k and g are kindred elements, differing from each other the one by employing only the breath, the other by vocalizing the breath: as to manner of articulation, they are formed at the same place, namely, by a contact of the back part of the tongue and the soft palate. Now, when the speaker has to utter n before he thus applies his tongue.—commencing with the nasal tone which n requires, he neglects, in the rapidity of speech, to complete the n by touching the upper gum, and instead of this, proceeds (still using the nasal tone) to the other place of contact: and as this nasal tone is not that which g requires, the result is neither n nor g, but an element distinct from both, viz., the 72nd in our schemes. Such is the effect which the word ring exemplifies: it is only in the north-western counties that this is not all the effect; for there the g is articulated and added to the element described, (ring-g, long-g, &c.) but this is not the general usage. However, when the g sounded hard is understood to belong to the next, and that an unaccented syllable, it is articulated as a part of this syllable, its effect on the n being the same as if it also belonged to the previous syllable; as in onger, fin-ger, &c., to which words, usage obliges us to add youn-ger, strol-ger, lon-ger, though these ought to have assimilated with wrong-er, sing-er, &c., and to have been youn-er, strong-er, long-er. (See 72 and 77.) The effect thus produced by hard g on the n in the previous syllable takes place less frequently when the syllable following the n is accented; for though the effect is liable to occur in Ben-gal, con-gratulate, and such like cases, it should in these, in general, be avoided as a negligence. These remarks have all had reference to the effect of g upon n: but the effect of k will be the same; and accordingly bank, aduncous, and phalanx, are sounded bangk, aduncous, and phalangk, where we may remark that k never resigns its articulation as g does in consequence of the change produced in the n: since this would be to identify the sound of nk with that of ng.

159. There are certain irregularities of sound exemplified in class XII. in the table ¹⁵⁵, which may next deserve attention. The combinations bre, cre, gre, and tre, when final in a word, are pronounced bur, cur, gur, and tur. That English organs should thus convert the rough or trilled into the smooth or guttural r, when the vowel sound is dropped with which the rough r was perhaps once articulated, is natural enough;—and the dropping of the sound e in all such instances is obviously an imitation of the French idiom. The metathesis, as grammarians call it, of the r in iron, and colloquially in apron, children, hundred, &c., is of the same nature, and is justified by the ease and smoothness gained.

160. Of the several classes of consonant combinations exhibited in the table ¹⁵⁵, scarcely one now remains requiring notice but those formed with letter h; the most perplexing combinations in the language. This might be expected from the mere fact of letter h being so combined. For it is not the genius of our language, on this side of the Irish channel, to aspirate a vocal, or super-aspirate a non-vocal consonant element, except y or w; and therefore, when the sign of aspiration is joined with any consonant letter, it will with us either be quite silent, as in John, (class X.) or beth, (class VIII.) or buddha, (class VI.); or it will indicate some unusual sound which this letter, in connection with the h, is to assume. The aspiration of the consonant element y takes place when h precedes the long sound of u; as in human, humility, &c., (humour and its compounds being exceptions;) and the aspiration of w takes place when h follows letter w at the beginning of a syllable; as in whale, wheat, whine, &c., which are pronounced whāle, hwēat, hwīne, &c.: unless the vowel-letter o succeeds; for then the w is sunk and the h alone is sounded, as in whole, who, &c. (Compare 56.)

161. The remaining consonant-combinations with h are partly of Saxon, partly of Greek, and partly of French origin. C with h will be found in words of all three sources, and is subject in consequence (beside being occasionally silent) to three modes of pronunciation. In words of genuine growth, it indicates the 63d consonant element, which must therefore be considered the regular sound of this combination; as in child, much, which, witch, &c. The t prefixed adds nothing to the sound, but is often useful in preventing any other sound from being given. In words of French origin, the digraph ch is sounded like sh; as in chair, cartouch; and, in words of Greek and Italian origin, it is sounded k; as in chasm, scheme, ache, choral, epoch, balдахin. Here, however, in the sounds of sch before e and i, we have to encounter some striking inconsistencies. Nothing can be more evident than that, if the Greek χ is to be supplied in our orthography by ch, and if this, in default of the extra-aspiration which our language allows not to a consonant, necessarily identifies with k, the word schism, and schedule, should have sch pronounced as they are in scheme: yet an unnecessary reference of schedule to its French denizenship, with some vague notion perhaps of the alliance of our English sh to the Teutonic sch, has drawn the word into the very irregular pronunciation shed'dle; while the other word, schism, from a notion, probably, that, as h is silent, the c should be soft before i, has taken the equally irregular sound sizm; an irregularity the more extraordinary, since in the word sceptic, (Class II. ¹⁵⁵) the c is kept hard for the purpose of showing off a familiarity with the word in Greek, although no letter intervenes between the c and the e, and consistency requires that the c in scene, equally related to the Greek κ, and the c in sceptic, should be sounded alike. As, however, on other occasions, so in this, we must give way to usage, or incur the effect of opposing it. Drachm is another word that drops ch, as already remarked at 157.

162. The words in which g and h come together in the same syllable (Class VI. ¹⁵³) are almost all of native growth; and hence we might expect a uniform or regular mode of sounding them; yet this is far from being the case. That seems the most consistent pronunciation which we hear in ghost and burgh, the h, superfluous as a mark of aspiration, being regarded as wholly idle, and the g accordingly receiving its proper sound. On other occasions we seem to think that h ought, in some way, to be aspirated,—for instance, in the Scotch word lough; but, incapable of the Celtic aspiration which is frequently heard north of the Tweed, we merely render the g non-vocal, and thus, in sound, reduce the word to lock; which procedure we likewise follow in hough and shough. Yet we do not seem satisfied with this mode of pronunciation; for we carry it no further than the words quoted; and of these we often change the spelling to accommodate the sound. Thus unsuccessful, we try another mode in laugh and draught, in draugh, rough, tough, slough, enough, clough, trough, and cough, in which we pronounce gh as we do another combination with h, namely ph, and give the two letters the sound of f. But, as if unsatisfied with all these modes of pronouncing gh, we seem in other words to give up both letters in despair, and in bought, &c., in weigh, &c., high, &c., lough, &c., dough, &c., through, &c., uxquebaugh, pugh! taught, &c., straight, &c., eight, &c., fright, &c., sight, &c., allow the combination no other effect than that of lengthening the previous vowel where it might otherwise be short. See 115, 139

163. Words in which p and h come together in the same syllable (Class VI. ¹⁵³) are almost all of Greek origin. In the English pronunciation of diphthong, triphthong, aphthong, and ophthalmic, dropping the h, which in our language is superfluous as a mark of aspiration with a consonant, we pronounce the remaining consonant, p, in the usual manner. (Compare 143.) But this is not the procedure commonly pursued:—p with h in almost all cases is pronounced f: in Stephen this sound is vocalized, that is, converted into v; and likewise in nepheu—almost the only word in which the combination occurs that is not immediately referable to a Greek origin; and even on the spelling of this word an Hellenic influence is suspected. As to the letters phth meeting in the same syllable, who can wonder that an English eye, affrighted by such an assemblage, should close its lid on the first two letters, and consider only how the second two are to be pronounced? See the example, phthisis, at 157.

164. R with h at the beginning of a word or syllable (Class VI. ¹⁵³) is pronounced uniformly and consistently: for the h, superfluous in our language as the sign of aspiration with a consonant, is merely an indication that the word is of Greek origin, and the remaining r receives its usual sound. The h is also mute in catarrh.

165. The words in which s and h come together in the same syllable are of native growth, (Class VI. ¹⁵³) and the h so joined to the s, is, in all cases, an indication not that the s is to have its common dental sound, but the palatal sound, which is the 61st element of the schemes. It is in perfect consistency with this mode of indicating the 61st element, that, throughout the dictionary, the 62d element, which is nothing but the 61st vocalized, is indicated by zh. Let it be remembered, however, that in no one instance does the actual orthography of our language recognise this mode of indicating the element in question, namely, the 62d, and that it is adopted in spelling words as they are pronounced, solely because no other can be found analogous to the actual practice of spelling, and, at the same time, consistent and intelligible.

166. Of the words in which t and h come together in the same syllable, (Class VI. 23,) some are of native, and some are of Greek origin. That the Saxon letters þ and ð, for each of which, in default of a single character, we put the two letters th, were articulated by the tip of the tongue between the teeth, seems as probable a fact as any in philology: but that the Greek letter θ, for which we also substitute the same two letters, was articulated in the same way, is not by any means so certain. However this may be, the combination in question, both in words from the Greek and words from the Saxon, is articulated in the way described, forming the 67th or 68th element of the consonant scheme. There is reason to think that the former of the two Saxon letters was the mark for the non-vocal, and the latter for the vocal sound. At present it may be laid down as a general rule, that the non-vocal sound occurs most frequently in words of Greek, and the vocal in words of Saxon origin. To signify this difference in the dictionary th will stand for the former, and th for the latter. Th is always vocalized by final e mute, as in bathe, breathe, blithe. It is also vocal in verbs: see 137. Further, it may be noticed, that in a few words, Thomas, Thames, thyme, asthma, Anthony, &c., the h, superfluous as a mark of consonant aspiration, is disregarded, and the remaining t is articulated as if it stood alone. In eight, which is formed from eight by adding the sound th, the t belonging to the h is omitted in the spelling, in consequence of which the t, previously belonging to the word eight, does double duty. In five words, namely bath, lath, mouth, oath, and path, the sound, aspirate in the singular, is vocalized in the plural, and the plural s (see 143) is of course vocalized also.

167. The foregoing principles, from 97 inclusive, are an attempt to systematize all words that do not conform to the orthography and pronunciation exhibited in the schemes, and the principles numbered in correspondence with them. Some words, however, still remain which no system can embrace, and which can therefore be referred to no general principle when they occur in the dictionary, unless it be admitted that words falling under this predicament must be met with in every living language, and so the predicament is accepted in place of a principle. And, truth to say, even of the words which have been noticed in the previous sections, a great many individual instances belong to the present rather than to any other division in the general arrangement.—such words, for instance, as gaol, bury, business, frod, to sew, to char, brooch, door, blind, sewer, (a drain,) aisle, isle, demesne, vicount, indict, sacrifice, colonel, verule, &c. Of the same description, many words yet remain whose irregularity it would not be more difficult to account for, than for those that have chanced to come under notice. It would be easy to show, for instance, how lutestring shortened in sound first into lu-string, and thence into lustring; wednesday, first into wen-es-day, and thence into wens-day. The irregularity in sounding lieutenant may be accounted for by the practice, common when the word was first introduced from the French, of confounding the letters v and u: the word was written lievtenant and sounded levtenant, which naturally shortened into levtenant.¹⁶⁷ Other instances that class with these will be indicated in the dictionary by a reference to the present section, but without any further notice. Fortunately, the number of these anomalies is daily decreasing, so that many words which, in Walker's dictionary, are marked as having a customary irregular pronunciation, appear in this with regular sounds, and yet with usage in their favour. No well-taught person, except of the old school, now says cow-cumber or sparrow-grass, although any other pronunciation of cucumber and asparagus would have been pedantic some thirty years ago. And this may lead to a few remarks on the changes that have taken, and may take place, in the pronunciation of our language.

168. First, it must be conceded that they who commence these changes, however useful and necessary in their calling, are for the most part the smaller literati of the country,—they who attend more to manner than to matter, and love to lead the fashion in words, as others love to lead it in dress. To dispute the old and to settle a new pronunciation of a word is a task exactly suited to some abilities, which are not capable of a much higher flight; and, while persons so endowed are to be found ready to undertake the employment, (and they always will be found,) the rest of the world will be content to follow their track, satisfied if clearly understood, and that their manner neither prejudices their matter by uncouthness, nor calls off attention from it by obtrusive nicety or unusual preciseness.¹⁶⁸ But, while it becomes every sensible speaker to adopt all changes for the better, as soon as he safely may, it equally becomes him to oppose such as have no recommendation but caprice and fashion, and which would injure instead of improve the audible structure of our language. What, for instance, would the language gain by narrowing the a in quantity and quality, or lengthening the vowel-sound in the first syllable of knowledge? Certainly, nothing on the score of regularity, unless the speaker were disposed to go much further, and narrow the a in wan, wallet, &c., (140,) and lengthen the vowel in breakfast, zealous, &c. (136:) nor would any thing be gained on the score of sound; such as in many cases might induce a sensible speaker to comply with a new mode of pronunciation, though at the risk of seeming peculiar. In short, after all that precedes, the one principle by which a speaker of good judgement is guided, a principle including all the others, is, usage: it is only when he knows not this usage that he hesitates: and in such cases it is hoped that, till years make it obsolete, the dictionary will be a faithful guide. Meanwhile, if, in opposition to the authority of the dictionary, a word should seem inclined to change its pronunciation, the previous principles will show whether the change would be for the better or the worse, and consequently whether it ought to be adopted or opposed.

¹⁶⁷ The discrepancy of spelling and pronunciation is most remarkable in proper names: for instance, the place written Chertsey is called Chessey, and Cashalton is called Caselorton. Family names often claim, prescriptively, one form for the eye, and another for the ear: thus Chalmers, Saint-John, Bolingbroke, Mainwaring, Majorbanks, Arvedeckne, Harange, Cockburn, &c., each the ear as Chumley, Senjon or Sinjon, Bullringbrook, Munneing, Majorbanks or Murchbanks, Arvedeckne, Harange, Cockburn, &c. The poet Byron called himself Byrn, (Burn,) and the family name of Cooper is, orally, Cooper: as private names, such may still be their pronunciation; but when the poets are meant, the regular pronunciation is the proper one, and this the public have wisely adopted, by which much confusion that must have arisen in discourse from the other pronunciation is avoided.

¹⁶⁸ As for my own labour in this department of the work, I am aware, despite of the old quotation, Ne quis tanquam parva, &c., that I am working in a field where no honour can be won. But it is my calling, and I conscientiously do my best in it to improve on the labours of my predecessors.

169. The elements of syllables in English words should be all that, in an English dictionary, require consideration; but, unfortunately, it is the custom of English people to mingle a multitude of foreign words with those of their own language, which words by degrees fix themselves as a sort of patchwork on the homespun material, and, requiring to be uttered with more or less of their original pronunciation, are precisely the words for which a pronouncing dictionary is likely to be consulted by the mere English scholar. With regard to Greek and Latin words, some hints have already been furnished,—as to accent, by the remarks offered at 86;—as to the sound of final e and es, by those at 101:—and as to the digraphs æ and œ, by those at 103. The seat of accent in Latin words is always determined by the quantity of the penultimate syllable, and this may be ascertained from any Latin dictionary:—if the penultimate should be long, it must be accented; if short, the previous syllable must have the accent: and, be it remembered, a vowel before two consonants is always deemed long, though pronounced with the short sound of the English vowel, as the penultimate of Aniē'næ; unless the two consonants are a mute and a liquid,—for then the previous vowel may be short, and consequently unaccented, as in cerēbrum. Greek words, as to their accent, are pronounced as coming to us through the Latin, and consequently by the same rules; though exceptions sometimes occur. (See 86.) With regard to Latinized names in modern science, many of which have a form half Latin, half English, it is absurd to tie them to any classical law:—their current will be their proper pronunciation, be it in other respects what it may; as buryta, outline, &c. In the sounds of letters, also, it is usual to pronounce Greek words as coming to us through the Latin; and, though our mode of pronouncing Latin must be admitted to be absurd,¹⁶⁹ yet we must adhere to it, unless we could produce a total change; since an attempt to correct by piecemeal would introduce further inconsistencies, and render “confusion worse confounded.” The sound of g in Latin, as in English words, by common consent is hard before a, o, and u, soft before e, i, and y; such also is the practice with regard to the greater number of adopted Greek words, and the practice must be followed unless the speaker chooses to involve himself in inextricable inconsistency. It is of no use, for instance, to pronounce the g hard in gymnastics, gynecocracy, and a few other words from the Greek, unless the speaker followed the same practice in words of more common occurrence, as genealogy, geology, and the like. True, he may establish the less usual sound of g with regard to a word or two, and a dictionary like this may be compelled to reflect that pronunciation; but more justice will be done to our language, and more credit will be due to the speaker, if, when a word hangs between either practice, he prefers that pronunciation which makes it harmonize with the majority of words in the same predicament.

170. The affectation of using French and Italian words in English speech, was a national failing as far back as the times of Elizabeth, and it continues to this day. At their first introduction, such words are pronounced, or attempted to be pronounced, without corruption of their original sounds; by being much used they gradually resign their foreign cast, and some of them at length become quite English. It must therefore happen, while in transition from one of these states to the other, that they will be neither English nor foreign; a condition it were bootless to complain of,—injudicious to alter by going back to the original pronunciation,—and quixotic to amend by reducing them at once to the state of English words. In this condition will the greater part of the words be found that bear a reference in the dictionary to the present section.¹⁷⁰ Of others, which retain their foreign sounds, it is impossible to mark the pronunciation precisely; and the following directions are important in connection with the spelling, the accents, and other marks, by which an approximation to the proper pronunciation is attempted.

In ITALIAN words, the accented syllable must be humoured, so to speak, that is, it must be ¹⁶⁹ The absurdity is not that we give English sounds to the Latin letters, but that we vary the sound of the same letter, subjecting it to every change which it is liable to in English words; and what these changes are, how many, how conflicting, how capricious, the foregoing long development of principles may testify.

¹⁷⁰ The same statement applies to foreign proper names of places; many of them have a medium pronunciation, which it is prudent to encourage as a means of making them at last quite English. The names of almost all the considerable cities abroad are already English in pronunciation, if not always in spelling; and not a few have conformed in spelling as English words to their previously established English sounds. When a choice can be made (it certainly cannot always) between an English and a foreign sound of a foreign name, it is a petty and contemptible taste which, in English society, prefers the latter.

dwelt upon in a marked manner, whether it terminate in a vowel or a consonant; for instance, the o in curioso, (-ō'sō,) and the ed in erpeggio, (arpéd'jō,) in which last word the tongue rests upon the d for some time. So in the doubled consonants, as ll, nn, &c., the tongue, by resting on the sound at the place of contact, must mark the difference between the articulation, signified in this manner, and the same articulation signified by the single letter. In other respects, Italian sounds may be tolerably conveyed by English modes of spelling; and consequently, when the Italian pronunciation is not imitated by the spelling, (as in concerto, which is not marked conchér'tō.) the reason is, that the English pronunciation is deemed to have won its way into good and general use.

In French words.—

The r must be trilled or made rough at all times; for instance, in the final syllables marked twā and tur, in abattoir, and amateur; nor must these syllables be short, but have the full prolongation of English syllables under the accent and lengthened by guttural vibration.

The syllables marked ōng, āng, ūng, ōang, as in enante, (ōng-sāng'tē,) un cordon, (ūng cor'dōang-) must not be articulated according to the manner of sounding ng in English words, but the nasal tone must rest in, not pass through, the nose, and the tongue must be quiescent, not carried back as if to articulate letter g. The true French sound is in fact not in any degree a consonant sound, but a nasal vowel.

The sound of u, marked 'oo, 'ōō, or 'ūū, must not be uttered as in pronouncing English words, but the lips must be contracted as if for whistling, and indeed the proper sound of the French u is not improperly described by calling it a vocalized whistle.

The sound marked d, as in aid-de-camp, (āid-dē-cōng'p,) is meant for the same obscure sound which the a and o denote in the English phrases—twenty pounds a year, what's o' clock? &c.

The sound marked dōō, as in the last syllable of accoucheuse, (-dōōz,) must be so blended as to seem a single sound, the ōō, by such blending, losing its full pouring utterance, and approaching the narrow sound of the French u as described above.

French words have no decided accent: hence the accent is not always marked on the last syllable, which is wrongly deemed the universal seat of French accent. The last syllable, however, is frequently marked with a long quantity, when the accent is placed on another syllable with no indication of length; and this procedure is adopted as the best mode of conveying the real effect, namely, accent, which is unaccompanied by the effect of English accent,—quantity not produced by the ordinary cause of English quantity.

171. Before taking leave of "the Elements of Syllables," it seems expedient to recapitulate the legitimate uses of the silent letters, which, in the dictionary, are printed a, c, i, o, s, u, h a, c, i, o, u, w, y following a vowel, imply the alphabetical sound of that vowel; as in mēal, char'coal; āks, fōca, dūas; pāin, ēther, sūt; brōoch, dōor; sōal; bcāl; plāy, kēy.

It must be noted, however, that the effect in some of these instances is unusual, and in that respect illegitimate; for example, in brooch and door, ou being properly a digraph representative of the 27th or 28th element of the vowel scheme: so also with regard to the particular combinations oi and oy, ou and ow, the latter vowel is not generally or legitimately significant of the alphabetic sound of the former vowel, but the two letters form the legitimate digraphs by which the 29th or 30th, the 31st or 32d elements, are represented.

With regard, likewise, to the particular combination aw, the latter letter is not significant of the first or alphabetic sound of the former, but of its fourth sound, as in law, jack'-dāw.

h, silent after a, implies that it is to have its third sound as in ah, Messiah.

c, after a consonant preceded by a vowel in the same syllable, implies that the previous vowel loses its second, or short sound, and regains its first or alphabetic sound; thus the short or second sound of the vowel-letter in māt, mēt, fīn, hōp, cūb, gives place to the alphabetic sound in māc or play'-māc, in mēt, fīnc, hōpc, and cūbc. This effect is equally legitimate in bāth, tīth, clōth, &c., because th is a digraph, or mark for a single consonant element; but it is not so legitimate in pāst, strāng, &c., though quite as customary.

e, after g and c, implies the soft sound of the consonant-letter; as in age, cringe; acc, mince. And when silent after s and a liquid, it restrains the s from its vocal sound; as in else, tense, course, which are prevented from identifying in sound with ells, tens, and courses. Also, by being added to th, it implies that the sound is to be vocalized; as, by adding e to the noun breath, we get the verb To breathe.

u, after g and c, keeps the g from becoming soft; as in guess, guide, biscuit. In plāgue, vōgue, fūgue, &c., we may remark that each silent letter has a legitimate effect; for the u keeps the g hard, and the e gives the long sound to the previous vowel. But these effects must not always be calculated upon: in a'-gur, for instance, the last three letters form a distinct syllable; and these two letters, namely u and e, both together and separately, are liable to be idle as well as silent: see 189.

Synepy—Rhythm—Modulation.

172. It is not usual, in a pronouncing dictionary, to regard the principles of pronunciation further than as concerned with words uttered separately. But in discourse, words are not used separately; they unite with various degrees of connection in sense; they unite correspondently in manner of delivery; and he who would understand in theory, or acquire practically, the pronunciation of a living language, must not stop short when he knows how each word is sounded in its individual capacity, but inquire what are the things which, beside syllables, reach the ear in a connected succession of words, and how, as to these things, the language under review is distinguished from others. In the first place the Synepi itself—the interjunction of the words—should be attended to. Because words are separated from each other in writing, we are apt to imagine that a correspondent separation, or something akin to such separation, exists in speaking: but this is entirely a mistake:—as a general assertion it may be safely said, there is no greater separation among the words of the same sentence than among the syllables of the same word; so that a sentence properly uttered is, in fact, an unbroken chain of syllables, except where the lungs, subjecting their necessities to the accommodated demands of sense, and pathos, and harmony, require places of momentary rest, and form what are called the clauses of the sentence.

173. Viewing a sentence, then, in this light, namely, as an unbroken chain of syllables, and having already considered syllable one of the three elements alluded to in the Introduction to these Principles, we may now advert, as briefly as the subjects will permit, to the remaining two, namely, Time, or Rhythm, and Tone, or Modulation. In no language can a succession of connected words, (and words consist of syllables,) be naturally and agreeably pronounced if a sense of rhythmical distribution be wanting. In no language can a succession of words intended to convey a meaning be naturally spoken in a tone or tones like those of song—or sung in tones like those of speech. The tones of speech, then, are essentially different from those of song; in fact, they are slides constantly moving from grave to acute, and acute to grave, but never resting for an instant at any part of the musical scale. Such are the tones of speech in all languages now spoken, and such no doubt they have ever been: such, too, is the necessity, which, in all languages, must produce a rhythm. Still we have to inquire, concerning languages in particular, first, how the rhythm in each is obtained; and, secondly, how the notes of the speaking voice are so modulated as to produce, in each language, what is called the native accent.

174. To the former of these questions, it may be answered without hesitation, that the rhythm of all the modern European languages, French excepted, arises out of the fixed and regulated places of accent which are found in every succession of words. Thus in the sentence, "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth," there are certain fixed places of accent, namely, the syllables in italic, and it is out of these the rhythm arises. The ancient classical languages had, like our own, fixed and regulated seats of accent; but they who then spoke those languages, neglecting the rhythm which was obtainable, and which we obtain from accent, obtained a more subtle and a more musical rhythm from another source, namely, from fixed and regulated quantities. Here, in truth, lies the essential difference between Greek and Latin, as they were originally, and as they are now pronounced, not in the nature and primary purpose of accent, which were the same with them as they are with us, but in the percussion of a rhythm independent of the accents. We may pretend as much as we will, in modern times, to read according to quantity; but trained as our ears are, tempered as are our nerves, to the observance of a rhythm arising from a source essentially different, success in such an attempt is next to impossible;—at least, διὰ τὸν βυλλόμενον τὰ ἀπαρτύνει τῶν ἰσχυρῶν διόλκων γὰρ. Demosthenes speaks of ears politically diseased—ours are prosodically so; and no training which comes late in life can cure them. While accents are heard such as customarily give existence to our perceptions of rhythm, we are practically, audibly, inattentive to quantities, let us, theoretically and literally, attend as closely to them as we may. In our language, accordingly, we have no regulated quantities: we have syllables, indeed, of every quantity from very short to very long, but we have no standard quantities to which the ear appeals in every succession of syllables, and out of which the rhythm arises. Our feet are formed of syllables accented and unaccented, the quantities of which are accidental, and make little or no difference, provided the conditions regarding accent are complied with. Hence, what we call Iambic verse in our language, and what we call Anapæstic verse, have a rhythm completely different from that which reached the ear of an ancient Greek or Roman, while listening to verse of those denominations in his own language, and as it was then pronounced. With us, Iambic verse, as its feet are dissyllabic, has the even rhythm marked $\frac{2}{2}$ in music; and Anapæstic verse, as its feet are trisyllabic, has the triple rhythm marked $\frac{3}{2}$; while, to the Greek or Roman, the rhythm of the former was triple, and of the latter even; for the Iamb was a foot of three times, or $\bullet \circ$, and the Anapæst, of four times, or $\bullet \bullet \circ$. Thus different, with respect to the source whence we derive our rhythm, are the languages of modern days—Italian, Romaic, Spanish, English, German, &c., from those of Greece and Rome, as they were anciently spoken. But the French language stands in still stronger contrast: it is not only without any regulated quantities out of which rhythm can arise, but it is also without regulated accents:—to the ear alone, unassisted by the understanding, it is a language of syllables, and hence it is incapable of any but of rhymed verse. Not that it is destitute of rhythm, or of modulated speaking tones, but it is destitute of any regulated seats of accent that force the rhythm now to be of one character, and now of another. Undetermined either by fixed quantities or fixed seats of accent, the rhythm is such as is suggested to the speaker at the moment by the length of clauses or of lines, or the relation of clause to clause, or line to line :¹⁷⁴ in other words, there are no necessary accents, and hence a rhythm, but there is necessarily a rhythm, and hence there are syllables, some under thesis, or pulsation, and some under arsis, or remission. With respect to our own language, (for the better understanding of which, these remarks on others are made,) we find the thesis, or pulsation, (actual or mental,) never taking place but at the syllables previously fixed for accent by the idiom of the language; and further inquiry and examination will show, that the slides of the voice from grave to acute, or acute to grave, are renewed or changed at these syllables, and at these syllables only. Our example may be the one lately quoted—"In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth:" in the idiomatic pronunciation of this, there is a change of slide as well as a rhythmical cadence at the fourth syllable of the sentence; a renewal of the former slide, or a change to the opposite one, accompanied by another cadence, at the eighth syllable; and so to the end. Hence we may suspect the kind of answer which the second of the two questions proposed at the end of Section 172 admits of.

175. That question was, "how the notes of the speaker's voice are so modulated, as to produce, in each language, what is called its native accent?" Now it is evident that the changes of accent may not take place in all languages co-incidentally with the rhythmical cadences, and that, even among languages which agree in this feature generally, there may be great differences as to the manner of uttering the accents, and the choice of one or the other at particular parts of sentences. In the ancient classical languages, if the previous remarks concerning them are correct, the changes of accent were not coincident with the rhythmical cadence; in French they are not; which is the reason that, to a French tongue and ear, the regulated accents of other European languages are so remarkably difficult. Narrowing our view to our own language, it will still be necessary to refer to Greek and Latin, because the great ignorance which prevails on the subjects we are considering has been produced by the circumstance, that almost all previous inquirers have been determined to find, in the living utterance of our English tongue, the same elements in the same form and use which they find described in ancient treatises of rhetoric and pronunciation. Taking for granted that, as the ancients had regulated quantities, we must have them also; that as their verse depended on these quantities, ours must likewise depend on them; they tacitly take likewise for granted as an implied consequence, that accent, with us, fulfils no other purpose than it did with them. But this is quite at variance with fact. Accent, with us, is an almost universal efficient. Not only does it join syllables together, signifying how many belong to one word, (its office anciently as now,) but it joins words together, and signifies their relation to each other in a sentence, and it often gives a meaning to words, and clauses, and whole sentences, which, abstractedly, they do not bear. It is, as already stated, the sole producer of our rhythm both in prose and verse; for though it affects the quantity of syllables by making those longer which are by nature long, (see the vowel scheme,) yet it practically draws off all attention from the quantities to fix it solely on the number of syllables that go to a cadence or a clause, a foot, a hemistich, or a verse. In short, as to its nature and office, it agrees with ancient accent only so far as it is applied to words separately and individually, and then it does agree precisely. Pronounce, for instance, the word unfading: the penultimate is acute in tone compared with the other two syllables, which may therefore by comparison be called grave, and a degree of emphasis accompanying the utterance of the word will give the simple acute a compound character, agreeing with the definition of the ancient circumflex.¹⁷⁵ But all this is true only as regards words separately pronounced: for in English, the moment words are joined into sentences, their accents are liable to change in character, in order to harmonize with, and prepare for, each other; moreover, all monosyllabic words in common use forego their individual accents, and join themselves as enclitics to other words: and not only these, but all words whatever, are liable in the same manner to forego their individual accents, in order that the clause or sentence so pronounced may convey an oblique or extra meaning. Let the words of the following sentence be separately pronounced, and each will have its separate accent, viz., a slide of the voice beginning acute and ending grave; but let them be joined, and their modulation in series will accord with the relation in which they are placed below:

Enter not into your counsel with thy O Fool;
for in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

The places of the rhythmical pulsations are signified by small capitals; and it will be seen that the changes of slide begin at those places: it will also be observed that many of the words have now no accent of their own, but participate in the slide which commences with some previous word; while, of the words which retain an accent of their own, it will be seen that the accent is not always of the same character as of the word separately pronounced; that is, beginning acute and ending grave; but each accent is uttered relatively to others, and this adjusted relation of the accents throughout the clauses constitutes the modulation of the sentence. We have no reason to think the union of words into sentences was accompanied in the ancient classical languages by these effects. Accent, with them, united syllables into words, but not words into sentences. It was an efficient wholly different that, to the ears of the refined native, brought words into union, and gave the series its rhythm: this efficient was the regulated quantities: to these the nerves of the speaker and hearer were tempered by education and habit, and by these were the rhythmical cadences tacitly determined, not by the accents. The effect as to the union of the words was however the same: for the feet which arose from the quantities had no more regard to the words in their separate capacities than feet which arise from accent,—but the cæsura cut off some syllables from one word and some from another, just as the perception of rhythm, arising from the quantities, suggested. Words, therefore, in all probability, retained the accents, when in union, which they had separately, and we know that they seldom dropped their accents: for the number of enclitics, that is, of words privileged to drop their accents, was very limited; proving that the privilege itself scarcely existed. Hence the reason the ancients were so averse to a succession of monosyllabic words; for the repeated similar accents were necessarily tiresome to the ear: but in our language a succession of such words seldom has this effect; for a sentence of monosyllables, having the same rhythm, is also capable of having precisely the same modulation as a sentence composed of long words. The following two sentences, for instance, have exactly the same rhythm and modulation: "Disappointment repeated, destroys expectation." "To be cross'd in our hopes, is a check we are burn to." It is needless to carry these remarks further; nor would so much on subjects rather foreign to the purpose of a pronouncing dictionary have been said, had it not been necessary to prevent a supposition too easily entertained, that to know how every separate word of a language is pronounced, is to know how the language itself is pronounced. It was further necessary to caution the learner, who had reached that first step in the pronunciation of our language, against the false guides he is in danger of meeting with on attempting the second. The assertion is scarcely too harsh, that if almost all which has been written on English accent, emphasis, tone, quantity, rhythm, were cast into the fire, a great service would be done to the learners of our language. Let a learner apply his own ears to catch from English organs the native tones and native rhythm of our language, and he will have every chance of success; a chance he will be almost sure to miss, if he takes any written treatise for his guide. What, for instance, can be better fitted to blind any one to the true nature of English verse, than the Prosodies which pretend to explain it? What have the names of the classical feet to do with metres that depend upon accent? Our verse, in all its varieties, is constructed on principles so simple, that very little needs be said in describing it. To declare that we have verse of such and such a number of syllables to the standard line,—that the rhythm in such line, or in such a clause, is dissyllabic or trisyllabic,—that the rhythmical ictus begins with the first syllable of the line, or clause, or does not begin with it,—that it falls or does not fall on the last syllable,—that lines are allowed within certain limits to deviate from their standard, but that, beyond those limits, what was verse becomes prose,—that the clauses of lines relatively to clauses in their own or in other lines, become harmonious by the proportions they suggest,—is to say almost all that the subject requires.

¹⁷⁴ For light social intercourse, French is an unequalled language; and this is no trivial recommendation; but for any other purpose, it stands by far the lowest of all the languages of Europe. It is unfit for poetry and oratory; and the wonder is, that there are French poets and French orators. I am well aware, that if I had hazarded such an assertion in the presence of my early French master, M. Des Carrières, his hair would have stood on end: I am equally aware of what I may expect from my long-valued friend M. Merlet, the French Professor at the London University—a Parisian, who, to a thorough acquaintance with the refinements of his own language and literature, joins a sound knowledge of ours;—but I brave the consequences.

¹⁷⁵ Greek words accented on the last are called oxytons, and those not so accented are called barytons, by which last word is meant that they had the grave accent on the last, the acute being elsewhere placed. Why, then, it may be asked, was the mark called grave placed

176. As immediately connected with the subjects under review, it is important to state, before they are dismissed, that, in the dictionary, words are marked according to their separate pronunciation, and consequently that all monosyllabic words are exhibited as having accented vowel sounds. But in actual use, a very great proportion of these monosyllabic words are never accented when they enter into sentences, except when some oblique or referential meaning makes them emphatic. The indefinite article which we name a is pronounced ä in actual use and combination: (compare 24:)—that which we pronounce mē as a single word is never so pronounced in sentences except emphatically. (i. e. referentially to you, him, her, &c.) but drops its long quantity so as more properly to be marked mē:—in like manner, your becomes yur; (131;) am, was, had, shall, and, become äm, wöz, häd, shall, änd; (12;) for often becomes fur; (38;) of becomes uv, and from, früm; (18;) my and by generally become mē and bē; (105;) and thy, among people who familiarly use it, frequently becomes thē:—so likewise the definite article, which, when it stands alone, we call thē, shortens and often changes its vowel sound in connection with other words, (except when emphatic,) being pronounced thē when on the accented syllable of an oxyton unless it came last in a sentence? A correspondent in the 11th vol. of Valpy's Classical Journal answers this question ingeniously and satisfactorily. When the marks of accents were first used, words were not separated from each other in writing, and these marks were meant for guides to the reader, that he might, by the proper tones, aggregate the syllables into words. But if oxytons had had their proper mark, when they came elsewhere than at the end of a sentence, they might have been mistaken for barytons, and preparation made for unaccented syllables to follow: hence, they were written with a mark different from the true one at all places except at the conclusion of a sentence.

it comes before a vowel sound, and thd, (see 24,) when it comes before a consonant sound:—so again the pronoun you in the accusative case and not emphatic, changes the full sound of its vowel into a sound near to ê or to the natural vowel. And not only are the vowel sounds liable to be affected when words are pronounced relatively to, or in connection with, other words, but the consonant t or d concluding a word immediately before another word that begins with the sound of y consonant, not under accent, is liable to be sounded ch or j, just as the t in nature and the d in verdure, are liable to be so sounded. See 147.

177. The reference of words to one in a sentence, is frequently productive of another effect, namely, a deviation from the regular or usual seat of accent. Thus we say, "to give and for'-give;" we compare "prob'-ability and plau'-sibility;" we speak of the "devisor' and devisee;" the "appellor' and appellee;" &c.

2. PRINCIPLES OF REMEDY

FOR

DEFECTS OF UTTERANCE.

Vulgar and Rustic, Provincial and Foreign Habits.

178. Before any thing is said respecting the several defects which rank under the foregoing denominations, it may be as well to consider what is that dialect from which they all deviate, and how far it is possible, and worth the while of a sensible person, to surmount his early habits in order to conform to it. The dialect, then, which we have here in view, is not that which belongs exclusively to one place,—not even to London; for the mere cockney, even though tolerably educated, has his peculiarities as well as the mere Scotchman or Irishman:—but the common standard dialect is that in which all marks of a particular place of birth and residence are lost, and nothing appears to indicate any other habits of intercourse than with the well-bred and well-informed, wherever they may be found. Now it may be that a person cannot altogether reach this standard; but if he reach it very nearly, all the object of a complete conformity may be gained. A person needs not blush because he cannot help betraying he is a Scotchman or an Irishman; but it may nevertheless be an object of ambition to prove that his circle of intercourse has extended much beyond his native place. Accordingly, a Scotch or Irish accent is grating on polite ears only in excess, and has nothing disagreeable in it, if individual words are sounded according to common usage, and the broadness of the accent has evidently been reduced by intercourse with varied society. Still greater indulgence is allowed to a foreign accent, though this of course diminishes with known length of abode in the country where the language is spoken. But a rustic or a cockney dialect meets not with the same quarter; and a man displaying either the one or the other, must have a large portion of natural talent or acquired science, who surmounts the prejudice it creates. These remarks may serve as an answer to one part of the question proposed,—namely, how far it is worth a sensible person's while to labour at the improvement of a deficient pronunciation; and with regard to the possibility of success, the person will be able to form his own opinion after he shall have considered the strength and inveteracy of his present habits, and the degree in which they stand opposed to the principles and practice exhibited in the foregoing pages. Whatever may be the nature of his deficiency,—cockney, rustic, Irish, Scotch, or foreign,—his first step should be the mastery of the key sounds in the schemes, under the guidance of some one that pronounces them quite correctly. Then, and not till then, he will be able to read the treatise and use the dictionary, with every chance of ultimate success. A few hints previously to entering on the course proposed, may render it more effectual to each class of persons just alluded to. We may begin by

179. HINTS TO COCKNEY SPEAKERS The diffusion of literature among even the lowest classes of the metropolis, renders it almost unnecessary to speak now of such extreme vulgarisms as the substitution of v for w, or w for v. Few persons under forty years of age, with such a predilection for literary nicety as will lead them to these pages, can be in much danger of saying, that they like "Weal and winegar wery well;" or that they are going to "Vest Vickham in a po shay;" and with regard to men who, in spite of their intelligence and information, retain the habits of a more distant generation of cocknies, it is doubtful whether, at their age, a reformation could be promised without an expense of time and labour they would be unwilling to bestow. They may be referred to the organic formation of the sounds where the deficiencies lie,—to the exercise of the organs in lists of words selected for the purpose.—and to the dictionary for the proper utterance of every individual word on which a doubt can occur:—but whether, after these directions, they can find patience to put them in practice, is a consideration for themselves alone. Passing, therefore, to cocknies of a later generation, it may be remarked, that they require, in general, to be cautioned against affected niceties quite as much as against unconscious negligencies. We shall often hear a sedulous cockney say wöld, cöold, and shöold, (would, could, should,) while he sinks, habitually and unwarily, the terminational vowel in chicken and Latin, novel and parcel. Correcting these, he carries his correctness so far as to make the vowel distinct in swivel and heaven, evil and devil. The effort might pass however, and possibly be lauded, if he were consistently exact; but it becomes ridiculous when in contrast with such negligencies as arithmetick and charecter, wri-tin and read-in, spile and sile, (spoil and soil,) Toosday, doo-ty, perput-rute, affin-ut-y, providence, and ed-e-cation. Then, again, what apparent perverseness in sinking the guttural sound of r in board, firm, cord, &c., and adding it to law, ame, &c.; in sinking the h in hand, heart, &c., and sounding it in honour, honest, &c. It is evident, then, that the cockney speaker has to learn at least consistency in his pronunciation. If he seek extraordinary accuracy, let him learn the principles on which accuracy depends; and if he desire to be accurate no further than to pass in good society without invidious notice, let him learn the limits between polite and extreme exactitude.—We proceed next, to

180. HINTS FOR LONDONIZING A RUSTIC UTTERANCE. Although a rustic pronunciation differs much in one county and in another, yet in all of them the vowels are apt to be broader than the standard dialect permits,—that is to say, they are uttered with a wider aperture of the mouth; and to this broader sound is generally added a drawl, which, occurring on sounds that should be essentially short, changes their character in this respect also. The specific sounds of the several vowels must, therefore, be diligently and practically studied in the scheme, before an attempt at improvement is made by the use of the Principles foregoing, or the subsequent dictionary; and the most watchful attention should gather into classes, words that contain the same vowel sound under different vowel characters, or different circumstances. For instance: “I have won unc game, and you have won none; you have not won once, and that is wonderful.” Here the words and syllables which have the vowel ū under the letter o, should be collected and practised. The classes of words in which a vowel-letter has some incidental sound not extending beyond the class, should also be collected: for example, the words in which letter u is sounded ö, instead of ū; (see 117:;) in order that, when the Yorkshireman, for instance, is no longer guilty of saying dööl for düll, he may not carry the change so far as to say büll, &c., for bööl. Exceptions will indeed require more attention than the general rules:—avänge, hinge, spünger, &c., might, for instance, lead a west countryman to think he is right in saying stränge and dän-ger; but he must learn the rule which excepts these. (111.) Nor, while attending to vowel-sounds, must the consonants be neglected. Welshmen make the hard or breath consonants soft, and the soft, hard; Somersetshiremen sound z for s; the Northumbrians trill the r against the soft palate instead of the upper gum, and so pronounce it with a burr; while the Lancastrians make a compound of the simple articulation ng, and, instead of king, long, &c., say king-g, long-g, &c. (Compare 138.)—Our next duty is to give

181. HINTS FOR SOFTENING AN HIBERNIAN BROGUE. The first point our western friend must attend to for this purpose, is, to avoid hurling out his words with a superfluous quantity of breath. It is not broadher and loudher that he must say; but the d, and every other consonant in the language, must be neatly delivered by the tongue, with as little riot, clattering, or breathing as possible. Next let him drop the roughness or rolling of letter r in all places but the beginning of syllables: he must not say stor-rum and far-rum, but let the word be heard in one smooth syllable. The numerous interchanges he will have to make among the vowels it will be impossible to particularize.—such, for instance, as will convert plaze into please, greet into great, plinty into plenty, ful into foot; they are merely hinted at here to awaken his observation; and it is unnecessary to tell him he may find an abundance of similar hints, combined with infinite humour, in many a tale written by countrymen and countrywomen; which he is advised to study in connection with these remarks, if for nothing else, as a relief to their dryness.—One more observation may be added:—in modulating his sentences, the Irishman does not make that equal use of the two accents of the speaking voice which characterizes the common standard dialect, but his accents are almost all in one direction, viz., from acute to grave. Thus warned, his ear, on the watch to catch the difference, may enable him to change his habit. Turning to the north, we are next to furnish

182. HINTS FOR REDUCING BROAD SCOTCH. An Irishman, it has just been observed, uses the closing accent of the voice too much: a Scotchman has the contrary habit, and is continually drawing his tones from grave to acute with an effect, which, to southern ears, is suspensive in character. The smooth guttural r is as little heard in Scotland as in Ireland, the trilled r taking its place; and the substitution of the former for the latter at the places indicated by the vowel scheme, must therefore be an object of sedulous practice. The peculiar sound of u, which in the north so often borders on the French u, must be compared with the several sounds of the letter as heard in the south; and the long quantity which a Scotchman is apt to give the vowels

that ought to be essentially short, must be clipped by the instantaneous junction of the consonant, in order that āw may become ō, or ā; ā may become ō; ē may be shut up into i; ō alter its length and quality into ō; and oo be curtailed into oo. On the other hand, equal care will be necessary to keep the vowels which ought to be long completely so: lāt must not be shortened almost into lēt, nor lēan into līn; neither cōal into cōl, nor foōd into foōd. The composition of the long i, which in Scotland is sounded āi, must also be attended to. In short, all the key sounds must first be completely mastered, and the preceding pages consulted respecting the application of them in detail.—The remarks under these several heads have anticipated almost all that can be offered in the shape of

183. HINTS TO FOREIGNERS. A parallel of sounds will be found in almost every foreign-anglo grammar, and needs not, therefore, be furnished here: but it may be useful to warn the learner of our language, never to depend on any parallel further than for an approximation of sounds. Let a vowel in our language be pronounced by a correct English mouth, and compared with one in his own language, as pronounced by himself, and, however his grammar may tell him they are identical, he will be almost sure to find, with sharp ears and awakened attention, a difference of sound and effect well worth remembering. And not only are almost all the vowels, and some of the consonants, foreign to foreign organs, but the accent or modulation of the language is new and strange, particularly to a Frenchman. The reading of verse after a well-taught native is the best way to give a practical feeling of the nature and application of this last element.

Defects of Articulation.

184. All impediments of speech, as they are called, proceed from the constant, or the inconstant inability of the organs to complete certain articulations. The former kind may be considered under the head now proposed: the latter defect will be considered separately. The actions of the organs of speech, which, accompanied by breath or voice, constitute the articulations, are as determinate, and fitted to be as much under the control of the will, as the actions of our arms, hands, fingers, legs, or feet; and it needs not be pointed out, that whenever we would bring any of these members to perform unaccustomed actions, we first make ourselves accurately acquainted with the manner of action, and then, by frequent and incessant repetition, render the action, or series of actions, a habit. In this way we learn steps in dancing, and fingering in music. The members may be perhaps by nature ill adapted for the actions; in which case, though the difficulty of gaining the habit may be great, yet it may not be insurmountable. Even if some of the members usually employed are wanting, the case is not always hopeless: if a man has lost his right hand, we can teach him to write with his left. The organs of speech are not excepted from the force of these general remarks. He who has impediments to correct must first ascertain what articulations he is unable to form, and why he is unable:—in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the cause will not be found to lie in any natural indisposition or inaptitude of the organs, but in the accidental acquirement of a wrong habit for the right one. Thus a habit of touching the teeth instead of the gum in pronouncing s, is the fault called lisping. Nosology, indeed, has taken this and the other defects under its cognizance, and given them high-sounding Græco-latin names; but they are diseases caught from example, and are hardly ever constitutional. The lisp, accompanied by a general want of energy in the action of the tongue, lips, teeth, &c., constitutes the psellismus emolliens. If the fault attaches chiefly to the r, either by the omission of its sound altogether or the substitution of a weaker sound like l, it is called psellismus fallens. The well-known Newcastle burr, (compare 73,) is dignified by the title psellismus ringens. The divided palate is fairly claimed by nosology, under the name of psellismus lagsotomatum; a defect of conformation which renders the speaker incapable without mechanical aid of rendering k, g, and ng articulate. The tongue is frequently accused (often groundlessly) of being too big or too little, and certain it is that it sometimes borrows too much assistance from the lips, while its own action is sluggish and unwieldy. This is called psellismus balbutiens. The lips are sometimes defective, so as to pronounce p, b, and m, imperfectly. This is called psellismus achelus. There appears to be no distinct name for the stoppage of the nasal organ, which converts ng, m, and n into g, b, and d; and indeed a surgeon's assistance is less frequently wanted in the case than a pocket-handkerchief. In short, it is evident that, in far the greater part of these cases, the patient may work his own cure, by learning what he has to do, by trying to do it at first considerably and slowly, and afterwards, by degrees, rapidly. Even when some part of the necessary organs is wanting, a little trial may enable him to do that with another part which cannot be done with the part missing. If, while placing his tongue in the usual place to sound s, he cannot help lisping because he has lost a tooth, either let him get a tooth supplied by a dentist, or try whether, by putting the tongue higher in the mouth, a hiss without a lisp is not possible. If, because the palate and uvula are divided, the sounds of k, g, and ng lose all their distinctness by escaping at the nose, let him try whether, by something to pinch the nose,—spectacles, for instance,—he cannot make them plainer. This, it is true, will be mending one defect by incurring another: but at least it offers a choice of evils, and, of the two, the obstructed nasal tone is of less moment than an entire inability to render words intelligible which contain the palatal consonants.

Psellismus hœsitans, or Stammering.

185. In a work like this, a few hints may be given to stammerers, if for no other purpose, to guard them against delusion in seeking for a cure.—Stammering, when not of the slight kind which is caught from example merely, and fostered by negligence, has its origin in extreme excitability of nerve, and consequent liability to sudden trepidation; a species of constitution which renders the stammerer a striking mark for quackery. For, (excepting cases where the faulty action of the muscles has been confirmed by inveterate habit,) the stammerer does not always stammer, but pronounces smoothly enough while under no apprehension, anxiety, or uneasiness. Therefore, whatever he is told will give him the power to speak without difficulty, if at the same time he is persuaded to have entire confidence in it, will, while his confidence lasts, have the effect. The misfortune will be, that if his confidence have no rational foundation, but rest on blind belief alone, it will be liable to waver; and every consequent failure will lessen its power, till the spell is quite broken. Instead, therefore, of any mysterious means by which stammering is often said to be cured, it will be better to adopt a plan that shall give the speaker a rational confidence in his own powers; as an introduction to which, three things are here proposed: 1. To explain the nature of the process in which he fails;—2. Why he more than others is liable to fail in it;—3. What kind of exercise must by its nature tend to reduce that liability. First, then, for the nature of the process in which he fails. The smooth utterance of a sentence in discourse, is a series of consensaneous actions of the will and of the muscles alternately, each action being both an effect and a cause—the effect of what went before, the cause of what follows: and these actions operate in this way on each other, not because they are originally connected, except as regards the operation of the will on the muscles, but because long practice has established the connection. The dexterity acquired in every art, equally comes under this description. The musical practitioner, for instance, has no sooner sounded the first note of a tune, than that note, through the connection which practice has established, is the cause of the second, by suggesting primarily the next note to the mind, and thus secondarily inducing a will to move muscles which produce the second; and so on through the tune. Before the connection here described is established, every act of the will springs from antecedents of a much more remote and unready kind, and the performance is therefore very slow and laborious. We have now in view a series of actions merely imitative. But the case is not different when the composition of the series is original. For an original work, in whatever department of art, is original only as a whole: there is no order or law of connection among the component parts with which the composer, be he orator, poet, painter, or musician, is not completely familiar; and it is because he is familiar, practically familiar with the laws of composition appertaining to his art, that he is able to let his fancy range in bringing well known elements together under new general forms. To apply this general doctrine to the process under consideration:—He who speaks smoothly is enabled to proceed from sound to sound uninterruptedly through his sentences, because, the moment his muscles have completed one action, they operate on the will toward the production of the next; that next being one that has so often followed the previous one as to have established the certainty of the effect, all other circumstances being equal. But if some emotion should arise, the mental impetus being drawn off from what it was about to produce, may leave the series of articulations incomplete; or should a diverse purpose affect the will just strong enough to put in motion a new set of muscles, but not decided enough to have previously stopped the series of actions in progress, the effect will be spasm, or an action of the muscles independently of the will: and in this manner are the most fluent occasionally liable to hesitate, and the most confident to stammer. But, secondly, why should the stammerer be more liable to these effects than another? Evidently, because his constitution disposes him more than another to the causes:—he is peculiarly liable to sudden emotion, and to momentary vacillation of purpose. But this is not all:—the connection between the muscular action, and the will which is to produce the next action, is weaker in him than in another, because he has frequently failed in it; nay, if he fails very frequently, there will, at last, be no connection at all, but, on the contrary, there will be a connection between the muscular action, and the spasm that has so often followed it, the spasm, in this manner, from having at first been accidental only, becoming a part of the series. Now, in laying down, thirdly, a plan of discipline for the cure of a stammerer, it will be going too far to promise that he shall not be liable to stammer from such feelings or such mental causes as make others stammer; and moral exertion, aided, if necessary, by means to strengthen the constitution, must be called in to reduce the frequency of the natural occasions. But the habit which their frequency has generated, and which exists independently of their occurrence, this may be removed;—a complete control may be regained by the will over those muscles originally subjected to its power;—and a connection may be established between muscular actions, and the will to produce following actions, such as shall never fail while the mind retains its tranquillity and its purpose. The most effectual way of breaking the old habit will be, to cease utterance altogether, except for the express purpose or trying to utter well. And let a beginning be made with the separate elements of articulation, in order that the manner of forming each may be completely understood. Utter the vowels which are essentially long,—ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, with a full, firm, decided tone. The stammerer will find he has complete control over these, either to continue or discontinue them. Let him, moreover, observe, how nature teaches him to regulate his breathing in uttering these sounds; that his lungs are well replenished with air when he commences a sound with the intention of prolonging it,—that this air is the material out of which he creates the sound;—and that he draws in a fresh supply to begin a new protracted sound. To this lesson let him be attentive in every part of his subsequent exercises, and periodically supply himself with breath, as now for the separate sounds, so hereafter for series of sounds, at easy clausular intervals.¹⁸⁵ After the vowels essentially long, the consonants must be formed according to the description of each, with a distinct consciousness of the organic action in each instance. He must satisfy himself that his tongue, lips, teeth, gums, palate, &c., are, by nature, as much under his own control, as, at other times, his hands and fingers; and with this conviction let him practise, not the names of the consonants, but the motions of the organs of speech required by each consonant, accompanied by an utterance of breath or of voice, as the nature of each may require. Let him touch the organs with his fingers, or look at their motion in a glass, if such methods assist him; and, in short, omit nothing which may render him theoretically as well as practically familiar with the process of articulation: for on such knowledge is to be built that rational confidence in his powers, which is to be mainly instrumental to his cure.—Familiar with the independent vowels, and knowing the nature of the consonants separately from their names, and from their junction with vowels of any sort,—the process of joining these elements together is to be the next subject of conscious exertion. Let him begin with the vowels followed by the consonants;—this connection is seldom accompanied by failure;—let the connection of every vowel with every consonant be tried again and again, (h, w, and y, be it remembered, are not consonants under the circumstance proposed,) till the manner of connection is quite familiar, both theoretically and practically. The non-independent vowels, i. e. those essentially short, may next be tried each with every consonant. (still remembering that h, w, and y are consonants only at the beginning of syllables; and that r must now be excluded, because it never makes a previous vowel essentially short, unless it is also articulated on a following syllable.) The next connection to be regarded will be that of consonants with vowels following them. Here, between some of the sounds intended to be joined, his habitual spasm either always or frequently occurs. This is what he has to remove, and in its place to fix the contrary habit; and he will succeed in proportion to the patience and perseverance he employs. First, the spasm must be prevented by the most watchful control of the muscles, and by contrivances of the following kind:—suppose the connection desired is between k and a, as in the first syllable of capable; but that while the back of the tongue touches the soft palate, a spasm occurs, and the a cannot instantly be joined;—let another trial be made, but previously to the k, join the simple aspirate to the a, that is, pronounce the syllable ha: repeat this syllable frequently, and while repeating, bring the proper part of the tongue nearer and nearer to the soft palate, till at last it touches it. In this manner, while the purpose was that of saying ha, the effect will be to have said ka, and by this kind of cheat on himself, he will have escaped the spasm. Let him repeat the experiment till he has transferred to the will what was at first accomplished without the will. Not even then is his purpose gained; but long laborious repetition must make the effort of the will an effect of what precedes it, in place of the spasm which has hitherto been the effect. And what is to be achieved as to the connection between k and a, which is supposed for the sake of example, must be achieved wherever spasm habitually or frequently occurs. From the junction of sounds into syllables, he must proceed to that of syllables into words, and of words into clauses. In this stage of his progress, let him avail himself to the utmost of the principle of rhythm. Wherever two or more syllables are joined together in harmonious pronunciation, a sense of pulsation and remission accompanies their progress, (173,) and to the improvement of this sense the stammerer should be diligently attentive. Let him keep time to his accents, and regulate his pauses, drawing in supplies of breath at places not irregularly distant, and he will march through sentences securely. Some formality of manner may accompany the effect; but this will hardly be regretted, if smoothness and continuity should be a part of what is gained ¹⁸⁵ A surgeon, some little time ago, published a treatise to establish that stammering arises from attempting to speak while the lungs are in a state of collapse. I do not believe that a stammerer, in this respect, differs from other people; and it is plain, I think, that, under ordinary circumstances, we never exhaust the lungs so completely of air as to be unable, from that cause, to begin speaking at any moment. But I believe that the moment any one attempts to speak, he puts in action certain muscles near the region of the lungs by which to restrain the issue of the breath, so that only just so much shall escape as is necessary to speech, which, by the bye, is much less in quantity than is commonly thought. Now, a stammerer, in the flutter of his spirits, is apt to overdo this matter, and to make the embargo complete instead of partial. Hence, his immediate organs of articulation are often at work with convulsive action when there is no material ready for them on which to operate. And hence also, because he cannot get the material by expiration, we often find him endeavouring to vocalise an inspiration.

3. PRINCIPLES OF ORTHOGRAPHY

186. It is not intended under this head to lay down any principles of orthography at variance with present usage, nor, in the dictionary, will any attempt be made to establish unusual modes of spelling, however recommended by reason or propriety, (one or two instances hereafter noticed scarcely amount to exceptions,) but the written English language, as the oral, will be represented in its actual state with as much fidelity as possible. By the schemes, the principles following them, and the manner of indicating the pronunciation of words in the dictionary, it is however expected that much light will be thrown on the inconsistencies of our spelling, so as to show the direction that any changes, if any are made, ought to take. For this end, the present dictionary differs purposely from others, which, in spelling words according to their sounds, disregard the ordinary laws of spelling in order to give to every single sound its single character or indication. Such was the plan proposed by Sheridan in his dictionary, though it was very imperfectly fulfilled; such too was Walker's plan, though still further from being realized; it is, in fact, a plan that cannot be realized entirely, unless characters are invented for certain simple elements, e.g. for ng, th, sh, and zh, which, being invented, would not be understood. In the present dictionary, the plan thus imperfectly acted upon by others is altogether given up, and instead of it, those modes of indicating the pronunciation of words are adopted, which are consonant to the ordinary or most general laws of spelling, a word being considered irregular when its sounds appear under other modes of representation than those exhibited in the schemes. To explain this part of the general design more fully, and supply what may appear defective in the execution of it, is the object of what follows under the present head.

187. Words spelled and pronounced in correspondence with the schemes, are, of course, deemed quite regular in their orthography, and such, if leading words, are accordingly followed by the same or by an equivalent spelling, the mark (=) standing between:—if they are not leading words, they will be found free from italic letters, except in unaccented syllables, where the vowel often appears in italic to signify the corruption it is liable to receive from not being pronounced with the distinctness of an accented vowel. But,

188. The foregoing are not the only words that must be considered regular in their spelling. For reasons of mere convenience, those spelled with x and with qu are excluded from the schemes; and such words appear therefore in the dictionary as being irregular in spelling. Yet when x is pronounced as in mix (micks) and qu as in quake, (kwäke) the spelling must be understood as perfectly conformable to the general laws of the language; and indeed, with regard to the latter instance, the combination of letters, kw, is, as a combination, altogether alien to an English eye, the combined sounds included in it being legitimately represented only by qu. On the other hand, when x is pronounced as in Xenophon, (Zénophon,) and qu as in opaque, (opake,) the letters as compared with the sounds they here receive, are properly deemed irregular.

189. Letter e when idle as well as silent has been considered an irregularity in the principles preceding. Some exceptions, however, must be made. It seems to be a principle, or at least a universal practice in our language, not merely that i, but that u and v (originally the same) shall never finish a word. Accordingly we write a-gue, virtue, sa'vee, starve, &c.; and though the e is quite useless, yet even in an unfamiliar word, every English eye would require its presence in the like situations. So again, the e appears quite useless in browe, lapse, glimpse, &c.; yet if taken away, the words would have the semblance of nouns plural, and on this account, if on no other, the presence of the e may be justified and the words deemed regular in spelling. It is with some repugnance that even letter o is allowed to finish a word: we write foe, doe, toe, &c., and though Johnson writes uo, it is almost as frequently written with an e in the singular, and always in the plural, as are likewise cargo, echo, hero, negro, manifesto, potato, volcano. This is in fact necessary in the plural in order to make the spelling of the last syllable regular, which syllable is clearly irregular in folios, nuncios, &c. The words pedagogue, exergue, grotesque, and others like them, as no ue appears for the mute ue with which they terminate, can be sheltered from the charge of very irregular orthography only by classing them with the foregoing examples. Of grotesque it may indeed be said that the q cannot dispense with the u, and the u cannot dispense with the e; but the true English mode of spelling would be grotesk.

190. With regard to deviations from the general laws of spelling that have the sanction of particular rules, it is difficult to say, of many examples, which are, and which are not, the words irregularly spelled or sounded. Are bath and path, (bäh, päth,) ball and fall, (bäul, fäul,) most, (möast,) pull, (pöü.) move, (mööve,) bull, (bööl,) &c., regular? or must we not rather allow the claim of regularity to häh, shäh, fröst, döll, gröve, and düll? It may certainly be contended that the former words do not violate the genius of our language in their spelling and sound, but that they are at variance with its most general laws is plain, and in that predicament the plan of the dictionary considers them. On the same principle the first syllable of i-dea and the last of multi-ple are deemed regular, while the first of i-magine: é-magine) and the last of am-ple: ä-ple) are deemed irregular, although it is true that this so called irregular sound of i or y is the sound it usually takes in unaccented syllables.

191. We come next to notice some inconsistencies in the spelling of certain classes of words in our language, which might undoubtedly have been corrected in this dictionary, as they have partially been in others, if the purpose of the work had been to correct, and not to exhibit, the actual orthography of the language. In correspondence with Johnson's practice, supported by that of his last editor, Todd, all the words originally terminating in or and derived from the Latin through the French language, might have been spelled consistently with honour, favour, &c.; but where, except in dictionaries, do we now find error and superior? Or Webster's example with regard to the whole class might have been followed, and the termination in or adopted consistently throughout. Such, however, is not the practice of the day, although some years ago there was a great tendency towards it. The following, indeed, are still inclined to the Latin termination, and some of them so decidedly, that to write them with our would incur the opinion of great singularity, if not of fault: error, emperor, governor, warrior, superior, horror, tremor, dolor, tumor, tenor, clangor, fulgor, savor. Humor in the medical sense is inclined to the Latin form; in its more frequent senses, it continues the termination usual with our old writers. Splendor appears even in Bailey's dictionary in the Latin form, and it is difficult to conceive on what ground modern writers should prefer the other form. Making these exceptions, and adding all such Latin words in or as are scarcely yet naturalized, Johnson's orthography of the words in question will be followed.

192. The same inconsistency, arising from the same cause, attaches to words that in the original Latin commenced with the preposition in. Those among them that have been derived by us through the French language, very commonly, but not always, appear with the French form of that prefix, namely en; but nothing can be more wavering than the practice of writers on this point, and dictionaries increase the uncertainty by giving, in many instances, both forms. In this dictionary one or the other form will always be decidedly adopted; so that the inspector who does not find a word of this class under one head, must seek for it under the other. It may be further mentioned that words in ent are also liable in many instances to fluctuate between that, the Latin form, and the French form in ant. If there is any kind of a principle to determine a doubt in this case, it is this, that the latter form should be used for the adjective and the abstract substantive derived from it, as dependent, dependence, and the French form for the common substantive noun, as a dependant; but the principle is not consistently acted upon.

193. Much uncertainty also prevails with respect to words of more than one syllable that formerly terminated in ick; the practice of the present day being to drop the superfluous k, not on that account solely, but because the majority of the words are related to corresponding forms in Greek or Latin, which afford no example for doubling the consonant. Johnson indeed, and his editor Todd, spell all these words in the old English fashion; but who now writes music or politics? Some have proposed that the change in question should extend only to words of classical, and not to those of Saxon parentage; and inasmuch as the majority of these last are monosyllables, the distinction is partially observed: yet bishoprick and bailiwick often appear without the k. Further, it is to be observed that the final k must be restored in certain derivative forms; for though we write to frolic and to traffic without the k, we cannot dispense with it in frolicking, trafficking, and trafficker. It is remarkable that Webster, who carries the omission of the final k so far as to drop it in bishoprick, restores it in such instances as frolic and traffic, as if the practice of doubling the last consonant (hard c and k are the same) on adding a syllable to a word, were a novelty in our language not to be tolerated in the present case.

194. Of the inconsistencies in our spelling, this very practice of doubling the final consonant on adding a syllable, gives birth to not a few. In most cases, the reason for or against it is plain enough. Thus in adding ed, er, &c., to mat, fit, best, the t must be doubled, lest we should pronounce ma'-ted, fi'-ter, be'st'-led; but it is not doubled in bail-ed, ben'efit-ed, &c., because if we pronounce bai'-ted, ben'efit'-ted, (ben'efit'-ted) we shall not be far from the true sound, or prevent the meaning from being plain. It is obvious, therefore, that the double p in worshipped, worshipper, &c., the second l in travelling, traveller, &c., are quite unnecessary on any other score than to satisfy the prejudices of the eye; and on this ground alone is the usual spelling retained in the following dictionary. See in the Dict. under Participle.

195. In many cases besides the foregoing, the propriety of dropping one of a double consonant is attended with like doubt, and consequent inconsistency of practice. Every body drops an l in fall and full when compounded as in to befall, and in careful:—are we then to make this practice universal, as we seem inclined to do in foretel, bethral, enrol, &c.? or are these to be considered exceptions, and the general practice to be, the retention of both consonants, as in snowball, handmill, dunghill, &c.? Unfortunately these questions admit not of any satisfactory answer. It is certain that on the first compounding of words, the practice is, to retain the orthography of the primitives; but it is equally certain that these compounds are inclined to drop their superfluous letters after having been long established as distinct words of the language: (compare Prin. 136.) Hence Johnson thought himself justified in spelling with a single final consonant such words as downfal, waterfal, dunghil, &c., though he left other words, as recall, molehill, &c., in full possession of all their original letters. In subsequent editions his editors, as to many of the former instances, have restored the original spelling, and the public have generally acquiesced in the change. Yet the original tendency still remains, and many words have yielded to it irreclaimably. With this tendency and its permanent effects on the one side, and the counteracting labours of hosts of verbal critics on the other, entire consistency of practice on this point is hopeless.

196. Such are some of the inconsistencies of our orthography. To these almost every dictionary opposes its schemes of partial improvement; but as no one editor chooses to follow the track of another, the attempts only render the actual practice still more uncertain. Webster, who, to establish his own plans of improvement, sets authority and custom at defiance, might reasonably have been expected to follow Todd's slight infringement of actual practice in the spelling of judgment, abridgment, and acknowledgment, to which Todd restores the omitted e, in order that they may not exhibit the otherwise unexampled irregularity of g soft before a consonant; and this innovation was the more excusable, inasmuch as the word lodgement appears in all the editions of Johnson with the e, though the other words are without it:—but the American lexicographer, instead of taking up and sanctioning this slight deviation from the practice of the day, chooses, in this instance, to run with the current. If the same course were pursued in this dictionary with regard to the words in question, it would but be in unison with its declared plan; but for the sake of experiment, the more correct, however less usual spelling, is for once adopted, (namely judgement, abridgement, acknowledgement;) in order to show that the public (who will doubtless continue to reject the hint) never take their fashion of spelling from a dictionary, but expect that a dictionary shall take its fashion of spelling from them.

4. PRINCIPLES OF ETYMOLOGY.

197. Etymology is a distribution of words according to their themes or roots, which themes are either the primary forms that branch out into the various inflections required in speech; or they are the primary meanings which the words bore in another or the same language, before they had migrated into a different dialect, or into new shades of meaning. In the former view, etymology belongs to grammar; in the latter, it is generally reckoned among the higher branches of philology. With regard to etymology in both these senses, all that is proposed at present is to account, under the former view, for some few deviations in this dictionary from the usual manner of distinguishing or specifying words, and to show the nature and method of the common inflections, which, because they are common, are not inserted in the dictionary:—and, under the latter view, to state how far the plan of the dictionary is consistent with any inquiries into the origin of words, in order that no more may be expected in this particular than its design can comprehend.

198. Nothing can be more unphilosophical than the attempt made by some writers, Harris, for instance, to explain the nature of the parts of speech by a reference to the nature of our thoughts. A thought is indivisible, but a sentence is made up of parts, which parts are therefore inexplicable by the nature of the thought expressed. It is possible to conceive a language with only two sorts of words; nay, in a state perfectly untaught, man has only his natural cries, the cry, like the thought or the feeling it is meant to signify, being in such case indivisible. Of artificial speech, the noun and the verb are the only essential parts; and the difference between these is merely conventional, a sign agreed upon for the distinction being annexed in some way to one of them. The noun signifies something known, or felt, or thought of, but it has not the power to signify it as a sentence; the verb has this power, because it has the sign by which it is agreed that this power shall be understood: thus, To hope is a verb because the prefix to implies its power to signify a sentence; hope is a noun, because it has no such sign: can is a verb, because the sense it bears as a verb is never expressed by a correspondent noun in the same manner that the sense of to hope is expressed by the noun hope. The differences among the other parts of speech are properly resolvable only in the same manner: small is an adjective, because it is never used but with a substantive: good, abstractedly, is not an adjective, but an adjective and a substantive, being sometimes used as the one, and sometimes as the other. The ordinary practice in dictionaries, is to exhibit two words in such cases, e. g. good, an adj. and good a subs.; a practice arising out of an erroneous notion of the real differences of the parts of speech. A brick which is fitted to be used indifferently, either at the corner or in the front of a rising edifice, should surely not be specified in the catalogue as a brick of two sorts, while it awaits the builder's hand to be turned to one purpose or the other: it is only when there is one form of brick for the corner position, and one for the front, that the things are in their nature different. So again, a verb which is sometimes active, and sometimes neuter, is not a distinct word in the two cases, if its meaning remains the same in both, with no other difference than more or less abstraction: since, if a difference like this is allowed to make two distinct words out of one, then all the different shades of meaning to which every word is liable, will, in every case, multiply it into so many distinct words. Indeed, it will sometimes happen that a secondary departs so widely from the primary meaning of a word, as to render it advisable to consider the two meanings as two words: for instance, court, a yard, or paved enclosure, and court, in the sense of solicitation, address. For, suppose it possible to trace the latter meaning up to the former, yet the two extremes of meaning are so different as to render the connection a matter of curiosity rather than of utility. On this principle, although a verb active and a verb neuter of the same form will not in general be exhibited as distinct words, yet when, as with the verb to become, the active sense is wholly different from the neuter, they will be exhibited as distinct words, however related by etymological ties. With still stronger reason will words be kept distinct which differ both in meaning and in etymology, and which would never have been confounded but from an accidental identity of form. With what propriety, for instance, can the pope's bull, and bull, the animal, be mingled as diverse meanings of the same word, when, on every ground that can be taken, they are evidently different words? And yet the same dictionaries that so carefully separate one and the same verb into two words, because it is capable of an active and a passive use, are continually mingling, after this fashion, words that never were related, and which have nothing in common but the accident of being written in the same way.

199. The orthography, etymology, syntax, and prosody of a language, being duly treated, form a grammar of that language. Without the formal undertaking of an English grammar, the first and last of these parts, orthography and prosody, have been considered in the previous pages as far as practical benefit seems attainable. As to the third, syntax, this, in our language, is so simple, that any development of its principles would but be the statement of such as belong to universal grammar; of which it would be quite out of place here to treat. It remains, then, in order to complete the practical objects of an English grammar, only to refer to the various changes or inflections of words which belong to etymology in the grammatical application of the term.

THE ARTICLE a often takes the form an: see the rule for this in the dictionary under AN.

SUBSTANTIVES form their plural by adding s to the singular; as book, books: but when s would be incapable of distinct pronunciation, es, making another syllable, are added to form the plural; as church, church-es; lash, lash-es; fox, fox-es; his, his-es,—such syllable being pronounced iz: (151:) and nouns that end in y not preceded by a vowel, form their plural by changing y into ies; as fly, flies; fun-cy, (fān'-cēy,) fan-cies, (fān'-cīz; 120.) All other modes of forming the plural are accounted irregular, that is to say, are unusual; which irregular modes are noted at the respective words in the dictionary.

THE GENITIVE, or as otherwise called, POSSESSIVE case of substantives, is signified in English by 's, which is pronounced precisely like the plural s; as man, man's; men, men's; and like es when it occurs, as in Church's, fox's. But when harshness would follow the retention and pronunciation of the genitive s, it is usual to place only the apostrophe: thus, the plural genitive boys's is shortened into boys', churches's into churches', and even the genitive singular conscience's into conscience'.

ADJECTIVES being monosyllables, or dissyllables if accented on the last syllable, or accented on the first if the last syllable should end in y or le, form their comparative and superlative by r or er, st or est, the final y of those which so terminate being changed into i; as white, whiter, whitest; fair, fairer, fairest; polite, politer, politest; happy, happier, happiest; able, abler, ablest. Some monosyllabic adjectives have not a comparative and superlative of their own, but borrow those of some other word whose positive is obsolete; as bad, which takes worse and worst for its degrees of comparison. In general, those adjectives which form their degrees irregularly are noted at their places in the dictionary.

PRONOUNS not being liable to regular modes of inflection, have their respective inflections indicated in the dictionary.

VERBS form their second person singular of the present indicative by the addition of st or est to the first person; as I love, thou lovest; I read, thou readest; and their third person singular by the addition of s or es, or changing y into ies, precisely as nouns form their plural; as he loves, he reads, he fishes, he differs, he suffers, (sū'l'fīz;—) the other form of the third person, namely, in th, may be considered obsolete: and as to the remaining persons of the present tense, they have no variation from the first person singular:—of the past tense, the second person singular is formed by adding st or est to the first person; as I loved, thou lovedst; I felt, thou fellest; the other persons have no variation. In the subjunctive mood, the present tense (so called) has no variation throughout its persons, and the past tense (so called) is the same in form and variation as the past of the indicative; except the verb To be. Verbs which depart from these general rules are noted with their peculiar inflections in the dictionary: and, under the word SUBJUNCTIVE, a rule will be found for the use of this mood; as, under the word SHALL, some hints are furnished for the proper interchange of this word and WILL.

THE PARTICIPLES of verbs are formed, the one by adding ing, the other d or ed in the infinitive; as forming and formed from To form. The omission of final e, as in loving, is no irregularity; nor must the doubling of a final consonant be accounted one, as in fitting, fitted, from To fit; except in such instances as travelling, travelled, from To travel; wrapping, worshipped, from To worship; see 194. The last are, however, irregularities of orthography rather than of etymology; and, being confined to a few words, chiefly those in e, will not be noticed in the dictionary. The PRESENT, or PAST tense, is formed precisely as the past or passive participle; and verbs are accordingly deemed regular when this tense and the corresponding participle are formed by d or ed; as To love, I loved, Loved; To form, I formed, Formed. Irregular verbs, or those which deviate from these examples, are noted with their peculiar inflections in the dictionary.

Certain ADVERBS are liable to degrees of comparison under circumstances already noted in speaking of adjectives.

PREPOSITIONS, CONJUNCTIONS, INTERJECTIONS, are indeclinable.

200. The etymology of the English language, using the term in its higher application, can enter into the composition of a strictly English dictionary only to a certain degree; and the plan of the present dictionary having the limitation just noticed, the roots of words which have no existence in English are excluded from its pages. As far, however, as words can be traced to their originals, without the express quotation of words which are not English,²⁰⁰ so far will their etymologies be attempted to be shown. For this end, words will generally be classed so as to exhibit their affinities; the primary or original meaning of words will often be alluded to, though without example in English use; and words and meanings once existing, will be traced downwards, as far as necessary brevity may permit, to the present state of the language. Common prefixes, which enter into the meaning of multitudes of words, sometimes with diverse effect, will be carefully explained, and their various effect discriminated. The knowledge of these will often be a key by which to approach the original meaning of many words hitherto locked up from the mere English scholar. But common terminations, properly examined, promise to be still more useful in this way; and as these could not be introduced into the dictionary, it is proposed to conclude this development of "Principles," with the following Index, fitted, by the useful preliminary information it supplies, to come before the larger work.*

indeed, the first part of it (one-thirtieth of the whole) was not published,—till more than half of mine was written, and a great part of it printed; or if, as I understand to be the case, a part of Mr. Richardson's dictionary had been long before the public in the pages of the Encyclopædia Metropolitana, yet I knew not of its existence, nor have I yet seen it there. It may be necessary to add that these "Principles" have been printed subsequently to a great part of the dictionary which follows them.

While I am on the subject of contemporary dictionaries, I may be excused for adverting to a statement I have seen in some prospectus, that, when Mr. Sheridan published his pronouncing dictionary, the booksellers were so jealous of its success, that they employed Walker to write his, expressly to start it in the market against Sheridan's. I have nothing to do with the truth or falsehood of this charge against booksellers long since deceased; but lest a similar motive should be alleged against my employers, I hereby declare, that when they proposed this work to me, there was no new dictionary, either in publication or in promise, which they could have a notion of opposing; and my answer to their proposal, accompanying a plan of the present dictionary, was dated as far back as Feb. 17, 1832: since which time I have been more or less actively employed in getting together the materials, or in arranging them.

²⁰⁰ I would not for a moment be understood to depreciate this part of lexicography, or deny its indispensable presence in an English dictionary, not meant, as this is, for common, general use. A dictionary having the objects of the present one, is necessarily limited in space and bulk, and two things are excluded from it which, in a dictionary of higher pretensions, are of primary concern: the one of these is alluded to above; the other is equally important, but impossible in a dictionary of moderate size,—quotations or authors to illustrate and justify the definitions. In precisely those particulars in which this dictionary is deficient, that of Mr. Charles Richardson, publishing at the same time with it, is remarkably copious. Of a work thus standing on other and higher ground, all rivalry on my part is of course out of the question; and I may be believed when I say, I cordially rejoice in the benefit our literature is likely to derive from a dictionary which, by its plan and extent, appears likely to leave all its predecessors far behind. One feature of the plan appears to agree with that which I have conceived and pursued,—I mean the classing of words which are of the same family. I know not how far the plans are coincident in this respect; but the similarity, whatever it may be, I solemnly declare to be quite accidental; I never saw Mr. Richardson's work,—

* A Supplement now added to the following Index will, it is presumed, give a further claim to the etymological pretensions of the whole work.

AN INDEX OF THE MORE IMPORTANT COMMON TERMINATIONS.*

* For the preparation of this Index, I am indebted chiefly to my son LEOPOLD, my coadjutor through the whole work.

Words ending in a, are, with few exceptions, nouns substantive adopted from Greek, Latin, Italian &c.; as comma, idea, era, sofa: or the plural number of nouns terminating in um or us in the singular; as errata, genera, which are the plurals of erratum and genus. As a distinction from the names of the metals in um, (see -um), some chemists adopt a for the characteristic termination of the names of the earths and alkalies: thus instead of barytes, strontites, alumine, potass, &c., they say baryta, strontia, alumina, potassa; and, correspondently, silica, glucina, soda, ammonia, &c. But other names of earths, as lime, zircon, &c., have not yet been assimilated to these; nor are all chemists agreed in the assimilation of the rest.

-ac, -acy,

see -ic, and -cy.

-act,

are relations of actus, the participle of the Latin verb ago, to act, to perform; as to react, to transact, exact, (adj.)

-ad, }
id, }

are frequently titles of heroic or mock heroic poems; shortened from, or on the

* See a Supplement immediately following.

d

Words ending in

- pattern of, words shortened from Greek genitives; as Iliad, Eneid, Baviad:—sometimes they are names of number; as myriad, chiliad; sometimes, names of spaces of time; as hebdomad, olympiad.
- ade, are very often nouns borrowed or imitated from the continental languages; as barricade, escalade, colonnade, gasconade, masquerade.
- ado, are chiefly adopted Italian words, as barricado, bravado, which frequently drop into the French form exemplified above.
- a, are Latin nouns plural often without a singular, which singular would terminate in a; as exuviae, acidulae, striae; or they are Latin nouns in the genitive case, that is, including the force of the preposition of; as aqua vitae, literally, the water of life.
- age, are chiefly nouns of English formation, having a collective or abstract meaning; as herbage, pillage, vassalage, brokerage, wharfage: they sometimes signify money paid for something: e. g. for brokerage or wharfage: but this is generally a secondary, not the primary meaning. Note, that from among words of this termination, those in -gage, and also those in -alla-ge, must be distinguished: see -gage, and -alla-ge.
- agogue, are nouns signifying he or that which leads, drives, or brings something, being related to the Greek ἀγωγός, (agogs.) a leader; as demagogue, physmagogue, synagogue.
- al, are very frequently adjectives shortened from Latin words in alis; as regal, legal, frugal, martial: those in -cal, however, are more frequently derived from Latin words in cus than calis; (see -cal.) Sometimes they are words which originally terminated in all; as to inthral, to miscal, and which retain in pronunciation the broad sound of the a.
- algy, are nouns related to the Greek word ἄλγος, (algos.) pain; as cardialgy, cephalalgy
- ality, see -lity, and -ity.
- allage, are nouns compounded with the Greek word ἀλλαγή, (al'-la-ge.) change or transposition; as enallage, (e not mute,) hypallage.
- alty, are sometimes abstract names of offices, formed by the addition of alty to the common name; as from mayor, mayoralty.
- ana, are arbitrary compounds with authors' names; as Walpoliana, Johnsoniana, which mean, sayings, anecdotes, and other things of or relating to Walpole, &c.
- any, are often abstract nouns; as chapellany, castellany, villany, botany.
- ance, } are most frequently abstract nouns from Latin words in -antia and -entia; as
- ence, } elegance, abstinence; or that follow the pattern of nouns so derived; as disturbance, dependence. Those in -ance often come to us through the French language.
- ane, are chiefly adjectives derived from Latin adjectives in anus or anis; as prosaue, insane.
- anthropy, are nouns compounded with the Greek word ἄνθρωπος, (anthropos.) man; as misanthropy, philanthropy.
- ant, are generally adjectives from Latin participial adjectives in ans; as cornucant, vagrant.
- ar, } are frequently adjectives shortened from Latin adjectives in aris; as familiar,
- ary, } auxiliar, perpendicular, military. Words of the latter termination are commonly from Latin adjectives in arius, as mercenary; which are very often substantives as well as adjectives.
- arch, } are nouns compounded with or allied to the Greek word ἀρχή, (ar'-che.) supreme-
- archy, } macy, government; as monarchy, a monarch, a tetrarch.
- ard, are frequently nouns of common English formation, designating persons from their character, quality, or condition; as niggard, dotard, wizard.
- arithm, are modern compounds with the Greek noun ἀριθμός, (arithmos.) number; as logarithm. Algorithm or algorithm is, however, originally Arabic, and assimilated probably through ignorance.
- asm, are always nouns substantive. and are generally contracted from Greek nouns in asma, (asma); as miasm, plonasm, phantasm. Some of these have their Greek plural; as miasmata. See -sm.
- aster, are nouns of diminution or depreciation, as poetaster; often formed spontaneously in imitation of the Italian idiom; as grammaticaster, latinilaster, &c.
- ate, in chemistry, are names of salts containing more than one degree of oxygen, as sulphate, phosphate; those which contain but one degree having names terminating in -ite, as sulphite, phosphite. In common language, they are very frequently verbs; as to initiate, to deliberate, to confederate; or adjectives agreeing with these, as initiate, &c., which sort of adjectives are now often replaced by the participial forms, as initiated, conferred, sometimes even where there is no verb to warrant the participial form: thus, situated has almost universally but improperly taken place of situate. In many instances, they are names of an office or dignity; as electorate, palatinate, pontificate.
- bark are allied to the French word barque, a vessel; as to embark, to disembark.

Words ending in

- base, are allied to the Latin word basis, the lowest part or foundation; as to abase, to debase.
- bate. are sometimes relations of the French verb battre, to beat; as to abate, to debate; the sense is generally figurative.
- bel, are related, sometimes through the French, to the Latin verb bello, to make war; as to debel, to rebel; a rebel.
- bility, see lower, next to -ble.
- bious, are adjectives signifying manner of living, allied to the Greek word βίος, (bios), life; as amphibious.
- bite, are, in some few instances, also relations of the Greek word βίος; as the noun-substantive a cenobite; but more frequently they are English compounds; as to backbite, are very frequently adopted from the French, whether substantives or adjectives; as trouble, capable, sensible: many, however, are direct from Latin words in abilis and ibilis, as mutable, flexible.
- ble, are substantives allied to corresponding adjectives of the previous class, either from Latin substantives in bilis, as ability, nobility; or formed in English from the adjective without authority from Latin; as flexibility, irascibility.
- bly. are generally adverbs from adjectives in -ble; as ably, flexibly.
- bolous, }
-boly, } are allied, those of the former termination as adjectives, those of the latter as substantives, to the Greek word βόλος, (bolos), a cast or throw; as amphibolous, amphiboly.
- borough, }
-burgh, }
-bury, } are names of towns or boroughs, the three terminations having the same meaning; as Queenborough, Edinburgh, Newbury. Burgh originally meant a tower.
- bourn, }
-born, }
-burn, } are names of places situate on a brook; as Eastbourn, Holborn, Tyburn.
- bote, are old English words denoting supply or material yielded for the needful repairs of something, or other use; as hedge-bote, plough-bote.
- bre, see -re.
- burse, are allied to the French word bourse, a purse; as to disburse, to reimburse.
- by, when names of places, are compounds with the Saxon word by, a village or street; as Grimsbury, Weatherby.
- cal, are adjectives formed on the pattern of other adjectives in -al, from Latin adjectives in -us; as magical, comical; or they follow the patterns of such English adjectives, as angelical, alphabetical: and note, that most of these adjectives are liable to be contracted; as magic, comic, angelic, alphabetical: see -ic.
- caster, }
-cester, }
-chester, } are names of places compounded with the Saxon word caster or chester, a city; as Doncaster, Cirencester, Manchester.
- cease, }
-ceed, }
-cede, }
-cess, } are relations of the Latin verb cedo, to yield, to go, or depart; of its kindred verb cesso, to leave off, give up, or cease; and of the noun derived from the latter, cessio, a going forth, a yielding or giving up; as to decess, to proceed, to exceed; to accede, to intercede; a recess, a process; a procession, an intercession.
- cession, }
-ceive, }
-cept, } are words allied to the Latin word capio either in its literal sense, to take, or its consequential sense, to take into the mind; those in -ceive come to us through the French: as to receive, to perceive, to deceive, (i. e. to catch up, to entrap;) to intercept; reception, perception, deception; recipient.
- cipient, }
-cele, } are nouns related to the Greek noun κύλην, (ke-le or ce-le), a tumor; as hydrocele, bronchocoele: in which, and in other compounds of this word, the final e is mute when they are pronounced as English words, contrary to the usual practice with words adopted from Greek or Latin: see Prin. 101.
- cern, are relations of the Latin verb cerno, to sift, separate, or distinguish; as to discern, to discern.
- chord, are names of musical instruments, as pentachord, harpsichord: see -cord.
- chronous, }
-chronism, } are relations of the Greek χρόνος, (chronos), time; as synchronous, (adj.), anachronism, (sub.)
- chymy, }
-chymist, } are related to the Greek word χύμα, (chyma), that which is poured out, from χύνω, (chyō), to pour out liquids; as alchemy, alchemist. The modern orthography, chemist, rejects this derivation, and assumes the word to be originally Arabic.
- cide, are words related either to cadō, or to cædō, Latin verbs quite distinct from each other, the former signifying to fall, the latter, to cut or slay. Thus from the former we have stilticide, a falling of drops, to coincide, to fall in with, &c., and from the latter, lapidicide, a stone cutter, homicide, a man slayer, &c.
- cident, are nouns substantive or adjective related to the former of the two Latin verbs mentioned above, generally in its figurative sense of to befall or happen; as incident, coincident, accident, occident, &c.

Words ending in cision,

are nouns related to the latter of the two Latin verbs mentioned under -cide; as excision, incision, decision, (i. e. a cutting short,) precision, (i. e. a paring or cutting close or exactly.) Adjectives in -cise are relations of the same word, as precise, concise.

-cinct, are relations of cinctus, the participle of the Latin verb cingo, to gird up, and hence to shorten, and to surround; as succinct, (adj.) precinct, (subs.)

-cite,

are relations of Latin verbs compounded with cito, to call by name, to stir up, to produce as a witness; as accite, incite, recite.

-claim,

are relations of the Latin verb clamo, to cry or call upon, to obtest: they are generally derived from the French; as to proclaim, to exclaim, to disclaim, to reclaim: it is only in old authors that any of these are substantives; as an acclaim.

-cle,

are mostly substantives from Latin words in culum through the French, or from words formed in French on the pattern of such substantives; as receptacle, spectacle, circle, obstacle, vehicle: they are frequently diminutives; as cornicle, funicle, ventricle, pinnacle.

-cline, are relations of the Latin verb clino, to bend, to lean in some direction; as to incline, to recline, to decline.

-close, } are relations of the Latin verbs claudo or cludo, to shut or enclose, those in -close coming to us through the French; as to unclose, to disclose; to exclude, to preclude;

-cluse, }

occlude, recluse.

-coct,

are relations of coctus, the participle of the Latin verb coquo, to cook, to prepare by heat; as to decoct, to concoct.

-comb, are frequently names of places situate between hills, as Encomb, Wycomb; and hence honey-comb, as having hollows or cells. But many of these are compounds of comb, the instrument for dividing hair, or of a crest resembling this instrument; as a currycomb, a cock's comb.

-cope,

are compounds of the Greek noun κοπή, (co-pe,) a cut or cutting off; as synco-pe, apoco-pe.

-cord, are words related originally to chorda, a Greco-Latin word signifying a musical string; as accord, discord. But some of these are said to have their origin from cor, the heart; as concord, record.

-corn,

if not English compounds, as breadcorn, peppercorn, are related to the Latin noun cornu, a horn; as unicorn, capricorn.

-cosm, are relations of the Greek noun κόσμος, (cosmos,) the world; as microcosm.

-course,

-see cur.

-cracy,

are abstract nouns signifying government, related to the Greek word κρατία, (crateo,) to rule; as theocracy, democracy; hence the adjectives democratical or democratic, &c.

-cre, see -re.

-crease,

are verbs from the Latin verb creasco, to grow, derived through the French; as to increase, to decrease.

-crete, are adjectives from the Latin cretus, the participle of creasco; (see above;) as concrete, growing with; discrete, growing or being apart or distinct.

-cumb,

are relations of the Latin verb cumbo, to lie down, to sink, to yield; as to accumb, to succumb.

-cur,

are relations of the Latin verb curro, to run, the sense being generally figurative; as to occur, to concur, to recur; those in ent are nouns adj. or subs., as current, occurrent; those in course are generally substantives, derived through the French;

-course, }

as intercourse, concourse, discourse.

-cuss, are relations of quassus, written cussus in compounds, the participle of the Latin verb quatio, to shake; as to percuss, to excuss, to discuss.

-cy,

are almost always substantives, many of them formed by changing tia or cia of a Latin word into -cy; as abbacy, fallacy; or by the addition of -cy after the omission of t or te in an English noun substantive or adjective, which gives in general the correspondent abstract noun; as from the nouns and adjectives primale, supreme, infant, cognat, we form primacy, supremacy, infancy, and cognacy.

-dam,

are substantives related to the French word dame, a lady, or mother; as bedlam, grandam.

-dean, }

are names of places compounded with the Saxon word dean or den, a valley or hollow; as Rottingdean, Camden.

-deem,

are compounds of the English verb to deem, as addeem, misdeem; except redeem, which is from the Latin verb redimo.

-demic, are adjectives related to the Greek word δήμος, (demos,) a people or community; as epidemic, endemic. Academic is from a proper name.

-dense,

are relations of dense, thick, from the Latin adjective densus; as to condense.

-dict, are relations of dictus, the participle of the Latin verb dico, to say; as to predict, to interdict; an edict.

- Words ending in
- dom, are English nouns of Saxon parentage signifying power or dominion; as earldom, birthdom. We must except seldom and random.
 - don, see -ton.
 - dote, } are relations of the Greek word δοτον, (doton,) something given; as antidote
 - dotal, } (subs.) antidotal, (adj.)
 - dox, } are relations of the Greek word δοξα, (doxa,) opinion; as orthodox, (adj.)
 - doxy, } orthodoxy, (subs.)
 - duce, } are relations of the Latin verb duco, to lead; as to abduce, to reduce, to conduce;
 - duct, } to deduct, to conduct; hence, deduction, introduction.
 - e, not mute, are adopted classical words; as hyperbo-le, simi-le: with but very few exceptions, such as extem-pore, puis-ne, &c., they are purely Greek.
 - ean, are mostly adjectives from Greek adjectives, or formed on the pattern of such adjectives, in αἰος or αιος, (aios, eios,) whose Latin form is æus or ëus. We take the last of these forms, and change us into an; as Atlantëan, Europëan. Such of these as come to us from the Latin language, without reference to a Greek original, have the penultimate short; as Cerü'lean, Hercu'lean: see Prin. 86. Should a word of this description be used substantively for the name of a place, the Greek or the Latin neuter form of the termination, namely αἰον, æum, or ëum, is used: thus, Athenaion, Athenæum, or Athene'um.
 - ecian, see -ocese.
 - ed, are regular past or passive participles of verbs, as loved, declared, instructed; or adjectives, as wicked, naked.
 - ee, are correlatives of nouns in -or, used chiefly in law; as appellee, assigner, morigagee. Some are of more general use and signification, as jubilee, pedigree, which do not, as the others, accent the last syllable.
 - eer, see -ier.
 - em, are frequently formed from classical words in -ema, as problem, theorem.
 - en, are very frequently active verbs formed from adjectives and substantives by the addition of en; as to deaden, to madden, to lengthen, to weaken: or they are participles passive of verbs which refuse the regular form in ed; as trodden, beaten, driven, frozen: or they are adjectives formed from substantives to express the material of which a thing is made; as leadén, woodén, beecheén, hempén.
 - ence, see -ance.
 - ene, are adjectives from Latin adjectives in enus; as serene, terrene.
 - ennial, are adjectives of time related to the Latin word annus, a year; as perennial.
 - ent, are frequently adjectives from Latin participial adjectives in ens, (the participle, in some of the instances, of esse, to be,) as present, absent; fervent.
 - er, are sometimes adjectives in the comparative degree; as greater, longer: much more frequently, they are substantives formed from verbs, and signifying the doer of the action included in the meaning of the verb; as, from to do, to live, to love, to have, we get the nouns, a doer, a liver, a lover, a haver: some of these indifferently denote a person or a thing; as a ruler, a poker, a waiter. When formed from nouns, the added termination is sometimes ster instead of er; as a webster, (a weaver,) a roadster. In many instances, and often without much or any reason for the difference, the termination or is preferred to the common English termination in er; as instructor, collector; which is an imitation of the Latin idiom, and indispensable in the adoption of an express Latin word; as professor, oppressor. So instructor, in the Latin sense of one who makes something ready, is properly spelled with or. Hence the Latin model is often preferred to indicate a specific application of the general term: e. g. a sailer is he or that which sails, but a sailor is a seaman; a director is one who directs generally, but a director is a manager of a trading company.
 - ea pronounced in a distinct syllable, if not English plurals, as faces, boxes, churches, are classical nouns, either of the singular number, as arist'es, car'ries; or only used in the plural, as ma'nes, anti'podes; or the plurals of nouns terminating in is in the singular, as hypoth'es, em'phases; or being both singular and plural, as ape'cies, be'ries. The old adverb cer'-tes, which our ancestors borrowed from the French, does not class with these words.
 - ess, are often nouns feminine, distinguished by this termination from correspondent nouns masculine; as shepherdess, giantess, negress, lioness. In some instances the feminine termination, though used, is not indispensable; as authoress.
 - est, are frequently adjectives in the superlative degree; as greatest, longest.
 - et, is often a diminutive, as coronet, floweret, baronet: see also -let and -ret.
 - ey, if names of places, are generally compounds of the Saxon word ey or ig, an isle; as Ramsey, Thorney.
 - face, are related, along with the English word face, to the Latin facies of the same meaning; as preface, a surface; to deface, to efface.
 - faction, see -fect, &c., lower.

Words ending in

- fare, are Saxon words which include the notion of a going or passage, or that which goes; as thoroughfare, welfare, fieldfare.
- fect, } are relations of the Latin verb facio, to make or do; as to effect, to affect; an effect, a prefect; to profit; a benefit; efficient; an edifice, an office. Words ending
- fit, } in section or faction are also relations of these; and also those ending in scut, as
- ficient, } counterfeit; but these come to us through the French faire.
- fice, } are relations of the Latin verb fero, to strike, the meaning being very often
- fend, } figurative; as to offend, to defend, (i. e. to strike or ward off;) an offence, a defence.
- fence, } are relations of the Latin verb fero, to bear or carry; as to transfer, to confer,
- fer, } to profess, to dis-fer; pestiferous, somniferous.
- ferous, } see -find.
- fid, } are relations of the Latin verb fido, to trust; as to confide, to diffide; confident,
- fide, } diffident.
- fident, } are relations of the Latin verb findo, to cleave or divide, whose preterit is fidi;
- find, } as to diffind; bifid, (adj.)
- fid, } are relations either of the Latin word finis, a limit; as a confine; to define; or
- fine, } of the French word fin, the opposite to coarse; as to refine; superfine.
- firm, } are relations of the Latin verb firmo, to strengthen; as to confirm, to affirm; infirm.
- flect, } are relations of the Latin verb flecto, to bend; as to inflect, to reflect. The - fleet, } derivatives of these, in ion, may be spelled either flexion or flection.
- flict, } when names of places, are compounds of the Saxon word flect or feol, an inlet
- flict, } for water; as Wainfleet, Northfleet.
- flict, } are relations of flictus, the participle of the Latin verb fligo, to beat or dash; as
- fluent, } a conflict; to inflict, to afflict.
- flux, } are relations of the Latin verb fluo, to flow; as influent, affluent; influx, con-
- fold, } flux. Those in fluus, as mellifluus, are also relations.
- fold, } are compounds of the Saxon word fold, a doubling; they are frequently adverbs;
- fold, } as twofold, manifold, &c. Sometimes the affix has a more literal meaning; as
- folious, } to infold; blindfold. The word scaffold is no relation of these.
- folk, } are relations of the Latin verb folia, a leaf; as centifolious, asperifolious.
- ford, } are English compounds; as gentlefolk, kinsfolk.
- ford, } when names of places, are compounds of the Saxon word ford, a place where a - form, } stream may be waded; as Oxford, Chelmsford.
- form, } are Latin or English compounds of form or fornia; as uniform, ensiform; to
- fort, } transform, to conform, to inform.
- fringe, } are relations of the Latin word fortis, strong; as effort, comfuri
- fract, } are relations of the Latin verb frango, to break, which in compounds is fringo,
- front, } and whose participle is fractus; as to infringe; to infract, to refract.
- fuge, } are related to the Latin word frons, the forehead or front; as to confront, to affront.
- fugal, } are relations of the Latin verb fugio, to fly from, to put to flight; as refuge, sub-
- ful, } terfuge, vermifuge, centrifugal.
- ful, } are adjectives implying plenitude, generally formed from substantives by adding
- fuse, } the termination; as peaceful, slothful, artful.
- fusive, } are relations of fuus, the participle of the Latin verb fundo, to pour out; as to
- found, } effuse, to infuse; infusive, effusive; to confuse. To confound is related to these,
- fy, } but comes to us through the French.
- fy, } when the y is pronounced long, are relations of the Latin verb fit, to become,
- fy, } to make; as to deify, to satisfy, to liquefy.
- gage, } are generally relations of the French verb gager, to take or give a pledge; as
- gamy, } to engage, to mortgage.
- gamist, } are relations of the Greek verb γαμία, (gameo,) to marry; as bigamy, polygamy;
- geum, } a bigamist.
- gee, } are relations of the Greek noun γῆ, (gē,) the earth; as perigeeum, perigee:-
- generate, } the Greek form, perigaeon, sometimes occurs.
- gen, } are relations of the Greek verb γίνομαι, (ginomai,) to beget, or of its kindred
- geny, } noun, γίος (in Latin genus) and γενῆ, (go-ne,) an offspring, race, birth, or produc-
- gony, } tion; as to regenerate, degenerate, (adj.); oxygen, hydrogen; progeny, homogeneity;
- gerent, } cosmogony, theogony.
- gest, } are relations of the Latin verb gero, which in the preterit sense is gessi, and
- gest, } signifies to bear, carry, conduct, or carry on; as belligerent, (adj.); to egest, to
- ght, } ingest, to suggest, (in which the sense is figurative,) to digest.
- glyph, } are frequently nouns substantive of abstract meaning, having verbs or concrete
- glyph, } nouns in correlation to them; thus flight, in relation to fly; light, in relation to
- glyph, } lie; and night, in relation to see.
- gm, } are relations of the Greek verb γλύφω, (glypho,) to hollow out, carve, or engrave;
- gm, } as an anaglyph, a hieroglyph.
- gm, } are abbreviations from Greek nouns in agma, egma, &c, as diaphragm, phlegm,
- gm, } paradigm. In these abbreviations g is silent: see 157.

Words ending in

- gnostic, } are relations of γνωστικός and γνῶμη, (gnosticos and gnome,) which come from the
- gnomy, } Greek verb γινώσκω, (ginosco,) to know; as diagnostic, prognostic; physiognomy.
- gogue, } see -agogue.
- gon, } are relations of the Greek noun γωνία, (gonia,) an angle; as a pentagon, an
- gonal, } octagon, a polygon; diagonal, octagonal.
- gony, } see -generate.
- grade, } are relations of the Latin verb gradior, which in the participle is gressus, to go,
- gress, } to march along; as to retrograde; retrograde (adj.); egress, regress, progress.
- graphy, } are relations of the Greek verb γράφω, (grapho,) to write, and its kindred noun
- gram, } γράμμα, (gramma,) something written; as biography, historiography; epigram, anagram.
- grave, } are compounds of a Teutonic word signifying a count; as landgrave, margrave.
- gre, } see -re.
- habit, } are relations of the Latin verb habito, to dwell; as to inhabit.
- ham, } are names of places, signifying a house, home, or village; as Petersham, Tottenham.
- hedron, } are names of mathematical figures, related to the Greek noun ἡδρα, (hedra,) a helion, } seat, base, or side; as polyhedron, chithedron.
- are astronomical terms, related to the Greek noun ἥλιος, (helios,) the sun; as parhelion, ophelion.
- herd, } are English compounds; as brarherd, shepherd.
- here, } are relations of the Latin verb hæreo, to stick to; as to adhere, to cohere; ad-
- hesion, } hesion.
- hold, } are English compounds; as to withhold, to uphold; a freehold, a household: in to behold the sense is figurative, implying to hold or reach with the eye.
- hood, } are nouns of Saxon parentage signifying a state or condition in the abstract; as boyhood, neighbourhood, widowhood, knighthood. Hence, derivatively, the persons existing in some state; as the priesthood, the sisterhood.
- hurst, } are Saxon names of places originally implying a wood or grove; as Penshurst, Chislehurst.
- i, } are generally classical plurals, of which the singulars (should there be any) terminate in us, er, or ir; as literati, triumviri; or they are Italian plurals from nouns in o or e, as banditti, conversazioni. In a few instances they are nouns singular imported from the East; as cadi, musli.
- ian, } are frequently nouns, substantive or adjective, denoting office, profession, or character; as magician, historian, guardian, ruffian; elysian, tertian.
- ical, } are nouns adjective or substantive allied to correspondent nouns in ias, or icus, in
- ic, } Greek or Latin, or formed on the pattern of such nouns; as polemical, heroical, classical; polemic, heroic, classic; polemics, optics, mathematics. These in ics are
- ics, } nouns plural, applied respectively to an art or science, under the plural notion of things exercised, pursued, ascertained, or known by the methods peculiar to the art or science. In chemistry, the termination ic has a special and characteristic import; it occurs only in adjectives by which the different acids are discriminated;
as nitric acid, sulphuric acid: these are distinguished from adjectives in ous, (as, nitrous acid, sulphurous acid), by signifying the larger dose of oxygen which the former compounds contain, as compared with the latter compounds.
- id, } are mostly nouns adjective from correspondent Latin adjectives in idus; as sordid, turgid, liquid. See -ad.
- ide, } in chemistry, are names of compounds possessing no sensible properties of acids, and which are supporters of combustion; being distinguished, in this latter respect, from compound combustible substances whose names terminate in ret; (see -ret;) as oxide, chloride, iodide. The original spelling of the first of these was properly oxyd or oxyde. But, since the discovery of other supporters of combustion than oxygen alone, it properly conforms to the common termination.
- ier, } accented, or originally accented on the last syllable, are nouns common, generally
- eer, } denoting men from their occupations or employment, and borrowed from French or Italian words in ier, iere, aire, &c., as financier, grenadier, cavalier, gondolier; mountaineer, volunteer, musqueteer, muleteer; or they are words formed on the pattern of such nouns; as pamphleteer, auctioneer, garreteer. Some of the nouns, originally accented on the last syllable, have assumed a pronunciation more consonant to the genius of our language; as courier, premier.
- ile, } the accent not being on the last syllable, are almost always adjectives from correspondent Latin adjectives in ilis; as agile, gracile, fragile; gen'île, d'île.
- im, } in one or two instances, are Hebrew plurals; as cherubim, seraphim, also written cherubin and seraphin.
- ine, } are sometimes adjectives from correspondent Latin adjectives in inus; as se'line, fem'inine. In her'vine, the termination is characteristic of gender, like ess and ir; but there is no other word to class with it. Marine, routine, machine, &c., are adoptions from the French, and have the accent on the last syllable, with the French sound of i: see Prin. 104. The names of the elementary chemical bodies, chlorine and iodine, originally ranking with these, have thrown their accents back to the penultimate and antepenultimate, according to the natural tendencies of our language; and the termination might be considered characteristic of elementary bodies which are acidifying supporters of combustion, if the name of the remaining body of this kind, viz., oxygen, had not previously taken its place, as to the form of its name, with hydrogen and nitrogen. Chlorine and iodine are their proper pronunciation,—as agreeing in some degree with their original sounds,—as being quite suitable to our own idiom, (Prin. 105.)—and as furnishing the clearest audible difference from ide, the characteristic termination in chloride and iodide.

Words ending in

-ing, are, for the most part, present participles, or words originally of that class and used substantively or adjectively; as being, writing, loving, wedding. In names of places, the termination ing signifies a meadow or pasture; as Knottling, Climping: but words terminating in ing must generally be distinguished: see -ling.
-is, are frequently Greek or Latin nouns; as crisis, emphasis, cathechesis. These form their plural in es.

-ise, }
-ize, } are very frequently verbs, those in -ize almost without exception, as to advertise, to civilize. They often correspond to Greek verbs in ίζω, (izo), as to characterize: but verbs are formed in English almost spontaneously on the same model.

-ish, are adjectives formed for the most part spontaneously by the addition of the termination to other adjectives, or to substantives, by which a diminished force is given to the former, and an adjective import to the latter; as from black, blackish; from sweet, sweetish;—also from a wag, waggish; from a fool, foolish. The termination is likewise a characteristic of adjectives denoting nation or country; as Irish, English, Danish, &c.

-ism, are abstract substantives frequently formed spontaneously on the model of those in asm, &c., (see -sm.) as Judaism, heathenism, whiggism; sometimes they are names indicating an idiom in speech; as a Gallicism, a Scotticism.

-ist, are frequently nouns designating men from their occupations, pursuits, or principles; as a deist, a theorist, a chemist.

-ite, in chemistry, are names of salts containing only one degree of oxygen, as sulphite, phosphite: (compare -ate.) Much more frequently they are names of minerals; as selenite, nephite, steatite; but particularly those in ite: (see -lite.) In language on ordinary subjects, they are often names formed spontaneously in imitation of the Gentile and other collective names in scripture; as a bellamite, a Jacobite, a Pharise. Otherwise, they are nouns adjective or substantive, formed from correspondent Latin nouns in itus; as appetite, exquisite.

-ity, with the accent on the previous syllable, are nouns substantive, commonly formed from Latin nouns in itas; as ability, serenity, atrocity, fluidity, calamity.

-ix are often nouns feminine distinguished by this termination from correspondent nouns masculine; as administratrix, testatrix.

-jacent, }
-ject, } are relations of the Latin verb jaceo, to cast; whose participle is jactus, written jectus in compounds; as adjacent, circumjacent; (adjectives;) abject, object.

-join, }
-joint, } are relations of the Latin verb jungo, to join, through the French joindre; as to adjoin, to disjoin; disjoint, conjoint.

-journ, are related to the French noun journée, a day; as to adjourn, (to put off the day or time,) to sojourn, (to stay during the day, or days.)

-jure, are relations of the Latin verb juro, to swear; as to adjure, to perjure.

-kin, are frequently nouns diminutive; as manikin, lambkin.

-kind, are English compounds, as mankind, womankind, in which the affix has the sense of genus; and unkind, in which it has the sense of loving or complacent.

-land, are English compounds; as headland, woodland, except garland, and perhaps a few others.

-lany, see -any.

-lapse, are relations of lapus, the participle of the Latin verb labor, to slide or fall down; as, to ilapse, to collapse.

-lar, are generally adjectives from correspondent Latin adjectives in arius or aris, or formed on the pattern of such adjectives; as titular, auxiliar, popular. Similar comes to us through the French.

-lateral, are adjectives implying side or sided, from the Latin adjective lateralis; as equilateral, quadrilateral, collateral; in which last word the sense is figurative.

-latry, }
-later, } are, in several instances, nouns related to the Greek word λατρεία, (latreia), service or worship; as idolatry, demonolatry; idolater.

Words ending in

- lay are often English compounds, with the verb to lay, as to mislay, to overlay; or relations of the old French word lai, a complaint, a poem; as roundelay. In names of places this termination signifies a meadow or field: see -ley.
- lease, are relations of the French verb laisser, to leave, in its senses to let have, to let free; as to release.
- lect, } are relations in some instances of one, in some instances of another of three -lection, } Latin verbs, which, from their similarity of form, are often confounded in the -league, } compounds; viz. lêgo, (often spelled figo in compounds,) to gather, or to read.
-legation, } figo, to bind; and lêgo, to send: as to collect, a collection; to select, select,
-lege, } a selection; a colleague; (this comes to us through the French;) an ablegation; a
-ligation, } college; an obligation.
-lepsy, } are nouns related to the Greek verb λέψμαι, (lepsomai,) to take or seize; as
-lemma, } metalepsis, prolepsis; epilepsy; analemma. The word ellipsis is no relation of -less, } these, but is from the Greek verb λείπω, (leipo,) to leave or relinquish.
-let, } are Saxon adjectives having a privative meaning, or adjectives formed spon-
-ley, } taneously on the model of such; as witless, godless, needless, pennyless.
-leigh, } are often nouns diminutive; as ringlet, croslet.
-like, } if names of places, imply a meadow, or irrigated ground; as Henley, Dulley,
-ly, } Chudleigh. The terminations -lea, -lay, -ly, in names of places, have the same -linear, } meaning.
-lineal, } are Saxon adjectives, or adjectives formed spontaneously on the model of such,
-ling, } and signifying resemblance in quality; as godlike, manlike, saintlike; guilty,
-lite, } manly, minutely. Or they are adverbs formed by adding the latter form of the ter-
-logy, } mination to adjectives; as warmly, coldly, happily, wondrously.
-linear, } are adjectives related to the Latin adjective or substantive linearis, or linæa. (a -lineal, } line,) as rectilinear, curvilinear; unlinear. The last has only a figurative sense.
-ling, } are very frequently diminutives; as seedling, lordling, darling; and these are
-lite, } often formed spontaneously, as Greekling, fopling.
-lity, } in mineralogy, are names related to the Greek noun λίθος, (lithos,) a stone; as -logue, } chrysolite, sodalite, cryolite. Mineralogists, inattentive to the meaning of this
-logy, } termination, are now in the habit of adding only ite in the formation of new
-loquy, } names. Indeed, nothing can be more arbitrary or unfixed by unity of principle
-lucation, } or purpose than the greater part of the names in mineralogy; and, except a -lorn, } few in common use, they do but encumber the pages of a dictionary. What are -low, } we to think of gibbsite, a mineral found in Webster's dictionary, and in the -lude, } grounds of one Squire Gibbs, of Massachusetts?
-lusion, } with the accent on the previous syllable, are abstract nouns; as principality,
-lunar, } fidelity, ability, frivolity, credulity.
-lysis, } are all French words; as belle, bagatelle, canaille, quadrille.
-lyte, } are nouns related to the Greek noun λόγος, (logos,) a word, speech, or discourse;
-macy, } as a dialogue, a monologue, an epilogue; apology, tautology, geology.
-mancy, } are nouns related to the Latin verb loquor, to speak, whose participle is locutus,
-mand, } which verb is from the Greek noun λέγος, as a soliloquy; obloquy, (had or re-mend, } proachful language); a prolocution; elocution.
-mas, } are adjectives, compounded with the participle of a Saxon verb, signifying to
-mathy, } forsake; as forlorn, lucelorn.
-member, } if names of places, imply a mound or bank; as Hounslow, Marlow.
-men, } are relations of the Latin verb ludo, to play, whose preterit is lusi; as to delude, -mich, } to elude, to prelude; a prelude; delusion, collusion.
-mion, } are relations of the Latin adjective lunaris, pertaining to the moon; as sublunar,
-mity, } interlunar.
-moly, } are nouns related to the Greek noun λύσις, (lysis,) a loosening, weakening, or dis--molyte, } engaging; as paralysis, analysis, electrolyte.
-mory, } are nouns allied to the Greek noun μάχη, (ma-che,) a fight, a conflict; as neu-
-mory, } machy, log-machy.
-mancy, } are nouns allied to the Greek noun μαντήα, (manteia,) prophecy, divination; as
-mand, } necromancy, chirromancy.
-mend, } are verbs related to the Latin verb mando, to intrust, to bid; as to demand, to
-mas, } remand; to commend.
-mathy, } are Saxon compounds, signifying a holiday; as Candlemas, Michaelmas.
-member, } are nouns related to the Greek noun μάθησις, (mathesis,) knowledge, learning;
-men, } as polymathy.
-mion, } are either English compounds, as to dismember; or more commonly relations of -mity, } the verb meminiscor, to call to mind; derived through Norman French; as to
-moly, } remember.
-mion, } are words adopted from the classical languages; as acumen, abdomen, amen;
-moly, } to be of course distinguished from such English words as fecmen, workmen.

Words ending in

- ment, are nouns formed by the addition of the termination to verbs, &c.; as from to engage, engagement; to manage, management. But if the accent is on the last syllable, the word does not class with these; e. g. to cement.
- merce, are words related to the Latin noun merx, (which in the genitive is mercis), merchandize, goods; as com'merce, to amerce.
- mersion, } are verbs related to mersus, the participle of the verb mergo, to dip or plunge;
-merse, } as to immerse, immersion, emersion.
-meter, } are relations of the Greek noun μέτρον, (metron,) a measure; as diameter, chronometer; geometry, symmetry.
-metry, }
-mire, } are from compounds of the Latin verb miror, to wonder at; as to admire; or are formed with the English noun mire, dirt, as to bemire. But piamire classes with neither of these.
- mit, } are relations of the Latin verb mitto, to send, to certify, whose preterit is
-mise, } misi; as to demit, to remit, to commit; to demise, to promise; demission,
-mission, } omission.
-monish, } are from compounds of the Latin verb monere, to advise; as to admonish.
-monstrate, } are from compounds of the Latin verb monstro, to show; as to demonstrate.
-morphosis, } are relations of the Greek noun μορφωσις, (morphosis,) a form or shape; as metamorphosis.
- most, } are Saxon or English superlatives; as endmost, hindmost, uppermost.
-mote, } are relations either of motus, the participle of the Latin verb moveo, to move; as -mount, } to promote, remote, (adj.); or are Saxon compounds signifying a meeting; as -move, } wardmote, fulkmote.
-mure, } are related to the French verb monter, to ascend; as to surmount; paramount.
-mute, } see -mote.
-mutation, } are verbs related to the Latin noun murus, a wall; as to immure.
-mutation, } are from compounds of the Latin verb muto, to change; as to commute, to transmute; transmutation.
- ness, are abstract nouns substantive of Saxon parentage, or formed on the model of such, by adding the termination to an adjective; as goodness, badness, plenteousness, destructiveness. If names of places, the termination signifies a promontory; as Totness, Sheerness.
- neurosis, are relations of the Greek noun νῆρον, (neuron,) a nerve; as, aponeurosis.
-nect, } are relations of the Latin verb necto, to tie or join, whose preterit is nexi; as -nex, } to connect; to annex.
-nomy, } are relations of the Greek noun νόμος, (nomos,) a law; distribution, arrangement;
-nome, } as astronomy, economy; metronome. The Greek noun is from the verb νίμω, (nemo,) to distribute; and hence, in some words related to the above, the first two letters are ne instead of no. Monome is not a relation of these words, but of those terminating in -onymy, which see. See also -ogony.
- normous, are relations of the Latin word norma, a rule or standard; as abnormous, enormous.
- o, are none of them words of Saxon parentage, but come to us from the Italian, and other languages; as stucco, portico; mulatto; lumbago; eringo.
- ocese, are relations of oikos, (oikos,) a dwelling; as diocese. Diecian is also a relation.
-ode, } are nouns from the Greek noun ὕδν, (o-de,) a song; as epode, palinode; parody,
-ody, } monody.
-oid, } are relations of the Greek verb ἰδῆμαι, (eidomai,) to seem, to be like, whose preterit
-oidal, } is ἶδα, (oida;) or of the kindred noun εἶδος, (eidos,) a form or likeness; as conoid, coralloid, spheroid; spheroidal, cycloidal.
-oir, } are adopted French words; as memoir, escritoire, bourgeois, chamois, turquoise.
-oire, } Noise is from an old correspondent French word. Poise and its compounds are
-ois, } allied to poide, but do not come directly from it.
-onymy, } are relations of the Greek noun ὄνομα or ὀνυμα, (onoma, or onyma,) a name; as -onymous, } synonymy, onymy; synonymous. Monome is also a relation.
-on, } are Anglicized words which in French terminated in on; as buffoon, dragoon, balloon. We must except words of one syllable, with their compounds.
-optric, are related to the Greek verb ὀφθαίμαι, (optomai,) to see; or ὀφθαλμα, (optra,) an instrument for assisting the sight; as dioptric.
-or, } see -er and -ee.
-orama, } are related to the Greek verb ὀράω, (orao,) to see, and its kindred noun ὀράμα, (orama); as panorama, diorama.
-ory, are, for the most part, adjectives, from Latin adjectives in orius, or formed on the pattern of such; as suasory, imprecatory, cursory. Sometimes they are substantives from Latin substantives in orium or oria, or formed on the pattern of such; as sensory, judicatory, directory.

Words ending in:

- ose*, are adjectives from Latin adjectives in osus, which always imply plenitude; as glabrous, verbose, tenebriose. There are a few exceptions, as to suppose; but in these the s is generally vocal in pronunciation, which it never is in the adjective termination; see Prin. 152.
- our*, are generally derived through the French from Latin words in or; as arbour, honour: see Prin. 191.
- ous*, are frequently adjectives from Latin adjectives in us; as lubricous, dubious, conscious: hence it is a common termination in English for adjectives of whatever termination in Latin; as studious, atrocious; and for other adjectives, however derived; as jealous, marvellous. In chemistry, this termination in adjectives applied to the acids has a discriminative import: see -ic.
- over*, if names of places, imply a situation over a hill or hills; as Southover, Wendover.
- pect*, are relations of pactus, the participle of the Latin pango, to fix in, to settle; as impact, compact.
- pair*, } are originally from the same source, the Latin verb paro, to get into a state of
- pare*, } readiness; as to repair, to prepare. Those with the former termination come to us through the French.
- parous*, are adjectives related to the Latin verb pario, to bring forth young; as oviparous, viviparous.
- part*, are relations of the Latin verb partior, to divide or share; as to impart.
- pass*, are relations of the French verb passer, to move or go; as to surpass, to compass, to trespass.
- pathy*, are nouns related to the Greek noun πάθος, (pathos), an affection, passion, or emotion; as sympathy, antipathy, apathy.
- ped*, } are relations of the Latin noun pes, a foot, which in the genitive case is ped-is; as
- pede*, } biped, multipede; to impede. The English word pad and its compounds are remotely related to these words, but immediately with path, which, with a little difference of spelling, is a Saxon word.
- pel*, } are relations of the Latin verb pello, to drive, whose participle is pulsus; as to
- pulse*, } impel, impulse.
- pend*, are relations of the Latin verb pendo, to hang; as to suspend, to impend.
- petal*, are compounds of petal, from the Greek noun πέταλον, (petalon), a flower leaf; or are related to the Latin verb peto, to seek or tend to; as centripetal.
- phagus*, } are relations of the Greek verb φάγω, (phago), to eat or consume; as æso-phagus;
- phasis*, } anthropophagy, (cannibalism.) Ichthyophagous (adj.) is also a relation.
- phery*, are nouns allied to the Greek noun φάσις, (phasis), a showing, an appearance, a sign; and to the verb φαίω, (phaino), to show; as emphasis, prophasis.
- phony*, are relations of the Greek verb φέρω, (phero), to bring or conduct; as periphery.
- phthong*, are nouns related to the Greek noun φωνή, (pho-ne), a sound; as symphony, euphony.
- phrase*, } are nouns related to the Greek noun φθόγγος, (phthongos), a sound; as diphthong.
- phrast*, } are relations of the Greek verb φράζω, (phrazo) to speak, to expound; as a
- phyllous*, } paraphrase, a paraphrast.
- physis*, } are adjectives signifying leaved, from the Greek noun φύλλον, (phylon), a leaf;
- phyte*, } as quadrifphyllous.
- pict*, } are nouns allied to the Greek noun φύσις, (physis), nature, constitution; to φύναι,
- paint*, } (fyton), a plant; and to their parent verb φύω, (phyo), to beget, to grow as by
- placent*, } nature; as apophysis, (the process of a bone, or the part that grows out at the end of it,) symphysis; neophyte, zoophyte.
- plain*, are relations of the Latin verb pingo, to paint, whose participle is pictus; as to depict, to depaint. The latter comes to us through the French.
- plasm*, are adjectives from the Latin word placens, the present participle of placeo, to please; as complacent.
- plex*, } are relations either of the French verb plaindre, to cry as for succour; as to
- plíce*, } complain; or of the Latin noun planus, smooth, coming to us through the French;
- ploce*, } as to explain.
- ply*, } are related to the Greek noun πλάσμα, (plasma), a thing formed, a mould; from
- plore*, } the verb πλάσσω, (plasso), to fashion; as metaplasim.
- pnæ*, } are relations of the Latin verb plico, to fold, or of its parent Greek verb πλέω,
- pnæ*, } (pleco), whose preterit middle is πῖπλοκα, (peploca); as complex; accomplice. Hence such related words as simplicity; complicate. The third of these related terminations is pure Greek; as in epiploce: the last two come to us with words derived through the French; as to deploy; to imply.
- pnæ*, } are verbs related to the Latin verb ploro, to weep; as to deplore, to implore. To explore is related originally to these, though its meaning no longer includes the original sense.
- pnæ*, } are related to the Greek noun πνοή, (pnoie, in the Latin form pneæ), a breath or breathing; as dyspnææ.

Words ending in

- poise, } are related to the French noun poids, a weight; as equipoise, count-~~er~~poise.
 -polis, } are names of cities, from the Greek noun πόλις, (polis), a city; as metropolis, Constantinopolis, (modernized into Constantinople;) Tripoly, (literally three cities.)
 -poly, } But, in monopoly, the termination is from πωλήω, (poleo), to trade or buy; and the same letters as a prefix are from the Greek πολύς, (poly), a multitude, several; as polysyllable.
- pone, } are relations of the Latin verb pono, to put, whose participle is positus; as to -pose, } postpone; to depose; deposition; to propound. The termination which, in the last -position, } instance, has taken an idiomatic form, must not be confounded with the termina-
 -pound, } tion of to impound, which is a compound of in and pound.
 -port, } are relations of the Latin verb porto, to carry; as to support, to import; a support.
 -potent, } —in report and many other words the sense is figurative.
 -prehend, } are compounds of potent, from correspondent Latin compounds of potens; as -prehesion, } impotent, omnipotent.
 -prise, } are relations of the Latin verb prehendo, to take, whose participle is prehensus; } or of the kindred French verb prendre, whose participle is pris, prise; as to deprehen, to comprehend, (to seize or grasp mentally;) comprehension; reprise, surprise.
- press, } are relations of pressus, the participle of the Latin verb premo, to press; as to express, to repress.
- pter, } are related to the Greek noun πτερόν, (pteron), a wing; as chiropter, (a bat, as -pteral, } using hands for wings;) dipteral.
 -ptote, } are nouns related to the Greek noun πτῶσις, (ptosis), a case; as diptote, monoptote.
 -pugn, } are verbs related to Latin verbs compounded with pugno, to fight with, to con-
 -pute, } tend against, derived by us through the French; as to expugn, to oppugn.
 } are verbs or their correspondent nouns related to the Latin verb puto, to think;
 } as to repute, to compute: but some of these, having passed through other lan} guages in coming to us, have much changed their original meaning; as to depute.
- que, } if the three letters are pronounced k, may be set down without exception as } adoptions from the French; as pique, casque, burlesque.
 -quet, } are likewise derived from the French; as banquet, piquet; gazette.
 -quire, } are relations of the Latin verb quæro, (spelled quiro in compounds,) whose -quest, } meanings are to ask or seek, to gain or get, and whose participle is quæsitus, } contracted to quæstus; as to inquire, to acquire; inquest, acquest.
- re, } when these final letters are pronounced er, may be set down as adoptions from } the French; as theatre, massacre, ombre, maugre. Under other cases also, the } words which terminate with these letters are frequently French; as ecritoire, } solitaire, tonsure, coiffure, roque'aure.
- rect, } are relations of the Latin verb rego, to rule, whose participle is rectus; as to } direct, to correct.
- reme, } are nouns from correspondent Latin nouns in remis, related to remus, an oar; as } trireme.
- ret, } in chemistry, are names of compound combustible substances which possess no } sensible properties of an acid; as sulphuret, ammoniuret. Compare -ide.
- rick, } are Saxon words signifying government; as bishoprick. In proper names, the } same Saxon termination signifies rich; as in Frederick.
- ride, } are relations of the Latin verb rideo, to laugh; as to deride.
- rol, } are chiefly compounds of roll, of which one l has been dropped: see 195.
- rrhœa, } are nouns related to correspondent Greek nouns in ῥοια, which are derived from } the verb ῥίω, (rheo), to flow; as aporrhœa, diarrhœa.
- rupt, } are relations of ruptus, the participle of the Latin verb rumpo, to break; as } abrupt, bankrupt; to interrupt.
- ry, } are sometimes nouns formed from other nouns to which the termination gives the } sense of a place for; as a heronry, a friary, an aviary, a rookery.
- scend, } are verbs related to the Latin verb scando, to climb, which in compounds is } written scendo; as to ascend, to transcend.
- science, } are nouns substantive and adjective from correspondent Latin words derived -scious, } from scio, to know; as, prescience; conscious.
 -scind, } are verbs related to the Latin verb scindo, to cut; as to abscind, to rescind.
 -scii, } are nouns plural in which the Greek noun σκιά, (scia), a shadow, is Latinized } into scius, a man having a shadow; as ascii, amphiscii.
- scope, } are nouns related to the Greek noun σκοπός, (scopos), a mark or aim, and to the -scopy, } kindred verb σκοπέω, to view; as telescope, microscope; aerocopy.
 -scribe, } are relations of the Latin verb scribo, to write, whose participle is scriptus; as -script, } to ascribe, to inscribe; postscript, conscript.

Words ending in

- sea, if names of places, imply a pool or place for water; as Chelsea, Portsea.
- sect, are relations of sectus, the participle of the Latin verb seco, to cut; as to bisect, to intersect; an insect.
- sent, are sometimes related to the Latin verb sentio, to feel; as to resent: but compare -ent.
- sequent, are relations of sequens, the participle of the Latin verb sequor, to follow; as subsequent.
- sert, are relations chiefly of sertus, the participle of the Latin verb sero, to join, weave, or put; as to insert, to assert, to dissent. But desert (merit) is related through the French to the Latin verb servio, to serve; and dessert has the same relationship with a more literal meaning.
- serve, are in some instances relations of the Latin verb servio, to serve; as to subserve, to asserve, to disserve, to deserve, (the sense of which last is figurative:) and in other instances they are relations of servo, to keep, to heed; as to preserve, to observe.
- ship, are Saxon nouns substantive, or nouns formed spontaneously on their model, implying an office or dignity, a state, profession, or art; as lordship, worship, heremanship. The compounds of ship, as fireship, flagship, must of course be distinguished from these.
- side, when they are not compounds of the English word side, are relations either of the Latin verb sileo, to sit; as to reside, to preside; or of the Latin verb sido, to sink or settle; as to subside.
- sign, are relations, through the French signer, of the Latin verb signo, to sign, to declare; as to subsign, to design; an ensign.
- sion, are nouns substantive corresponding with Latin substantives in sio, or formed on the model of such; as evasion, adhesion, scansion, version, vision.
- sist, are relations of the Latin verb sisto, to be, to stand, or settle; as to assist, to consist.
- sive, are adjectives formed in imitation of French adjectives in if, whose feminine is ive; as massive, suasive, derivative.
- sm, are nouns substantive, formed spontaneously on the model of Greek nouns in ασμα, ασμος, ισμος, οσμος, υσμος, (asma, asmos, ismos, osmos, ysmos,) as pleonasm, solecism, syllogism, paroxysm, calvinism, galvanism.
- sne, are old French words, of which the s is silent; as demesne: see Prin. 157
- solve, are relations of the Latin verb solvo, to loose, to separate; as to dissolve.
- some, are adjectives compounded with the Saxon word some; as blithesome, wearisome.
- son, when they are not compounds of the English word son, are generally derived from the French; as reason, venison, garrison. Words in ton and zon are likewise in general of French origin.
- sonant, are relations of sonans, the present participle of the Latin verb sono, to sound; as dissonant, consonant.
- sory, see -ory.
- sophy, are relations of the Greek noun σοφία, (sophia,) wisdom, learning; as philosophy.
- spasis, are relations of the Greek verb σπάω, (spao,) to draw; as antispasis; polyspast, pentaspast.
- spect, are relations of the Latin verb specto, to see, to view; as to inspect; an aspect.
- sperse, are relations of sparsus, written spersus when compounded, the participle of the Latin verb spargo, to strew, to sprinkle; as to asperse, to disperse.
- sphere, are relations of the Greek noun σφαῖρα, (sphaîra,) in Latin, sphæra, a globe; as hemisphere; to insphere.
- spire, are relations of the Latin verb spiro, to breathe; as to inspire, to expire.
- spond, are relations of the Latin verb spondeo, to promise or pledge, to assure; as to respond, to despond.
- sse, are adopted French words; as fesse, duresse.
- stant, are all relations, originally, of the same word, the Greek verb στέω, (stao,) to stand, whose Latin form is stō, and the present participle stans; immediately from the Greek form is derived στάσις, (stasis,) the act of standing, or a state, or condition; and also στατικός, (staticos,) having the power of standing, or of holding as in a balance: immediately from the Latin form is derived statuo, to place or fix, which, in compounds, is written stíuo: hence, the terminations of such words as the following: extant, constant; metastasis; ecstasy; hydrostatics; interstice; institute.
- stich, are compounds of the Greek noun στίχας, (stichos,) a row, or even series of things, a line; as hemistich, distich.
- stil, are relations of the Latin verb stillo, to drop; as to distil.
- stinguish, are relations of the Latin verb stinguo, to quench, whose participle is stinctus.
- stinct, Webster says, the primary meaning was not to quench, but to stick, or to make marks by puncturing or sticking: hence, to distinguish, to extinguish, (to take out the traces or marks,) distinct, extinct.

Words ending in

- stoke, } if names of places, are compounds of stoke or stow, which, in Saxon, signifies a place; as Basingstoke; Chepstow.
- stow, }
- strings, } are relations of the Latin verb stringo, to bind, to grasp, to keep in or under; whose participle is strictus, and whose form in old French, through which we get words of the last termination, was straindre; as to astringe; to restrict; to constrain.
- strict, }
- strain }
- strophe, are compounds of the Greek noun στροφή, (strophe), a turn or change; as anastrophe, antistrophe.
- struct, are relations of structus, the participle of the Latin verb struo, to raise, to pile, to put in order, or prepare; as to construct, to instruct.
- style, are nouns related to the Greek noun στυλος, (stylos), a column; as peristyle, pentastyle.
- sult, are relations of sallum, (written sullum in compounds,) the participle of the Latin verb solio, to leap, to spring as upon any one; as to insult, to result. The verb to consult does not, however, belong to these.
- sume, are verbs related to the Latin verb sumo, to take; as to assume, to resume.
- sure, see -ure.
- tain, } are, for the most part, relations, through the French, of the Latin verb teneo, to hold, or have in keeping; as to contain, to retain, to sustain; retention. Captain and chieftain do not class with these.
- tention, }
- taph, are nouns related to the Greek noun τάφος, (taphos), a mound, a tomb; as cenotaph, epitaph.
- techny, are nouns related to the Greek noun τέχνη, (tech-ne), a trade or art; as pyrotechny.
- tect, are relations of tectus, the participle of the Latin verb tego, to cover; as to protect, to detect; except architect, whose termination is from the Greek noun τίκτων, (techton), a workman.
- teen, are names of numbers, compounded with this form of the word ten; as fourteen.
- tend, } are frequently relations of the Latin verb tendo, to stretch, whose participle is tentus; as to distend, to pretend, (of which latter the sense is figurative, as well as of most other of the compounds;) intent, distent. But some of the words ending in tent are relations of teneo, (see -tain,) whose participle is also tentus; as content; others have no relationship to either class; as potent: see -ent.
- tent, }
- temper, are relations of the Latin verb tempero, to moderate; as to attempt, to distemper.
- test, are relations of the Latin verb testor, to call to witness; as to attest, to obtest. The original meaning scarcely remains in to contest, and to detest, though still found in the Latin use of these words.
- th, are frequently nouns substantive formed originally in Saxon, or imitated in modern English, by adding the last two letters to an adjective, a verb, or a substantive, often with some slight change of the word, previously to the addition: thus, from wide, warm, strong, deep, are formed width, warmth, strength, depth; from moon is formed month; from to bear and to ear, birth and earth.
- theism, } are relations of the Greek noun θεός, a god; as polytheism, atheism; pantheon.
- theon, }
- thesis, } The last word comes to us through the Latin, or it would have been pantheon.
- them, } are relations of thesis, (thesis,) a placing or position; θήμα, (thema), that which is placed; θέτος or θέτικος, (thetos or theticos), placed;—all of them from the Greek verb τίθημι, (tithe'mi), to place or lay down; as metathesis, hypothesis; epithem; epithet; synthetic, hypothetic. Except mathesis, which is from a Greek verb, whose future tense is μαθήσομαι, (mathésomai), to learn:—and pathetic, which is related to the words in -pathy, which see.
- thet, }
- thetic, }
- thorp, if names of places, imply a country house or landed possession; as Bishopsthorp.
- thral, are compounds of the Saxon noun thralh, a servant or slave; as to enthrall.
- tide, are compounds of the Saxon word tide, which has a primary and a consequential meaning, viz. time or season; and the flow of water, which happens at returning times or seasons: hence, Whitsuntide, and to betide, with the former sense; and spring-tide, counter-tide, with the latter.
- tangent, } are relations of the Latin verb tango, (written tingo in compounds,) to touch; whose participle is tactus. The form was originally tago, instead of tango, whence the termination tinguus: hence, the words co-tangent; contingent; contact; contiguous.
- tingent, }
- tact, }
- tiguus, }
- tion, are nouns substantive corresponding with Latin substantives in tio, many of them derived through the French, or formed spontaneously on the model of such; as probation, inspection, ambition, unction, filtration, flirtation.
- tive, are nouns adjective, but often used substantively, sometimes shortened from Latin adjectives in ivus, but generally formed in imitation of French adjectives in if, whose feminine is ire; as collective, perspective, talkative: compare -sive.
- tome, } are nouns corresponding with Greek nouns compounded with τομή, (to-me), a cutting, a section, a piece cut off; as ap-tome, epitome; anatomie, lithotomy.
- omy, }

Words ending in

- ton, } are frequently names of places compounded with the Saxon word ton or tun, an enclosed place; as Teddington, Edmonton, Hillingdon. The latter termination may sometimes be a corruption of den, (see -dean.) or of dun, a hill; or of dis, which also signified a town: but it is most commonly another form of ton.
- dun, }
- tort, are relations of tortus, the participle of the Latin verb torqueo, to twist, to bend; as to distort, to extort; a retort.
- tory, see -ory.
- tract, } are relations of tractus, the participle of the Latin verb traho, to draw; as to subtract, to retract; an abstract. The verb to portray is of the same family, but it comes to us through the French. Concerning another verb, to betray, the relationship is doubtful: the termination comes to us through the French trahir, which is supposed, by some, not to be derived from traho, but trado, to yield up.
- tray, }
- tre, see -re.
- tribute, are relations of tributus, the participle of the Latin verb tribuo, to give, bestow, or impute; as to attribute, to contribute; an attribute.
- trope, are relations of the Greek noun τροπή, (trope), a turn or moving round; as heliotrope.
- troph, are relations of the Greek noun τροφή, (trophe), nourishment, support, maintenance; as atrophy.
- trude, } are relations of the Latin verb trudo, to thrust, whose participle is trusus; as to protrude, to intrude; intrusion.
- trusion, }
- tte, are adopted French words; as coquette.
- tude, are nouns from correspondent Latin nouns in tudo; as pulchritude, lassitude.
- tune, when not compounds of tune, which is another form of the word tone, are from correspondent Latin words in tuna or tunus, and generally derived through the French; as fortune, importune.
- ture, see -ure.
- type, are nouns from correspondent Greek nouns compounded with τύπος or τύπη, (typos or type), an impression made by a blow, and hence a model, a pattern; as antitype, prototype.
- ule, are frequently nouns diminutive imitated from Latin words in ulus, ula, or ulum; as globule, animalcule.
- ult, are from correspondent Latin words in ultus; as adult, lumult.
- ume, are generally from Latin words in umen, umus, or uma, often through the French; as volume, plume.
- um, are mostly words adopted from Latin, many of them originally Greek, in which language they terminate in on, (on); as perigeum, medium, opium. Chemists have chosen this as the characteristic termination of the names of the metals; as, platinum, itrium, potassium, sodium, &c. These words are of course only assimilated to Latin: but aurum, argentum, ferrum, &c., are Latin words, and may be used for gold, silver, iron, &c., though the English words are generally employed: on the other hand, tungsten, bismuth, and some of the other metals, have no names in Latin, and appear to have no assimilated names.
- ure, are very frequently from Latin words through the French or Italian; as pleasure, picture, literature.
- uret, see -ret.
- us, are Latin words, many of them originally Greek, in which language they terminate in os, (os); as syllabus, genus, incubus.
- velop, } are relations of the Italian word viluppo, a packet or bundle, coming to us in compounded words of French denizenship; as to develop, to envelop; an envelope.
- velope, }
- vene, } are relations of the Latin verb venio, to come, whose participle is ventus; as to advene, to supervene; to circumvent. But all words of the latter termination are not allied to these: see -ent.
- vent, }
- vert, } are relations of the Latin verb verto, to turn, whose participle is versus; as to avert, to invert; averse, inverse; to reverse.
- verse, }
- ves, are generally nouns plural from singulars in f or se; as loaves, wives.
- vest, are verbs related to the Latin verb vestio, to clothe, or apparel, mostly in a figurative sense; as to invest, to divest.
- vex, } are relations of veho, to carry or convey, whose preterit is veri; as dever, convex; to convey, to survey; a convoy, an envoy. Words of the last termination come to us through the French.
- vey, }
- voy, }
- vide, } are relations of the Latin verb vidéo, to see, whose participle is visus; as to provide; to supervise, to devise. But divide has its termination from viduo, to part.
- vise, }
- vince, } are relations of the Latin verb vinco, to conquer, whose participle is victus; as to evince, to convince; to convict; a convict.
- vict, }
- vive, are relations of the Latin verb vivo, to live; as to revive, to survive.

Words ending in

- voke, are verbs from correspondent Latin verbs compounded with voco, to call; as to invoke, to convoke, to provoke.
- volve, } are relations of the Latin verb volvo, to roll, whose participle is volutus; as to
- volution, } involve; an involution.
- vomous, are adjectives related to the Latin verb vomo, to vomit; as ignivomous, flam- mitivomous.
- vorous, are adjectives related to the Latin verb voro, to eat or devour; as carnivorous, granivorous.

- ward, } are words significant of the direction of motion, being Saxon compounds, or
- wards, } formed on the model of such; as backward or backwards, hitherward, Godward.
- wark, are names of places, being compounds of the Saxon weork or wark, a work; as Newark, Southwark.
- weald, } are names of places, being compounds of the Saxon weald, a wild, a field, or
- wold, } forest; as Cotswold, Easingwold.
- ween, are compounds with the Saxon verb ween, to think; as to overween.
- wick, } are generally names of places compounded with the Saxon word wick, a village or
- wich, } mansion; as Berwick, Harwich. In bailiwick, the termination denotes jurisdiction,
- wise, are words significant of manner, being compounds with the Saxon word wise, which has the same meaning as the French guise, and the Italian guisa; as lengthwise, otherwise, slantwise.
- wort, are names of herbs imitating Saxon compounds with wort, a herb; as lungwort, dandelwort.
- worth, if names of places, imply a farm or court; as Wandsworth, Bosworth; this being one of the meanings of the Saxon word worth.
- wright, are compounds of the Saxon word wright, a workman, or formed in imitation of them; as a shipwright, a wheelwright.

- y, are frequently adjectives formed by adding the y to substantives; as from wealth, wealthy; from wood, woody; from stealth, (which is from to steal.) stealthy. It is a termination which classical words frequently take on being Anglicized; as from pietas, piety; from anatome, anatomy; from acrimonia, acrimony; from breviarium, breviary; from cæmeterium, cemetery; from sudatorium, sudatory.

- zon are frequently adopted French words, or, if from classical words, they come to us through the French; as gazon, to blazon, horizon. But Amazon, a Greek compound, comes to us directly from Latin.

The foregoing Index would have been unnecessarily swelled by terminations of obvious import, or such whose import may be found in the dictionary under the same letters as separate words; hence, the common terminations of words like the following are not inserted:—Saveall, football, to debar, lentbed, to disbelieve, sideboard, hidebound, elbow, footboy, to miscall, te decamp, maacap, to recast, antichamber, cornchandler, turncoat, weathercock, dovecote, Sunday henceforth, finerdrawer, dewdrop, butend, disesteem, windfall, bedfellow, barefoot, misgive, hourglass foreground, behindhand, blockhead, dishonour, inkhorn, malthouse, doorkeeper, wedlock, taskmaster brلمان, charwoman, to unmask, windmill, cheesemonger, godmother, survive, twilight, to benight, &c. Neither are terminations of obvious meaning in the names of places inserted; such, for instance, as in Trowbridge, Holbeach, Colnbrook, Whitchurch, Rochdale, Enfield, Eccleshall, Milfordhaven, Milhill, Westminster, Liverpool Devonport, Garstone, Holywell, Runnymede, Windermere, Portsmouth, &c.

A LIST OF THE MORE COMMON PREFIXES:

Being Prepositions and other Particles found in the following Supplement to the Index of Terminations, with their meanings as there required or used.

Note, that prepositions ending with a vowel are liable to lose it when placed before a word beginning with a vowel, also that u in Greek often becomes y in Lat. and Eng.; and that *ai, oi, Greek, become respectively *ae, oe, in Lat and e in English.

A-, [an], Gr. (prob. a shortened form of ana, not, without; and akin to aneu, without; answering to Lat. in-, and Eng. -less or un-); want, absence, privation; wanting in, deprived of, without, not, having no.

A-, Gr. (answering to agan, very); with united force, greatly.

AB-, [a, abs], Lat. (the same word as Apo: wh. see); from, off, away from, away, absent.

AD-, [ac, af, ag, al, ap, ar, as, at], Lat., to, towards; application, at, addition, in addition.

AMPHI-, Gr. AMBI-, [am, an] Lat. on both or all sides or ways; about, around; on two sides; doubt between two ways.

ANA-, Gr. up, upwards, upon; (wp the stream is back; hence) backwards, previously; (going back is going over the ground again; hence) again, repetition.

ANTE-, Lat. (prob. akin to Anti: wh. see); over against, before; before in time, previously.

ANTI-, Gr. over against, opposite, in opposition to, against; (price set against a commodity is price for or instead of it; hence) for, instead of.

APO-, Gr. (Sancs. apa); from, away from, away, off; (a ball thrown which bounds from, bounds back; hence) back, back again. [double.]

BIS-, [bi], Lat. (fr. duis: see Dis); twice, two, twofold.

CATA-, Gr. down, downwards, down upon; downright, completely; (to dash a thing down upon the ground, is to dash it against the ground; hence) against, over against; (against with a rebound is) by reflection.

CATO-, down, downwards, completely.

CIRCUM-, Lat., (akin to Gr. circos, cricos, a ring); around, about.

CUN-, [cum; co, col, com, cor], Lat. (fr. Gr. cun, xun, or sun: see Syn); with, along with, together with, together, altogether, completely; (to bring things together to one point is to bring them up to one point; hence) up; (to act with is to act jointly or in common with; hence) jointly, unitedly, in common; (two persons having a common parent have the same parent; hence) the same.

CONTRA-, [counter in Norman Eng.], Lat., against, opposite, on the other hand.

DE-, Lat. (perh. fr. di: see Dis, Lat.); motion apart or from; (to flow from is to flow down; hence) down from, down; state of being apart, from, off, away, deprivation; (to speak on the qualities of a thing fancied as apart from the thing itself, is to speak about a thing; hence) about, concerning, as for.

DIA-, Gr. right through, through; through the channel or direction of, by means of; (through is amid or among others; hence) among; through, thoroughly, completely; (right through is across so as to divide; hence) dividedly, apart, asunder, separated, absent. [double.]

DIS-, [di] Gr. (for duis; fr. duo, two); twice or two.

DIS-, [di], Lat. (fr. Gr. Dis: wh. see; and akin to Dia); divided into two, separated, parted, apart, in different parts, placed far from, scattered; (a composed body if pulled apart is destroyed; hence) destroyed.

DYS-, Eng. for Gr. Dus- (fr. Sancs. dus, dur-; fr. du, to grieve; and answering to Eng. un- or mis-); ill, evil, hard, bad, unlucky.

EX-, [ex], Gr., E-, [ex, ef], Lat. motion out of, out; (taken) out of, from or away, without; (taken) out or up, aloft, above; out and out, utterly, completely.

EXTRA-, Lat. outside, without.

EN-, Gr. (Sancs. ina); a being or remaining within; in, within, having within, imbued with. See also In.

EU-, Gr. (fr. eus, good, brave, noble); good, well, luckily, prosperously, in abundance, very.

EPI-, Gr. upon, on; above, over; (a thing placed on another is added to it, and, in point of time, afterwards; hence) by addition, to; afterwards, after.

HAMA-, Gr. (akin to A, agan: wh. see); at once, together in time. [other-]; other, different, various.

HETEROS-, Gr. (Sancs. ait-aras, Lat. alt-er, Eng.

HOMOS-, Gr. (akin to Hama: wh. see); one and the same; common, joint, similar in place.

HYPER-, Eng. of Gr. Hyper-, (Sancs. upari; akin to Eng. over; and pos-, to up, upper); above, over, over and beyond, beyond.

HYPO-, Eng. of Gr. Hupo-, (Sancs. npa); under; under in size, less; underhandedly, secretly.

IN-, [im; and in Norm. Eng. em], Lat. (fr. En: wh. see); in, within, having within or inside, imbued with; within or between others, among; motion in into, towards; (to go to or towards is to go against hence) against; (to dash against the ground is to dash upon the ground; hence) upon, on. INTER-, [intel; also intra, intro; and in Norm. Eng. enter], in, within between, among; within or between, mutually or reciprocally; reciprocal connection or relation.

IN-, [ig, il, im, ir], Lat. (fr. the above; and equal to Eng. un-); against, opposed; (the quality opposed is just is not just or unjust; hence) not.

ISOS-, Gr. equal to, the same as, similar, alike.

META-, Gr. (akin to mesos, the middle; and Eng. mid); in the middle, between, as a means or middle (the middle joins; hence) community, relation, with relation to; (to hunt as a means to a thing, is to hunt for or after it; hence) after, behind, beyond, back, backwards; (gold for silver is by change for silver hence) by change, for; (to change or sell a thing is to let it go; hence) away.

NE-, Lat. (fr. Gr. ne, without; a strengthened form of ana: see A); without, not, negation. NON, not.

OB-, [o, oc, of, op], Lat., (perh. op, ep; fr. Gr. Epi wh. see); upon, on, coming down on; over, covering over; (to dash upon the ground is to dash against the ground; hence) against, obstruction, opposition, in opposite order, inversely; (to be impelled by force directed against is to be impelled by reason of the force; hence) by reason of, on account of; against, over against, in front of, before, close by.

PARA-, Gr. (prob. akin to Par: wh. see); by the side of, beside, near; (things are placed side by side for comparison; hence) comparison; (comparison decides superiority or distance in excellence; hence) above, beyond, from.

PER-, Lat. (prob. akin to Gr. perao, I drive right through; peran, beyond, and peran, a boundary stretching before; fr. Pro: wh. see); through, thoroughly, completely; through the channel of, by means of, by.

PERI-, (Sancs. pari); around, about.

POST-, Lat. (perh. fr. positus, placed, put; fr. pono, I place); (some time being put or added he came, i. e., he came some time after; hence) after, afterwards.

PRÆ-, [pre in Eng.], Lat., (the same word as Pro: wh. see); before, beforehand. PRÆTER-, [preter, in Eng.], passing before, beyond, or by; leaving out, except.

PRO-, Gr. and Lat. (Sancs. pra); before, in front of, forward, forth; (to come forth is to come from; hence) from, away; (to fight before a person so as to defend him, is to fight for him; hence) for; (gold for silver is instead of; hence) instead of.

PROS-, Gr. (Sancs. prati); motion towards, motion or addition to, in addition; (a thing brought to a person is brought before him; hence) before.

RE-, Lat. (pos. akin to Gr. eri, early; fr. er, ear, spring; also to eos, the dawn; and Eng. ere), before; (to do what was done before is to do again; hence) again, anew; (to go again to the commencement is to go back; hence) back. RETRO-, backwards, behind.

SE-, Lat., by itself, apart, aside, separately.

SE-, Lat. (contracted fr. semi, half; fr. Gr. hemi, half; contrac, fr. hemisus, half; perh. fr. mesos, the middle; akin to Meta: wh. see); half.

SINE-, Lat. (perh. si-ne, if-not; si, akin to Gr. ei if; Ne: see above); unless, without.

SUB-, [suc, suf, sug, sum, sup, sur], Lat., (akin to hupo: see Hypo); under, beneath, from under; underhandedly, secretly; (one under a leader goes after him; hence) after; (under done in cookery is slightly done; hence) slightly. SUBTER-, under.

SUPER-, [sur in Norm. Eng.], Lat. (akin to huper: see Hyper); above, upon, over and above, over. SUPRA-, over, beyond.

SYN-, [syl, sym, sys], Eng. of Gr. Syn-, (san, sam, ham; akin to Hama: wh. see); with, along with, together; altogether, completely.

TRANS-, [tra], Lat. through, across, over, beyond.

ULTRA-, Lat. (pos. fr. uls, there; fr. olius, ille, he that); over there on the further side, beyond.

VER-, Lat., truly, verily; verily great, verily little.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE INDEX OF COMMON TERMINATIONS:

Being an extension of the Plan, supplying an Etymological Analysis of words now occurring in English Speech, which have been superinduced on the Saxon and Norman materials originally constituting the English Language.

In this Supplement, as in the previous Index, the elementary parts alphabetically arranged, are the suffixes or terminations of words: those terminations that occur out of their alphabetical order, are so placed on account of their etymological relationship to the words with which they are associated, and are again noticed in their proper alphabetical place. The meaning assigned to the compounded examples, is always, as nearly as possible, a literal translation of the original words: the Dictionary must be consulted for the particular or applied senses. And the Dictionary must also be consulted when the meaning of the initial part of a word is capable of being further explained.

Among the examples, compounded words appear which are not inserted in the Dictionary, because not yet occurring in use as English words. They show, however, the progress by which similar words have become a part of the language, and by which themselves will in time be added to it.

Note, that the word or words in the examples intended as a translation of the common termination of the class, is distinguished by being in italics.

-ABAD

A. See the previous Index.

-ABAD, Hindoo. The city of Auring-abad, the city of Auringzebe. Hyder-abad, the city of Hyder. Geog.

-AC, adj. relating to; of; s. a thing relating to.*

Theri-ac (curing the venomous bites) of wild beasts. Med.

Zodi-ac (receptacle) of animals. Ast.

-ACANTHA. See ANTHOS.

Pan-ACEA, cure-for all (diseases).

-ACROUS, adj. having the qualities of; having; like. -AGEAN, s. an animal of a class having, &c.

Acanth-acceous, thorn-like. Bot.

Ament-acceous, amenta-like. Bot.

Amygdal-acceous, almond-like. Bot.

Argill-acceous, clay-like. Geol.

Arundin-acceous, reed-like. Bot.

Cact-acceous, cactus-like. Bot.

Cet-acceous, whale-like. Zool.

Chart-acceous, paper-like. Mech.

Equi-set-acceous, horse-hair-like. Bot.

Gallin-acceous, having the qualities of the cock. Orn.

Lin-acceous, flax-like. Bot.

Lycopodi-acceous, wolf's-foot-like. Bot.

Lythr-acceous, blood-red-like. Bot.

Margarit-acceous, pearl-like. Bot.

Mela-stom-acceous, like (a peculiar plant which makes the) mouth-black. Bot.

Oxalid-acceous, having the qualities of oxalis or acidity. Bot.

Papaver-acceous, poppy-like. Bot.

Poly-gal-acceous, like polygalacea or much-milk (wort). Bot.

Portulac-acceous, purslane-like. Bot.

Resed-acceous, mignonette-like. Bot.

Rhamn-acceous, buckthorn-like. Bot.

Rut-acceous, rue-like. Bot.

Salic-acceous, willow-like. Bot.

Sapind-acceous, soapberry tree-like. Bot.

Set-acceous, bristle-like. Entom.

Supra-cret-acceous, having the quality of (being) above-chalk. Geol.

Tili-acceous, limetree-like. Bot.

Ulm-acceous, elm-like. Bot.

Urtic-acceous, nettle-like. Bot.

Vacin-acceous, bilberry-like. Bot.

Violet-acceous, violet-like. Bot.

Cet-acceous, whale-like animals. Zool.

Solen-acceous, tube-like animals. Comch.

Test-acceous, shell-having animals.

EX-ACERBATE, Lat., completely-bittered.

Co-ACERVATE, Lat., heaped-together.

-ACUSTOS, Gr., hearing, heard, and therefore sounding. -ECHOS, sound. [Math.]

Cat-acoustic, sounding-by reflection.

Di-acoustic, sounding-through. Math.

-AGOGUE

Dys-echola, difficulty of-hearing.

Cat-echize, to sound-completely.

-ACRIS, Lat., sharp, sour.

Sub-acrid, slightly sharp.

Vin-egar, sour-wine.

-ACT, -AD, -ADE, -ADO, -Æ.*

-ADELPHOUS. See under -DELPHYS.

-ADIC, -ATIC, -ALIC, adj. relating to; like. s. a thing relating to.

Spor-adic, (scattered) like-seed.

Naphth-alic, relating to-naphthalin.

Prism-atic, relating to (or made by)-a prism. Opt. [Math.]

Quadr-atic, relating to - a square.

Traum-atic, relating to-wounds. Med.

-ÆRESIS, or -HERESIS, from Gr.

hairesis, a taking or removing; and

-ARTIC, or -HARTIC, adj., from

Gr. arsis, an elevating, a removing.

Ap-heresis, a removing-away. Gram.

Di-heresis, a removing-apart. Gram.

Ex-heresis, a removing-out of. Med.

Prosth-ap-heresis, a removing-from-the front. Astron.

Syn-heresis, a taking-together. Gram.

Di-eretic, taking-apart (corrosive). Med. [completely. Med.]

Cat-hartic, removing-downward or

Ano-cat-hartic, removing-upward-and completely. Med.

Cato-cat-hartic, removing-downward-and completely. Med.

-AGE. See the previous Index.

Ex-AGGERATE, Lat., to heap-up.

Tri-AGION, Gr., thrice holy.

-AGOGUE, Gr., a leading or driving, or doing.* -EGON, lied, &c., from

Gr. agon. -ACTUS, Lat., done or put in action. -AGENS, doing, doing forcibly, driving, from Lat.,

ago. [Ger. Med.]

Chol-agogue, a bile-driver or dispellem-agogue, a populace-leader. Polit.

Dys-an-agogue, (phlegm) with difficulty upward-driven. Med.

Hydr-agogue, water-driver or dispeller. Med.

Ped-agogue, child-leader. [Med.]

Psych-agogue, spirit-driver or reviver.

Sial-agogue, spittle-driver or exciter.

Syn-agogue, a leader-together. Ecc.

An-agogue, a leading upward or back.

Bibl. [opposition. Rhet.]

Ant-an-agogue, a leading-back-(&) in

Ep-agogue, a leading-on, in-duction.

Rhet. [addition. Rhet.]

Par-agogue, a leading-by or after (i. e.

Chor-eg, a chorus-leading; hence choragic, adj. [in excess. Ast.]

Ep-act, led or produced-upon or

Ant-agonist, a driver or contender against. The following are Latin.

* See the previous Index.

-AL

Co-act, to act-together.

Counter-act, to act-against.

En-act, to act-in (a part).

Ex-act, adj., done-completely.

Inter-act, to act-between.

Re-act, to act-again or back.

Retro-act, to act-backward.

Trans-act, to act-thoroughly.

Co-agent, acting-together.

Co-gent, driving-(one) with (it).

Sub-agent, acting-under.

Co-agulate, to drive or come-together.

Ex-agitate, to put in action or shake-completely.

Amb-iguous, (having) a twofoldaction or meaning. [or before.]

Prod-igal, driving or throwing-away

Pro-igry, (a thing) drives or put-forward.

-AGORA, Gr. (compare the class above), a place where persons are led together; a forum; hence, a public address there spoken; a speaking, a discouraging, a collecting. [or collecting. Mech.]

Phantasm-agoria, a spectre-collect-r

All-egory, a speaking-(by allusion to) some other thing. Rhet.

Cat-egory, a speaking-against or concerning. Log. [(before) all.]

Pan-egyrical, a speaking (well of) Par-egory, speaking-with (agreeing, consoling). Med.

Syn - cat - egorematic, discouraging-against-with (others). Log.

-AGRA, Gr., a capture; a seizing with disease, gout. -ÆGER, Lat., sick, diseased.

Chir-agra, gout-in the hand.

Dent-agra, tooth-drawing or seizing.

Mvi-agra, fly-capture. Orn. [Med.]

Pell -agra (Lat.), disease of the skin.

Pod-agra, gout-in the foot.

-AIN, s. Fr., a collection as into one.

Quatr-ain, a collection of-four (verses).

Lit. [fortnight or fifteen days.]

Quinz-ain, a collection of-fifteen, s.

-AL,* adj. pertaining to, having.

-ALS, -ALIA, things or animals pertaining, &c. [Math.]

Sexagesim-al, pertaining to - sixty.

Abdomin-als, animals having-(ventral folds under) the abdomen. Ich.

Mamm-als, animals having-breasts.

Zool. [ral] pouch. Zool.]

Marsup-ials, animals having-a (naturocturnal) al, animals pertaining to or roaming at-night. Orn.

Placent-als, animals having-an after birth. Zool.

Neptun-als, (feasts) pertaining to Neptune.

Nov-enn-als, (feasts) pertaining to (or happening every) nine-years.

Para-paern-alia, things had-with-the dovery. [boundaries. Ant.
Termin-alia, (feasts) pertaining to De-ALBATION, Lat. (albus, white), (change) from (colour) to white.
Syn-ALEPHA, Gr. (alepho), an availing-together, i. e., union.
-ALGOS, Gr., pain, ache, sickness.*
Cardi-ally, pain-of the heart, heartburn. Med.
Hepat-ally, pain-of the liver. Med.
Neur-ally, pain-of the nerves. Med.
Nost-ally, home-sickness. Med.
Odont-ally, tooth-ache. Med.
Or-ally, ear-ache. Med.
Ant-algic, against-pain. Med.
-ALIENUS, Lat., another. -ALLE-
LON, Gr., each other.
Ab-alienable, (that may be given) from (oneself) to another.
Par-allel, beside-each other.
-ALIMENTUM, Lat., food, nourishment. -ALO, I nourish, I grow.
In-alimental, not-nourishing. Med.
Co-alesce, to grow-together.
-ALLAGE, Gr., change. -ALLAXO,
 I will change.*
Ap-allage, a change-from. Med.
En-allage, intense or complete change. Rhet. [tion. Rhet.
Hyp-allage, under-change, sub-stitu-
Per-allax, a change-by the way. Astr.
Ex-ALT, Lat. (altus, high), (to raise) out of (abatement)-on high.
-ALTER, Lat., another, or other.
Sequi-alter, one and the half of another. Bot.
Sub-altern, under-another.
Un-alterable, not-to be made other.
Ad-ulterate, (to make) other, i. e., different-by addition.
-ALTY. See the previous Index.
Dulc-AMARA, Lat., a sweet-bitter (plant).
-AMBULATE, see -ION.
Inter-AMNIAN, Lat., between-rivers.
-AMOUR, Fr., love. -AMABILIS,
 Lat., lovely, kind.
En-amour (to cause) love-in.
Par-amour, (one joined) by-love.
Un-amiable, not-lovely.
En-(a)mity, un-kindness.
-AMPELOS, Gr., a vine.
Agri-ampelos, wild-vine. Bot.
Cis-ampelos, ivy-vine. Bot.
-AN, adj. pertaining to; s. a per-am pertaining to.
Dioces-an, pertaining-to-a-diocese Ecc
Hortal-an, pertaining-to-a garden.
Oppid-an, pertaining-to-a town. Polit.
Quart-an, pertaining-to-four. Med.
Sylv-an, pertaining-to-a forest.
Urban, pertaining-to-a city. Polit.
-ANA. See the previous Index.
-ANDROS, Gr., of a man. -AN-
DROUS, adj. manly; having, or with, stamina or stamens.
All-andri-androus, having stamens-to- reign (to the rest). Bot.
An-androus, without stamens. Bot.
Crypt-androus, with concealed-sta- mens. Bot.
Cyn-androus, with crooked-stamens.
Gyn-androus, with stamens-(on the) style.
Mon, one. Di, two. Tri, Tetr.
Pent. Hex. Hept. Oct. Enne.
Dec. Hendec. Dodec. Icos, twenty. Poly-androus, many-sta- mened.
-ANE, -ENE, often denotes a mineral. See also former Index.
Dis-ph-ane, trans-parent-mineral.
Spinell-ane, jagged-mineral.

Tri-ph-ane, three ways-transparent
-mineral.
Spodum-ene, ashes (coloured)-wine-
-mineral.
-ANGELOS, Gr., a messenger.
Arch-angel, chief-messenger.
Ev-angel, good-message.
-ANGOS, Gr., a vessel.
Cene-angy, emptiness-of-vessels.
Spor-ange, the seed-vessel. Bot.
-ANGULUS, Lat., a corner, -AN-
GULOS, Gr.
Multi-angular, many-cornered. Geom.
Quadr-angular, four-cornered Geom.
Rect-angular, right-or-square-cornered.
Sex-angular, six-cornered.
Hex-angular, (G), six-cornered.
Pent-angular, (G), five-cornered.
-ANIMA, Lat., life, soul, mind.
Dis-animate, without-life.
Ex-animate, out of-life.
Magn-animity, greatness-of-soul.
Puill-animous, weak-smiled.
Un-animous, of one-mind.
-ANNU, see -ENNIS.
-ANT, -ENT, are English terminations from present participles in Latin ending in ans, ens: they answer to the Saxon-English termination ing. See the previous Index.
Crepit-ant, creak-ing.
De-pil-ant, depriv-ing-of hair.
Prehensi-enl-ant, hold-ing-with small (tendrils). Bot.
Rumin-ant, chew-ing (the cud). Zool.
Sec-ant, cutt-ing. Geom.
Terebr-ant, bor-ing. Conch.
Vag-ant, wander-ing.
Vesic-ant, blister-ing. Med.
As-surg-ent, rising-up-to (a point).
Ign-e-scent, beginn-ing-to burn.
Kod-ent, gnaw-ing. Zool.
Sali-ent, leap-ing. Zool.
Sequ-ent, follow-ing.
Tang-ent, touch-ing. Geom.
-ANTHOS, Gr., a flower. -AC-
ANTHA, Gr., a pointed flower,
 i. e., a thorn or spine.
Achy-ant, chaff-flower. Bot.
A-phyll-ant, leaf-less-flower. Bot.
Calyc-ant, cups-flower. Bot.
Cephal-ant, head (shaped)-flower.
Chion-ant, snow-flower. Bot.
Heli-ant, sun-flower. Bot.
Peri-ant, (the part) around-the flower. Bot.
Rhiz-ant, root-flower. Bot.
Thalassi-ant, sea-flower. Bot.
Zo-ant, animal-flower. Mal.
Hyster-anthous, adj. (appearing) after-the-flowers. Bot.
A-maranth, (un-fading) does not belong to this class. (Grol.)
Aster-acanth, star-spine, a fossil fish.
Chir-acanth, hand (like)-spine (fish).
Cten-acanth, comb (like)-spine; a fish.
Gyr-acanth, curved-spine; a fossil fish.
Li-acanth, smooth-spine; a fossil fish.
Micr-acanth, little-spine; a fossil fish.
Myri-acanth, myriad-spine; a fish.
Nem-acanth, distrubuted-spine; a fish.
Not-acanth, (a sort of insect which has) spines-on the back. Ent.
Or-acanth, beautiful-spine; a fish.
Pleur-acanth, (a fish having) spines
-at the side. Geol.
Pom-acanth, (a fish having) spines-on the gill covers. Geol.
Prist-acanth, saw (like)-spine; a fish.
Ptych-acanth, folded-spine; a fish.
Sphen-acanth, wedge (like)-spine.
Trag-acanth (a gum imported in pieces sharp as a thorn, -and twisted as) goat's (beard.) Bot.
-ANTHROPOS, Gr., (literally) ano--trepo-ops, upward-I-turn-the face), the heaven looker; man; mankind.*

Lye-anthropy, (hydrophobia, in which) a win (howls-as) a wolf.
Mys-anthropy, hated-of-mankind.
Phil-anthropy, love-of-mankind.
Theo-phil-anthropy, love-of God-to mankind. Hist.
Ex-ANTLATE, Gr., to pump-out.
-APLŪO or -HAPLŪO, Gr., I explain or give a version.
Hex-able, a sixfold-explanation or pa- raphrase. Bibl. [versum. Bibl.
Tetr-able, (a book containing) four parts.
-APTO, Lat., I fit. -APTATUS, fitted, ready.
Ad-apt, to fit-to.
Un-apt, not-fitted or ready.
In-apt, un-fit.
Co-aptation, a fitting-together.
In-aptitude, want-of-readiness.
-APTO, Gr., I touch. -EPHA, I touched.
A-cal-ephe, (a sort of nettle so called because) not-pleasant-to touch.
Par-aphi, a touching or flourish-by the side (of the name).
-AQUA, Lat., water.
Sub-aqueous, under-water.
Terr-aqueous, (consisting of) land and-water. Geog.
In-aquate, (made) into-water.
-ARCHÉ, Gr., beginning, rule, government. See the former Index.
An-archy, without-rule. Polit.
Arist-archy, rule-of the best. Polit.
Gyn-archy, woman-rule. Pol.
Hept-archy, government-of seven. Pol.
Heter-archy, foreign-rule. Pol.
Hier-archy, priest-rule. Pol.
Mon-archy, rule-of one. Pol.
Olig-archy, rule-of a few. Pol.
Poly-archy, rule-of many. Pol.
Polity-archy, joint-rule. Pol.
Agonist-arch, a ruler or umpire-of wrestling. Ant. [Ant.
Chili-arch, a ruler-over a thousand.
Demol-arch, a ruler-of the commons.
Echmolo-arch, a ruler-of the captivi- ty. Bibl.
Ex-arch, a complete-ruler. Pol.
Gymnasi-arch, a ruler-of exercises.
Heresi-arch, a ruler-of heretics or heresy. Ecc.
Patri-arch, (both) father- (and) ruler
Phyl-arch, a tribe-ruler. Pol.
Tetr-arch, the rul-er-of the fourth (of a kingdom). Pol.
Top-arch, the ruler-of a place. Pol.
Trier-arch, a ruler-of a trireme. Mit.
Hyl-archie, rule-over matter.
Pro-cat-arcic, (arising) completely
-from the beginning. Med.
Co-ARCTATE, Lat. (arcto), to crowd
-together. See Co-Erce.
-ARCTOS, Gr., a bear.
Ant-arctic, opposite-(the) bear. Ant.
Plascol-arct, a bear-(having a natu- ral) pouch. Zool.
-ARD. See the previous Index.
-ARGUROS, Gr., (white metal) silver.
Hydr-argyry, fluid or quick-silver.
Med. and Min.
Lith-arge, a stone-silver (scum of lead).
Leth-ARGY, Gr., forgetfulness-of work. See Urgy.
-ARITHM. See the previous Index.
-ARTHRON, Gr., a joint. ARTI-
CULUS, Lat., a joint.
Cyl-arthal, crooked-jointed. Ent.
Hyd-arthral, (having a) watery (or white swelling in)-the joints.
Syn-arthritis, (an immovable) jointing-together.
Bi-articulate, two-jointed. Bot.
Multi-articulate, many-jointed. Zool.
-ARTIC. See -ARISIT.

-ARY, adj., pertaining to, like, having; having the shape of. -ARIES, s. pl., animals pertaining to, &c.*
Ampull-ary, bottle-shaped. Conch.
Ancill-ary, slave-like, subservient, sordid.
Aquil-ary, like-eagle (wood). Bot.
Aren-ary, pertaining to sand (wort).
Armili-ary, bracelet-like. (Gram.)
Avicul-ary, pertaining to-bird (catch).
Bacill-ary, staff-like. Conch. (fung.)
Calceol-ary, pertaining to-slipper (wort). Bot.
Cancell-ary, lattice-like. Conch.
Carin-ary, keel-like. Conch.
Cassid-ary, helmet-like. Conch.
Cristell-ary, crest or comb-like. Con.
Crotol-ary, rattle-like. Conch.
Fasciol-ary, garter or bundle-like.
Fistul-ary, pipe-like. Conch. [Con.]
Loric-ary, breast plate-like. Con.
Lut-ary, like-the fibres of mud. Con.
Mammill-ary, pap-like. Conch.
Ot-ary, ear-shaped. Conch. [Zool.]
Pennatul-ary, feather-shaped. Con.
Procell-ary, pertaining to-storms. Con.
Radi-ary, ray-like. Conch.
Rostell-ary, like-a little bill. Conch.
Sanguinol-ary, (coloured) like-blood.
Sapon-ary, pertaining to-soap (wort).
Scal-ary, ladder-like. Conch. [Bot.]
Sept-ary, having-divisions.
Sigill-ary, seal-like. Conch.
Spatul-ary, spatula-like. Conch.
Struthiol-ary, quince-like. Conch.
Trache-ary, like-the wind pipe.
Variol-ary, having-pock (marks). Con.
Volv-ary, having-twists or whorls.
-ASM. See the previous Index.
Ex-ASPERATE, Lat., to sharpen or roughen (the temper) completely
-ASTRUM, Lat., a star.*
Clype-aster, buckler-star, a fish. Ich.
Dis-aster, absence of (our good) star; evil destiny.
-ATE, adj., like, or having, shaped as; s., a thing like.*
Al-ate, having-wings. Bot.
An-ell-ate, like-a little ring. Mal.
Arist-ate, having-awns, as barley. Bot.
Bacc-ate, having-berries. Bot.
Barb-ate, having-a beard.
Bull-ate, having-blisters. Bot.
Calyptr-ate, cape-d. Bot.
Campanul-ate, like-a bell. Bot.
Cancell-ate, having-cross bars. Bot.
Capit-ate, (round) like-a head. Bot.
Caud-ate, having-a tail. Bot.
Clav-ate, like-a nail. Ich.
Dimidi-ate, half-d. Bot.
E-dent-ate, having-the teeth-out.
Falc-ate, like-a reaping hook. Orn.
Fasci-ate, bundle-like, banded. Bot.
Gangli-ate, having-knots. Mal.
Labi-ate, having-lips. Bot.
Lanceol-ate, lance-shaped. Bot.
Line-ate, having-lines. Bot.
Marsup-ate, having-a pouch. Zool.
Mono-trem-ate, having-one-vent. Zool.
Mutic-ate, having-malms or blemishes; hence without beard.
Nudi-branchi-ate, having-naked-gills.
Pectin-ate, comb-like. Bot. [Mal.]
Ped-ate, foot-like. Bot.
Pedic-ell-ate, like-a little-foot. Bot.
Peduncul-ate, having-foot stalks. Bot.
Pelt-ate, target-shaped. Bot.
Pencil-ate, pencil-shaped. Bot.
Person-ate, like-a mask. Bot.
Forc-ate, having-ridges. Ent.
Fulmon-ate, having-lungs. Mal.
Reticul-ate, net-like. Bot.
Runcin-ate, (hooked back) like-a sort of saw. Bot.
Sagitt-ate, arrow-shaped. Zool.
Scut-ate, shield-like. Zool.
Scut-branchi-ate, having-a shield (cover) the gills.

Serr-ate, saw-like. Zool.
Stom-ate, having-a mouth. B.t.
Stri-ate, having-grooves. Zool.
Sulc-ate, having-furrows. Zool.
Testudin-ate, tortoise-like. Zool.
Unguicul-ate, having-claws. Zool.
Ungul-ate, having-hoofs. Zool.
Urocel-ate, pitcher-shaped. Bot. [Ent.]
Uro cer-ate, having-a horn (like)-tail.
Vagin-ate, having-a sheath. Bot.
Verticill-ate, having or producing-a twisting.
-ATIC, -ITIC, -OTIC, adj., relating to Numism-atic, relating to-coins.
Pneum-atic, relating to-air.
Quadr-atic, relating to-squares. Math.
Trans-atic, relating to-wounds. Med.
Margar-itic, relating to-pearly (colour). Chem. [humours.]
Are-otic, relating to-rarefaction (of Semei-otic, relating to-signs. Med.)
Ex-AUCTORATE, Lat. (auctor, to bind), (dismissed) from-service.
In-AUDIBLE, Lat., not-to be heard.
Hydr-AULIC, Gr. (aulos), relating to water-(passing through) a pipe.
In-AURATION, Lat. (aurum, gold), (a putting) gold-on.
BI-AURICULATE, Lat., having two-earlaps or auricles (as a heart).
ASAR-BACCA, Lat., asarum-berry.
-BALANOS, Gr., an acorn, a nut.
Chryo-balan, gold-nut, (nut-meg).
Myro-balan, ointment-nut. Bot. [Bot.]
-BALSAMOM, Gr., balsam, balm.
Carpo-balsam, fruit-balsam. Bot.
Em-balm, (to put) into-balm or spice.
-BAPTO, Gr., I dip, I wash, I baptize.
Ana-baptism, a re-baptizing. Ecc.
Cata-baptist, one against-baptism. Ecc.
Hemero-baptism, a daily-(religious) washing. Ecc.
P-do-baptism, child-baptism. Ecc.
Em-bam, a dipping-in, a pickle.
Un-BARBED, Lat. (barba, a beard), not-bearded or hooked.
-BATOS, Gr., that can be passed or gone by. -BASIS, Gr. and Lat., a going, a foot, a base. -BAINO, Gr., (written as Eng. bano) I go.
Acro-bate, going-on high or aloft.
Chame-bate, going or creeping-on the ground. Bot. [boughs.]
Clado-bate, going or climbing on Hydro-bate, going on or skimming the water. Orn. [lumn]
Stylo-bate, a base-(below) the co-
Ana-basis, a going-back or return.
E-basis, a going-out or event. Rhet.
Par-ec-basis, a going-from-the side.
De-base, (to make) to go-down.
Em-base, (a place) into-(which one can) go, a bath.
Sur-base, (the part) above-the base.
Hyper-baton, a passing (of one word) beyond (another); transposition.
Amphis-bene, (a serpent) which goes both ways, i. e., head or tail first.
Dia-bates, a passing-through. Med.
-BATTRE, Fr., to beat.*
Com-bat, a beating or struggling-
Un-battered, not-beaten. [together.]
De-bate, a beating-about (of opinions).
Re-bate, a beating-back, or lessening.
Em-BELLISH, Lat., (bellus, beautiful), (to produce) into-beauty.
-BELLUM, Lat., war.* [war.]
De-bellation, (a bringing) down-by Im-bellish, un-warlike. [authority.]
Re-bel, one warring-back (against Un-BENIGN, Lat., not-kind.
Com-BINE, Lat. (binus; Fr., bis), (to put) two-together.

* See the previous Index.

-BIOS, Gr., life. -BIOTOS, living.*
Amphi-bious, living-both ways. Zool.
Hemero-bious, living-(for) a day. Ent.
Hylo-bious, living-in wood. Ent.
Myrmeco-bious, living-on ants. Zool.
Psammo-bious, living-in sand.
Ceno-bite, one living-in community.
Ex-calcio-bion, I call-out-(into) life; (an egg-hatching machine).
-BLE, -BILITY, BLY.*
-BLEPSIS, Gr., sight, vision.
A-blepey, deprivation of-sight. Med.
Pseudo-blepsy, false-vision. Med.
Ana-blepe, (having) raised-eyes.
Ana-bleptous, or upward-looking.
Re-BOATION, Lat., a bellowing back.
-BOLOS, Gr., a cast. -BALLO, I throw; and hence, I insert, place, set, cut, cast out, extract and incur, or am thrown into.*
Acantha-bole, thorn-extractor. Surg.
Ec-bole, out-throwing (diggession).
Eis-bole, ir-ruption. Med. [Surg.]
Em-bole, re or in-setting (of a bone).
Hyper-bole, a casting-beyond. Rhet.
Par-amb-bole, an in-ser-tion-by the side. Rhet.
Peri-bole, a throwing-round, i. e., enclo-sure. Arch. Med.
Para-bola, a cutting-parallel (to the side). Geom. [by the side.]
Para-bol, (a comparison), by placing Sym-bol, a throwing-together, i. e., emblem). [ful.] Amphi-bolous, cast-two ways (doubt-
A-meta-bolus, s. an (animal) not-in curving-change. Ent.
Dis-cubol, quoit-throwing. Ant.
Arcu-balist, i. one who casts-with a Ar-balist, s bow. Ant.
Hyper-BOREAN, Gr. (boreus), be-yond-the north.
-BOSCO, Gr., I feed.
Hippo -bosch, (a fly) feeding -on horses. Ent.
Pro-boscis, the feeder-in front. Zool.
-BOTE, -BOURN. See former Index.
Di-BOTHRIAN, Gr. (bothros, a pit), two-pitted (worm).
-BOUCHE, Fr., mouth; opening.
De bouche, (to get) from-the mouth.
Em-bouchure, an opening-in. Mech.
Dis-em-bogue, (to get) from-the mouth-into.
-BRACHUS, Gr., short. BRA-CHION, the short or upper arm;
the arm.
Amphi-brach, short-on both sides.
Tri-brach, three-short. Gram.
Anti-brach, the opposite or lower arm. Anat.
Cilio-brach, an animal (having) arms
(like) eyelashes. Mal. [Ant.]
Coraco-brach, crow (beak)-armed.
Nudi-brach, (having) naked-arms.
Sub-brachians, or brachia, (fishes having) arms-under, i. e., ventral fins under the pectoral. Ich.
-BRANCHIA, Gr., a gill; the tonsils.
-BRANCH, adj., having gills; s., an animal having gills.
Amphi-branchial, about the tonsils.
Aporo-branch, wanting-gills. Ent.
Cadoc-branch, fading-gill; a tadpole.
Cteno-branch, a comb-gilled (snail).
Cydo-branch, a circle-gilled (mollusk).
Cysti-branch, bladder-gilled.
Dermato branch, a skin-gilled (snail).
Dermo-branch, (snail with) gills-on the skin.
Di-branch, a two-gilled (cephalopod).
Dorsi-branch, (worm with) gills-on the back. [belly.]
Gastro-branch, (having) gills-on the histero branch (having) varied gills.

-BREVIS

Infero-branch, (having) gills-below (the mouth).
Lamelli-branch, plate-gill; a mollusk.
Lopho-branch, tufted-gill; a fish.
Meno-branch, retaining the-gills.
Mono-neuro-branch, an animal having gills on one-side (only). Mal.
Nodi-branch, naked-gill; a mollusk.
Pallio-branch, mantle-gill; a gastropod.
Pectini-branch, comb-gill; a gastropod.
Perenni-branch, having gills-throughout.
Placo-branch, slab-gill. Mal.
Pneumo-branch, air-gill; a reptile and mollusk.
Sepio-branch, shielded-gill; a gastropod.
Siphono-branch, siphon-gill; a gastropod.
Testi-branch, covered-gill; a gastropod.
Tetra-branch, four-gilled animal.
Tubuli-branch, animal having its gills in a tube. Mal.
-BREVIS, Lat., short. Compare Brachys.
Ab-breviate, to shorten-from (the original).
Semi-breve, half-a breve or short note (in old music).
Em-BROCCATE, Gr. (brecho, I wet), to (throw) moisture-on.
Am-BROSIA, Gr., im-mortal (plant).
Ana-BROSY, Gr., a consuming-away.
-BRUO, Gr., (written as Eng. bruy), I shoot up or grow.
An-iso-bryous, not-growing-equally.
Em-bryo, (that which) grows-within.
E-BULLIENT, Lat., out or up-boiling.
-BURSA, Lat., a purse.*
Dis-burse, (to throw) away in different parts-from the purse.
Re-im-burse, (to bring) back-into the purse.
-BUS, Lat., termin. of Dat. in Omnibus, (a carriage) for-all, whence Duo-bus, (carriage) for-two; Tri-bus, for-three; Quadru-bus, for-four; Quintu-bus, for-five; Se-decu-bus, for-sixteen, &c.
-BY. See the previous Index.

-CACIA, Gr., illness, badness. [Med.]
Arthro-cacy, illness-in the joints.
Stoma-cacy, illness-of the mouth.
-CACTOS, Gr., an artichoke.
Echino-cactus, hedgehog (or prickly)-cactus. Bot.
Melo-cactus, melon-cactus. Bot.
-CAL. See the previous Index.
PITTA-CAL, Gr., beautiful-pitch.
Bi-CALCARATE, Lat. (calcar, from calx, heel), double-spurred.
Apo-CALYPSE, Gr. (calupto), (a taking the) cover-from; a revelation.
Actino-CAMAX, Gr., (a shell like) a pallisade of rays.
-CAMPTO, Gr., I bend or inflect.
Ana-campic, bent-back, i. e. reflected.
Phono-campic, inflecting-sound.
Hippo-camp, the lithesome (sea)-horse.
-CAMPUS, Lat., a field; perh., where horses bend their limbs. See Campio.
De-camp, (to go) from the field.
En-camp, (to move) into the field.
-CANDEO, Lat., I am white, clear, bright, fiery, burning.
In-candescence, brightness-within.
Un-candid, not-open or clear.
Dis-candy, to destroy the brightness (of, by melting). [burn.]
Ac-cend, (to set) fire-to.
In-cend, (to put) fire - within; to
In-cense, (that which) burns-inwardly
En-CANTHIS, Gr., in-the corner of the eye. Med.

-CARPOS

-CANTUS, Lat., a song; any noise; in compounds often -CENTUS.
De-cant, (to pour) down-with noise.
Des-cant, a singing-in parts (so as to dwell upon). [upon.]
Re-cant, a calling-back. [upon.]
In-cantation, a singing, or calling.
Ac-cent, modulation-(added) to or on.
Con-cent, a singing-together.
Pre-centor, fore or first-singer. Mus.
En-chant, to sing-into (an ecstasy).
-CAPIO, &c. See Ceptus.
CAPUT, Lat., the head. See Cephale.
De-capitate, (to cut) the head off.
Re-capitulate, (to mention) the chief points-again. [head-foremost.]
Pre-cipice, (where one may fall).
Pre-cipitate, (to throw) head-foremost.
Oc-ciput, (the part) opposite-the sin.
Sin(semi)-ciput, the (fore) half-head.
An-cipital, or -ous, (having) two heads: (that may be) taken-in two ways; doubtful.
Bi-cipital, two-headed. Anat.
Centi-cipital, hundred-headed. Myth.
Flori-cipital, flower-headed. Bot.
Levi-cipital, smooth-headed. Bot.
Multi-cipital, many-headed. Bot.
Pedi-cipital, (having) headed or divided-feet. Orn.
Ker-chief, (Fr. chef), a cover for the head. [a head-badly.]
Mis-chief, (that which is brought to) A-chieve, (to bring) to a head.
-CARCER, Lat., a prison, a place where one is co-Ereced, which see.
Dis-carcerate, (to free) from prison.
In-carcerate, (to put) in-prison.
-CARCINOS, Gr., a crab.
Geo-carcinian, land-crab.
Platy-carcinian, broad-crab.
Pseudo-carcinian, false crab.
CARDIA, Gr., the heart.
En-cardia, (in shape) of a heart. Min.
Peri-cardium, (the part) about-the heart.
Hydro-peri-cardium, water or dropsy about-the heart. Med.
-CARDO, Lat., a hinge.
A-cardian, In-cardinate, hinge-less.
Iso-cardian, Equi-cardinate, equal-hinged. Geol.
Epi-CARIDAN, Gr. (cari-), (a parasitic animal) upon-shrimps.
Multi CARINATE, Lat. (carina, a keel, on which the ship runs), many keeled. See Curro.
-CARNIS, Lat., of flesh. Caro, flesh.
Dis-carnate, un-fleshed.
Ex-carnate, out of-the flesh.
In-carnate, in-the flesh.
-CARPOS, Gr., fruit, produce; hence the wrist, a production of the arm.
Arto-carp, the bread-fruit (tree). Bot.
Calli-carp, beautiful-fruit (plant).
Dasy-carp, close or rough-fruit (plant).
Ptero-carp, fruit (having) two wing (like appendages). Arch.
En-carp, fruit-on (a festoon). Arch.
Endo-carp, the inward (coat-of) fruit. Bot.
Eremo-carp, solitary-fruit; a plant. Bot.
Erio-carp, wool-fruit; a plant. Bot.
Micro-carp, small-fruit; a plant. Bot.
Peri-carp, (the part) round-the fruit.
Angio carpos, (having the) fruit-in-a case. Bot.
Apo-carpos, (having) the fruit-separate from, i. e., not adhering. Bot.
Auto-carpos, (having) the fruit-by itself, i. e., without any calyx. Bot.
Blasto-carpos, (becoming) fruit from a germ (inside the pericarp).
Canlo-carpos, having fruit-on the stem or branch. Bot.

-CELE

Mono-carpos, single-fruited. Bot.
Syn-carpos, united-fruited. Bot.
Angio carpon, a case-fruited plant.
Mono-carpon, a single-fruited plant.
Meta carp, (metacarpal, adj., not ous) (the part) between-the wrist (and hand).
-CASTER. See the previous Index.
-CATENA, Lat., a chain, a link.
Con-catenate, to chain-together.
In-catenate, linked-in (each other).
In chain, Inter-chain, Un-chain, are other compounds.
-Lati-CAUDAL, Lat., broad-tailed.
-CAULIS, Gr., -CAULIS, Lat., a stem or stalk.
-CAULOUS, stem-less. Bot. [Bot.]
Amplexi-caul, embracing its stem.
Multi-caul, having many-stalks. Bot.
-CAUSTOS, Gr., burned. -CAUMA, a burning or heating.
Cata-caustic, burning-by reflection.
Dia-caustic, burning-through or by refraction. Opt.
En-caustic, burnt-in. Paint.
Holo-caust, a burning-of-all (the victim). Ant.
Hypo-caust, (a room) under (the building) for heating it. Arch.
En-caum, a burning-in or scar. Med.
Epi-caum, ulceration-on (pupils of eye). Med.
-CAUTUS, Lat., cautious, careful; retiring from self-care into caves. *In-cautious, not careful.
Pre-caution, care-beforehand.
-CAVO, Lat., I hollow. See Chene.
Con-cave, with-a hollow or cave.
En-cave, to hollow-in.
Ex-cavate, to hollow-out.
Saxi-cave, a stone-borer. Mal.
Con-CEAL, Lat., to hide-together.
Oc-CECATION, Lat., blindness-(to what is over) against or before (us).
Epi-CEDIUM, Gr. (cedos), (a poem written) upon or after-the grief (of a funeral).
-CEDO, Lat.,* I go, go away, yield.
-CESSUM, to give place, to depart.
Ac-cede, to yield (in opinion)-to.
Ante-cede, to go-before.
Con-cede, to go-with (an opinion).
Ex-cede, to go-out, or beyond.
Inter-cede, to go-between or mediate.
Pre-cede, to go-before.
Pro-cede, to go-on or forward.
Re-cede, to go-back.
Se-cede, to go-apart.
Sue-cede, to go-under or after.
Un-pre-cedented, never-previously going or happening. [Med.]
Abs-cess, a yielding-(of matter) from. [(mark).]
Ac-cess, a going-to.
Ex-cess, a going-out of or beyond (the Ant(e)-cestor, a goer-before.
De-cession, a going-down or away.
Dis-cession, a going-diversely or away.
Retro-cession, a backward-going.
De-cese, a downward-going.
Sur-cession, to yield or give-over (extension); to stop.
In-cessant, going-on.
-CEIVE.* See Ceptus.
-CELE, Gr., a tumour or rupture.*
Broncho-cele, a throat-tumour. Surg.
Cirso-cele, a tumour-of a dilated vein.
Cyato-cele, a tumour (produced by protrusion of the)-bladder. Surg.
En-cephalo-cele, a tumour-(in which is) in-the head, i. e., of the brain.
Enter-cele, a rupture-of the intestine. Surg.
Enter-eipilo-cele, a rupture-of the intestines-and omentum. *Surg.

Ac-CELERATE

-CERNO

-CHORDE

Hemato-cele, a blood-tumour. Surg.
Hydro-cele, a water-tumour. Surg.
Sarco-cele, a flesh-tumour. Surg.
Tracheo-cele, a tumour on the trachea.
Ac-CELERATE, Lat. (celer, swift), to add-speed (to). See next.
Pro-CELEUSMATIC, Gr. (celeus, I bid), animating or urging-forward.
-CENOS, Eng., for Gr. Cainos, which as Lat. is Cainos, new, recent.
Eo-cene, the dawning of the new or present world. Geol.
Neo-cene, less-new or recent. Geol.
Plio-cene, more-recent. Geol.
-CENSEO, Lat., I think, I opine.
Re-cense, to think-over again.
Un-censored, not-(lowered in public) opinion.
-CENTRON, Gr., a goad, a point.
-CENTRUM, Lat., point or centre.
Dia-centeton, a thoroughly-stimulating or goading (medicine).
Para-centesis, a piercing-by the side (of the water, as in tapping). Surg.
Eo-centric, out of-centre.
Geo-centric, (having the earth in the centre. Ast.
Helio-centric, (having the sun in the centre. Ast.
Para-centric, beside the centre. Math.
Meta-centre, a changing-centre, (opposed to the centre of gravity which is fixed.) Hyd.
Mis-centre, (to place) the centre wrongly. [a centre.
Con-centrate, (to bring) together-to -CEPHALE, Gr., head.
A-cephalous, head-less.
A-cephalan, (an animal) without-a head. Mol. [(worm).
Acantho-cephalan, a spiny-headed
Bothrio-cephalous, (having a) pit-in the head. Mol.
Cyno-cephalous, dog-headed. Zool.
Draco-cephal, Draconio-cephal, dragon's-head. Bot.
En-cephalon, (what is) in-the head, i.e., brain. [Bot.
Gymno-cephalous, naked-headed.
Hetero-cephalous, (having) different heads. Bot.
Horo-cephalous, (having) a border (round) the head. Bot.
Hydro-cephalous, (having) water-in the head. Med. [(fish).
Lepto-cephalan, a slender-headed Lyrio-cephalous, lyre-headed. Zool.
Micro-cephalous, little-headed. Bot.
Myel-en-cephalous, marrow-brained. See Encephalon. Zool.
Platy-cephalous, broad-headed. Con.
Sauro-cephalous, lizard-headed. Geol.
Tricho-cephalous, (having a pointed) head-(like) a hair. Mol.
Tri-gono-cephalous, tri- or three-angular-headed. Zool.
-CEPTUS, -CIPIO, Lat., terminations of compounds of Cipitus, taken, CAPIO, I take, seize, draw, allure.
Prin-cep (one) taking-the first (place).
Ac-cept, to take-to (oneself).
Ex-cept, to take or leave-out.
Inter-cept, to seize-between, i.e., in the middle of its passage.
Pro-cept, (that which is) taken or put-before (as an example).
Ap-per-cep, a thorough-taking-to (oneself the meaning of a thing).
Con-ception, a taking-together, i.e., gathering or retaining (of meaning, &c.). [matter].
In-ception, a taking-on or up (of a Dis-ception, a taking-in different ways, controversy.
In-per-reptible, not-(to be) thoroughly-taken (in, seen, or understood).

E-man-cipate, to take-out-of (a master's) hands.
Parti-cipate, to take-a part.
In-cipient, taking-on or up, i.e., beginning.
Omni-per-cipient, thoroughly-taking all things (in mind).
Man-cipate, (one who) takes-in hand (matters); a steward.
Muni-cipal, taking-the gift or duties (of the franchise, &c.).
Prin-cipal, first-taken. [taken.
In-capable, not-(fit) to take or be
In-capacitate, (to make) in-capable.
Con-ceive, Fr., to take (in)-altogether (in mind, &c.).
De-ceive, to allure-from (right or truth). [mind].
Per-ceive, to take-thoroughly (in the Re-ceive, to take-back.
Re-cuperable, (that can be) taken-back.
Ir-re-cov-er-able, not to be taken-back.
Oc-cupy, to seize-in opposition to or before (any one)
-CERAS, Gr., a horn. -CERATOS, of a horn.
A-ceral, horn-less. [Ext.
A-ceran, (an animal) without-horns.
A-delo-ceral, (with) the horns or fore legs-not-manifest, i.e., invisible.
Ammo-ceral, powdery-horned.
Ammono-ceral, (curved like the) horns (on the statue of Jupiter)
Ammon (in the study desert). Mal.
Atheri-ceral, with horns-(like) beards of corn. Bot.
Cheli-ceral, pincher-horned. Ent.
Cteni-ceral, with comb (like)-horns or antennae. Ent.
Curto-ceral, bent-horned. Geol.
Di-cerate or an, a two horned (animal).
Egi-ceral, goat horned. Bot.
Nemo-ceran, a thread-horned (animal).
Ontho-cerate, a straight-horned (animal). Mol.
Peri-ceral, horned-around. Ent.
Petalo ceran, (an animal with) leaf (like)-horns. Ent.
Phenico ceral, purple-horned. Orn.
Uro-ceran, a horn-tailed (animal).
Antho-ceros, horn-flower. Bot.
Bu-ceros, an ox-horned (bird).
Mono-ceros, a uni-corn or one-horn.
Rhino-ceros, a snout-horned (beast).
Tetra-ceros, a four-horned (beast).
Di-cerite, a two-horned (shell). Con.
Di-cerate, (a fossil like) a double-horn. Geol.
Di-cranio-cerite, (a fossil with a) two-forked or headed-horn. Geol. [Geol.
Eury-cerite, a broad-horned (fossil).
Ortho-cerate, (a fossil like) a straight-horn. Geol.
-CERCOS, Gr., tail.
Hetero-cercal, (with) irregular-tail.
Homo-cercal, (with) regular-tail. Ich.
-CERNO, * Lat., I see, I separate, I part, I am sure. -CRETUM, to see.
-CRITICOS, Gr., discerning.
Con-cern, (that which must be) seen-to or looked-together.
Dis-cern, to separate-into parts; so as to see. [others].
Se-cern, to separate-apart (from De-cree, to separate, show, or lay down (as a law).
Dis-cree, discerning; see above.
Re-crem-ent, (that which is) parted-(and thrown) back.
Se-crot, se-crowned; see above.
Se-cretary, one intrusted with secrets. The following are Greek.
Dia-crisis, thorough-distinction or parting. Med.
Ec-crisis, separation-from. Med.

Dia-critic, thoroughly-separating.
Hyper-critic, (one) over-critical.
Onco-critic, a dream-sifter, separator, or interpreter.
Hypo-crite, one under- (a false) sight or appearance.
-CEROS, Gr., -CERA, Lat., wax.
Ozo-cerite, odorous-wax (fossil).
Meli-cere, (a tumour containing a) watery honey. Med. [wax].
Sin-cere, (pure as honey) without -CERPO, for Carpo, Lat., I pluck or Dis-cerp, to pluck-a-part. [pick.
Ex-cerp, to pick-out.
As-CERTAIN, Lat. (certus, sure), (to learn) to-a certainty. See Cerno.
-CERTO, Lat., I strive. See Sertus.
Con-cert, a striving-together. (thing).
De-certation, strife-concerning (some-
Ammo-CETE, Gr. (coite), (a fish making its) bed-in the sand.
Pa-CHA (padi-shah), Pers., foot-of the shah; a title.
Dia-CHALASY, Gr. (chalo, loosen), a thorough-relaxation. Med.
Ori-CHALCH, Gr. (chalcos), mountain-brass (a metal).
Eu-CHARIST, Gr. (charis, grace), a well-giving) thanks.
Pur-CHASE, Fr., to seek or chase-for.
-CHANTE, Fr., from Lat. CASTUS.
Un-chaste, not-pure. [pure
Un-chastised, Un-castigated, not-whipped.
-CHENO, Eng. of Gr. Chaino, written as Lat. Chacno, I gape. Chaw, I gape.
Gastro-chene, a belly-gaper; a worm.
A-chania, (a plant whose corolla does) not-gape. Bot.
In-choate, (to enter) upon-the grasping vide chaos, i.e., the beginning.
-CHETE, Eng. of Gr. Chaitr, written as Lat. Chactr, hair, bristle.
Di-chete, double-bristled.
Hexa-chete, six-haired.
Tetra-chete, four-haired.
Peri-chetial, bristled-around.
Dis-(c)HEVEL, Fr., (to throw) the hair-apart.
-CHIRAL, Eng., from Gr. Chair, hand. [hand. Geol.
Centro-chiral, (having) a spur-in the Dia-chiral, (done) by means of-the hand, i.e., manual. Med.
Pseudo-chiral, false-handed. Zool.
En-chiridion, (a thing) in-the hand, a manual. Lit.
A-CHLAMYDEOUS, Gr., without-tunic (i.e., calyx or corolla).
-CHLOROS, Gr., green. [(mole).
Chlyso-chlore, a gold- and green
Pyro-chlore, fire-green; a mineral.
-CHOLE, Gr., bile, anger. See Chyma.
Caco-choly, badness-of bile. Med.
Epi-choly, over (flow) of bile.
Melan-choly, (overflow of) black bile.
-CHONDROS, Gr., a cartilage.
Hypo-chondria, (disease of) under-cartilage or stomach. Med.
Peri-chondrium, (that which goes) round or covers-a cartilage. Anat.
-CHORDE, Gr., a string or sinew.
Acro-chord, (a serpent with) elevated-sinews or warts.
Hexa-chord, a sixth; a six-stringed (instrument). (ment).
Mono-chord, a single-stringed (instru-Tetra-chord, a four-stringed (instrument. Perhaps the following are also allied. Compare Cord.
Ac-cordant, } having equal strings,
Con-cordant, } and therefore sounding in unison.
Dis-cordant, sounding-differently.

-COCCOS

Digitized by Google

* See the previous Index.

-COCTUS

-COSTA

In-CREMALE

Echino-coccus, spine-cysted (worm)
-COCTUS,* Lat., cooked or ripened.
Coquo, I cook. Cuire, Fr., to cook.
 Con-coction, a cooking-together or up.
 De-coction, a cooking-from or down.
 Pre-coxious, ripened-before (the time)
 Bis-cuit, (a cake) twice-cooked.
 BIA-CODIUM, Gr. (code), (composition made) by means of puppies.
-COGITO, Lat., I think. [ing.]
 Ex-cogitate, (to strike) out-by thinking-cogitant, un-thinking.
 Un-COIF, Fr., to (take) the hood-off.
-COLLA, Gr., glue, cement, seal.
 Auri-col, cement of gold.
 Caro-col, (L. G.), flesh-glue; the name of an adhesive snail.
 Chryso-col, gold-glue or borax.
 Ichthy-col, fish-glue or isinglass.
 Osteo-col, bone-glue; carbonate of lime supposed to have this property.
 Proto-col, the first-seal(ed document).
 Sarc-col, flesh-glue; tree sap.
-COLLUM, Lat., the neck.
 Ac-collate, (a stroke) to or on-the neck
 De-collate, (to cut) the neck-downwards, or (the head) from-the neck.
 Rubi-coll, a red-necked (bird).
-COLO, Lat., I cultivate or inhabit.
-CULTUS, cultivation, use.
 Arri-cultus, inhabiting the fields;
 hence Arrivole, the field-mouse.
 Fluvi-colous, inhabiting-rivers.
 Fungi-colous, living in-fungi. Ent.
 Galli-colous, inhabiting the galls or warts on trees.
 Petri-colous, inhabiting-stones or
 Saxi-colous, rocks; as stone-borers.
 Sylvi-colous, living in the woods. Orn.
 Tubi-colous, dwelling in-a tube. Mal.
 Aus-cultation, (G. L.), the use of-the ear, (listening).
 Agri-culture, cultivation-of the fields.
 Arbori-culture, cultivation-of trees.
 Flori-culture, cultivation-of flowers.
 Horti-culture, cultivation-of a garden.
 In-cult, not-cultivated.
 Oc-cult, covered by-the furrows.
-COLON, Gr. and Lat., a limb, a member, the intestines (which strain the fluids passing through;
 hence) -COLATUS, Lat., strained.
 Meso-colon, the mid or mesentery-of the colon or great intestine.
 Semi-colon, half-the colon or stop dividing a sentence into members.
 Per-colate, } to strain-through or Trans-colate, } across.
 Inter-COLUMNATION, Lat. (columna), (space) between-columns.
CATA-COMB, Gr., a hollow-down or below. See also former Index.
COME, Gr., hair.
 Azyro-come, silver-hair, a plant.
 Chryso-come, (millefoil, whose leaves are like) golden-hair.
-COMITIS, Lat., of a companion,
 from comes, a companion, a count.
 Com-comitant, company-ing-with.
 Vis count, (vice-comes) (one) in place of-the companion (to the general).
EN-COMIUM, Gr. (come, a canton),
 (praise) amongst-the tribe.
 Gero-COMY, Gr., care of-the old.
 Crypto-CONCH, Gr., (an animal with) chambered or concealed-shell.
-CONTRA, Lat., against, or opposite; contr, Fr.
EN-COUNTER, (to come) upon-from an opposite (point); hence, R-encounter, a returning or determined position

Sub-contrary, slightly-opposed or differing. Geom.
-COPE, Gr., a cut. [Rhet.]
 Apo-cope, a cutting-off (from the end).
 Dia-cope, a cutting-through or deeply.
 En-cope, a cutting-in. Med.
 Peri-cope, a cutting-round (so as to extract).
 Syn-cope, a cutting-(to bring) together, i.e., a cutting-short (of life).
 Cornu-COPIUM or -COPIÆ, Lat.,
 (an ornamental) horn-of plenty.
-COPROS, Gr., ordure. [Med.]
 Cheno-coprus, goose-ordure. Ant.
 Cyno-coprus, dog-ordure. Ant Med.
 Ichthy-coprus, fish-ordure. Geol.
 Ornitho-coprus, bird-ordure, guano.
 Ec-coprotic, (causing) discharge of ordure. Med.
-CORD, Eng., from Lat., CORDIS, of the heart; cor, the heart.
 Ac-cord, (heart) to-heart, } agree-
 Con-cord, (heart) with-heart, } ment.
 Dis-cord, division-in heart.
 Re-cord, (to bring) back-to heart or mind.
 Bi-cordate, (having a) double-heart.
 Præ-cordia, (the parts) before or about-the heart. Anat.
 En-courage, Fr., (to put) in-heart.
 Neo-CORE, Gr. (coreo, I sweep), a church or temple-sweeper. Ecc.
 Ex-CORIATE, Lat. (corium), (to strip) the skin-from. See Carnis.
 Hydro-CORIS, Gr., the water-bug.
 Pachy-CORN, Gr. (cormos), thick
 -trunk or body, a fossil fish.
-CORNU, Lat., a horn, an antenna.*
 Bi-corn, two-horned, or a two-horned
 (animal). [Ent.]
 Brevi-corn, (having) short-antennæ.
 Capri-corn, a goat-horned (animal).
 Cavi-corn, a hollow-horned (animal),
 as the antelope.
 Clavi-corn, (having) club or key
 (like)-antennæ.
 Dami-corn, a deer-horned (animal).
 Lamelli-corn, (having) horns-(or antennæ flat as) a plate.
 Lat-corn, (a beetle with) broad-horns.
 Longi-corn, (having) antennæ-as long (as the body). Ent.
 Pleni-corn, a full or solid-horned
 (animal), as deer. [Zool. and Ent.]
 Quadri-corn, a four-horned (animal).
 Serri-corn, (with) saw (like)-antennæ.
 Taxi-corn, (with) antennæ - (like) a yew tree. Ent.
 Tubi-corn, a tube-horned (animal).
 Uni-corn, a one-horned (animal).
-CORPORIS, Lat., of the body. Corpus, the body.
 Ac-corporate, to add-body (to body).
 Con-corporate, together-in a body.
 In-corporate, (to put) into-a body.
 De-CORTICATE, Lat. (cortex), (to strip) the bark-from. See Coriæte.
-COSMOS, Gr., neatness, order;
 hence, the world.*
 Macro-cosm, the great-world; the Mega-cosm, } world.
 Micro-cosm, the little-world (of a man's heart).
 Typo-cosm, a typical or model-world.
 Typo-cosmy, a representation or model-of the world.
-COSTA, Lat., a rib, a side, (a coast).
 Ac-cost, (to come) to-the side.
 Inter-costal, between-the ribs.
 Fissil-costate, having divided-ribs.
 Flexi-costate, having bent-ribs.
 In-equi-costate, having ribs-not-alike.
 Lat-costate, broad-ribbed.
 Penni-costate, feather-ribbed.
 Piant-costate, blunt or smooth-ribbed.

Quadri-costate, four-ribbed.
 Quinque-costate, five-ribbed.
 Vario-costate, differently-ribbed.
MALA-CONSTRACIAN, Gr., Lat., a soft-crustacean (or crustated animal, as a shrimp). See Ostracœm.
-COTYLE, Eng., of Gr. cotyle, a cup or hollow.
 Ac-cotyledon (a plant) without-a cup or seed lobe; hence acotyledonous.
 Di-cotyledon, (a plant with) double -seed lobe. [seed lobe.]
 Mono-cotyledon, (a plant with) one Poly-cotyledon, (a plant with) many -seed lobes.
 Di-cotyl, (an animal having as it were) two-cups or navels; as the peccari.
-CRANION, Gr., the skull, the head.
 Hemi-cranly, half-the head (or a pain there). [Anat.]
 Ole-cranly, the head-of the ulna.
 Peri-cranly or cranium, (the membrane) around-the skull.
-CRASIS, Gr., a mixture (as into horn cups; compare Ceras, a horn), a tempering, a blending; union.
 A-crazy, not-(due) temperament; re-pletion.
 Dys-crazy, undue-mixture (of fluids).
 Epi-crazy, ad or at-temperament (of humours). [ment.]
 Eu-crazy, good or suitable-temperament.
 Idio-crazy, temperament-peculiar to oneself.
 Idio-syn-crazy, the collective-temperament-peculiar (to oneself).
 Syn-cratism, a blending-(of different things) together. [God.]
 Theo-crazy, union-(of the soul) with Oxy-crate, acid-mixture.
-CRASSUS, Lat., thick; allied to great; gross. See Creas.
 In-crasate, to thicken-(by throwing something) in.
 En-gross, (to seize) in-the gross or whole; (to write) in-large.
 Pro-CRASTINATE, Lat. (cras), (to put) off or forward-to the morrow.
-CRATOS, Gr., strength, sway, rule, power, government. *Cracy,
 A-cracy, want-of-strength.
 Aristo-cracy, sway-of the best (in war); hence Aristocrat.
 Auto-cracy, power-(centered) in oneself.
 Demo-cracy, rule-of the people.
 Dulo-cracy, slave-government.
 Gyneco-cracy, woman-government.
 Oculo-cracy, mob-government.
 Pan-cracy, (a wrestling or endeavour to) subdue-all.
 Pluto-cracy, sway-of the wealthy.
 Theo-cracy, Divine-government.
 Timo-cracy, sway-of the honourable.
 Pan-CREAS, Gr., all-flesh; a name of the sweetbread.
-CREATUS, Lat., created, brought into life; from creo, I create or beget.
 In-crete, not-begotten.
 Mis-create, wrongly- begotten; and hence mis-creant. See Credo.
 Pro-create, to bring-forth. [Rits.]
 Re-create, (to bring) back-life or spirit.
-CREDO, Lat., I believe. -CREDI-
 TUS, believed, trusted.
 Ac-credit, (to give) trust-to.
 Dis-credit, to part from-trust.
 In-credible, not-to be believed.
 Mis-creant, (Fr.), one believing -wrongly; in-an infidel.
 Re-creant, (one going) back -from faith; an apostate.
IN-CREMALE, Lat. (cremo, I burn, not (to be)-burned.

* See the previous Index.

- Zygo-dactyl, (a bird having) yoked -toes; two before and two behind.
- A-ADAMANT, Gr. (damao, I tame); (the diamond, because) not-to be tamed or cut into form.
- DAME. See Dam in previous Index.
- Noti-DANE, Gr. (danos, dry; fr. dao, See Dezy); shrivel-back; a fish.
- DAR, Hindoo, a holder; hence, governor, captain.
- Jaghire-dar, the holder-of a jaghire or assignment of land. [fort.]
- Killa-dar, the governor of a country
- Soubah-dah, the holder-of a large province; now a military rank.
- DEAN, DEN.*
- DEBITUS, Lat. (de-habitus, wh. see, held or kept-from); owing, due. Debita, I owe.
- In-debited, (in a state of) owing
- En-deavour, (Fr.) (to be pushing), towards or upon-(one's) duty.
- DECEM; Deni, Lat. ten.
- Duo-decimal, (proceeding by twelves) i. e., by two-and ten.
- Duo-decimo, (a book in which each sheet folds into) two-and ten or (twelve leaves).
- Duo-denum, (a small intestine, in length about the breadth of) two-and ten (or twelve fingers).
- DECEIT, Lat., it is becoming, binding, Decor, comeliness. See Desma.
- In-decent, un-becoming.
- In-decorous, not-comely.
- DECT. See Duchos. DEEM.*
- DEIROUS-DEXIS. See Drious, Diis.
- In-DELEBLE, Lat. (in-de-leo or lino, I smear - not - down); not-to be blotted (out).
- DELOS, Gr., visible, manifest.
- Carmo-delious, (having one, and therefore a plainly) visible-seed (in each cell). Bot.
- Entero-dele, (an animalcule with) visible-inside.
- Uro-dele, (a sort of tadpole with perpetual or) visible-tail.
- DELPHYS, Eng. for Gr. delphus, a mother, a receptacle.
- A-delphi, (those who have) one and the same-mother; (a, together, or as one; hence a collection into one).
- A-delphous, (with) a receptacle (producing) one (bundle, as of stamens).
- Di-a-delphous, (with) a receptacle (producing) two (collections into) one.
- Mon-a-delphous, (with) a receptacle (producing) a single-one; i. e., a single collection.
- Poly-a-delphous, (with) a receptacle (producing) many-collections.
- Di-delphi, (an animal with a) double receptacle (as the opossum). [Zool.]
- Mono-delphous, (with) one-receptacle.
- DEM. See Desma.
- DEMIOS, Gr. (perh. fr. deo, I bind or collect; comp. Desma), public, belonging to the people, Demic.*
- En-demial, (falling as a disease)
- En-demic, { upon-the people (of one place); local.
- Epi-demic, upon (many) people. M. d.
- En-demic, (upon) all-the people.
- DEMNO, Lat. termination of compounds of Damao, I devote to loss, I doom. Damnus, loss, damage.
- Con-demn, to doom-altogether.
- In-demnity, (something) against-loss.
- En-damage, Fr., (to bring) into-loss.
- Carmo-DEMON, Gr. (daimon, fr. dao, I have knowledge, I discern, or learn by separating), an evil-ti-vinity. See Dezy.
- DENDRON, Gr., a tree.
- liothro-dendron, pitted-tree; a fossil.
- Clero-dendron, a tree or shrub-with pebble (shaped drupe).
- Corallo-dendron, the coral-tree.
- Crino-dendron, the lily (like)-tree.
- Litho-dendron, the stony-tree; a name for coral.
- Rhodo-dendron, the rose (laurel)-tree.
- Syringo-dendron, a (fossil) tree-with pipe (like flutings). [fossil.]
- Ulo-or Hylo dendron, wood-tree; a
- Con-DENSE, * Lat. (densus, thick, in a mass, as by chewing; (to bring) close-together. See Dentatus).
- DENTATUS, Lat., toothed. Dens (fr. Gr.; see Odontus), a tooth.
- Bi-dental, or -ate, having two-teeth.
- E-dental, (with) the teeth-out.
- In-dent, (to mark) in-as with a tooth.
- Lati dental, broad-toothed. Geol.
- Multi-dental, (having) many-teeth.
- Tri-dent, a three-toothed (fork).
- DERMA, Gr., (fr. dero, I flay); skin, hide, membrane.
- Astro-derm, star-skin; a fossil fish.
- Blasto-derm, the germinal-membrane.
- Echino-derm, (an animal with a prickly) skin (like) a sea urchin.
- Epi-dermis, (the cuticle, because) upon-the (true) skin. [fish]
- Hetero-derm, irregular-skin; a fossil
- Litho-derm, stony or granulated skin; a sort of echinoderm.
- Malaco-derm, the soft-skinned (beetle). [shell-and skin.]
- Ostraco-derm, (a mollusk with both) Paehy-dermous, or dermatous, thick-skinned; as the elephant.
- Sclero-derm, hard-skin or scale; a fish.
- Taxi-dermy, (the art of) arranging (stuffed) skins.
- DESMA, Gr., a bond, fillet, junction, ligament, or chain. Dro, I bind.
- Amphi-desm, (a mollusk with) a ligament on both sides; i. e., external and internal.
- Anti-desm, (a plant, fit for ropes) instead-of a chain. [ing-together.]
- Chondro-syn-desm, a cartilage-binding.
- En-desis, a binding-in or together. Med.
- Epi-desm, a bandage-upon. Med.
- Syn-desmosis, (the natural) binding-together (of the bones).
- Ana-dem, (a chaplet) binding-up or back (the hair).
- Dia-dem, (a fillet) bound-throughout or about (the head).
- A-syn-deton, (a binding of words) without-a conjunction. Rhet.
- Carmo-det, a fillet-fruited (plant).
- Un-DESPOTIC, Gr. (despotes, a master); not (like) an owner.
- Geo-DESY, Gr., (dao, I divide or burst; out as flie); division-of-the earth (for mensuration).
- DEXTER, Lat. (fr. Gr. dexternal, I take; for the right-hand takes); right handed. See Duchos.
- Amphi-dexter, (one having as it were) both-hands right or powerful.
- In-dexterity, want of right handed (skill).
- A-DIANT, Gr., (diaino, I wet); not-moistened; a plant, maidenhair, which throws off the wet.
- DICATUS, Lat., attributed, set apart; hence shown clearly, consecrated. Comp. Dictus. [to reject.]
- Ab-dicate, to set apart-from (one);
- De-dicate, to set apart-from (others).
- In-dicate, to show (by pointing) to or upon; hence Contra-indication, an opposite or forbidding-indication; Sub-indication, an under or slight indication.
- * See the previous Index.
- Pre-dicate, to show or affirm-previously or before (all); hence, l'asca.
- DICE, Gr., justice, rectitude.
- Syn-dic, (an officer intrusted) with (the administration of)-justice.
- Theo-dicy, the justice-of god.
- DICTUS, Lat., spoken, told, shown, called, pronounced. * Comp. Diis.
- Ad-dict, to call-to; (to give up) to a calling. [positively.]
- Contra-dict, to speak-against or op-
- E-dict, (a thing) spoken-out or published.
- In-dict, to speak-concerning or upon (an accusation).
- In-dite, to speak-concerning; to compose, to write.
- Inter-dict, to speak-between (the intention and the act); to forbid.
- Pre-dict, to fore-tell.
- Ver-dict, a true-saying or declaration.
- Bene-diction, a speaking-well (to). i. e., blessing.
- Male-diction, a speaking-evilly or slanderously.
- Vale-diction, a speaking-farewell.
- Juri-dical, pronouncing-justice or law.
- In-DIGITATE, Lat. (digitus, a finger; (to point) upon or to-with the finger. Comp. Diis).
- DIGNUS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. dice, rectitude, wh. see); worthy, suitable.
- Daigner, Fr., to think worthy.
- In-dignant, (angry, as if used) not-worthy.
- Con-dign, suited-with or to; fit.
- In-dign, un-worthy. (from-worthiness.)
- Dis-dain, (to think one) apart or far
- Ana-DIPLOSI, Gr. (fr. dis, twice); a doubling-back, i. e., repetition.
- Dolicho-DIROUS, Gr. (deire, neck), long-necked.
- Con-DITATION, Lat. (ditis, dis, rich); an enriching-together.
- DITUS, Lat. termin.-of compounds of Datus, given. Dandus, to be given; Donum, a gift. Do, I give, commit, put, appoint or fix. Comp. Dosis.
- Ad-dition, a giving-to; increase;
- Super-addition, Sur-addition, addition-over and above.
- Con-dition, (a thing) fixed or appointed-with (regard to something else); In-condite, not-fixed or shaped (in manners); rude.
- De-dition, a giving-from (one); i. e., a giving-up.
- E-dition, a giving-out.
- Per-dition, a giving (up)-thoroughly (to loss).
- Pro-dition, a giving or bringing-forward or up; a betraying.
- Re(d)-dition, a giving-back.
- Trans-dition, a giving or handing-across; transmission from father to son.
- Trans(d)-ition, (one who) gives or hands-over (another to punishment).
- Deo-dand, (that which is) to be given-to God. [Compare Reddition.]
- Re(n)der, Fr., to give-back or up.
- Auto-date, to give out or fix-before (the time).
- Con-diment, (that which) is given-with (food, as a relish); sauce.
- Als-con-d, to put (oneself) completely-from or out of the way.
- Re-con-dite, put-completely or to-gether-back (from view).
- Con-donation, a forgiving-altogether.
- Par-don, (per), to forgive-thoroughly.
- DIURNUS, Lat., daily. Dies, Lat., a day. Jour, Fr., a day.
- Bi-diurnal, (happening) twice-daily.
- Ad-journ, (to put off to-another) day.

- Peri-ecian (one who) dwells-round about; i. e., living on the same parallel of latitude, but opposite meridians.
- Di-ecous, or ecious, (having) two houses; dwelling-in two, apart, or distinctly; having male and female flowers on distinct individuals.
- Mon-ecous, (having) one-house; dwelling-together. Bot.
- Met-ec, (one who has) changed-(his) dwelling; an emigrant. Ant.
- Xyn-ecy, a dwelling-in common. Ant.
- Dy-ocesan, (having jurisdiction over those) dwelling-throughout (a certain circuit).
- Par-ochial, (Par-ish), (having jurisdiction over those) dwelling-near.
- Andr-oceum, the dwelling or receptacle-of the stamens. See Andrus.
- IER, EER.* -EDRA, -ED.* -EER, see Ier, in.* -EDRA, see Hedra.
- EGON, Gr., I led. -EGESIS, a leading, rule, from Gr. Agos. See Agoge.
- Ex-egesy, a leading-out; e-limination, or elucidation. Rhet.
- Chor-egy, a chorus-leading.
- Strat-egy, (that which pertains to) the leading-of an army; hence, Stratagem.
- EGOREMA, Egoric, Egyric. See Agora.
- EL -IL -OL -YL -ET, frequently are diminutives: some words under this head terminating in cel, as Navicel, belong rather to the termination cle or cule; which see.
- Carin-el, a little-keel. Conch.
- Cereb-el, a little-head. Conch.
- Clitron-el, a little-tunic. Conch.
- Clithr-el, a little-harp. Conch.
- Cochlear-el, a little-screw. Conch.
- Columb-el, a little-dove. Conch.
- Colum-el, a little-pillar. Conch.
- Cost-el, a little-rib. Conch.
- Crist-el, a little-crest. Conch.
- Dolab-el, a little-axe. Conch.
- Fissur-el, a little-cleft. Conch.
- Haust-el, a little-drawer or bucket.
- Hydr-achn-el, a little-water-mite.
- Lab-el, a little-lip; a little-lappet.
- Margin-el, a little-margin. Conch.
- Navic-el, a little-ship. Conch.
- Oc-el, a little-eye. Conch.
- Pat-el, a little-dish. Conch.
- Pedic-el, a little-foot; a division of a peduncle.
- Plicat-el, a little-fold. Conch.
- Rast-el, a little-rake. Conch. [Mus.]
- Ritorn-el, a little-return or chorus.
- Rost-el, a little-beak. Conch.
- Scissur-el, a little-cut or cleft. Conch.
- Scut-el, a little-shield. Conch.
- Stomat-el, a little-mouth. Conch.
- Tereb-el, a little-borer. Mal.
- Testac-el, a little-shell. Conch.
- Turbin-el, a little-top. Conch.
- Vagin-el, a little-sheath. Conch.
- Van-el, a little-fan. Conch.
- Vit-el, a little-existence or yolk. Zool.
- Xat-il, a little-dish. Conch.
- Codi-cil, a little-code or book.
- Motac-il, (a mover of the tail in rapid and) small motions; a wag-tail.
- Rach-il, a little-spine. Bot.
- Tons-il, a little-lobe or globe. Anat.
- Torment-il, a little-grasper. Bot.
- Guer-illa, a little-warfare.
- Vici-il-la, a little-dwelling; from Vicus, i. e., a street. Comp. Econ.
- Cor-ol or Cor-olla, a little-crown. Bot.
- Id-yl-l, a little-resemblance or copy (of verses).
- Amul-et or Amun-et, a little-fortifier or preservative. [Her. Puit.]
- Pall-et, a small-pale or piece of wood.
- Spin-et, a small-(wood of) briars.
- Spin-nar-et, a small-spinning (hole).
- Spir-et, a small-spire.
- Tourniqu-et, a small-bandage, screw, or turn. Surg.
- Vign-et, a small-vine: originally an ornament placed as a head piece to a book.
- ELASIS, Gr., a driving or expulsion.
- Xen-elasy, an expulsion of strangers or foreigners. [(back).
- Un-elastic, not-driving or springing.
- Pros-ELYTE, Gr. (eleutho, I come); (one who) comes-towards or over (in faith).
- ELYTRON, Eng. for Gr. Elutron, a wrapper or sheath. Eluio, Heluo, Heiluo, I roll.
- An-elytrous, without-a-sheath; as the wings of certain insects.
- Brach-elytrous, short-sheathed. Ent.
- Hem-elytrous, half-sheathed. Ent.
- Sten-elytran, a narrow-sheathed (insect). [fore; preface. See Ion.
- Pro-EM, Gr., (that which) goes-be-
- Hemat-EMETIC, Gr. (emeo, I vomit); (causing the) vomiting-of blood.
- EMPTUS, Lat., purchased. Emo, (perh. fr. Gr. emos, mine), I take or take off as mine, I buy.
- Co-emption, a purchasing-all together.
- Ex-emption, a buying-from or off.
- Pre-emption, (the right of) buying-before (others).
- Red-ee-m, to buy-back; to ransom.
- Per-emptory, (of such a character as to cause all doubt to be) taken-thoroughly (away). By a contraction of this word we have Prompt, immediate, ready, done on the moment; whence, Im (in)-promptu, (done) on-the-moment; or in-a-ready (manner); Un-prompted, not-(put in) readiness or fitness.
- EN -ENE. See the previous Index.
- ENETOS, Eng. for Gr. Aienetos, praiseworthy, laudable. Aineo, I praise.
- Ep-enetic, (giving praise) upon-praise.
- Par-enetic, (giving) praise or exhortation-(as if standing) by the side (of one).
- ENNIS, Lat. termination of compound of Annus, a year, a cycle or circuit.
- Bi-ennial, (lasting for) two-years; (happening once in) two-years.
- Dec-ennial, (lasting for) ten-years, &c.
- Nov-ennial, (lasting for) nine-years, &c. [for years.
- Per-ennial, (lasting) through-the-year
- Sept-ennial, (lasting for) seven-years; (happening once in) seven-years.
- Tri-ennial, (lasting for) three-years, &c.
- Mill-ennium, (a space of) a thousand-years.
- Super-annuate, (to declare) beyond or above-years (for active exertion).
- ENT. See Ant.
- ENTERON, Gr. (fr. en, in), that which is more inward; an intestine.
- Dys-entery, illness of the intestines.
- Li-entery, (as it were) a slipperiness-of the intestines (so that the food passes undigested).
- Mes-entery, (a natural membrane in) the middle-of the intestines.
- An-enter, (an animalcule with) no-intestinal(tube). The word Entrails is connected with this class, and probably the verb to Enter.
- EO, I go; see Ion. EO, I am; see Esse.
- EOUS, IOUS, adj., having the qualities of, resembling, like. Comp. Ital.
- Betul-ous, like the birch tree.
- Pergamen-ous, like-parchment.
- Opunt-ions, like-opuntia or Indian fig: Opunti-aceous, like-the class to which opuntia belongs. Comp. Accous.
- EPTUS, Lat. termination of compounds of Aptus, (fr. L. and G. apto, wh. see. I fit, bring near, touch); having reached or obtained.
- Ad-ept, (one who has) reached-to (a certain skill). [taining]-again.
- Re-ad-option, a reaching-to (or obtaining) or pronunciation.
- Ortho-EPY, Gr. (epo, I say), a right-speaking or pronunciation.
- Co-EQUITATION, Lat. (equus, a horse), a riding-together.
- EQUUS, Eng. for Lat. Æquus, equal.
- Co-equal, equal-together; i. e., one with another.
- Ad-equate, equal-to.
- In-iquitous, not-equal or just.
- ERCEO, Lat. termination of compounds of Arceo (fr. Gr. arceo, ergo, I constrain within a fence), I keep forcibly, I drive.
- Co-erce, to keep forcibly-together; to drive (one)-with (you).
- Ex-ercise, a driving-out (of repose); a pushing on; practice, use. For the word Exert; see Serius.
- ERESIS, Eng. -Eresis.
- ERGY, See, from Gr. Ergon. See Urgy.
- ERRANS, Lat., wandering. Erro, Lat. and Gr., I wander, flow away, perish. Akin to Rheo. [place].
- Ab-erration, a wandering-from (its In-erration, a wandering-in.
- In-errable, not(liable to) wander or err.
- Per-erration, a wandering-through (places).
- ES -ESS.
- ESSE, Lat. to be. Ess, being. Assentia, essence, which constitutes the being: fr. Gr. Eimi or Eo, I am. Esuam, I shall be; whence Lat. Sum, I am;
- Co-essential, together; i. e., the same -in-essence or being. [scandal.
- Extra-essential, beyond-(what) is es-Quint-essence, the essence-after five (distillations), the essence.
- Inter-est, (that which) is or exists -(for us, preeminently) among (others); hence, that which concerns (us). [intense].
- Non-ent-ity, a not-being or non-ex-istence, being-from or away.
- Pre-sent, (sum), being-before (the eyes); hence, Omni-present, present-in all (places); Re-present, (to bring) back-the-presence of; to exhibit or personate.
- EST, Eng., from Gr. Euthio or Eto. I eat, I devour. Estum or Essum, Lat., to eat; from Lat. Edo. *See also.
- Derm-est (G) skin-devourer (an insect living on dried skins).
- Com-essation, an eating or feasting-together.
- Ex-ession, an eating-out or through.
- Per-esurient, thoroughly-hungry.
- ESTHESIS, Eng. for Gr. Aisthesis, (fr. aio, I hear); Æsthesis, as Lat., feeling, sense, sensibility.
- An-esth-ey, in-sensibility (when touched).
- Dys-esth-ey, bad or impaired-sense (of touch).
- Ex-ESTUATION, Lat. (estus, hot weather, a boiling of the tide), a boiling or raging-up or out. To this belongs Estuary, a narrow sum, causing the water to rage.

-PECTUM

-ET

-ET. See also El.

Co-ETANEUS, Lat. (etas, an age; perh. for avitas; fr. etum; see Evum); together-in-age.

-ETERNUS, Eng. of Lat. Eternus, (eternus); together or ever eternal, lasting.

Co-eternal, eternal; together or ever Semp(er)-eternal, always or ever (of the past).

Pre-eternity, the eternity before; i.e., -lasting.

Caco-ETHES, Gr. (ethos); a bad-custon or habit. Ethic, belongs.

-ETOS, Gr., a year.

Octa-eteris, (a cycle of eight-years.

Tetra-eteris, (a cycle of four-years.

Tri-eteris, (a cycle of three-years.

(so as to comprehend an insertion of thirty days).

Tri-eterical, (lasting) three-years: Etiesian, annual; belongs.

Hyp-ETHRAL, Gr. (either, the em-pyreum; fr. athro, I kindle); under the air or sky: Ethereal, belongs.

An-ETIC, Gr. (heo, I make to go); casting-lack or re-mitting (pain).

An-EURISM, Gr. (eurus, broad), a backward or complete-dilatation or broadening (of the coats of an artery so as to produce rupture).

-EVUM, Eng. for Lat. Evum (fr. Evon, a year; perh. fr. aeon); ever-being; an; participle of Ev: see Esse, an age.

Co-eval, together or the same-in age.

Prim-eval, (belonging to) the first age, or ages.

-EXIS. See Echo. -EY. See.*

FACE, * FACTION.* Also see Fec-tum.

De-FALCATE, Lat. (falc, a sickle or falchion, a hook); (to cut) from (as with) a sickle; hence, Defalcation; Falchion, belongs.

-FALLO, Lat., I deceive. Falsus, deceived; erring, failing, false.

In-fallible, (that can) not-err. [-deceit.

Un-fallacious, (not) deceiving. [-deceit.

Re-fel, (to) repel or throw back.

De-fault (Fr.), a failing-from (ex-celence). Fail, Fallacious, False, Falter, Fault, Fell, Fr. Fall, belong.

Fall, Balk, are akin.

Pro-FANE, Lat. (fanum, fr. Naos, wh. see); (not) holy enough to stand with n, but only before-the temple.

FANS, Lat., speaking. Fari, (fr. Phemi, wh. see); to speak. Fabula, a little tale, speech, or conversa-tion.

In-fant, (one who can) not-speak; a child or boy; hence Infantry (foot boys).

Ne-fandous, not-to be named or spoken.

Af-fable, (inviting) conversation to or with; (willing to be) spoken-to.

In-ef-fable, not-to be spoken-out.

-FARAN, Anglo-Sax., to fare or go.

For-fare, to go forth; to depart or perish.

Mis-fare, to go badly or wrongly.

Fare, Ferry, belong.

-FARIOUS, Eng., Fariam; Lat., prob. fr. Farius, changing, varied.

Bi-farius, varied or arranged-in two (rows).

Multi-farius, much or many-varied.

Omni-farius, of all-varieties.

Con-FARREATION, Lat. (farreum, wheat cake; fr. far, corn); (mar-

-ing by eating a cake of) four

-FATIGO, Lat. (poss. fr. af-fatim -ago, un-speakably-I drive; see A, Fans, and Agoge); I drive abundantly, I tire.

De-fatigate, to tire-down; hence, In-defatigable, not (to be) tired-down or completely.

Un-fatigued, not-tired.

In-FATUATED, Lat. (fatuus, fool-ish, mad, possessed, as speaking prophets; see Fans.); imbued with folly. Fatuous, belongs.

De-FECATE, Lat. (faex, the dregs; perh. that which is done or done with: see Fectum.); (to clear) from dregs; (to let) the dregs-(go) down.

Feces, belong.

-FACTUM.* Lat. of compounds of Factum, to do, act, make, produce, or cause; from Facio, I do. Factus, done, Ec. Fio, (fr. Gr. Phy, wh. done, Ec. I am made or become. Facies, face, appearance, make.

Af-fect, to act-towards or upon; to make-at, or aim at.

Con-fect, (a sweetmeat formed by) making or putting (a mixture) to-gether; hence, Confit.

De-fect, (want or absence) from (what should be) done; (depar-ture) from-(what has been) done.

Effect, (that which comes) from-an act.

In-fect, to cause (diseases) -in.

Pre-fect, one made or set-over (an- other).

Per-fect, thoroughly-done or finished; Im-perfect, not-perfect; Preter-per-fect, beyond or past-and perfect; Preter-imperfect, past-but not finished; Preter-plus(s)-perfect, past-and more than-perfect.

Re-fect, to make or refresh-again.

Un-af-fected, not-making-to (oneself, airs); not-made-up; natural.

Bene-faction, a doing-well (to).

Made-faction, a making-wet.

Male-faction, an evil-doing.

Pate-faction, a making-open.

Putre-faction, a becoming-putrid.

Tab-faction, a making-tepid or warm.

Tepe-faction, a making-by hand.

Manu-facture, a making-by hand.

Ol-factory, causing-the (power of) smelling.

Bene-fice, (that which) does-good (to).

Lani-fice, a making-of wool (len fabrics).

Or-i-fice, (the place where) a mouth (the place where one's) acts

Of-fice, (the place where one's) acts or business-(come) before (one); or business-(coming) before also, business-(coming) before (one); duty: Official, belonging to a workshop: Officious, busy, meddling.

Sacri-fice, a making-holy.

Suf-fice, to act or be-(just) under (the required excellence, but so as to answer).

Muni-ficent, making-gifts.

Pro-ficient, making (way)-forward.

Pro-fit, (that portion which) makes -for (or comes to, one).

Ampli-fy, to make-large.

Are-fy, to make-dry.

Beati-fy, to make-blessed.

Cale-fy, to make-hot.

Carni-fy, (to increase in) or make -flesh.

Dulci-fy, to make-sweet.

Edi-fy, to make-a house; to build up in knowledge.

Fructi-fy, to make-fruitful.

In-demi-fy, to make (safe) against Lab-e-fy, to make-to totter.

Leni-fy, to make-mild.

Magni-fy, to make-great.

Modi-fy, to make or bring-(into a certain) measure.

Molli-fy, to make soft or tender.

Morti-fy, to cause-death or great in-jury; to become-dead.

Mundi-fy, to make-clean.

Nulli-fy, to make-of none (effect).

Ossi-fy, to make-bone.

Paci-fy, to make-peace(ful).

Petri-fy, to make-(into) rock.

Quali-fy, to make-such (as is neces-sary).

Rami-fy, to make-(into) branches or

Rare-fy, to make-rare or thin.

Rati-fy, to make-established (after consideration).

Recti-fy, to make-right.

Sangui-fy, to produce-blood.

Satis-fy, to become-sufficient (for).

Speci-fy, to produce or show-specially (or so that one may see clearly).

Multi-fy, to make or show-(to be) foolish.

Testify, to make-witness (of).

Torre-fy, to make-hot.

Tume-fy, to become-swollen.

Veri-fy, to make or show-(to be) true

Vill-fy, to make-vile or of no value.

Vitri-fy, to make-(into) glass.

Damni-fic, producing-loss.

Dolori-fic, producing-pain.

Male-fic, producing-bad or injury.

Morbi-fic, producing-disease.

Omni-fic, producing-all things.

Pro-li-fic, producing-offspring.

Sapori-fic, producing-savour.

Semini-fic, producing-seed.

Somni-fic, producing-sleep.

Soporifi-fic, producing-forced sleep.

Sudori-fic, producing-sweat.

Tran(s)-fic, production of-(passage across from one person or place to another).

Lapidi-fication, production of stone.

Ludi-fication, a making-sport.

Melli-fication, production of honey.

Nidi-fication, the making-a nest.

Thuri-fication, production of (the smoke from)-incense.

Post-fact, after-the-deed. (with (one) Af-fair (Fr.), acts or business-to or De-faillance, (a being adverse to) from -doing; an undoing

Un-feasible, not-to be done

De-fect, to act or drive-down; to undo.

Un-featured, not-(having the) make or form (of any part of the face).

Counter-feit, to make-(a thing re-semble one) of opposite-(character).

For-feit, to cause-to be abroad; i.e., separate (from the owner).

Sur-feit, an over-doing or feeding

De-fate, to deprive of or destroy-the face, or that which shows the make or character; (to bring) down from -(former) appearance.

Ef-face, (to rub) out-the face, make, or appearance.

Sur-face, the face, make, or appear-ance-upon (a thing).

Super-ficies, (that which is) upon-the face, or make; the outermost fac-e, or part or far from-(being)

Diff-icult, make-to be done. Face, Facile, done; hard to be done. Face, Facile, Facinorous, Fact, Fashion, Feasi-ble, Feat, Feature, Fit, belong.

Con-FEDERATE, Lat. (foedus, a league; prob. fr. Fido, wh. see); joined-in league. Federal, belongs.

-FENDO, Ant. Lat., I strike. Fensura, to strike.

De-fend, to strike-down (a blow aimed at one); hence, In-de-fensible, &c.

Fore-fend, (Sax. L.) to strike (so as to turn from its course)-beforehand (or annoy

Of-fend, to strike against; to wound

Super-FENESTRAL

-FILUM

-FLATUS

Super-FENESTRAL, Lat. (fenestra, perh. fr. Phaeno, wh. see), above the window.

FERO, * Lat., I bear, carry, bring, have, or produce. Comp. Phero. Con-fer, to bring-together (persons or facts in order to decide); to carry (a gift) to or with (a person); to unite a gift with a person.

De-fer, to bear or put-off or from.

Dis-fer, to bear i. e., to go apart.

In-fer, to bring-in or on (from something before); to deduce.

Of-fer, to bring-before or against.

Pre-fer, to carry or put-before.

Pro-fer, to carry or bring-forward.

Re-fer, to carry (the eye, mind, &c.) back; to turn to or back.

Trans-fer, to carry-across.

Inter-fer, to carry (oneself) or go between.

Circum-fer-ence, (a line) carried De-ferent, carrying-down or about; De-fer-ence, a carrying (oneself) down or humbly.

Anthi-ferous, bearing-an anther. Bot.

Aquili-fer, an eagle or standard bearer.

Argenti-ferous, producing-silver.

Axi-ferous, having-a centre (without leaves). Bot.

Bacci-ferous, bearing-berries.

Byssi-fer, the bearer of a byssus or organ of adhesion. Mal.

Canali-ferous, having-a channel. Zool.

Carboni-ferous, producing-coal.

Cili-ferous, having-(vibratory organs like) eyelashes. [neal.

Cocheniili-ferous, producing - cochini-fer, the bearer-of - cochini-fer, (a dyestuff) shell. [fir tree).

Coni-fer, the bearer of a cone, (as a corymbi-fer, the bearer-of a corymb, or flat headed kind of inflorescence.

Cruci-fer, (a tree) bearing-flowers like a Maltese cross.

Cupuli-fer, the bearer-of a cup. Bot.

Dapi-fer, a feast-bringer or server.

Dorsi-ferous, bearing-(seeds) on the back (of the leaf).

Flabelli-ferous, bearing-a fan.

Foramini-ferous, bearing-a (small) pierced opening.

Glandi-ferous, acorn-bearing.

Gutti-ferous, bearing-(as it were) drops (of water). Bot.

Lacti-ferous, producing-milk.

Mammari-ferous, having-a breast.

Margariti-ferous, producing-pearls.

Melli-ferous, producing-honey. [fish.

Monilli-fer, necklace-bearer; a fossil

Moschi-ferous, producing-musk.

Morti-ferous, producing-death.

Osculi-ferous, having-a little mouth.

Ossi-ferous, producing-bones.

Ovi-ferous, (pertaining to) the production-of eggs. [hair.

Pili-ferous, having-(a point like) a Plumbi-ferous, producing-lead.

Prolifi-ferous, bearing-a shoot or progeny.

Purpuri-ferous, producing-purple dye.

Roti-fer, a wheel-bearing (animalcule).

Securi-fer, hatchet-bearer. Ent.

Signi-ferous, having-signs or marks.

Somni-ferous, producing-sleep.

Spiri-fer, the bearer-of a spiral (shell).

Stoloni-fer, the bearer-of a stolon or runner.

Umbelli-ferous, bearing-an umbel, or inflorescence proceeding from a single point.

Uvi-ferous, producing-grapes.

Veli-ferous, carrying-sails.

Infertile, not-bearing, unproductive.

Fertile, Feraculous, belong.

FERVESCO, Lat., I begin to grow hot or throw up bubbles. Ferveo (perh. fr. Gr. pur, fire; see Pyr); I am hot. Ferventum, that which makes or grows hot or ferments.

Effervesce, to begin to bubble-up or out.

Un-ferment, not-ardent or hot.

Un-fermented, not-fermented.

Un-febrile, not-(producing) fever or heat.

Fervent, Ferment, belong.

FESSUS, Lat., termination of compounds of Fessus, acknowledged.

Fator (fr. Gr. phao, I bring to light or show); I own to. See Phaizo.

Con-fess, to acknowledge-altogether.

Pro-fess, to acknowledge-before (all).

IN-FEST, Lat. (festus, feasting; welcoming to the hearth; fr. Gr. hestia, a hearth, prob. fr. hizo, I sit); (to make) not-festive or easy.

Fest, Festal, Festive, Festival, belong. See Hedra.

-FETUS, or Fetus, Lat. (fr. feo, I beget, akin to Gr. phuo; see Fhyo); conception, progeny. Fœtus, fruitful.

Eff-fete, out of or having lost-(the capability of) production; worn-out.

Super-fetate, to co-exist-upon or after (another conception).

In-fecund, not-fruitful.

-FIDI, Lat., I clove or divided. Fissum, to cleave; Findo, I cleave.

Centi-fidus, divided-(into a) hundred (parts).

Multi-fid, (having) many-clefts, or an animal having, &c.

Quadri-fid, (having) four-clefts.

Tri-fid, (having) three-clefts. Fissure, belongs.

-FIDO, * Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. peitho; see Pithecos); I trust. Fidelis, trusting, believing, faithful.

Con-fide, to trust-altogether; (to put one's trust-with (another).

Dis-fide, (to be) apart or far from trusting; to not to trust.

Af-fy, to trust-to, or (give) to-the faith of (as in marriage).

De-fy, (to be) averse from-believing; to distrust, to declare a liar; hence, to challenge.

Af-fidavit, he has (given his) faith or oath-to.

In-fidel, not-trusting or believing.

Per-fidy, (a breaking) through-faith.

Soli-fidian, (one advocating the necessity of) faith-alone. Theol.

En-fest, to invest with-a trust or fee.

In-festation, (investment with) -a trust. Faith, Fealty, Fee, Feod, Fiance, Fidelity, belong.

-FIGURA, Lat., figure. Fingo (perh. akin to pingo, I paint; see Pictus); I mould, form, or fashion. Fictus, formed, feigned, fictitious.

Eff-fig, (that which is) fashioned-out; an image.

Con-figure, to form or put-together; to make (of like proportion) with (another).

Dis-figure, (to pull) apart; i. e., to destroy-the form (of).

Pre-figure, to form or image-before-hand.

Trans-figure, to cross or change-(from form to) form.

Un-feigned, not -fictitious. Feign, Fictile, Fiction, Figment, Figure, belong.

De-FILE, Sax., to be-foul; i. e., to make-foul.

-FILUM, Lat., thread, line.

De-file, (a narrow) thread (like passage)-down (between hills).

Pro-file, (the out) line-of the front (or prominent part of the face, &c.)

Pur-file, (Fr.) (an old trimming made) by-thread; hence, to Purle, to trim with purtle.

En filade, (to march, or sweep with artillery) in-a thread or straight line. File, Fillet, a thread bandage, also the nervous or thready and circular thigh of veal, belong.

-FIN, Fr., finished highly, polished, fine. See Finis.

Re-fine, to fine-by throwing the refuse back; to purify again.

Super-fine, above or beyond-fine.

Finesse, Finical, belong.

-FINDO, * See also Fidi.

FINIS, * Lat., that for which anything is done; the finish, end, limit, or boundary. See Fictum.

Con-fine, (to keep) together-in-a limit.

De-fine, (to lay) down-the limits (of).

Pre-fine, to limit-beforehand.

Af-finity, (adjacency of boundary) to boundary; connection.

In-finite, not-bounded; end-less.

Un-finished, not-(brought to) end.

Final, Final, Finite, belong.

-FIRMUS, * Lat., upbearing, strong. See Fero.

Af-firm, (to add) strength-to (as by positive declaration).

Con-firm, (to unite) one's own strength-with; (to add) complete strength (to).

In-firm, not-strong.

Ob-firm, to strengthen-against; to make obdurate. Firm, Firmament, which uphold, as the ancients thought, the stars, belong.

Con-FISCATE, Lat., (fiscus, a money bag or hanaper, poss. fr. Gr. phuscos, a bladder; fr. Physson, wh. see); (to forfeit and put) with-(the money in the public treasure) bag or hamper. Fiscal, belongs.

Tri-FISTULARY, Lat. (fistula, a pipe; fr. Gr. phusao, I inflate; see Physson); (having) three-pipes.

-FIXUS, Lat., fixed, joined. Figo (fr. Gr. pegno, I fix; see Pegin); I fasten.

Af-fix, to join-to (something).

Con-fix, to fix-completely or together.

De-fix, to fix-down.

In-fix, to fasten or pierce-in.

Per-fix, to fix or settle-thoroughly.

Pre-fix, to join-before.

Suf-fix, to join-under or after.

Trans-fix, to fix-across (with an arrow).

Dis-com-fit, (to throw) apart-(what was before) joined-together; or, (to throw) a junction-completely-apart; to rout.

-FLAGRO, Lat. (fr. Flatus, a blast; and akin to Gr. Phlego, I flicker, or burn, wh. see; being all words formed from sound); I flame or burn vehemently, as in the blast.

Con-flagration, a burning-(of all) together; complete-burning.

De-flagration, a burning-down or away.

Flagrant, belongs.

In-FLAME, Lat. (flamma), to imitate with flame; (to put) flame-within. See Phlego.

-FLATUS, Lat., a blowing or blast. Flo, I blow. [bladder).

Eff-flate, to blow or puff-out. (as a)

In-flate, to blow-into (and distend).

Per-flate, to blow-through.

Suf-flate, to blow-up (as from) under.

Af-flation, a blowing or breathing-to, towards, or upon.

Con-flation, a blowing-(of two instruments) together.

Dis-flation, a blowing-apart. Chem.

Af-flatus, blast or breath-to or upon;

-FLEXUS

-FORMA

-FRAYER

In-spiration. Flutulent, Flute, be-long.
FLEET. See the previous Index.
FLEXUS, Lat., bent. Flecto, I bend.*
 Circum-flex, bent-round.
 De-flect, to bend-down or aside.
 In-flect, to bend-in (from a straight course).
 Re-flect, to bend-back (as the mind).
 Genu-flection, a bending of the knee.
 Flexible, Flexion, belong.
-FLICTUS, * Lat., thrown, dashed.
Fligo (prob. fr. the sound, and al-lied to Eng. flog; and poss. to Phlego, from the burning pain); I beat, dash.
AF-flict, to throw-to or on (the ground); to depress.
 Con-flict, a dashing or fighting-to-gether. (thing)-upon.
 In-flict, to throw-in; to dash (some)-
 Pro-figate, beaten or driven-before; routed, utterly ruined.
-FLORIS, * Lat., of a flower. Flos, that which flows from fulness of vigour; a flow-er or fruit. See Fluens.
 De-flour, (to take) the flower or beauty from.
 Effloresce, (to begin to put out flowers).
 Da-phne-florous, laurel-flowered.
 Echii-florous, flowered (like) viper's bugloss.
 Grandi-florous, (having) large-flowers.
 Sessili-florous, (having) flowers-seated or placed (immediately on the stem).
 Tenui-florous, slender-flowered. Floral, Flower, Flour, Flourish, belong-
-FLUENS, * Lat., flowing. Fluens, having flowed; a flux or flowing.
Fluo, (fr. Gr. phleo, I gush); I flow. (ing).
 See Phyllon.
AF-fluent, flowing-to; hence, abound-
 Circum-fluent, flowing-around.
 Con-fluent, flowing-together.
 Dif-fluent, flowing-apart.
 Ef-fluent, flowing-out.
 Inter-fluent, flowing-between.
 Melli-fluent, flowing-with honey.
 Pro-fluent, flowing-forward.
 Re-fluent, flowing-back.
 De-fluxion, a flowing-down.
 In-fluence, a flowing-in or on (as of some power). (lat-in).
EF-fluvium, a flowing out; an ex-hasty-raci-fluvius, flowing-with storax.
 Super-fluvius, over-flowing (and therefore wasting). Fluent, Flux, Flue-tuate, belong.
Re-FOCILLATE, Lat. (focillo, I cherish or warm; fr. focus, a hearth); to warm-again.
Asa-FÆTIDA, Lat. fœtid-lasar; a gum.
UN-FOILED, Fr. (faillir, to miss, fail; fr. Lat. Fallo: wh. see); not (made to) fail.
FOLD, FOLK, FORD. See previous Index.
-FOLIUM, * Lat. (fr. Gr. Phyllon, wh.
 see); a leaf.
 De-foliate, (to throw or pull) down the leaves. (thin pieces)
 Ex-foliate, (to cast) out or off-leaves or alder-leaved.
 Alci-foliosus, narrow-leaved.
 Angusti-foliosus, goat-leaf;
 Capri-folium, suckle, which has leaves like the milk of the goat
 i. e., honey Jupiter.
 Cordi-foliosus, (having) heart (shaped) leaves.
 Lati-foliosus, broad-leaved.
 Myrtil-foliosus, myrtle-leaved.
 Serpylli-foliosus, thyme-leaved.
ANQUE - foil, five-leaved (clover).

Mille-foil, Tre foil, and Foliage, belong.
-FORES, Lat., a folding door, a valve.
 Foro, I bore, I pierce a hole or a door. See Poros.
 Circum-foraneous, (wandering) about
 (from door to) door.
 Un-foreign, not-distant or out of doors.
 Bi-forate, doubly-pierced.
 Bi-foro, Bi-forine, Bi-forian, (that which has, or having) two-doors or valves.
 Per-forate, to pierce-through.
 Quadri-foro, (an animal having) four valves (as a covering of the tube).
 Tri-forium, (a passage as it were) pierced (under the roof and running round)-three (sides of a cathedral); or perhaps called from the windows which light it often having three glazed portions or openings.
-FORMA, * Lat. (poss. by metath. fr.
 Gr. Morphe, wh. see; but more likely akin to Eng. frame); form, resemblance, shape.
 Con-form, (to make) together or alike
 -in form.
 De-form, (to take) the form-from.
 Dif-form, scattered or irregular-in form. Bis.
 Ef-form, to shape-out.
 In-form, (to bring) into form (as the mind), to im(plan)-facts or forms.
 Per-form, to form or do-thoroughly.
 Pre-form, to shape-beforehand.
 Re-form, to form-again.
 Trans-form, to cross or change (from form to) form. (badly).
 Mal-formation, a shaping-wrongly or Acinaci-form, scimitar-shaped.
 Aculei-form, prick or sting-shaped.
 Aspergilli-form, eel-shaped.
 Anguilli-form, brush-shaped; A(d)-
 Aspergilli-form, eel-shaped.
 sperg-illus, a little (brush for) sprinkling-on (persons holy water).
 Bi-form, (having) two-forms.
 Byssi-form, shaped-(like) fine flax, or a byssus.
 Campani-form, bell-shaped.
 Cordi-form, heart-shaped.
 Cotti-form, cup-shaped.
 Craboni-form, hornet-shaped.
 Crateri-form, goblet-shaped.
 Cunei-form, wedge-shaped.
 Cupuli-form, cupola-shaped.
 Cyathi-form, cup-shaped.
 Cymbi-form, boat-shaped.
 Digitali-form, finger-shaped.
 Dolabri-form, axe-shaped.
 Ensi-form, sword-shaped.
 Equi-seti-form, horse-tail-shaped.
 Falei-form, sickle-shaped.
 Filicci-form, fern-shaped.
 Filabelli-form, fan-shaped.
 Flagelli-form, whip-shaped.
 Fungi-form, fungus-shaped.
 Fusti-form, spindle-shaped.
 Hasti-form, dart-shaped.
 Hippo-podi-form, shaped (like)-hip-popodium or horse-foot (plant).
 Hypo-crateri-form, shaped (like what is -under-a cup; i. e., a saucer or salver. -pourer-in or funnel.
 In-fundib-uli-form, shaped as a little
 Iso-podal (in length).
 Lenti-form, lens-shaped.
 Lernei-form, shaped as a sort of parasitic worm.
 Lingui-form, tongue-shaped.
 Litu-form, clarion-shaped.
 Mespili-form, medlar-shaped.
 Monile-form, necklace-shaped.
 Multi-form, of many-shapes.
 Muscari-form, brush-shaped.
 Musci-form, fly-shaped.
 Napi-form, turnip-shaped.
 Nummi-form, coin-shaped.

Omni-form, of all-shapes.
 Ovi-form, egg-shaped.
 Panduri-form, fiddle-shaped.
 Patelli-form, limpet-shaped.
 Pedi-form, foot-shaped.
 Pelti-form, pelta or half-moon-shaped.
 Penne-form, wing-shaped.
 Piri-form, pear-shaped.
 Pisi-form, pea-shaped.
 Pistilli-form, pestle-shaped.
 Poculi-form, cup-shaped.
 Pyri-form, pear-shaped.
 Radici-form, root-shaped.
 Remi-form, oar-shaped.
 Renti-form, kidney-shaped.
 Scalari-form, ladder-shaped.
 Scalpri-form, knife-shaped.
 Scopi-form, broom-shaped.
 Scuti-form, buckler-shaped.
 Securi-form, axe-shaped.
 Strombuli-form, top-shaped.
 Unci-form, hook-shaped.
 Uni-form, of one-shape or appearance.
 Vermi-form, worm-shaped.
-FORS, Lat., chance, hap- Fortuna,
 the fortune or bearing of things.
 See Fero.
 Un-fortuitous, not-(coming) by chance.
 Mis-fortune, a chance-(coming) amiss.
-FORTIS, * Lat. (fr. Gr. herctos or erctos, fenced; fr. ergo, I coop in); braced, strong. See Erceo.
 Con-fort, (to unite one's) strength
 -with; to strengthen-a-together;
 Dis-comfort, (the being) apart from -comfort; Re-comfort, to comfort
 -again.
 Ef-fort, strength-(put) forth or out.
 De-force, (to keep) from by strength.
 Law. To En-force, to imbue with -strength; Per-force, by-strength or force, with Fort and Force, belong.
-FRACTUS, Lat., broken. Frango, Frago, in compounds, Fringo,*
 (fr. Gr. rhegnuo or fregnuo, I break or wreck); I break. See Rhagus.
 Con-fract, broken-a-together; craggy.
 In-fract, to in-fringe, wh. see.
 Re-fract, to break or bend-back.
 An-fractuous, breaking or "twisting
 -about. (or down).
 Ir-re-fragable, not-to be broken or Re-frangible, (that can be) broken or bent-back.
 Nau-frage, ship-breaking or wreck.
 In-fringe, to break-in upon. Frangible,
 Fracture, Fracture, belong.
Re-FRAIN, Lat. (frenum, a rein, poss. akin to Gr. phren, the midriff, heart, reins, or diaphragm, which bridle back the upper part of the lower viscera; fr. phrasso, I fence; see Phractus); to bridle-back (oneself).
-FRANC, Fr. (poss. Eng. rank; i. e., wild, luxuriant; or Lat., feroc, fierce, wild; or Fr., franchir, to leap over boundaries); free.
 Af-franchise, (to bring) freedom-to.
 Dis-franchise, (to throw) apart from freedom; to deprive of freedom.
 En-franchise, (to bring) into-freedom.
 Frank, belongs.
 Con-FRATERNITY, Lat. (frater, a brother); brotherhood-collectively.
 Fraternal, Friar, belong.
-FRAYER, Fr. (perh fr. Lat. frio, rub into pieces or crumble; fr. Gr.
 rhao or raio, I break or shatter akin to Rhagus; wh. see); to rub or wear out, destroy, be expensive or weary (perh. akin).
Frayure, Frayeur, a tearing away rubbing of a deer's horns against trees in flight; a horns away.

- ruffling or rubbing of temper; fear, fright.
- Al-fray, a rubbing or jostling to or against; a collision or brawl.
- De-fray, (to pay) away the charges or expense; to discharge (a debt).
- Al-fright, (to bring) fear-to. Friable, Friable, Frivolous, petty, fond of crumbs or tritles; Fripper, Fritter, belong.
- Trans-FRETATION, Lat. (fretum, a frith, perh. akin to Gr. porthmos, a ferry; fr. peiro, I pass. See Poros; also Porto); (passage) across a frith.
- Con-FRICATION, Lat. (frico, I rub or chafe, as stiff things or porcupines' bristles do; poss. fr. Gr. phrisso: see Frigidus); a rubbing-together.
- FRIGIDUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. phrisso, I am rough or bristle; I shudder so as to make the flesh bristle or creep; akin to Fr. frissonner, and Eng. rigid); cold.
- In-frigidate, (to bring) cold-upon; to chill.
- Re-frigerate, to make cold again; to refresh. Frigid, belongs.
- FRONTIS, Lat., of the face. Frons (perh. fr. foramina, openings, as of the eyes), the face. See Fora.
- Al-front, (to abuse) to the face.
- Con-front, (to stand with) faces-together; or face to face.
- Ef-frontery, the facing-(a matter) out. Bi-fronted, double-faced.
- Usu-FRUCT, Lat. (fructus, fruit, fr. Gr. Phero, I bear, wh. see); the use or enjoyment of the fruits or profits. Fruit, Fructify, Frugal, taking care of the fruits of one's labour, belong.
- FUGIO, Lat. (fr. Gr. phengio, I flee; akin to Phobos, wh. see); I flee. Fuga,* I put to flight or expel.
- Re-fuge, a fleeing-back or away.
- Regi-fuge, a fleeing-of the king.
- Subter-fuge, a fleeing or escape-beneath (an appearance). [Alc.]
- Vermi-fuge, an expeller-of worms.
- Centri-fugal, fleeing from the centre.
- Fugacious*, Fugitive, belong.
- FUL. See the previous Index.
- FULGEO, Lat. (fr. Gr. Phlego, wh. see); I shine or am bright.
- Eff-ulgent, shining-out.
- Pro-fulgent, shining-forth.
- Re-fulgent, shining-back; reflecting splendour.
- Pre-fulgency, brightness-before or above (others). Fulgent, belongs.
- FUMUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. thuo, I rush; see Thymos); smoke, vapour.
- Ef-fume, to smoke or breathe-out.
- In-fume, (to dry) in-smoke.
- Per-fume, (that which) smokes-throughout (a place).
- Suf-fumigate, to fumigate or smoke-(as from) under. Fume, belongs.
- FUNCTUS, Lat., discharged, performed. Fungo, (possib. fr. Finis, wh. see); I perform or bring to an end.
- De-funct, (one having) discharged-(and laid) down (the duties of life).
- Per-functory, discharged or run-through (for the purpose of getting rid of). Function, belongs.
- FUNDUS, Lat., the bottom or base. Fundo (akin to Gr. benthos, bathos, depth; and poss. fr. phuo, I plant; see Phyo); I found or lay the base of.
- Pro-found, (having) the bottom or end (prolonged or drawn far)-forward; with a base far away or deep.
- Un-founded, (having) no base.
- Co-founder, (one who) founds-with (another); to Found, to Founder, to go to the bottom, Fundament, belong.
- Bi-FURCATE, Lat. (furca, a fork; poss. fr. Fractus, broken, divided; wh. see); (divided into) two-forks or branches. Fork, Furcation, belong.
- FUSCUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. phosco, I shine; fr. phao: see Phaino); scorched, brown, tawny, dark.
- Ob-fuscate, to darken-(a thing where it is) opposed (to the sight); to darken-over; to blind-so that one runs) against (everything).
- Sub-fusc, slightly-dark. Fuscous, belongs.
- FUSUS,* Lat., poured out, as on the ground, spread, scattered. Fudo, Fundo (fr. Gr. huo: see Hydor); I pour out.
- Al-fuse, to pour-to or upon.
- Circum-fuse, to pour-around.
- Con-fuse, to pour or mix-together (so as to render indistinct).
- Dis-fuse, to scatter-in different parts.
- EF-fuse, to pour-out.
- In-fuse, to pour-in or among.
- Inter-fuse, to pour-between.
- Per-fuse, spread-throughout.
- Pro-fuse, poured-forth or forward (in abundance).
- Suf-fuse, to spread-beneath.
- Trans-fuse, to pour-across (from one to another). [Bot.]
- Humi-fused, spread-on the ground.
- Con-found, to confuse; wh. see.
- Re-fund, to pour-back (money).
- Fuse, to Found, to melt, belong.
- FUTO, (Ant. Lat.), I quench, I allay (hot water by pouring cold upon it). See Fusus.
- Con-fute, to quench-altogether; to stop an assertion; hence, In-con-futable.
- Re-fute, to quench-(so as to cast) back (the assertion).
- FY,* See also Fectum.
- GAGE,* Fr. (fr. Lat. vas, vadis, one who goes for another into a cause; see Vado); a pledge or hire.
- Dis-gage, to part or relieve-from pledge.
- En-gage, (to bring) into-(a state of being) pledged; hence, Co-engage; Dis-engage, to part-from being pledged; Pre-engage, to engage-beforehand; Re-engage, to engage-again.
- Mort-gage, a pledge-which dies, or is lost for ever unless redeemed.
- Gage* and Wage, belong.
- GALAXY. See Lac.
- GALE, Gr., a wensel.
- Myo-gale, the mouse (like)-weasel.
- Phasco-gale, the pouched-weasel.
- GAMON,* Gr., a wedding, joining, nuptials. Gameo, I wed.
- Amal-gam, marriage-together; a paste produced by union of mercury and a metal.
- Syn-gam, (an intestinal worm having apparently two heads) joined-together (at the body).
- Bi-gamy, marriage-with-two (at once).
- Deutero-gamy, a second-marriage (the first spouse being dead).
- Mono-gamy, marriage-with-one.
- Poly-gamy, marriage-with-many.
- Tri-gamy, marriage-with-three (at once).
- A-etho-gamous, (having) un-usual
- nuptials or mode of propagation; cryptogamic. Bot.
- A-gamous, without-nuptials; having no sexes. Bot.
- Amphi-gamous, (with) nuptials or sex-both or two ways, i. e., male or female; of doubtful sex, without trace of sex.
- Crypto-gamous or gamic, of concealed-nuptials; producing without sexual intercourse. Bot.
- Hemi-gamous, of half-nuptials; having one floret neuter, the other of only one sex. Bot.
- Hemi-olo-gamous, of half-(and) whole-nuptials; having one floret neuter, the other hermaphrodite. Bot.
- Hetero-gamous, of varied-nuptials; having different arrangements of sexes on different specklets. Bot.
- Homo-gamous, of similar-nuptials; having all the florets hermaphrodite. Bot.
- Phanero-gamous, of evident-nuptials, having the organs of reproduction apparent. Bot.
- Poly-gamous, of many-nuptials; having male, female, and hermaphrodite flowers. Bot.
- GANGLION, Gr., a tubercle, a round mass of nervous matter.
- Hetero-gangliate, (having) other i. e., unsymmetrical-gangliated (filaments).
- Homo-gangliate, (having) together i. e., symmetrical-gangliated (filaments).
- GARDER, Fr., to keep, preserve. See Ward.
- Re-gard, (to throw the eyes) back (upon, so as to) keep (in view); to observe: Dis-regard, (to be) apart or far from-regarding; not to mind.
- En-guard, (to put) inside-(and) preserve.
- Un-guarded, not-kept (as from external influence).
- GASTER, Gr. (perh. fr. gento, he grasped; whence Fr. enter, wh. see); the food grasper; the belly, stomach, paunch.
- A-gastric, without-a stomach.
- Di-gastric, (having) a double-(swelling like) a paunch. [Arch.]
- Epi-gastric, upon or above-the stomach.
- Epi-po-gastric, below the stomach.
- Erythro-gaster, (a bird with) red-stomach.
- Lepado-gaster, (a fish which adheres by its) stomach to shell fish.
- Melano-gaster, the black-bellied (co-morant).
- Poly-gaster, a many-stomached (animalcule). Gastric, belongs.
- GE,* Gr., the earth.
- Ap-o-gee, (the point in an orbit farthest away) from-the earth. Ast.
- Peri-gee, (the point) about or near-the earth. Ast.
- Epi-gee, (growing close) upon-the earth. Bot.
- Hypo-gee, (growing) under-the earth. Bot.
- GELO, Lat., I freeze. Glaciers (glaciers, perh. fr. Gr. gela, lustre, tinsel); ice.
- Con-geal, to freeze-together (into a mass).
- Ag-gelation, (a turning) to-ice.
- Con-glaciate, frozen-together. Glaciated, Gelatin, Jelly, belong.
- GEMINUS, Lat. (fr. geno, I bear. See Genos); produced abundantly; i. e., double, or alike.
- In-geminate, (to produce) a doubling or repetition-in.
- Tri-gemini, the double-three: the fifth pair of nerves divided into three branches which again divide into three. Germinate, Gemel, be-long.

-GENOS

GENOS, Gr. race, descent, kind. Genio, Genus, Genio, to come into being; I produce, beget, give birth to. Genos, birth, seed. GENE-RIS, Lat., of a race. Geno, race. Genitus, produced. Geno, give, I produce, beget, conceive. Genos, full of well born quali-ties, generous.

Hetero-geneous, of other or different kinds.

Homo-geneous, of the same-kind. Aero-gen, (a tree) produced or grow-ing (by additions to the) top.

Endo gen, (a tree) produced (by ac-cumulations from) within : Endo-genite, a fossil endo-en.

Exo-gen, (a tree) produced (from) without.

Thallo-gen, (a plant) produced by -thalli or beds of fibres.

Cyano-gen, (a gas) producing (when burnt) a blue (colour).

Halo-gen, (a gas) producing saline (compounds).

Hydro-gen, (a gas) generating-water.

Nitro-gen, (a gas) producing-nitric acid or aquafortis.

Oxy-gen, (a gas) producing-sharpness, acidity, or rust.

Hypo-gene, produced-under (the sur-face of the earth).

Phos gene, (a gas) produced by-light.

Anthero-genic, (having petals) pro-duced from anthers.

Auto-genic, self-begotten.

Litho-genous, producing-stone.

Photo-genic, produced-by fire.

Pyro-genic, produced-by fire.

Osteo-genic, production of-bone.

Epi-genesis, (a being) additional (in existence to all former)-existences or productions.

Pala-genesis, (the being) born-again : re-generation. Theol.

Syn-genesious, (having the anthers or organs of) production-together or united. [world.]

Cosmo-gony, creation or birth-of the earth.

Geo-gony, creation-of the earth.

Peri-gony, (that which is) produced -about (the flower); a perianth.

Theo-gony, (history of) the birth-of the gods.

Epi-goni, (those) born-after; posterity.

Gyrogonite, a circular-seed (vessel).

The rest are Latin.

De-generate, (to decline) from-(the excellence of) the race.

In-generate, produced-within.

Re-generate, to produce-back or again.

Con-gener, together or similar-in race.

En-gender, to produce-within.

Un-generous, not-(like a well) born (man).

Un-general, not (belonging to) a race, or many individuals.

Con-genital, (arising) with or at-the birth. [the first-begotten.]

Primo-geniture, (the state of being) the only-begotten.

On-genial, together or the same-in race or character.

Primi-genial, not-(favourable to) pro-duction.

Un-genial, born or produced (Indu)-genous, born or produced -within (a country).

Pro-geny, production-forward or on-ward.

Pre-gnant, (in a state of) previous conception : hence, Im-pre-gn.

Pre-concious, (having) in-born (capacities); skillful; hence, Engine, a skillfully contrived machine.

-GLOBUS

Dis-in genuous, not-(like one having good) in-born (qualities).

Mal-en-gin, evil-in-born (character); guile. Gender, General, Generate, Generous, Genus, belong.

Acantho-GENYS, Gr. (genus, the jaw, chin, or bill); thorn-bill; a honey sucking bird.

-Gypo-GERAN, Gr. (geranos, a crane); the vulture -crane or secrete ary : Geranium, or crane's bill, belongs.

Re-GERMINATION, Lat. (germen, a bud, prob fr. Gr. geno); a budding -again. See Genos.

-GERO,* Lat., I bear, carry, carry on, wage. Gestum,* to bear.

Armi-ger, (one) bearing armour or a coat of arms. [esquire. Her.

Scuti-ger, a buckler-bearing

Seti ger, (a worm) bearing bristles as feet.

Belli gerent, carrying on-war.

Vice gerent, carrying on (business)-in place (of another).

Mori-gerous, bearing or having (good) manners. [-the eggs.]

Ovi-gerous, (receiving and) carrying Mal-in-ger, to carry-(or pretend to carry or have) ill (health)-within (in a mass).

Con-gest, to carry-together (or collect the body).

Di-gest, to carry-apart or separate.

E-gest, to carry or cast-out.

In-gest, to carry or cast-in (as to the stomach).

Sug-gest, to carry or place-(some thing) under or underhandedly (so as to alter the bearing or look of a matter) : to hint, to sup-pose.

Circum-gestation, a carrying-about.

Re-gister, to carry or lay-by or back (as in a book). Gest, Gesticulate, Jest, to mock by gestures or bear-ings of the body; i. e., attitudes, and Gestation, belong.

-GERON, Gr., an old man, prob. because the old bear rewards or honours. Geras, a reward, rank, age, decay.

A-gersy, not-old age; i. e., a vigorous old age.

A-gerate, (sweet maudlin, whose flower does) not-decay (soon).

-GERRY, Ghur, Gurh, Gurry, Hindoo, a small fortified place. The ex-amples are Kistna-gerry; Rag-gurh; Kutool-gurh; Barra-gurry, &c.

GHAUT, Hindoo, a mountain pass, or landing place.

Poon-ghat, Hinghen-ghat, &c.

-GHT. See the previous Index.

-GILD, Geld, Sax., money.

Were-gild, man-money; money paid for homicide.

Dane-geld, dane's-money; tax paid to the Danes.

-GLADIUS, Lat. (possib. fr. Gr. clados, a lopped branch, a stick; clao, I break); a brand or sword.

Di-gladiate, (to fence with) a sword -diversely or oppositely; to fight a duel.

Mor-glay, a deadly-weapon or sword.

Gladiator, Glaive, belong.

Eu-GLENE, Gr. (prob. fr. lao, I see; comp. Leon); (an animalcule in which) the eye-(can be discerned) well.

-GLOBUS, Lat. (see perh. next class and Gluten); or fr. Gr. colpos, the bosom, akin to Eng. gulf, a hollow; a globe.

• See the previous Index.

-GNOSIS

Con-globe, (to collect) together into -a globe.

In-globe, (to place) in-a globe.

-GLOMERO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. gloios, sticky, gluey); I wind into a ball or mass; I gather. Allied perh. to Globus.

Ag-glomerate, to add-to the mass.

Con-glomerate, to gather-together.

-GLOSSA or Glossa, Gr., the tongue.

Chondro-gloss, the cartilage-of the tongue. [a plant.]

Cyno-gloss, dog's or hound's tongue : Di-gloss, double-tongue; a plant.

Lepto-gloss, slender-tongue; a bird.

Tachy-gloss, swift-tongue; a sort of hedgehog which catches ants by extending the tongue.

Nemo-glossal, (having a) thread (like)-tongue; as the bee.

Pachy-glossal, (having a) thick-tongue; as a parrot; Pachy-glos-sate, belonging to a tribe of pachy-glossal animals.

Mono-glot, (written in) one-tongue.

Poly-glot, (written in) many-tongues or languages.

Epi-glottis, (a cartilage) upon or above-the tongue.

-GLUTEN, Lat. (fr. Gr. glaios, viscid) glue.

Ag-glutinate, to glue or join-together. Con-glutinate, to glue or join-together.

De-glutinate, (to take) from-the glueing or junction. Glue, belong.

-GLUTIO, Lat., I swallow.

De-glutition, a swallowing-down.

En-glut, to swallow-in. Glut, Gluti-tion, belong.

Methe-GLYN, Gr. (glucos, sweet); (a mixture of) sweet (honey and) -wine.

-GLYPHO,* Eng. for Gr. Glupho, I carve delicately, sculpture or en-grave. Glupho, I hew, dig.

Ana-glyph, a carving-upward or in relief; Anaglyphic, relating to an anaglyph; Anaglyphic, carved-up or in relief.

Dactylo-glyph, an engraving-on a finger (ring).

Di-glyph, a carving-through (the substance) or in intaglio.

Hiero-glyph, a sacred -writing or sculpture.

Di-glyph, a double-depression, car-ving, or indentation.

Tri-glyph, a threefold -depression or carving; Di-tri-glyph, (a building having) two-tri-glyphs (inserted be-tween those over the columns).

Mono-tri-glyph, (a building having) one, &c.

GM. See the previous Index.

-GNATHOS, Gr. (akin to Genys); a jaw, mandible, or cheek.

Chilio-gnath, or gnathic (an insect having) the jaw (and tongue united into a lip); Chiliognathus, one of a class having, &c.

Eu-gnath, well; i. e., fine or orna-mental-mandible; a fossil fish.

Plecto-gnath, infolded-jaw; a fish.

Syn-gnath, united-jaw; a fish.

Thysy-gnathous, puffing out-the cheeks.

-GNOSIS, Gr., knowledge. Ginosco (see Notum); I mark, I know.

Gnosmon, an indicator or index.

Astro-gnosy, knowledge-of (the) stars.

Dia-gnosis, thorough-knowledge (a discrimination). Med.

Geo-gnosy, knowledge-of (the earth (structure); mineralogy.

Orycto-gnosy, knowledge-(of things) dug up or fossils.

Prop-nosis, previous-knowledge; prophecy. Med. distinguishing.

Dia-gnostie, thoroughly-knowing or Psycho-gnosy, the science or knowledge of nature (or character from the nature of the face).

Patho-gnomonic, indicating (any particular) feeling. Med. Gnostic Gnomon, belong.

A-GOMPHIAN, Gr. (gomphos, a nail or trowl); (one of a class of tooth-less animals).

GONG, Hindoo, a village; or a corruption of gung, a granary, a market place: hence, De-gong.

-GONIA,* Gr., a corner, an angle.

Deca-gon, (a figure of) ten-angles.

Do-deca-gon, a two and ten; i. e., twelve-angle (figure).

En-deca-gon, a one-and ten, i. e., eleven-angle (figure).

Enece-gon, a nine-angle (figure).

Hepta-gon, a seven-angle (figure).

Hexa-gon, a six-angle (figure).

Octa-gon, an eight-angle (figure).

Ortho-gon, a right; i. e., square angled (figure);

Oxy-gon, a sharp or acute-angle (figure).

Penta-gon, a five-angle (figure).

Poly-gon, a many-angle (figure)

Quin-deca-gon, a fif-teen-angle (figure).

Tetra-gon, a four-angle (figure).

Tri-gon, a three-angle (figure).

Ambyl-gonal, (having) a blunt or obtuse-angle. [site angles]

Dia-gonal, (passing) through-(oppo-Ortho-gonal, right-angled).

Tri-gon, a three-cornered (crab): Tri-gonlian, (one of the class of trigons); Tri-gonite (one of a class of fossil) tri-angular (bivalves). Cologne, belongs.

-GORGE, Fr., the throat. Gurger, (fr. Lat. gurgis, a gullet, a whirl-pool); to swallow. See Gurgitis.

Dia gorge, (to throw) apart from-the throat; to un-incallor; to vomit.

En-gorge, (to put) in-the throat; to devour.

Re-gorge, to swallow-again; also (to cast) back from-the throat.

Demo-GORGON, Gr. (gorgos, fearful, grim; akin to orge, impulse, passion, wild fury, such as was exhibited in orgies. See Orexsis). The terrible-divinity.

-GRADUS,* Lat., a step, a degree. Gradior (perh. fr. gero, I bear; myself); I go or progress. Gressus, a going.

Centi-grade, of a hundred-degrees.

Cilio-grade, progressing-by cilia or eye lash (like organs); or an animal progressing, &c.

De-grade, (to bring) down in degree.

Digiti-grade, progressing-on the fingers or extremities of the feet.

Physio-grade, (Gr. and Lat.), or Fisco-grade (Lat.); progressing or swimming-by inflating an air bag or bladder.

Pinni-grade, progressing-by fin (like appendages). [of the foot.]

Planti-grade, progressing-on the sole

Pulmo-grade, progressing-by (con-traction of) lungs (or respiratory organs). [waid.]

Retro-grade, going or moving-back.

Salti-grade, progressing (to seize prey) -by leaps.

Tardi-grade, progressing-slowly.

Un-graduated, not (marked with) -degrees.

Ag-gress, to go-to or upon (without cause or permission); to trespass, approach, or invade.

Con-gress, going or meeting-together. Di-gress, to go-apart or away (from the road).

E-gress, a going-out.

In-gress, a going-in.

Pro-gress, a going-forward.

Re-gress, a going-back or return.

Trans-gress, to go-across (the bound-ary). [with other things].

Ingre-dient, (that which) goes-in De-gree, a step-down; a step-from.

Pedi-gree, (a scheme of) the steps (or generations of a family from its origin or)-foot. Grade, Gradient, Grassation, belong.

Ag-GRANDIZE, Lat. (grandis, great; perh. fr. gero, I carry to so as to increase); to add-greatness (to). Grand, belongs.

-GRANUM, Lat. (possib. fr. gero, I bear or produce) the production of the straw; a grain of corn.

Fili-grane, (an ornament wrought like small) grains-and threads.

Pome-granate, an apple (having many)-grains.

Gro-gram, (Ital.), a gross-grained (stuff). Grog, Garner, Garnet, coloured as the grains of pome-granate, Grange, Granite, Granule, belong.

-GRAPHO,* Gr., I grave or scrape on a tablet; I write, delineate, describe. Gramma, a thing written; a scripture, treatise, writing, character, or letter. Akin to grapho: see Glypho.

Ana-glypto-graph, (an engraving (like)-upward-sculpture; i. e., like relievio, as on coin.

Chiro-graph, a hand-writing: a signed deed. [sound, as th].

Di-graph, a double-letter (with one Dia graph, a machine for delineating-per(spective objects; i. e., objects seen as) through (a transparent medium); a perspective instrument.

Epi-graph, a writing-upon; a motto.

Hagio-graph, the holy-scripture.

Hiero-graph, a sacred-writing.

Holo-graph, (a will) written-wholly (by the testator). [ject].

Mono-graph, a treatise-on one (sub-Opistho-graph, (a book) to write-back (or down memoranda); a register or repository.

Panta-graph, (an instrument to) delineate-all; i. e., to copy in large or full.

Para-graph, (a portion of a discourse having the mark ¶) written-beside.

Poly-graph, a writing of many; a collection of authors into one book.

Syn-graph, a writing-(signed by creditor and debtor) together.

Tele-graph, (an instrument for) describing-afar off or to a distance.

Ideo-graphic, (expressing) an idea or word-by (a single) letter.

Ortho-graphic, delineated-(by lines at) right (angles to a plane).

Stereo-graphic, delineated-on a solid (plane).

Aero-graphy, description of-the air.

Auto-bio-graphy, the writing-the life of-one-self.

Biblio-graphy, a writing about-books. Bio-graphy the writing-lives.

Brachy-graphy, short-(hand) writing.

Caco-graphy, bad-writing or spelling.

Calu-graphy, beautiful-writing.

Chalco-graphy, (art of) writing on-brass. [or district.]

Choro-graphy, description of-a place

Chrono-graphy, description of-(past) time.

Cosmo-graphy, description of-the world. [concealed-character.]

Crypto-graphy, (art of writing in) Crystallo-graphy, description of-crystals.

Dactylo-graphy, a writing or engraving on-finger (rings or gems).

Ethno-graphy, description of-(peculiarities of) nations.

Geo-graphy, description of-(the surface of) the earth.

Historio-grapher, (a professed) writer of-history. [-hour (diale).]

Horo-graphy, a delineation or marking

Horo-logio-graphy, a discourse or account of-(the science of) marking-hour (diale), or of the way in which

Hydro-graphy, description of-(the limits of) water or the sea.

Ichno-graphy, a delineation or drawing out-a model.

Lexico-graphy, (methodical) description of-words or phrases.

Litho-graphy, (the art of) writing or engraving on-stone.

Logo-graphy, (art of) writing-words (in full, while being spoken).

Micro-graphy, a writing in-small or of small (objects).

Organo-graphy, description of-the organs (of plants). [-aright.]

Ortho-graphy, a writing or spelling

Ourano-graphy or Urano-graphy, description of-the heavens.

Paleo-graphy, (a deciphering of) ancient-writings or inscriptions.

Past-graphy, (art of) writing-(so as to be understood) by all (nations).

Photo-graphy, a writing-(by the action) of light.

Phyto-graphy, description of-plants.

Pros-opo-graphy, description of-the before or front-eye or face, i. e., of the front appearance (of animated objects).

Pseud-epi-graphy, a writing-false (names of authors) upon (works).

Pseudo-graphy, false-writing.

Scia-graphy, (a right) delineation of-shadows.

Scleno-graphy, description-(of the surface) of the moon.

Stegano-graphy, covered or secret-writing.

Steno-graphy, a writing on-pillars.

Steno-graphy, squeezed or short (hand) writing.

Stereo-graphy, delineation-on a solid (plane) or of solids (on a plane)

Tachy-graphy, (art of) writing-swifly.

Topo-graphy, description of-places.

Typo-graphy, a delineation or printing-by images (of letters) or types.

Xylo-graphy, wood-engraving.

Zoo-graphy, description of-animals.

Ana-gram, a writing-(which makes sense when read) backwards.

Chrono-gram, a writing-(which includes letters that show a) time or date.

Dia-gram, a thorough-delineation or scheme; (a scheme made by lines) written-about.

Epi-gram, (a short and witty) writing-upon (some subject).

Hiero-gram, a sacred-writing.

Mono-gram, a single-character (em-bracing the letters or initials of a name).

Para-gram, a writing-by the side or similarly; a pun.

Par-allole-gram, a figure or delineation-(the opposite sides of which are parallel; i. e.) by the side-of each other.

-GRATUS

Poly-gram, a figure of many (lines).
 Program of grammar, a writing or scheme (drawn out) beforehand.
 Un-grammatical, not (according to the rules of) writing. Graphic, Grave, to sculpture, Graffier, Grammar, belong.

-GRATUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. charis, grace; chairon, I rejoice); thankful, agreeable. Gratia, favour. See Christ-
 (of).
 In-grate, not-thankful.
 In-gratiate, (to get) into the favour Dis-grace, (a being thrown) apart from i. e. out of favour.
 Un-graceful not-(having grace, or the quality producing) favour. Grace, Gratulatio, belong.

-GRAVE,* Revere, Eng. of Germ.
 Graf, an earl, governor; also a wood or forest.

Land-grave, curl-of (a certain portion of) territory. [borders.
 Mar-grave, curl-of the marches or
 She-riff, governor-of the shire.
 Bel-grave, a fine-wood.

-GRAVIS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gero, I bear); heavy to be borne, weighty.
 Ag-gravate, to add-grievousness or weight (to). [Med.
 In-gravitate, to imbue with-weight.
 Un-gravely, not-weightily or seriously. [spirits to].

Ag-grieve, to add-grief or heaviness (of
 En-grieve, to imbue with-grief.
 Grave, heavy, serious, Grief, belong.
 (to behave) to
 A-GREE, Fr. (gré); (to) agree,
 (one's) liking; hence, Dis-agree,
 (to be) apart from-liking, and Re-agree. See Gratus. Grez, a

-GREOIS, Lat., of a flock. Grez, a flock or collection.
 Ag-gregate, to add-(as one collection to another) collection. [collection.
 Con-gregate, to gather (into one)
 Dis-gregate, (to throw) a collection apart; to dissipate. [collection.
 Se-gregate, (to place) aside from-the E-gregious, (as if taken) out of-the flock; selected. Gregarious, belong.

Hippo-GRIFF, or -Griff, Gr. (grups, fr. grupos, hook nosed or beaked);
 a horse-griffin.
 Logo-GRIPH, Gr. (griphos, a net;
 fr. rhips, wicker work made of rushes dashed by waves; fr. rhpto: see Rite); a net or riddle of words.
 -GRUS, Lat. (prob. fr. Gr. geranos);
 a crane. See G-ran.
 Con-gruent, craving-together; i. e., coming or fitting-together as a flock of cranes; hence, In-congruent;
 (a not-agreeing; Dis-congruity, (a being) apart or far from-agreement.

Dis-GUISE, Fr. (allied to Enz. wise, in a manner); (to dress) apart from -the (usual) manner. Guise belongs.
 -GURGITIS, Lat., of a whirlpool.
 Gurgas, a gulf or whirlpool.
 In-gurgitate, (to drive as) into-a whirlpool; to swallow up.
 Re-gurgitate, (to throw) back - (as from) a whirlpool. Gurgie, belongs.
 -GUSTO, Lat. (fr. Gr. geuo, I taste);
 I taste.
 Dis-gusting, a part from or unpleasant to-the taste.
 In-gustable, not-to be tasted.
 Pre-gustation, a tasting-beforehand.

Or-GYAN, Gr. (guion, a limb); (one of a class of insects with) extended
 -limbs.
 GYMNAST, Gr. (gymnos,

HEDRA

naked; ancient exercisers or wrestlers being denuded (of clothes);
 hand-exerciser; a dumb piano.
 -GYNE, Eng. of Gr. Gune, a woman, female, pistil, style, ovary, or fructifier.

Myso-gyny, hatred (towards)-women.
 Andro-gyny, a man-and woman; an hermaphrodite. [ovary.
 Basi-gyn, a base or stalk-(bearing) an Peri-gyn, (a pitcher shaped body which sometimes) surrounds-a [having] no-style.
 pistil.

A-gynian, (one of a class of plants Andro-gynous, (uniting) male-and female or stamen-and pistil.
 A-gynous, fructifying-(but) once.
 A-podo-gynous, not-(adhering) to the foot-of the ovary.
 Epi-gynous, (growing) upon-(the summit of) the ovary.
 Hetero-gynian, (one of a class in which the) females-(are) different;
 i. e., some fertile, others infertile;
 as bees. [the ovary.

Hypo-gynous, (growing from) below
 Peri-gynous, (growing) around-the ovary or the calyx.
 A-tomo-gynia, (an order of plants having) an un-cleft or cut-ovary. one Mono-gynia, (an order having) one pistil. Di. Tri. Tetra. Penta.
 Hexa. Hepta. Octa. Ennea. Deca.
 En-deca. Do-deca-gynia. Polygynia, (having) many-pistils.
 Circum-GYRATION, Lat. (gyrus, fr.
 Gr. gyros, a ring); (a wheeling) about-in a circle.

-HABITUM,* Lat., to have or hold.
 Habitus, that to which one holds; in custom, habit. Hobbo, I hold; in compounds generally Hibeo. Ha-bito, I hold or use often or as my own; hence, I dwell in.
 Co-habit, to dwell-together.
 In-habit, to dwell-in.
 Ad-habit, to hold or apply-to.
 Ex-habit, to hold-out (so as to show).
 In-habit, to hold-(oneself) against; to forbid.

Pro-habit, to hold-forward (some obstruction against).
 Dis-habille, (in a state of having thrown) apart or off-the habit or customary dress of ceremony.
 Pre-(ha)bend, (an ecclesiastical stipend one) holds-before or in preference to (others).
 Prob. to the above class belongs Lat.
 Habilis, holding or possessing power, skillful, able.
 En-able, to imbue with-power.
 In-ability, want of-power.
 In-hability, want of-skill.
 Re-habilitate, (to bring) back to power or rank. Habit, Habillment, Able, belong.

-HAE, Chinese, sea.
 Hoang-hae, yellow-sea.
 Si-hae, western-sea.

-HAGIOS. See Agion.

-HALO, Lat., I breathe.
 Ex-hale, to breathe-out.
 In-hale, to breathe-in.
 An-helation, a breathing-(with difficulty, so as to be heard) around.
 Halituous, belongs.

-HAM.* HAPLE: see Aplo.

-HAUSTUS, Lat. drawn, sucked up.
 Haurio, (fr. Gr. aruo or ruo, I draw: see Rugate); I draw. [whole].
 Ex-haust, to draw-out or off (the
 In-ex-hausted, not-drawn-off.

-HEDRA,* Gr. (fr. hezomai, I seat myself; hizio, I seat); a seat,
 * See the previous Index.

HIATUS

session, base, or side (the last generally to a regular solid).
 Cat-hedral, (a church containing the bishop's chair or place to) sit-down.
 Ex-hedra, (a public room for persons having come) from-sitting (in a bath). Ant.

Pro-hedra, (senators sitting in) the front-seat. Ant.

San(syn)-hedrim, the session or sitting-together (of elders). Ecc.
 Chilia-hedron, (a figure) of a thousand-sides or bases.

Do-deca-hedron, (a figure of) two-and ten; i. e., twelve-sides.

Hexa-hedron, a six-sided (figure).
 Icosa-hedron, a twenty-sided (figure).
 Octa-hedron, an eight-sided (figure).
 Poly-hedron, a many-sided (figure).
 Tetra-hedron, a four-sided (figure).

Ep-HELICY, Gr. (helcos, a wound or abscess); (anything resulting) from or upon-an ulcer.

-HELIOS, Gr. (fr. hele, the light or the heat of the sun, brightness); the sun. [away] from-the sun.

Ap-helion, (the point in) an orbit
 Ep-hely, (stroke of) the sun-upon (one).

Par-helion, (a false image of) the sun
 by the side of or near-the sun.
 Peri-helion (the point near) about
 -the sun.

Ant-HELIX, Gr. (the outer ridge of the ear) opposite-the helix or in-rolled margin. See Elytron.

-HELMINTHOS, Gr. of a worm.
 Helmin, (fr. heileo, I roll or curl);
 a worm, generally intestinal. See Helix. [worms.

Ant-helminthic, (a medicine) against Cel-helminth, a worm with (an abdominal)-hollow or cavity.
 Ent-helminth, a within or intestinal -worm.

Ster-eiminthian (or helminthian),
 (one of a class of) worms with-solid (body).

-HEMERA, Gr., a day.
 Ep-hemeral, (lasting) upon or for-a day (only); hence, Ep-hemeran, a day ly, and Ep-hemeris, (a scheme of the places of the stars) upon
 -the day.

Nyc-t-hemer, (anything belonging to) a night-and-a day: hence, nyc-t-hemerous. [days.
 Dec-ameron, (a work, lasting) ten

Hyp-HEN, Gr., (a mark uniting two words) under or into-one.

HEND. See Prechendo. Herd,*

-HEREDIS, Eng. of Lat. Heredis, of an heir. Hares (prob. akin to herus, sir; fr. Gr. heros, sir, or a hero); an heir.

Ex-heredation, (a casting one) out of
 -heirship or inheritance.

In-herit, (to enter) upon-as heir.
 Co-heir, a together or fellow-heir.
 Hereditary, belongs.

-HEREO,* Eng. for Lat. Harreo, I stick. Haesum, to stick.

Ad-hero, to stick-to; Ad-hesive.
 Co-hero, to stick-together; In-co-he-rent, not-sticking or hanging-together; unconnected.

In-hero, to stick or hang-in or on.
 Hesi-tate, belongs.

-HERESIS. See Aresis.

-HEXIS. See Echis.

-HIATUS, Lat., a gaping. Hio (fr.
 Gr. chairo), I gape, yawn. Hiscu,
 I begin to gape. See Heno.
 In-hiscent, a gaping-in or upon.
 De-hiscent, (beginning) to gape or open-downwards (about the axis).

HIBITION. See Habitum.

HIEN, Chinese, a town of the third order.

She-Kiang-hien, town-(on) a tongue of land-(in the river). [stream.]

Tse-toong-hien, town-the son-of the HILAROS, Gr. (fr. hilaios, soothed, kind): Hilaris, Lat., cheerful, gay.

Ex-hilarate, (to elicit or bring) out

-cheerfulness.

In-hilarate, to imbue with cheerfulness. Hilarity, belongs.

-HO, Chinese; river.

Hoang-ho, yellow or royal-river.

Pei-ho, white-river.

Shing-ho, sacred-river.

-HODOS, See Odos. HOLD. * HOOD. *

-HOLOS, Gr., whole, entire, perfect.

Cat-holic, according to-(the opinions of) all or the whole; universal;

hence, Catholicism, a universal

-thing or medicine, and Dia-catholicon, a universal medicine-(which goes) through; a universal purge.

Ab-HOR, Lat. (horreo, I bristle up; akin to hordeum, barley, which has a beard; and also perh. to Hortor and Ortus); (to draw back) from

-(with fear or hatred, such as that the hair) bristles up. Horrid, rough, exciting fear, Horror, belong.

-HORCOS, Gr. (fr. heirgo, I secure or confine); the object by which one swears, a security, oath, or adjuration. Akin to Erceco.

Ex-orcise, (to drive) out-by adjurations.

Syn-orcism or -orcism, (a taking) an

-HOROS, Gr., a boundary, limit, separation.

Ap-horism, (a thing) separated-from (others); a de-finition or maxim.

A-orist, not-bounded; indefinite.

Di-oristic, separating or defining

-throughout. Horizon, belongs.

-HORTOR, Lat. (prob. fr. Gr. oro, I encourage, I stir up); I encourage, excite, persuade. Prob. akin to Ortus.

De-hort, to persuade-from.

Ex-hort, to encourage-completely; to stir-up or out

Ad-hortation, encouragement - (directed) to; advice.

In-HOSPITABLE, Lat. (hospes, a host or guest; poss. fr. hospium, a door); not-(welcoming, as)-a host or entertainer. Hospital, a place for guests, belongs. Compare next.

Un-HOSTILE, Lat. (hostis, an enemy, one out of doors or a foreigner; prob. fr. ostium, a door); not-(like) an enemy.

-HOU, Chinese, lake.

Pei-hou, white-lake.

Wey-shan-hou, walled town-(on) island-(in a) lake.

Sub-HUMERAL, Lat. (humerus; akin to Gr. omos, the shoulder); beneath-the shoulder.

-HUMOR, Lat. (fr. Gr. huo; see Hydor); moisture, fluid, and-because the state of the mind or character was supposed to depend on the fluids of the body, temper, disposition.

Dis-humour, (state of being) apart or far from-(good) temper.

Sub-humectation, an under or slight -moistening. Humid, Humour, Humect, belong.

-HUMUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. huo, I water); moist earth, ground. Humilis, lowly. See Humor.

Ex-hume, (to take) out-of-the ground.

In-hume, (to place) in-the ground.

Post-humous, after-(being placed in) the ground; i. e., after death.

Un-humiliated, not-(cast down to) the ground or humbled. Humble, Humiliate, belong.

-HUKST. See the previous Index.

-HYDOR, Eng. of Gr. Hydor (fr. huo, I moisten, wet, water): water.

Hydrous, of water. [-water.]

An-hydrous, deprived of or without

Call-ydor, beautifying-water.

Cleps-ydra, (a clock which the maker moves by having) concealed-water (within it).

El-ydoric, (having the properties of both oil-(and) water (painting)).

Hydra, belongs.

-HYMNOS, Eng. for Gr. Hymnos, (akin to hudeo, I tell or sing of; and aoido; see Ode); a sacred song.

Un-hymned, not-sung of. [-singing.]

Ant-hem, an opposite or alternate

-HYPNOS, Eng. of Gr. Hypnos, sleep.

A-gr(u)-ypny, sleeplessness; literally (the getting) not-a grunt or atom of sleep. [-sleep.]

Cat-hypny, profound or complete

Ant-hypnotic, (a medicine) against

-sleep.

Cat-hypnotic, a completely-soporific or sleeping (completely).

I. See previous Index.

-IAL, Eal, Ious, Eous, are adj. generally thus formed, (Connub-

Lat. I marry; connubium, marriage; connubialis, pertaining to marriage; connub-ial: Funus,

Lat., a funeral; funus-is, of a funeral; funus-eus, pertaining to a funeral; [funer-ealis, a form not Latin]; funer-eal: Humen, Gr.

Hymen; humen-aios, as Lat. hymen-eus, pertaining to Hymen;

[hymen-ealis, a form not found];

hymen-eal: Nox-a, Lat., injury;

nox-ious, in Eng. nox-ious, pertaining to or full of injury;

nox-ious: Os, Lat., a bone; oss-is, of a bone; oss-eus, pertaining to bones; oss-eus:) pertaining to, having the qualities of, having, being, like. Compare Al and Ous; also Ous in*

A-nom-ial, being-irregular.

A-plys-ial, being-un-washed; foul, and hence, sponge-like.

Hyr-ial, honey comb-like.

Aran-eal, spinner or spider-like.

Sider-eal, pertaining to the stars.

Ex-it-ious, having qualities (producing)-a going-out of (life); i. e.,

death. [-darkness.]

Tenebr-ious, having the qualities of Actul-eous, like-a sting.

Beul-eous, like-the birch (tree).

Mail-eous, hammer-like.

Pergamen-eous, like-parchment.

-IAN. * Ean, or An, are adj., generally thus formed (Prætor, Lat., a pretor; prætor-ianus, pertaining to a pretor; pretor-ian: Pugm-e,

Gr. the cubit or lower arm: pugm-aios, pertaining to a cubit, as a dwarf a cubit high; pygm-eus, Lat., dwarfish; [pygm-eanus, a form not Latin]; pygm-ean: Marmor, marble; marmor-eus, pertaining to marble; [marmor-eus, a form not Latin]; Mar-mor-ean: pertaining to: also used as s to indicate an individual of a tribe or race; as the Gr. pugmaios, one of a race of pigmies, a pigmy, or rather a pigmean.

* See the previous Index.

Actin-ian, one of the class-of ray (like animals or sea anemones).

Agam-ian, one, &c.-of (lizards which change colour in an) astonishing way). [(animals) or agompha]

A-gomph-ian, one, &c.-of tooth-less

A-nom-ian, one, &c.-of (animals) not (easily classified or brought under) laws.

Arachn-ian, one, &c.-of spiders.

Caucas-ian, one, &c.-of (original) dwellers near Caucasus. [(birds).]

Certh-ian, one, &c.-of (tree) chipping

Chelon-ian, one, &c.-of tortoises.

Cicon-ian, one, &c.-of storks.

Ether-ian, one, &c.-of shining (oysters). [lizards.]

Iguan-ian, one, &c.-of (American)

Iran-ian, one, &c.-of the class-of (free and active throngers of) markets; or of speakers.

Lacert-ian, one, &c.-of lizards.

Lemur-ian, one, &c.-of (animals which prow) at night like) ghosts

Limac-ian, one, &c.-of slugs.

Iucan-ian, one, &c.-of wolves.

Ma-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) crabs;

called sea-spiders.

Melan-ian, one, &c.-of black (mollusk). [lusk.]

Myon-ian, one, &c.-of muscular (molmytil-ian, one, &c.-of mussels.

Nautil-ian, one, &c.-of nautili.

Neurit-ian, one, &c.-of nerites or peculiar shell fish.

Pecten-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) comb (like oysters); of clams or pectens. [peittacs.]

Psittac-ian, one, &c.-of parrots or

Psoph-ian, one, &c.-of (a peculiar sort of stork which makes a) noise.

Pteryg-ian, one, &c.-of winged or finned (mollusks). [or saur.]

Saur-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) lizards

Selac-ian, one, &c.-of selacks or a peculiar kind of gristly and scaleless

fishes.

Ses-ian, one, &c.-of moths.

Sim-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) flat nosed (beasts). [solens]

Solen-ian, one, &c.-of razor shells, or

Sturion-ian, one, &c.-of sturgeons.

Tellin-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) mussels.

Term-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) ants.

Termit-ian, one, &c.-of ants; (a superior class to termian, which it could not be).

Tetraon-ian, one, &c.-of bustards.

Tettigon-ian, one, &c.-of (peculiar) grasshoppers, or tettigons.

Triton-ian, one, &c.-of Triton (like animals) or sea slugs.

Tyrann-ian, one, &c.-of the class-(of those who have always submitted) to despotic (rulers).

Aran-ean, one, &c.-of (peculiar) spiders.

Calypt-ean, one, &c.-of (peculiar) caped or covered (animals).

Cuccul-ean, one, &c.-of cuckoos.

Cypr-ean, one, &c.-of cowry (oysters).

Gryph-ean, one, &c.-of hook beaked

(oysters).

Hyal-ean, one, &c.-of glassy or transparent (shelled oysters).

Limn-ean, one, &c.-of pool (snails).

Mail-ean, one, &c.-of hammer (ova-ters). [bony (skeleton).]

Oss-ean, one, &c.-of (fishes with a true)

Ostr-ean, one, &c.-of oysters.

Pholad-ean, one, &c.-of (peculiar oysters, excavating) hiding places (in rocks).

Scarab-ean, one, &c.-of beetles.

-IASIS, a Gr. sub. termin., signifying a state of doing or suffering, and formed thus (Thrix, hair; trich os,

Digitized by Google

presses frequency of an act, and is thus formed, (Ag-o, Lat., I drive or act; ag-it-o, I drive-often or ag-itive). Ag-itive, (to put) in frequent-action; to shake.

Co (ag)-itate, frequently to drive or cast-together (in the mind); to agitate in the mind.

Ille-itate, frequently-to stick; to stutter.

Sus-c-itate, (sub-cieo-itate), frequently to jog or rouse-up; to rouse up.

-ITE,* Eng. termin., originally adj., appears to be formed thus (Cuan-o, Gr., a dark azure substance; cuan-ites, dark blue; cyan-ite: Erem-os, Gr., solitary; erem-ites, a solitary; erem-ite, or hermit): a thing like; and hence often opprobriously of persons, and commonly to express that a formerly living object is now a lifeless thing from petrification; a mineral, stone, or fossil.

Jesu-ite, one belonging to the society of Jesus. (paratied (by a vow).

Nazur-ite, one belonging to (those) so-phi-ite, one, &c.-(those worshipping) the serpent.

Cyan-ite, blue-stone or mineral.

Gran-ite, grained-stone. [lead.

Graph-ite, writing-stone, i.e. black.

Hemat-ite, blood (coloured)-mineral.

Pyr-ite, fire (striking)-mineral.

Stalact-ite, stone (formed by)-drops.

Belemn-ite, a dart (shaped)-fossil.

Goniat-ite, an angular-fossil.

Ornith-ichn-ite, a (foot) mark or trace of birds in-stones.

Tri-lob-ite, a three-lobed-fossil.

Re-ITERATE, Lat. (itero, I go again;

fr. eo, I go: see Iter); to go (over) again-and-again.

ITION. See Ion.

-ITIS, a Gr. termin., originally adj., and formed thus (Neph-ros, the kidney; neph-itis, belonging to the kidney as a disease); in Eng. medical words it retains its original form, and being used as s. it has the meaning of a disease, generally of an inflammatory kind.

Arthr-itis, inflammation of the joints;

gout. [throat

Bronch-itis, inflammation of the Hydro-rach-itis, disease of a watery

(tumour)-on the spine.

Larynx-itis, inflammation of the larynx. [ney

Neph-itis, inflammation of the kid-

Ophthalm-itis, inflammation of the eye.

Par-ot-itis, inflammation of (a gland) near-the ear (called the parotid).

Peri-card-itis, inflammation of (the sac) about the heart.

Pleur-itis, inflammation of the brain.

Pleur-itis, inflammation of the pleura or ribs.

Pneumon-itis, inflammation of the lungs. [rickets

Rach-itis, disease of the spine: the Re-tin-itis, inflammation of (the membrane of the eye which) re-tains, or holds-back (visible objects).

Tonsill-itis, inflammation of the tonsils.

Trach-itis, inflammation of the trachea or rough (membranous tube).

Tympan-itis, drum (belly)-disease.

ITUM, to go. See Ion.

-ITY,* Ety, which are Eng. sub. termin., are thus formed (Atrox, Lat cruel; atroc-ly, to cruel; atroc-ity, cruel ty; atroc-ity: Soci-us, Lat.,

following, accompanying; soci-ates, company, companion-ship; society); and denote abstractedly the quality or state of the adjective.

Cupid-ity, the quality of desiring.

Pi-ety, the quality-of (being) pious.

-IX. See the previous Index.

-IZE,* Asc, v. to do, &c.; Iti,* As, last, the doer; As, a doing; Im,* As,

asm, the thing done; *Is*tery, *As*tery,

the place where the thing is done, or the collection of doers, are Eng.

termin. from Gr. models, and formed thus, (Bapt-o, I dip; bapt-izo,

I dip often or bapt-ize; bapt-istes,

a dipper or bapt-ist; bapt-isma, a dipping or bapt-ism: [bapt-ister, not Greek, a bapt-ist; bapt-isterion, see Ion, a place belonging to a baptist, a dipping place or bapt-istry: Paraphr-azo, I paraphr-ase; paraphr-astes, a paraphr-ast; paraphr-asis, a paraphrasing or paraphr-ase).

Organ-ize, to furnish-with organs or arrangement.

Signal-ize, to make-signal or eminent.

Phr-ase, to make or give-to know (by a phrase or speaking); to form as an expression into a certain shape.

Ex-or-ist, a caster-out-by oath (of spirits).

Jansen-ist, a doer-(under the influence of the opinions) of Jansen.

Scholi-ast, a writer-of scholia or comments in the hours of learned leisure. [targeteer

Pelt-ast, a doer-(with the target; a

Enthus-ist, a doer-(with) the god

-within; one impelled by inspiration.

Somn-ambul-ism, (a state of) doing

-walking; i.e., of walking-in sleep.

Alip-asm, an ointment-done or made;

an ointment. [meditation

Phront-istry, a place-for thought or

Syn-IZESY, Gr. (izesis, a sitting or settling; fr. hizo: see Hedra);

a settling-together; a collapse or closing.

-JACEO, Lat., I lie.

Ad-jacent, lying-(near) to.

Circum-jacent, lying-around.

Inter-jacent, lying-between.

Sub-jacent, lying-under or below.

JECTUM,* Lat. termin. of compulsion of Jactum, to throw. Jacturus, throwing. Jacio,* (fr. Gr. die ein, to throw, from which comes Eng.

Disk); I throw or cast. Jactum,

a thing thrown, a dart. Jactum,

I cast often, I cast (words) here and there; I boast. See Disk in Dict.

Ab-ject, thrown-from or away (one):

hence, worthless.

Ad-ject, to throw-to or add.

De-ject, to cast-down.

E-ject, to throw-out or up.

In-ject, to throw-in.

Inter-ject, to throw-between or insert.

Ob-ject, to throw-against; to oppose:

also, Ob-ject, (that which is) thrown against; i.e., meets (the eye).

Pro-ject, to cast or shoot-forward:

also, Pro-ject, (that which is) cast

-beforehand or schemed (in the mind).

Re-ject, to throw-back.

Sub-ject, to throw-under; to sub-due.

Tran-ject, to cast or cause to pass-across.

Inter-jection, (a word) thrown-between (others). [mind]

Con-jecture, a casting-together (in the

E-jaculate, to dart or throw-out.

Con-jaculation, a throwing (out words) or boasting-in company with. Jacta-tion, Jct, belong.

Ta-JIN, Chinese, great-man; grandee.

* See the previous Index.

-JOURN;* see also Diurnus.

-JUDICIS, Lat., of a judge. Judex, (fr. jus-dico, I pronounce the law of the land: see Jus; Dictus); one who pronounces the law, a judge.

Di-judicate, to separate-(and then) judge; to distinguish, discriminate, or judge-between.

Pre-judicate, to judge-beforehand

(without examination); Pre-judice, judgment-before (examination).

In-judicious, not-judging (well).

Extra-judicial, without or out-of (the business) of judging. [upon]

Ad-judge, (to give) judgment-to or

Sub-JUGULAR, Lat. (jugulum, the throat; fr. jugum, a ridge or yoke;

bec. of the protuberance or ridge in the throat, called Adam's apple, or because the neck yokes the head and body: see Junctus), beneath

-the throat.

JUNCTUS, Lat., joined, united.

Jungo (fr. Gr. zeugno, I join); I join. Jugum (fr. Gr. jugon, any thing which joins); a union or yoke; a ridge uniting hills.

Ad-junct, joined-to; Ad-join.

Con-junct, joined-together; Con-join.

Dis-junct, separated from-joining; not -joined, divided; Dis-join.

Inter-junct, joined-between; Inter-join. [ing; Se-join]

Se-junct, separated from-union or join-

Con-juncture, a joining-together (of circumstances).

In-junction, (a thing) en-joined.

En-join, to unite-to or upon (what has been said, by way of last command). Other compounds are,

Re-join, to join-again; Sub-join, to join-under or after. Join,* Junction, belong.

Bi-jugate, doubly-yoked; i.e.,

(having) two-couples united.

Con-jugate, to join-together (as in one scheme or yoke); hence, Conjugal. [yoke]; to subdue.

Sub-jugate, (to bring) under -the Quadri-(ju)ga, (a chariot) yoking-four (horses).

Ob-JURGATION, Lat. (jurgium, a brawling or chiding; prob. fr. juro,

I swear or swear at); a scolding

-(directed) against. See Jus.

-JUS, human law; right. Justus, just, upright. Juro, I swear (according to law); I take oath.

Ad-just, (to put) to-(so as to be in) right (proportion); to make right or settle.

Un-just, not-(up)right.

Ab-jure, (to repel or drive) from-by oath; to deny. [upon]

Ad-jure, (to impose) an oath-to or

Con-jure, (to ask by all) oaths-together or at once.

In-jure, (to do what is) not or contrary-to-right (to a person).

Per-jure, (to break) through-an oath.

Co-juror, (one) swearing-in company with.

Con-juror, (one who brings) together

(spirits)-by oaths. Jurat, Juror,

Jurist, Just, belong.

-JUTUM, to help. Juro (poss. fr.

Jove, the jovial and helping god);

I help, assist, delight.

Ad-jutant, (giving) help-to.

Co-ad-jutant, (giving) joint-help-to.

Un-a-iding, (ad-joining), not (giving)

-help-to.

Re-JUVENESCENCE, Lat. (Juvenia, young; of the jovial or rejoicing age; or of the strong and helping age: see Jutum); a beginning to trac-is, of cruel; trac-ulentus, full of cruelty; trac-ulent.

Corp-ulent, of full-body.

Fraud-ulent, full of deceit.

Op-ulent, full of power or wealth.

Pulver-ulent, full of dust. [order.

Turb-ulent, full of-whirling or dis-

Vis-ulent, full of force.

-LEON, Gr. (perh. fr. lao, I gaze, as an animal of prey on his victim before killing it). Leo, Lat., Lion, Eng. and Fr. (ing-lion).

Chame-leon, (G.), a ground or creep-

Myrme-leon, (G.), an ant-lion.

Dan-de-lion, (Fr.), tooth-of a lion, lion's tooth. Bot.

-LEPAS, Gr. (fr. lepas, a rock; be- cause it splinters: see Lepis); a shell fish adhering to rocks; a limpet. [-limpet.

Concho-lepas, the turbinated shell

Platy-lepa, the broad-limpet.

-LEPIS, Gr., a scale. Lepo, I peel or splinter. Prob. akin to glapho: see Glypha.

Cheiro-lepis, or chiro-lepid, hand (shaped) scale; a fossil fish.

Lepo-lepis, slight-scale; a fossil saur.

Osteo-lepes, bony-scale; a fossil fish.

Psycho-lepis, folded-scale; a fossil fish. [a fossil-fish.

Tetra-gono-lepis, four-angled-scale;

Tropido-lepis, carinated or keeled scale; a saur.

Macro-lepidotous, (having) long scales. Leper, Leprosy, the scab disease, and prob. Lepid, scaled, polished, lively, belong.

-LEPSIS,* Gr. a receiving, taking, catching, seizing. Labin, to take or receive. Lemna, a thing taken.

Ana-lepsy, a catching-back or up; a sudden and frequent-seizure (with epilepsy). Med.

Apo-lepsy, a catching (and tying a vein) from (an amputated part).

Cata-lepsy, a complete-seizure or trance.

Dia-lepsy, a taking-apart or diversely; a dividing or intermission.

Ep-ana-lepsy, a taking-up (what is) upon or above; i. e., a repetition of the above or first word at the end of a sentence. Rhet.

Epi-lepsy, (a sudden) falling or seizing-upon (as of disease); the fitting sickness.

Meta-lepsy, the taking (a word through many) changes (of meaning).

Pro-lepsy, a taking-before; anti-cipa-

tion.

Syl-lepsy, a taking-together; connection. [restorative.

Ana-leptic, taking or raising-up;

Astro-labe, (an instrument for) taking (the places of) the stars.

Cosmo-labe, (an instrument for) taking-terrestrial (distances). Ant.

Meso-labe, (an instrument for) taking a mean or middle. Ant.

Syl-lable, (letters) taken-together (in one sound): see Syllable.

Syl-labus, (a scheme which) takes together or col-lects (the important points); an epitome.

Ana-lemma, a taking or throwing back (of the circles of a sphere on to a plane passing through the centre).

Di-lemma, a double-taking or assumption, (both leading to the same conclusion); hence, a situation without escape.

Corco-LEPTIS, Gr. (leptos, peeled, stripped, having the plumpness abstracted, thin, slender: fr. lepo:

see Lepis); slender-tail. Zool.

-LESS,* LET,* LEY, LEIGH.*

-LEVIS, Lat. (akin to Gr. elaphros, light in weight); light in weight.

Levo, I make light, I take away the effects of weight, I lift or raise.

Elevate, to raise-out or up.

Re-levant, raising-back or up, assisting; rising or going-back to, relative, pertinent.

Al-leviate, to add-lightness to.

Al-leviable, not-to be levied or raised.

Un-leavened, not-(made) light.

Re-levant, lifting-back or up, assisting, supporting. Levant, where the sun rises, Levee, an early assembly. Lever, Levity, Levy,

Leaven, belong.

-LIBER, Lat. (prob. the same as Gr.

eleutheros, free; perh. fr. Lat. li-beo, lubeo, I please or like); free to do as one likes, free. [to do].

Al-liberal, not-free (of one's money,

De-liver, to free-from (bondage).

Liberal, Libidinous, free, wanton, in manners, belong.

-LIBO, Lat. (fr. Gr. leibo, I pour, pour forth, to the gods); I pour out a libation before drinking; I drink or taste.

De-litiate, to pour-down (and then titate); to taste: Delibation, an effusion.

Pre-libation, fore taste.

-LIHRA, Lat., a scale, a weight.

De-liberate, to weigh (in the mind)

-concerning; (to observe what) weighs - down or preponderates;

hence, In-deliberate. Libration, belongs.

-LICIT, see Lagos. LICIT, see Linguo.

Pur-LIEU, Fr. (fr. Lat. Locus, wh. see); a place-(made) pure or free (from forest laws).

-LIGATUM, Lat., to bind. Ligo,

(poss. akin to Gr. lugos: see Liqueus); I bind or trammel.

Al-ligate, to bind-(one thing) to (another).

Col-ligate, to bind-together; hence,

Bi-colligate, bound-in two (divisions). [bandago.

De-ligation, a binding-down or

Ob-ligation, a trammel-(placed) before or against; the imposition of a bond.

Ob-lige, to bind-(something) against

(one); to tie down. [to tie].

Re-ligation, a binding-again or back (by

Un-ligable, not-bound or answerable.

Al-ly, to unite or bind-to.

Al-legiance, a binding-to (a superior).

Al-loy, to unite-(as metal) to (metal):

to mix. Ligament, League, Liable,

Liege, belong.

Pyro-LIGNEOUS, Gr., Lat. (lignum, fallen wood; perh. such as is gathered in forests; lego, I gather, under Lagos); (arising from) fired or burnt wood. Ligneous, belongs.

-LIKE, LY. See previous Index.

-LIMEN, Lat. (poss. fr. limus, obli-lique, transverse), the transverse beam, lintel, or threshold.

Eliminate, (to carry) out or over-the threshold.

Post-liminary, (done) after (leaving)

-the threshold; i. e., after commencing.

Pre-liminary, (done) before (reaching)-the threshold; i. e., before commencing.

Post-liminy, (restoration to one's) threshold (and rights)-after (absence).

Sub-lime, aloft, on high, elevated;

(poss. taken from the upward flight of a bird after having issued from) under-the lintel (of the house or of his cage).

IL-LIMITABLE, Lat. (limes, a boundary or limit placed across: perh.

fr. limus, oblique; see Lumen); not -to be bounded. Limit, belongs.

Bu-LIMY, Gr. (leimos, hunger, emptiness; prob. fr. leipo, I am wanting: see Lipsis); large; i. e., voracious-hunger; literally, ox-hunger, as we say horse radish for large radish.

-LINEA,* Lat., a rope, a line. Linum,

(Gr. linon, flax, thread); flax.

De-lineate, (to lay) down (or describe)

-by lines.

Multi-lineal, (having) many-lines.

Recti-lineal, (having) right or straight -lines.

Gri-de-lin, (Fr.), gray-of-flax; flax-gray. Line, Lineament, also Linen,

Lint, Lawn, belong.

-LING. See previous Index.

-LINQUO, Lat., I leave, quit, forsake, withdraw, shrink from. Lictum, to leave. [-from (duty).

De-lingent, with-drawing or running

Re-linguish, to leave-back or behind;

to give back or up.

De-reliction, a withdrawal-from.

Re-lic, (that which is) left-behind or remains.

Re-lict, (one) left-behind.

-LIPSIS, Eng., of Gr. Leipsis, a leaving, omission, falling. Leipo, I leave, leave behind, withdraw from,

am wanting or deficient.

Eclipse, a withdrawal-out of (right, of a luminary): Ecliptic, a zone where eclipses happen; hence,

El-lipse, (a variation of eclipse);

(an oval figure in which the squares of the ordinates) full-from (reaching the size of the rectangle under the parameters and abscissa):

El-lipsis, a leaving-out (part of a sentence).

Para-lipsis, a leaving (with slight mention in passing)-by; intentional omission. Rhet.: hence,

Para-lipomena, Lat. (things) left (out in passing)-by; a supplement.

Ob-LIQUE, Lat. (liquus, fr. Gr. loxos:

see Luro); slanting-down upon or against.

-LIQUEO, Lat. (prob. fr. lix, liquor, water); I reduce to water, I melt.

Liquesco, I begin to melt. See

Lixation. [gather.

Col-ligate, to melt-altogether, or to

De-ligate, to melt-down.

De-liquescence, liable or beginning to melt-down (by absorption of the moisture of the air). Ligate,

Liquor, belong.

-LISUM, Lat. termin. of compds. of Liesum, to hurt. Lædo, I hurt or injure, as by a blow.

Al-lision, injury (by dashing)-to or against. [gather.

Col-lision, injury (by dashing)-to

E-lision, injury (by dashing or striking)-out: Collide, Elide, belong.

-LITE,* Eng., Lith, Fr. of Gr.

Lithos, (akin to laos: see Lapidis);

a stone.

Actino-lite, ray-stone. [grapes.

Botryo-lite, stone-(like) a cluster of Risso-lite, flax-stone. [fruit.

Carmo-lite, Carp-ite, fruit-stone, fossil

Chryso-lite, gold-stone.

Colo-lite, Col-ite, intestine-stone, petrified (fish)-intestine.

Copro-lite, ordure (bezoar)-stone.

Cupho-lite, light (or pearl)-stone.

* See the previous Index.

-LOGOS

-LITERA

Cryo-lite, ice-stone.
Dendro-lite, Dendr-lite, tree-stone, petrified-tree.
Glauco-lite, (a greenish) blue-stone.
Gompho-lite, nail or tooth-stone.
Grapho-lite, a stone-having marks like written (characters).
Gyro-lite, glass-stone: opal.
Ieno-lite, a stone (impressed with) foot-marks.
Ichthyo-doru-lite, Ichthyo-dor-lite, fish-spear-stone, fossil-fish-spear or fish-bones.
Ichthyo-lite, Ichth-lite, fish-stone, a fossil-fish.
Lepido-lite, scale or granular-stone.
Litho-lite, stone-stone.
Malaco-lite, honey or mellitic (acid)-stone.
Meo-lite, dead (flesh or putrid) smelling-stone.
Novacu-lite, (Lat. and Gr.), razor (sharpening)-stone.
Nummo-lite, Numm-lite, stone (like) money; fossil-coin (like animals).
Oo-lite, egg-stone; (roestone).
Ornitho-lite, Ornith-lite, bird-stone, a fossil-bird.
Phono-lite, voice or sonorous-stone.
Pimo-lite, greasy-stone.
Poly-ha-lite, a stone (compounded of) many (kinds of)-salt.
Pyr-osma-lite, a stone (giving) odour (when) fired or burnt. [spar.
Ryaco-lite, stream-stone; glassy feld-
Sarco-lite, flesh (coloured)-stone: zeolite.
Scapo-lite, rod (like)-stone.
Stauro-lite, cross-stone.
Zeo-lite, stone (appearing to) boil (when) melted.
Aero-lith, Aero-lite, an air or meteoric stone.
Mono-lith, one or single-stone, an obelisk. Lithic, belongs.

-LITERA, Lat. (poss. fr. litum, to smear; fr. lino, I smear. s.e. Delib-; an alphabetic letter, poss. ble); written on a tablet smeared with wax.

Il-literate, un-lettered, not-learned. Ob-literate, (to erase by scraping anything) against or over the letters. Tri-literal, (a putting letter) to Al-literation, repetition of a letter. Letter, Literal, Literature, belong.

De-LITESCENCE, Lat. (litesco, I begin to be hid; fr. lateo, I lie hid; fr. Gr. letho, I escape notice, forget, become oblivious; or a lying hid or hiding-from, away, or down. Latent, Latitant, and (fr. the Gr. Lethe, oblivion), Lethal, causing oblivion or death, belong.

Myrio-LITRE, Gr. (litra, a pound; a thousand-pound (weight). See Libra.

LITY, LLE.
E-LIXATION. Lat. (lix, liquor, water); a boiling-up or out, distillation: Elixir, an essence from distillation. Lixivium, Lye, belong.

-LOBOS, Gr. (fr. lepo; see Lepis; perh. akin to Eng. lap, lapnet); Lobus, Lat., the lobe or pod of the ear, resembling the ped of leguminous plants. Lobe, Lob, Lobby, belong.

Bi-lobate, three-lobed.
Tri-lobate, Looby, belong. covered passage, belong.

-LOCUS, Lat. (prob. fr. Gr. lego, I lay or place; see Logos); a place, a place of rest or residence. Loculo, a little place, a cell.

Al-locate, (to join) to a place; to allot.
Col-locate, (to put) together-in (the same) place; to place-(what has been already brought) together.

Dis-locate, (to put) apart or far from (its) place; to put out of joint.

Al-location, (allowance) to (a man of money expended in)-a place or office; allotment.

E-location, (removal) from out of inter-location, a placing-between.

Trans-location, (a movin.) across: a place.

Bi-ocular, double-celled or cham-bred.
Multi-ocular, many celled.
Uni-ocular, one-celled.

-LOGOS, *Gr., a word, laid down outwardly to express an inward thought, speech, discourse, account, reasoning, ratio, science, treatise. Lectus, spoken, gathered, chosen. Logo, *I lay, place, so as to choose, sleep, I lay in order, so as to choose, gather, gather the meaning or read, or so as to enumerate. LECTUS, *I lay, chosen, gathered, read; Logo, *I lay, gather, read. Loqor, *I speak: Locutus, *having spoken. Legis, that which is laid down, law: Legis, of law: Licitus, lawful, allowable.

Apo-logue, a speaking-from (the plain matter), an allusion or fable.

Cata-logue, a complete or downward enumeration.

Deca-logue, the ten-enumerations.

Di-logue, a speaking-dividely or oppositely. [piece].

Ee-logue, a chosen-out or select.

Epi-logue, an after-speech.

Mono-logue, a speech-(by) one; a soli-logue.

Mono-poly-logue, a speech by-one (man, imitative of)-many (persons).

Pro-logue, a speech-beforehand.

Aero-logy, doctrine (of the effects of) the air. Med.

Amphi-bo-logy, a speech-casting about; i. e., doubtful.

Ana-logy, a reasoning-upward or backward (so as to show identity of cause, and deduce a probable similarity of effect).

Angio-logy, discourse on-the vessels (of the body).

Antho-logy, a discourse on or collection-of-flowers or beauties.

Anthropo-logy, discourse on-(the nature of) man. [a charge].

Apo-logy, a word-from (in answer to) nature of man.

Archeo-logy, discourse on-ancient (things).

Astro-logy, discourse on (the influences of) the stars.

Asstro-theo-logy, discourse on-(the proof given by) the stars (of the existence of) a God.

Brachyo-logy, a speaking-concise.

Chi-ro-logy, a speaking-with the hand or fingers.

Chondro-logy, discourse on-the cartilages.

Chrono-logy, doctrine of-(production of) time.

Chryso-logy, discourse on-(conduct of wealth in) gold. Pol. Econ.

Concho-logy, science-of shells (and shell fish). [of] the world.

Cosmo-logy, doctrine of (the origin of) the world.

Cosmo-logy, science of (the influence of mind on the shape of) the skull.

Cyrio-logy, a discourse on proper or real (hieroglyphics opposed to figurative). [with one's]-fingers.

Dactylo-logy, Dacty-logy, a speaking of-fingers.

Demono-logy, discourse on-(man's) duty. [and its diseases].

Deonto-logy, discourse on-(man's) duty. [and its diseases].

Dermato-logy, science-of the skin (the speaking of) a word-a second (time); ana-di-plosis. (meaning).

Di-logy, a speaking with-double (meaning).

Doxo-logy, a speech (ascribing)-glory.

Entero-logy, discourse on-the intestines.

Entomo-logy, discourse on-in-secta.

Etho-logy, science of-character.

Etiology, science of-the causes (of disease).

Etymo-logy, science of-the true (meaning of) words. [prayers].

Eucho-logy, a discourse or book-of (prayers).

Eu-logy, a speaking-well (of).

Genea-logy, account of-(a man's) race.

Geo-logy, science of-(composition of) the earth.

Glosso-logy, account of-tongues, glosses, or interpretations.

Helmintho-logy, treatise on-worms.

Herpeto-logy, discourse on-reptiles or creepers.

Horismo-logy, account of-(technical) terms or bounds.

Horo-logy, science (of making) horo-loges or hour-tellers or clocks.

Hydro-logy, science (of properties of) water. [atmosphere].

Hygro-logy, science of-moisture (in water).

Hysro-logy, (a putting of) a letter (word) into the place of a former.

Ichthyo-logy, science of-fishes.

Ideology, science of-(evolutions of) ideas. [alone].

Lexico-logy, a treatise on-words.

Litho-logy, the science of-stones.

Malaco-logy, science of-soft (bodied animals) or mollusks.

Mamma-logy, (Lat. and Gr.), science (of animals having)-breasts.

Meno-logy, an account-of months.

Morpho-logy, science of-(a common form or plan (in organs of plants)).

Myo-logy, doctrine of-the muscles.

Mytho-logy, account of-(early histo-rica) fables.

Neuro-logy, account of-the dead; an obituary.

Neuro-logy, the doctrine of-the nerves.

Noso-logy, the doctrine of-diseases.

Odonto-logy, the doctrine of-the teeth.

Onto-logy, the science-of being or existence.

Ornitho-logy, account-of birds.

Ortho-logy, a right-account (of things).

Orycto-logy, science of-fossils or (things) dug up.

Osteo-logy, doctrine of-the bones.

Paleo-onto-logy, discourse on-ancient existences; i. e., on fossil organic remains. [repetition].

Pali-logy, a speaking-(over) again; a cyclopedia.

Patho-logy, doctrine of-suffering or disease. [medicines].

Pharmacology, science of-drugs or medicine.

Philology, fondness (for the science of) speech or language.

Phono-logy, doctrine of-(elementary sounds of) the voice.

Phraseo-logy, account-of (peculiar modes of) speech, phrase, or style.

Phreno-logy, science-of the mind (of things) as modifying the form of (the brain as) modifying the form of (the skull). [of thing].

Physio-logy, doctrine-of the nature.

Phyto-logy, doctrine of-plants.

Pseudo-logy, falsehood of-speech.

Psycho-logy, doctrine of-the soul.

Pyreto-logy, doctrine of-very heat.

Rhabdo-logy, science of-(multi-ing. &c. by) rods.

Sarco-logy, doctrine-of the flesh (parts of the body).

Semato-logy, doctrine of-(lang. the sign of) thought. [or v].

Splanchno-logy, doctrine of-the Auto-logy, a speaking the same thing (in different words).

Techno-logy, a treatise on-art.
Telco-logy, doctrine of-final (causes).
Terato-logy, discourse on monstrosities.
Termo-logy, (Lat and Gr.), science or knowledge of-terms or boundaries.
Tetra-logy, (collection of) four-(dramatic) treatises or poems.
Theo-logy, doctrine of-(the relations of man to) God. [sculpture].
Toreumato-logy, science or account of Toxico-logy, science of-poisons.
Tri-logy, (a series of) three-(dramatic) treatises or poems.
Zoo-logy, the science of-animals.
Zymo-logy, the doctrine of-fermentation.
Homologous, of similar-ratio or proportional, not-(according to correct) reasoning. [summing up].
Epi-logic, an after-enumeration; a Neo-logic, a new-word.
Para-logic, a reasoning-beside (the mark) or false.
Syl-logic, a connected-reasoning.
Ana-lect, a gathering-back (from others) a-lection.
Dia-lect (language) spoken-throughout (a territory).
E-lect, chosen-out, a-lected.
Prolegomena, (things) spoken-before: preliminary observations. Logic, poss. Lodge, belong. The following are all Latin relations.
Col-lect, to gather-together; hence, perhaps Cull and Coil.
E-lect, gathered or chosen-out of.
Intellect, (that which dis-criminates or chooses-between (things)).
Neg-lect, not-to gather, to leave untouched.
Pre-lect, to read-(a lecture) b-fore (people).
Re-col-lect, to gather-together-again or back (as in mind).
Se-lect, to choose-(and place) apart. Llection, belongs.
Col-lege, a gathering-together (or collection of individuals). [lois].
Sorti-lege, a drawing or choosing of-Col-league, one chosen-with (another).
Diligent, (earnest, as if following an object) chosen or set-apart (from others).
E-legant, chosen or picked-out; E-ligible, (worth) picking-out.
Il-legible, not-to be read. Legible, Legend, belong.
Col-loquy, a speaking-together.
Ob-loquy, a speaking-against.
Soli-loquy, a speech-(by) oneself.
Multi-loquy, foolish-speaking.
E-loquence, a speaking-out.
Magni-loquence, a speaking-big.
Ventri-loquism, a speaking-(as if) from the belly.
Al-location, a speaking-to; address.
Circum-location, a round about speech.
E-location, a speaking-out.
Inter-location, a speaking-between; Interchange of speech.
Pro-locutor, a speaker-in front of (others); a chairman. Loquacious, Location, belong.
Il-legal, Il-legitimate, not-lawful.
Privi-lege, a private-allowance or permission.
Il-licit, not-allowable. Legal, Legitimate, Loyal, and prob. Law, belong. Lay, Lie are akin to the class.

LOIN, Fr. (fr. Lat. longus, wh. see; akin to Eng. long); at a long distance, far off, afar. (one).
E loin, (to remove) far-out of or from Pur-loin, (to remove) to a distance (from the owner)-far (oneself); to steal quietly.

-LONGU*, Lat., long.
Ob-long, long-(in proportion to the part) opposed; i. e., to the breadth.
Pro-long, to lengthen-(by adding to the) front.
Elongate, to lengthen-out or extend.
Long, Length, Belong, are akin to the class.
Che-LOO, Chinese, governor's-road.
-LOOP, Lope, Eng. (prob. akin to Lat. lepus, a hare; and Gr. elaphos, a deer; also to Leri, wh. see); to leap, to run with leaps, to run.
E-lope, to run-out of (an abode or legitimate protection). [or passage].
Gant-lope, perh. the running-a going, Inter-loper, (one who) leaps or runs -between (and intercepts some advantage). Leap, Lobster, a leaping fish, Leveret, Loop, a bow, bend, curve, or leaping, in a string or twig; belong. Light, in weight, is perh. akin.
-LOPHOS, Gr. (fr. lepo: see Lepis); the back of the neck, which the yoke peels, skins, or rubs; the mane or crest.
Electro-loph, rock's-crest; a plant.
Brachy-loph, the short-necked (agami-an).
Chryso-loph, the gold-crested (pheas-Dicho-loph, the divided-crest (wader). [raco].
Erythro-loph, the red-crested (tou--LOQUOR. See under Logos.
-LORN*, LOW.
-LUCENS, Lucidus, Lat., shining, clear. Lucco, I shine. Lucina, of light. Lux (fr. Gr. lao, I see, behold, look at: comp. Glen); light. Lumen, light. Lustr, I enlighten, clarify, purify.
Re-lucent, shining-back, reflecting.
Trans-lucent, Trans-lucent, shining -through, transparent.
Nocti-lucent, Nocti-lucent, shining by-night.
Pel lucid, thoroughly-clear.
E-lucidate, (to make to) shine-out, to clear. [dawn].
Ante-lucan, before -(day)light or Il-lume, (to throw) light-on.
Re-lume, to light-again.
Al-luminor, (one who gives) lights (and ornaments)-to; now Limner.
Il-lustrate, (to throw) light-upon; to make clear.
Per-lustration, a thorough-clarifying.
Lucent, Luculent, Lucid, Lucubration, and (from the same root through Gr. Lampo, I give light); Lamp, Limpid, belong.
-LUCTOR, Lat. (fr. lao, wh. see); I bend my opponent slantwise in wrestling; I wrestle or struggle.
Col-luctation, a struggling-with; a complete-struggle. [forth].
E-luctation, a struggling-out of or Ob-luctation, a struggling-against.
Re-luctant, struggling-back. Luctation, belongs.
-LUDO*, Lat., I play. Lusum, to play.
Al-lude, (to refer) to-(by) a play (on words, quibble, or pun).
Col-lude, to play-together; i. e., into each other's hands.
De-lude, (to draw) from (right)-by playing (false); (to make) game-of.
E-lude, (to get) out or away-by playing (false); i. e., by artifice.
Il-lude, to play-upon (one).
Inter-lude, a play or drama-between (others).

Pre-lude, a playing-beforehand.
Il-lusory, Il-luding; deceptive.
Pro-lusion, a pre-lude. Ludibrious, Ludicrous, Lusory, belong.
-LUNA*, Lat. (prob. Lucina, fr. Lucens, wh. see); the moon.
Inter-lune, (the period when) the moon-is between (the sun and earth); hence, interlunar.
Pleni-lune, the full-moon.
Semi-lune, a half-moon.
Sub-lunary, beneath-the moon, terrestrial. [moon, celestial].
Super-lunary, above or beyond the Trans-lunary, across or beyond the moon. Lunar, Lunacy, belong.
-LUO, Lat. (fr. Gr. lao, I wash; perh. akin to Lago); I wash or purge. Laro, I wash.
Di-lute, to separate (the particles) -by washing or adding liquid.
E-lute, to wash (the dirt)-out of.
Al-luent, washing (the dirt)-from or away; hence, Ablution. [twem].
Inter-luent, washing or flowing-be-
Al-luvial, washed-to or upon; added -by washing.
Di-luvial, washing (all things)-apart or away: De-luge (Fr.): Ante-diluvian, before-the deluge.
E-lutrate, to wash-(the dirt) out of; is perh. akin. Lave, Lotion, Launder, belong.
-LUXO, Lat. (fr. Gr. loxos, slanting crosswise: see Lique); I strain crosswise; I bend or put out of joint. Luxas, a going out of place, excess, riot, luxury.
E-luxate, to strain crosswise-out of (joint or place).
Il-luxurious, not (given to)-excess Luxation, Luxury, belong.
-LYO*, Eng. of Gr. Lao, I loose, unfasten, ransom. Lusis, a loosing. Lao, Lat., I loose, ransom.
Ana-lyse, to loosen or separate-back (to its elements for the sake of scrutiny); hence, Analysis, Analytic.
Para-lyze, to loosen-completely (so that the parts may be placed at the side); hence, Paralysis and Palsy.
Antho-lysis, a loosening, breaking up, or change of-flowers (from their usual state).
Apo-lysis, a loosening-from (a disease).
Cata-lysis, a thorough-loosening or dis-solution (so that the parts may be laid down). [strength].
Dia-lysis, a thorough-loosening (of
-LYSSA, Eng. of Gr. Lussa, martial rage, madness, (as of dogs).
A-lyssum, (madwort; which cures or deprives of-madness.
Anti-lysm, (a remedy) against-madness.
-MACHE*, Gr., a battle, fight, strife, combat, war. -(and) mice.
Batracho-mio-machy, a battle of-frogs
Giganto-machy, combats (of)-giants.
Logo-machy, a war of-words.
Mono-machy, single-combat.
Nau-machy, a ship-fight.
Scio-machy, a fighting-with a shadow; i. e., a beating the air for practice.
Theo-machy, a fighting or rebellion -(against) God.
Di-mach, a combatant or soldier (fighting) two (ways, on horseback and on foot).
Heresi-mach, a combatant or fighter (against) heresy.
Pneumato-mach, a combatant or impugner (of the divinity of the holy) -Spirit.
E-MACIATE, Lat. (macco, I am leann or lank; perh. fr. Gr. macro, long, lank; fr. mecos, length); to thin out; to stretch or change into thinness-out of a former condition, Macerate, to make thin and tender, and Meagre are closely akin.

MACULA

MACULA, Lat., a spot or stain. Bi-maculate, (marked with) two spots. E-maculate, (to take) stains-out of. Im-maculate, spot-less. To Maculate, Im-maculate, spot, belong.

Mole, a spot, belong. Dis-MAL, Eng. (perh. fr. Lat. malus, bad, evil); twice or doubly-evil; or evil-day. To mulus, belong. Malady, Malice, Malign, Malison, Malure.

Un-MALLEABLE, Lat. (mallens, a mallet); not to be hammered (into shape). Maul, Mall, belong.

Sub-MAMMILLARY, Lat. (mamma, a child's first word, a mother; a mother's breast); under-the-breasts. E-MANATE, Lat. (mano, I flow; poss. fr. meo: see Meatus); to flow out (in a small stream).

-MANCY: see also Manteia.

-MANDO* Lat. (perh. fr. manus -do, into the hands I give: see Manus, Ditus); I intrust with a commission; I send away, order, bid.

Com-mand, to bid-completely, or at once; (to unite) a commission with; to enjoin.

Counter-mand, to oppose or forego-a (former) bidding. (person).

Re-mand, to bid, order, or send-back. De-mand, to intrust-with; i. e., to Com-mend, to a person, with injunction the care of (a person, with injunction as to the value of the charge); to value highly, to praise: Recommend, (to restore or give) back-(a thing) commended, (with a word confirmatory of its value); to give-back or give (with praise). Mandate, belongs.

-MANENS, Lat., staying, abiding. Ma-neo, (fr. Gr. meno; I wait; fr. meo I strive after, seek, desire steadfastly); I stay. See Mania. Im-manent, abiding-in; inherent. Per-manent, abiding-throughout or long.

Re-mnant, (that which) stays or is left-back or behind.

Re-main, to stay-back or behind. Mansion, Manse, prob. Mason, perh. Message, belong.

-MANIA, Gr. (fr. mainomai, I rage; fr. mao: see Maton); madness, rage.

Biblio-mania, rage for books. Mono-mania, madness on-one (subject).

-MANTEIA, Gr. (fr. mantis, a divinely inspired or phrensated prophet; fr. mainomai: see Mania); divination, prophecy.

Aero-mancy, divination (by spectres) in the air. (picking up corn).

Alectryo-mancy, divination-by cocks (each of) javelins.

Belo-mancy, divination-by (the curl of) wine.

Capno-mancy, divination-by (the lines of) the hand.

Chiro-mancy, divination-by (pouring of) money, divination-by ventriloquism).

Gastro-mancy, divination-by (drawing circles on) the earth.

Geo-mancy, divination-by (walking in) water.

Gyro-mancy, divination-by (observing a circle).

Hydro-mancy, divination-by (marks on or sound of) stones.

A-MASS

Neero-mancy, divination-by (consulting the spirits of) the dead.

Oneiro-mancy, divination-by dreams. Ono-mancy, divination-by (the letters of) the name.

Ophio-mancy, divination-by (the coils of) serpents. (flight of) birds

Ornitho-mancy, divination-by (the flight of) birds. (flight of) birds

Psycho-mancy, divination-by (the souls departed) spirits.

Pyro-mancy, divination-by (sacrificial fires)-by a rod.

Rhabdo-mancy, divination (of) mirrors. Sticho-mancy, divination-by lines (in hot) ashes.

Tephro-mancy, divination-by (figures books). Theo-mancy, divination-by (the answer of) the god (himself).

-MANUS, Lat., Main, Fr., the hand. Bi-manous, (having) two-hands.

Pedi-manous, (having) the foot-(made like) a hand, and the hand (like a) foot: Pedi-man, one having, &c. as the opossom.

Quadru-manous, having four-(as it were) hands.

Simplici-manous, (having) simple or fingerless-hands. (of-the hand).

E-mancipate, (to free or let go) out Leger-de-main, light or sleight-of-hand.

Mort-main, (possession of land) in dead -hands; i. e., that cannot alienate. Manual, Manacle, Manage, belong.

-MARAINO, Gr., I put out, quench, weaken, waste, fade. Marcesco, Lat., I pine away, fade, putrify.

A-maranth, the un-fading (plant). Im-marcescible, not-(capable of) fading. Marcid, belongs.

En-MARBLE, Eng. (fr. Lat. marmor, marble; fr. Gr. marmaros, marble; fr. marmairo, mair, I flash, gleam, sparkle); to imbue with-marble (coldness). Marmorate, Marble, belong. Emerald, or Esmerald, is akin.

Litho-MARGE, Gr., Lat. (marga, marl); stone-marl. Marl, belongs.

E-MARGINATE, Lat. (margo, a brink); (to cut or chip) out from the margin or brink. Marge, Margin, belong.

-MARINUS, Lat., belonging to the sea. Mare, the sea.

Sub-marine, under-the sea. Trans-marine, across-the sea.

Ultra-marine, beyond or beyond (the blueness of)-the sea.

Cor(vus)-morant, the sea-raven. Marine, Maritime, and poss. Marsh, belong.

Proto-MARTYR, Gr. (martyr, a witness; poss. akin to Memort); the first-martyr or witness.

-MAS* Lat. (akin to Mars, the god of bravery and war; perh. to Gr. Ares, Mars, and to Lat. arma, arms); a male, a man. Maris, of a male.

E-masculate, (to take) the manhood out of or from.

Inter-marry, (to be united) amongst (each other) or reciprocally-to a man.

Re-marry, (to be united) to a man -again. Masculine, Male, Marital, Marry: also Mars, March, Martial, belong.

A-MASS* Lat. (massa, a heap or mass; prob. fr. Gr. masso, I knead together, I handle eagerly or covetously; fr. mao: see Maton); (to bring) to a heap; (to add heap) to -heap. Mass, Mace, a club, peri. Massacre, belong. Moustache, (fr.

Gr. mastax, the jaw or pounder; fr. masso) is akin, as also, though Lat., mando, I chew), are Mandible and Manducate.

-MATER. See under, Meter.

-MATHEMA* Gr., a lesson, learning. Mathesis (fr. mathein, to learn by inquiry); the getting knowledge, learning: akin to Mechanical.

Philo-math, a lover of-learning. Apo-mathema, (loss of or a being) from-learning (by disease): forgetfulness.

Chresto-mathy, useful-knowledge (such as is found in a common place book).

Opsi-mathy, a learning-late (in life). Poly-mathy, knowledge of -many (arts). Mathematics, belongs.

Auto-MATON, Gr. (mao, I strive after, wish, attempt, long for; a seek, touch, grasp; covet); (a machine moving apparently by its own or self-wish or will. Muses, the seeking or inventing goddesses, Mosaic, elegant, as if made by the Muses, belong.

-MATURUS, Lat. (poss. fr. matus, mellow, rosy; fr. Matuta, Aurora; and mané in the morning, akin to Eng. matin, matutinal); ripe. Im-mature, not-ripe.

Pre-mature, before-ripeness. Mature, belongs.

Inter-MAXILLARY, Lat. (maxilla, the jaw which kneads or pounds things into a Mass, wh. see); between-the jaw bones.

A-MAZON, Gr. (mazos, a breast: akin to Mass, wh. see); (a person without-(one) breast; i. e., having only one.

-MEATUS, Lat., a passage. Meo, I go, pass, or flow. [trate.]

Per-meate, to pass-through or pene Im-meability, (a being) not-passable, or (that which makes a thing) not-passable. (passing-back.)

Ir-re-meable, not (allowing any) contrivance, art; fr. mechos, a contrivance, expedient, remedy); not done by, or belonging to-machinery or art. Machinate, Mechanic, Machine, belong.

-MEDICOR, Lat., I give, in order to cure. Medeor, (fr. Gr. medomai, I take care of, I devise remedies; akin to mechos: see Mechanical); I cure or heal.

Im-medicable, not to be cured. Re-medey, (that which will bring back-health; hence, Ir-re-mediable, not-to be remedied. Medical, Medicate, Medicine, belong. Poss. Meditate, to think, devise, is akin.

-MEDIUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. mesos, the middle; fr. Meta, between: wh. see in list of prefixes); the middle Im-mediate, (being or acting directly); i. e., without-a middle intervening (thing).

Inter-mediate, (being) in the middle-between (others). (of two)

Bi-medial, (being) a middle or middle-between (others). (of two)

Di-mediate, Mean, the middle, Mediate, Mean, the middle, Medium, Mediocre, Mizzen, p. Moiety, belong.

-MELAS, Gr., dark, black. Calo-mel, beautiful or excellent Calo-mel, beautiful or excellent (of Ethiop's (mineral). Cryso-mel, a gold and-black (bo-

-MELI, Gr., Mel, Lat., honey.

An-aphro-mel, honey-(which will) not froth.
 Dia-rh-do-mel, (a composition made) through or of rose (juice) and honey. Mfd.
 Dros-mel, honey-dew; i. e., manna.
 Eleo-mel, oil-honey; a gum.
 Hydro-mel, water and honey (mixture); metheglyn.
 Myzo-mel, a honey-sucking (bird)
 Oxy-mel, (a mixture of) acid and honey.
 Picro-mel, bitter-honey: a bitter sweet substance in bile. Perh. Molasses, belongs.
 A-MELIORATE, Lat. (melius, better: prob. fr. magis-velis, more what you wish; see Volo); (to bring) to-better.
 -MEMORIA,* Lat., the faculty which retains or stays things; memory. Memini (fr. Gr. mnao, I remember; fr. meno and mao: see Mnesis and Maneus); I remember or call to mind.
 Im-memorial, not (within)-memory.
 Com-memorate, to call to mind (anything, by associating it) with (a ceremony).
 Re-memorate, (to bring) back-to-memory or mind; hence, Re-member. Memorial, Memory, belong.
 -MEN.*
 -MEN, Gr. (fr. Sansc. mā, to measure); a month. Mene, the moon. Mensis, Lat., a month.
 Cata-menial, (happening over) against or upon-(each) month.
 Neo-menial, (happening on) the new moon or month. Mensitrium, Mensual, also Moon, Month, belong.
 -MENDA, Lat., blemish, defect, want, fault, error. Mendax, erroneous, lying, false. Mendacio, I beg from want or I tell my wants.
 A-mend, (to purge) from-fault.
 E-mend, (to bring) out of-faults.
 Mend, Mendacious, Mendicant, belong.
 -MENER, Fr. (poss. fr. Lat. Manus, the hand); to lead by hand, to bring, fetch, conduct. Menger, (fr. Manus, wh. see); to manage or guide by hand.
 A-menable, (that may be) brought-to (punishment, justice, &c.).
 De-mean, (to let loose) from-conduct or restraint; to behave or act when let loose from control; to behave.
 Menage, and perh. Mine, a place leading under ground, belong.
 Com-MENSAL, Lat. (mensa, a table or board); boarding i. e. eating-together. Mensual, belongs.
 -MENT.*
 -MENTIS, Lat., of the mind. Mens (fr. Gr. menos, strength, power, faculty; fr. mao: see Memoria); the mind Mnise r, I call to mind.
 Com-ment, (to cast) together-in-mind; (to couple one's own) mind, opinions or notes-with; to muse or make notes on.
 De-mentate, (to 'ake) the mind-from; to madden.
 Re-mix-ence, (a calling) back-to-mind. Mental, Mention, belong.
 Mind, to Mean, v. are prob. akin.
 A-MERCE,* Lat. (merces, share, wages, recompense; fr. Merx, wh. see); (to stop) from-(one's) wages or portion; to fine. Mercenary, belongs.
 MERCOR, Lat., buy. Merx (fr. merces: see Merce); that which will bring money or recompense; merchandise, commodity.

 Com-merce, a buying (and selling) -together or reciprocally; traffic.
 Im-mercantile, not (pertaining to) -buying (and selling). To Merchand, Merchant, Mercantile, Mercer, originally a merchant, and perh. Curmudgeon, a corn-merchant, a hoarder of corn, belong.
 -MERGO, Lat. (fr. mare; see Marinus); I dip in the sea; I dip or plunge. Merxum,* to dip.
 E-merge, (to rise) from or out of-a-plunge.
 Im-merge, to plunge-into.
 Sub-merge, to plunge-under.
 De-merge, to plunge-down.
 Im-merse, to plunge-into. Merge, Merson, belong.
 -MEROS, Meris, Gr., a part, share, portion, lot, destiny. Meiro, I portion, share, divide. Moirra, a part. Moros, lot, portion, fate, death. MEROE, Lat., I am portioned or deserve a portion, I deserve. Meritum, desert.
 Hepta-merid, (a thing with) seven-portions or divisions.
 Home-mery, similarity of-parts.
 Iso-meric, (having) equality of-parts or ratios.
 Capno-mor, (an oily substance) divided or parted-by smoke.
 De-merit, (L.) (gain obtained) from-desert; (Eng.), (a being far) from-desert; unworthiness.
 Pre-merit, previous-desert.
 E-merited, (discharged with desert) from-the portion or pay (of an office); superannuated. Merit, Meretricious, serving for hire, belong.
 -MEROS, Gr. the thigh, tarsus, or leg.
 Di-meran, (one of a class of beetles having apparently only two joints in each)-tarsus.
 Hetero-meran, (a beetle with) legs-varying (in the number of joints).
 Mono-meran, (a beetle with) one-(jointed) tarsi. [--(jointed) tarsi].
 Penta-meran, (a beetle with) five Tri-meran, (a beetle with) three-(jointed) tarsi.
 Epi-meral, upon-the thigh.
 -METER, Gr., a mother. Metra, the uterus. Miter, Lat., a mother. Akin to Mamma.
 De-meter, mother-earth; Ceres.
 Phyco-meter, the mother (or vegetating gelatine) of sea weeds.
 Hydro-meter, dropsy of the ut. rurs.
 Hydro-metridan, (one of a class of bugs having their birth place on)-the water.
 Dura-meter, (the hard or firm-mother or originator (of other membranes)).
 Pia-meter, the loving or tender-mother (membrane). Maternal, Matron, Matriculate, Matrimony, Mother, Matrice, belong.
 A-METHYST, Gr. (methuo, I am drunk with wine; fr. metliu, wine, mead); (a stone supposed to drive away or deprive of-intoxication. Mead, belongs.
 -METRON,* Gr. (fr. Sansc. mā, to measure; see Mena); a measure, reckoner, weight. Metrum, Lat., a measure. Mensus, measured. Metior, I measure. Metor, I mark out.
 Actino-meter, (an instrument for) measuring-(the intensity of the sun's) rays. [metratur].
 Anemo-meter, (velocity of the) wind.
 Aero-meter, a measurer of-the rarity (or density of fluids).

Atmo-meter, a measurer of-vapour or evaporation.
 Baro-meter, a measurer of-the weight (of the atmosphere).
 Chloro-meter, a measurer or tester of-chloride (of lime).
 Chrono-meter, a time-measurer or clock. [dip (of strata)].
 Clino-meter, a measurer of-the bend or
 Cyano-meter, a measurer of-the azure (of the atmosphere).
 Dia-meter, a measure-through (to opposite points). [sions]. Poet.
 Di-meter, a measure with-two (divi-
 Dros-meter, a measurer of-(the quantity of) dew.
 Dynamo-meter, a measurer of-(any kind of) force or power.
 Electro-meter, a measurer of-(the intensity of) electricity.
 Erio-meter, a measurer of-(the diameter of) wool or fibres.
 Eu-di-meter, a measurer of-(the components of) well, good, or calm-air.
 Gonio-meter, a measurer of-angles.
 Grapho-meter, a measurer which-writes or delineates: used in levelling.
 Hecato-meter, a measure with-a hundred (divisions).
 Helio-meter, a measurer of-the sun's (&c., diameter). [sions]. Poet.
 Hexa-meter, a measure with-six (divi-
 Hydro-meter, a measurer of-(the gravity and strength of) water or liquids.
 Hygro-meter, a measurer of-the moisture (of the atmosphere).
 Hyper-meter, (a thing) beyond-the measure. [restrial] magnetism.
 Magneto-meter, a measurer of-(ter-
 Mano-meter, a measurer of-the rarity, pliancy, or elasticity (of air).
 Micro meter, a measure of-small (distances). [measures].
 Myria-meter, ten thousand-meters or
 Ombro-meter, a rain-gauge or measurer.
 Oysio-meter, a measurer-(of the extent) of sight.
 Panto-chrono-meter, a universal-time-measurer: a compass, sundial, and clock in one instrument.
 Para-meter, a measure or proportional (drawn to)-the side (of the ellipse).
 Penta-meter, a measure with-five (divisions). Poet. [-around].
 Peri-meter, the measure or boundary
 Photo-meter, a measurer-(of the intensity) of light.
 Piezo-meter, a measurer of-the pressibility (of liquids).
 Polo-meter, a reckoner of foot(steps).
 Psychro-meter, a measurer of-the coolness (and therefore tension of vapour).
 Pyro-meter, a measurer-(of the intensity) of fire.
 Seismo-meter, a measurer of-shocks (as of earthquakes).
 Sphero-meter, a measurer of-the curvity (of optical glasses, &c.).
 Spigmo-meter, a reckoner of-puls(a-tions).
 Stereo-meter, a measurer of-(the specif. grav. of) solids, &c.
 Sym-piezo-meter, a measurer-(of the weight of air) by the compression (of gas).
 Tacho-meter, a measurer of-speed.
 Tetra-meter, a measure with-four (divisions). Poet.
 Thermo-meter, a measurer of warmth.
 Tribo-meter, a measurer of-rubbing or friction.
 Tri meter, a measure with-three (divisions). Poet.
 Zymo-meter, a measurer of-leaven or fermentation.

Aero-metry, a measuring (the qualities) of the air. [of]-staves.

Raculo-metry, a measuring (by means of) staves.

Cyclo-metry, a measuring-circles or cycles. [or figured space.]

Geo-metry, a measuring of the earth.

Horo-metry, a measuring by-hours.

Poly-gono-metry, the measurement (by rules) of polygons or figures with many-angles.

Sym-metry, measure-together; proportion: A-symmetry, want of proportion.

Iso-peri-metrical, (having) equal measure-around. Metre, belongs.

The rest are Latin.

Calori-meter, a measurer of heat (given out by bodies).

Centi-meter, a measure with a hundred (divisions). [sions].

Deci-meter, a measure with ten (divisions).

Gravi-meter, a measurer of (specific) gravities or weights.

Lacto-meter, a measurer of (the proportions of) cream to milk.

Milli-meter, a thousand-meters or measures.

Pedo-meter, a reckoner of foot (steps).

Pluvia-meter, a rain-gauge or measure.

Saccharo-meter, a measurer of (the spec. grav. of) sweet (infusions) or worts.

Alti-meter, a measuring of heights.

Im-mense, not to be measured.

Di-mension, measurement of (various) parts. [-in measure.]

Com-mensurate, together or similar.

Ad-measurement, (proportion found by applying) to a measure-to.

Castra-metation, the marking out of a camp. Measure, Mensurate, Mete, belong.

A-MIANTH, Gr. (miano, I dye a white body, I stain, taint, pollute); (earth tax, which is) not-depleted (or consumed by fire). Mianm, belongs.

MICO, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. Maiche; wh. see); I glitter in arms or battle; I shine, sparkle.

Di-mication, a glitter of separate or opposed (arms); a strife or contest.

E-mication, (a darting) out of sparkles. Mica, belongs.

-MIGRATUS, Lat., a removing. Migro, I migrate or remove.

Com-migrate, to move-together.

E-migrate, to move-out of (a place).

Im-migrate, to move-into (a place).

Inter-migrate, to move-among (each other) or reciprocally.

Re-migrate, to move-back.

Trans-migrate, to move or pass-across (from one place or condition to another). Migrate, belongs.

Chamo-MILE, Gr. (melon, an apple, or anything like; any tree fruit); the ground or dwarf-apple (smelling flower). Melon, and poss. Marmalade, belong.

Com-MILITANT, Lat. (miles, a soldier; prob. fr. mille, a thousand, a legion containing originally three thousand men); (one) fighting-with (another); a fellow soldier. Militant, Militia, belong. Mile, a thousand paces, Milliare, Millenary, Million, a thousand thousand, and perh. Millet, a thousand seeded plant, are akin.

Panto-MIME, Gr. (mimos, one who measures himself by another, an imitator; prob. fr. Sansc. mā: see Mā); an imitator or mimic of all (things or men). Mimic, Mime, belong.

-MINÆ, Lat. (perh. fr. mnas: see Mnas); warnings, threats. Minor,

I tower threateningly; I overhang threateningly; I threaten.

E-minent, towering or elevated-out of or from (the mass); egregious:

Pre-eminent, eminent - before (others); Super-eminent, eminent - above (others).

Im-minent, (hanging) threateningly - upon or over. [-forward.]

Pro-minent, (hanging) threateningly

Inter-minate, (to thrust or interpose) a threat-between.

Com-mination, a threatening - altogether or completely. Menace, Minacious, belong.

-MINUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. minus, little); less. Minuo, I lessen. Minutus, lessened. Minister, a servant, who is less than his (magister) greater or master.

Com-minute, to lessen (by crushing).

Di-minution, a lessening-(by) division (and abstraction): hence, Diminish.

Im-minution, (a bringing) into-less.

Ad-minister, (to afford) service or help - to: Pre-administration, a former-administering.

Sub-minister, to serve-under; to subserve, to underprop. Minim, Minish, Minor, Minute, Minnow, Minister, Minstrel, a minister of song. Miniature, prob. Minion, Mite, belong. Mince, to cut into minute pieces, is akin.

-MIRROR, * Lat., I gaze or look at with wonder or esteem. Mirabilis, wonderful.

Ad-mire, (to look) at-(with) wonder, esteem, or love: hence, Ad-mirable.

Co-miracle, an accompanying-wonderful (thing).

Un-mirrored, not (reflected in a) looking(glass). Miracle, Mirror, Marvel, belong.

Com-MISERATE, Lat. (miser, wretched); to be miserable with; to sympathize; to condole with or pity. Miser, one who afflicts himself to hoard, Miserable, belong.

Im-MITIGABLE, Lat. (mitigo, I soften; fr. mitis, mild); not-to be softened. Mitigate, belongs.

-MITTO, * Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. met - hiemi or - heo, I let go; fr. meta - heo, I send-beyond or away: see Etic); I let go, send, make to pass, thrust, throw, place, put. Missus, sent. Mettre, Fr., to put.

A-mit, to send-from or away; to lose: In-amissible.

Ad-mit, to send-to; (to make or suffer) to pass-to (a person or place); to let into: Re-admit: In-admissible.

Com-mit, to send (a charge)-with; i. e., under care of (an emissary); to intrust-with (a charge): Re-commit; Com-mitte; Sub-committee.

E-mit, to send-out.

Im-mit, to send-in.

Inter-mit, to send or place (time) -between; to discontinue by intervals. [to pass-within.]

Intro-mit, to send-within; (to suffer) Manu-mit, to send, (let) go, or pass, -from the hand: the Roman mode of freeing slaves.

Ob(-)mit, to send or thrust-against (so as to drive aside, and then to pass on); to pass by: or better, to make to pass-over; to pass-over (without notice); to leave out.

Per-mit, to send-through; (to make or suffer) to pass-through (a limit or boundary); to let loose, to free, to allow. [-by or beyond, to o-mit.]

Preter-mit, to send-beyond; to pass

Re-mit, to send-back; to put-back or away; to put off, to relax: Ir-remissible.

Sub-mit, to send-under; to pass or go -under; to undergo. [another.]

Trans-mit, to send-across (from one to De-mise, a casting or laying-down (of life, &c.).

Pre-mise, (that which is) sent or put -before; a preface; hence, Premises, buildings, &c., described in the early part of a deed.

Pro-mise, (a message or plan) sent -beforehand (to show what one means to do); a pledge for subsequent conduct put into another's hands: Com-promise, together or mutual-promise: v. to settle by mutual promise; to injure or hazard by a compromise.

Sur-mise, (something) sent or put -over and above (the truth); conjecture.

Dis-mis, to send-apart or away (as from employment). [dilatory.]

Re-miss, sent or let go back; slack.

Di-missory, sent-apart or away.

E-missary, (one) sent-out; a messenger.

In-a-missible, not-(liable to be) sent or let go-from or away; i. e., to be lost.

Com-mission, (a thing) sent, put, or trusted-with (one; i. e., into one's hands). Mitten, Mission, Message, Mass, from the dismissing words which concluded, Mis-sal, belong.

-MIXTUS or Mixtus, Lat., mingled. Misceo (fr. Gr. mignuo or misgo, I mix); I mix. Meler, Fr., to mix.

Com-mix, to mingle-together.

Im-mix, (to throw) into the mixture.

Inter-mix, to mingle-between (each other) or reciprocally.

Ad-mixture, an adding-to-a mixture; a mixture-(made by such) addition.

Per-mixible, (that may be) thoroughly-mixed.

Per-mixture, mixture-throughout.

Pro-miscuous, mingled-(as to the part) before; i. e., as to the front or appearance, (but not united in substance); confused but not totally blended; Indiscriminate. Mix, Missible, Mixture, Meal, Medley, Mottle, Mesline, Meddle, Pell-mell (perh. par) by-the heap or mixture, confusedly, perh. Milliner, a dealer in a mixed variety of things, belong.

-MNESIS, Mnēstis, Gr., a remembering, memory, recollection. Mnemon, mindful, remembering. Mnem (contracted form of mnas: see Mnas); I desire, seek for, court, woo, think on with desire, dwell or meditate on, remember, remind.

A-mnēstis, want or privation of memory: forgetfulness of injury, oblivion, pardon.

Ana-mnēstis, (a running) the recollection-back or upwards; enumeration: Ana-mnēstic, reminding (one of something)-back or by(-gone).

Hiero-mnemon, a reminder of sacred (rights) or sacrifices. Ant. Mnemonics, belongs.

Hypo-MOCHLEON, Gr (mochlos, a lever or crow bar; fr. ochlos, that which holds; holding: see Echo); (that which is) under-a lever; i. e., a fulcrum.

-MODUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. medimnos, an Attic corn measure: akin to Metron, wh. see); a measure, rule, manner.

Com-modious, adapted or measured -with (one's wants); agreeable, convenient, fit. Dis-commode, (to be) apart or far from commodious; hence, (to make one feel) apart or far from commodious: In-commode, (to make) not-commodious or comfortable: Ac-commode, to add - (what is) commodious; to add or supply - the measure (of one's wants).

Im-moderate, not (within)-measure.

Re-model, (to make) again-(after) a measure or copy.

Im-moderate, without-rule or reserve.

Mode, Modish, Moderate, Modest, Modulate, Mo, d, Model, Mould, to model, belong.

-MOLA, Lat. (fr. Gr. olai, olulai, coarse barley; fr. aleo, I grind; fr. elo, elauo, I drive, wound, bruise; see Alais); a mill, millstone, grinder; also what is ground, meal.

Sub-molar, under-(the teeth, called the grinders).

E-molument, (toll taken) out of the grinding or meal ground; proflit.

Im-molate, (to sprinkle) meal-upon (a victim before sacrifice); to sacrifice. [Molar, Mill, belong.

Com-molition, a grinding-all together.

-MOLES, Lat. (fr. Gr. mogos, mochthos, toil; perh. fr. oclthos, a mound, bank, burthen; and achthos, a burthen of grief; grief); a mass, a trouble, a grievous burthen.

Mole-tus, troublesome.

Un-molested, not-troubled. [pile.

De-molish, (to throw) down-a mass or

A-mulet, (something which drives) away or off-trouble. Mole, Molest, Moliminous, belong.

E-MOLLIENT, Lat. (mollis, mild, soft; fr. Gr. malacos, soft; akin to Meli and Mulcent; wh. see); softening out (the asperity of); removing asperity. Mull, perh. Mould, earth, and Moulder, belong.

A-MOMUM, Gr. (momos, blame, spot, ridicule; fr. memphomai, I blame); the spot-less (or fragrant plant). Mummy, a body preserved with amomum, belongs.

MONITUS,* Lat., warned, called to mind, advised. Moneo (fr. Gr. mnao; see Maesis); I call to mind, make to remember.

Con-monitive, warning-completely.

Ad-monish, (to give) advice or warning-to: Pre-admonish, to admonish - previously. [Pre-monition.

Pre-monish, to fore-learn; hence, Sub-monish, to warn-underhandedly; hence, Sum-mon, to call (from) under; to call-up.

Pre-munire, (a writ to) fore-learn (a person to appear). Monish, Monument, pos. Money, coin having a stamp which gives notice of its value, belong.

Anti-MONY, Gr. (fr. monos, alone; fr. ia, mia, feminine of heis, one; see Unus); (a metallic body) opposed to-solitude; i. e., seldom found un-mixed with other metals. Monal, Monachism, Monastery, Monk, belong.

-MONSTRO,* Lat. (fr. Monitus, wh. see); I call to mind by pointing, I show. Monstrum, something shown, a prodigy.

De-monstrate, (to lay) down-the shew or proof; to prove-clearly.

Pre-monstrate, to shew-beforehand.

De-monstrate, to shew or state (a matter)-again (with earnestness); to repeat, to expostulate. Monster, Monstration, belong.

-MONTIS, Lat., of a mountain. Mons (pos. fr. Gr. meno; see Maneus); the everlasting hills: a mount, elevation, or headland. Monter,* Fr., to mount, rise, or ascend.

Pro-montory, a headland-(jutting) forward.

Tra(n)s-montane, across or over-a mountain.

Ultra-montane, beyond-a mountain.

A-mount, to rise-to.

Dis-mount, (to throw) apart or down from-(its) elevation; (to come) down from-(one's) elevation; to descend.

Far-a-mount, thoroughly - raised - to (superiority).

Re-mount, to ascend-again.

Sur-mount, to over-come or rise-superior to.

Tant-a-mount, rising-to-as much; equivalent. Mount, Mountain, perh. Mound, belong.

MOO, Chinese, a tree; Moo-moo, a thicket; Moo-moo-moo, a forest.

-MORA, Lat. (pos. fr. Gr. meiro; see Meros); loss of time from division or want of unity of purpose; indecision, delay, stay.

Com-morance, a staying-together (in a place).

De-mur, to stay or keep-from or back.

Moration, perh. Moor, to stay a ship, belong.

-MORDEO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. moros -edo, I eat a division or portion; see Meros and Eat); I eat, bite, or gnaw. Morsus, bitten.

Re-mord, to gnaw-in return (for crime, as conscience).

Re-morse, a biting or compunction-in return (for guilt). Mordacious, Morsel, perh. Mortise, to fasten by biting it into a hole, belong.

-MORIS, Lat., of manner or custom.

Mos (pos. fr. Modus, wh. see); manner, custom, habit, temper.

Im-moral, not (of good)-habits

De-moralize, (to reduce) from (good) -habits.

De-mure, (Fr. dès), to the very point of-manners or reserve. Moral, Morose, showing temper, belong.

Oxy - MORON, Gr. (moros, dull, sluggish, stupid; akin to molus, feeble, sluggish, and Lat. mollis; see Mollent); a sharp (saying which at first appears)-foolish.

-MORPHE,* Gr., form, shape, appearance.

A-mor-phous, shape-less.

Anthropo - morphous, (resembling the) human-form.

Calli-morphous, of beautiful-shape.

Di-morphous, of double-form.

Iso-morphous, of equal or similar form.

Plesio-morphous, of near or resembling-form.

Poly-morphous, of many-shapes.

Pseudo-morphous, of false or deceptive-appearance.

Pyro-morphite, (native phosphate of lead, which subjected to fire-(assumes a globular) form.

Ana-morphosis, backward, wrong, or distorted-form.

Meta-morphosis, change of-form.

-MORTIS, Lat., of death. Mors (fr. Gr. moros; see Meros); death. Mortuus, diseased.

Im-mortal, not (subject to)-death.

A-mort, (through) to (the state of) -the dead.

Com-moriant, dying-together. Mort, Mortal, Mortuary, belong. Morbid, Morpheus; also Mortar, a dividing or destroying machine, are akin.

* See the previous Index.

-MOST, Mote,* MOUNT;* see also Montis.

-MOVEO, Lat., I move. Motes, moved. Motor, a mover.

Com - move, to move - completely hence, Commotion.

Em-move, to imbue with-motion.

Re-move, to move-back or away.

Im-movable, not-to be moved. [on.

Pro-mote, to move or urge-forward or

E-motion, a moving-up or out (of the mind); excitement.

Loco-motion, a moving-from place (to place). [movable).

Im-mobility, (quality of) not-being

Calori-motor, (a peculiar voltaic apparatus), a mover or producer-of heat.

Magneto-motor, (a voltaic apparatus), a mover or producer-of (electro) magnetism.

E-mute, (Fr.), a moving-out (or houses for the purpose of uproot); e-motion. Move, Moment, Motion, Mutiny, Muster, Movable, Mobile, Mob, the fickle crowd, belong.

Re-MUGIENT, Lat. (mugio, I low or bellow; fr. Gr. mucuo, I low; fr. muo; see Myo; all from the sound); bellowing-back.

De-MULCENT, Lat. (mulceo, I soothe; fr. Gr. melisso, I soothe; fr. Meli; wh. see; and akin to Mollent); softening or mellowing-down.

-MULGEO, Lat. (akin to Gr. amelgo, I milk; fr. gala, milk; see Lac); I milk.

E-mulgent, milking or straining-out: hence, E-mulsion.

Capri-mulgas, the goat -milker or sucker; a bird. Milk, perh. Mulet, belong.

Fan-ho-MUN, Chinese, foreign-river -see gates.

E-MUNCTORY, Lat. (mungo, I wipe, as the nose; fr. Gr. musso, muno, I squeeze; see Myo, and akin to masso, I knead; see Mass); wiping or cleansing-out. Mucus, Mucilage, belong.

-MUNDUS, Lat., clean, trim, orderly, systematic. Mundus; (perh. akin to the former: comp. the meanings of Cosmos, wh. however, is no relation to the present class); the system or universe; the world, an orb.

Im-mund, un-clean.

Ante-mundane, before-the world.

Extra-mundane, out-of-the world.

Infra-mundane, beneath-the world.

Inter-mundane, between-orb (and orb).

Supra-mundane, above-the world.

Ultra-mundane, beyond-the world.

Mundic, Mundane, belong.

-MUNITUS, Lat., fortified. Munia, (fr. Gr. amuno, muno, I keep or ward off); I fortify. Munitio, a guard, wall, or fortification.

Am-munition, (things necessary) to -fortifying or defence.

Pre-munition, a fortifying or securing (oneself)-beforehand (against objections). Munite, belongs.

-MUNUS, Lat., a gift, office, duty

Im-munity, (the having) no-duty (to perform); freedom from duty.

Re-munerate, (to give) a gift-in return; to reward. Pos. the present and previous classes are related. If so, Im-munity is reception within the walls, and hence freedom, privilege, exemption; or it is freedom from guarding the walls as a pos forming the duties of a citizen. Common, belonging to those within the walls is a body. Community, the people detected within the walls. Municipal, (having the rights of one) received within the walls; i. e., the rights of a citizen. Other words, as Remunerate, see above, Communicate, Commune, to make communis the thoughts, follow easily.

-MURUS

-NATUS

-NEURON

Re-MURMUR, Lat. (murmura, I murmur; fr. Gr. muro, I flow, trickle, ripple, fr. the sound); to murmur-again or back. Perh. Mumble, and Murn, strong beer, that makes one mumble, belong.

-MURUS* Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. mōra: see Meros); a wall, particularly of a city, of which each citizen had to keep an assigned portion in repair. Circum-mure, to wall-around.

Counter-mure, (to raise one) wall against (another to support it). Im-mure, (to imprison) within-walls. Mure, Mural, belong.

E-MUSCATION, Lat. (musculus, moss, also musk; fr. Gr. moschos, a young, tender shoot; also a young buffalo; fr. osche, ochos, a young branch: akin to Osme, wh. see); (a cleansing) from-moss. Moss, Musk, Muscadell; also Must, new wine; Nutmeg, musk-nut, perh. Mustard, from its strength, belong.

-MUSCULUS, Lat., a little mouse, and (from its resemblance to a skinned mouse), a muscle. Mus fr. Gr. mus: see Mys; a mouse. Uni-muscular, single-muscled. Muscle, Muscular, double-muscled. Muscle, Mouse, belong.

A-MUSEMENT, Lat. (musa, a muse; fr. Gr. mousa, a muse; fr. nao: see Alatona); (absence) from-the muses or study; relaxation. Muse, Music, to Muse, Museum, belong.

-MUTATUS* Lat., changed. Muto (fr. Movro, wh. see); I move or remove the possession of; I change. Com-mute, to change-together; i. e., to interchange.

Per-mutation, a changing-for (something): thorough-changing.

Trans-mutation, a changing-across (from one character to another).

Im-mutable, not-to be changed. Mutable, Moulit, Mew, to confine while moulting, belong.

Ob-MUTESCENCE, Lat. (mutus, dumb; fr. Gr. muttos, dumb, having the mouth shut; fr. muo: see Myo); (a stroke of) dumbness-upon (one); obstinate-silence or dumbness. Mute, Mutter, perh. Mutilate, deprived of the tongue or any member, belong.

Ceno-MYCE, Gr. (mucos, any slime, a sponge or mushroom; fr. musco, muo, I squeeze: see Mucitory); the hollow-mushroom.

-MYO, Eng. for Gr. Muo (fr. mu, mu, the sound we make when the lips are closed); I shut the lips or eyes, I wink or wince; I squeeze. Miom, a compressor or muscle. Meaz, a mussel, limpet, or shutting fish.

Bysm-mya, the mussel-with a byssus or flax (like adhesive organ).

Pholado-mya, the burrowing-mussel, (partaking of the characteristics of Pholadus and Mya).

Sole-mya, the tube (or razor shell)-mussel.

Di-mary, (one of a class of livalves having) two (adductor) muscles (or muscular impressions on each valve). [muscle.]

Mono-myary, (one, &c., with, one Try-myary, one, &c., with) three muscles. Mystery, that which is shut upon concealed, belongs. Poss. Muzzle is skin.

-MYS, Eng. for Gr. Mus (perh. fr. muo: see Myo); an animal which keeps itself close or shut up, or perh. a biting animal; a mouse.

Arcto-mys, or Arcto-me, the bear-mouse or marmot: hence, Arctomian: Arctomidan. [chinchilla.]

Calo-mys, the beautiful-mouse or Capromys, the bear-mouse; a dormouse. [a rat.]

Cereo-mys, the (long) tailed mouse; Chiro-mys, hand mouse; a squirrel.

Echi-mys, the spine (tailed)-mouse; a dormouse. [sand rat.]

Geo-mys, the earth-mouse: mole or Hela-mys, the springing-mouse or hare.

Hydro-mys, the water-mouse or rat. Lago-mys, hare-mouse or rat hare.

Plascolo-me, the pouched-mouse or wombat.

Ptero-mys, winged-mouse.

Sacco-mys, the sac or purse-mouse.

MYZAO, Eng. for Gr. Muzo (fr. muzo, I suck, with the sound mu: see Myo); I suck.

Antho-myza, a flower-sucker; a bird and insect. [prey.]

Petro-myzon, a stone-sucker or lampr.

Kiang-NAN, Chinese, south-river.

Pro-NAOS, Gr. (fr. nato, I dwell or inhabit, I settle down; perh. fr. nasso, I ram down or fill up; fr. neo, I pile or heap up: poss. akin to neo, I overflow or swim: see Naus); (the porch) before-a temple.

Spike-NARD, Lat. (nardus, nard, a plant; fr. Gr. nardos); (a perfumed oil from the nard-with corn) spiked (blossom). Nard, belong.

ENARRATION, Lat. (narro, I relate, or make known; fr. gnarus, knowing, skillful; fr. Gr. Enais: wh. see); a recital-out or at length. Narration, belong.

Sub-NATATION, Lat. (nato, I swim; fr. Gr. nao, I flow: see Naus); a swimming-under (water). Natation, Naiad, also Ocea-n, the rapid flowing, are akin.

-NATUS, Lat. (akin to Gr. gen-nao, I produce: see Genus); born, growing. Nascor, I am born. Naturalis, innate, natural. Naturus, nature. Natio, a nation, into which one is born.

Ad-nate, growing-(immediately) to: Bot: Ag-nate, born or belonging-to (by name; hence, related on the father's side). The first word is literal, the second figurate.

Con-nate, born together; united-in birth or origin: Cog-nate, kindred or together-by birth. The first word is literal, the second figurate.

E-nate, growing-out.

In-nate, within or in-born; growing-upon or on the (top).

Post-nate, born-after, subsequent.

Non-natural, not (constituting part of)-the nature (of man).

Preter-natural, beyond (what is) natural.

Super-natural, above (what is) natural.

Dis-natured, parted from or deprived of-natural (feelings).

Ad-nascent, ad-nate, wh. see. Con-nascent, born-together. Re-nascent, (springing) again-(into) birth.

Sub-nascent, growing-underneath. Inter-national, (regulating intercourse) between-nations.

De-nationality, (a being averse) from (one's) nation; decline of national (feeling). Nascent, Nation, Native, Nature, Natal, Navel or Noel, the nativity or Christmas, belong.

-NAUS, Gr. (fr. neo, I swim: akin to nao: see Natation); a ship. Nautas, a shipman, sailor, or navigator. Nichu, I swim.

Aero-naut, one who navigates-(in) the Argo-naut, one who navigates-d (in the ship) Argo.

Chiro-nect, a swimmer-by hand (like fins); a frog fish.

Noto-nect, a swimmer-on-the back; the water boatman insect: hence, Notonectidan.

Pleuro-nect, a swimmer-(on) the side; the sole. Nautical, Nausea, Nautilus, belong.

-NAVIS, Lat. (fr. Gr. Naur, wh. see); a ship, anything hollow. Naviga (navis, and perh. ago, I drive-a ship); I sail.

Circum-navigate, to sail-around. Naval, Navy, Navicel, belong.

-NECIS, Lat. of death or destruction. Nec (fr. Gr. necus a dead body; fr. Sansc. nap, to perish: and akin to Noco, wh. see); slaughter, destruction [or universally]

Inter-necine, (bringing) death-among Per-nicious, thoroughly-destructive.

-NECTO*, Lat. (fr. Gr. neo, I spin fr. Sansc. nah, to join together); I link, join, knit. Nectum, to join Con-nect, to link-together: Dis-connect, to part-the connection: In-connection, want of connection.

An-nex, to join-to: Re-annex.

-NEGATUM, Lat., to deny. Nego (perh. non or ne-nio, no-I say; ai, I cry hey or ay; akin to Gr. ai-a, the fatal decree of a god; prob. fr. ai ai alai alai: see Eatus; wh. is akin); I deny or say nay. Ab-negation, (a driving) off (a charge by saying)-nay; aljuration.

De-negation, (a withdrawal) from (a charge by saying)-nay; De-ny.

Re-negado, (one who drives) back (his faith, when imputed to him, by saying)-nay. Negation, perh. Nay, belong.

Cherso-NESE, Gr. (nesos, an island, which, as it were, floats in the sea; perh. fr. neo: see Naus); a land-island; an island attached to the main land; a peninsula.

-NESS. See previous Index.

-NEURON*, Gr., Nervus, Lat., a nerve, sinew, tendon, or string.

Diplo-neuran, (one of a class having) a double-nervous (system, ganglionic and cerebro spinal), as man.

Ganglio-neuran, (one having) a ganglionic-nervous (system).

Mono-neuran, (one having) the ganglionic or knotty system of nerves-alone.

Myelo-neuran, (one having) gangliated system of nerves-(answering to the apical) marrow.

Nemato-neurnn, (one having distinct) nervous-filaments.

Phanero-neuran, (one having) apparent or distinctly visible-nerves.

Apo-neurosis, (an extension) of os from-a nerve.

-NEURON*, Gr., Nervus, Lat., a nerve, sinew, tendon, or string.

Diplo-neuran, (one of a class having) a double-nervous (system, ganglionic and cerebro spinal), as man.

Ganglio-neuran, (one having) a ganglionic-nervous (system).

Mono-neuran, (one having) the ganglionic or knotty system of nerves-alone.

Myelo-neuran, (one having) gangliated system of nerves-(answering to the apical) marrow.

Nemato-neurnn, (one having distinct) nervous-filaments.

Phanero-neuran, (one having) apparent or distinctly visible-nerves.

Apo-neurosis, (an extension) of os from-a nerve.

- By-neurosis, a union (of bones)-by sutures.
- B-nerve, (supported by) two nerves.
- E-nerve, (having) the nerve or strength-(taken) out. Nerve, belongs.
- De-NIGRATE, Lat. (niger, black; perh. fr. Gr. neeros, a corpse, a shade; i. e., one in the shades below; fr. Sansc. naç: Necis; (to bring) from (other colour) to-black; to blacken. Negro, belongs.
- AN-NIHILATE, Lat. (nihil, nothing; perh. fr. ne-hilum, not-the black of a bean); (to bring) to-nothing. Nihility, belongs.
- Sub-NITED, Lat. (nites, I am near, spruce, shining: fr. Gr. nizo, nipto, I wash; fr. nips, nibs, or nipha, snow: and poss. akin to Lilo, wh. see); slightly-shining. Neat, Nitid: Niveous (thiro. Lat., nix, snow), belongs.
- NITOR, Lat., I strain, struggle, or lean on.
- Per-nicious, struggling-through; determined, quick. Milton. [ing.]
- Re-nitent, struggling-back; resist-
- In-tency, a leaning-on. Niteny, belongs.
- Con-NIVE, Lat. (niveo, I wink); to wink-together (with the performance of some act, so as not to see it); tacitly to allow. Nictate, Nictitate, belongs.
- NOCIO, Lat. (fr. nex, destruction: see Necis; prob. akin to Gr. nosos: see Nusy); I hurt or harm.
- In-nocent, not-hurting.
- Ob-noxious, (bound down) on account of (the fear of)-hurt or punishment; under awe, liable.
- An-noy, (Fr.), (to do) hurt-to. No-cent, Noisome, Noxious, Nuisance, Noise, that which annoys, belongs.
- NODUS, Lat. (prob. fr. Necto: wh. see); a knot or joint.
- Curvi-node, bent (at the)-joints.
- E-node, (having) the knot-(taken) out: E-nodate, (to take) out-the knots.
- Inter-nodial, between -the knots or joints. Node, Knot, Knit, perh. Knight, an attaché, and Noose, belongs.
- NOMEN, Lat. (fr. nosco: see Notum: akin to Gr. onoma: see Oynna); that by which a thing is known; a name, particularly of a gens or clan; as Tullius or the modern name preceded by de, as de Santilane. Nominis, of a name.
- Ag-nomen, (a title) added to the name (for some exploit): Agnominate, to give an agnomen.
- Cog-nomen, (a surname or family name going) with-the name (of the clan, as Marcus Tullius Cicero; Gil Blas): Cognominal.
- Præ-nomen, (the, as it were, Christian name going) before the name, as Marcus: Præ-nominate, to give a prenominal; to name-beforehand.
- De-nominate, (to give) a name-from (some quality, &c.)
- In-nominate, (having) no-name;
- Ig-nominy, loss of name or fame.
- Ih-nomial, (having) two-terms or names. [unex.]
- Multi-nomial, (of) many-terms or names.
- Tri-nomial, of three-terms or names.
- U(ni)-nomial, of one-term or name.
- Ad-noun, (that which is joined) to -a name or noun; an adjective.
- Pro-noun, (that which is) instead of -a name or noun.
- Re-noun, (Fr.), (the having one's name-(echoed) back (from people's mouths)).
- Mis-nomer, (Fr.), a nam-g-wrongly.
- Nomen, Nominal, Noun, Nuncupate, (fr. nomen-capio, I take-a name), belongs.
- NOMOS,* Gr., a law or rule. N.mo, I distribute or regulate; I distribute food, I feed.
- Agro-nomy, the law or art of-field (cultivation); agriculture.
- A-nomy, a violation or want of-law.
- Astronomy, the law of-the stars.
- Chiro-nomy, the law of-the hands or gesture. [the]-law.
- Deutero-nomy, the second (giving of Eco-nomy, the rule-(for good management of) a house).
- Zoo-nomy, the law of animal (life).
- Metro-nome, (an instrument for) regulating-(musical) measure or time.
- Agora-nomy, the regulator of-a market. [law] (of good works).
- Anti-nomian, (one) opposed to the
- Demo-nomist, (one living by) the law of-the devil.
- Gastro-nomist, a lawgiver of-the stomach; i. e., a portioner of food.
- Phoro-nomic, (belonging to) the law of-bearing or motion.
- Di nomial, (of) two-terms or distributions. [ti.n.]
- Mo-nomial, (of) one-term or distributions.
- Polv-nomial, (of) many-terms or distributions.
- Tri-nomial, (of) three-terms or distributions. Nome, Nomadic, Numismatic, (relating to coin) distributed and sanctioned by the state, Nemesis, the distributor of divine judgements or wrath, belongs.
- E-NORMOS,* Lat. (norma, a rule, to measure angles; fr. Gr. gnorisma, gnomon, a mark, indicator, rule, carpenter's square: fr. ginosco: see Gnosis); out of-(all) rule or measure. Normal, belongs.
- A-NOSY, Gr. (fr. nosos, sickness, disease; fr. Sansc. naç; to perish: see Nucro); absence of-disease.
- NOTOS, Gr., the back.
- Eury-note, broad-back; a fossil fish.
- Gym-note, naked or finless-back; the electric eel. [the]-back-like.
- Hom-olo-note, (trilobites having) all Platy-note, broad-back.
- Semio-note, marked-back; a fossil fish.
- Trachy-note, rough-back.
- Tropido-note, keel (shaped)-back; a small innoxious snake.
- NOTUM, Lat., to know, to be acquainted. Nusco, (akin to Gr. Gnosis and Oynna: wh. see; and all fr. a root, gno, no, to know); I know. Nota, a thing to know by, a mark or note. Notitis, well known; noble.
- Cog-novit, (he has made) common or communicated (the fact of his having) knowledge; he has acknowledged: see (Cognition, below).
- Pre-notion, previous or fore-knowledge.
- Ag-nition, (a giving) knowledge-to (a person that something has been received); acknowledgement.
- Cog-nition, acquaintance or knowledge with; community of knowledge: Pre-cognition, previous or beforehand-acquaintance: Re-cognition, renewed-acquaintance; (a means of) knowing (one)-again. Re-cognoitre, (Fr.), to notice-again (and again): In-cognito, (so as) not-to-be known: Cognition, contracted, becomes Quint, wh. see.
- An-note, to add-marks or remarks, hence, Annotate.
- Con-note, to note with (something else); hence, Connotate.
- De-note, (to put) a mark-down (upon, so as to indicate).
- Protho-notary, the chief-utter or clerk.
- En-noble, to imbue with-nobility.
- Ig-noble, not-noble. Notion, Notorious, Note, Notice, Noble, belongs.
- Also, Noematical, mental, know, Ken, and Con.
- NOUNCE, Eng. of Lat. Nuncio, (fr. Nuncius, wh. see, I tell news; I tell or give a message).
- An-nounce, to tell or utter-to.
- De-nounce, to tell-down right or determinately.
- E-nounce, to tell or publish-out.
- Pro-nounce, to tell before (all persons).
- Re-nounce, to bring word-again: also (to drive) back-by telling or void of mouth; to disclaim.
- Inter-nuncio, a messenger -between (persons). Nuncio, Nunciate, belongs.
- NOVUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. nevus, neos, young, new; poss. fr. nu, nun, now); new. [-upon] (the old).
- In-novate, (to bring what is) new.
- Re-novate, (to make) new-again.
- Novel, Novice, New, Naive, also Neoteric, belongs.
- NOX, Lat., night. Noctis, of night.
- Nyx, Eng. of Gr. Nyx, night. Nocturis, a night bird; a bat.
- Equi-nox, (the period when) the nights are-equal (over the globe).
- Per-noctation, (a remaining) through-the night. Noctuary, Nocturn, Night, belongs. The rest are Greek.
- Aero-nycal, at the extreme of-the night; i. e., opposite the sun.
- Mega-nycter, the great-bat or flying fox.
- Phyllo-nycter, the foliated-bat.
- Oh-NUBILATE, Lat. (nubilo, I grow cloudy; fr. Nubis, wh. see); (to cover) over-(with little) clouds; to cloud-over.
- NUBO, Lat. 'akin to Gr. numphe, a nymph or bride: nephos, a cloud: Sansc. nabhas, heaven); I cloud or veil; I cover with a flame coloured veil denoting modesty, as was customary in marriage; I marry. Neptum, to marry.
- Con-nubial, (pertaining to those) married-together.
- Ante-nuptial, before marriage. Nubile, Nuptial, also Nymph, belongs.
- E-NUCLEATE, Lat. (nucleus, a kernel; fr. nux, a nut); (to take) out-the kernel. Nucleus, also Nut, belongs.
- De-NUDE, Lat. (nudus, naked; perh. fr. ne-dutus, not clothed or put on; dutus, fr. duo, I get into: see Divio; poss. akin to dao, dalo, I divide, get through: see Drey; fr. Pha: see list of prefixes); (to make) naked-(by stripping the covering) from. Nude, Nudity, belongs.
- Gurra-NURRA, Hindoo, the small river-GURRA.
- NULLUS, Lat. (fr. ne-ullus, not-any); no one, none. Nullum, nothing.
- An nul, (to bring) to-nothing; Dis-an-nul, (to pull) apart-(and bring) to-nothing. Null, of none effect, belongs.
- NUMERUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. numeros: see Nomos); a distribution a number.

waterer - see Allimentum; I increase or grow up.
 Ad-olescence, (the period during which there is) additional-growth.
 In-olescence, a growing up-upon.
 Sub-olescence, a growing up-(as from) under. [grown].
 Ad-ult, (having come) to-growth: full.
 -OLEUS, Lat. (fr. Osme; wh. see); smelling.
 Grave-olent, smelling-grievously or exceedingly.
 Red-olent, (casting) back-a scent or smell.
 Sub-olent, (having) a slight-smell or savour of. Olid, also Odour, belong.
 -OLLYO, Eng. of Gr. Oliu, I destroy, lose, perish: Oleo, Ant. Lat.
 Ap-ollose, (one who causes a) perishing-away; the destroyer.
 Cherad-olethrum, hog's destruction or bane; a plant, louse bur. The rest are Latin.
 Ab-oliah, (to cause to) perish-away.
 Obs-olite, (having) destruct-ion or loss -(brought) over (it): perished, past.
 -OMA, Ema, Gr. subst. terminis. are thus formed (steat. fat; steat-os, of fat; steat-oo, I turn into, or make -fat; steat-oma [a tumour] made of fat: Old-os, a swelling; old-oe, I become-swollen; old-oma, as Lat. old-oma, [a tumour] made of puffiness); and hence, carry the force of a disease.
 Glau-oma, grayness of or pearl on (the eye)-disease.
 Neur-oma, disease - (from a tumour formed on) a nervous (trunk).
 Schir-oma, disease of (the eye from dryness, occasioning a feeling of) chip or grit (in the eye).
 Staphyl-oma, disease of (the eye, in which the cornea resembles) a grape.
 Steat-oma, disease (occasioned by a) fat (like tumour).
 Oed-oma, disease of puffiness or swelling (from water).
 An-OMALOUS, Gr. (homalios, even, level; fr. homos, one and the same, common generally in place: akin to Hama, together; and Sansae, as, sam, together: see list of prefixes; also Similis); not-level, alike, or regular; wanting regularity.
 -OMEN, Lat. (for oremen; fr. oris, of the mouth; fr. Os: wh. see); that which is uttered, said, or decreed; a prognostic, sign, token, foreboding.
 Ab-ominate, (to pray that a thing may be taken) away-as foreboding (evil); to deprecate, to hate.
 Pre-ominate, to fore-bode or prognosticate. Omen, Ominous, belong.
 En-OMOTY, Gr. (omotes, a sweaver; fr. omnuo, I swear); (a body of soldiers) sworn-in.
 -ON, Aion, Eion, Ion, Gr., Um, Eum, Ium, Lat., are thus formed, (Parthen-os, a maiden; parthen-on, [the place or chamber] of the maidens: Lex-is, a rare word: lex-ic-on, a thing or book-pertaining to words; a dictionary: Athen-a, Minerva; athen-aion, as Lat. athen-aeum, a place pertaining to Minerva; i.e., her temple): hence, a thing, a place, a building.
 Onomastic-on, a place or book-for names.
 Pan-optic-on, a building (so contrived that one can over)look the whole.
 Pan-technic-on, a building-for all-the arts.
 Pan-the-on, a temple-for all the gods.

Phlegeth-on, the burning-river.
 Athen-aeum, the building-for Minerva or wisdom.
 Propyl-aeum, the place-before-the-door; the porch or vestibule.
 Lye-um, originally, a place near the temple of Apollo Lyceus or deliverer from wolves; hence, a building-for the god of song.
 Od-um, a place-for singing (and music). [devils or deities].
 Pan-deimon-ium, a place-for all-the Pent-athl-ium, a collection-of the five contests; i.e., running, leaping, quoit and javelin throwing, with wrestling. [rom].
 Lacon-ic-um, a Lacon-ian- (bath)
 Lact-ari-um, a house-for (keeping) -milk; a dairy.
 Menstru-um, a preparation (only effective at particular periods of) the month. [a race].
 Stad-ia, standing or starting-post (in Ex-ONERATE, Lat. onero, I load; fr. onus, a burden; poss. fr. Gr. onia, ania, heaviness, grief, sorrow; (to take) the burden-off or from: Ess-oine, is the same. erous, belongs.
 ONYMA, * Eng. of Gr. Onuma, Onoma (Sansc. nāma; fr. root gnō, no, to know - see gnosis); that by which anything is known; a name.
 Calli-onym, (a flash) named-for-beauty.
 Hom-onym, a name or word-similar (to another in sound, but not in signification).
 Syn-onym, a name or word-(agreeing) with (another in signification, not in sound): hence, Synonymous.
 Met-onymy, a change-of-name.
 An-onymous, without-name.
 Par-onymous, (side) by side-in name or derivation; i.e., having the same derivation.
 Pseud-onymous, (having) a false-name.
 Patr-onymic, (alluding to) the paternal or ancestral-name.
 Ant-onomasy, (a putting one) name -instead of (another). Rhet.
 Met-onomasy, a change of-(proper) name.
 Par-onomasy, (an opposition of) names -side by (side, or similar in sound).
 -ONYX, Eng. of Gr. Onyx (perh. fr. nusso, I touch with a sharp point, prick, pierce); talons, a claw, a nail, a hoof; also a stone with veins or claw like marks.
 Acanth-onyx, thorn-claw; a crab; hence, Acanthonychian.
 Gamps-onyx, hooked-claw: a falcon-hawk.
 Hipp-onyx, (a mollusk with a) horse -hoof or shoe (shaped muscle)
 Megal-onyx, a great-clawed (mam-mal).
 Sard-onyx, the Sardinian-onyx.
 Lept-onychial, fine or small-nailed.
 Par-onych, (a thing) by-the nail; i.e., a whitlow. Onyx, belongs. Nail, is akin.
 -OON, * fr. Fr., thus formed, (ba, pa, a child's first word; haba, pupa, Lat., a babe, a puppet: bal-ooun, poup-ée, a little babe: Boll, Ger., round; ball; ball-on, ball-oon, a little ball); signifiess littleness; a subordinate class: hence, a thing like; of the same kind; shaped like.
 Bal-oon, a babe-like (animal).
 Ball-oon, a ball shaped (body).
 Bass-oon, (an instrument of) the base -hind: opposed to hautboy.
 Mons-oon, (Malay), a kind (of wind blowing for-) a season.

Pont-oon, a kind of (boat used to form)-bridges.
 Quad-oon, (one of) a sub class, a quarter (from whole blood).
 The words Panta-loon, Ital, lion -planter; i.e., boaster: Ptaoon, Fr., a ball of thread, a handful of men: Typhoon, Gr., a whirlwind, now, also, in feeling, belong to this class.
 -OON, Onv, Gr., an egg, an ovary.
 Dendrod-oon, (a mollusk with) tree (like or ramified)-ovary: hence, Dendroloa.
 Syn-ovia, (that which is) with-the egg; (i.e., the white): hence, a glairy fluid which lubricates the joints.
 Met-OPA, Gr. (or ope, an opening or hole for a chimney; prob. fr. Ops, the eye: wh. see); the hole or space-between (triangles or where beams are laid).
 Semi-OPACOUS, Lat. (opacus, shady, dark; poss. fr. Opn); half-dusky or dark. Opaque, Opacity, belong.
 -OPERIO, see Parco.
 -OPERIS, Lat., of a work. Opus, (prob. akin to Gr. ophelos, furtherance, advantage; fr. ophello, I increase, strengthen: akin to ompne: see Opious); a work.
 Co-operate, to work-with.
 In-operative, not-working or effective.
 Man-œuvre, handy or artful-work.
 Man-ure, to work or till (the ground) -by hand (labour). Operate, Opera, belong.
 -OPHIS, Gr., a serpent or snake.
 Acanth-ophis, a spine or thorn (ailed) -serpent.
 Dendr-ophis, a tree (like, or long and slender)-serpent.
 Hydr-ophis, a water-snake.
 -OPHRYS, Eng. of Gr. Opheus, the brow, eyebrow, or eyelash.
 Actin-ophrys, (an infusory with a mouth surrounded by) radiated -lashes.
 Leuc-ophrys, the white or limpid -lashed (infusory). [petrel].
 Melan-ophrys, the black -browed
 C(o)-OPIOUS, Lat. (copia, plenty; fr. ops, power, assistance, riches; akin to Gr. ompne, food, corn, wheat: also to ophello: see Opieris); (with) united -power or riches: abundant. Opulent, belongs.
 Pan-OLPY, Gr. (hoplon, a tool, tackle, arms); all-arms and armour; complete-armour.
 -OPS, Gr. (fr. epo; see Epy); a voice, discourse, word. [beauty].
 Calli-ope, (she with the voice-of Mer-ops, twice-dividing; i.e., uttering syllables: hence, a speaking (bird); starling, bee-eater, &c.
 -OPS, Gr. (fr. root op, opt: akin to Oculus); the eye, face. Opis, a sight, appearance, resemblance. Optumai, Ossumai, I see or look. Oise, the two eyes. Optron, a looking glass. Ophthalmos, the eye.
 Agri-ope, herce-ecy: (a fish, so called from its retarded suborbital plates).
 Cycl-ope, cycl-ope, a circular-eyed (giant). [tyred (crab)].
 Megal-ope, macr-ope, a large or long
 My-ope, a wink-eyed or short sighted (person). [night or dusk].
 Nyctal-ope, (one who) se- (only at) Pyrr-ope, eye of fire: sort of garnet.
 Scyth-ope, sullen-face, (a sort of pie).
 Ambly-opy, obtuse or dull sight.
 Dipl-opy, a seeing-double. Med.

Egil-opy, great-eyed (disease): an aloeum in the eye giving a cast to it.
Hemeral-opy, a seeing (only in broad) day (from disease).
Hemi-opy, a seeing (things)-halved (from disease).
Oxy-opy, (a morbidly) sharp-sight.
Presby-opy, aged-sight. [view].
Aut-opy, a seeing-(for) oneself; actual.
Cary-opy, the resemblance of a nut; a name of the grain of corn.
Cat-opy, (a morbidly) complete or brilliant-sight. [-water].
Hydr-opy, Dr-opy, an appearance of Acanth-opsis, thorny-face; a fossil fish.
arang-opsis, scad-resembling (fish).
Di-opsis, (an insect having) the sight through (a long peduncle, at the end of which the eyes are placed).
Saur-opsis, lizard-eye; a fish.
Thryss-opsis, (a fish) of bristly-appearance.
Syn-opsis, a collective-view or sight.
Ep-opt, an over seer (of the Eusebian mysteries).
Cat-opter, (a thing which one) looks against; a mirror: hence, Catoptric, relating to mirrored or reflected light. [-glass].
Poly-opter, a many or multiplying.
Di-optic, (relating to) sight or light (passing)-through (media or refracted).
Sci-optic, (relating to) a shadow or a glass (which casts)-a shadow or image.
Rh phthalm, ox-eye; a plant.
Edri-ophthalm, a fixed or sessile-eyed (crustacean).
Ex-ophthalm, an outward (protusion) of the eye. [the eye].
Hydr-ophthalm, water or dropsy-of.
Pso-ophthalm, a scab or ulceration of the eye.
Ichthy-ophthalmite, fish-eyed thing; a sort of zeolite.
Col-osoma, (a thing so tall as to) forbid the eye (to scan it). Optic, Ophthalmic, belong. Poss. Ope, Open, are akin.
-OPTO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. optamai: see Ops); I look on desiringly; I wish, desire, choose.
Ad-opt, to choose or take-to (oneself).
Pre-option, (a right of) previous choice.
Co-optate, to choose-with (another).
Optative, perh. Hope, belong.
-OR, Lat and Eng. sub. termin., denotes the performer or originator of an action. In the Latin the termination is appended to the supine of a verb, but the verb seldom exists in our language: the termin. Er is of similar meaning and Eng. Or, Lat. and Eng.; ur, Norman, from Lat., is also found appended to Latin verbs to denote action or state. [account].
Audit-or, one who audits or hears (an Edit-or, one who gives-out or edits (a book)).
Ex-ecut-or, one who follows-out or executes (one's will).
Monit-or, one who (ad)monishes or warns. The following belong to the second, Or. [right].
Err-or, a state of wandering (from Pull-or, a state of paleness).
Clam-or, act or state of crying aloud.
-ORA, Gr. (whence Lat. Oratio; whose etymology is incorrectly given under the word); care, concern, heed, regard, consultation.
The-ory, a watching or consultation-of the god or an oracle; a speculating on divine or other things.

The-orem, (the speech of) the god (which is) watched or consulted; a matter for thought or exhibition.
-ORAMA, * or Horama, Gr., that which is seen; a view, sight, exhibition, picture. Horao, and prob. Vorao, (fr. Sansc. vrī, to ware, to be aware); I see.
Alethi-orama, a true or authentic-exhibition or picture.
Athlet-orama, exhibition of-wrestlers.
Cosm-orama, an ornamental-exhibition; also, an exhibition of the world.
Di-orama, an exhibition (of a picture) through (an opening).
Pan-orama, an exhibition of-all (the landscape visible from one point).
Pan-stere-orama, a solid exhibition, a solid-model or exhibition of-the whole (of some district).
Ep-hor, an over-seer, or inspector.
-ORBIS, Lat., a circle or globe.
Dis-orbed, (thrown) apart or aside from its circle or orbit.
Ex-orbitant, out-of-the-circle or bound; excessive. Orb. Orbit, belong.
-ORCISM, see Harcos: Order, see Ortus.
-OREXIS, Gr., a longing for, desire, appetite. Orego (root, reg); I reach or extend the hands.
An-orexy, want of-appetite.
Dys-orexy, ill or depraved-appetite.
Orgies, wild passion, fury, perh. belong.
-ORGANON, Gr. (fr. ergon: see Urgy), an instrument, tool, machine; the work, product, anything constituted. [constituted].
Dis-organize, (to pull) apart-anything.
In-organic, not-e-stituted, or having the structure of life. Organ, belong.
-ORISM. See Huras.
-ORNIS, Gr. (prob. fr. oro, ornui, I stir up, arouse, rise, excite); a bird.
Anth-ornis, flower-(or honey) sucker.
Hemat-ornis, blood (red crested) bird; a sort of eagle.
Mell-ornis, honey (sucking)-bird.
Nyct-ornis, the night (feeding)-bird.
-ORNO, Lat. (perh. akin to Gr. horao, decked, adorned; fr. hora, a limited time, an hour, a season, early time, youth, vigour, beauty); I deck, garnish, beautify.
Ad-orn, to add-garnishments (to); Dis-adorn, to deprive - of adornment; Re-adorn, to adorn-again.
Ex-ornation, a decking-out.
Un-ornamental, not-beautifying. Ornament, belong.
DI-ORTHOSIS, Gr. (fr. orthos, roused, straight, upright; fr. oro: see Ornis); (a making) thoroughly-straight, right, or erect.
-ORTUS, Lat., arisen; a rising or birth. Oriri, (fr. Gr. oro: see Ornis); I arise. Orients, arising; the east. Origo, a beginning, origin. (trior, I begin. Ordo, beginning, regularity, order).
Ab-ortive, risen or sprung-from, (immaturely); (produced at a time) away or distant from-the (proper) birth.
Un-original, not (having at the time) a beginning.
Prim-ordial, first-in order; beginning from-the first.
Co-ordinate, together-in order or rank.
De-ordinate, (let loose) from-order.
In-ordinate, (having) no-order or bound.
Sub-ordinate, under-in order or rank.

Extra-ordinary, beyond or out-of-the (usual) order or course of things.
Pre-ordain, to order or determine before-hand.
Re-ordain, (to introduce into) an order or rank-again.
Pre-orient, rising-before-hand Orient, Origin, Order, Ordain, Ordinance, belong.
-ORUS, Lat., of Gr. Ouros, Oros, (fr. oro; wh. see); a watcher, warder, keeper.
Pyl-orus, (the lower orifice of the stomach, as it were), the gate-keeper or guard (to the intestinal canal).
Thyr-orus, a door-keeper. Perh. Ore, metal to be refined with care, belongs.
-ORY. See the previous Index.
-OS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. eiro, I join discourse, I speak, say, tell: comp. Scrtus); the mouth. Oris, of the mouth. Osculum, a little mouth; slight union or junction, as in veins, by the opening of a little mouth; a kiss. Oro, I speak, beseech, or pray.
Ad-osculation, a joining - to (not deeply); an insertion-(of a plant) into or to (another).
De-osculation, a kissing-completely.
In-osculation, a junction (of vessels) -in or upon (each other).
Ad-ore, to pray-to.
Ex-orable, (that may be obtained) from (a person)-by prayer; hence, (that may be changed) from (a former state)-by prayer; In-exorable, not-exorable.
Per-oration, (the summing up or going) through (the heads of)-a speech. Oral, Oracle, Oration, Orison, O-ulate, Oscitant, also, Osiary, belong.
-OS, a bone: see Osteom.
-OSME, Odme, Gr. (fr. ozo, I smell); a smell, scent, odour. [I smell].
An-osmy, privation of-the sense of.
Camphor-osma, camphor - odour (plant).
-OSMOS, Othismos, Gr. (fr. otheo, I thrust, push, shove); a thrust, impulsion.
End-osmose, or End-osm, impulsion or transmission-inwards (of gaseous bodies). [wards].
Ex-osmose, impulsion or passage-out.
-OSTEON, Gr. Os, Lat. (as asti, Sansc.); a bone. Osis, Lat., of a bone.
Ostinos, Gr. a bone pipe.
Ex-ostosis, (a tumour upon or) out of -a bone.
Peri-osteum, (the membrane) around -the bones.
Pente-tars-otin, (a lizard with) five -bones-in the tarsus.
Tessares-tars-otin, (one with a) four -boned-tarsus.
Tria-tars-otin, (one with a) three -boned-tarsus. The rest are Latin.
Ex-osceous, (with -the bones)-taken out.
Inter-osceous, between-bones. Osseous, Ossuary, belong.
-OSTRACON, Gr. (fr. Osteon; wh. see); the shell or bony part of shell fish. [-in or divided].
En-tom-ostracan, (having) a shell-cut.
Malac-ostracan, soft-shelled or curved.
The etymol. fr. Lat. crusta is wrong.
Pori-ostracum, (the natural skin) around-a shell. Ostracism, Oyter, belong.
-OSUS, Lat. adj., termin. as Eng. xsix.

Ose,* or Ous;* denotes abundance, full of.
Acer-ose, full of chaff; chaffy.
Cellul-ose, full of little cells.
Cortic-ose, full of bark; like bark.
Fil-ose, full of thread; thread like.
Fron-ose, full of leaves; tree like; branching; hence, Fron-ous.
Lacun-ose, full of ditches or furrows.
Nod-ose, full of knots; knotty.
Racem-ose, full of bunches.
Rain-ose, full of branches; branching.
Suffrutesc-ose, full of under-shrubs; under-shrub-like. [like wool].
Toment-ose, full of sheared wool; Verruc-ose, full of warts; warty.
Note, that the Gr. subst. termin. Osis, as Ana-diplosis, a doubling-back or repetition. Rhet. Ana-stomosis, (a throwing) back (or unclosing of the) mouths (of vessels). Med. is no relation to the above.
Neg-OTIATE, Lat. (perh. otium, leisure, rest); (to transact business or that which is) not or un-rest. Otiose, belongs.
-OTOS, Gr., of the ear. Ous, the ear.
Dolich-ote, a long-eared (animal); a cavy.
Itali-ote, the sea-ear.
Macr-ote, a long-eared (fish).
Megal-ote, a great-eared (fish).
Pachy-ote, a thick-eared (bat).
Par-otid, by or under the ear.
-OUR. See previous Index.
-OUS,* adj.: see Ous and Us.
-OUSIA, Gr. (fr. eo: see Euse): existence, being.
Homoi-ousian, similar-in being.
Hom-o-ousian, the same or identical-in being.
Sub-OVATE, or Oval, Lat. (ovum, an egg: fr. Gr. Oon, wh. see); under or slightly-egg (shaped).
OXUS, Gr., as Eng. Oxys, sharp, keen, acid.
Di-oxus, a collyrium made by means of acid or vinegar.
Stern-oxus, (an insect with) sharp breast bone.
Cac-oxene, (a mineral containing) acids-lad or injurious (to iron).
Par-oxysm, (a coming) near or on-of the sharpness (of a disease).
-PACIS, Lat., of peace. Pax (fr. pago, I settle: see Pactus); fixed or settled state; peace, quiet.
Im-pacable, not-to be quieted.
Ap-peace, (to bring) peace-to; (to bring) to-peace: Appay, is the same.
Re-pay, (to bring) back-(to) peace; to satisfy-again or in return. Peace, Pacable, Pax, belong.
-PACTUS,* Lat., fixed, agreed. Pacificus, I covenant. Pingo, Pago (fr. Gr. Pegma, wh. see); I drive in, fix, settle, agree on.
Com-pact, driven-together; s., (a thing) agreed on-together: hence, It-and Im-compact.
Im-pact, driven-upon (each other) close; hence s., touch.
Im-pinge, to drive or strike-upon. Paction, Pack, belong.
Areo-PAGUS, Gr. (pagos, a firm-set rock; fr. pegnuo: see Pegm); an assembly held on the rock or hill of Mars.
PALLEO, Lat. (fr. Gr. paluno, I shake, besprinkle: akin to palo, I shake: see Pult; and ballo: see Bilio); I perspire with fear, I look pale or wan.
Ap-pal, (to bring) paleness or fear-to.

Im-pallid, to imbue with-weakness.
Pale, Pallid, belong. Palpitate is akin.
Un-PALLIATED, Lat. (pallium, a cloak; prob. fr. Gr. pharos, a cloth, sheet, mantle; fr. pharo: see Partis), not-colored, Pall, Palliate, belong.
Toti-PALMATE, Lat. (palma, the palm of the hand; fr. Gr. palame, the palm; poss. fr. pallo: see Pult); (having) the whole (foot)-palmated; i. e., joined or webbed. Palm, the hand, and a tree with hand-like branches, belong.
-PALPO, Lat. (fr. Gr. pallo: see Pult); I dandle, stroke, soothe, touch, or feel. [feelers].
Longi-palp, (a beetle with) long Pedi-palp, a foot-(having) feelers (like pinners).
Securi-palp, (a beetle with) hatchet (shaped maxillary)-feelers. [touch].
Im-palpable, not-(perceptible to) the Sup-palpation, an under or slight-touching or patting; a caress. Palpable, belongs.
-PALUS, Lat. (fr. pango: see Pactus); a peg, pin, post, or stake.
Em-pale, (to put) within-posts or fences; (to drive) a stake-into.
Inter-pale (to place) pales-between; to interlace. Pale, Esplanier, Balus, belong.
-PANDO, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. Phaino: wh. see); I show, open, or spread. Pinsum, Passum, to show. Pissus, a spreading; a stretch (with the legs); a pace or step.
Ex-pand, to open or spread-out.
Re-pand, opened (so as to bend)-back.
Com-pass, (that which is marked out) together as a whole-(by being) stepped (round); or (a tract of land) spreading-as a whole: hence, En-com-pass, to in(close)-together-by passing (round); to pass round.
Re-pass, to step or pass-back or again.
Sur-pass, to step or pass-over or beyond. [boundary].
Tres-pass, to step or go-across-(another's) Counter-pace, a step-in opposition. Pace, Pass, belong.
PANGO, see Pactus. PAN, see Pas.
PANIS, Lat., bread, provision.
Ap-panage, (that which goes) to or for-the provision.
Im-panate, (embodied) in-bread.
Com-pany, (to break) bread-with; to be with as a messmate. Panada, Pannage, Pannier, Pantry, Pantler, belong.
-PAR, Lat., like, similar, equal, fit.
Com-peer, (one who is) equal-with (another).
Dis pair, (to take things) fitted or coupled-apart: Disparity.
Dis-parage, (to match) apart or far from-equality; to degrade. [tion].
Im-parity, not-quality: disproportion.
Omni-parity, equality-in-all (respects).
Se-parate, (to take) apart-(from) its equal or couple; to uncouple: hence, Se-ver.
Non-pareil, not (having an)-equal.
Par, Pair, Parity, Peer, belong.
-PARDOS, Gr., Pardus, Lat., a pard, panther, or ounce. [(like)-camel].
Camelo-pard, (a spotted), panther.
Leo-pard, (a spotted), panther (like)-lion. Parl, belong.
-PAREO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. para-eo, I am-by or near: eo, see Euse; I am present, seen, shown, or manifest).
Ap-present, showing (clearly)-to (one).
Trans-present, showing (light)-across or through.

Ap-pear, to be present or show (one-self)-to; hence, Re-appear.
Over-peer, (fr.), to look or see-over.
O(b)-percule, (that which is) against (a thing's being) seen; i. e., a cover: hence, O-vo-per, (co-ob-per), (that which) opposes or prevents (a thing)-altogether-(from being) seen: Dis-cover, (to take) the cover-aside. To Peer, and perh. Re-per-tory, (a book where one may) see or find-again (what has been inserted), belong.
Sub-PARIETAL, Lat. (paries, a wall); under-the wall. Parietal, Parietare, a wall plant, poss. Parget, belong.
PARIO, Lat. I bear, bring forth, produce, propagate. Parios, Fissi-parous, propagating-by splitting (into two).
Gemmi-parous, propagating-by buds.
Larvi-parous, propagating-by masked (forms); i. e., by young destined to undergo change, to throw off the mask. [birth].
Multi-parous, producing-many (at a time).
Ovi-parous, producing-by eggs.
Ovo-vivi-parous, producing-alive (and more or less extricated from)-the egg (coverings).
Pupi parous, producing-by puppets, nymphs, or chrysalides. [birth].
Uni-parous, producing (but) one (at a time).
Vivi-parous, producing-alive.
Puer-peral, child-bearing.
Multi parturient, about to bring forth-many. Parent, Parturient, belong.
-PARLER, Fr. (fr. parole, a word, speech: fr. parable: fr. Gr. para -allo, place-side by side: see under Basis); to compare notes; to converse, converse, speak.
Em-par, (to settle by) speaking-upon.
Inter-parlance, a speaking-between (persons), conference. Parle, Parlour, Parliament, belong.
-PARO, Lat. (perh. fr. Par: wh. see); I make equal (to the occasion), fit, or ready. Paratus, made ready, ready. Pair,
Com -pare, (to make) altogether ready: to fit or couple-together, so as to estimate size, &c.
Pre-pare, to make ready-beforehand.
Re-pare, to make ready again: hence, Ir-reparable, not-to be repaired.
Ap-paratus, (things) made ready-to or for (a purpose).
Ap-parallel, (that which is necessary) to-the making (one) ready: dress.
Un-parried, not-made ready (or provided for).
Un-pared, (perhaps) not-made ready, (as an orange for eating, or a horse's hoof for shoeing).
Im-perative, made ready-on (the moment), as by command; commanding, urgent: hence, Em-pire, a place in which im-perative orders are issued by a superior, and perh. Uni-pire, (one who utters, orders, or decides-on). Paré, Parry, belong.
-PARTIS,* Lat., of a part. Pross, (fr. Gr. pharos, a piece torn off; a portion; fr. pharo, I cleave, sever; whence Lat. far; spelt, com: see Furcation: and akin to peiro: see Poros); a share or part. Partio, I separate or portion out.
Com-part, (to portion) together-into parts: hence, Com-partiment, a part-together, i. e., separate from the rest.
Counter-part, an opposite-part.
De-part, to separate (one-self)-from; to go away.
Dis-part, to part-apart or asunder.

Pre-ponderate, (to be) before - in weight; to outweigh.
Im-ponderable, not-to be weighed; without weight.
Avoir-du-poids, (a measure for gross goods or which may be said) to have-some-weight.
Counter-poise, a weight-(balancing) against (another); equi-ponder-ace. Pendent, Pennant, Pensele,
 Pent, sloping, Pension, Pensive,
 Poise, also Spend, belong.
-PENNA, Lat. (fr. Gr. petenos; winged; fr. petomai: see Petala);
 a quill, wing, or fin.
Im-pennous, not-winged.
Bi-pennate, double-winged.
Brevi-pennate, short-quilled.
Longi-pennate, long-winged.
Plant-pennate, flat-winged. Ent.
Plici-pennate, with folded-wings. Ent.
Quadri-pennate, four-winged. Ent.
Squamipennate, scaly-finned. Ich.
 Pen, belongs.
Ne-PENTHE, Gr. (penthos, acute feeling, grief; fr. Pithus wh. see);
 (a medicine which makes) grief
 (not to exist, or cures it).
Dys-PEPSY, Gr. (pepsia, concoction;
 fr. pepsa, pepto I soften or cook;
 comp. Cetus, wh. is prob. derived fr.
 peptos, cooked); difficult-concoction (of food); indigestion. Peptic,
 belongs.
Ligni-PERDOUS, Lat. (perdo, I destroy or lose; prob. fr. per-do, I give-thoroughly, over, or up: for do, see Ditus); wood-destroying.
Im-PERIL, Fr. (fr. Lat. periculum, danger from adventure or trial;
 prob. fr. perior: see Peritus); (to put) into-danger. Peril, Pericu-lous, belong.
-PERITUS, Lat., practised, skilful.
Perior, Ant. Lat. (fr. Gr. peirao: see Peric); I try or practise.
Ex-perit, (skilful) out of or from -practise: Ex perience: In-ex-perit.
Im-perit, not-practised.
Ana-PEST, Gr. (paistos, struck; fr.
 paio, I strike); (a foot in verse like a dactyl) struck or turned -backwards: an echo (of the dactyl)
 -backwards; to Pave, is prob. akin.
-PETALON,* Gr. (fr. petannno; I spread out flat; petomai, I spread the wings to fly; fr. root pet, pat, having, from the sound, the force of flut); an expanded thing, a leaf or petal.
Andro-petalous, (with stamens or male (organs converted into) -petals.
A-petalous, without-petals or corolla.
Cata-petalous, (with stamens growing) against (the base) of the petals.
Lusio-petalous, hairy-petal-d.
Mono-petalous, single-petaled.
Poly-petalous, many-petaled.
Tetra-petalous, four-petaled. Petal,
 belongs.
-PETO,* Lat., I entreat, seek, wish.
 Com-pete, to seek (the same end)
 -with (another); hence, Competitor.
 Re-peat, to seek or do-again.
 Ap-petent, seeking-towards: i. e., for.
 Com-petent, seeking (for an office) -with (others); and therefore properly qualified.
Centri-petal, seeking the centre.
Musci-petal, seeking-flies (for food).
Im-petuous, (pushing) on-(as one) seeking (an enemy).
Ex-petible, (to be) completely-wished.
Com-patible, seeking or tending-together (to one point); similar, congruous.

Ap-petite, a seeking-towards or after (gratification). Petition, Petible, belong.

Per-PETRATE, (patro, I beget. produce, effect; fr. Puter, wh. see);
 to off-ci-thoroughly.

-PETROS, Gr. a piece of rock, a stone.
Petro, Gr. and Lat., a rock.

Glosso-petre, tongue (like) -stone;
 fossil sharks' teeth.

Odonto-petre, teeth-tone; the same.
Salt-petre, (E. G.), a salt (nitrate of potash, found in certain) -stony (soils).

Lam-prey, (L.), (fish which) licks or adheres to-rocks. Peter, Petrify, Petroleum, belong.

-PIAGOS,* Gr., I eat, devour, feed on.
 Ad-piagous, eating-abundantly. Ent.
Anthropo-piagous, man-eating.

Bu-piagous, eating (the larvae of Insects deposited in the backs of)
 -oxen.

Conopo-piagous, ant-eating.
Copio-piagous, oodre-eating.

En-tonio-piagous, in sect-eating.
Litho-piagous, stone-eating or boring.

Loto-piagous, eating-lotus (berries).
Melli-piagous, feeding on-honey.

Muso-piagous, plantain-eating.
Myrmeco-piagous, ant-eating.

Necro-piagous, feeding on-dead (animal substances).

Ophio-piagous, feeding on-serpents.
Phyllo-piagous, feeding on-leaves.

Phyto-piagous, plant-eating.
Poo-piagous, grass-eating.

Rhizo-piagous, feeding on-roots.
Sapro-piagous, feeding on-decomposing matter.

Sarco-piagous, feeding on-flesh.
Seto-piagous, moth-eating.

Xylo-piagous, wood-eating. [Z ol.
Zoo-piagous, eating-animal (food).]

Oso-piagous, I will carry what is eaten; the tube conveying the food to the stomach.

Sarco-phagus, (a coffin made originally of Assos stone supposed to) eat or corrode the flesh.

Ade-phagy, an eating-abundantly;
 glutinous: hence, Adephagin, one of a class of voracious leeches.

Drimy-phagy, an eating-acid (things).
Dys-phagy, difficulty of eating or swallowing.

Xero-phagy, (a religious) eating-of dry (food only without butter, &c.).
 Fauces, is akin.

-PHAINO, Gr., I bring to light or make manifest; I show, shine, appear. Phasis,* appearance, phase.

Pheni, I show by words, I speak or report. Phaos, light. Phao (fr. root pha: Sansc. bhā, to shine); lahine.

Choro phane, shining (with) pale green (lustre); a sort of floor-spar:
 Chloro-haite, a green mineral.

Hydro-phane, (sort of opal which) shines (transparently) in water.

Tri-phane, a three (ways) shining or transparent (mineral).

A-phany, (a diminutive plant which is) not-distinct or showing.

Epi-phany, a shining-above (and announcing or showing clearly, as the star of Bethlehem).

Theo-phany, a manifestation-of God
 (in visible form).

Dia-phanous, shining-through.

Apo-phasis, a showing or exhibition (when appearing to go) from (the point).

Em-phasis, an appearance or meaning (thrown) upon or into (a sentence by laying unusual stress upon a word, and thereby invariably import). [({mysteries}); a priest.

Hiero-plant, (one who) shows-sacra Syco-plant, (one who) shows or informs (of the exportation of figs (forbidden by the laws of Athens);
 a pander to the luxuries of the great.

Cory-phene, (a fish crested with,
 a helmet (like) -appearance. [part.

Blas-phemy, hurtful or injurious-re-
 Ent-phemy, a well or elegant-learn-
 Pro-phet, a fore-teller or speaker.
 Phantasy, Fancy, Phantasm, Phautom, Fantastic, Phase, belong.

-PHARMACON, Gr., a medicine, drug, poison. [its effects.

Alexi-harmic, driving away-pain or Tetra-pharmacum, (an ointment made of) four-medicines. Pharmacy, belongs.

Para-PHERNALIA, Gr. (pherne, what a wife brings; a dowry: fr.
 phero: see Phoreo); (goods or portion) besides or with-the dowry;
 appurtenances.

-PHEMI: see Phaino. PIERO:
Phuro.

PHILEO, Gr., I love. Philos, dear, loved.

Ammo-philous, sand-loving. Ent.
Deile-philous, loving-twilight.
Drymo-philous, oak wood or forest
 -loving.

Geo-philous, earth-loving.
Glyci-philous, loving-sweets.

Hydro-philous, water-loving. [Ent.
Xylo-philous, loving-(decayed) wood.
Egi-phil, (a plant that) goats-love.

-PHILEO, Gr. (Sanse, thrst, to shine or dazzle: formed partly fr. sound);
 I flicker in the breeze powerfully;
 I burn or kindle. Phlegma, inflammation, or its result, spitting.

De-phlegmate, (L. G.), to burn (the moisture)-from.

Leuco-phlegmatic, pale(new with hectic)-inflammation.

Anti-phlogistic, against-inflammation.

Epi-phlogistic, adding to-inflammation. Phlegm, Phlegmon, (Phlogiston, perh. Flash, belong.

-PHOBOS, Gr. (fr. phobomai, I am scared; I flee); fear, dread.
Hydro-phobia, dread-of-water.
Photo-phobia, dread-of-light.

-PHONE,* Gr. (fr. phao, phos light: see class Phaino); that which brings matters to light, voice, speech, sound, singing.

Anti-hony, a singing-on opposite (sides alternately).

A-hony, privation-of voice.

Bary-hony, heaviness; i. e., difficulty of speech. Met.

Caco-hony, badness of sound. Rhet.

Dys-phony, difficulty of speech.

Eu-phony, well or good-sound (in concurrent letters). Unison.

Homo-phony, sameness of sound, Laryngo-hony, the sound (of the voice by stethoscope) in the larynx.

Para-phony, nearness or slight alteration of voice. Voices.

Poly-phony, (a speaking in) many Sym-phony, (sound) with -sound; combination of sound.

Micro-hone, (an instrument to measure) small or low-sounds.

Dia-phnic, sounding-through (so as to be refracted). [feelings].

Ec-phonestic, a speaking-out (one's) Epi-phonia, a speech or word-in-addition. Phonics, Belongs.

Eu-PHORBIOS, Gr. (phorbe, res-ture, food; fr. pherbo, I feed, cii

fr. piso, pinso, I bruise, pound; fr.
Gr. ptiso, I crush, grind; fr. sinsepish, to bruise; (belonging to the captain of the vanguard, as nearest the first-javelin, or standard, Peste,
belongs.

PILO, Lat. (prob. fr. pilum: see Pilar); I pound or beat with a pestle; I compress into a mass so as to take the goodness from, I pilfer.
Com-pile, (to put) together in a mass.
De-opilate, (to take) away-a mass or obstruction (placed) against (a thing); to remove an obstruction.
Ex-pilation, (a squeezing) out of the mass; a pilfering. To Pill, Pilfer, Pillage, perh. Pile, Pillar, belong.

-PILOS, Lat. (fr. Gr. pilos, wool or hair wrought into felt); felt, pile, the hair.

De-pilatory, (taking) away-the hair.
Horri-pilation, a roughness or standing on end of the hair. Felt, Pi-losity, Plush, belong.

Im PINGUATE, Lat. (pinguis fat); to imbue with-fat. Pinguid, belongings.

PINO. See Poto.

Em-PION, Gr., a well (looking limpid liquid, but of)-fat or greasy (quality).

PIPTO. See Ptois. PIRE. See
Puro.

Em-PIRIC, Gr. (peiricos, tried; fr.
peirao, I try or attempt; fr. peira,
a trial, a pushing on, a piercing; perh. akin to Pirus); (founded) on trial or experiment; (making) experiments on (persons at hazard).
Pirate, belongs.

-PISCIS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. pieln, to have drunk; fr. pino: see Puto);
a drinking animal, a fish.

Ex-pication, a fishing-out.
For-poise, (Fr.), the hog-fish. Piscation, Fish, belong.

-PITHECOS, Gr. (fr. peitho, I persuade, listen to, believe, watch, mimic); an ape, monkey.
Cercio-pitheke, the (long) tailed monkey.
Galeo-pitheke, the weasle-ape.

PIUS, Lat., pious. Piatas, stoned.
Pio, I worship, I do my duty to God and my neighbour.
Im pious, not-pious or worshipping.
Ex-piate, (to blot) out-by atonement or worship. [-atonement]
Im-piacular or -lous, not (requiring)
Un-pituous, not-kind to one's neighbour). Pious, Piety, Pity, Piacle, belong.

Im-PLACENTAT, Lat. (placenta, a cake or anything like; fr. Gr.
placous, a cake; anything flat; fr.
Plax: wh. see); (having) no-placenta (or cake like blood origin).

PLACIO,* Lat. (perh. fr. per-lacio,
I thoroughly-entice: see Lectum);
I please. Placio, I appease or bring to peace, pleasure, or satisfaction.
Com-placent, Com-plaisant, (Fr.), (making others) please-a-with-one).
Dis-placency, (a being) apart or far from-pleasing; Dis-please, to be apart, &c.

Im-Placible, not-to be appeased.
Please, Placid, Placable, belong.

-PLANGO, (fr. Gr. plesso: see Ple-ge); I beat, or dash, as the hands or breast; I bewail. Pains.*
Com-plain, to beat (the hands)-together (in grief): to bewail - to (another) or complete*.

Sub-plangent, dashing-beneath (as a wave). Plain, Plangent, belong.

-PLANUS* Lat. (fr. Gr. platus, broad, flat; prob. fr. Plax: wh.
see); flat, smooth, level, easy, clear.
Ex-plain, (to bring) out-clear; to clear-out (the difficulties).

Com-planate, (to make the parts) level-with (each other); i. e., altogether-level. Plain, Plane, belong.

-PLASSO, Gr. (prob. plasso, plax, plash, slap, flat; and many other words have a kind of connection, being formed from similar sound); I plaster, anoint, mould, form, model, fasten. Plasm.*

Cero-plastic, modelled-in-wax.
Dia-plastic, thoroughly-anointing or fastening (a broken limb).

Em-plastrum, (ointment) daubed in;
a plaster. [-bone]-again.

Ana-plasis, a fastening (a luxated
Cata-plasm, an ointment - (spread) against (some body); a plaster.

Meta-plasm, a change-in the form (of a sentence)

Pro-plasm, the former or first-mould.
Proto-plast, the first-model; prototype. Plastic, Plaster, Plasm, belong.

-PLAUDO, Lat., I clap or strike the hands, &c.; I encourage by noise, like the sound of the word.

Ap-plaud, to strike (the feet)-to or on (the ground); to (give) encouragement-to.

Im-plausible, not-(likely to gain) believe or encouragement.

Dis-plode, (to break) apart-(with) a clap or clattering noise.

Ex-plode, (to burst) out-(with) a noise. Plaudit, Longa.

Gono-PLAX, Gr. (plax, anything flat or flattened, or broad: compare the words in the etymol. of Plasso);
an angular-plated or crusted (crab).

Plate, Plat, Flat, belong. Plank is akin.

-PLEGE, Gr. (fr. plesso, I strike, smite; fr. root pleg, plag: prob.
akin to Plasso); a stroke, blow.

Plectron, a smiter, goad, or spur.
Plectis, a smiting.

Hemi-plegy, a (paralytic) stroke-on half (the body).

Para-plegy, a (paralytic) stroke-(on all parts) near; i. e., all the body.

Poly-plectron, the many - spurred (peacock).

Apo-plexy, a stroke-(taking) away
(motion and sense).

Cata-plexy, a striking-down (of the power in a limb).

Ex-plexy, a striking-out (of one's senses); stupefaction. Plague, belongs.

-PLEO, Ant. Lat. (fr. Gr. pleo, I overflow: see Ploos; akin to Plev-sis); I fill. Plenus, full.

Com-plete, completely - filled; fulfilled; hence, In-complete.

Re-plete, filled-again; filled-(to the extent of flowing) back or over.

Com-plement, (that which taken) together or with (the rest)-fills (anything).

Im-plement, (that which) fills-in or supplies (full power to the hands).

Sup-plement, (that which) fills or completes-under or after. [ness.]

De-pletion, (a taking) from-the ful-
Ex-pletion, a filling out or up; Expletion, filling-out to (full size); completing.

Im-pletion, a filling-in or up.
Sup-ply, to fill-(from) under; to add;

 See the previous Index.

to the bottom as much as is taken from the top.

Com-pline, (the service which) com-pletes or ful-fills (the day).

Ac-com-plish, to add-ful-ment (to).
Re-plenish, (to make) full or plen-tiful - again. Plenial, Plenitude,
Plenty, belong.

Epi-PLEROSIS, Gr. (fr. pleos, full; akin to pleo: see Ploos); over-ful-
-ling or repletion.

-PLEURA, Gr., the side or ribs.
Bu-pleur, ox-rib; a plant.

Endo-pleur, the internal-side or in-
-tegument (of a seed). [-or ribs.*]

Micro-pleur, (a fish with) little-side Placello-pleur, little bundle-zone or side; a mollusk.

Tetra-pleuron, a square or four-sided
(pillar). Pleurisy, belongs.

Re-PLEVY, Fr. (plevir, to pledge;
fr. low Lat. plegio, I pledge;
perh. fr. Lat. plico, I bind or en-twine: see Plexus); (to claim) again or back-(upon given) pledges.

Pledge, Plight, Plot, a conspiracy,
belong.

-PLEXUS,* Lat. Plectus, Gr. woven, wound, plaited. Ple-co, Plic-co,* L.
Pleco, Fr., I knit, twist, bend, en-
-twine, fold. Plier, Fr., to bend.

Em-plecton, (G.), a knitting-in (of rough and smooth stones in a wall).

Eu-plectomus, (G.), (having) well
-twisted or braided - ringlets).

Com-plex, woven-together; difficult to unravel.

Im-plex, woven-in; entangled.
Per-plex, (to put) thoroughly-in a maze or winding.

Im-pleach, to in-weave.
Com-plete, to weave-together.

Com-tortu-plicate, folded-(with) con-
-tortions or twistings-together.

Du-plicate, (in) two-folds; doubled;
multiplied into itself: hence, Com-
-duplication, a doubling-over each other or together; Re-duplication, a doubling-back; Du-plicity, two
-foldness (of character); doubleness, insincerity.

Ex-plicate, (to bring) out of-the web or difficulty; to unfold, to explain:
hence, In-explicable.

Im-plicate, (to bring) into-the web.
Oto-plexae, eight-folded.

Quadri-plicate, four-folded.
Re-plicate, folded-back.

Semi-plexae, half-folded.
Septem-plicate, seven-folded.

Uni-plicate, once-folded.
Ac-com-plex, (one) added or belong-ing to-(those) entwined-with (a trans-action).

Du-plex, folded-in-two; two-fold.
Sub-duple, (a fraction of one with) two-under; i. e., a half.

Multi-plex, many-folded.
Quad-ruple, four-fold.

Quintu-plex, five-fold.
Sextu-plex, six-fold.

Tri-ple, Tre-ble, three-fold; also the third and highest part in music, the others being the second, and funda-mental bass.

Ap-ply, to bend-to; to bend (the facul-ties)-to; to touch. In-applicable, not-to be bent or adapted to: Re-ap-plication, an applying-again.

Com-ply, to bend-with (one's wishes); to oblige: hence Com-pliment, and
In-compliant, not bending.

Multi-ply, to fold-many (times); to increase.

Re-ply, to bend-back (an answer);
hence, Re-plication, an echo.

Sup-pliant, (one who entreates with knives) bent under (him).

 See the previous Index.

Digitized by Google

CIV

-Podos

-PLORO

De-ploy, (to take) from the folds; to unfold.
 Em-ploy, to fold or involve in (business).
 Ex-ploit, (an act which brings out of the folds, evolves, or achieves (something)). Plication, Pliable, Ply, belong.

-PLOS, Gr., a sailing. Pleo, (fr. Sansc. plu, to swim); and akin to phleo: see Phyllo; I overflow, flow, sail, or float.

Epi-ploom, (a membrane which floats upon the intestines).
 Peri-plus, a sailing-around.

-PIO, O, * Lat. (perh. fr. the sound); I halloo, wall, lament, shed tears.

De-plore, (to be cast) down with weeping; to shed tears-down; to wail for.

Ex-plore, (to search) out-by hallooing (into, as a dark cavern); to try by sounding.

Im-plore, (to call) upon-with weeping.
 PLUMA, Lat., a feather.

De-plume, (to take) away-the feathers; to unplume.

Dis-plume, to separate-the (tuft of) feathers (from the animal); to un-plume. Plume, belongs.

-PLUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. pleion, pleon, more; for poleion; fr. polus, many, much); more. Pluris, of more.

Non-plus a no-more or further; a stand still.

Sur-plus, the more or remainder (-which is) over: hence, Surplusage. Plural, belongs.

Im-PLUVIUM, a Lat. (fr. pluo, I rain; fr. Gr. philo, I gush, flow; see Phyllo); (a court in Roman see Phyllo) into (which) the rain (was houses) into (which) Pluvial, Plover, allowed to fall). Pluvial, Plover, a rain loving bird, belong.

A-PLYSIAN, Gr. (plusias, washed; fr. pluno, I wash; fr. pleo: see Phyllo); the un-clean or wash; Plus; (the sea hare; also, a sponge, from their dirty look. Plunge is akin.

-PNEO, * Gr. (fr. root pne, pne); I blow or breathe. Pneuma, breath. Pneumon, the lungs.

A-pnea, want or difficulty of breath. Isachy-pnea, shortness of breathing.

Dys-pnea, difficulty of breathing. Ortho-pnea, (ability) to breathe (only with the body up right.

Amphi-pneust, (one) breathing-in two ways; i.e., by lungs and gills.

Di-pneumonian, a double-lunged (spider).

Tetra-pneumonian, a four-lunged (spider).

-Podos, Gr., of a foot. Pous, (fr. Sansc. pad, to go; prob. fr. the sound, and akin to pad, pat, paddle, foot, and perh. hoof; also, to pod, foot, and perh. others); a round full and many others); a round full and many others); a foot, a leg. Pes, Lat., a foot. Pedis, of a foot.

Acantho-pod, a spiny-legged or footed (beetle).

Amphi-pod, (a crustacean with) feet diversely (conformed). Apod, a-pod, a foot-less (animal); Apodal, Brachio-pod, (a mollusk having) arms (-in place of) the foot or organ of progression (in cockles, &c.).

Brady-pod, the slow-footed (sloth). Branchio-pod, (a crustacean with) gills-in the feet.

Cephalo-pod, (a mollusk with) the head-(between the body and) feet.

Cilio-pod, (a centipede) pair of feet. Lip (is formed by a pair) of feet. Condyllo-pod, knuckle-foot.

Centopod, (an animal with) cent-anodal, adj.

Deca-pod, a ten-footed (mollusk).

Eury-pod, broad-foot; a crab.

Gastero-pod, (a mollusk creeping as with) a foot-(by means of a muscular disk) on the stomach.

Hetero-pod, (a mollusk with) feet-of different (length).

Hexa-pod, a six-footed (insect).

Iso-pod, (a crab with) legs-alike.

Lamodi-pod, (a crustacean whose) throat-(supports the four forward) feet.

Lophyro-pod, a tufted-footed (crustacean).

Octo-pod, an eight-footed (mollusk).

Ocy-pod, a swift-footed (crab).

Phylo-pod, (a crab with) leaf (like) feet.

Pencil-pod, a varied-footed (crustacean).

Pseudo-pod, (an infusory, whose body produces) false or apparent-feet.

Ptero-pod, (a mollusk with) winged (fore) feet.

Scizago-pod, divided-foot; a shrimp.

Seigano-pod, (a bird whose whole foot-(is) covered (with a web).

Stoma-pod, (a crustacean whose) jaw or mouth-feet (resemble with) feet.

Tracheli-pod, (a mollusk with) feet-on the neck.

Tri-pod, (a stool with) three-legs or feet.

Anti-podes, (persons having) the feet-opposite or over against (others).

Acro-podium, the top of the foot.

Ægo-podium, goat-foot; goatweel, a plant.

Cheno-podium, goose-foot; a plant.

Lycopodium, wolf's-foot; a moss.

A-pus, foot-less; the martinet, which does not use its feet.

Arcto-pus, bear's-foot, a plant.

Dasy-pus, hairy-foot (beast).

Di-pus, a two-footed (beast).

Echino-pus, hedgehog-foot; a plant.

Erythro-pus, red-foot.

Himantopus, thong or slender-leg or foot; the stilt, a bird.

Hippo-pus, (a mollusk with) horse-foot or hoof (like shell).

Lago-pus, hare-foot; a feather-toed grouse.

Lepido-pus, (a fish with) scaly-feet; i.e., ventral fins.

Macro-pus, long-foot; the kangaroo, also a beetle.

Platy-pus, broad-foot. [hog.

Oryctero-pe, digging-foot; the ground.

Phalero-pe, scolloped-foot; a bird.

Poly-pe, (a radiated animal with) many-feet or feelers. The following are Latin.

Bi-ped, a two-footed (being); a man.

Cirri-ped, curly-foot; the barnacle.

Crassi-ped, thick-footed.

Corti-ped, short-footed.

Cygni-ped, swan-footed.

Im-ped, (having) no-feet.

Levi-ped, bald or slender-footed.

Lori-ped, thong or girth-footed.

Nudi-ped, naked-footed, as ducks.

Palmi-ped, palm-footed.

Pinnati-ped, membraned-footed. Orn.

Pinni-ped, fin-footed; a crab.

Pro-ped, a forward or front-foot.

Quadruped, a four-footed (beast).

Reti-ped, net or scale-foot. Orn.

Scuti-ped, shield or ring-legged. Orn.

Soli-ped, solid-foot or hoof.

Centi-pede, hundred-foot; a worm.

Im-pede, (to get) between-the feet; to hinder.

Milli-pede, thousand-foot. Ent.

Romi-pede, ear-foot; a worm.

Scopi-pede, broom-foot; a worm.

Veloci-pede, a foot-hastener.

Sesqui-pedal, (containing) a foot-and a half.

Ex-pedient, (letting) the feet-out (of shackles); hastening. In-ex-pedient, Ex-pedite.

* see the previous Index.

Ex-peditate, (to let) the feet-out. Sup-peditate, (to put) under-the feet: to sup-ply.

Sup-pedaneous, under-the feet.

Im-peach, Fr. (to throw) between-the feet; to detain by an accusation.

Pedal, Pedestal, Pedestrian, belong

Path, is akin.

PGE. See Pe.

-POGON, Gr., the beard.

Andro-pogon, man's beard; a grass.

Cyano-pogon, blue-beard; a bird.

Gero-pogon, old man's beard; a plant.

Trago-pogon, (a plant with seeds) bearded, as-a goat.

-POIEO, Gr., I make, produce, generate, create.

Chlyo-poetic, generating-chyle.

Galacto-poetic, generating-milk.

Noso-poetic, producing-disease.

Un-poetic, not-creating (from imagination).

Epo-pee, a creation-in words.

Onomaio-poe, a making-of names (from the sound).

Pharmaco-poe, (a book on) making medicines.

Pros-opo-poe, a making or feigning the before or front-eye or face (of persons); i.e., their front appearance, or form generally; personification. Poem, Poet, belong.

-POISE: see also Pendeo.

-POLEO, Gr. (fr. polao, I deal, traffic; prob. fr. pelo, I am in motion or busy); I traffic, trade, sell.

Biblio-polist, a book-seller.

Mono-polist, the only-seller.

-POLIO, Lat. (fr. Gr. poleamai, I turn; fr. pelo: see Puleo); I turn, polish by turning, refine.

Inter-polate, (to place a thing with a different) polish-between (others); to both.

Re-polish, to polish-again. Polish, Pole, on which the earth turns, belong.

-POLIS, Gr. (fr. poleo, I turn up the soil with a plough; fr. pelo: see Puleo); a place marked out by the plough; a city.

Acro-polis, the elevated (part of the) city; the citadel.

Helio-polis, the city-of the sun.

Metro-polis, the mother-city.

Nepo-polis, new-city: Na-ples.

Necro-polis, the city-of the dead; a burying ground. [-cities,

Persa-polis, (a collection of) five Persa-polis, (the capital) city-of Persia.

Adriano-pole, the city-of Adrian.

Constantino-pole, the city-of Constantine. [a wanderer.

Cosmo-polite, a citizen-of the world;

Im-polite, not (like)-a citizen, urbane, or well bred person.

Im-politic, not (benefiting) the city or state. Police, Politic, Polite, belong.

-POLLEO, Lat. (fr. Gr. polus: see Plus); I am much able or powerful.

Equi-pollent, (of) equal-power.

Pre-pollent, before-in power. The Poll, the many, is akin.

POMA, Gr., a cover or lid.

Cyclo-pomous, with circular (-gill) covers; Cyclopome, an animal with, &c.

Macro-pomous, with long-(gill) covers.

Meno-pomous, (having) the aperture of the gill covers-lasting.

Micro-pomous, with little-(gill) covers.

Plectro-pomous, with spurred or fringed-(gill) covers.

PONDER: see Pendeo.

Positus.

Geo-PONIC, Gr. (ponos, hard work)

cy

Negro-PONT

POTAMOS

PREHEND

fr. péno, penomat, I work for bread, I am in penury; working or tilling the earth.

Negro-PONT, Lat. (pons, a bridge; perh. fr. overhanging a stream: see P. ndro); the bridge-of the Egripus, a corruption of Euripus.

PONTOS, Gr., Pontus, Lat. (akin to benthos and Euxinus: wh. see); the deep, the sea, particularly the Euxine.

Helles point, the sea-of Helle.

Pro-point, the sea (which to the Greeks was before (the Euxine). Pontage, Pontoon, Punt, belong.

POOR, poora, Poor, Hindoo, a town. Hajee-poor, the town of a hajee or Mecca pilgrim.

Shah-lehan-poor, the town of, &c.

POPULUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. popus: see Plus: and akin to Polk); the many, the people.

De-populate, (to take) the people -from; to devastate.

Un-popular, not - (belonging to or liked by) the people.

Dis-people, (to scatter) apart or de-destroy the people.

Im-people, (to form) into-a people.

Re-people, to people-again. People, Popular, Populate, Populate, belong.

-POROS, Gr., Poros, Lat., a passage or pore. Petra, Gr. (fr. pera, peran, end, boundary; hence, beyond the boundary, beyond, across; fr. Pro, forward: see List of Prefixes); I pass or pierce through. [passage].

Poro-porus, or porous, an ox-ford or Crypto-porous, (with) hidden-poros.

Lechino-porous, (with) spined-poros.

Poly-porous, (with) many-poros.

Pislo-porous, (with) fine-poros.

Dia-poreis, a twofold-passage; a doubt which way to turn. Rhet.

The rest are Latin.

Celle-pore, (a polype having) cells - (pierced with) a pore.

Maistre-pore, (Fr., Lat.), (a worm) spotted with poros.

Mille-pore, a thousand-pored (polype).

Nulli-pore, (a polype having) no -poros.

Tubi-pore, (a zoophyte living in) a pore; depression, or cell - (lengthened into) a tube.

Im-porous, not-porous. Pore, belongs.

-PORTO, Lat., I carry or bear (a burthen) Portus, a port. Porta, (prob. fr. Gr. Poros, a passage, wh. see); a gate.

Com-port, to bear or suit-with; to bear (oneself on the)-whole.

De-port, to carry-away; banish.

De-portment, (the manners which one) carries-away (with him, into the world): Dis (for De)-port, a downward or descending carriage.

Doml-port, (a snail which) carries-its carriage out of (a country).

Im-port, to carry-into; to car-upon: Im-portant, bearing-upon; relevant.

Im-portune, to bear (hard)-on (one with solicitation). [aim].

Pur-port, the leaving-for or towards;

Re-port, to bear-back (an answer, sound, &c.)

Sup-port, to under-prop or bear;

In sup-portable, not-(to be up)held (as from)-under.

Trans-port, to carry-across.

As ally-portation, a carrying-away.

Op-portune, bearing-against or upon (one); coming near, at hand, convenient.

Pass-port, (Fr.), (a permission) to pass-the gates (of a town).

Out-port, an outward-port or harbour. Port, belongs. Ford, Frith, are akin.

-POSITUS, Lat., put or placed.

Pimo, * I put, lay aside, place.

Ap-pose, to place-to or near; Ap-position, a putting or adding to.

Com-pose, to put-together, to unite; to form: De-compose, (to take) away-union: Dis-compose, (to take) what is united-apart: Pre-compose, to form-beforehand: Re-compose, to form-again.

De-pose, to put or lay-down.

Dis-pose, to put or arrange-in (its) different parts; to give a general character or inclination to: In-dispose, to disarrange, or put out of order: hence, also, Pre-dispose, and Re-dispose.

Ex-pose, to place-without (doors, so as to exhibit).

Im-pose, to put (a weight, astonishment, deception, &c.)-upon (one).

Inter-pose, to put (something)-between (others).

Op-pose, to put (force)-against

Pre-pose, to put-before: Pre-position, place-before; a word placed before a noun.

Pro-pose, to put (an offer)-forward or before: Pur-pose, (that which one) puts-before (him); an object in view.

Re-pose, to put or lay-back, out of the way, or at rest; to rest.

Sup-pose, to put (something)-under, (and make all rest on a new foundation): to put (something in) underhandedly, secretly, or falsely, (which will be or is assumed as true); to imagine: hence, Pre-suppose.

Trans-pose, (to take) across-(from one) place (language, &c., to another).

Im-post, (something) placed-on; a

Out-post, an outward-place or position.

Ovi-positor, (the instrument in insects which) places-the eggs.

Circum-position, a placing-around (in a circle).

Contra-position, opposition-in place.

Juxta-position, nearness-in place.

De-pone, to lay-down or de-clare: hence, De-ponent.

Post-pone, to put-afterwards or off.

Com-ponent, putting-together (or helping to do so).

Ex-ponent, putting or setting-out or forth; showing, denoting.

Com-pound, to put-together.

Ex-pound, to put-out or forward; to show or explain. [&c.]

Im-pound, to put-in (confinement).

Pro-vest, one placed-before (others).

Ponent, Position, Post, Posture, perh. Pose, belong.

Pre-POSTEROUS, Lat. (posterus, that which is after; fr. post, afterwards: pos, for Postus, laid aside, postponed): (putting what should be, before-after, (and the contrary).

Postern, Postil, belong.

Ex-POSTULATE, Lat. (postulo, I demand as a right; I ask; perh. fr. posco, I demand): to demand -from (with earnestness); to re-monstrate. Postulate, belongs.

-POTAMOS, Gr. (prob. fr. pino: see Poto); drinkable or fresh water; a river, stream.

Chero-potamus, the river-pig or hog.

Hippo-potamus, the river-horse.

* See the previous index.

Meso-potamia, (a country) in the middle of or between-rivers.

-POTIS, Pos, Lat. (akin to Sansc. pá, to defend; whence perh. Despot); able, powerful. Posse, (pos-Esse, to be-able); to be able. Potens, powerful.

Im possible, not-able to be or happen.

In-com-possible, not-able to be or happen with (another thing).

Im-puissant, not-powerful.

Im-potent, (having) no-power.

Multi-potent, powerful-in much.

Omni-potent, all-powerful.

Pleni-potent, (having) full-power.

Pre-potent, before; i.e., superior-in power: very powerful. Potent, Possible, Puissant, belong.

-POTO, Lat., I drink. Pian, Gr. (fr. root po); I drink. Potis, drink.

Com-potation, a drinking-together.

Counter-poison, (something) against - (a medicated) drink.

Em-poison, to imbue with poison.

Pro-pine, (G.), to drink-before; to offer the cup; to offer.

Dy-cata-poty, (G.) difficulty of drinking-down; hydrophobia. Potable, Poison, belong.

Em-POWER, Fr. (pouvoir, to be able; fr. Lat. potere, posse: see Plus); to imbue with-power or ability. Power, belongs.

-PRACTICOS, Gr., fit for doing, effective, able. Praxis, Praxis, Praxis, (poss. fr. peran: see Poros); I bring to an end, I achieve, accomplish, do. Pragma, a deed.

Im-practicable, not-to be done.

Mal-practice, (F.), an evil-deed.

Hyper-pragmatical, over-able, effective, efficacious. Praxis, Practical, Pragmatic, belong.

Chryso-PRASE, Gr. (prason, a leek; (a mineral of) a golden-and leek (green hue). Porridge is perh. akin.

De-PRAVE, Lat. (pravus, poor, crooked, spiritless, wicked: perh. fr. Gr. praos, inclining forward, yielding, mild, craven; prob. fr. Pro: see List of Prefixes); (to bring) down-(to what is) wicked. Pravity, belongs.

-PRECATUS, Lat., having entreated.

Pr. cor (fr. Gr. proissomai, I beg; perh. fr. pro-ischo, pro-Echo, I hold-forward (the hand to beg): wh. see); I beg or pray good or bad.

Ap-precate, to pray-to.

De-precate, to pray (that something may be taken)-away. [(one).]

Im-precate, to pray (curses)-upon

Un-precarious, not-to be prayed (at another's hand); not uncertain or depending on another.

Out-pray, to pray-more than (another). Pray, belongs.

De-PREDATE, Lat. (præda, spoil, booty, property; (to take) away -as spoil). Predal, Prey, Predatory, Predial, belong.

-PREHEND, * Eng. of Lat. Præhendo (prob. fr. prehendo, I hand-before; I put my hand before and prevent escape); I lay hold of, take, seize, grasp. Prendre, Fr. to take, Pris, taken.

Ap-prehend, to take-to (oneself the meaning, &c.); to seize, to understand. In -apprehensible (that can-not-be understood; Pre-apprehension, the understanding (a thing)-beforehand: Ap-prentice, one who apprehends; i.e., learns; or (one who) is taken-to (oneself as a servant).

Com-PRESBYTERIAL

Com-prehend, to take-together (in the mind, &c.); to include: In-com-prehensible, not-to be included in the mind; Un-comprehensive, not grasp (much)-together.
 De-prehend, to take-away; to seize: a person or knowledge; hence, In-deprehensible.
 Re-prehend, to take-back; to check: Ir-reprehensible, not-to be checked or blamed.
 Ap-prize, to take (information)-to; (to give) the grasp or knowledge (of something)-to (a person): hence, Un-apprised. {prehend.
 Com-prize, to take-together; to com-Em-prize, (a thing) taken {an under-
 -in (hand), {Enter-prize, (a thing) taken {taking.
 -between (the hands), {
 Mis-prize, to take-amiss: i.e., (to have) guilty or bad-knowledge, be-haviour, &c.
 Fur-prize, a taking-for (oneself what belongs to the public).
 Re-prize, to take-back again; to seize -in return. {to seize-upon.
 Sar-prize, to over-take, (unawares); Im-prison (to put) into (a place of) seizing or detention. {crime.
 Cut-prit, (one) taken-in a fault or Main-primor, a taking-by the hand (in token of a pledge given); surety.
 Re-prive, a taking-back (of a sentence); hence, Un-reprived.
 Im-pregnable, not-to be taken. Pren-ation, belongs.
 Com-PRESBYTERIAL, Lat. (pres-byter: fr. Gr. presbut, an elder; perh. fr. prepo, I am conspicuous, tried, honoured, distinguished, proper; perh. fr. peirao: see Price); (belonging to) elders or presbyters-together or in common. Priest, belongs.
 -PRESUS,* Lat., weighed down, squeezed. Preno. (poss. fr. Gr. barema, weight; fr. baros, weight); I press. {to. Bot.
 Ap-press, to squeeze-to; to grow close Com-press, to squeeze-together: In-compressible, not-to be com-pressed; and Un-compressible.
 De-press, to weigh-down.
 Ex-press, to squeeze-out (as juice, words, &c.); hence, In-expressible.
 Im-press, to squeeze-upon or in (so as to leave a mark): Re-impression, impression (made)-anew.
 Op-press, to squeeze or weigh-upon (the whole so as to thrust down).
 Re-press, to squeeze or push-back; to check: hence, Ir-repressible.
 Sup-press, to squeeze-under; to stifle; hence, Insuppressible.
 Counter-pressure, weight or thrust-in opposition.
 Im-primatur, (let it be) pressed-upon, (let it be put) into-the press; i.e., printed.
 Im-print, to press-in (so as to leave a mark): hence, Re-imprint.
 Re-print, (to put) again-in the press.
 Re-primand, a pressing or thrusting-back; a check. Press, Print, be-long.
 -PRETIUM, Lat. (perh. fr. prehendo: see Prehend); a prize, booty taken, worth, price.
 Appreciate, (to set) a price-to (a thing); (to esteem)-to-its worth.
 De-precate, (to bring) down-the price (of).
 Appraise, (to set) a price-to.
 Dis-praise, to part from or deprive of (a) price or estimation.
 To-prize, to destroy-the price; hence,

-PROPINQUUS

to undervalue. Price, Prize, Praise, Precious, belong.
 -PRISTES, Gr. (fr. prio, I saw); the saw fish.
 Hemi-rist, half-saw; a fossil fish.
 Myri-rist, ten thousand-saws; a fossil fish. The word Prism is related.
 -PRIVO, Lat. (fr. privus, one's own; perh. fr. Gr. priamai, I buy; akin to perao, I pass from hand to hand, I pass or pierce; fr. pers: see Poros); I take away as my own, I keep apart or secret from others.
 De-priv, to take-from (another); In-deprivable, not-to be taken-away.
 Re-private, one's own-matter: opposed to re-public. Rindolph. Private, Privilege, Privation, belong. Prismi, who was redeemed from captivity, is akin.
 -PROBO, Lat. (fr. probus, approved, honest; prob. fr. Gr. prapon, be-coming; fr. prepo: see Presbyter-ial); I prove, show clearly, try. Probatas, tried, proved, with hon-our.
 Ap-prove, (to apply) a trial-to; (to have) the trial-applied (with hon-our); to prove-to (others one's worthiness under trial): Ap-proba-tion, esteem from the result of the trial; Dis-prove, (to be) apart or far from-approving.
 Dis-prove, (to make) apart or far from-proof.
 Im-prove, (to put) into-the trial: (to correct or be corrected) in-the trial: hence, Dis-improvement.
 Re-prove, (to send) back from-the trial (as unworthy); to condemn, to blame: hence, Re-probate, sent back, given over as worthless: Ir-re-provable, not (with justice)-to be re-proved.
 Com-probate, (to join) with (another) -in proof or testimony.
 Im-probable, (that can not be proved (true)). Probable, Probate, Proof, belong.
 -PROBRUM, Lat., disgrace, reproach.
 Ex-probate, (to hold) out-as disgrace-ful, or vicious.
 Op-probrious, (throwing) disgrace or reproach-against or upon.
 PROMPT. See Emo.
 -PROPINQUUS, Lat., one near in place or relationship. Proprius, that which is near about one; one's own; one's property. Proptius, near at hand in trouble, favourable, kind. Proximus, (for propiusness, nearest; fr. prop, near, before us; prob. fr. Pro, before: see List of Prefixes); nearest, next. Proche, Fr., near.
 Co-propinquity, nearness in blood-in common with (another).
 Ap-propriate, (to give) to (oneself or another)-one's own or his own: hence, Dis-appropriate, to disavow from-appropriation.
 Ex-propriate, (to take) out of (the condition of being)-one's own.
 Im-propriate, (to bring) into (the condition of being)-some one's own.
 Im-pro; er, not-one's own; not adapted to oneself; unfit, unbecoming.
 Dis-property, to separate-one's own (from one).
 Un-propitious, not-favourable.
 Ap-proximate, (to come) very near-to.
 Ap-proach, (to come) near-to.
 Re-approach, (to drive one) back-(from being) near (as with menaces); (to thrust a charge) back and home: hence, Ir-reproachable, not (with justice)-to be reproached. Propin-quity; Proper, Proprietary; Pro-pitiate, Propitious; Proximate, be-long.

-PTERON

 Im-PROSPEROUS, Lat. (prosperus; prob. fr. Gr. prospero, I carry or conduce-towards: see Phoreo); not-lucky or prosperous. Pros; er, be-long.
 -PRUDENT. See Vide.
 Sub-PRURIENT, Lat. (prurio, I itch: perh. fr. per-uro, I burn thoroughly or completely: see Ustum); slightly-itching. Prurient, belongs.
 Ilipti-PRYMNUM, Gr. (prumnos, the hindmost; perh. fr. peran, the end: see Poros); (the kangaroo rat which has its) height (in the) ca-tram: or hinder part.
 Palim-PSIST, Gr. (psao, I rub, scrape, sweep, touch; prob. fr. the sound); (a parchment prepared for writing by being) rubbed-again; i.e., twice (with pumice).
 Met-em-PSYCHOSIS, Gr. (psuche, breath, life, spirit; fr. psucho, I breathe, I blow or sweep a surface with wind; perh. fr. psuo, a form of psao: see Psest); a change of -the spirit or soul (from one body) -into (another).
 -PTERON,* Gr. (fr. pteron, infln. of petamai: see Petalon); a feather; a wing. Pterux, a wing, a flap, a fin.
 A-phani-pterous, (having) not-evident or distinguishable -wings: Aphanipter, an animal having, &c.
 A-pterous, without-wings or mem-branes.
 Belo-pterous, dart-winged.
 Brachy-pterous, short-winged; i.e., with wings not reaching the tail.
 Caulo-pterous, stalk-winged.
 Chiro-pterous, (having) winged-hands; as the bat.
 Coleo-pterous, (having) sheath or over-wings; as beetles.
 Cyclo-pterous, circular-winged.
 Derma-pterous, skin-winged; as ear-wigs.
 Diplo-pterous, (having) doubling (up)-wings; as some wasps.
 Di-pterous, two-winged; as a fly.
 Hemi-pterous, (having) the wing -half (coriaceous and half mem-branous); as the water-boatman.
 Hetero-pterous, (having) the wing -different (in different parts).
 Homo-pterous, (having) a uniform -wing. {branous-wings.
 Hymeno-pterous, (having four) mem-Lepido-pterous, scale -winged; as caterpillar moths.
 Loncho-pterous, lance-winged.
 Macro-pterous, long-winged.
 Megalo-pterous, great-winged.
 Neuro-pterous, (with) nerved-wings (like network); as dragon-flies.
 Odonto-pterous, tooth-winged.
 Ortho-pterous, (having) straight or unfolding-wings.
 Pachyo-pterous, thick-winged.
 Phenico-pterous, red-winged; as the flamingo.
 Rhipi-pterous, fan-winged.
 Schizo-pterous, split-winged.
 Siphon a-pterous, wing-less (and) -siphon (mouthed).
 Spheno-pterous, wedge-winged.
 Strepsi-pterous, (having wings)-like twisted (scales).
 Tetra-pterous, four-winged.
 Trichlo-pterous, with hairy (mem-branous)-wings.

A pteral, having no wings or range of columns (on the flank): Aptery, a building, having, &c.

Di-pter, having two wings or ranges of columns (on each flank); Pseudodipteral, falsely dipter, the inner row of columns being omitted.

Mono-pter, having on wing or range of columns around.

Peri-pter, having a wing, range of columns, or passage-around.

Acantho-pterigous, having spiny or thorny fins: Acanthopterygian, one of a class having, &c.

Ambly-pterigous, blunt-finned.

A-pterigous, fin-less.

Chondro-pterigous, cartilage or gristly-finned.

Dactylo-pterigous, having fins (unwebbed like) fingers.

Deca-pterigous, ten-finned.

Di-pterigous, two-finned.

Macro-pterigous, long-finned.

Malaco-pterigous, having fins with soft rays.

Pro-pterigous, finned before.

Uro-pterigous, having fins (like appendages to the) tail.

A-pteron, or -pteryx, a wing-less (bird of New Zealand).

-PTILON, Gr. (perh. fr. tillo, I pluck, pull, the hair: akin to Velum); a plume, a feather, anything like; a young leaf.

Coleo-ptilous, (having) the young leaves in a sheath: hence, Coleoptil, a plant having, &c.

Exo-ptilous, (having) the plumule without (a sheath). Titillate, Tickle, belong to Tillo.

-PTOSIS, Gr., a falling, a fall: a case. Pipta, (for) ipeto; fr. peto; fr. root pet, pat, meaning fall; perh. akin to Petalon: wh. see); I fall flat, I fall.

Met-em-ptosis, (the suppression of a day in 134 years to prevent the new moon from) falling-upon (a day) after (the right time).

Par-em-ptosis, (a parenthetical sentence) falling-in-by the side or way.

Pro-em-ptosis, (addition of a day every 330 years to prevent the new moon from) falling-upon (a day) before (the right time).

Sym-ptosis, a falling-together (of vowels).

A-ptote, (a word) without cases; i. e., fallings or grades of meaning.

A-sym-ptote, (a scheme of lines which can) not fall-together or meet.

Di-ptote, (a word with) two cases.

Sym-ptom, (an indication which) falls or happens with (the disease).

Dru-pe, (originally ripe olives ready to) fall (from an) oak or other tree: hence, a pulpy, ripe looking fruit, as a peach.

-PYCHE, Eng. of Gr. Psyche, (fr. pusso, I fold as the wings; I fold and cling to the body: prob. akin to Petalon, and perh. to pango, I pack; Pactus); a fold.

A ptychous, without a fold: also, greatly-folded.

Cteno-ptych, comb-fold: a fish.

Di-ptych, (a tablet with) two-leaves or folds.

Holo-ptych, all-fold: a fish.

Poly-ptych, a many-folded (tablet).

-PYUO, Eng. of Gr. Ptyo, (the same as psuo, a form of psao: see Psost): I sweep, scrape, or clear the throat or mouth; I spew, spit, disgorge.

Em-pyxis, a spitting-of (of blood from) within.

Hæmo-pyxis, a spitting-of blood.

-PUBLICUS, Lat. (poplicus; populeus; fr. Populus: wh. see); belonging to the people, public, common.

Re-public, the common-matter or property.

Re-publish, (to make) public-again.

Populace, Popular, people, belong.

-PUDEO, Lat. (perh. fr. puto: see Pus); I am ashamed. Pudor, bashfulness, modesty, shame.

Re-pudiate, (to put) back-shamefully.

Impudent, (having) no modesty or shame. Pudency, belongs.

Tri-PUDIARY, Lat. (terra-pavio, I strike-the ground, hop, or jump: pavio, prob. fr. Gr. pao: see Pist, also Terra); striking or bounding from the ground: hence, Trip.

Pave, Pavement, belong.

-PUGNO, Lat. (fr. pugnis, the fist; fr. Gr. pux, with clenched fist: akin to Pungo); I fight.

Ex-pugno, to fight or drive-out; to conquer; hence, In-expugnable.

Impugno, to fight-upon or towards; i. e., against, to oppose.

Oppugno, to fight-against.

Pro-pugno, to fight-in front of or for.

Re-pugno, (to give) back-a blow or fight; to resist: hence, Re-pugnant, opposite to, resisting. Pugnacious, belongs. Pugil, Pigma, no bigger than the cubit or fist, are akin.

Re-PULLULATE, Lat. (pullulo, I bud; fr. Gr. polos, a young animal); to bud-again. Pullet, Pullulate, Poult, belong. Foal, Billy, poss. Filial, are akin.

Cata PULIT, Gr. (peltes, a brandisher or hurler; perh. fr. pailo, I wield, brandish, swing, dandle, leap, quiver; the same word as ballo: see Bo(w)); (an engine for) downright or vehemently-hurling (stones).

-PUNGO, Lat. (prob. fr. pegnuo: see Pegn: and akin to Pugno); I fix in a point; I prick, pierce, or sting.

Punctus, a point.

Dis-punge, to destroy-by a point or round blot.

Ex-punge, (to scratch) out-with a pointed instrument (as the ancient style). [pricking (at heart).

Com-punction, a complete or severe Inter-punction, (the insertion of) points or stops-between (the members of a sentence). (time).

Un-punctual, not (at the appointed) Appoint, (to fix) to-with a point; to fix; (to put) a point-to or against (the name in token of choice): hence, Dis-appoint, to be apart or away-from an appointment: and Pre-appoint.

Counter-point, (originally composition in which the concords of the different parts were denoted by setting) points-one against. (another): hence, Contrapuntist.

Inter-point, (to insert) points or stops-between.

Un-poignant, not-pricking.

Counter-pane, (a quilt ornamented with) opposite or back-stitching or piercing. Pungent, Punctual, Punct, Pounce, belong.

PUNISH. See Pena.

-PUPUS, Lat. (akin to puer, a child; and prob. to Eng. papa, baby; fr. pa and la, a child's first words): a boy, a puppet Pupa, a girl. Pupillus, a young person, a pupil or learner: also the tender part of the eye. [with (another).

Co-pupil, one learning in company with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

with (another).

RASUS

Poly-PYRENOUS

Pyre, (a mineral which has red streaks) equally (with fire).
Em-pyre, (bright, pure, as if en-wrapped in fire).
Em-pyreumatic, (obtained from substances in the fire; i.e., subjected to its action).
A-pyre, absence or intermission of fever (heat or fever). Pyre, Fire, pyre, from its shape, be-
long.
Poly-PYRENOUS, Gr. (pure), the stone in fruit; perh. bec. shaped like, pure, or perh. fr. Pyre, from its dark red colour; many
-kernelled.

De-QUACE, Lat. (quatio, quasso, I crush, squeeze, jam, shake; the same word as squash; and prob.
formed fr. the sound - see Cussus);
to shake-down. Quassation, Quash,
belong.

Ac-QUANT, Fr. (con-notre; fr.
Lat. con-notus, known-together - see Notus); (to make a circumstance) known or completely known
-to.

Hou-QUANG, Chinese, government or province of lakes.

QUANTUM, Lat. (fr. quam, how,
according to what or what ratio;
fr. quis, qui, who; fr. Gr. pos, pos, who, what; how much, what amount, what).

Ali-quant, some-what; making somewhat towards the whole sum, but in no regular or equal portion.
De-quantitate, (to take) from-the-amount. Quantity, Cantelet, belong.

Bi-QUADRATE, Lat. (quadrum, a square; fr. quatuor, four; fr. Sansc.
square; a twofold - square; the fourth chatur); a twofold - square; the fourth square of a square; the fourth power. Quadrant, Quart, Square, Squadron, Quarrel, a square, Quad-ragine, Quarantine, belong. Four is akin.

-QUE, * Quet, see El, also*

Sur-QUEDRY, Ant. Fr. (cuidre, to think or ween; fr. Lat. cogito, I think; perh. fr. con-agito, ag, I drive or agitate-together; in the mind: see Cogito and Agge); an oyer-weening or arrogance.

Fan-QUEI, Chinese, foreign-spirits or devils; foreigners.

-QUIES, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. pausis, a pause; fr. pauo, I cease); rest, ease, quiet.

Dis-quiet, (to toss the mind here and there or) apart from-rest.

Ac-quiessce, (to come) to-(a state of rest (by yielding or agreeing).

Re-quiem, (a lying) back or down-at-rest; rest; a hymn praying for such a state to the dead. Quiet, perh. Coy, belong.

In-QUINATE, Lat. (quino, I make common; fr. Gr. coinos, xunos, common; fr. xun, sun, with: see common; (to bring)
Syn, in List of Prefixes); (to make sordid or into-common; to make sordid or corrupt: Co-inquinate, to make corrupt-with (all persons).

Bi-QUINTILE, Lat. (quintus, the fifth; fr. quinque, five; fr. Gr. pempe, pente; Sansc. pancha): twice-the-fifth (of a circle): 144 degrees.
Quinary, Quint, belong.

QUIRO, * Lat. termin. of compds.
of Quero; I ask, seek, search.
Queresitus, sought; (to add (oneself)-by seeking: hence, Ac-quisitive.

Ex-quire, to seek or select-out: Exquisite, sought out; choice.

In-quire, to search-into: hence, Inquisition; In-quisitive: Inquest.

Re-quire, to ask-back or in return,
(and therefore with the authority of a giver); to demand: hence, Re-quest (a thing which has been asked-back (but not necessarily given); and an entreaty: Pie-require, to demand-beforehand.

Per-quisite, sought-through (others);
taken from among other things.

Dis-quisition, a searching-in different places; an investigation-under different heads.

Con-quer, to seek or draw-together (for oneself): to bring, as a whole, under the power of one: hence,
Re-conquer. Query, Quest, Questor,
Questuary, belong.

QUITTER, Fr. (fr. Lat. quietare, to quiet; fr. Quies, wh. see); to quit, quiet; fr. Quies, to render quiet or at to free; i.e., to [charge]: (from a rest.

Ac-quit, (to give) rest-to (from a
rest.

Re-quite, (to give) back-and quiet
(one's revenge, &c.); to repay.
Quit, belongs.

Ali-QUOT, Lat. (quot, quotos, how many, so many as; fr. Gr. cosos, posos, how much; fr. pos: see many, how much; fr. pos: see Quantum); some (part)-of so many;
i.e., a regular or exact part or portion. Quota, Quotient, Quote, to mark down or copy how much,
belong.

Hydro-RACHITIS, Gr. (fr. rhachis, a ridge, the back; anything rugged;
fr. rhasso, see Racet); a watery (looking tumour)-on the spine.
Rickets, belongs.

Cata-RACT, Gr. (rhasso, I strike, cut, break, dash: the same as rhasso: see Rhagias); a dashing rhasso: (of water); a confusion (of vision). Perh. Racket is akin.

-RADICIS, Lat., of a root. Radix
(fr. Gr. rhadix, a branch or twig broken off; fr. rhasso: see Racet); a root, which branches underground.

E-radicate, (to pull) out-by the roots.
De-radicate, (Fr.), (to tear) from-the root: to destroy. Radix, Radical, Race, a family from one root; a taste, showing the kind or root; and perh. a running from the root forward or upward; Radish, belong.

RADIUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. rhabdos, a rod, switch; prob. fr. rhasso: see Radicis); the spoke of a wheel, a ray.
Bi-radiate, (having) two-rays.
Cor-radiate, (to have) rays-(uniting) together (in a point): hence, Cor-radiation.

E-radiate, (to dart) out-rays.
Ir-radiate, (to dart) rays-into; to illuminare.

Multi radiate, (having) many-rays.
Radiate, Ray, belong.

RAMPHOS, or Rhamphos, Gr., a bill.
Plecto-ramp, twisted or folded-bill;
a bird.

Todi-ramp, (L. G.), titmouse-bill; a bird.

RANGER, Fr., to put in a rank, ring, or row.

Ar-range, (to put one) to (another)
-in a row: hence, Dis-arrange, (to (throw) apart-from a row.

De-range, (to take) from a row:
hence, to throw out of row or order.

Dis-rank, En-rank, also belong.
class. Range, Rank, also belong.

RASUS, Lat., scraped. Rado, (perh.
fr. the sound); I scrape or scratch.

E-rase, to scrape-out.

Ab-rade, the power of drawing

-RATIO, Lat., the power of drawing a conclusion, reason, proportion.
Ratus, judging, thinking. Rear,
(fr. Res; wh. see); I cast things about in my mind; I think.

Ir-rational, not-(conformable to) reason; (having) no-proportion (to unity).

Un-reason, to deprive-of reason.

Mis-rate, to judge or computeamiss. To rate, to scold, belongs to verath.

Ar-raign, (Fr.), (to call) to-re-ansu;
to call on for a reason or defence.

Rate, Reason, Ratio, belong.

-RE. See previous Index.

Ar-REAR, Fr. (riere, the back. perh.
fr. Lat. retro, backward; fr. Re;
wh. see in List of Prefixes); at-the back; i.e., behind (in payment).

Rear, the back, belongs.

-RECTUS* Lat., ruled, straight, right. Rego, (akin to Gr. oreo, I reach, stretch forth the hand, grasp at); I guide, rule. Rez, a ruler, a king.

Ar-rect, (to set, as the ears) straight -towards (something); to set on end or lift up.

Cor-rect, (to set) straight-with; i.e., by means of (a ruler or guide);
hence, in-correct.

Di-rect, (to guide) straight-when apart (from the motive power); to guide straightly in its course, the impetus having been given. Directly, in the straightest; i.e., shortest manner or time: hence,
Dresser, Dresser, Fr.: whence,
Ad-dress, v. to direct (a letter, &c.)
-to; s. (power of) directing or turning (one's hand) to (anything);
Re-dress, (to make matters) direct or straight-again: A-droit, having ad-dress. The Eng. Dress, that which makes us ready, belongs.

E-rect, (to set) straight-out of or from (the earth or foundation): hence,
Pre-erect and Re-erect.

Sub-rector, an under-rector or ruler of a parish, university, &c.

Contra-regular, out of rule.

Extra-regular, out of rule.

Ir-regular, not-in rule: not-straight.

Co-regent, (one) ruling-with (another).

Vice-roy, (Fr.), (one) in place of a royal, not-kinglike. Rector, Regent, Regiment, Regnant, Reign, Region, Rectitude, Regular, Rule,
Regal, Royal, Realm, also Reach,
belong.

REMUS* Lat. (fr. Gr. eretmos, an oar; fr. eresso, I row; poss. fr.
rhasso, rhasso: see Racet); an oar.

Bi-reme, (a galley with two (banks) of oars.

Quinque-reme, of five (banks)-of oars.
Sei-reme, bristle-oar; an insect's hairy paddle.

-REPTUS, Lat. termin. of compds. of Reptus, snatched. Rapio, (fr. Gr.
harpazo, I snatch, tear, seize; fr.
Sansc. rabh, to bereave: and akin to halreiss, but not arsis: see Crope) Arreps; also to carpo: see Crope)
I snatch, seize, carry off.

Ar-reption, a seizure (of madness).
or on (a person): Ar-reption snatching-to (oneself from another Cor-reption, a snatching-together up (of one's words); a taking up. reproof.

Di-reption, a carrying off-in different directions; a plundering.

Sur-reption, a carrying off-u-cix

handeily: hence, Surreptitious, stolen, not belonging to the real owner, false.

En-rapture, to imbue with (something which) snatches (the senses delightfully); to introduce delirium of joy: En-ravish, is the same, through the Fr. Rap, Ravacious, Rapid, Rapine, Rapture, Ravage, belong. Harpy, prob. Reave, Reft, and Orphan, are akin.

REPTUM, Lat., to creep. Repo, (fr. Gr. herpo, I go slowly, creep; fr. Sansc. srip, to creep: akin to Lat. serpo, I creep); I creep.

Ar-reptitious, creeping-to or on. Ab-reption, a creeping or stealing over. Reptile, belongs. Serpent, Serpigo, Herpes, are akin.

-RES, Lat. (fr. Gr. rhesis; a saying, a word; fr. rheo, ero, I will say or speak); that about which we speak; a thing. (ence as) a thing. Un-real, not (having material existence); to destroy (the reality or existence as) a thing. Real, Rebus, belong. Rhetoric, is akin.

-RET. See previous Index.

-RIAGAS, Gr., a rupture, burst, breach, rent. Rheoso, Rh-gnuo, (fr. root reg, rag, frag: akin to Ract: wh. see); I break, dash.

Dis-rhage, a breaking-through (of bones); fracture. [blood.]

Hemo-rhage, a bursting (forth)-of

-RHEO, Gr. (fr. root, re, ru: Sansc. seru, to flow; perh. fr. the sound); I flow, run, stream, gush.

Cata-rh, a flowing-down (of mucus).

Ana-rhiza, a flowing (of humours) upwards.

Bleno-rhiza, a flowing of mucus.

Dia-rhiza, (a morbid) flowing through or looseness: A-diarrhiza, want of evacuations.

Melano-rhiza, a fluid (varnish which in the air turns) black.

Hemo-rhoids, a flowing of blood.

Colly-rium, (a medicine which) forbids or stops a flowing. Rheum, Rheumatism, a flux of humours, belong. Ruin, a flowing away, destruction, is akin.

-RHIN, Rhis, Gr. (poss. fr. Rh-o); the nose or snout.

Anti-rhine, instead of a snout; Calves' Snout or Snap Dragon, a plant.

Ca-rhine, (an ape with) snout or nostrils (close) against (each other)

Er-rhine, (something to be snuffed) into the nose.

Oxy-rhine, sharp nose; a fish.

Platy-rhine, (an ape with) nostrils broad (apart).

Sipho-rhine, a tube-nosed (bird).

Ticho-rhine, (a rhinoceros with a bony) wall (supporting) the nose.

RHIZA, Gr., a root or sucker.

Coleo-rhize, a sheath (enclosing) a root.

Endo-rhize, a root (elongating from) within (the embryo).

Exo-rhize, a root (elongating from) without (the embryo).

Glycy-rhizin, (matter from) sweet root or Liquo-rice, as it is otherwise spelled.

RHODON, Gr. (perh. akin to eruthros, red, and eng, ruddy); a rose.

Cyno-rhodon, the dog-rose.

Oxy-rhodium, (oil of) roses and acid or vinegar.

RHYNCHOS, Eng. of Gr. Rhynchos, (fr. rhuzo, I growl, snarl; fr. the sound: perh. akin to Eng. ralid); a snout, muzzle, beak. [bird.]

Acantho-rhynch, thorn(like)-beak; a Aspido-rhynch, (a fish with bony) shielded snout.

Callo-rhynch, beautiful or ornamented snout; a fish. [a petrel.]

Chloro-rhynch, orange (colour)-beak; Cymbi-rhynch, boat (shaped)-snout.

Ornitho-rhynch, bird-beak; an Australian quadruped.

Oxy-rhynch, sharp beak; a crab.

Platy-rhynch, broad snout.

Plecto-rhynch, folded snout; a fish.

Steno-rhynch, narrow beak; a crab.

Tropido-rhynch, twisted beak; a bird.

Xiphi-rhynch, sword snout; a fish.

-RHYTHM, Eng. of Gr. Rhythmus, (fr. Rheo: wh. see); flow or motion, measure, poetical time, rhyme.

Eu-rhythy, well or good measure or proportion (in art).

Mono-rhyme, (poetry with every line ending with) one or the same rhyme. Rhythm, Rhyme, belong.

-RICK. See previous Index.

RIDEO,* Lat., I laugh. Risum, to laugh.

De-ride, to laugh-down; to abuse by Ir-ri-sion, a laughing-upon or at. Ridic-ule, Risible, belong.

Ir-RIGATE, Lat. (rigo, I water; akin to Gr. brecho, I wet, bedew: see Brocate; poss. fr. bruo, I cause to burst forth; I am full of; akin to bluo, I gush, and pluo, I flow: see Phyllon); (to throw) water-upon.

Rain, belong.

Ar-RIVE, Fr. (rive, a bank or shore; prob. fr. Gr. rhipe, dash of waves; fr. rhpto: I throw, cast, hurl, dash; fr. root, rip; prob. fr. the sound); (to reach) to the shore or coast (of a country). Perh. Ripple, belong.

-RIVUS, Lat. (fr. Rheo: wh. see); a flowing stream, or river.

De-rive, to flow-down or have its origin from.

Cor-ri-vate, to flow-together. River, Rill, poss. Rival, one who contends with another for the use of the same river, belong.

Cor - ROBORATE, Lat. (robur, strength; prob. fr. Gr. rhoomai, I rush on as a warrior, I move; and perh. akin to rhizo: see Rugate); (to unite one's) strength with (another's); to strengthen completely.

Robust, belong.

-RODO, Lat. (perh. akin to rado: see Ratus; and perh. fr. the sound); I gnaw. Rovum, to gnaw.

Cor-rod, to gnaw-together; to eat away: hence Corrosion, [belongs].

E-rod, to eat-out or away. Rodent, belong.

-ROGATUS, Lat., asked, begged, required, demanded. Rogo, (fr. Gr. orego: see Rectus); I stretch out my hand for, ask for, beg; particularly votes to pass a law.

Ab-rogate, to demand (that something may be done) away: to annul.

Ar-rogate, to demand-to or for (one-self unreasonably): Ar-rogant.

De-rogate, to require (something) from; hence to lessen or lower.

E-rogate, (to give) out (money) which is required; to expend: Super-erogate, (to give) out or do over or more than what is required.

In-er-rogate, to ask or question between or in the middle (of a rectal)

Sur-rogate, (one who is) asked for (under or after (another)); an underling, substitute, or deputy:

Surrogate, v. to substitute.

Pre-rogative, (a benefit demanded before; i. e., beyond (what others have)).

Pro-rogue, (to put) forward or off-asking or question: to put off. Rogation, belongs.

-ROLE, Fr. (fr. Lat. rotula, a little wheel; fr. Rota: wh. see); a roll or list.

Cont-roll, a list of (ac)counts: hence, Control, r. to check accounts by a roll, to overlook; In-controllable, not-to be checked.

En-roll, (to put) in a list or roll. Dis-enroll, (to take) apart or away from a roll; to strike out. Roll, belong.

Prim-ROSE, Lat. (rosa, a rose; fr. Gr. Rh-don: wh. see); the first or early-rose. Rose, Rosy, Rosary, originally a chaplet of roses, belong.

-ROSTRUM, Lat. (fr. Rodo: wh. see); the gnawing instrument; a beak or bill.

Acuti-rostral, sharp beaked. Brevi rostral, short beak. Curvi-rostral, (with) bent beak or jaw. Re-curvi-rostral, (with) jaw or beak bent-back.

Coni roster, cone beak; a bird.

Crassi-roster, thick beak; a pterodactyl. [notched beak.]

Denti-roster, (a bird with) toothed or Fist-roster, cleft or widely opening beak; a bird, as the swallow.

Lamelli-roster, (a bird, as the swan, with) thin plates (at the margin of) the beak.

Longi-roster, long beak; a wader.

Plesi-roster, flattened beak; a wader.

Tenui-roster, slender beak; a percher.

Rostral, Rostrated, belong.

-ROTA, Lat. (poss. fr. ruo, I rush; fr. Gr. Rico: wh. see; akin to rhoomai: see Roborate); a roller, a wheel. Rotundus, round.

Circum-rotate, to wheel-round.

Contra-rotation, a contrary wheeling (round). [surround.]

En-round, (to put) in a round; to Sur-round, (to put) a round or circle upon (a person or thing). Rotation, Rotund, Round, Rowel, belong.

E-RUDITE, Lat. (rudis, rude, uncultivated); (brought) out of rudens or want of polish; learned. Rude, Rudiment, belong.

Cor-RUGATE, Lat. (ruga, a wrinkle; fr. Gr. rhutis, a fold which draws together, a wrinkle; fr. rhizo, rhoomai, I draw, I draw away, save); wrinkled-together or up. Rugose, belong.

Av-er-RUNCATE, Lat. (runco, I draw away weeds; fr. Gr. rhoo: see Rugate); (to clear) out from weeds; to weed.

-RUPTUS,* Lat. broken, rent, burst. Rumpo, (prob. fr. the sound, and akin to rumble, grumble); I read and break.

Ab-rupt, broken (short) off.

Bank-rupt, broken-in bank or money.

Cor-rupt, altogether broken or destroyed; spoilt: altogether burst (from putrefaction): hence, In-corrupt.

Dis-rupt, burst-apart: hence, Disruption. [that which is going on.]

Inter-rupt, to break-in-between (some).

E-ruption, a breaking-out.

Ir-ruption, a breaking-in or upon.

Pro-ruption, a bursting-forth. Rump, Rupture, Rout, belong.

-RY. See previous Index.

-SCIA

Ovi-SAC

Ovi-SAC, Lat. (sacrus, a bag, fr. Gr. sacros, a hair cloth bag; fr. satio, I pack, load, stuff; the bag-clothing) the egg. Sack, Satchel, belong.

-SALIENT: see Sultum. SAL: see long.

-SALUS, Lat., health, safety. Salus, (prob. akin to Gr. Holos, wh. see; and Sansc. sarwa, all); whole, entire, safe.

In-salubrious, not-healthy. Re-salute, (to wish) health (to) again. Un-salvable, (that can) not be saved. Un-salable, Salute, Salubrious, Un-salable, Safe, Save, belong.

-SANCTUS, Lat., sanctified, purified. Sanctio, (fr. sacer, holy: see Sacer); I make holy, ordain.

Sacro-sanct, ordained-to sacred (pur-). Un-sainted, not-(made) holy. Sancto-ty, Saint, belong.

In-SANE, Lat. (sanus, sound, poss. fr. Gr. saos, sos: see Soma); not-sane or sound.

SANGUIS, Lat., blood, particularly red blood. Sanguis, corrupt blood, matter.

Con-sanguineous, together-in blood; related: hence, Consanguinity. En-sanguined, (steeped) in blood. Ex-sanguious, (having) the blood (taken) out; bloodless. Sanguine, Sanious, belong.

-SARCOS, Gr., of flesh. Sarx, (poss. fr. sairo, suro, I draw, drag, strip); that which may be stripped off, (droppings).

Ana-sarca, a (puffing) up-of flesh (by flesh). Poly-sarcy, (a having) much-flesh; corpulency.

Hyper-sarcosis, or-sarcoma, a flesh (tumour growing)-beyond or over (the skin).

Sys-sarcosis, (union of bones) together-by flesh or muscles. Sarcotic, Sarcasm, a flesh biting reproach, belong.

In-SATIABLE, Lat. (satis, enough; poss. fr. Gr. satio; see Sae); (that can) not (have)-enough. Sate, Sature, perh. Assets (Fr. assezi), enough to pay legacies, belong.

-SAUROS, Gr., a lizard.

En-alio-saur, an in-the sea i. e. marine-lizard.

Geo-saur, Earth (the mother of the giants)-lizard.

Hyleo-saur, wood or forest-lizard. Ichthyo-saur, the fish (like)-lizard. Mast-odon-saur, the mamillary-toothed-lizard.

Megalo-saur, the great-lizard. Mosa-saur, the lizard-(of the river) Meuse.

Phyto-saur, plant-lizard. Plesio-saur, near to i. e. almost-a-lizard. Neuro-saur, side-lizard.

Proto-saur, the changing-lizard or ichthyosaur.

Rhacheo-saur, rock-lizard. Steno-saur, the narrow (beaked)-lizard.

Teleo-saur, finished or perfect-lizard. Theco-odonto-saur, a lizard-with teeth (in distinct) sockets or receptacles.

-Saurian, Saur, belong.

A-SBESTOS, Gr. (asbestos, I extinguish; fr. root she); not-to be extinguished or destroyed.

Un-SCANDALOUS, Gr. (scandalon, a stumbling block, offence, scandal; fr. scazo, I limp, halt); not (occasioning)-offence or sin, or the imputation of sin. Scandal, Scanzonic, halting, as a kind of verse, belong.

Counter-SCARPE, Fr. (escarpe, a slope, cut or graded out of the ground; akin to Gr. scaraphos, anything scraped up, stubble; and perh. to Stribo: wh. see); (the ditch wall) opposite-the slow or face (of a fort). Scarf, Scar, belong. Scarify, is akin.

-SCELOS, Gr., the leg. Iso-sceles, equal-legged or sided. Macro-scel, the long-legged (field mouse).

-SCENDO, Lat. termin. of compds. of Scendo (poss. fr. scazo: see Scandalous); I move by halts, as in climbing; I mount or climb. A-scent, to mount-to (a place): Re-ascend, to mount-gain.

-ascend, to climb or come-down: De-scent, to come down-(to a level) with; to behave as to an equal: Re-descend, to descend again.

Trans-scent, to climb or go-across beyond: Transcendental, going beyond the limits of actual experience; going beyond a finite number of terms.

Inter-scent, climbing or going-between algebraic and transcendental quantities).

Un-scanned, not-(examined all over, as from) a climbing or eminence; not-(examined step by step, as in climbing a ladder). Scan, Scansion, belong.

-SCENE, Gr., a tent, curtain, stage, scene.

Epi-scenium, (the part) above-the scene. Aut. Arch. scene. Hypo-scenium, (the part) under-the scene. (the green room) behind the stage.

Post-scenium, (Lat.), (the part) behind the stage.

Pro-scenium, (the frontispiece) before the curtain: anciently the whole stage. Scene, belongs.

-SCHAUM, Germ., foam, scum. Kupfer-schaum, copper-foam or scum. Meer-schaum, (a mineral like) foam of the sea.

En-SCHEDULE, Lat. (schedula, a split tablet; fr. Gr. schedo: wh. see); (to put) into-a tablet or list. Schedule, belongs.

-SCHIZO, Gr. (akin to chao: see Cheno); Scindo, Lat., I split, cleave, cut, divide. Scissum, to cut.

Dia-schism, the division-of a division (in ancient music); the half of a minor semitone.

A-schid, (a quadrupungulate divided (hoof): a solidungulate. Dis-schid, (one with hoof) divided into two; a bisulcate.

Poly-schid, (one with hoof) divided into many (parts); a multungulate. Schism, Schist, belong. The rest are Latin.

Ab-scind, to cut-off; Abscissa, a segment cut off a straight line.

Ex-scind, to cut-out of or from. Pre-scind, to cut-before; i. e., from the front.

Re-scind, (to bring) back-(anything to its original state by) cutting (off what has been pro-duced or done); to abrogate.

Dis-cide, to cut-apart or in pieces. Circum-scissile, divided-round (as the sides of the ovary, in some fruit).

Scissile, Chisel, perh. Scantle, belong.

-SCIA, * Gr., shade, shadow.

* See the previous Index.

Amphi-scian, (one whose shadow -falls) both ways; i. e., north and south (at different periods of the year); one living in the torrid zone.

Anti-scian, (one whose shadow -falls) in opposite (direction to another's). A-scian, (one) without-shadow (or who hides it by standing on it): one living in the torrid zone.

Hetero-scian, (one whose shadow -always falls in) other or opposite (direction to another's).

Pert-scian, (one living near the poles, whose shadow - (moves) round (him)).

-SCIO, * Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. isco, I make like, I image, fancy, conjecture; fr. isos, equal); I know by reflection or conjecture, I know how.

Scisco, I learn or gain by calling for.

Con-scient, (participating) with-in knowledge; privity to: Con-science, knowledge-with-or of (one-self); privity to the character of our own acts; In-conscienceable, not-(conformable to) conscience.

Ne-scient, not-knowing; ignorant. Omni-scient, all-knowing.

Pre-scient, fore-knowledge, or added Ad-scitious, learned, gained, or supplied to (a person or thing); supplementary. Science, Sciolist, belong.

-SCO, Lat., verbal termin., expresses the beginning of an act, and is thus formed, (cale-o, I am warm; cale-sco, I grow warm).

Ef-floresce, to begin-(to put) out -flowers; Efflorescence, a beginning to bud. [growing quiet. ning to bud. (to be)-quiet; Quies-cent, beginning (to be)-quiet; Re-juvencence, a beginning to grow young-again.

-SCOPEO, * (Gr. fr. scopos, a watcher; fr. scopalm, I look about, spy; consider, shading or covering the eyes with the hand; perh. fr. scopas: see Squamate); I look at or after, see, view, observe, explore.

Anemo-scope, a wind-observing (instrument); a weather gauge. Astro-scope, a star viewing (instrument).

Baro-scope, (an instrument for) seeing the weight (of the atmosphere); a barometer.

Cal-di-oscope, (an instrument for) seeing-beautiful-figures. Electro-scope, (an instrument for) observing-electrical (excitement).

Engy-scope, a near-viewer; a microscope.

Ethro-scope, (an instrument for) observing-(degrees of cold under) a clear sky.

Helio-scope, a sun-viewing (instrument for) observing (of the heavens at a particular)-hour, (as one's birth).

Hydro-scope, (a time measurer, by) observing (the flow of)-water.

Hygro-scope, (an instrument to) observe-the moisture (of the air).

Mano-scope, (an instrument for) observing-the rarity (and elastic force of the air).

Mega-scope, (an instrument for) viewing-great (objects).

Micro-scope, (an instrument to) view-little (objects).

Polemio-scope, (an instrument for) viewing (obliquely or over the top of a wall, so named as being thought useful for purposes of)-viewing glass.

Poly-scope, a many-viewer or multiplying glass.

Stetho-scope, (an instrument for) exploring (the health of) the chest.
Telino-scope, (an instrument which) stretches (as well as diminishes the size of objects) viewed (through it); the prism telescope.

Tele-scope, (an instrument for) seeing distant (objects).

Thermo-scope, (an instrument to) observe the heat (of the air).

Urano-scope, heaven-looker or stargazer: a fish with upward directed features.

Epi-scopacy, (church government by) over-seeing; i. e., bishops.

Epi-scopy, an over-looking; survey.

Hydro-scopy, (art of) exploring for water (concealed under ground, by magic). Metallo-scopy, exploring for metals.

Met-o-po-scopy, (divination by) observing (the part) between the eyes; i. e., the forehead.

Peri-scope, looking around.

Chor-epi-scopal, (belonging to) a local over-see; i. e., bishop.

Bi-shop, (epi-scopus), an over-see; a superintendent: Arch-bishop, a chief bishop. Sceptic, belongs.

-SCRIBO, * Lat. (akin to sculpo: see Sculp; perh. to grapho: wh. see: and, with all its relations, prob. from the sound); I write, grave, draw, delineate. Scriptus, written.

(A(d) scribe, (deliberately to give) to -as by a writing; to attribute.

Circum-scribe, to write or draw (a line)-around (something); hence, to confine within such line: Circumscription, (a line)-drawn around: In-circumscribable, not to be circumscribed.

De-scribe, to write-down (in plain terms); to delineate. Non-descript, not-described or to be described.

Ex-scribe, to write-out; to copy.

In-scribe, to write-upon (something, as a tablet): Inscription, a writing fixed on a tablet.

Pre-scribe, to write (directions)-beforehand: hence, Prescription, and Im-prescribable.

Pro-scribe, to write (one's name on a tablet, and put it)-forward (publicly, with a reward for apprehension); hence, Proscription.

Re-scribe, to write-back (an answer); to write-again: Rescript, (an answer) written-back.

Sub-scribe, to write (one's name) -under (a document, often as a promise to pay money): hence, Subscription.

Super-scribe, to write (something) -over (a document): hence, Superscription.

Trans-scribe, (to carry, as it were), a writing-across (from one paper to another); to copy on another paper: Transcript, a copy.

Con-script, written (in a book or roll) -with (others): registered, selected.

Manu-script, (a thing) written-by the hand; i. e., not printed.

Post-script, (a thing) written-after (a mis-sive or letter).

Un-scriptural, not-(according to holy) writ. Scribe, Scribble, Scripture, Scrivener, belong. Scrape, is akin.

In-SCRUTABLE, Lat. (scrutor), I search out, as from old shreds: fr. scruta, old garments; fr. Gr. grute, frippery; poss. fr. gru, a grunt, anything small, an atom); not-to be searched out. Scrutiny, belongs.

In-SCULP, Lat. (sculpo), I carve; akin to scribo: wh. see; also to Gr. zaino, zoo: see Acute: and from the sound); to carve-in; engrave. Sculptor, Sculpture, belong. Scalp, is akin.

-SEA. See previous Index.

-SECRIO, Lat. termin. of compds. of Sacro (fr. sacer, sacred; perh. fr. Gr. hagios, devoted, sacred, holy; fr. hagos, a matter of religious awe. curse: see Agion); I make holy or sacred, dedicate.

Con-sacrate, (to place) with (other) sacred (things); to dedicate.

De-sacrate, (to take) from-holy (things) or purposes. [(protection).]

Ex-(s)acrate, (to put) out of-sacred

Ob-sacration, (a begging) on account of-(all that is) sacred. Sacred, Sacrament, Sacrist, Sacerdotal, belong.

-SICUTUS, * Lat., cut. Sco, (poss. fr. Gr. heco, hico: see Signa); I cut.

Bi-sect, to cut-in two (equal parts).

Di-sect, to cut-into different parts.

In-sect, (an animal) cut-in (below the thorax). [the middle of.]

Inter-sect, to cut or go-between or in Ex-section, a cutting-out.

Tri-section, a cutting-into three.

Veni-section, a vein-cutting or opening. Sect, Section, Segment, Secant, belong.

Super-SECULAR, Lat. (seculum, an age of time, a sequence of years; fr. secur: see Secutus); above-secular (things); i. e., things of time, not of eternity. Secular, Secler, belong.

-SECUS, Lat. (fr. secundum, following near or according to; i. e., sequendum; fr. secur: see Secutus); by, near.

Ex-trin-sic, near or belonging to-outward (things); outward.

Foren-sic, near or belonging to-the forum or justice courts. [inward.]

In-trin-sic, near to-inward (things);

-SECUTUS, Lat., having followed. Sequor,* (fr. Gr. hekomai, I follow; fr. hepo, I am about or with); I follow.

Ex-(s)ecute, to follow-out (a plan, to the end), to perform, to end, to kill: In-execution, want or neglect of-execution.

Per-secute, to follow-through (all circumstances, with enmity, &c.); hence, Pur-sue, to follow-through-out.

Pro-secute, to follow (up a design by taking the lead in it or going)-before; to follow-(one) before (a judge).

En-sue, (Fr.), to follow-upon or after.

Con-servative, following-with (immediately): Con-sectary, following -with; consequent.

As-sécution, a following-(up) to; a reaching and obtaining.

Non-suit, a not (being allowed)-to follow (up a cause).

Ex-(s)equia, (the funeral rites or procession) followed (for the last time)-out (of the house).

Ob-sequies, (the funeral procession) followed-(close) upon.

Con-sequent, following (immediately) -with, hence, necessary, important: Consequence, that which follows (in connection)-with; In-consequent, not following with; Super-consequence, a consequence beyond (the immediate consequence).

Ob-sequent, following or waiting upon; obedient: hence, Obsequious. Sequent, Sequacious, Sue, Sectator, belong.

Para-SELENE, Gr. (prob. fr. hele: * See the previous Index.

see Il-lor); a moon moon); the side of or near-the moon. Selenia, belongs.

-SEMINO, Lat., I sow. Semina, (fr. se-ri: see Sitio); seed.

Dis-seminate, (to throw) apart or scatter-seeds or first principles.

Pro-seminate, (to throw) seed-before (one); to sow-before (sowing).

Seminal, Seminary, belong.

-SENTIO, * Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. aisthanomai, I perceive; aisthesis, perception, sense: see Esthesis); I discern, perceive, think. Sensu, sense, perception, reason, opinion, feeling.

As-sent, (to give one's favourable) opinion-to (a person or thing); to add-(one's) opinion-to (another person); to agree: Dis-assent, to be apart or far from-agreeing (to something).

Consent, to think-with (another, on a subject); to agree: Dis-consent, to be apart, &c.

Dis-sent, to think-differently.

Re-sent, to feel-in return for (injury, &c.); sometimes, to return -feeling (by kindly action).

Non-sense, (anything) not-reasonable. In-sensate, (having) no-feeling or reason.

Pre-sensation, previous-thought or feeling. Sense, Sentiment, Sentence, Sentinel, Scent, belong.

-SEPIO, Lat. (fr. sepes, a hedge or fence); I enclose. Siptum, an enclosure. Sulcrum, an enclosure or tomb.

Multi-sept, (having) many-enclosures. Transept, an enclosure-(going) across (a church).

Dis-sepiment, (a wall) dividing (a pericarp into)-enclosures or cells.

Un-sepulchred, not-(placed within) an enclosure or tomb. Sepulchre, belongs.

Anti-SEPTIC, Gr. (septicus, putrefying; fr. sepo, I make putrid; fr. root, sap); against-putridity.

Septic, belongs.

-SERTUS, * Lat., joined, united. Seruo, (fr. Gr. airo, I tie, join, string together; string together words, say, speak; airo, I speak; fr. ero: see Res); I join, string together, draw or push out in a string or connected series.

As-sert, to join (a string of words or arguments)-to: Re-assert, to assert -again.

De-sert, (to pull) a junction-apart; to separate, quit, leave.

Ex-(s)ert, to push-out or forth (one's strength); to draw-(oneself) out.

In-sert, to join or knit-between.

Con-sertion, a joining-together; a coupling. [between.]

Inter-sertion, a joining or knitting-together.

Dis-sertation, (illustration) of different parts or views (of a subject) -by stringing (words together); discussion upon. Series, Sermon, belong.

-SERVO, * Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. eruo, aruo, ruo, I draw out of danger, guard, protect: see Il-lusus); I guard, keep, or mind. Servus, one who minds property, a servant, a slave. Servio,* I am a slave, I obey or serve.

Con-serve, to keep-together; to preserve: hence, Conservatory.

De-serve, (to gain or merit) from-serve: hence, Desert and In-de-serve.

In-SINUATE

-SETA

Dis-serve, (to do what is) apart or far from-service; to do ill-service.
Ob-serve, to keep (the eye)-upon; to watch a master. In-observant, not-watching.

Pre-serve, to keep (from harm by putting oneself) before; to keep.
Re-serve, to keep-back: hence, Reservoir, where water is kept back or stored.

Sub-serve, to serve-under (so as to support or assist).
In-servient, (throwing) service-upon or to; conducting to.

Super-servicable, serving or assisting above (what is wanted). Serve, Serf, belong.

-SETA, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. chaite, flowing mane or hair; akin to cheo: see Chyma); a hair, or bristle.
Bi-setous, (having) two-bristles, or anything resembling.

Equi-setous, (of or like) horse-hair or bristle: Equisetum, obtained from the plant Equisetum or horse-tail. Setaceous, Seton, belong.

-SEVERUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. sebastos, revered, venerable; fr. sebo, I reverence, I feel the blood rushing reverence, I feel the blood rushing reverence; fr. in my veins through reverence; perh. Sansc. sev, to reverence: perh. akin to seuo, thuo: see Fumus); venerable, serious, exact, firm, harsh.

As-sever, to add or af (firm)-seriously.
Per-severe, (to be) firm-thoroughly; to continue with firmness. Severe, belongs.

Bi-SEXILE, Lat. (sextilis, the sixth; fr. sex, six: Gr. hex: Sansc. sash); (leap year, in which, to add a day, the Romans reckoned the 24 Feb., or as they called it), the sixth day before the beginning of March)-twice. Six, Sextant, Sice, Senary, belong.

-SHAN, Chan, Chinese, island.
Shang-tcheou-shan, supreme island (with) a city of first order.
Tang-shan, flood-island.

-SHIP. See the previous Index.

Quang-Si, Chinese, west-government.

-SICCATUS, Lat., dried up. Siccus, (akin to Gr. exio, I burn; Caustus, burned: wh see; and all fr. Sansc. gush, to dry up); I dry.

De-siccate, to dry (the moisture) from: to dry-down (to a smaller mass).

Ex-siccate, to dry (the moisture)-out. Siccity, belongs.

SIDE, * Lat. termin. of compds. of Sedeo, (fr. Gr. hedos, a seat; fr. hizo, hezo: see Hedra); I sit or atay. Sessum, to sit. Sido, I settle or perch, I sink or subside.

Pre-side, to sit-before (others, as chief): Pre-sidal (belonging to a those), sitting-before (others, as protection in a place); hence, belonging to a garrison.

Re-side, to perch (and remain)-back or behind (others moving on); to settle down or dwell.

Sub-side, to settle-under; i. e., at the bottom; to fall to rest.

In-sidious, sitting or lying-in (wait, or) upon (the watch); waiting to leap upon.

As-siduous, sitting-at or near, (as a nurse); continually helping: hence, Dis-assiduous, apart or far from-assiduous.

Dis-sident, sitting-apart; disagreeing: sitting-at or near (see Idem).

Con-sider, to set-together (for comparison); (to observe how things) settle-together; to settle or determine by reason: In-considerate, not-reasoning or comparing things, rash; In-considerable, not (worth) consideration.

De-siderate, to sit-away from (something, that one can see); to look upon something at a distance and want it: hence, by contraction, Desire.

Super-sede, to sit-before (one that was formerly first): to push before another and make him useless.

As-sess, (to apply a tax) to-in a sitting or session.

Ob-sess, to sit (down)-against or before: to besiege.

Un-sedate, not-settled or steady. Dis-seat, (to throw) apart or away (from one's) sitting or seat.

-(from one's) sitting or seat. Sit, I-seat, (to put) again-on a seat. Sit, Seat, Sedentary, Sediment, Session, See, of a bishop, Sedate, Sodality, belong.

-SIGNO, * (perh. fr. Gr. ichnos, a track, footprint, trace, mark; fr. hieono-mal, hico, I come, arrive at); I mark or note. Sigillum, a little mark, a seal.

As-sign, to mark (down)-to or for (a person); to allot.

Con-sign, (to send) with (a person) by a marking or writing; (for a time, to make) over-by a writing. Counter-sign, a mark or note-on the other (hand or side).

De-sign, to mark-down; to draw out (a plan).

En-sign, (anything having) a mark on (it); a badge; one carrying an -on (it); [writing] ensign.

Re-sign, (to give) back-by a mark or Sub-sign, (to set one's) mark-under. Ob-signate, (to set one's) mark-on.

-against (to confirm as a witness). Counter-seal, to seal-on the other (hand or side). Sign, Sigil, Seal, belong.

Petro-SILEX, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. chalik, small stone, rubble; poss. fr. clao: see Gladius); rock-flint; hornstone. Siliceous, belongs. Calx, Calculate, Calceine, belong to chalik.

-SILIO, for Salio: see Saltus.

-SIMILIS, Lat. (fr. simul, together, alike; fr. Sansc. sa, sam, together: akin to Gr. homos: see Omalous; like, also to hama: see Thumny); like, similar. Simulo, I make myself like, I feign.

As-similate, (to make) like-to (qualities) (something). Con-similary, (having) like [like, ties)-with (something); un-

Dis-similar, apart from-likeness; and Dis-simulate, (to throw) apart or away (one's real) likeness; to assume a false appearance: hence, Dissimulation, and through the Fr., Dissimble.

In-simulate, to feign (a charge)-upon or against (one). [collect.

As-seemble, (to join, like) to-like; to Re-seemble, (Fr.), (to reflect) back the-likeness (of some one); to look like. Similar, Semble, Simulate, Simultaneous, Simulachre, belong.

De-SINENT, Lat. (sino, I allow or permit; perh. fr. si-non, if-not; you may do it); (taking) the person mission-from or away; not allowing to go on, ceasing: Desistive, is the same: In-desinent, not-ceasing, incessant.

In-SINUATE, Lat. (sinuo, I wind, turn, bend; fr. sinus, the bosom, sinuous Index.

any hollow, a bay); to wind on creep-into. Sine, Sinuous, belong. Apo-SIOPESES, Gr. (siopao, I am silent or mute; fr. siopoe, silence); (a passing) from or over-silently; the suppression of a word.

Dis-SIPATE, Lat. (sipo, I stuff or thrust together; poss. akin to Gr. sipue, a vessel, a meal jar or sack; a prob. akin to Gr. sibba, cubba, a pocket or coffer; and cumbo: see Cumbo); (to scatter) apart from (previous) union or stuffing together.

Endo-SIPHONITE, Gr. (fr. siphon, a tube, straw, anything empty or hollow; fr. siphos, empty; akin to somphos, spongy, thick, as a voice, and poss. all from the sound); (a fossil convolute shelled cephalopod with) a pipe-inside (the turns). Siphon, belongs.

-SIPHO, Lat. termin. of compds. of Sapio (akin to Gr. opos, vegetable juice; to Sophos, wh. see; and Eng. sap); I have a savour of, I taste, distinguish, know. Sapicas, knowing, wise.

In-sipid, (having) no-taste. Re-sipiscence, (a looking) back (on a fault)-with knowledge; repentance.

In-sapient, not-wise or knowing. Sap, In-sapory, (having) no-savour. Sap, Sapid, Sapient, Savour, belong.

Opium, is akin.

-SISTO, * Lat. (fr. Gr. histemi: see Siema); I place or am placed; I stand or stop.

As-sist, to stand-to or by (one); the Con-sist, to stand-together (as the several parts which make a whole); to be composed of: Con-sistory, (a place where many) stand or meet together: In-consistent, not-standing or agreeing with (something else).

De-sist, to stop-from. Ex-(sist, to stand-out (by itself, as a plant); to stand out or separate from other lives: Co-exist, In-coexist, with (another); hence, Post-existence, subsequent existence; and Pre-existence, previous-existence.

In-sist, to stand-upon (one's doing a thing); to refuse to go on till something is done.

Per-sist, to stand-through (all opposition); to be determined. Re-sist, to stand-against (force): Ir-resistible, not-to be stood against; Non-resistance.

Sub-sist, to place (oneself)-under (so as to support); to support life, &c., (mostly applied to living things); Con-subsist, to subsist-with, or in union with.

Ob-stretical, standing (with artificial aid) against (the difficulties of parturition); standing-over or near.

Para-SITE, Gr. (sitos, wheat, corn food); (one who flatters in order to get asked) by one's side-at food or feeding time: Sup-parasitatory, underhand or servile-flattery.

In-SITIENCY, Lat. (sitis, thirst); (a having) no-thirst.

In-SITION, Lat. (satum, to sow; fr. sero, I sow; poss. fr. Gr. era: see Terra); a planting or sowing-in: Sative, belongs.

-SIVE, -SM; -SNE: see * Dermo-SKELETON, Gr. (scello, dry, parch); the dried, parched, attenuated skin, or integument (exit) invertebrates). Skeleton, Sclerotic, belong. Scirrhous, is akin.

SOCIUS, Lat. (fr. sequor: see Sequitur); following or going with; a follower, companion, or one united to another.

As-sociate, (to make or be) companion-to (oneself or others); Dis-associate, to part-companionship.

Con-sociate, to unite-together or with (another).

Dis-sociate, to part-union.

In-sociable, not-companionable; not to be united. Sociable, Social, belong.

-SOL, Lat. (another form of hele: see Helios); the sun.

Para-sol, (G. L.), (an instrument placed at the side (on which) the sun (is to guard one from it); (a guard) from the sun.

Turn-sol, (E. L.), (a plant whose flowers) turn to the sun.

Luni-solar, (combining periods of both sun and moon.

In-solation, (a putting) into the sunshine; a scorching. Solar, belong.

Entre-SOL, Fr. (sole, a sill, platform, floor; fr. Lat. solum, anything that sustains; soil, ground; akin to Gr. hulia, the sole of a shoe; prob. fr. hule, wood: see Ulene); (an apartment) between the floors. Sole, Soil, belong. Sylvan, is akin.

In-SOLENT, Lat. (soleo, I am wont); (having) no-usual or wonted (manners).

-SOLIDUS, Lat. (fr. Solus: wh. see); of one material alone, all alike, solid. [-into a solid]

Con-solidate, (to squeeze) together In-solidity, (a being) not-solid.

Un-soldered, not-(made) solid or into a whole. Solid, Solder, Soldier, because his pay was a solidus, originally a solid gold coin, afterwards a shilling, belong.

-SOLUS, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. Illos: see Sulus); all together, in a lump or whole, apart from others, alone, lonely.

Con-sol-, (to be) with-the lonely (in affliction); (to unite) a mourner with-solace: Dis-consolate, (having) parted from-consolation; In-consolable, not-to be consoled; Re-consolate, to console-again.

De-solate, (left) lonely (by having all things taken) from or away. Sole, Solitary, belong.

-SOLVO, * Lat. (perh. se-Luo, I wash apart: wh. see); I dissolve, loosen, take apart. Solutus, unbound, free. Ab-solve, to loosen-from (the effects of); to do away with; As-soil, to solve (from guilt); to pardon: Ab-solute, loosened-from (all restraint).

Dis-solve, to loosen-apart or into its parts; to separate by melting: In-dissoluble, not-to be dissolved.

Re-solve, to loosen-back (to original separate state); to discern; to separate for the purpose of seeing clearly, and hence of judging and acting; to determine or settle: or, possibly, to loosen (and get rid of all considerations but the determination which remains)-back or behind: Resolute, determined; Ir-resolute, not determined: Pre-resolve, to resolve-beforehand; Re-resolve, to resolve-again.

In-soluble, not-to be loosened or melted.

Non-solvency, in(ability)-to loose (oneself from debt).

Bas-i-solute, loosened or drawn out-at the base (as a leaf).

Dis-solute, loosened-d apart (from moral restraint). Solve, Solution, belong.

-SOMA, Gr. (poss. fr. saos, sos, safe, sound, whole, entire); the body as a whole or mass, opposed to the soul.

A-campto-some, (a shelled cirriped with) un-bending-body. [-body]

Calo-some, (a beetle with) beautiful Disco-some, (a sea nettle with) quoit (shaped)-body.

Lepto-some, slight-body; a fish. Mela-some, a black-bodied (beetle).

Phyllo-some, (a crustacean with) leaf (like)-body. [-body]

Platy-some, (a beetle with flat and) -variegated as a starling.

Pyro-some, a fiery-bodied (ascidian).

-SOME, -SON. See *

-SONO, * Lat. (perh. fr. the sound, and akin to Tonus: wh. see); I sound or ring.

Ab-sonant, sounding-away from; i. e., remotely or different (to another sound).

As-sonant, sounding-to; i. e., near to or in union with.

Con-sonant, sounding-with; i. e., in union with; agreeing: s. (a letter that must be) sounded- with (a vowel: hence, In-consonant).

Dis-sonant, sounding-apart (from another); discordant.

Re-sound, (to reflect or throw) sound -back; to echo.

Uni-son, one (and the same) sound: concord. Sound, Sonorous, belong.

-SOPHOS, Gr. (akin to saphes, distinct, clear; and Lat. sapio: see Sipio); clever, skillful, shrewd, wise. Sophia, cleverness, prudence, knowledge.

Anthropo-sophy, (anatomical) knowledge-of man.

Pan-sophy, knowledge-on all (subjects). Philosophy, love-of-knowledge.

Deipno-sophist, (a man who philosophizes or speaks) wisdom-at supper.

Gymno-sophist, a naked-wise (man) or philosopher. Hist.

Theo-sophist, (a man) wise-from God; i. e., by inspiration. Hist.

Un-sophisticated, not-(perverted by) sophistry or (false) wisdom: see Sophist- in Dict. Sophist, Sophistic, belong.

Con-SOPITE, Lat. (sopio, I lull asleep; fr. sopor, sleep; akin to Gr. hupnos: see Hypnos); and both fr. Sausc, svap, to sleep; prob. also akin to sopinus: see Sopine); (to join) sleep-with or to (a person); (to lull) with or to-sleep. Sopor, Soporance, belong.

-SORBEO, Lat., I sup or suck in. Sorptum, to suck.

Ab-sorb, to suck in-from (something): hence, Ab-sorption: Re-absorb, to absorb-again.

Resorb, to suck-back or again.

-SORTIS, Lat., of a lot. Sors, (akin to Gr. Horos: wh. see); an allotment, limit, portion.

As-sort, (to put) to-its proper portion or place; to arrange.

Con-sort, (to unite) the lot (of one) -with (another's), (to join) together -in one lot.

Re-sort, (to come) back-to one's allotted (land or property); to revisit.

Con-cert, perh. (an harmonious) al-

* See the previous Ir dex.

luting together (of sounds); a musical entertainment: but see Crisa. Sor, belong.

De-SPAIR, Fr. (espoir, hope; fr. Lat. spero, I hope or look out for); (to be) away from-hope; (to be cast) down from-hope. Sperable, prob. Spere, belong.

-SPAO, * Gr., I draw, wrench, strain Synsma, a drawing, pulling, contraction.

Neuro-spast, (a puppet which move by) drawing-strings or nerves.

Poly-spast, a many-drawers; i. e., a collection-of-pulleys. [-leys]

Tetra-spast, (a collection of) four-pul-

Tri-spast, (a collection of) three-pul-leys. Anti-spastic, (applied to a poetic foot which) draws-in opposite ways; i. e., having a short, long, long and short syllable in succession.

Epi-spasm, drawing-upon (the skin, as a blister).

Apo spasm, the pulling (a ligament so as to rend a part)-off.

Anti-spasmodic, (a remedy) against -spasms or contractions. Spasm, belong.

A-SPARAGUS, Gr. (sparagos; prob. fr. spharago, I swell and burst with a noise; fr. spharagos, a bursting; fr. Sanc, spuri, to explode); the much-swelling (plant).

-SPATIUM, Lat. (fr. Gr. spadion, stadion, that which stands fast, a standard, a measure, a race course of a certain length, a space of ground; fr. histemi: see Sima); a space, distance.

Ex-(s)patiate, (to drive) out-(to a great) space; to treat of at length.

Inter-space, the space or distance-between. Space, Spatiate, belong.

-SPECTUM, Lat., to seek or look. Spectula, a little show, a prospect.

Spectrum, what one sees, an idea, an apparition Species, appearance, form, kind. Specio, Specto, (akin to Gr. aceptomai: see Scopero); I look about, spy, see, behold.

A(d)-spect, (appearance when one) looks-at or to (a thing); also (something) looked-at.

Circum-spect, looking-around (with caution): In-circumspection.

Ex-(s)pect, to look-out (for); to await: In-expected.

In-spect, to look-within or upon; to watch; Super-inspect, to over-watch.

Pro-spect, the look or appearance (of things)-in front or forward: Pro-spectus, (a scheme which gives us) a view (of a subject) beforehand.

Re-spect, to look-back (upon with regard, in return for something done): Dis-respect, to part from -respect (with regard to some one).

Ir-respective, not-looking back or taking into consideration.

Retro-spect, a look-back (on the past).

Su(b)-spect, to look-underhandedly or slyly (so as to see more than one thinks); to have doubts from secret observation.

Au(avis)-spice, a looking or observation-of birds (as omens): In-auspicious, not-(well) omened.

Con-spicuous, (drawing all) looks-within or to (it); seen-(by all) together: In-conspicuous.

Per-spicuous, (easily) seen-through; clear: Pers-pective, (the art of delineating things as they appear on a glass held up to them and) looked-through: Im-per-spiciuity, a having) no-clearness: Semi-perspicuous, half-clear. [-through.]

-SPONDEO

Go-SPEL

 Tran-spicious, (that may be) seen
 Intro-spicious, a looking-within.
 De-special, (to be) looked-down (upon with contempt): hence,
 De-spise.
 Un-spectral, not (like) an apparition.
 Fronti-spice, the front-look, view, or page. Spectacle, Speculate,
 Species, Especial, belong.
 Go-SPEL, Sax. (spellan), to declare;
 spell, a discourse; good-discourse, tidings, or message; ev-angel:
 Dis-gospel, (to go) apart from
 -gospel (doctrines). Spell, belongs.
 -SPEND: see Spondeo and Pendeo.
 A-SPERITY, Lat. (a-sper, rough, stony; unit for sowing; perh. fr.
 Gr. speiro: see Sperma); want or absence of sowing; roughness: hence,
 Ex-Asperate: wh. see. Asperate, to make rough, belongs.
 -SPERMA, Gr. (fr. speiro, I sow, I sow or scatter seed); that which is sown; seed, germ.
 Antho-sperm, flower-seed; a plant.
 Endo-sperm, (that which is) within the seed; albumen.
 Epi-sperm, (that which goes) over the seed; the skin or integument.
 Peri-sperm, (that which is) around the seed; i.e., the skin: or (that which) the seed is around; i.e., the albumen: so used by different authors.
 Poly-sperm, (a fruit with) many-seeds.
 Troph-sperm, the seed-nourisher or placenta (in plants).
 Anglo-spermous, (with) the seed-in a vessel or pericarp.
 Athero-spermous, (with) cornbearded seeds. [visible] seeds.
 Gymno-spermous, (with) naked (or Gemino-spermous, moon or crescent
 -seeded or fruited. Sperm, Spore, belong.
 -SPERSUS,* Lat. termin. of compds. of Sparsus, scattered. Spargo, (fr.
 Gr. speiro: see Sperma); I scatter, sprinkle, sow, strew.
 A (d)-sperse, to scatter (blame, &c.).
 -to or upon: hence, Aspersio.
 Di-sperse, to scatter in different parts:
 In-dispersed, not-scattered.
 Inter-spere, to scatter-between or among.
 Re-spere, to sprinkle-by backward
 (jerks of the hand). (thing).
 In-spersion, a sprinkling-upon (something).
 A (d)-spergil, (a brush) to sprinkle (holy water)-to or upon. Sparse, belongs.
 -SPHAIRA, Gr. (perh. akin to speira:
 see Spira); a sphere, globe, ball.
 Sphere.*
 Atmo-sphere, the sphere-of breath or air (encircling the globe). globe.
 En-sphere, In-sphere, (to place) in-a globe.
 Hemi-sphere, (L. G.), (a map) of the globe-(drawn on) a flat or plane.
 Sphere, Spherical, belong.
 A-SPHALT, Gr. (sphallo, I fall, totter, fail; akin to Lat. Fallo: wh.
 see); the un-tottering; i.e., strong, see); a con-tottering (mass); a cement giving firmness to brick work.
 Apo-SPHINKY, Gr. (sphiggo, I bind tight, I grasp or catch, as by riddles): (a loosening or taking) off dies): a loosening or taking off
 -a bandage. Spincter, a binding muscle, Sphinx, belong.
 -SPHYXIS, Gr. (fr. sphuzo, I throb, beat violently; akin to Spao: wh.
 see); inflammation

tion; the beating of the heart, pulsation.

A-sphyxy, (a gradual death by) privation of pulsation.

Caco-sphyxy, a bad or irregular pulsa-
 tion.
 Dia-sphyxy, a pulsation-throughout (the body; i.e., through the arteries).

-SPINA, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. spizo: see Spissus); that which pushes forth or extends; a thorn or prickle.

Bi-spinose, (armed with) two prickles.
 Crassi-spine, the thick (set) thorny (woodcock). Conch. (belongs).

-SPIRA, Lat. (fr. Gr. speira, anything wound or rolled as a rope; fr. eiro:
 see Sertus); a turn, curl, twist, twist rising to a peak.

Multi-spiral, (having) many-turns.
 Acro-spire, (G.), the twisted (fibre stem growing from)-the top (of the seed).

Mega-spire, (G.), (a shell with) great -twists. Spire, Spiral, belong.

-SPIRO,* Lat. (fr. Gr. spairo, I pant, gasp, sigh, draw breath; fr. Spao:
 wh. see); I breathe, pant, blow,
 whisper.

A(d)-spire, to pant or sigh-to or after.
 Con-spire, to whisper-together (for bad purposes); to blow-(up a flame) together; to assist in something secret and wrong.

Ex-spire, to breathe-out; (to give) out (the last) breath or die.

In-spire, to breathe-in (sometimes,
 Divine powers); hence, Re-inspire.

Per-spire, (to pass) breath or vapour through (the pores); to sweat.

Re-spire, (to take) breath-again or (to pause to take) breath-again; to pause: also, to breathe-back.

Sus-pire, to breathe-from under or the bottom (of the chest); to pant after or desire.

Tran-spire, (to pass silently) across or through-(like) breath or sweat;
 to sweat out or escape, as vapour.

Di-spirit, to part from-spirit, animation, or breath; to dishearten.

A(d)-spirate, to add-a breathing (to a letter or word). Spirit, Spiracle, belong.

-SPISSUS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. spidnos, close, compact, fixed, or pegged together; fr. spizo, I draw to a peg or point, I stretch, as to a point);
 solid, thick, clammy.

Con-spissation, (a contracting) together-(into a) solid; denseness.

In-spissate, imbued with-thickness; thickened-within. Spiss, poss. Spit, for roasting, belong.

De-SPITE, Lat. (perh. sputo: see Spuma); a spitting-down (upon); a contempt, malignity. Spite, a spitting, as by an enraged reptile,
 belongs.

-SPLENDEO, Lat., I shine, I cast rays.

Re-splendent, casting rays-back.
 Tran-splendent, (going) beyond (others)-in shining; transcendently bright. Splendid, belongs.

-SPOLIUM, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. spolio, sculo, sulao: see Sylum); plunder, spoil, pillage.

De-spoil, (to take) away-(one's) spoil or property; (to take) away-as spoil; to deplete.

Ex-spoliation, (a tricking one) out of the spoil; (a taking) from-as spoil;
 a robbing. Spoil, belongs.

-SPONDEO,* Lat. (fr. Gr. spondeo, a libation imprecating the pouring out of one's blood on breach of oath, a solemn covenant; fr. spondeo,

 I pour or offer a drink offering); I solemnly and voluntarily pledge myself, I promise or undertake to do. Sponte, voluntarily.

De-spond, (to be) poured-down or out (like water, from breach of oath);
 i.e., to be cast down from fear of divine vengeance; (to be) down (cast from having broken a solemn promise; (to be) from or off-a solemn promise (and to fear heaven's wrath).

Re-spond, (to give) a pledge-for the return (of something); to return or return (an expected or) promised (answer); to answer: Correspond, to answer-together; to fit, resemble, or be useful together;
 also to return alternate answers:
 Ir-responsible, not-responsible.

De-sponsation, (a giving) from or away-(under) promise; betrothal.

Dis-esponse, (Fr. e only for euphony);
 to part-the promise (of marriage);
 to prevent marriage: also, to part from-(the marriage) promise, to unmarried. Spontaneous, Sponsor, Spouse, Esponse, belong. Spondee, is akin. Di-spend, Ex-(s)pend:
 see under Pendeo, to wh. they belong.

A-SPORADIC, Gr. (fr. speiro: see Sperma); not - scattered; i.e., dense, affecting many. Sporades, Spore, belong.

-SPUMA, Lat., spume, foam. Spao, Sputo, (fr. Gr. ptuo: see Ptyo); I spit or spew.

De-spumate, (to skim the) spume in-spumation, a foaming-within.

De-sputation, a spitting-down. Spame,
 Sputum, Spit, Spew, belong.

De-SQUAMATE, Lat. (squama, a fish scale; perh. akin to Gr. sepas, a covering, shelter); (to peel) down in scales. Squamous, belongs.

DI-STACHYON, Gr. (stachus, an ear of corn; poss. from its erect position; fr. Stao: wh. see); (a plant like) a double-ear of corn. Spike,
 Spigot, are derived through Lat.

Re-STAGNATE, Lat. (stagnum, stiffened, staccato, or still water such as is formed by drippings in caverns; fr. Gr. stazo: see Stazy); (to become) still or stagnant-(from having its stream dammed) back or up. Stagnant, belongs.

-STALTIC: see Stello.

-STAO, Hi-stem, Gr. (fr. Sanse, sta, to stand); I make to stand, set, place, place myself, be in a state, stand still. Stasis,* a placing or standing.
 Statics, causing to stand, weighing while at rest. Stemon, anything standing, a stamen. STANS,* Lat., standing. Status, set, appointed, standing. Stablis, stable, fixed. Stabulum, a standing place or stable.

Sto, I stand or stay.

Apo-stasy, a standing-off (from one's professions); a desertion.

Re-stasy, a placing-(one) out of (or beside oneself, for joy).

Dia-stasy, a placing-apart (or separation of bones): Dia stase, a separation of substance separated from matter.

Hypo-stasy, a standing (distinct but under (one head): also, a sustistence or existence, generally.

Meta-stasis, a change of place (or disease).

Helio-stat, a sun-stander or staying instrument to prevent the

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of

of one's blood on breach of convenience of the sun's motion in observations.

Para-stat, (an insulated square pillar) standing beside or from (others).
Thermo-stat, (a regulator which places or fixes heat or temperature).
Aero-static, (relating to weights) standing or balancing in the air.
Aero-stat, an air balloon.

Hydro-static, (relating to weights or the weight of things) balanced or suspended in water; hence, also, to the weight or pressure of the water.

Apo-stem, a standing or drawing-off (of humours); hence, In-(apo)-sthume, (a bag) into-which the humours drain-off.

Dia-stem, a standing-apart or interval (in teeth, music, &c.).

Syn-(n)-stem, (anything) placed or brought together; composition, constitution, collocation; hence, a constituted plan or scheme: Un-systematic.

Gyno-stemium, (the column of orchid-aca-na composed of) stamens or rather filament-and style.
Iso-stemonous, (having) stamens-equal (in number to the petals).

Ile-stem, (L. G.), to stand (against)-a second time or again. Stem, the stand of a tree, to Stem, Steatine, belong. The rest are Latin.

Contra-st, a standing or placing-opposite (so as to show the difference); disagreement.

Re-st, a standing or staying-back or behind: Ar-rest, (to bring) to-rest; to stop or confine.

Con-stant, standing or holding-together; firm, unchanging: In-constant.

Di-stant, standing-apart; far off.
Ex-(s)tant, standing or staying-out or up: not de-cayed; remaining in existence.

In-stant, standing (with energy)-on (the performance of an action); earnest insisting: also, standing (close) upon; immediate.

Circum-stance, (one of the events which) stand-around (us or amongst which we are thrown).

Sub-stance, (that which) stands-under or supports: that which supports itself; hence, any mass; Con-substantiality, (a having the same) substance together: In-substantial, (having) no-substance: Transubstantiate, to cross or change (from one) substance (into another).

In-state, (to put) into-(a certain) standing or rank: Re-instate, (to put) again-into a state or place.

Mis-state, to set or place (the facts) -amiss or wrongly.

Re-estate, (Fr. e, for euphony), (to put) again-in (its) place or state.

Ob-stacle, (something which) stands -against or stops (one).

Armi-stice, a standing or staying-of arms: a truce.

Inter-stice, (space) standing-between. Sol-stice, the standing (point of) the sun (in his apparent journey towards either pole).

Super-stition, a standing-upon (vain ceremony in religion, &c.).

Ob-stinate, standing -against; opposing. (terring)

In-stable, not able to-stand; tot-Co-establish, (Fr. e, for euphony), (to establish or make) stable-together: Pre-establish, to establish before-hand; Re-establish, to establish again.

Con-establish, (comes)-stable, the count-(who) placed (the combatants at tournaments): the count of the stable or master of the horse: hence, Stall, a contraction of stable; Fore-stal, (to get into one's) station-before-hand; In-stal, (to put) into-its station; Pede-stal, a foot-station; Re-instal, to instal-again. State, Stand, Stable, Stall, belong.

Epi-STAXY, Gr. (staxis, a dripping; fr. stazo, I drop, drip, distil); an additional or repeated-dropping (of blood from the nose). Stalactite, is akin.

Bed-STEAD, Sax. (stede, a place stood or staid in; fr. Lat. status, a standing; fr. sto: see Stao); (a place for) the bed-to stay in: Girdle-stead, a place for the girdle: Home-stead, for the home or house: In-stead, in-the place (of). Stay, belongs.

Branchio-STEGOUS, Gr. (stego, tegō, I cover, protect); (with) gills-covered (by a membrane, as in the sturgeon).

-STELLA, (poss. astella, asterula; fr. Gr. aster, astron, a star: see Astrum); a star.

Inter-stellar, (space) between-stars. Con-stellation, (an assemblage) together of stars: Sub-constellation, an under or inferior-constellation. Stellar, belongs.

-STELLO, Gr. (fr. root stel, stal); I arrange, array, send, urge, press, compress.

Apo-stle, (one) sent-from (another); a messenger. Pseudo-apostle, a false apostle.

Epi-stle, (a message) sent-on or to. Cry-stal, (water) compressed by cold; ice or anything resembling.

Ana-static, sending-back (into its place): restraining; as a medicine. Dia-stalic, sent-apart or dilated (intervals in music).

Peri-staltic, (contracting) about or around-so as to urge (the food on-ward).

Dia-stole, a sending-apart, or dilata-tion. Sy(n)-stole, a sending-together or contraction.

Agro-STEM, Gr. stemma, a chaplet, crown; fr. stepho, I surround, crown; the crowns-of the fields. For Stem, a stand, no relation to this class, see Stao.

Chole-STERINE, Gr. (stereos, stiff, hard, solid; prob. fr. Stau: wh. see); the solid (matter)-of bile or gall (stones). Steril, hard, unfertile, as ground, belongs.

-STERNO, Lat. (fr. Gr. stornumi, stornennum; see Strote); I strew, spread, level, throw down. Stratus, strewed.

Con-sternation, a throwing (down)-of all (business and thought) together (from fear); or vulg. a being thrown or stuck-all of a heap.

Pro-sternation, (a being) thrown (flat) -forward.

Pro-strate, thrown (flat) forward or on the face; depressed utterly.

Sub-stratum, (a layer) strewed-be-neath. Stratum, belongs.

-STICHOS, * Gr. (fr. sticho, I go up, mount, ascend, march: fr. root stich); a row, order, line, verse.

Acro-stich, (a set of verses in which) the top or head-row (of letters, form a name).

Deca-stich, a ten-lined or versed (poem).

Di-stich, two-lines (in a poem) or a two-lined (composition).

Hexa-stich, a six-lined (poem). Mono-stich, one-line (in a poem) or a one-lined (composition). Ogdo-stich, an eight-lined (poem), but properly, the eighth line in a poem.

Tele-stich, (a poem in which a name is made by the letters at) the end of the lines.

Tetra-stich, a four-lined (poem). Tri-stich, triple-row: a fish.

-STIGO, Lat. (fr. Gr. stizo, I mark with a pointed instrument, prick, brand); I goad or spur. Stimulus, a goad. Stimulus, marked. Stigae, I mark or prick.

In-stigate, to goad-on. Ex-stimulate, (to bring) out (the spirit)-by the goad.

In-stimulate, to goad-on. Di-stinct, separated by marks: In-distinct: Di-stinguish, to separate-by marks: Contra-distinguish, to distinguish-in an opposite (manner).

Ex-(s)tinguish, marked or blotted-out: Ex-(s)tinguish: In-extinguishable. In-strict, (that which) goads or urges -on; impulse.

Inter-strictive, marking-between; distinguishing.

Re-stinguish, (to put) back or behind-a mark; to put a mark over or blot out. Stimulus, Stimulate, belong. Stigma, is akin.

-STILLA, * Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. stalazo or stazo: see Stazy); a drop.

Di-stil, to separate-drop (by drop). In-stil, (to pour) in-drop (by drop). Still, belongs.

Con-STIPATE, Lat. (stipo, I press down, pack; fr. Gr. steilo, I tread or stamp on; fr. root stib); to press or pack-together; to s-op or dam up: hence, by contraction, Co-stive. Step, Stop, Stamp, Stump, are akin.

Ex-(s)TIRPATE, Lat. (stirps, the root): to root-out.

-STITUO, * Lat. termin. of compds. of Statio, (fr. statum, to stand; fr. sto: see Stao); I place, set up, appoint, build.

Con-stitute, to set-together; to make or build up.

De-stitute, (left, with one's staff or) acting up-(torn) away.

In-stitute, (to enter) upon-a building (in commemoration); to appoint -upon (some occasion).

Pro-stitute, to place-forward or in public; to make common or base.

Re-stitute, (to put in its) place-again; to replace or restore.

Sub-stitute, to place-under (in order to support the duties of an absent person, &c.); to change.

Counter-stature, an appointment or decree-of opposite (force). Statue, Statute, belong.

-STOKE; Stao: see.*

-STOMA, Gr. (fr. steibo: see Stipate); a food crusher; a mouth or orifice.

Endo-stome, an orifice-(through the) inner (integument of a seed).

Epi-stome, (the part) over-the mouth.

Exo-stome, the orifice or foramen-in the outer (integument of a seed).

Lago-stome, hare-mouth or lip.

Ani-so-stomous, (with) un-equal -mouths or divisions; as a calyx.

Ano-stomous, (having the last whorl or) mouth-upward (turned towards the spine).

A-stomous, mouth-less.

Aulo-stomous, pipe-mouthed.

Idello-stomous, (having) a mouth -(that can) suck.

Belono-stomous, dart-mouthed.

-STYLOS

Ob-STREPEROUS

Crypto-stomous, hidden-mouthed.
Cyclo-stomous, (with a shell having a circular mouth).
Di-stomous, (having apparently two mouths or suckers).
Exo-stomous, (with out a mouth).
Hemi-stomous, half-mouthed.
Macro-stomous, black-mouthed.
Mela-stomous, (with one orifice).
Mono-stomous, (with a shell having the orifice - (continuous or unbroken) around).
Phyllo-stomous, (with leaf-like mouth-transversely (under the snout)).
Rhizo-stomous, (having) orifices on the peduncles or roots.
Siphono-stomous, siphon or pipe (mouth) or proboscis.
Tany-stomous, (with) stretching mouth.
Theco-stomous, (with) a sheath mouth-in a sheath.
Pterygo-stomian, (near to the) jaw or mouth-foot or fins; i. e., to the fore-mouth-foot.
Ana-stomous, (union of vessels, by the opening) back of mouths (into each other); also, (a turning) back and inoculation (in a vessel).
Stomate, Stomach, belong.
Ob-STREPEROUS, Lat. (strepo, I bustle, make a noise, murmur; perh. fr. the sound); making a noise-against; turbulently - obstinate. Strepent, belongs.
Multi-STRIATE, Lat. (stria, a groove or chamfer impressed; fr. stria: see Strictus); (having) many-grooves or streaks. Striate, belongs.
-STRICTUS* Lat., grasped, held tightly, bound down. Stringo, strictly, bound down. I draw tight. Strio, (fr. Gr. strago, I draw tight, bind, squeeze; fr. the sound); I bind, strain, bind, press.
A(d)-strict, to bind or strain-to (something else); to bind (part-to) (part): a-stringent, binding, &c.
Di-strict, (a portion of land) held apart or separated (from the rest); a space within which a lord has the power of di-straining, wh. see: Di-strictio, separation, egregiousness.
Ob-striction, (a putting) bonds-against (one's free motion); a bond or obligation.
Pre-striction, a binding (put)-before (the eyes); a blindfolding or dimming (of sight).
Re-striction, a binding-back; a curbness (of sight).
ing: Re-striction, to hold back.
Con-strictor, (one who) binds & squeezes-together.
Per-stringe, to bind-thoroughly; to compress, or mention in a compressed or brief manner.
Con-strain, (fr.), to bind-together (so as to make helpless, and prevent as to other will than one's own); to force - to bind-with or to (something).
Di-strain, to grasp or tear-apart or away (property, &c.).
Re-strain, to hold-back.
Super-strain, to over-strain. Strig-straight, Striel, Stringent, Strident, belong. Strangle, Strident, and distantly Crow, Croak, are akin.
-STROPHE*, Gr. (fr. strepho, I twist, turn; the same word as trepo: see Tropos); a turning, particularly, in the Gr. drama, of the chorus towards one side of the stage in singing a stanza; a stanza. Ana-strophe, a turning-back or inversion (in a word).
-epi-strophe, an opposite-turning or

Apo-strophe, a turning-from (one's audience, to address somebody not present); a mark showing that a vowel is not present; i. e., is omitted.
Cata-strophe, a turning-(upside) down: an unexpected revolution on which the interest of a tale turns; upshot, event.
Mono-strophic, (having only) one stanza or one kind of line.
Phylla-streph, (a thrush which turns or pokes, a sort of writing from left to right and then back, like the turning-of an ox (in ploughing). Strophe, belongs.
Cero-STROTE, Gr. (strotos, spread, laid; fr. storennumi, I spread, stretch out, strew; fr. Sansc. stri, to strew) (a painting done by means of, spread-wax).
-STRUCTUS*, Lat., heaped up, built, erected. Struo, (perh. fr. Gr. stereos, I make firm, steadfast; fr. erectus, see Sterine); I strengthen, build up, erect, place.
Con-struct, to build or put-together. In-struct, to heap-(knowledge) up; to build up-in (knowledge). Pre-in-struct, to instruct-beforehand.
Ob-struct, (to place) a heap or building-against (so as to impede): De-obstruct, (removing) obstruction-against.
De-structive, (pulling) down-an erection; hence, In-de-structible, not capable of having its erect (state, pulled) down; not to be pulled down or destroyed.
Sub-structure, an under-building; (a building under-the (great) building). Super-structure, a building-(raised) upon (something else).
De-stroy, (fr.), (to pull) down-an erection; to place-together (the Con-struct, to place-together words, or meaning): to arrange words, or show the arrangement or meaning of the instrument, the work tool which effects the heaping-on or up; a tool or means. Structure, belongs.
-STYLOS* Eng. of Gr. Stulos (akin to stela, a stand post, prop; fr. Stao: wh. see); a pillar, column, anything like; a pen, description, character, style.
Adeno-style, (with the style or co-lumn-covered with long) glandular (hairs).
Amphi-pro-style, (having four) columns-forward (not at the sides)-in both ways; i. e., front and rear.
Areo-style, (with) rare or widely spread-columns.
A-style, without-columns, a plant.
Crosso-style, fringed-style; a plant.
Deca-style, (with) ten-columns (in three diameters).
Di-a-style, (with) columns-divided by (front).
Do-deca-style, (with) twenty-two; i. e., twelve-columns (in front).
Epi-style, (the part) over-the column; i. e., the architrave.
En-style, (to place) a style, titles, or name-upon; to name.
Eu-style, a well-(proportioned inter-columniation); (i. e., two and a quarter diameters).
Hecaton-style, (with) a hundred-columns (in front).
Hexa-style, (with) six-columns (in front).
Octo-style, (with) eight-columns (in front).
Penta-style, (with) five-columns (in front).
Peri-style, (a court with) columns around (or on three sides).
Poly-style, (with) many-columns.

Pseudo-style, (with) thick or close columns.
Sub-style, (L.), or Hypo-style, (G.), (the line) under-the column or index (in a sun-dial).
Syn-style, (a building in which the columns would touch if each had a column-with (it or by its side).
Tetra-style, (with) four-columns (in front). Style, belongs.
-SUADEO, Lat. (perh. akin to Saevis: wh. see); I please, allure, as by words, advise, convince.
Dis-suade, to advise-(to go) apart from; i. e., not to follow or do something.
Per-suade, to allure or convince-thoroughly: In-persuadable, not-to be persuaded. Suasion, belongs.
-SUAVIS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. hedus, hadus, sweet, pleasant; akin to hedos, delight; fr. hedomai, I enjoy myself; akin to paio, I rejoice, joy, gaud, Lat., I rejoice, and Eng. gaud, a pleasing trifle); sweet, pleasant.
In-suavly, (a having) non-sweetness. As-suage, (to bring) to-pleasantness or calmness (of feeling). Suavity, belongs.
Ex-SUCCOUS, Lat. (succus, juice; prob. fr. Suctus: wh. see); (having) the juice-(taken) out; juiceless. Succulent, belongs.
-SUCTUS, Lat., sucked, Sugo, (prob. fr. the sound); I suck.
Ex-suction, a sucking-out.
Sanguis-suge, a blood-sucker; the leech and an insect. Suction, Sug, belong.
-SUDOR, Lat. (fr. Gr. idos, sweat; fr. Sansc. svid, sweat; akin to hudor: see Hydor; perh. also to chuo: see Chyma); sweat. (down).
De-sude, to sweat (so that it runs).
Ex-sude, to sweat-out.
Trans-sude, to sweat-across or through. Sudatory, Sweat, belong.
-SUETUS, Lat., customary, accustomed, habituated. Suesco, Suet, (perh. fr. usus, use, custom; or usu-co, I go by use; see Usus and I am wont, used, or accustomed).
As-suetude, (a being) accustomed-to. Con-suetude, (that) with (Cusus) is-habituated; habit: hence, Cus-tom, (fr. fr. con-usuetudo); and Ac-customed, habituated-to.
De-suetude, (a going) from-by use or habit; (a being) from; i. e., a neglect-of-custom.
Man-suetude, (a being) accustomed-to the hand (as a horse); tractability, tameness.
-SULAR, Eng. fr. Lat. Sula (pro- fr. salis, of the brine; fr. Sal, the briny sea, also salt; fr. G. hals, the sea; poss. from its dancing motion akin to hallomai: see Sultum); belonging to the sea. In-sular, (placed) in-the sea; Pen-sing to or like an island: In-sular (a place) almost an island: In-sular (to form) into-(an) isle or place-the sea.
In-sulse, not-salted; insipid, of Salt, Salary, Sauce, Sausage, &c.
-SULCUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. holos, drawing, dragging, trace, trench, helco, I draw, drag); a furrow trench.
Bi-sulcate, two-furrowed.
Multi-sulcate, many-furrowed.
Quadri-sulcate, four-furrowed.
-ate, belongs. cxvii

SULTUM

SULTUM, Lat. termin. of compds. of Sultum, to leap. Salvo, (fr. Gr. hallomai, I spring, leap, bound: poss. akin to altus: see Alt); I leap. Con-sult, to leap (upon one's feet from sitting, in order to vote) with (one, in the senate): to divide, or take the step before a decision or decree; to confer; Juris-consult, (one learned and) consulted-in law (matters).

Ex-(s)ult, to leap-out (of oneself for joy); to leap up.

In-sult, to leap-on; to trample down. Re-sult, to leap-back (as a spring in consequence of pressure); to happen in consequence.

De-sultory, leaping-down (upon an enemy, as in irregular warfare); irregular, moving by fits and starts. Sub-sultory, (giving) under; i. e., slight-leaps.

Re-sile, to leap-back.

Dis-silation, a leaping-apart.

Ex-(s)iltion, a leaping-out.

Iran-silency, a leaping across.

As-sail, to leap-to, towards, or against: hence, As-sault; (Fr.)

Super-salient, leaping-over or upon: hence, Somer-sault, (Fr.), a leap - (head) over (heels). Salient, Saily, belong.

Con-SUMMATE, Lat. (summus, the highest; fr. super: see Supero); (to get) with or to-the highest (point); (to reach or be joined) with the top or end; to finish-completely: In-consummate, not finished. Sum, Summit, belong.

SUMO,* Lat. (fr. sub-emo, I under-take: see Emptus); I take up, as from under; I take to myself, receive.

Ab-sume, to take-from or away: to As-sume, to take-to (oneself): Re-assume, to assume-again.

Con-sume, to take-all together (and leave nothing); to devour-all: In-consumable, not-to be consumed. De-sume, to take-away.

In-sume, to take-in.

Pre-sume, to take (a place, &c.) before (another, generally without supposed right); to take-before (granted).

Re-sume, to take-back or again.

Sub-sume, to take or join-under or after.

Trans-sume, to take-across or over; to transcribe or copy. Sumption, Sumptuary, belong.

SUPERO, Lat. (fr. super, above, over; fr. Gr. huper: Sansc. upari: see Hyper and Super, in List of Prefixes: oppositely akin to sub: see Supine); I am above or over; I overcome.

Ex-superance, a being beyond-and out of; excess.

In-superable, not to be over(come). Superior, Supernal, Supernatural, Sovereign, also Over, belong.

Re-SUPINE, Lat. (supinus, lying flat along the sky; fr. sub, under; akin to Gr. hupios, bent back, on the back; fr. hupo, Sansc. upa, under: see Hypo, in Prefixes; whence prob. Gr. hupnos: see Hypnos); lying flat-backwards. Supine, lying along, also a part of the verb deflected or bent down into a sort of substantive, belong.

Ab-SURD, Lat. (surdus, deaf); (irrelevant, foolish; as a reply) from -a deaf (man). Surd, a magnitude not to be exactly expressed by rational numbers; i. e., by those of the ordinary ratio or character, belongs.

TAILLER

SURE. See Cura, and also Ora.

SURRECTUS, Lat., set upright, lifted up. Surgo, (prob. sub-rego, I straighten or guide-from underneath; as in raising a ladder: see Rectus); I set up myself, I rise or arise.

In-surrection, a rising-upon or against (authority): In-surgent, one rising, &c.

Re-surrection, a rising-again: Re-source, (Fr.), a rising or spring (of hope or succour, to which one can go)-lack (for strength).

As-surgent, rising (with an incline or curve) to or towards. Surge, Source, belong.

SYLLABLE, Eng. of Gr. Syllabe, (fr. sun-labelin, to take-together: see Lepis); a collection of letters, making one sound or articulation.

Dis-syllable, a two-syllabled (word). Hen-de-ca-syllable, (a line, &c. of one-and ten; i. e., eleven-syllables).

Mono-syllable, a one-syllabled (word). Octo-syllable, (a line, &c. of eight-syllables).

Poly-syllable, a many-syllabled (word). Syllable, belong.

ASYLUM, Gr. (sulon, sole, the right of seizure, plunder; fr. sulao, I strip, plunder); (a place) without or free from-plunder or rapine.

TABULA, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. tao, teino: see Tinos); anything extended; a table or board.

Con-tabulate, (to fasten) together with boards.

En-tabulate, the extended or flat (surface)-upon or over (a pillar). Table, Tabulate, belong.

TACTUS, Lat., touched. Tango,* Tago, (fr. Gr. thiggano, thigo, I touch lightly); I touch, lay hands on, press upon.

Con-tact, a touching-together: Con-tagion, (disease spread by persons) touching-together; Con-tiguous, touching-together; Con-tinuent, touching-with or to (another, so as to hang or depend on it); Con-taminate (prob. for tagminate), to disease or defile by touching-together: In-contaminate, not-defiled.

In-tact, not-touched; In-tangible, not-to be touched or felt; In-teger, (something) not-touched, and therefore whole; In-tegrity, un-touched, unsullied (character).

At-tach, (Fr.), to touch-to or unite (in affection, &c.); At-tack, to touch-to (with violence); (to come) to-and lay hands on.

De-tach, (to bring) away from-touching or proximity. Tact, Tangent, Touch, perh. Tang, belong.

TAILLER, Fr. (prob. fr. Lat. talea, a billet or tally for grafting or for reckoning by cutting notches on it; fr. Gr. thallos, a green bough; fr. thallo, I bloom, flourish; fr. thao, I suckle, feed; fr. Sansc. dhe, to drink); to cut.

Cur-tail, to cut-short. (or small part. De-tail, (a part) cut-from; a fraction En-tail, (a property brought) into or on (certain persons)-by cutting (off others from possessing any portion).

Re-tail, (to sell) again-in cuttings or fractions (after buying in the gross). In-taglio, (a sculpture) cut-in or depressed as a seal. Tally, Tallage, Tailor, belong.

* See the previous Index.

TECTUS

Re-TALIATE, Lat. (talis, such, dmilar, like); (to give) back-like (for like). Taliation, belong.

TANGO. See Tactus.

TAPHOS,* Gr. (whence, thapto, I bury: root taph; prob. akin to tupho: see Tumeco); a burial, tomb, hillock.

Ceno-taph, an empty-tomb or monument (erected to one elsewhere buried).

Epi-taph, (an inscription) upon-a tomb.

A-TARAXY, Gr. (tarasso, I stir up, disturb, agitate, break one's rest; perh. ak n to rhasso, and rheo: see Ract and Rhugis); un-disturbed (demeanour); stoicism.

Re-TARD, Lat. (tardus, slow); (to keep) back-(by) slowness; to impede. Tardy, Teth, Tire, Tired, belong.

TARSO, Gr. (fr. tersomal, I am dry or parched; fr. Sansc. trish, to be thirsty; and perh. akin to thero: see Thymus); a crate or flat basket for drying things; anything broad and flat, as the sole of the foot.

Acro-tarse, the top or upper surface-of the sole.

Meta-tarse, (the instep which is) after (i. e., behind, or more towards the back than)-the sole. Tarsus, belong.

TAUROS, Gr., Taurus, Lat., a bull. Cent-taur, a bull-goat or spurrier; i. e., a man riding a bull or a similar figure: Bu-centaur, an ox-centaur.

The Centaurs are, however, represented half man, half horse; the Bu-centaurs, half man, half ox.

Centaur, a herb which cured the centaur Chiron: Dia-centaur, (a medicine made) by means of-centaury.

Mino-taur, (an allegorical creation, the son of the moon or Psiphæ and the bull (of the zodiac); or the bull of Minos).

Su-ov-e-taurilla, (L.), (a sacrifice of) a swine-a sheep-and a bull.

TAXIS, Gr. (fr. tasso, I arrange), arrangement, order.

Syn-tax, (a placing words) together -in the arrangement (the genius of the language requires); con-struction.

A-taxy, want of-order (in the pulse).

Para-taxia, an arranging (of propositions)-side by side, (without showing their dependence). Tactics, belong.

TCHEOU, Choo or Chew, Chinese, a town of the second order, walled.

Quang-tcheou, government-town.

Tung-tcheou, east-town.

Wey-tcheou, walled-town.

TECHNE,* Gr. (akin to tecto: see Toca and to tectho: see Techos); an art, handicraft, trade, contrivance.

A-techny, want of-art. [art.]

Caco-techny, bad, or a corruption of Pan-techny, all-the arts.

Poly-techny, many-arts or sciences.

Pyro-techny, the art-of fire(work making).

Architect, the chief-artisan or work-man. Technical, belong.

TECTUS,* Lat., covered. Tecto, (fr. Gr. tegos, stegos, a roof, covering; fr. stego, I cover closely and keep out wet); I cover. Tecto, I cover thread with thread, I weave.

De-tect, (to find out by pulling) away the cover or cloak; to discover.

-TENTUM

Digitized by Google

- water-tenour, (the highest male voice, as it were) opposed to the tenour; i. e., (to its ordinary strain, melody, pitch, tone, or course. Tenable, Tenement, Tenet, Tenou, Tenour, Tenure, belong.
- TENUIS, Lat. (fr. Tendo: wh. see); stretched till thin; thin, slender.
- At-tenuate, (to stretch) to thinness; to lessen or weaken.
- Ex-tenuate, (to draw out-) into thinness; to lessen (the character or bad character of). Tenuity, belongs. Thin is akin.
- De-TER, Lat. (terreo, I fright; fr. Gr. tremo, I tremble, quake, quiver; run away; fr. Sansc. tras, to tremble: all formed fr. sound of the teeth, &c., chattering; and perh. akin to trepo: see Trepid); to frighten (from doing a thing); to hinder. Terror, Terrible, belong. Tremble, Tremour, Tremendous, are akin.
- TERGEO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. terno: see Tarsos); I wipe dry, I wipe. [cleanse.]
- Alu-terge, to wipe off (spots); to De-terge, to wipe from or away; to cleanse. Terse, smooth, clean, neat, belongs. Torrid, Dry, perh. Torrent, a boiling stream, are akin.
- TERMINUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. terma, the bound or post round which the chariots in races turned, the stone that is worn by turning round; prob. fr. teiro: see Trity); a bound, end, or limit.
- De-termino, (to lay) down the limit; to define or settle: In-determinate, not-determined: Pre-determine, to determine beforehand.
- Con-terminate, together: In limits; i. e., (having) the same-limits.
- Dis-terminate, parted (by) a boundary; also, (thrown) apart or away from the boundary; expelled.
- Ex-terminate, (to drive) out of a limit or country; to root out, to destroy.
- In-terminable, (having) no-limit, end, or stop. Terminus, Terminate, Term, belong.
- TERRA, Lat. (fr. Gr. era, earth; poss. akin to sero: Sition); the earth, ground, land. [exile.]
- Dis-ter, to separate from the land; to In-ter, (to put) in the earth; to bury: Dis-inter, to part from-being in the earth; to unbury: Re-inter, to bury again.
- De-terrations, (a routing) from the earth; an un-earthling.
- Circum-terranean, around the earth.
- Con-terranean, (united) with (another or others in having a common father)-land; (having) the same (father) land: Country, (a tract of) land-together or united (under one rule); in a particular sense, land opposed to buildings or a town.
- Medi-terranean, in the middle or centre-of the land; inland.
- Sub-terranean, under the ground.
- Terrene, Terrace, belong.
- Ar-TERY, Gr. (tereo, I watch over, take care of, keep; fr. teros, a watch or guard; perh. fr. Sansc. trā, to guard or preserve); an air-keeper, holder, or pipe; originally the wind pipe, then applied to blood vessels from a mistaken notion of their use.
- Con-TESSERATION, Lat., Gr. (tes-sara, four; fr. Sansc. chatur, four: see Quadrati); (a pitting) four (cornered tiles or dice)-together; a chequering. Tesserae, Temelated, belong.
- TESTIS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. theastai, to place, lay down, depose; fr. tithemi: see Thrice); one who makes a deposition, a witness.
- At-test, (to call) to-witness; to add (one's name to)-as witness.
- Con-test, (to bring) witnesses-together (that by their conflicting testimony, truth may be elicited); to pit one against the other, to dispute or fight: In-contestable.
- De-test, (to repel or throw) from (one) -by (solemn) deposition or declaration; to declare abhorrence of.
- Ob-test, (to call) upon-to witness or (to call to give) witness-upon.
- Pro-test, (to put) forth-(one's) testimony or deposition.
- In-testate, (having made) no testament, evidence, or testis (of one's will). Test, Testator, belong.
- TEUCHOS, Gr. (fr. teucho, I prepare, make ready, make, form; nearly akin to tugchano: see Tetricos; akin also to tictio: see Triche); a tool, implement, tackle, preparation, compilation.
- Oeta-teuch, a preparation or compilation of eight: the first eight books of the Old Testament.
- Penta-teuch, a compilation of five; the five books of Moses.
- Omycho-TEUTHIS, Gr., a calumny with clawed or hooked (suckers).
- TEXT: see Tectus. TH: see*
- THALAMOS, Gr., an inner or bed-chamber; a bed.
- A-thalamous, without-shields or beds (for the spouses).
- Mono-thalamous, (with) one-chamber.
- Poly-thalamous, (with) many-chambers.
- Epi thalamium, (a song) upon-(nuptials, uttered as the bride entered) the chamber.
- Argy-THAMNY, Gr. (thamnos, a bush; fr. thama, crowded; fr. hama, together; akin to homos: see Similis); white-shrub; a plant.
- THANATOS, Gr. (fr. thanein, to die; thnesco, I die; fr. root than); death. [and plant.]
- A-thansy, death-lessness; a medicine.
- Eu thanasy, a well or good-death; a good (means of)-riddance.
- THECE, or Theke, Gr., a case to put anything in, a box, repository, receptacle. Thesis, a setting, placing, arranging; something set. Thema, that which is placed or set. Tithemi, (fr. root the); I set, put, place, fix, cause.
- Apo-theke, (a place) to put (anything, as oil, or drugs)-away: Apothecary, one who keeps an apothecary or repository: Apothecium, the shield in which the asci or bladders of lichens are deposited.
- Biblio-theke, a book-case.
- Dactylio-theke, a finger-stall, case, or bandage. [or sculpture.]
- Glypto-theke, a repository of carving.
- Gnatho-theke, (the skin or horn) case. [which covers the] jaw or beak (of birds); the skin over the bill.
- Masto-theke, the receptacle or pouch (in marsupials within which are) the breasts or ducts.
- Pinaco theke, a repository of (painted) slabs or paintings.
- Zoo-theke, a repository of living (beings) or animals.
- Zo-theke, a receptacle or chamber to live (in by day); opposed to dormitory.
- Endo-thecium, (a fibrous tissue) within-(the sides of) an anther or pollen) case.
- Exo-thecium, (the coating) without side-(the anther or pollen)-case.
- Hypo-thecation, a placing (a thing with a person)-under (conditions, as in pledging); at present, the putting a thing in pledge without parting with the possession.
- Anti-thesis, a placing (words)-in opposition (to each other).
- Apo-thesis, a place (to put things) -away; also, a placing or setting (a bone which has been thrust) away (from its place).
- Dis-thesis, (general arrangement or) placing of different parts; general character or inclination, especially to fever; dis-position.
- Ep-en-thesis, a placing -additional (letters)-in (the middle of a word).
- Hypo-thesis, (that which is) placed -under (as the foundation for an argument); an assumption or sup-position.
- Meta-thesis, a change of place (in the letters of a word).
- Par-en-thesis, (a clause) put in-beside (or over and above the sentence).
- Pros-thesis, a placing (words or syllables)-before (a word).
- Syn-thesis, a placing (parts)-together; opposed to division or analysis.
- Ana-thema, (a curse by which something is devoted) placed or laid-up (to the gods or their anger); a curse. [a sorc.]
- Epi-them, (a poultice) placed-upon.
- Epi-thet, (a name) placed-upon (a person or thing).
- Nomo-theke, (one who) lays (down) -distributions or laws; a lawgiver.
- Thesmo-theke, (one who) lays (down that which is)-placed or appointed; a lawgiver.
- Dietyo-theton, (a course of masonry) laid-(like a) net: net work masonry or lattices. Thesis, Theme, belong.
- THEORY: see Ora.
- THEOS, Gr. (the same word as Zeus, Sleus, God; Dios, of God: whence Jovis: see Jutum: akin to Lat. Deus; Sansc. Deva, God); God. Thesm.*
- A-theism, (a having) no-(belief in) a god; hence, A-theist.
- Di-theism, (belief in) two-gods, (an evil and a good one). [-god.]
- Mono-theism, (belief in only) one [-god.]
- Pan-theism, (worship of) all-the gods.
- Poly-theism, (system of) many, or a multitude of-gods.
- Tri-theism, (belief in) three-(totally distinct) gods.
- Apo-theosis, (a placing) off or away from (men and among) the gods.
- En-thusiasm, (state of) having the god -within; i. e., of being inspired.
- Theism, Thelst, belong. Divine, Deity, are akin.
- Anti-THERAPEUTIC, Gr. (therapeuo, I wait on, attend, wash, heal; fr. thero: see Thermos); (a medicine which prevents or is) against -the healing (of a wound).
- THERION, Gr. (fr. ther, a wild beast, or of prey); a little wild beast; wild beast. Therion, I hunt wild beasts, chase, catch.
- An-oplo-ther, the un-armed-wild beast; a sort of hog without tusks or weapons.
- Anthracio-ther, coal-beast; a fossil first found in coal.

THERMOS

Chalco-there, limestone-beast; a tapir found in limestone.
 Chiro-there, hand-beast; an animal, the impressions of whose feet are hand-like.
 Dino-there, the terrible-beast; a sort of gigantic hippopotamus.
 Elaso-there, a beast-with teeth like a beater (plate).
 Glosso-there, a beast-with probably an enormous tongue.
 Hippo-there, a beast-(like) the horse.
 Mega-there, a great-beast (like a sloth).
 Pachy-there, a thick (skinned)-beast.
 Paleo-there, the old or ancient beast (like a tapir).
 Phacolo-there, a beast-(with natural) phacelo, a great (like a Pinno-there, (L. G.), a beast (like a crab which lives in the shell of) erab the pinna or wing (shell oyster).
 Scello-there, a beast-(with large) hams.
 Siva-there, (a ruminating) beast (found in the sub himalayan or Sivalic range, so named from) Siva (the avenging Hindoo god).
 Scia-therie, (pertaining to a) shadow-catcher; i.e., a sun dial. Theriac, a remedy against the bite of venomous beasts; whence Treacle, belongs. Deer, Boar, Bear, Ferocious, are prob. akin.
 THERMOS, Gr. (fr. thermo, I warm or heat; perh. akin to tersomai; see Tursu); warm, hot, boiling, glowing.
 Hema-therm, a warm-blooded (animal) thermal, (allowing radiant) heat (to pass) through.
 Iso-thermal, (pointing out) equal heat or temperatures. Thermal, belongs. Sirius, the scorching dog star, is akin.
 ENO-THEONIC, Gr. (theion, sulphur; prob. from its purifying and averting power, fr. theios, divine; fr. Thous wh. see); (produced by the action of) sulphur-(upon spirits of) wine; sulpho-vinic.
 Ocy-THOR, Gr. (thoos, running, quick, nimble; fr. theo, I run; akin to theo; see Thyra); the swift-runner; a nautilus.
 -THORAX, Gr., a breastplate, the part covered by it, the chest.
 Cephalo-thorax, (the segment in crustaceans which includes) the head and chest (in insects).
 Gymno-thorax, (a fish) denuded or naked-of pectoral or chest (fins).
 Hydro-thorax, water or dropsy-on the chest.
 Meso-thorax, the mid-chest (of insects, bearing the posterior pair of wings and legs).
 Meta-thorax, the after or lower-chest.
 Pneumo-thorax, wind-(in the sac of the pleura or) chest.
 Pro-thorax, (the shield) before or above-the chest; or the first segment of the thorax in insects.
 Thorax, Thoracic, belong.
 -THORP; THRAL; TIDE: see*.
 -THRIX, Gr., the hair. Trichos, of the hair.
 Dis-thrix, or trix, (a disease of) the hair-(in which the ends divide or split into) two.
 Lago-thrix, (a monkey shaped like) hare-(but with coarser and curling) hair.
 Leio-thrix, (a bird with silky or) smooth-hair or down; hence, Leio-trichanous, pertaining to, &c.
 Calli-trich, hair-of beauty; a daint.

Epi-trich, (an infusory with) hairs upon (the body).
 Oxy-trichina, (one of a subclass of infusorians armed with) sharp-hairs. Trichiasis, belongs.
 -THRONUS, Lat. (fr. Gr. throneos, a seat, chair, throne; fr. thrao, I set myself, sit); a throne.
 De-throne, (to cast down) from-a throne.
 En-throne, (to place) upon-a throne: In-throne is the same; Dis-en-throne, (to throw down or) apart throne, (to be) on a throne; to de-(from being)-on a throne; to place throne: Re-en-throne, (to place) again-on a throne: Throne, belongs.
 Holo-THURIAN, Gr. (thouros, leaping, rushing, contractile; fr. thuroo, I leap; fr. root thor; and thuroo, I leap; fr. theo; see Thee); an akin to thuro, theo; (to place) an echinoderm with body) all or wholly-contractile; trepang.
 Ec-THYMA, Gr. (fr. thuo, I rush on or along; fr. Sansc. dhu, to shake, or drive; akin to theo: see Thim); or drive; akin to theo: see Thim; a-rushing or bursting-out (of pines); e-ruption. Thyrsus, the wand agitated by the Bacchantes, belongs.
 -THYMOS, Eng. of Gr. Thymos, (fr. thuo; see Thyra); that which rushes forth, breath; hence, life, mind, soul, courage.
 En-thymeme, (something) in-the mind (though not expressed). Log-athymy, want of-courage (or depression in disease).
 Caco-thymy, bad or ill-(disposition of) mind. Med. [a swoon of] mind.
 Lipo-thymy, a leaving-(of) the life.
 -TIYRA, Eng. of Gr. Thyra, (Sansc. dvār, or door); a door.
 Dia-thyra, (a rail or screen placed) through; i.e., across-a door-way.
 Hyper-thyrum, (the lintel) over-the door-way.
 Pro-thyrum, (the porch) before-the door: Pro-thyrides, (ornaments cut down on the) frontis-of door (cases).
 Pseudo-thyrum, a false-door. Door, is akin.
 Chi-hoang-TI, Chinese, first-royal ruler.
 Re-TICENCE, Lat. (taceo, I keep silent; fr. Gr. aceon, stillly, silently; fr. ace, acen, softly, stillly, slightly; or more prob. fr. tch, the note of silence); (a keeping) back (one's words in)-silence. Tacit, belongs.
 Con-TIGNATION, Lat. (tignum, a beam, forming part of the covering of an abode; fr. tego: see Tictus); (a placing) beams-together.
 IN-TIMIDATE, Lat. (timeo, I fear, dread; perh. fr. Gr. deido, I fear; to akin to dio, I run away, flee); (to throw) fear-upon. Timid, belongs.
 -TINCTURE: see Teindre. TINGENT, Tignous: see Tact.
 -TION; TIVE: see*.
 -TITULUS, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. titital, he has been honoured; fr. tio, tino, I honour); a name given as an honour, a title.
 Dis-title, (to take) apart or away-the title-(from a person); to take away title.
 En-title, En-titule, (to impose or place) a title-upon (a thing: Dis-entitle, (to take) apart or away-a title imposed. Title, belongs.
 A-TIAS, Gr. (fr. tiao, I bear, suffer, undergo, dare; fr. Sansc. tni, to weigh); the greatly-bearing; a weight) of the heaven bearing god: hence, A-tantic. Telamon, the armour bearer to Hercules; Talent, a weight of money; Tantalus, who hung balanced over water, belong.

Zoo-TOCA, Gr. (fr. tecto, I bring forth, produce; fr. root tec): (the name of a class of lizards which, being ovoviviparous, produce (the young)-alive.
 En-TOIL, Fr. (toile, a net, a curtain; fr. Lat. tela, a web; for tela; fr. texo: see Tectus); (to envelop) in-a net. Telary, Toil, belong.
 -TOLLO, Lat. (fr. Gr. tiao: see Tias); I upbear, raise, take up or away. Tolerio, I undergo, suffer, allow.
 At-tolent, raising-to (a certain point or height).
 Ex-tol, to raise-out of (the common rank); (to declare) e-gregious or excellent.
 In-tolérable, not-(to be) suffered or borne. Tolerate, perh. Toll, tribute taken away, belong.
 EN-TOMB, Fr. (tombe, a tomb; fr. Lat. tumulus, a tomb or hillock; fr. Gr. tumhos, a place where a body is burnt; prob. fr. tupo: over the ashes; to put into-a tomb. see Temo); (to put) into-a tomb. see Temo); (to put) into-a tomb. -TON*.
 -TOM, Tume: see Temo. Flower or Quang-TONG, Chinese, flower or sugar-government or province.
 -TONOS, Gr. (fr. teino, I stretch, extend; fr. Sansc. tan, to stain, extend; anything stretched or drawn, a cord; a strain, tone, or note, from the strained voice or a string. Tonos, Lat., a tone. Tono, I sound or thunder.
 Bary-tone, the heavy, deep, or grave, -note or compass (of the male voice).
 Di-tone, (an interval of) two-tones.
 Mono-tone, a single-note or tone: Monotony.
 Semi-tone, a half-note.
 Dia-tonic, (going) through-the tones (and semitones) of the natural scale.
 A-tony, want of-tone or tension (in Chiro-tony, an extension or laying on-of hands (to make a priest).
 Em-pros-tho-tonos, (a convulsion in which the head is) stiffened or stretched-(to)wards-(the part) in-front or chest.
 Opis-tho-tonos, (a convulsion) drawing (the head)-back-wards.
 Ana-tasis, an upward-extension.
 Dia-tasis, a stretching-dividedly or apart: ex-tension.
 Pro-tasis, (the first part of a period or sentence, in which the subject, on which information is to be given, is) stretched-forth, or laid-before (the hearer): opposed to apo-dosis.
 Hypo-tensue, (the side of a right angled triangle which) stretches under (the right angle).
 Peri-toneum, (the membrane which) stretches round (the abdominal viscera). Tone, Tetanus, belong. The rest are Latin.
 De-tonate, to thunder-down; to explode loudly.
 In-tonate, (to be) in (a state of)-thundering; (to move the voice) in or on-the notes (of the scale).
 As-tonish, As-tound, (to stupify as) at or by a thunder (clap).
 At-tune, (to bring) a pitch (of an instrument) to (the pitch or key) of another. Tone, Tune Thunder, belong.
 EU-TOPIAN, U-topian, Gr. (topos, a place or spot); belonging to an imaginary place-(where every thing is) well, excellent, or happy.

Topic, a common place subject of discourse, belongs.

AT-TORN, Fr. (corner, to turn; fr. Lat. torno, I turn; fr. Gr. tornos, a tool for drawing a round; fr. teiro see Trítum); to turn (over) -to; to transfer; Attorney, a transferor or conveyancer. Turn, Tornado, Tournament, in which the combatants wheel their horses to charge, belong.

-TORTUS,* Lat., twisted, wreathed. Torques, (akin to Gr. atractos, a spindle: poss. fr. a root traco, the same as trecho: see Trochos); I twist, wind, writh, wring.

Con-tort, to twist-together or up.
De-tort, to twist-from (straightness).
Dis-tort, to twist-apart or away (from straightness).

Ex-tort, to wring or squeeze-out.
In-tort, to wind or twist-in; (to mark) In-with twists.

Re-tort, to twist-back; to reply or bend-back, (an answer); also a vessel with bent neck. Tort, Tortoise, Torture, Torment, belong.

Ching-TOW, Chinese, middle-road or way.

-TOXICOS, Gr. (fr. toxón, a bow; fr. toxos, having hit the mark; fr. tugchano, I hit the mark; I hit or light upon: fr. root toch: akin to teucho: see Teuchos; to titaino, I stretch, the same word as teino: see Tonos); poison for arrows, poison. Toxicum, Lat., poison.

Picro-toxin, (G), the bitter-poison (of the coccus Indicus).

In-toxicate, (L), (to deprive of sense as if by) imbuing with-poison; to em-poison. Toxote, a Bowman, belongs.

-TRACHUS, Gr. (akin to rhachos, a ridge or roughness: fr. rhasso: see Rachitis); broken, rough; Tracheolus, the throat, having the ridge or protuberance, Adam's apple.

Hero-trach, (the tróla, a mollusk with a wing or comb-on the trachea or rough (throat).

Hypo-trachelium, (the part of a column just under the throat or neck (of the capital). Trachea, the rough fibrous windpipe, belongs.

-TRACTUS,* Lat., drawn something drawn out or up. Traho, (poss. trans-veho, I carry-across: see Veho); I draw, drag. Tracta, I touch, feel, handle, manage.

Abs-tract, to draw-from or away; to separate, to steal.

At-tract, to draw to: Counter-attraction, an opposite-attraction.

Con-tract, to draw-together: to compress by a bandage or rope; to bind: Pre-contract, a contract-beforehand. [Itly]-from.

De-tract, to draw or take (some) quantity.
Dis-tract, to draw (the mind) apart (from its business or ordinary response).

Ex-tract, to draw (something)-out of.
Pro-tract, to draw-forward, forth, or out; to lengthen.

Re-tract, to draw-back.

Sub-tract, to draw (from)-beneath; to draw (away) by means of something placed under.

In-tractable, not-to be managed.
Por-tray, to draw-forth or out (a description or delineation); to picture: Por-trait.

Con-trectation, a handling-all together or all over.

Oil-trectation, a handling (one's character) adversely or against (its advantage).

En-treat, (Fr.), (to enter) into-treaty, management, or business (with); (to influence by acting) on-(every) handle or feeling.

Ex-treat, to draw or take-from or out; to ex-tract; to forfeit.

Mal-treat, to handle-badly.

Re-treat, to draw-back; to withdraw.

Re-treat, to draw-back or (over) again. Trace, Tract, Trait, Treat, belong. Draw, Draw, are akin.

-TRAGOS, Gr. (fr. trogo), wh. see; the vine gnawer; a he goat, or anything bearded.

Anti-tragus, (the rim of the ear passage) opposite-the tragus (or eminence over the passage, generally beset with small) hairs.

Oreo-tragus, the mountain-goat.

Arch-TRAPE, Gr., Lat. (trapa, a beam; prob. fr. Gr. trapex, a beam or lever to turn a thing with; fr. trepo: see Tropos); the chief-beam or rafter (over the columns).

En-TREASURE, Eng. (fr. Fr. trésor; fr. Gr. thesauros, a store placed or laid by; a treasure; fr. tithemi: see Thece); (to treat or look) upon-as a treasure.

Mono-TREMATE, Gr. (trema, something pierced, a hole; fr. trao, te-traino, I bore, pierce; fr. root tra; akin to torinos: see Torn); (having) one-hole.

-TRENCH, Eng. (fr. Fr. trancher, to cut; prob. fr. Lat. truncus: wh. see); something cut or dug, as a ditch.

En-trench, (to encroach by making a cutting-into: (to place) within-dug (ditches); i. e., to surround with ditches).

Re-trench, to cut-(so as to bring) back (to smaller proportions).

In-TREPID, Lat. (trepidus, trembling, having a cold turn or shudder; fr. Gr. trepo: see Tropos; and perh. akin, to tremo, treo: see Ter); not-trembling. Trepidation, belongs.

-TRIBUO,* Lat. (fr. tribus, a tribe or people originally divided into three, as the Romans: fr. tres, three; akin to Gr. treis, Sansc. tri, three); I give tribute or taxes as one of a tribe; I give.

At-tribute, to give or impute-to.

Con-tribute, (to assist in) giving-with (others).

Dis-tribute, to give-in different parts; to allot-separately.

Re-tribution, a giving-back; repayment, requital. Tribute, Tribe, Tribune, the chief of a tribe or his judgement seat. Trine, Three, are akin.

-TRICAE, Lat. (fr. Gr. trichos: see Thrix); hairs or threads which entangle in the legs of chickens; an impediment.

Ex-tricate, (to get) out of-im-pediments or difficulties: In-extricable. In-tricate, (enveloped) in-im-pediments or difficulties: hence, In-trigue, an entangled, misty, or concealed plot.

-TRIPTOS, Gr., rubbed, that may be rubbed or pounded. Tripso, (akin to teiro: see Torn); I rub, rub or grind corn, wear out.

Lithon tripitic, rubbing away or dissolving the stone.

Dia-tribe, a securing out or harping

-(upon a subject) throughout a long time).

-TRITUM, Lat., to rub. Tero, (fr. Gr. teiro: see Trity); I rub, break, bruise. [rubbed (upon it)].

At-trite, (placed) to (something) and Con-trite, bruised or broken-together or up (in spirit); downcast, repentant.

De-tritment, (loss or lessening by being) rubbed-away: De-tritus, (the fragments) rubbed-away. Trite, Tribulation, belong. Tender is akin, and also Rub and Drive.

Litho-TRITY, Gr. (teiro, I rub, wear away; akin to Trogo and Tript: wh. see); a rubbing or grinding-the stone (into powder). Term, a boundary stone or period, worn, by turning round, belongs.

-TROCHOS, Gr. (fr. trecho, I run, hasten, hurry); a runner, anything round, a wheel, hoop; a running, tripping, course, race course.

Di-trochee, a double-trochee or tripping (foot in verse).

Peri-troch, (a perpetual leverage produced by applying to an axis of small circumference power exerted on a large wheel-fixed) about, around, or upon (it). Trochee, Trichilus, belong.

-TROGO, Gr. (akin to Triptos): I grind, chew, gnaw, eat.

Arto-troque, a bread or loaf-eater; a parasite. [chaffer].

Rhizo-troque, a root-gnawing (cock-xylo-troque, a beetle which perforates or gnaws wood).

-TROPHE,* Gr. (fr. trepho, I make firm, thick, solid; I flatten, nourish, feed); nourishment, food, victuals.

A-logo-trophy, nourishment-without-ratio or proportion (to the different parts of the body); unproportionate development. [wasting away].

A-trophy, want of nourishment; a Caco-trophy, bad or vicious-nutrition.

Hyper-trophy, (a morbid excess of or) over-nutrition.

-TROPOS,* Gr. (fr. trepo, I turn, guide, turn round, turn and flee; the same word as stropho: see Strophe; also, perh. akin to, treo, tremo: see Trepid); a turn, direction, way, habit, manner.

Chroma-trope, (a machine which by turning; produces variations of) colours.

Helio-trope, (a plant whose flower is said to) turn-to the sun; also (a mineral with) red or sun (coloured) -turns or spots; blood stone.

Thauma-trope, (an optical toy producing a) wonder (ful effect on) -turning (it).

Ec-tropium, (a morbid) out or up -turning (of the inner part of the eyelid). [eyelashes and lid].

En-tropium, an inward-turning (of the Amphitropal, turned or curved about (the albumen, as an embryo). Bot. Ana-tropal, turned-up-side down, as the embryo of the apple in growing).

Anti-tropal, (having the radii of the embryo) turned-opposite (the hilum).

Campuli-tropal, (with the ovule) turning-in a bend (upon itself).

Hetero-tropal, (having the embryo) turned or pointing (neither to the base nor apex of the seed, but) -another (way).

Homo-tropal, (being) turned or curved -together (or in the same way as another).

Tro-tropical, (causing another) to turn or move-forwards; rallying, persuasive. Trope, a turning into figurative language, Tropics, the paths of the sun on midsummer and midwinter day, or as he is upon the turn in ascending or descending towards either pole. Trophy, set up to commemorate the turning or fight of enemies, belong.

TROUVER, Fr. (akin to Germ. treffen, to hit, strike hit upon; and poss. fr. Lat. triv, I threshed; fr. tero, I break, thrash, stamp: see Tritum); to find or discover, as minerals, by breaking the earth; to invent.

Con-trive, to invent (and put)-together, to forge or devise.

Re-trieve, to find-again; to recover: Ir-retrievable, not to be recovered. Trover, Troubadour, an inventor or poet, belong.

TRUDO, * Lat., I thrust, push, drive. Trasum, to thrust.

De-trude, to thrust-down.

Ex-trude, to thrust-out.

In-trude, to thrust (oneself, &c.),-in. Ob-trude, to thrust (something) -against; to thrust (oneself)-against or upon (persons). (or forth).

Pro-trude, to thrust or issue-forward. Re-trude, (to draw) back-what has been) thrust (out).

Abs-truse, thrust or placed-away; hidden, recondite, difficult to discover. Trusion, belong.

-TRUNCO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. trucho, I rub away, destroy; fr. truo: see Trya); I maim, lop off, destroy, make a trunk of. Truncus, a stump, or trunk.

De-truncate, (to lop) from-the trunk. Ob-truncate, (to cut) against (all obstructions or excrescences so as to leave only)-a trunk; to behead. Truncate, belong.

Xylo-TRYA, Gr. (truo, I rub, wear out, destroy: akin to teiro: see Tern); a wood-piercing or destroying (shelled mollusk).

-TRE; TUDE; TUNE.*

-TUBER, Lat. (fr. Tumco, wh. see); a swelling, puff, or bunch, as of a mushroom.

Ex-tuberant, swelling-out.

Pro-tuberant, swelling-forward. Tuber, Tubercle, Tuberos, belong.

In TUTITIVE, Lat. (tuitum, to look to; fr. tueo, I look to or defend; prob. fr. Gr. teros, a watch or guard: see Tery); looking-into; (having an) in-sight (at once). Tuition, Tutor, belong.

-TUMEO, Lat. (perh. fr. Gr. tupho, I raise a smoke; I smoke, swelter, and rise as a volcano: akin to thuo; see Thymos, also Fumus: to tumbo; see Tomb: and prob. to thapto: see Taphos); I swell. Tumulus, a tomb, a hillock or mound.

Con-tumacy, a swelling-together or up (with pride); hence, as a consequence, neglect, stubbornness, perversity: Contumely, a swelling-together or up (with pride); hence, neglect, disdain, contempt.

In-tumescence, a swelling (up from) within.

In-tumidate, (to put) into-a tomb. Tamid, Tumour, Tumulus, Tumult, a swelling or bursting out of violence; belong. Typhos, Typhus, Typhoon, are perh. akin.

-TURBA, Lat. (fr. Gr. turbe, surbe, disorder, throng, hustle; akin to tarraso: see Thrazy); a crowd, throng. Turbidus, confused, stirred up.

Dis-turb, (to stir up and so) confuse -the separate parts; (to cause) to throng-here and there.

Per-turb, to confuse or disorder-thoroughly: Im-perturbable, not-(capable of being) disordered. Turbid, Turbulent, belong.

In-TURGESCENCE, Lat. (turgesco, turges, I swell; perh. akin to Gr. tursis, turris, a tower; and fr. a root turo, I swell, shoot up); a (beginning-to)swell-(from)within. Turgid, belongs. Turret, Tower, are perh. akin.

De-TURPATE, Lat. (turpis, base, filthy, sordid; poss. fr. Turba: wh. see) (to bring) down-to baseness; to defile. Turpitude, belongs.

-TUSUM, Lat., to beat. Tundo, I pound, beat, bray.

Con-tuse, to beat-together (so as to make a bruise); to bruise: Con-tund. (Per-tund.

Per-tuse, to beat (a hole)-through: Ob-tuse, (having lost the sharpness by being) beaten-against (at the point); without penetration, stupid: Ob-tund. (blunt: Re-tund.

Re-tuse, beaten-back (at the edge);

-TYPOS, * Eng. of Gr. typos, (whence typo, I beat, strike with a stick; fr. root tu: perh. fr. the sound); a blow, anything resulting a mark, impress, stamp, image, sketch, type, pattern, model.

Anti-type, (the reality) instead of or opposed to the type or (previous) sketch; the fulfilment of the type or foreshowing. (pattern.

Arch-type, the beginning or chief Ec-type, an image or sketch-(in relief or standing) out.

Electro-type, an impression or image -(produced by means of) electricity or voltaism.

Meso-type, (natrolite), an image-of the middle (or miocene formation or stratum). (tern or model.

Proto-type, the first or original-pat-tern-type, a solid-image or stamp (opposed to one which is divisible).

Dia-typosis, an imaging-throughout or completely (-o as to present a lively delineation). Rhet.

Hypo-typosis, (an introduction of rhetorical) images or figures-under (the web or main current of the story).

Volta-type, and Daguerre-type, are formed from the names of the inventors. Type, belong.

Ex-UBERANT, Lat. (uber, fruitful, plentiful, abounding; fr. uber, an udder; fr. Gr. outhar, an udder: fr. Sanc. udhās, an udder); plentiful-(as if fertilized by moisture) out of (the bosom of the earth). Uberous, Udder, belong.

Ex-ULCERATE, Lat. (ulcero, I blister; fr. ulcus, a sore; fr. Gr. helcos: see Helcy); (to cause) a blister or sore-(to break) out. Ulcer, belongs.

-ULE, * Cule, are Eng. diminutives from Lat., formed by inserting u or cu, before the diminutive terminus, la, lum, Eng. le; see Le, Cle, in the following way; (Scut-ulum, a shield; scut-ulum, a scut-ule or little shield: Cor, a heart; cor-culum, or cor-cule, cor-cle, a little heart).

Caps-ule, a little-receiver or box.

Cancer-ule, a little-prison or cell.

Glob-ule, a little-globe.

Ling-ule, a little-tongue.

Neb-ule, a little-cloud.

Nod-ule, a little-knot.

Pend-ule, or u-ium, a little-hanger.

Spor-ule, a little-spore or seed.

Corpus-cule, a little-body.

Oper-cule, a little-cover or shutter.

Tuber-cule, a little-tuber, bunch, or puff.

Cell-ular, (having) little-cells.

Funi-cular, (like) a little-rope.

Caten-ulate, (linked as) a little-chain.

Foss-ulate, (having) a little-dug (trenches). (bent).

Geni-culate, (like) the knee-a little

-ULON, Eng. of Gr. ulon, the gum.

Ep-ulis, (a small tubercle) upon-the gums. (gum boil.

Par-ulis, (a boil) beside-the gum; a

Ep-ULIATIC, Gr. (oule, a wound healed or whole, a scar; fr. oulo, I am whole; fr. oulos, the same as Holos, see also Salus); (promoting the) scarring or skinning over (of sores); healing.

Pen-ULTIMATE, Lat. (ultimus, the last; fr. Ultron, beyond: see List of Prefixes); almost-the last; the last but one: Ante-penultimate, before-the penultimate; the last but two. Ultimate, Uterior, belong.

UM, * UME, * ULT.*

-UMBRA, Lat. (perh. from Sansc. abhra, a cloud; fr. ab, water,); a shadow, a cloud.

Ad-umbrate, (to show or present) to (-by means of) a shadow; to shadow out. (darken.

Ob-umbrate, to over-shadow; to Pen-umbrate, almost-a shadow; a slight shadow.

Sin-umbra, without-shadow. Umbrage, a shadow, darkness, or anger of countenance, Umbrella, belong.

Ad-UNCUOUS, Lat. (uncus, a crook or hook; fr. Gr. agcos, ancos, a bend, a hollow; whence Angulus: wh. see; and akin to aggos, Angos: wh. see); (made) to or after (the fashion of) a hook; hooked, crooked: hence, Aduncity.

In-UNCTION, Lat. (unctio, anointing or anointing; fr. ungo, I uante, as a wound, by anointing; I *ano*int; poss. fr. Unus: wh. see); a (rubbing) in-ointment: hence, An(i.e., in)-oint: Dis-anoint, (to take) apart or away (the effects of being) *ano*inted: Re-anoint, to *ano*int -again. Unguent, Oint, Ointment, belong.

-UNDO, Lat. (fr. unda, a wave; fr. Gr. huo: see Hydor; and akin to Fusus, Humus, prob to Sudor); I rise as a wave, flow, overflow.

Ex-undation, an out or over-flowing. In-undation, a flowing-into (a place); a deluge.

Red-undant, (so copious as to fill and) flow-back or over: hence, Red-und, to come-back, to re-fect, or result.

Ab-ound, to flow-(as copiously as if) from (a wave); (not to trickle, but to) flow-from; Super-abound, to abound-over and above (what is wanted). Undation, Undulate, belong. Water, is akin.

-UNUS, Lat. (Gr. heis, one man; h'n, one thing; from root Hen: wh. see); one.

Tri-une, three-in one. Dis-unity, to part-oneness or union; to scatter.

Re-unite, (to make) one again: to join again.

Ad-union, an adding (so as to form) one (body); a collecting into one: Co-ad-union, an adding-together (to form) one; a union. Union, Unity, One, belong.

-URBS, Lat. (poss. fr. Orbis: wh. see); a city, encircled with the plough to mark the walls.

Sub-urb, (a part of a town lying) under-(the fortress, citadel, or original) city.

In-urbane, not-civil (or like the polished manners of one living in) a city. Urbane, belongs.

-URE. See previous Index.

-URGY, Eng. of Gr. Ergon, Vergon, (fr. ergo, erdo, I do work); a deed, work, duty, art.

Chir-urgy, a working by hand; manual-operation; -Surgery.

Dramat-urgy, the art (of writing) -dramas or acts.

Lit-urgy, the public-duty or service.

Metal-urgy, the art (of separating) -metals (from their ores); hence prob. Metall-urgy, (Fr. G.) the art (of making) -medals or metal (coins).

Thaumaturgy, a wonderful-deed.

The-urgy, the art-of godlike, demonic, or spiritual (influences); mag. c.

Demi-urgic, (performing only) vulgar, or ordinary-handicraft or work.

Energ- (a having the power) of working-within; (a being) imbued with-work or power.

Par-ergy, a work-beside (what is wanted); needless work.

Syn-ergy, (a belief that to produce effect man must determine to) work -with or co-operate (with Divine grace).

Ge-orge, (pertaining to) the working or tilling of the earth or ground; hence Ge-orge. To Urge, Work, perh. Irk, Irkesome, belong.

Eido-URANEUM, Gr. (ourance, heaven; that which is heaved or raised above us; perh. akin to ornumi, I stir up, raise: see Ornis); (an orrery made to show) the form or appearance-of the heaven (and its stars). Uranus, belongs

-URE, Eng. fr. Gr. Oura, the tail.

Acanth-ure, (a fish with) a spine or thorn-(on each side of) the tail; spine-tail.

Alopec-ure, fox-tail; a plant.

Ambly-ure, blunt-tail; a fish.

Anth-ure, a spike or tail-of flowers; as in the pepper-plant.

An-ure, without a tail; a frog. [crab.]

Brachy-ure, a short-tailed (animal) or Cynos-ure, (the star in) the tail-of the dog (or lesser bear); the pole star.

Dasy-ure, hairy-tail; a carnivorous marsupial.

Dolich-ure, a long-tailed (verse); i. e., one having a syllable or two too much.

Macro-ure, (a sort of lobster having) the tail-as long (or longer than the body). [worm.]

Oxy-ure, sharp-tail; a butterfly and Peta-ure, (a sort of kangaroo leaping by means of an) expanded-tail.

Sci-ure, (a squirrel with) tail (so large as to cast a shade).

-URIENT, Eng. termination fr. Lat. urio, expresses desire of what is contained in the root, and is thus formed. (i. do, I eat; e-uno, to eat; e-urio, I desire-to eat; e-urient).

Es-urient, desiring-to eat.

Part-urient, desiring-to bring forth.

Sat-urient, desiring-(to get) enough; wishing to cram. Ururient does not belong.

-US, Lat. adj. terminat. often becomes Ous in Eng. thus, (Dubius, doubtful; Eng. dubi-ous: Vari-us, changeable; vari-ous): occasionally the Eng. Ous appears formed from Lat. Ous, wh. see, as (Tumul-ous, full of -hills; tumul-ose, tumul-ous): comp. also under Ial and Ous.

-USTUM, Lat. to burn. Uro, (akin to Gr. auo, I dry, wither, singe, kindle; and both fr. Sansc. ush, to burn; whence also Aurora); I burn, parch.

Ad-ust, (brought) to a burnt (state); Comb-ust, burnt-altogether, completely, or up; Comb-ustion, In-combustible, not-to be burned up.

Amb-ustion, a burning-about, or on all sides. [Utterious belongs.

Ex-ustion, a burning-out; a parching.

-USUS, Lat. use, exercise, practice, experience, acquaintance. Utor, (poss. fr. Gr. eothia, I have accustomed myself, or, I am wont or accustomed; fr. etho, I am accustomed; whence ethos; see Ethica); I use, I am conversant with, I conor know.

Ab-use, (to employ away) from-(its) use, to use improperly: Dis-abuse, to part or free from-abuse or ill use; to right what was wrong: In-abusively.

Dis-use, (to be) apart or far from -using; (not to use or employ.

Per-use, (to make oneself) thoroughly -acquainted (with); to con-though or over; to scan or read through.

In-use, (to be) in-the use or practice (of); (to be) exercised-in.

In-utile, not -useful. Use, Usury, Utensil, Utility, belong.

-VACO, Lat. I am empty, void, free from.

E-vacuate, to empty-out; (to come) out (and leave)-empty, or worthless.

Soper -vacaneous, empty, void, or worthless-(because) over and above (what is necessary); superfluous.

Vacuate, Vacant, Vacation, belong.

-VADO, Lat. (fr. Gr. bados, a walk, step; fr. baio, I go; fr. hao, I go: see Batos); I go, march, move.

Vas, one who goes for another in a cause, i. e., becomes his surety; a pledge or surety. Uadis, of a bail.

E-vade, to go-out of (the reach of); to escape.

In-vade, to go-into (another's territory or rights with hostile intent).

Per-vade, to go, move, or expand -throughout, i. e., in every direction. Wade, perh. Fade, belong.

-VAGOR, Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. ago, vago: see Agogo); I drive myself about, wander, stray, straggle.

Extra-vagant, straying or going, -outside or beyond, (bounds or moderation). [tarly.]

Soli-vagant, wandering-alone or soli-Noti-vagous, wandering or prowling-by night.

E-vagation, a wandering-out of (doors) or abroad. Vagant, Vagrant, Vague, belong.

-VALEO, Lat. I am strong, healthy, powerful, profitable, of worth.

Ad-d-vail, to add (one's) strength (to something); to add (to) the strength (of something); to assist.

Counter-vail, (to be) powerful against or on the other hand; hence, (to be sufficiently strong to be) powerful or of use-on the other hand or oppositely; i. e., (to be) at least equal in opposed-strength.

Para-vail, (per), (holding) for-profit (alone); sordid, low.

Pre-vail, (to be) strong-before or above (another); (to overcome by being) before-in strength: Im-prevalence (state of) not-prevailing; weakness.

Equi-valent, of equal-worth.

In-valid, not-strong or healthy; of no efficacy.

Dis-value, (to think) apart or far from-(its) worth; to underestimate.

In-valuable, not-(capable of being estimated at its) worth.

Con-valescent, (beginning to be) together (or united) with-health; growing in health. Valid, Valiant, Value, Valetudinary, belong.

-VALIUM, Lat., a wall or rampart, originally composed of a heap of earth dug from a trench, and planted with sharp stakes.

Inter-val, (space) between the rampart (stakes); space or distance -between.

Circum-vallation, a walling-around.

Contra-vallation, a walling-oppositely; an opposed-fortification (built by the enemy). Vallation, Wall, belong.

-VALVA, Lat. (fr. Volva: wh. see); one of two doors which roll, lap, or fold on each other; a folding-door, a valve, a shutting shell; more common in the plural.

Bi-valve, (a mollusk with) two-shells (united by a ligament as the oyster).

Equi-valve, (a bivalve with) shells -equal (in size); In-equivalve.

Multi-valve, (having) many-valves (or calcareous pieces, as barnacle shells).

Uni-valve, (a mollusk with shell) of one-(continuous spiral) roll or fold.

Valve, belongs. Valvula, a plant with layers or folds, is akin.

E-VANESCENT, Lat. (vanesco, I go into nothing, fade, wear off, vanish; fr. vanus, empty, void, vain; findo -out of (sight); impermeable, not enduring, short-lived. Vane, Vanish, prob. Wane, belong.

E-VAPORATE, Lat. (vaporo, I send out vapour; fr. vapor, a vapour or steam; fr. Gr. capnos, smoke, vapour; perh. akin to capuo, capo, I breathe, gasp); (to send) out-vapour. Vapour, belongs.

In-VARIABLE, Lat. (varius, spotted, changeable, different; poss. fr. Gr. ballos, dipped, dappled, spotted; fr. ballo: see Bulos); not-(capable of) change. Vary, belongs.

-VARICO, Lat. (fr. varus, with crooked, bandy, or distorted legs); I straddle, as a fork, I waddle.

Di-varicate, to part or separate-(into) forks or branches.

Pie-varicate, to waddle or dodge (on this side and that from the straight course)-before (one); to wander here and there from the truth.

Vari-cose, having swollen veins, originally in the legs, prob. belong.

Extra-VASATED, Lat. (vas, a property, a vessel; poss. fr. Gr. paomai, I get, acquire; epasmen, I got; perh. akin to paio, pateomai; Pastum); (forced) out of-the-vessels. Vaso, Vessel, Vascular, belong.

See the previous Index.

Digitized by Google

De-VASTATE, Lat. (vastus, I lay waste; fr. vastus, waste, desolate, large); (to bring) from-(culture) to waste or desolation; (to bring) down-(to) desolateness. Vast, Vastation, perh. Waste, belong.

-VEHO, Lat. (prob. fr. Sansc. vah, valia, to carry; and perh. akin to Gr. ocheo, vocheo, I bear, carry; fr. ochos, holding, that which holds: see Erhu); I carry or bear. Vectum, to carry.

Con-vey, to carry-(united) together or in a whole (by being confined in the arms); to transport in the mass or lump; to carry; Con-vey, to convey (with guidance or protection): Re-convey.

In-veigh, to carry or bear (attacks, reproaches, &c.)-against: In-vective.

Conv-ex, with a carrying, raising, or heaving (in the middle); swelling spherically: Con-cavo-convex, convex (on one side and)-with a hollow (on the other): Plano-convex, convex-(with the other side), level.

E-vection, a bearing or tendency (of the moon)-out of (her ordinary path).

Trans-vection, a carrying-across. Vehicle, Vegetation, Vexil, belong. Waggon, Wain, are prob. akin.

Re-VEL, Fr. (veiller, to wake, to watch; fr. Lat. vigilare, to wake, watch; fr. vigil, watchful, briak, strong; fr. vigeo: see Vigorate); (to keep) back (from one's natural rest)-awake: to riot or feast during the night; Re-veille, an awakening -back (from sleep by beat of drum). Vigilant, belongs.

-VELLO: see Vulsus.

-VELO, Lat. (fr. velum, a veil or curtain; fr. vexillum, a vexil or little standard borne by a detachment from a regiment; fr. Veho: wh. see); I veil.

In-velled, (placed) in-a veil; covered, enwrapped.

Re-veal, (to draw) back-the veil; to show: Un-revealed. Veil, belongs.

-VELOPPER,* Fr. (fr. Lat. volvere, to roll; fr. Volvo: wh. see); to roll, fold, or wrap.

De-velop, (to take) the rolls or cover-from; to unroll or uncover gradually; to show more and more clearly. [cover: En-velope.

In-velop, (to place) in-a wrapper or Extra-VENATE, Lat. (vena, a vein; perh. fr. Gr. ina, vina, a sinew, nerve, or vein; accusat. of is: see Via); (forced) outside-the veins. Vein, belongs.

In-VENDIBLE, Lat. (veneo, I move from one to another; I am changed or sold: akin to Venio: wh. see); not-(capable of being) sold. Vend, Venditate, also Wend, Went, belong.

VENIO,* Lat. (akin to veneo: see Vendible); I move, go, come, arrive. Ventum, to come.

Ad-vene, to come-to; to arrive: hence, Ad-vent; Ad-ventitious: Ad-venture, (something which befalls or comes-to) (one), accident; Co-ad-venturer, (one who seeks) adventure, chance, or fortune-with (another); Per-adventure, by-chance: Super-adventient, coming to-over and above. [pose.

Contra-vene, to come against; to oppose. Con-vene, to come (or cause) to come -together; to assemble; Con-vent; Re-convene, to assemble-again; Con-venient, coming-with (the proper time or one's wants); apropos, seasonable, useful: In-convenient; Dis-convenient, apart or far from-convenient. [-vention.

Inter-vene, to come-between; Inter-Pre-vene, to go or come-before; to get -before or in the way of; to stop: Pre-vent.

Super-vene, to come-upon (something as an addition to it): Sur-vene, (Fr.), is the same.

Intro-venient, c. ming-within.

Co-venant, a coming-together; a bond which unites; an agreement: Co-vin, (a fraudulent) agreement or conspiracy. [con-to.

Ad(d)-venue, (a way or road) to come or Re-venue, (the rent which) comes -back (from leased property); re-turn.

Circum-vent, to come-around; to encompass or environ, (with snares); vulg. to get-over or around (a person).

Event, (that which has) come or proceeded-out of (a thing); a result or consequence.

In-vent, to come or light-upon (as treasure, in turning up the earth); to find, to find out or discover.

Ob-vention, (something which does not require seeking, but) comes-upon or before (us); a handy or useful thing, a gain or advantage.

Sub-vention, (something which) comes-under (so as to support). Venture, belongs. To Wend, to move, go, come, change, convert; to hence, Went, belongs to this class and also to Vendible, wh. see.

En-VENOM, Lat. (venenum, medicine, poison); (to put or infuse) poison-into. Venom, Venerate, belong.

-VENTER, Lat. (prob. fr. Gr. venteron, Enteron, wh. see, an intestine; fr. entos, within; fr. en, in; and akin to gento, he enclosed within his hand, he grasped: see Gaster); the intestine, belly, or stomach.

Dis-venterate, to part or separate-the belly or bowels (from the body); to e-venterate.

E-venterate, (to take) out-the belly or bowels. Venter, Ventricle, belong.

-VENTUS, Lat. (Sansk. vata, wind), wind. Vannus, a fan or vane.

E-ventilate, (to separate or bring) out -by wind; to winnow.

Sub-ventaneous, (having) wind-underneath (the surface); filled with nothing but wind. Vent, windage, exposure to air, exposure, Vane, also Wind, belong.

Ad(d)-VER, Lat. (verus, true, confirmed by observation or by looking about; prob. akin to Gr. homo, vorao: see Orama); (to speak) to -the truth, (as to some circumstance); (to give one's declaration) to the truth (in affirming that, &c.). Veracious, Very, Verity, belong.

Re-VERBERATE, Lat. (verbero, I beat, strike; fr. verber, a wand, whip, stripe); to beat or cause to flow-back (as sound, fire, &c.); to echo. Verberate, belongs.

-VERBUM, Lat. (poss. fr. verbero: see Verberate); a cry or exclamation, common to man and other animals, pulsating in or echoing from the throat, and expressive of emotion; an utterance or sentence expressing the same emotion more definitely; the word in a sentence embodying the cry, and therefore alone giving information and forming the completed expression or sentence, all the other words being signs of knowledge already acquired and only introduced to fix the application of this word, viz., the verb; and hence, any word, all words having been originally verbus or used to give present information. Ad-verb, (a word or expression joined) to-a verb.

Di-verb, originally, the wording or speaking-in divisions or turns; i. e., the dialogue of a play opposed to the singing; at present, (a proverb in which) the words-(are) severed or opposed; an antithetical proverb.

Pro-verb, a word (that is common or) -before (all). Verb, belongs.

Re-VERE, Lat. (vereor, I estimate, fear, honour, respect; perh. fr. ve-reor, I greatly-estimate or think: see Ratio); (to look) back (upon with)-fear and honour (in return for certain acts); to re-spect: Ir-reverend, Ir-reverent, not-(showing) reverence. Verecund, belongs.

-VERGO, Lat. (poss. fr. Verto: wh. see); I turn or incline towards; I tend or lie towards.

Con-verge, to incline (so as at last to come)-together.

Di-verge, to tend or incline-apart (from each other). Verge, belongs.

-VERTO,* Lat., I turn. Versus, turned.

Ad-vert, to turn (the mind, speech, &c.)-to; to consider, remark, or hint at; In-alvertent, not-considering; Re-advertency, a considering-again; Anim-advert, to turn -the mind (to), to consider-in mind; Ad-vertise, (to cause persons) to turn-(the mind) to: Ad-verse, turned-to or towards (oppositely); inimical, opposing.

A(b)-vert, to turn-from or away; A-verse, turned-away (as the looks or favourable regard) unfavourable to.

Contro-vert, to turn (a thing)-on the other hand or opposite way; to rebut, throw back, or overturn a proposition: Contro-very, (a general) rebutting of arguments; contention; In-controvertible; Contra-version, a turn-the opposite way.

Con-vert, to-turn (a thing to a similarity or junction)-with (something else); to change; Re-convert, to change or turn-back; Con-verse, to turn-together; to be-together; to be united or familiar; to interchange thoughts or opinions familiarly with words; In-conversible.

Di-vert, to turn (the mind, &c.)-apart or aside (from present objects or study); to amuse; Di-vers, turned-apart, severed, several: Di-voce, to turn-apart or away.

E-vert, to turn-out, (up, and over, as the clouds in ploughing); hence to over-turn, to destroy; E-version.

Inter-vert, to turn (a thing from its natural or proper course by stepping in)-between.

Intra-vert, to turn-within or inwards. In-vert, to turn (as a shoot growing out of the seed)-in or inwards; i. e., against the former or natural order; to make the first last, or the top the bottom; In-verse.

Ob-vert, to turn or place-opposite (to one, for inspection); Ob-verse, a front or side of a thing so turned; the front.

Per-vert, to turn-thoroughly (from its natural or proper course); Per-verse, turned, cross grained, in temper or disposition.

Re-vert, to turn-back (to a former point or way); Re-verse, (the same; In-reversible, not-(to be) reversed. [overthrow.]

Sub-vert, to turn (the top)-under; to Trans-verse, turned or placed-across; Tra-verse, to turn or go-across; to cross.

Uni-verse, (a collection in which all are) turned or bent-(to) one (point or object); hence, any system, a collection, the whole creation, the solar system, the world, &c.: Uni-versal, (with) one-turn or accord; all together, in a mass or whole.

Extra-version, a turning-outside or out.

Peri-verse, to turn-the back; to rat, to change about, to shuffle.

Mal-versation, a turning-to bad or wrong (use money passing through one's hands); embezzlement, fraudulent, or bad conduct.

Anniversary, (any period which re) turns (at the expiration-) of a year.

Verse, a line or furrow turned up with a style or pen on a waxed tablet, Versed, Version, Versatile, Vertical, belonging to the head or pole on which a thing turns, Vertebrae, bending or turning bones, Vertiginous, Vortex, belong.

-VES. See previous Index.

In-VESTIGATE, Lat. (vestigio, I trace, track; fr. vestigium, a trace or track; akin to Gr. steicho: see Stichus); (to search out by following) upon-the tracks or footmarks; to hunt out. Vestige, belongs.

VESTIO,* Lat. (fr. vestis, a garment; fr. Gr. esthes, dress, clothing; fr. hennuo, heo, I put on, clothe myself; I clothe, cover).

Circum-vest, to clothe-around.

De-vest, to part or separate from-the clothes; to strip.

In-vest, (to place) in-clothes; to clothe with the robe of office; to cover or secure from the weather, chance, or anything external: Re-invest, to invest-again. [entirely].

Re-vest, to clothe-again, (partially or Tra-vesty, (to pass a thing) across -(from one) cover or appearance (to another); (to dress up) in clothes -cross or contrary (to the ordinary or proper ones); to burlesque. Vest, Vestry, belong.

In-VETERATE, Lat. (veteris, of old; fr. vetus, old; perh. fr. Gr. Etios: wh. see); imbued with-old (age); long and firmly established. Veteran, belongs.

-VEX, see* also Vehus.

-VIA, Lat., a way, passage.

De-viate, (to go) from-the way; Devious.

Ob-viate, (to be) before-(one's) way or path; to meet, to stop, to prevent; Ob-vious, (seen at once, as a thing lying) before or in-the way.

Bi-vious, (having) two-ways or paths.

In-vious, (having) no-way.

Per-vious, (having) a way-through; passable: Im-pervious, not-passable.

Pre-vious, beforehand-(on) the road or way; going before, being before.

Quadri-vial, (having) four-ways, (as a place where four roads meet); Quadri-vium, a four-way (place or collection); four harmonizing pursuits.

Tri-vial, (having) three-ways (as a place, &c.); hence, belonging to a place of common resort; common, trite, of little value: Tri-vium, a three-way (place or collection); three harmonizing pursuits.

Con-VICINITY, Lat. (vicinus, near, neighbouring; fr. vicus, a street or village; fr. Gr. oicos, voices, a house; fr. Sansc. vic, to enter: see Ecos); (a being) together or common-in neighborhood; nearness-together. Vicine, Wich, Wick, as in Greenwich, belong.

Di-VIDE, Lat. (viduo, iduo, I separate or make my own; perh. fr. Gr. idios, own, private, separate); to separate-apart; Sub-divide, to divide-(into) under or smaller (portions): De (di)-vise, to divide (by will); to bequeath. Vidual, poss. Widow, one bereft, belong.

-VIDEO,* Lat. (fr. Gr. eido, veldo; see Oid); I see or look. Visus, seen.

Pro-vide, to fore-see; to consider (and make ready for)-beforehand; Pro-vident, pro-viving (for the future), contracted into Prudent: Im-provident, not-provident; Pro-vender, (food) provided; Pur-vey, to provide (food).

E-vident, (standing) out-(so as to be) seen; distinct, clear; In-evident, not-clear; Counter-evidence, (matter adduced to) clear up (a case) -contrary to or against (former evidence).

In-vidious, looking-upon (covetously); grudging, malicious: En-vy, to look-upon (covetously).

Sur-vey, to look-over; to examine; Re-survey, to survey-again: Super-vey, to look-over; to survey.

Ad-vise, (to give) sight or knowledge -to (a person); to counsel or inform: Ad-vice.

De-vise, (to contrive or draw as a conclusion) from-the (mutual or opposed) look, aspect, converse or collection (of thoughts); (to produce) from-a visit (of ideas).

Re-vise, to look or view-again (so as to detect every peculiarity or error); to examine-again: Re-visit, (to come) to see-again.

In-visit, not-to be seen.

Pre-vision, a seeing beforehand.

Inter-vise, a view or visit-between (persons). Visage, Visible, Visit, Visor, Vizard, perh. Vitreous, Vitriol, belong. Wit, Wot, are akin.

In-VIGORATE, Lat. (vigor, power, strength; fr. vigeo, I am strong, flourish, grow; perh. fr. vi-ago, I act-with force: see Via, and Agoge); to imbue with-strength. Vigour, Vegetable, a growing plant, belong.

-VINCO,* Lat. (poss. fr. Gr. nicao, I conquer; fr. nice, conquest); I conquer. Victus, conquered.

Con-vince, to conquer-with, or by means of (weapons, arguments, &c.); (to make one acknowledge himself) conquered-with, &c.; In-convincible, not-(to be made to) acknowledge, &c.; Con-vict, to conquer (in a trial); to refute and prove an adversary guilty.

E-vince, (to drive) out-by conquest; to drive out, to put or hold-out; to ex-hibit, to show; E-vict, to drive-out (from legal possession).

Pro-vince, (a tract of land obtained) for or (in return) for-conquest; or (lying) conquered-before (one): Com-provincial, together (as to, or having) the same-province; Extra-provincial, without or out-of-the province.

In-vincible, not-to be conquered. Vincible, Victor, Victim, slain after victory, Vanquish, belong.

-VINDICO, Lat. (perh. fr. vim-dico, I declare or pronounce violence; see Vis and Dictus); I punish, defend, right.

A-venge, (to declare) punishment-to (a person for); (to bring) right-to; to right.

Re-venge, (to return or give) back -violence, injury, or punishment. Venge, Vindicate, belong.

Sulpho-VINIC, Lat. (vinum, wine; fr. Gr. oinos, vines, wine); (produced by the action of) sulphuric (acid upon spirits of)-wine: Wine, prob. Vine, belong.

-VIR, Lat. (akin to Sansc. vira, a man; virya, fortitude, bravery; perh. also to Gr. aner, a man: see Andros; to heros, a hero: see Heredis; to Ares and arma: see Mus); a man. Virtus, manhood, bravery, virtue.

Decem-vir, (one of) ten-men: Quin-decem-vir, (one of) fifteen-men.

Daum-vir, (one of) two-men.

Trium-vir, one of three-men.

In-virility, (a having) no-manhood; effeminacy. Virile, Virtue, Worth, belong.

Re-VIRESCENT, Lat. (vireo, I am green; akin to Gr. chloë, the first green shoot of plants; and Chloros: wh. see; [vireo, hircio, hileo, 'hleo, chloë, chloë; the Sansc. root being haril]; (growing) green-again. Vir-ent, Viriant, Vert, belong.

En-VIRON, Fr. (vironner, vire, to turn; perh. fr. Lat. gyrate, to turn; fr. gyrus, a circle: see Gyration); (to place) in-a turn or circle; to surround. Veer, belongs.

-VIS, Lat. (fr. Gr. is, vis, strength, force, nerve; prob. akin to Vino and to Bios: wh. see); force, strength. Violo, I break by force, transgress.

In-violate, not-broken (as a law), Violent, Violable; also Virulent, belong.

-VISCERA, Lat., the bowels. Viscus, a bowel.

E-viscerate, (to take) the bowels-out.

In-viscerate, (to send down) into-the bowels. Visceral, belongs.

In-VISCATE, Lat. (viscus, misletoe or birdlime prepared from it; prob. fr. Gr. ixos, misletoe, birdlime; perh. fr. icho, I hold, a form of Echo: wh. see); (to cover) in-birdlime or glutinous matter. Viscid, belongs.

E-VITE, Lat. (vito, I shun); (to move) out of or from-(so as) to shun: In-evitable, not-to be shunned.

-VIVO,* Lat. (fr. Gr. bioo, I live; fr. Bios: wh. see; and perh. akin to zoo: see Zoe); I live. Vita, life.

Re-vive, (to come or make to come) to life-again.

Sur-vive, to live-above (the time allotted to another); Super-vive, is the same. [feasting-together.]

Con-vivial, living, i. e., feeding on

-VOCO

Re-victual, (to furnish) again (with food, i. e., the means of) living. Vivid, Victual, Viand, Vital, Vitular, belong.

-VOCO,* Lat. (akin to Gr. anchele, cauche, a boasting or loud speaking; and euchomai, I pray, beseech; I call. Vocatus, called. Vox (Sansc. vachas, voice), voice.

Con-voke, to call or summon together: Con-vocation.

E-voke, to call out or up.

In-voke, to call upon (by prayer); to summon by prayer: In-vocation.

Pro-voke, to call forth or forwards (to battle or combat); to rouse, excite, enrage: Pro-vocation.

Re-voke, to call back (something given or permitted): Re-vocation; Ir-revocable, not-revocable.

A(d)-vouch, to call or declare to (the truth, &c. of); to add-(one's) voice or declaration (to); Dis-avouch, to be apart or far from avouching: Ad-vocate, (one) called to (the assistance of a party in a trial).

Equi-vocate, (to give one's) voice alike (on both sides); to speak ambiguously, and hence, deceitfully.

A(b)-vocation, (that which) calls (one)-from or away from (home or repose); one's calling; often shortened into Vocation.

De-vocation, a calling from or away.

Uni-vocal, (having only) one-voice or meaning.

Semi vowel, (an imperfect or half-voiced (or propulsion of) voice. Voice, Vocal, Vocation, Vouch, Vowel, belong.

-VOLO, Lat. (from Gr. boulomai, boulomai, I will, wish; and perh. akin to Gr. eldomai, velldomai, I wish, long for; I will, or wish.

Bene-volent, well-wishing; doing kindness.

Male-volent, ill-wishing.

In-voluntary, not-(with one's) will.

Voluntary, Volition, Voluptuous, Velleity, belong. Will is prob. akin

-VOLVO,* Lat. (prob. akin to Gr. eiluo, heiluo; see Elytrun; prob. also to oulos, Holos; wh. see, whole, in a mass; and to bollos, a bulb or root with folds); I roll. Volutus, rolled.

Circum-volve, to roll-around; Circum-volution.

Con-volve, to roll-together; Con-volution, a rolling-together; Con-volulus, bindweed, a plant.

De-volve, to roll or fall-down (upon).

E-volve, to roll-out; to unfold; E-volution.

Inter-volve, to roll or mix-between or in-volve, to roll-in (so as to place in the middle of the folds); (to ev-tangle) in-the rolls or folds; I ev-olution, (act of) in-volving; (I ate or being) in-volved; Dis-*inv*olve, to part or free from involut.

Re-volve, to roll-back; to roll (round until a point, for instance at the top, comes)-back (to its original position, or to the top); to turn over; to turn over (in mind); Re-volution, an overturning of things; Ir-revoluble, not-(capable of being) revolved or turned over. Volutib-, Volume, Volute, Vault, belong. Waltz is prob. akin.

VOMIO,* Lat. (akin to Gr. emeo, verneo, I vomit; and both fr. Sansc. vam, to vomit, see Emetic); I vomit, throw up.

-WARD

E-vomit, to throw or omit-out. Re-vomit, to vomit-back. Vomit, belongs.

-VORO,* Lat. (perh. akin to Gr. bora, food; and brosco, bilibrosco, I eat, consume; whence brosy, an eating, corrosion, rust; see Brosy); I consume, eat greedily or feed on.

Carni-vorous, flesh-eating.

Formici-vorous, ant-eating.

Gramini-vorous, grass-eating.

Grani-vorous, feeding on-grains.

Herbi-vorous, feeding on-herbs.

Muci-vorous, feeding on-slime or animal and vegetable juices.

Omnivorous, feeding on-all things.

Pisci-vorous, fish-eating.

Planti-vorous, plant-eating.

Pupivorous, feeding (parasitically) on-the nymphs (of butterflies). Voracious, belongs.

-VOVED, Lat. (perh. akin to Gr. boao, I cry aloud, shout, call on one; whence Lat. boo, I bellow; see Bantion); I declare loudly, protest, vow, promise. Votum, a vow, or wish.

A(d)-vow, (to promise or declare) to -(as by) a vow; to declare strongly, affirm, confess, own to; Dis-avow, (to declare oneself) apart or far from-(having) avowed; to deny a (former) confession; to disown.

Counter-vote, a promise or pledge (of support) opposed (to another vote).

De-vote, (to cut as one's self) from or away from-(all objects but one by) a vow; to dedicate (to one object), particularly a religious one; In-devote, not-dedicated.

Co-vet, (to fix) the wishes-together or to one point; (to desire with all one's) wishes-together; to wish inordinately for. Vote, Votary, Vow, belong.

-VULGO, Lat. (fr. vulgus, the common people; perh. fr. vir, ochlos, a throng of people, mob, riot, upturning; perh. akin to ochleuo, mochleuo, I move by a lever; fr. mochlos; see Mochleum); I make common, publish, noise abroad.

Di-vulge, to part or scatter-abroad or (among the) common people; to publish.

Pro-mulge, (perh. for vulge), (to put) forward-(among) the public: Vulgar, belongs. Folk is perh. akin.

In-VULNERABLE, Lat. (vulnere, I wound; fr. vulnus, a wound); not to be wounded. Vulnerary, belongs.

-VULSUM, Lat. to pull, pluck. Villo (akin to Gr. tillo, I pluck, pull, see Ptilio); I tear, rend, draw, pull.

Con-vulse, to draw or pluck-together; to contract as a sinew in cramp.

A(b)-vulsion, a tearing or rending -from or away. A-vel, to rend-away.

Di-vulsion, a tearing-apart; Di-vel, to tear-apart.

E-vulsion, a drawing or plucking-out

Re-vulsion, a tearing or drawing -back; particularly of humours from one part of the body to another. Velliciate, belongs. Villous, Titillate, prob. Tickle, are akin.

-WARD. See previous Index.

-WARD, Eng. (the same word as guard; see Guard; and fr. Sax, ward, a watch, vigilance; perh. fr. ware, heed, caution; akin to Gr. vorao, horao; see Ver and Drama); watch, a keeping, or defending.

A-ward, perh. (to give a disputed

* See the previous Index.

-ZONAL

thing) to-(him who is to) keep or have (it).

Re-ward, to keep (the eyes turned) -back (upon a person); to keep in view; to remember kindly by the gift of money; (to give money, &c. to a person) to keep-in return for (services). Ward, belongs.

-WARK, WORK,* also see Urgy.

-WARRA, Hindoo, house, habitation mansion, palace, as in Bans-warra, Sind-warra.

-WEALD, Wold,* WEEN.*

-WICH,* Wick; see Vicinity.

-WISE,* see also Guise. WORT,

WORTH,* see also Urr. WRIGHT,

Antho-XANTH, Gr. (xanthos, yellow, as if from burning; akin to xanthos, tawny, of the colour of a scab; prob. fr. xaino, xuo, xeo, I scrape, shave, plane; see Sculp); yellow-flower; a plant; also called Vernal-grass. Xanthic, belongs.

XENOS, Gr. (perh. fr. Ec, Ex; see List of Prefixes); one who is from without; a stranger or guest.

Pro-xene, a guest or friend-before or in the eyes of (the public); a public friend; also a native of a foreign state appointed as consul, and esteemed as a public friend to the appointees.

Pyro-xene, (augite, supposed to have been) a stranger to fire; i. e., not to have been formed by it.

XYLON, Eng. of Gr. Xylon, (prob. fr. xeo, xuo; see Xanth); wood, cut and ready for use.

Citharo-xyl, guitar or fiddle-wood; xyl, *Erythro-*xyl, red-wood; a dyeing plant.

Xantho-xyl, yellow-wood; a plant.

Pyro-xylic, (obtained from) wood -(subjected to) fire.

-Y. See previous Index.

Nan-YANG, Chinese, South-sea or light.

Meth-YLENE, Gr. (hule, wood, matter; prob. akin to Xylon); (spirit or) wine-of wood; a liquid obtained in burning wood. Sylvan is akin.

Apo-ZEM, Gr. (zeo, I seethe, boil); (that which comes) from-the boiling; a decoction.

-ZOE, Gr. (fr. zao, I live; fr. Sansc, jiv, to live); a living life. Zoon, a living being, an animal.

A-zote, (a gas which) deprives-of-life. Hylo-zoism, (doctrine that) matter -lives, (in the shape of a cross.

Diplo-zoon, double-animal; a worm

Ento-zoon, an animal or worm-(in-festing) the interior (of the body).

Epi-zoon, an animal (found)-upon

(fishes).

Oo-zoon, an animal (whose organization resembles the simple condition of)-the egg (of birds).

Phyto-zoon, a plant (like -animal; applied to sections of the class zoophyte.

Poly-zoon, a many or compound Proto-zoon, an animal-(which has) the first (or simplest) organization).

Oma-ZOME, Gr. (zomos, broth; prob. fr. zeo; see Zm); the extract of muscular fibre which gives the peculiar odour-to broth.

-ZON. See previous Index.

Poly-ZONAL, Gr. (zone, a belt, girdle; fr. zannumi, I gird; akin to Zeugnumi: see Zygon; and Lat. cingo, I surround: see Cinctus; (a burning glass made of pieces placed in the form of) many-rings or bells.

-ZYGON

ZYGON, Eng. of Gr. Zygon (whence zeugnuo, I join; fr. root zug: Sansc. yuj, to yoke; see lunctus, Junctus); a joiner or yoke.

-ZYGON

A-zygous, unjoined; also without
 -(a fellow or) yoke (fellow).
Dia-zeuxis, a dividing from-the yoke or union; separation.
Epi-zeuxis, a joining-(some word already uttered; upon or in addition (to give greater force); repetition.
Sy-zygy, (the point where the plane of era arbut intersects or is) joined

A-ZYME

 -with or together with (that of another passing angularly through it); a conjunction or union.
A-ZYME, Gr. (zume, heaven, that which ferments; prob. fr. zeo: see Zame); (the feast of) un-leavened (bread).

The inspector of the foregoing Index will not, with a few exceptions, find any words belonging to Saxon roots inserted, because while it would have encroached too much on the space, it would only have been explaining that part of our language most familiar to us. Nor will he find words of classical origin, whose derivation and therefore component parts are too doubtful to permit their arrangement in an Index of Terminations.

In searching for a word, perhaps some difficulty may be experienced at first; it is hoped, however, that a little practice and a slight knowledge of the prefixes will surmount it. Perhaps the following method, although by no means certain, will best discover a word required. Suppose the word to be Abominare. On looking in the Dictionary it will be found to stand between Abolish and Aborigines. The three words have then the letters abo in common. The list of prefixes, however, marks ab as a prefix, and probably therefore o belongs to the termination in those three words. The termination to be looked for is then ominate, which will be found under omae.

ABBREVIATIONS USED IN THE FOREGOING INDEX.

adj.	adjective	Fr.	French	Min.	Mineralogy
Anat.	Anatomy	Geog.	Geography	Mus.	Music
Ant.	Ancient & Antiquities	Geom.	Geometry	Myth.	Mythology
Arab.	Arabic	Gram.	Grammar	Norm.	Norman
Arch.	Architecture	Gr. G.	Greek	Orn.	Ornithology
Ast.	Astronomy	G. L.	a word with Greek	Opt.	Optics
Bibl.	Biblical subjects		prefix and Latin	Paint.	Painting
Bot.	Botany	Hist.	History	perh.	perhaps
Chem.	Chemistry	Hyd.	Hydrostatics [suffix	Pers.	Persian
comp.	compare or see, denotes an etymological relationship	Ich.	Ichthyology	Pol.	Political subjects compd.	compound	Lat. L.	Latin	poss.	possibly
Conch.	Conchology	L. G.	a word with Latin	prob.	probably
Con.	Customs		prefix and Greek	Rhet.	Rhetoric
Cust.	Ecclesiastical subjects	Lit.	Literature	Sansc.	Sanscrit
Ecc.	English	Mal.	Malacology	Sax.	Anglo-Saxon
Eng.	Entomology	Math.	Mathematics	sub. a.	substantive
Entom.	from	Mech.	Mechanics	Surg.	Surgery
Ent.		Med.	Medicine	termin.	termination
Fr.		metath.	metathesis	Theol.	Theology
		Mil.	Military subjects	wh.	which
				Zool.	Zoology

CURAVIT LEOPOLD SMARLT.

CRITICAL PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

OF THE

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

* When a word investigated belongs to a class, attention should be paid, not merely to the word itself, but to those associated with it: thus, a clearer notion of its various shades of meaning will be obtained, and the consistency or inconsistency of its current pronunciation better understood.

Of the words which, for these purposes, are classed together, it must not be deemed that the leading word is always the parent of the rest, but that, for whatever purpose of convenience or utility, it has been chosen to indicate the class.

Among the subjected words, a less near relationship, or some change in meaning or principle of pronunciation, is signified by the small capitals.

The pronunciation of the subjected words is seldom marked at full, and most commonly not at all, the syllabication, the accents, the letters in italic, and the figures referring to the Principles, aided by a comparison with the leading word, being deemed quite sufficient. The letters in italic in these subjected words are,

1. Those which, single or combined, are sounded irregularly, that is, otherwise than as indicated in the schemes; q and x, which are not in the schemes at all; and c and g, when separated in the syllabication from the e or i, which gives them their soft sounds, as in lac'er-ate, trag'-ic

2. a and o, when sounded ā, ā, and ō; a, e, and o, when sounded as in the last syllables of dollar, letter, sailor, (in each of which the last syllable is equivalent, or nearly equivalent to ur;) and th, when sounded as in thin.

3. Silent letters, if idle as well as silent; but not such significant silent letters as in the scheme are printed q, t, o, u, y, w, h; nor e as in native, hostile, where the irregularity should be conceived to be the short sound of the i, rather than the superfluity of the e.

4. Letters which are not decidedly irregular in sound, but become so in easy, fluent, speech, being such as fall into the sound of y consonant, or of sh, zh, ch, or j. And note, that when the meaning of the italics is not explained by what appears at the place, (see, for instance, Ab-bre'-vi-a-ture,) the explanation is given in the Principles, as referred to by the figures. Note also, that if the reference 147 occurs, and the letters liable to the irregular sound are not in italic, the meaning is, that the irregularity in such instance is a colloquialism merely, and not a propriety.

In a word having more than one accent, the principal accent is denoted by the double accentual mark (//). See 85.

ABA

A, the first letter in the alphabet. An article set before nouns of the singular number, in which capacity it often takes the letter s after it for the sake of euphony: see the word As. A is sometimes a noun, as, a great A; it is sometimes placed before a participle, as, gone A hunting, come A begging; it has a signification denoting proportion, as, the landlord asks a hundred A year.

A is always named ā, but is sounded ā whenever it is an unaccented word or syllable in a purely English phrase: see Principles 24, 176. Its sounds with other letters are numerous. See the vowel scheme, and the numbers corresponding to the sounds of a in the Principles: see also 97, 98, 99, 111, 112.

A-, initial, in words originally Greek, is often a prefix of privative meaning, as in A-galaxy, A-scii; in which use, as well as when an article, it takes s between it and a following vowel, as in An-archy. In words of Saxon origin, the prefix A is a mere syllabic augment, as in A-bare, A-dry, &c. for Bare, Dry, &c.

AB-, a prefix of Latin origin which enters into the composition of many of the following words; as Ab-actor, &c. It signifies from.

ABACK=ā-bäck', ad. Backwards. [A sea term.]

ABACOT=*ā*b'-d-côt, s. A royal cap anciently used.

ABA

ABACTOR=ā-bāc'-tor, 38: s. One who steals cattle in herds.

ABACUS=*ā*b'-d-cūs, s. A counting table; the uppermost member of a column.

Ab'-a-cist. (-sist, 59) s. An accountant.

ABAFT=ā-bāft', ad. Towards the stern of the ship.

ABAISANCE=ā-bā'-sānce, 152: s. Obeisance.

To ABALIENATE, ā-bāle'-yēn-āte, 146: v. a.

To estrange; to transfer property from any one.

A-ba'-lien-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of estranging.

To ABANDON=ā-bān'-dōn, 18: v. a. To give up, resign or quit; to desert, to forsake.

A-ban'-doned, (-dūnd, 114) part. a. Given up, forsaken; corrupted in the highest degree.

A-ban'-don-er, 36: s. A forsaker.

A-ban'-don-ment, s. The act of abandoning.

ABANNITION, *ā*b'-ān-ish'-ūn, 89: s. A banishment for one or two years for manslaughter.

To ABARE=ā-bāre', v. a. To make bare. [Obs.]

ABARTICULATION, *ā*b' ar-tic'-ū-lā'-shūn, 85, 89: s. In anatomy, that species of articulation that has manifest motion.

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp'mān: ed-pā': lāx: gōd: j'ō, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

The sign u is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-un, s. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166: thēn, 166.

B

To ABASE=ā-bās'=ā-bāc', 152: v. a. To cast down, to depress, to bring low.

A-base'-ment, s. The state of being brought low, depression.

A-base'(-hāst, 114, 143) part. a. Lowered; in heraldry, it is used of the wings of eagles, when the tops are downwards, or when shut; also in the general sense of lowered or debased.

To ABASH=ā-bāsh', v. a. To make ashamed.

A-bash'-ment, s. The state of being ashamed.

To ABATE=ā-bāt', v. a. and n. To lessen, to diminish; in law, to defeat, to overthrow, to put an end to, to quash; the original sense is, to throw down:—neu. To grow less.

A-bate'-ment, s. The act or state of abating; the sum or quantity taken away by the act of abating; in law the act of the abator, or the affection of the thing abated, as, abatement of the writ; a plea in abatement, is a plea that the suit of the plaintiff may cease for the time being; in heraldry, a mark by which the dignity of a coat of arms is abased; in commerce, a discount or allowance in the price.

A-ba'-ter, 36: s. One who abates.

A-ba'-tur, 38: s. One who intrudes himself into a freehold, between the last possessor and the next heir.

A-BAT-TIS, (ā-bāt-tē', [Fr.] 170) s. Trees cut down for a military defence.

A-bat-tur, (twā', 170) s. A general slaughter-house for cattle.

AB-AT-TUNE, 81: s. In records, any thing diminished.

Ab-a-ture, (tū', 147) s. Sprigs of grass thrown down by a stag in passing by.

ABB=āb, 155: s. The yarn on a weaver's warp.

ABBA=āb'-bā, s. A Syriac word for father.

Ab-bē', (āb'-bāy, [Fr.] 170) s. An abbot: more commonly an ecclesiastic having no assigned duty or dignity.

Ab'-BEY, (āb'-bēy, s.) A monastery of religious persons, whether men or women; the church attached, or that was attached to an abbey.

Ab'-bot, 18: s. The chief of an abbey.

Ab'-bot-ship, s. The state of being an abbot.

Ab'-bess, s. The chief of a nunnery.

Ab'-ba-cy, (bā-cēy, 98, 105) s. The rights and possessions of an abbot.

Ab-ba'-tiol, (bā'-sh' āl, 90) a. Relating to an abbey.

To ABBREVIATE, āb-brē'-vē-āte, 105, 146: v. a. To shorten, to cut short.

Ab-brē'-vi-ate, v. n. An abridgement.

Ab-brē'-vi-a-tor, 38: s. One who abridges.

Ab-brē'-vi-a-tor-y, (d-tōr-ēy, 98, 129, 105) a. That abbreviates or shortens.

Ab-brē'-vi-a-ture, (d-tūre, 147) a. A mark used for shortening; an abridgement.

Ab-brē'-vi-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of shortening; a contraction.

To ABDICATE, āb-dē-cāte, 105: v. a. and n. To give up right, to resign; to deprive of right:—neu. To resign.

Ab'-di-ca'-tive, (cā-tiv, 85, 105) a. That causes or implies an abdication.

Ab'-di-cant, a. and s. Abdicating:—s. The person abdicating.

Ab'-di-ca'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of abdicating; resignation.

ABDITIVE, āb-dē-tiv, 105: a. Having the quality of hiding.

Ab'-di-tor-y, 129, 105: s. A place to hide goods in.

ABDOMEN=āb-dō'-mēn, 86: s. The lower venter or belly.

Ab-dom'-i-nal, (dōm'-ē-nāl, 92, 105) See also in Supp.

Ab-dom'-i-nous, (ā-nūs, 120) } a. Relating to the abdomen.

To ABDUCE=āb-dūc', v. a. To draw to a different part, to withdraw one part from another.

Ab-du'-cent, a. Having the property of drawing back or away; muscles abducent are such as serve to open or pull back divers parts of the body.

Ab-duc'-tion, (dūc'-shūn, 89) s. A leading away; a conclusion from premises of which the minor is doubtful; the felonious carrying off a man's daughter, son, or wife, &c.

Ab-duc'-tor, 38: s. He who leads away; he who is guilty of abduction; in anatomy, a muscle that draws back.

ABERANCE, ā-bārd'-ānce, 100: s. In law, behaviour.

ABECEDARIAN, ā'-bē-cē dār'-ē-ān, 85, 41, 105: s. A teacher of the alphabet, or first rudiments of learning.

ABED=ā-bēd', ad. In bed.

ABERRANT=āb-ēr'-rānt, 129: a. Wandering from the way.

Ab-er'-rance, } s. A deviation; an error.

Ab-er'-ran-cy, 105: } s. A deviation; an error.

Ab-er'-ring, 72: part. Going astray.

Ab'-er-ra'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of deviating: the amount of such deviation.

To ABERUNCATE, āb'-ē-rūng'-cāte, 85, 158: v. a. To pull up by the roots.

To ABET=ā-bēt', v. a. To push forward another to support him in his designs by connivance, encouragement, or help.

Ab-et'-ment, s. The act of abetting.

Ab-et'-tor, 36: } s. He that abets.

Ab-et'-tor, 38: } s. He that abets.

ABEYANCE, ā-bāy'-ānce, 100: s. Expectance, by law, of a possessor, when possession for the present is in no man.

AGGREGATION, āb'-grē-gā'-shūn, 85, 89: s. A separation from the flock.

To ABHOR=āb-hor', 37: v. a. To hate with acrimony, to loathe.

Ab-hor'-rent, (hōr'-rēnt, 129) a. Struck with abhorrence; contrary to, foreign, inconsistent with.

Ab-hor'-rent-ly, 105: ad. In an abhorrent manner.

Ab-hor'-rence, } s. The act of abhorring;

Ab-hor'-ren-cy, 105: } s. detestation.

Ab-hor'-rer, s. A hater, a detester.

To ABIDE=ā-bide', } v. n. and a. To stay in a

*ABODE=ā-bōd', } place, to dwell; to remain*

*ABODE=ā-bōd', } without decay; to continue* without offence: to bear or support the consequences, with by, as I will abide by it:—act. To wait for; to support or endure; to bear without aversion.

Ab'-iding, 72: part. a. and s. Continuing:—s. A continuance.

Ab'-ider, 36: s. One who abides.

ABILITY.—See under Abile.

ABINTESTATE=āb'-in-tēs'-tātē, 85: s. Its that inherits from one that did not make a will.

ABJECT=āb'-ject, a. and s. Mean, worthless, contemptible:—s. A man without hope.

Ab'-ject-ly, 105: ad. In an abject manner

Ab'-ject-ness, s. Servility, meanness.

To ABJECT, 81: v. a. To throw or cast away, or down.

Ab-ject'-ed, part. a. Cast down.

Ab-ject'-ed-ness, s. The state of being cast down: the state of an object.

Ab-ject'-tion, 89: s. Meanness of mind; the state of being cast away; the act of humbling.

ABJUDICATED, āb-jū'-dē-cā-tēd, 109, 105: part. Given by judgement from one to another.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: jū, i. e. jew, 55: a. i. &c. mure, 171.

To ABJUGATE, äb'-joo-gät, 109: v. a. To unyoke.

To ABJURE, äb-j'oor', 109, 51: v. a. To cast off upon oath; to swear not to do something; to retract or recant upon oath; to quit the country and go into banishment from the oath which felons swore who had taken sanctuary.

Ab'-ju-ra'-tion, 85, 52, 89: s. The act of abjuring; the oath taken to that end.

To ABLACTATE=äb-läc'-tät, v. a. To wean from the breast.

Ab'-lac-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. A weaning; one of the methods of grafting.

ABLAQUEATION, äb-läck'-wé-ä'-shün, 85, 76, 145, 89: s. The practice of opening the ground about the roots of trees.

ABLATION, äb-lä'-shün, 89: s. A taking away.

Ab'-la-tive, (-lä-tiv, 93, 105) a. That takes away; the term applied to the case in grammar whose usual sign is from.

ABLE, ä'-bl, 101: a. Having strong faculties, or great strength or knowledge, riches, or any other power of mind, body, or fortune; having power sufficient.

Ab'-ble-ness, s. Power, generally of body.

Ab'-ble-bod-ied, (-id, 114) a. Strong of body.

Ab'-bly, 105: ad. With ability.

Ab'-süt'-i-r-r, (ä-bil'-ä-téy, 81) s. The power to do anything; capacity, qualification; the plural abilities, is a word frequently used for the powers of the mind.

ABLEPSY, äb-lép-séy, 105: s. Want of sight.

To ABLEGATE=äb'-lé-gät, v. a. To send abroad on some legation.

Ab'-le-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. A legation from home.

To ABLIGATE, äb'-lé-gät, 105: v. a. To tie up from.

Ab'-li-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. A tying up from.

ABLIGURITION, äb-lig'-h-rish'-ün, 85, 89, 95: s. Prodigious expense in food.

ABLUENT, äb-l'oo-ént, 109: a. Cleansing.

Ab-lu'-tion, 89: s. The act of cleansing; the water used; a purification.

To ABNEGATE=äb'-né-gät, v. a. To deny.

Ab'-ne-ga'-tor, 85, 38: s. One who denies.

Ab'-ne-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. Denial, renunciation.

ARNODATION, äb-nö-dä'-shün, 85, 89: s. The act or practice of cutting knots, as from trees.

ABNORMITY, äb-nor'-mé-téy, 37, 105: s. A departure from rule; deformity.

Ab-nor'-mous, 120: a. Irregular.

ABOARD=ä-bö-rä', 133: ad. In a ship.

ABODE=ä-böde', s. Habitation, dwelling, place of residence; stay, continuation in a place; also, the pret. and part. of To Abide.

To ABODE=ä-böde', v. a. To bode. [Obs.]

Ab-ode'-ment, s. An ominous anticipation.

ABOLETE=äb'-ö-léte, a. Out of use. [Obs.]

To ABOLISH=ä-böl'-ish, v. a. To annul, to put an end to, to destroy.

Ab'-bol-ish-a-ble, 101: a. That may be abolished.

Ab'-bol-ish-er, 36: s. He that abolishes.

Ab'-bol-ish-ment, s. The act of abolishing.

Ab'-o-li'-tion, (äb'-ö-lish'-ün, 85, 89, 95) s. The act of abolishing.

Ab'-o-li'-tion-ist, 85: s. One who seeks the abolition of something, as of the slave-trade.

ABOMINABLE, äb-böm'-é-nö-bl, 105, 101: a. hateful, detestable.

Ab-om'-i-na-ble-ness, s. The quality of being abominable, odiousness.

Ab-om'-i-na-bly, 105: ad. Most hatefully.

To ABOMINATE, v. a. To abhor, detest, hate utterly.

Ab-om'-i-na'-tion, 85, 89: s. Hatred, detestation, pollution, shameful view.

ABORIGINES, äb'-ö-rid'-gè-néz, 85, 101 s. pl. The earliest inhabitants of a country.

Ab'-o-rig'-i-nal, (-rid'-gè-näl), a. Primitive, primitive.

ABORTION, ä bor'-shün, 37, 89: s. The act of bringing forth what is yet imperfect; the product of such a birth. The old verb was To Abort.

Ab-or-tive, (-tiv, 105) s. and a. That which is born before the time:—adj. Brought forth before the due time; that which brings forth nothing.

Ab-or-tive-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of bearing before the time; immaturely.

Ab-or-tive-ness, s. The state of abortion.

Ab-or-t'-ment, s. The thing immaturely brought forth.

ABOVE, ä-büv', 107: prep. and ad. Higher in place; higher in rank, power, or excellence; beyond, more than; too proud for; too high for:—ad. Overhead; in the regions of heaven.

☞ This word is often compounded; as Above-all, (in the first place); Above-deck, (upon deck; without artifice); Above-ground, (not in the grave); Above-cited, Above-mentioned, &c.

To ABOUND=ä-bownd', 31: v. n. To have in great plenty; to be in great plenty.

ABOUT=ä-bowt', 31: prep. and ad. Round, surrounding, encircling; near to; concerning, with regard to, relating to; engaged in, employed upon; appendant to the person, as clothes, &c.; relating to the person, as a servant:—ad. Circularly; nearly; the longest way. To bring about, is to bring to the point desired; To go about a thing, is to prepare to do it.

ABRACADABRA=äb-rä-cä-däb'-rä, 85: s. A superstitious charm against agues.

To ABRADE=äb-räde', v. a. To rub off; to wear away from the other parts.

Ab-rä'-sion, (-zhün, 90) s. The act of rubbing; a rubbing off.

To ABRAID=ä-bräde', v. n. To awake. [Obs.]

ABREAST, ä-bräst', 120: ad. Side by side.

ABRENUCIATION.—See Renunciation.

ABREPTION, äb-rép'-shün, 89: s. The state of being carried away.

ABREUVOIR, ä-brüv-wä', [Fr.] 170: s. A watering place; the juncture of two stones.

To ABRIDGE=ä-bridje', v. a. To make shorter in words, keeping still the same substance; to contract, to diminish, to cut short; to deprive of.

Ab-bridged, 114: part. a. Shortened; with of, it means deprived of, debarr'd from.

Ab-brid'-ger, 36: s. He that abridges, a shortener; a writer of compendiums.

Ab-bridge'-ment, s. The contraction of a larger work into a smaller compass; a diminution in general.

☞ See Principles, 196.

ABROACH=ä-bröatch', 63: ad. In a posture to run out; in a state of being diffused or propagated.

ABROAD, ä-brüd', 126: ad. Out of the house; in another country; without, not within.

To ABROGATE=äb'-rö-gät, v. a. To take away from a law its force; to repeal, to annul.

Ab'-ro-gate, } part. a. Annulled, abolished.

Ab'-ro-ga'-ted, }

Ab'-ro-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of abrogating; the repeal of a law.

ABROOD=ä-bröod', ad. In the act of brooding.

ABRUPT=äb-rüpt', a. and s. Broken, craggy; sudden, without the customary or proper preparatives:—s. An abrupt place.

Ab-rup'-ness, s. An abrupt manner; haste, suddenness.

Ab-rup'-ly, 105: ad. Hastily, without preparation.

Ab-rup'-tion, 89: s. Violent and sudden separation

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ün, s. e. mission, 165: vizh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: shün, 166; then, 166.

ABCESS=ab'-cēss, 155: s. An imposthume; a collection of purulent matter in the body: a morbid cavity.

To ABSCHIND=ab-cīnd', 155, 115: v. a. To cut off.

Ab-sciss'-ion, (-cīzh'-ūn, 149) s. The act of cutting off; the state of being cut off.

Ab'-sciss, (ab'-ciss, 81) } 155: s. A part cut off from the diameter of a conic section, being that which is contained between the vertex of a diameter, and an ordinate to it.

To ABSCOND=ab-acōnd', v. n. To hide one's self, generally used of persons eluding legal arrest.

Ab-scōnd'-er, 36: s. He who absconds.

ABSENT=ab'-sēnt=ab'-cēnt, 59: a. Not present; absent in mind, inattentive.

Ab'-sence, s. The state of being absent, opposed to presence; inattention, heedlessness, neglect of the present object.

Ab'-sen-tee, 85: s. One absent from his station or country, a word commonly used of Irish landholders.

Ab'-sen-tee'-ism, (-izm, 158) s. The practice of being abroad or away.

To ABSENT', (-cēnt'), 81: v. a. To withdraw; to forbear to come into presence.

Ab-sent'-er, 36: s. One who is absent from his place.

ABSENT'-ment, s. The state of being absent.

ABSENTHIAN, ab-cīn'-ān, 59, 105: a. Of the nature of absinthium, the Latin word for wormwood.

Ab-sin'-thi-a'-ted, 85: part. a. Impregnated with wormwood.

ABST=ab-cist', 59: v. n. To stand off; to leave off.

To ABSOLVE, ab-zōlv', 151: v. a. To loosen from; to clear, to quit of a crime in a judicial court; to set free from an engagement or promise; to pronounce a sin remitted in the ecclesiastical sense.

Ab-solv'-ed, (-zōlvd, 114) part. a. Acquitted.

Ab-solv'-er, 36: s. He who acquits or remits.

Ab-solv'-a-tor-y, (-zōlv'-d-tōr-ēy, 98, 129, 105) a. Containing absolution, or power to absolve.

Ab-so-lu'-tion, (ab'-sōl'-ū'-shūn, 109) 85, 89: s. Acquittal; the remission of sins, or of penance.

➤ Observe, that s in the preceding word and in those following, is no longer vocalized, as in the leading words.

Ab-sol'-u-tor-y, (ab'-sōl'-ū-tōr-ēy, 10, 129, 105) a. That gives absolution.

Ab-so-lu'te, (ab'-sōl'-ū't, 109) a. Solved or clear from other things; complete, whether applied to a person or thing; unconditional, as an absolute promise: not relative, as absolute space; not limited, as absolute power; not grammatically dependent, as the case absolute.

Ab-so-lute-ly, 105: ad. Completely; without restriction; without condition; peremptorily; positively.

Ab-so-lute-ness, s. Completeness; freedom from dependence or limits; despotism.

ABSONANT=ab'-sō-nānt, 12: } a. Absurd, con-

ABSONOUS, ab'-sō-nūs, 120: } trary to reason.

To ABSORB=ab-sorb'=ab-sārb', 37: v. a. To swallow up; to suck up.

Ab-sorb'-ent, s. A medicine that sucks up humors.

Ab-sorbed', (-sōrbd', 114) part. Imbided; wholly engrossed.

Ab-sorpt', part.—See the preceding.

Ab-sorpt'-ive, (-tīv, 105) a. Having the power to imbibe.

Ab-sorpt'-ion, 89: s. The act of imbibing.

To ABSTAIN.—See four words lower.

ABSTEMIOUS, ab-stē'-mē-ūs, 105, 146, 120: a. Temperate, sober, abstinent.

Ab-ste'-mi-ous-ly, 105: ad. Temperately, abstinently.

Ab-ste'-mi-ous-ness, s. The quality of being abstemious.

To AB-STAIN', 100: v. a. To forbear, to refrain one's self.

AB-STEN-TION, (-stēn'-shūn, 89) s. A holding off.

Ab'-sti-nent, 81, 105: a. That uses abstinence.

Ab'-sti-nence, s. Forbearance of any thing; fasting or forbearance of necessary food.

To ABSTERGE=ab-sterg', 35: v. a. To cleanse by wiping.

Ab-ster'-gent, a. and s. Cleansing, having a cleansing quality:—s. A medicine that cleanses.

To AB-STERSE', (-sterce', 153) v. a. To absterge.

Ab-ster'-sive, (-cīv, 103) a. That has the quality of cleansing.

Ab-ster'-sion, (-shūn, 90) s. The act of cleansing.

To ABSTRACT=ab-strāct', v. a. To take one thing from another; to separate ideas; to reduce to an epitome.

Ab-abstract'-ed, part. a. Separated; refined; abstruse; absent of mind.

Ab-abstract', a. Separate; existing in the mind only. ➤ The accent is proper, but unusual. See lower.

Ab-abstract-ly, 105: ad. In an abstract manner.

Ab-abstract'-ed-ly, 105: ad. With abstraction; simply; separate from contingent circumstances.

Ab-abstract'-ion, 89: s. The act of abstracting; the state of being abstracted.

Ab-abstract'-ive, 105: s. Of power to abstract.

Ab'-STRACT, 81: s. and a. A smaller quantity containing the virtue of a greater; an epitome made by taking out considerable parts:—adj. See above.

To ABSTRINGE=ab-string', v. a. To unbind.

Ab-strict'-ed, (-strict'-ēd) part. a. Unbound.

ABSTRUSE, ab-strū'-ce, 109, 152: a. Hidden, difficult; remote from conception or apprehension.

Ab-struse'-ly, 105: ad. Obscurely, not plainly.

Ab-struse'-ness, s. Difficulty, obscurity.

Ab-stru'-si-ty, (-cē'-lēy, 105) Abstruseness; that which is abstruse.

To ABSUME=ab-sūme', v. a. To bring to an end by gradual waste.

ABSURD=ab-surd', 39: a. Inconsistent; contrary to reason. Reductio, &c., see Supp.

Ab-surd'-ly, 105: ad. Improperly; unreasonably.

Ab-sur'-dr-ty, 105: s. The quality of being absurd; that which is absurd.

Ab-surd'-ness, s. The quality of being absurd.

ABUNDANT=d-būn'-dānt, a. Plentiful; exuberant; fully stored.

Ab-bun'-dent-ly, 105: ad. In plenty; amply, liberally, more than sufficient.

Ab-bun'-dance, s. Plenty; a great number or quantity; exuberance; more than enough.

To ABUSE, d-būz', 137: v. a. To make an ill use of; to deceive, to impose upon; to treat with rudeness; to violate, to defile.

Ab-u'-ser, (-zer) s. He that makes an ill use of; he that deceives; he that reproaches with rudeness; he that violates.

Ab-use', (-buc, 137) s. The ill use of any thing; a corrupt practice, bad custom; seducement; unjust censure, rude reproach.

Ab-u'-sive, (-cīv, 105) a. Practising abuse; containing abuse; deceitful.

Ab-u'-sive-ly, (-cīv-lēy, 105) ad. Improperly; by a wrong use; reproachfully.

Ab-u'-sive-ness, s. The quality of being abusive.

To ABUT=d-būf', v. n. To end at; to border upon; to meet or approach to.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Four's: gāu'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā'-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'ōō, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

A-but-tal, 12: s. The butting on, or boundary of any land.

A-but-ment, s. That which abuts or borders upon another.

ABYSS, á-bîzm', 158: s. See Abyss.

A-byz-mal, (-bîz-mäl) a. Relating to an abyss.

A-byss, (á-bîss') s. A depth without bottom; a great depth; a gulf. See A.

ACACIA, á-cä-shé-d, 90: s. A drug brought from Egypt; a thorny tree of Egypt.

ACADEMY, á-cäd'-léméy, 81, 92, 195: s. An assembly or society of men, uniting for the promotion of some art: the place where sciences are taught; a place of education, in contrail-tinction to the universities, or public schools; the school of Plato.

A-cad'-e mist, s. The member of an academy.

Ac'-a-de'-mi-al, (äck'-d-dé'-mē-äl, 85, 90, 105) a. Relating to an academy.

Ac'-n-de'-mi-an, s. The member of an academy.

Ac'-a-dem'-i-cal, 105: a. Belonging to an academy.

Ac'-a-dem'-ic, 93: a. and s. Belonging to a university.—s. A student of a university; a disciple or follower of Plato.

Ac'-a-de-mic'-ian, (-mish'-än, 85, 90, 95) s. The member of an academy.

ACANTHA=á-cän'-thä, s. The prickly of thorny plants.

Ac'-an-(ha)-ceous, (-thä'-sh'üs, 90) a. Prickly.

A-can'-thine, (thän, 105) a. Appertaining to acantha or acanthus.

A-CAN'-THUS, s. The herb bears-foot.

Ac'-a-na'-ceous, (-sh'üs, 120) 90: a. Prickly.

ACATALECTIC=ä'-cät-d-léc'-tic, 85, 88: a. and s. Not halting short.—s. A verse having no incomplete foot. See A.

ACATALEPSY, ä'-cät-d-lép'-sý, 85: s. Without possibility of complete discovery. See A.

ACAULOUS, á-cäw'-lūs, 123, 120: a. Having no stalk. See A.

To ACCEDE.—See before Access.

To ACCELERATE=äck-sēl'-ēr-ät, 129: v. a. To hasten; to quicken motion.

Ac-cel'-er-a-tive, (-ä-tiv, 105) a. Increasing the velocity of progression.

Ac-cel'-er-a-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of quickening motion; the state of a body accelerated; the act of hastening.

To ACCEND=äck-sēnd', 59: v. a. To kindle; to set on fire.

Ac-cend'-i-ble, 105, 101: a. Capable of being kindled.

Ac-cen'-sion, (-shün, 90) s. The act of kindling; the state of being kindled.

ACCENT=äck'-sēnt, 59: s. The manner of speaking or pronouncing; the marks made upon syllables to regulate their pronunciation; a modification of the voice, expressive of the sense, the passions, or the sentiments.

To Ac-cent', 81: v. a. To express or note the accent.

Ac-cen'-tor, 38: s. One that sings the leading part in a concert.

Ac-cen'-tu-al, (-tū-äl, 147) a. Relating to accents.

To Ac-cen'-tu-ate, (-tū-ät, 147) v. a. To place the accent properly.

Ac-cen'-tu-a'-tion, 85, 147, 89: s. The act of placing the accent.

To ACCEPT=äck-sēpt', 59: v. a. To take with pleasure, to receive kindly; to admit with approbation; to receive or agree to, as a treaty, in which sense it is often followed by of; in commerce, to accept a bill, is to subscribe it, by which the person makes himself liable for the amount.

Ac-cept'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Likely to be accepted; grateful, pleasing.

Ac-cept'-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being acceptable.

Ac-cept'-a-bly, 105: ad. In an acceptable manner.

Ac-cept'-ance, 12: s. Reception with approbation; in commerce, the subscribing of a bill; the bill itself when subscribed.

Ac-cept'-er, 36: s. He that accepts.

Ac-cept'-ive, (-tív, 105) a. Ready to accept.

Ac-cept'-tion, 89: s. The received sense of a word; the meaning.

Ac-cip'-i-ent, (-síp'-i-ēnt, 90) s. A receiver.

Of the foregoing words, under the leading one, to accept, it was for a long time fashionable to carry the accent of the first three, namely, acceptable, acceptance, and acceptably, back to the first syllable; a practice evidently at variance with analogy, and therefore happily on the decline. The following two words of the class have the accent lower, for the reasons referred to in the principles 81 and 89.

Ac-cep'-ta-bil'-i-ty, 85, 98, 81, 105: s. The quality of being acceptable.

Ac-cep'-ta-tion, 85, 89: s. Reception; the meaning of a word. Acceptation, see Supp.

To ACCEDE=äck-sēdd', 59: v. n. To be added to, to come to, to assent.

Ac-cess', (-sēss) 82: s. Approach; admission; increase.

Of This word sometimes has the accent on the first syllable. (83)

Ac-cess'-i-ble, 105, 101: a. That may be approached.

Ac-cess'-ion, (-sēsh'-i-un, 90) s. Enlargement; augmentation: act of coming to, or joining to; approach; the act of arriving at, as the king's accession to the throne.

Ac-cess'-ion-al, 12: a. Additional.

Ac'-ces-sar'-y, (äck'-sēs-sär'-ý, } 129, 105: a.
Ac'-ces-sor'-y, (äck'-sēs-sör'-ý, } and s. Joined to another thing; additional.—s. In law, one who is guilty of a crime, not principally, but by participation.

Ac'-ces-sar'-i-ly, } 105: ad. In the manner of Ac'-ces-sor'-i-ly, } an accessory.

Ac'-ces-sar'-i-ness, }
Ac'-ces-sor'-i-ness, } s. The state of being accessory.

Of The latter way of spelling these several words, as nearest their original, accessorius, is recommended.

Ac'-ces-sor'-i-al, (-sör'-i-äl, 47) 85, 90: a. Pertaining to an accessory.

ACCIDENT, äck'-sē-dēnt, 59, 105: s. Property or quality of a being not essential to it; casualty; chance:—in the plural, the properties and qualities of the parts of speech. Strictly, Accident is distinguished from Property and Essential-difference thus: Rationality is the essential difference of the animal man; the use of speech, which is the result of rationality, is a property of the species; to be in the act of walking, or to be a native of England, is an accident of the individual.

Ac'-ci-dence, s. The book containing the first rudiments of grammar; corrupted from Accidents.

Ac'-ci-dent'-al, 85: a. and s. Having the quality of an accident; non-essential; casual; fortuitous:—s. A property non-essential.

Ac'-ci-dent'-al-ly, 105: ad. Casually; fortuitously

Ac'-ci-dent'-al-ness, s. The quality of being accidental.

ACCIPIENT.—See under To Accept.

ACCIPITRINE, äck-síp'-i-trín, 59, 105: a. Rapacious, as the accipitrine order of birds. See Supp.

To ACCITE=äck-sít', 59: v. a. To cite; to call; to summon.

To ACCLAIM=äc-clām', v. n. To applaud.

Ac-claim', s. Loud applause. [Milton.]

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ün, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: shün, 166: thien, 166.

ACCLAM'-A-TOR-y, (-clām' d-tōr-ē, 98, 129, 105) a. Pertaining to acclamation.
AC'-cla-ma'-tion, 85, 89: s. Shout of applause.
ACCLIVOUS, āc-clī'-vūs, 92, 120: a. Rising with a slope.
AC-cliv'-i-ty, (-clīv'-ē-ty, 92, 105) s. Steepness reckoned upwards, as the ascent of a hill is the acclivity, the descent, the declivity.
To ACCLOY=āc-cloy', 29: v. a. To fill up; to cloy.
To ACCOIL=āc-coil', 29: v. n. To crowd or gather to a heap; to bustle.
ACCOLADE, āc'-cōl-lād', [Fr.] 170: s. A ceremony formerly used in creating a knight, in which the king put his hand round the knight's neck.
ACCOLENT=āc'-cō-lēnt, s. He that inhabits near a place; a borderer.
To ACCOMMODATE=āc-cōm'-mō-dāte, v. a. To supply with conveniences of any kind; with the particle to, to adapt, to adjust.
AC-com'-mo-date, a. Suitably; fit.
AC-com'-mo-date-ly, 105: ad. Suitably; fitly.
AC-com'-mo-date-ness, s. Fitness.
AC-com'-mo-da'-tion, 85, 89: s. Provision of conveniences; fitness; reconciliation; adjustment.
AC-com'-mo-da'-tion-bill, 85: s. A bill of exchange given as an accommodation instead of a loan of money, and which it is generally understood that the drawer will take up.
AC-com'-mo-da'-tor, 85, 38: s. He who accommodates.
AC-com'-mo-da-ble, (-dā-bl, 98, 101) a. That may be fitted.
AC-com'-mo-da-ble-ness, s. The capability of accommodating.
To ACCOMPANY, āc-cūm'-pā-n-y, 116, 98, 105: v. a. To be with another as companion; to join with; in music, to play an instrumental part to the playing or singing of another.
AC-com'-pa-ni-er, s. One who accompanies.
AC-com'-pa-ni-ment, s. That which accompanies. In music, an instrumental part added to the composition by way of embellishment.
AC-com'-pa-nist, s. One that accompanies in music.
ACCOMPLICE, āc-cōm'-pliss, 105: s. An associate; a partner; usually in an ill sense.
To ACCOMPLISH=āc-cōm'-plish, v. a. To complete; to execute; to fulfill, as, to accomplish a desire; to fulfill, as a prophecy; to adorn; to furnish either mind or body.
AC-com'-plish-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Capable of being accomplished.
AC-com'-plished, (-plisht, 114, 143) part. a. Complete in some qualification; elegant.
AC-com'-plish-er, 36: s. He that accomplishes.
AC-com'-plish-ment, s. Completion; full performance; ornament of mind or body.
ACCOMP'T, } Are always pronounced ac-count'.
Accomptable, } &c. and are now generally so written.
Accomptant, } See Account, &c.
To ACCORD=āc-cord'=āc-cārd', 37: v. n. and a. To agree; to suit one with another:—act. To make agree; to compose; to grant; as, I accorded his request. Accordion, see in Supp.
AC-cord', s. A compact; agreement; union.
AC-cord'-ant, 12: a. Consonant; corresponding.
AC-cord'-ant-ly, 105: ad. In an accordant manner.
AC-cord'-ance, s. Agreement; conformity.
AC-cord'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Agreeable; consonant.
AC-cord'-er, 36: s. An assistant; a favourer.
AC-cord'-ing-ly, 72, 105: ad. Agreeably; conformably.

Ac cord'-ing-to, (-too, 107) prep. Agreeably to; suitably to; in proportion.
To ACCORPORATE=āc-cor'-pō rāte, 37: v. a. To unite.
To ACCOST=āc-cōst', 17: v. a. To address.
AC-cost'-a-ble, 101: a. Easy of access; familiar.
AC-cost'-ed, part. a. Addressed; in heraldry, skid by rule.
ACCOUCHEMENT, āc-cōsh'-mōng, [Fr.] 170: s. A lying in.
AC-couch'-er, (-cōosh-ur', 170) s. A man midwife.
AC-couch'-er's, (-dōz', 170) s. A midwife.
ACCOUNT=āc-cōunt', 31: s. A computation; estimation; advantage; regard; narration; examination.
To Ac-count', v. a. and n. To esteem; to think or hold in opinion;—new. To reckon, to give an account, to assign the causes; to appear as the medium by which anything is explained.
Ac-count'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Liable to account.
Ac-count'-a-ble-ness, s. The state of being accountable.
Ac-count'-ant, a. and s. Accountable to:—s. A man employed in keeping accounts.
Ac-count'-ing, 72: part. and s. Esteeming, reckoning:—s. The act of reckoning up accounts.
Ac-count'-book, 118: s. A book containing accounts.
To ACCOUPLE, āc-cūp'-pl, 125, 101: v. a. To join together.
To ACCOURT=āc-cō'urt, 47, 134: v. a. To entertain courteously.
To ACCOUTRE, āc-cō'tur, 125, 159: v. a. To dress, to equip.
AC-con'-tre-ment, s. Dress; equipage; trappings. (In Webster's Dict. these are spelled accouter, accouterment;—a commendable but unconfirmed innovation.)
To ACCREDIT=āc-crēd'-it, v. a. To countenance, to procure honour or credit for. See Supp.
Ac-crēd'-it-ed, a. Of allowed reputation; confidential.
ACCRESCENT=āc-crēs'-cēnt, 59: a. Increasing.
AC-crē'-tion, (-crē'-shūn, 89) s. The act of growing to another, so as to increase it.
Ac-crē'-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Increasing by growth.
To ACCROACH=āc-crōatch', 63: v. a. To draw to one as with a hook; to gripe.
AC-croach'-ment, s. The act of accroaching.
To ACCRUE, āc-crō', 109: v. n. To accede to: to be added to; to append to; in commerce, to arise as profits; to follow as loss.
AC-crū'-ment, s. Addition, increase.
ACCRUATION.—See four words lower.
To ACCUMB=āc-cūmb', 156: v. n. To recline after the manner of the ancients at table.
Ac-cum'-bent, a. Leaning.
Ac-cum'-ben-cy, 105: s. State of being accumbent.
AC'-cu-ba'-tion, (āc'-cū-bā'-shūn, 85, 89) s. A leaning.
To ACCUMULATE=āc-cū'-mū-lāte, v. a. and n. To heap one thing upon another, to pile up:—n. To increase.
Ac-cū'-mu-lā'-tive, (-lā'-tīv, 85, 105) a. That accumulates; that is accumulated.
Ac-cū'-mu-lā'-tive-ly, 85, 105: ad. In heaps.
Ac-cū'-mu-lā'-tor, 85: s. One that accumulates.
Ac-cū'-mu-lā'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of accumulating; the state of being accumulated.
ACCURATE=āc-cū-rāte, a. Exact; correct; precise.
Ac'-cu-rate-ness, s. Exactness; nicety.
Ac'-cu-rate-ly, 105: ad. Exactly; without error.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Notes: gāt'-wāy: chāj'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōd: j'wō, i. e. j'wō, 55: a, c, i, &c. mute, 171.

Ac-cu-ra-cy, (-ră-cēy, 98, 105) s. Exactness; nicety.

To ACCURSE=ăc-curc', 39, 153: v. a. To doom to misery.

Ac-curs'd, (-curst, 114, 143) part. Doomed.

Ac-cur'-sed, 114: a. Execrable, detestable.

To ACCUSE, ăc-cūz' 137: v. a. To charge with a crime; to blame; to censure; to impeach.

Ac-cu'-sa-ble, (-ză-bl, 101) s. That may be accused.

Ac-cu'-sant, (-zănt) s. He that accuses.

Ac-cu'-sa-tive, (-ză-tiv, 105) a. Censuring, accusing; a term in grammar applied to the case in which the force of the active verb terminates; objective.

Ac-cu'-sa-tive-ly, 105: ad. In an accusative manner; relating to the accusative case in grammar.

Ac-cu'-sa-tor-y, (-ză-tôr-ēy, 129, 105) a. That produces or contains an accusation.

Ac-cu'-ser, (-zer) s. He that accuses.

Ac-cu'-sa-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of accusing; the charge brought against any one.

To ACCUSTOM=ăc-cūs-tom, 18: v. a. To habituate; to inure.

Ac-cus'-tomed, (e mute, 114) a. Frequent; usual.

Ac-cus'-tom-a-ble, 101: a. Habitual; customary.

Ac-cus'-tōm-a-bly, 105: ad. Habitually.

Ac-cus'-tōm-ance, s. Custom, habit.

Ac-cus'-tōm-ar-y, (-tōm-ăr-ēy, 129, 105) a. Usual.

Ac-cus'-tōm-ar-i-ly, 105: ad. In a customary manner.

ACE=ăc, s. A unit on cards or dice: an atom.

ACEPHALOUS, ăc-cēf'-d-lūs, 163, 98, 120: a. Headless: a term seldom applied but to verse deficient in the first foot. See A. See also in Supp.

ACERB=ăc-erb', 35: a. Sour with roughness.

To A-erb'-ate, v. a. To make sour.

A-erb'-i-ty, 105: s. Sour taste; severity.

To ACERVATE=ăc-er'-vâte, 35, 81: v. a. To heap up.

A-er'-vose, (-vôcē, 152) a. Full of heaps ăc-er'-vât-ion, (ăss'-er-vă'-shūn, 85, 92, 89) s. A heaping together.

ACESCENT, } See after Acid

Acetate, &c.

ACHIE, ăkē, 161: s. A continued pain.

To Ache, v. n. To be in pain.

⚡ This word, related to Saxon as well as to Greek, was in Shakespeare's time pronounced aitch. Modern orthography often improperly omits the final e.

To ACHIEVE, ă-chiēv', 103, 63, 189: v. a. To perform; to finish.

A-chiev'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be achieved.

A-chiev'-ance, 12: s. A performance.

A-chiev'-er, 36: s. He that achieves.

A-chiev'-ement, s. The performance of an action; the escutcheon or ensign armorial.

ACHOR, ă'-kor, 161: s. A species of the herpes.

ACHROMATIC, ă'-crō-măt'-ic, 85, 161, 88: a. Preventive of the effect of colours, being a word applied to telescopes which prevent the optical aberration arising from the various colours of light.

See A. Hence Achromatism, s.

ACID=ăś-cid, 59: a. and s. Sour, sharp to the taste:—s. Acids in chemistry are substances sour and sharp to the taste, that change vegetable blue colours to red, and combine with alkalies so as to form salts.

Ac'id-ness, 59: s. The quality of being acid.

A-ci'-i-ty, (ă-cid'-ē-tēy, 98, 81, 105) s. Sharpness; sourness.

A-ci'-u-lar, (-ă-lēc, [Lat.] 169) s. pl. Medicinal springs impregnated with carbonic acid.

To A-cid'-u-late, v. a. To tinge with acids in a slight degree.

A-cid'-u-lous, 120: a. Sharpish; sourish.

A-CES'-CENT, 59: a. Tending to sourness.

A-CES'-cen-cy, 105: s. Sourness, acidity.

Ac'-E-TATE, (ăś-cē-tâte, 59) s. Any salt formed by the union of acetic acid with a salifiable base.

Ac'-e-tite, (ăś-cē-tîte) s. Any salt formed by the union of acetic acid with an alkali or earthy base.

Ac'-e-tose' (ăś-cē-tôcē, [152]) a. Sour, sharp.

Ac'-e-tos'-i-ty, (-tôss-ē-tēy, 105) 85: s. The state of being acetose.

A-cet'-ic, 98, 93: a. Sour.—See next word.

A-cet'-tous, (ă-cē'-tūs, 120) a. In common parlance acetic and acetous, and also acetose, mean the same, acetous being of the three in most common use. In chemistry, acetic acid is radical vinegar, aceticus acid, distilled vinegar. See other words in Supp.

ACINACIFORM, ăś-cē-năś'-cē-fă-wrm, 105, 38: a. In the form of a sabre.

ACINOSE, ăś-cē-nôcē, 152, } 59, 105: a. Con-

ACINOUS, ăś-cē-nūs, 120, } sisting of minute granular concretions.

To ACKNOWLEDGE, ăck-nôl'-ēdgs, 76, 136, 168: v. a. To own the knowledge of; to confess, to own a person or thing in a particular character.

Ack-nôw'-ed-ging, 72: a. Grateful.

Ack-nôw'-edg-ment, s. Concession; recognition; gratitude.

⚡ See Principles, 196.

ACME=ăck'-mēy [Gr.] 169: s. The summit; the crisis.

ACOLOTHIST=ă-côl'-ô-hist, } s. One of the ACOLYTE=ăc'-ô-lîte, 81, 92, } lowest order in the Roman church.

ACONITE=ăc'-ô-nîte, s. The herb wolf's bane; in poetry, poison in general.

ACORN=ă'-corn, s. The seed or fruit of the oak.

ACOUSTIC=ă-cow'-stîck, 31: a. That relates to hearing.

A-cou'-stics, s. pl. The theory of sounds; medicines or instruments to help the hearing.

To ACQUAINT, ăc-kwănt', 76, 145: v. a. To make familiar with; to inform.

Ac-quaint'-ed, part. a. Familiar; well known.

Ac-quaint'-ance, s. Familiarity; knowledge of a person or persons whom we know.

ACQUEST.—See under To Acquire.

To ACQUIESCE, ăc-kwē-ess', 76, 145, 105, 59: v. n. To rest in, or remain satisfied with; to agree; to comply.

Ac-qui-es'-cent, a. Easy, submitting.

Ac-qui-es'-cence, } s. A silent appearance of Ac-qui-es'-cen-cy, 105, } content; compliance; submission.

To ACQUIRE, ăc-kwîr', 76, 145: v. a. To gain; to attain.

Ac-quir'd, (e mute, 114) part. a. Obtained.

Ac-qui'-ra-ble, 98, 101: a. Attainable.

Ac-qui'-rer, 36: s. He that acquires.

Ac-quire'-ment, s. That which is acquired.

Ac-quis', (-kwîst') } s. Acquisition, the thing

Ac-quist', (-kwîst') } gained. [Little used.]

Ac-qui-sit'-ion, (ăc-kwē-zîsh'-ūn, 85, 105, 152, 89) s. That which is acquired.

Ac-quis'-i-tive, (ăc-kwîz'-ē-tiv, 92, 105) a. That is acquired.

Ac-quis'-i-tive-ly, 105: ad. In grammar, verbs are said to be used acquisitively when, by means of to or for following them, they denote the requirement of something.

To ACQUIT, ăc-kwîr', 76, 145: v. a. To set free; to clear; to discharge.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mîsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 165

Ac-quit-ment, s. The act of acquitting; the state of being acquitted.

Ac-quit-tal, (-tāl, 12) s. Deliverance from the charge of an offence; a judicial discharge.

Ac-quit-tance, s. Discharge from debt; receipt.

To Ac-quit-tance, v. a. To procure acquittance for; to acquit.

ACRASY=ā'-crā-ēy, s. Want of mutual control or subserviency; excess, irregularity.—See A.

ACRE, ā'-cur, 159: s. A piece of land forty rods long and four broad, or 4840 square yards.

Ac'-cred, (-cud, 114) a. Possessing acres.

ACRID=āc'-rīd, a. Hot and biting to the taste; bitter.

Ac'-ri-tude, 105: s. An acrid taste, a biting heat on the palate.

Ac'-ri-ty, 105: s. Sharpness; eagerness.

Ac'-ri-mon-y, (āc'-rē-mōn-ēy, 18, 105) s. Sharpness; corrosiveness; bitterness; severity.

Ac'-ri-mo"-ni-ous, (-mō"-nē-ūs, 90, 105, 120) 85: a. Sharp; corrosive.

Ac'-ri-mo"-ni-ous-ness, s. The property of being acrimonious.

ACROAMATIC=āc'-krō-ā-māt'ic, a. Pertaining to the abstruser parts of learning; esoteric.

ACROAMATICAL=āc'-krō-ā-māt'ic, 105: a.

Ac'-ro-a-mat'ics, s. pl. Aristotle's lectures on the more subtle parts of philosophy, otherwise called esoteric, to which none but intimate disciples were admitted, in contradistinction to the exoteric parts of philosophy, or such as he taught openly.

ACRONYCAL, āc'-rōn'-ā-cāl, 105: a. Rising when the sun sets; setting when the sun rises: it is opposed to Co-mical.

Ac'-ron'-y-cal-ly, 105: ad. At the acrony time.

ACROSPIRE=āc'-krō-spir', s. A shoot or sprout from the end of seeds. derog., see Supp.

Ac'-ro-spired, 114: part. a. Having sprouts.

ACROSS=āc'-crōss, 17: ad. Athwart; transversely.

ACROSTIC=āc'-crōss'-tīck, s. A poem of which the first letters of the lines spell some name.

Ac'-ros'-ti-cal, 105: a. Relating to an acrostic.

ACROTHERIA, āc'-krō-tēr'-rē-d, 85, 90, 105: s. pl. In anatomy, the extremities of the body, as the fingers' ends; in architecture, little pedestals without bases, placed at the middle and two extremities of pediments.

To ACT=act, v. n. and a. To be in action, not to rest:—act. To perform, to feign, to imitate.

Act, s. A deed; an exploit; a part of a play.

Act'-ing, 72: part. and s. Doing, performing:—s. The art or occupation of an actor.

Ac'-tive, 105: a. Busy; nimble; agile; quick.

Ac'-tive-ly, 105: ad. Busily; nimbly.

Ac'-tive-ness, s. Quickness; nimbleness.

Ac'-tiv'-i-ty, 92: s. The quality of being active.

Ac'-tion, (āck'-shūn, 89) s. State of acting; a deed; operation; battle; gesticulation; law-suit; a share.

Ac'-tion-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Liable to an action at law; punishable.

Ac'-tion-a-bly, 105: ad. By a process of law.

Ac'-tion-ar-y, (-ār-ēy, 129, 105) s. One that has a share in actions or stocks.

Ac'-tion-ta'-king, 85: a. Litigious.

Ac'-tor, 38: s. He that acts; a stage player.

Ac'-tress, s. A female player.

Ac'-tu-al, 147: a. Real; effective; certain.

Ac'-tu-al-ly, 105: ad. In act; really.

Ac'-tu-al-ness, s. The quality of being actual.

Ac'-tu-al-i-ty, 85, 81, 105: s. The state of being actual.

Ac'-tu-ar-y, (-ār-ēy, 129, 105) s. The registrar or officer who compiles the minutes of the proceedings of a court.

To Ac'-tu-ate, v. a. To put into action.

Ac'-tu-ate, a. Actuated.

Ac'-tu-ose, (-ōse) a. Having the power of action.

ACUATE, &c.—See under the next word.

ACUTE=ācū'tē, a. Sharp, not blunt or obtuse; ingenious; penetrating; in medicine, acute disease is that which terminates shortly, opposed to chronical; acute accent is that which sharpens the voice.

Ac'-ute-ly, 105: ad. Sharply; ingeniously; keenly.

Ac'-ute-ness, s. Sharpness; quickness of intellect; violence of illness; sharpness of sound.

To Ac'-u-ate, 92: v. a. To sharpen. See in Supp.

Ac'-u-i-ty, 81, 105: s. Sharpness.

Ac'-u-le-ate, 90: a. Terminating in a point, prickly.

Ac'-u-men, 86: s. A sharp point; figuratively, quickness of perception, discernment.

To Ac'-u-mi-nate, 105: v. n. and a. To rise like a cone:—act. To whet or sharpen.

Ac'-u-mi-na'-tion, 85, 89: s. A sharp point; the act of sharpening; act of coming to a point.

AD-, a prefix of Latin origin, signifying to, and to be so understood in the greater part of the following words. It is likewise an original element in other words where the d has been changed for the letter that begins the next syllable, as in ac-cede, af-fir, ag-grass, al-literation, an-nomination, or for g before n, as in ag-nomination. Ad-va-lo'rem, according to the value.

To ADACT=ā-dāct', v. a. To drive by force. [Obs.]

Ad'-act-ed, part. Driven by force.

ADAGE=ād'-āge, 99: s. A maxim; a proverb.

ADAGIO, ād'-dā'-gē-ō, 105, [Ital.] 170: ad. or s. In music, slowly:—s. A slow movement.

ADAMANT=ād'-d-mānt, s. A stone of impenetrable hardness: the diamond; the kaurstone.

Ad'-a-man-te'-an, a. 86: Hard as adamant.

Ad'-a-man'-tine, (-tīn, 105) a. Made of adamant; hard.

ADAM=ād'-ām, s. The name of the first man.

Ad'-am's-a-p'-ple, 151, 85, 101: s. A prominent part of the throat.

Ad'-am-ites, (ites) s. pl. Religionists who prayed naked.

To ADAPT=ād-dāpt', v. a. To suit, to fit, to proportion.

Ad'-apt'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be adapted.

Ad'-apt'-a-bil'-i-ty, 85, 105: s. The capability of being adapted.

Ad'-ap-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of fitting one thing to another; fitness.

Ad'-ap-tion, 89: s. The act of fitting. [Unusual.]

To ADD=ād, 155: v. a. To join; to increase; to subjoin.

Ad'-di-ble, 105, 101: a. That may be added.

Ad'-di-bil'-i-ty, 105: s. Possibility of being added.

Ad'-di-ti-v-y, (-dē-tōr-ēy) 129: a. That has the power of adding.

Ad'-dit'-a-ment, s. Addition; the thing added.

AD-DIT'-ION, (-dīsh'-un, 89, 95) s. The act of adding; a rule for adding sums together; in law, the title annexed to a man's name.

Ad'-di-ti-on-al, a. That is added.

Ad'-di-ti-on-al-ly, 105: ad. In addition to.

Ad'-di-ti-on-ar-y, (-ār-ēy, 129) a. That may be added.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāu-wāy: clāp-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōōd: īōō. i. e. jeu, 55: a, t, y, &c. mule, 171.

ADH

ADJ

AD-DEN-DUM, [Lat.] s. Something to be added.

Ad-den'-da, s. pl. Things to be added.

To ADDECIMATE, ăd-dēs'-cē-māte, v. a. To take or ascertain the tens.

To ADDEEM=ăd-dēcm', v. a. To account.

ADDER=ăd'-der, 36: s. A venomous reptile.

A.l'-der's-grass, 151: s. A plant.

Ad'-der's-tongue, (-tūng, 116) } s. A herb so Ad'-der's-wort, (-wurt, 141) } called.

ADDICE, ăd'-diss, 105: s. A kind of ax, corruptly pronounced adz.

To ADDICT=ăd-dict', v. a. To devote, to dedicate; it is commonly but not necessarily taken in a bad sense, as, He addicted himself to vice.

Ad-dict'-ed-ness, s. The state of being addicted.

Ad-dic'-tion, 89: s. The act of devoting; the state of being devoted.

ADDITION, &c.—See above, under To Add.

ADDLE, ăd'-dl, 101: a. Barren, empty; originally only applied to such eggs as produce nothing.

Ad"-dle-head'-ed, (-hēd'-ed, 120) } a. Having bar-Ad"-dle-pa'-ted, (-pā'-ted, 85) } ren brains.

To ADDOOM=ăd-dōom', v. a. To adjudge.

To ADDORSE=ăd-dorā, 153: v. a. To place back to back. [Obs.]

Ad-dors'-d', (-dorst, 114, 143) part. Placed back to back. [Heraldry.]

To ADDRESS=ăd-dress', v. a. To prepare one's self to enter upon any action; to speak or apply to any one.

Ad-dress', 82: s. Application; petition; courtship; skill; dexterity; direction of a letter.

Ad-dress'-er, 36: s. One who addresses.

To ADDUCE=ăd-dūce', v. a. To bring forward; to allege.

Ad-du'-ci-ble, 105, 101: a. That may be brought forward.

Ad-du'-cent, a. A word applied to such muscles as bring or draw together the parts they are attached to.

Ad-duc'-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. That brings down.

Ad-duc'-tor, 38: s. A muscle that contracts.

Ad-duc'-tion, 89: s. The act of adducing or bringing forward.

To ADDULCE=ăd-dūlc', 59: v. a. To sweeten.

ADELANTADO=ăd'-ē-lān-tā'-dō', 97, 170: s. An officer of high authority in Spain.

ADELING=ăd'-ē-līng, 72: s. A word of honour among the Angles, properly appertaining to the king's children.

ADEPTION, ăd-dēm'-shūn, 156, 89: s. Privation.

ADENOGRAPHY, ăd'-ē-nōg'-rā-fy, 85, 163: s. That part of anatomy which treats of the glands.

Ad'-e-noid, 30:

Ad'-e-nose, (-nōce, 152) } a. Like or appertaining to a gland.

Ad'-e-nous, 120:

ADEPT=ăd-dēpt', s. and a. One completely skilled in the secrets of his art; a name at first assumed by the professors of alchemy:—a. Skillful; thoroughly versed.

A-dep'-tion, 89: s. Attainment.

ADEQUATE=ăd'-ē-kwāte, 76, 145: a. Equal to; proportionate.

Ad'-e-quate-ly, 105: ad. In an adequate manner.

Ad'-e-quate-ness, s. State of being adequate.

Ad'-e-qua-cy, 98, 105: s. Adequateness. Adequation, with the same sense, is obsolete.

To ADHERE=ăd-hēr', v. a. To stick to; to remain fixed or firm.

Ad-he'-rent, (-hēr'-ēnt, 43) a. and s. Sticking to; united with:—s. A follower, a partizan.

Ad-he'-rent-ly, 105: ad. In an adherent manner.

Ad-he'-rence, } s. The quality of adhering.
Ad-he'-ren-cy, 105: } attachment; tenacity; fidelity.

Ad-he'-rer, 36: s. One that adheres.

AD-HE'-SION, (-hē'-zhūn, 90) s. The act or state of sticking or adhering to something.

Ad-he'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Sticking. tenacious

Ad-ne sive-ness, s. Tenacity; viscosity.

To ADHIBIT=ăd-hīb'-it, v. a. To apply, to use.

Ad'-hi-bi'-tion, (ăd'-hē-bish'-ūn, 85, 89, 95) s. Application; use.

AD-ORTATION, ăd'-hor-tā'-shūn, 89: s. Advice, the act of advising.

Ad-hor'-ta-tor-y, 98, 129, 105: a. Admonitory.

ADIAPHOROUS, ăd'-ē-ăf'-ō-rūs, 163, 120: a. Indifferent; neutral.

Ad'-i-aph'-or-y, (-ăf'-ōr-ēy, 129, 105) s. Neutrality.

ADIEU, ăd-dū', 110: interj. Farewell.

ADIPOSE, ăd'-ē-pōce, 152: } 105: a. Of the na-
ADIPOUS, ăd'-ē-pūs, 120 } ture of fat.

Ad"-i-po-cer'-, 105, 85: s. An unctuous or waxy substance into which the muscular fibres of the human body after having been buried, can, under certain circumstances, be converted.

ADIT=ăd'-it, s. A subterranean passage for water.

Ad-it'-ion, (-ish'-ūn, 89, 95) s. The act of going to another.

ADJACENT=ăd-jā'-cēt, a. and s. Lying near or close; contiguous:—s. That which lies next another.

Ad-jā'-cen-cy, 105: s. The state of laying close to.

To ADJECT=ăd-jēct', v. a. To add to.

Ad-jec'-tion, 89: s. The act of adding; the thing added.

Ad'-jec-ti'-tions, (-tish'-ūs, 90, 95) 85: a. Additional.

Ad'-jec-tive, (-tīv, 105) 81: s. A word added to a noun to qualify it so that the two have one meaning.

Ad'-jec-tive-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of an adjective.

To ADJOIN. See nine words lower.

To ADJOURN, ăd-jurn', 131: v. a. To put off, to defer, naming the time.

Ad-journ'-ment, s. A putting off.

To ADJUDGE=ăd-jūdg', v. a. To give the thing controverted to one of the parties; to sentence to a punishment; simply, to judge, to decree.

To AD-JU'-DI-CATE, (-j ō'-dē-cātē, 109) v. a. To adjudge.

Ad-jū'-di-ca'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of adjudicating.

To ADJUGATE, ăd-j'oo-gātē, 109: v. a. To yoke to ADJUMENT. See after, To Ajute, &c.

ADJUNCT. See six words lower.

To ADJOIN=ăd-join', 29: v. a. and s. To join to; to unite to; to put to:—s. To be contiguous to.

Ad-junc'-tion, (-jūngk'-shūn, 158, 89) s. Act of adjoining; thing joined.

Ad-junc'-tive, 105: a. and s. Having a tendency to join:—s. That which is joined.

Ad-junc'-tive-ly, 105: ad. In an adjective manner.

Ad-junc'-ly, ad. In connection with.

Ad'-junct, 81: a. and s. Immediately joined:—s. Something adherent or united to another.

To ADJURE, ăd-j'ūr', 109, 51: v. a. To impose an oath under a prescribed form.

Ad-jū'-rer, 36: s. One that adjures; one that exacts an oath.

Ad'-jū-ra'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of proposing an oath to another; the form of oath proposed.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that save no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn; s. vision, 165: ăin, 166: tshēn, 166.

ADJUST=äd-jüst', v. a. To regulate; to put in order; to make conformable.
Ad-just'er, s. He that places in due order.
Ad-just-ment, s. Regulation; settlement.
To ADJUTE, äd-j'üt', 109: v. n. To help; to concur. [Obs.]
Ad-ju'tor, 38: s. A helper.
Ad-ju'trix, 154: s. She that helps.
AD-JU-MENT, (äd-j'oo-mënt, 81, 109) s. Help.
Ad-ju-tant, s. An officer whose duty it is to assist the major; by distributing pay, and overseeing punishment; an assistant.
Ad-ju-tan-cy, 105: s. The office of an adjutant.
Ad-ju-tor-y, (-tör-ty, 129, 105) a. That helps.
To AD-JU-VATE, (äd-j'oo-vät', v. a. To help; to further.
Ad-ju-vant, a. and s. Helpful, useful:—s. An assistant.
ADMEASUREMENT, äd-mëzh'-oor-mënt, 120, 147: s. The result or effect of measuring according to rule; the adjustment of proportions.
AD-MEN'SU-RA'TION, (-mën'-sh-rä'-shüun, 147) s. The art, act, or practice of measuring.
ADMINICLE, äd-mîn'-el, 105, 101: s. Help; support.
Ad-min-ic'u-lar, 85, 81, 34: a. That gives help.
To ADMINISTER=äd-mîn'-is-ter, v. a. To supply; to give; to act as agent; to perform the office of an administrator.
Ad-min'-is-tra-ble, 98, 101: a. Capable of being administered.
To Ad-min'-is-trate, v. a. The same as to administer.
Ad-min'-is-tra-tive, (-tív, 105) a. Having the quality of administering.
Ad-min'-is-tra-tor, 85, 38, 177: s. He that has the charge of the estate of a man dying intestate.
Ad-min'-is-tra-trix, 154: s. She that administers.
Ad-min'-is-tra-tor-ship, s. The office of an administrator.
Ad-min'-is-tra-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of administering; the executive part of government; distribution; in law, the rights and acts of an administrator.
To ADMIRE=äd-mîr', 45: v. a. and n. To regard with wonder; to regard with love:—a. To wonder at.
Ad-mî-rer, 36: s. The person that admires; a lover.
Ad-mî-ring-ly, 72, 105: ad. With admiration.
AD-MIR-ABLE, (äd'-mîr-ä-bl, 105, 101) a. Worthy of being admired.
Ad'-mi-ra-bly, 105: ad. In an admirable manner.
Ad'-mi-ra-ble-ness, } s. The quality
Ad'-mi-ra-bil'-ity, 85, 81, 105: } or state of being admirable.
Ad'-mi-ra-tion, 85, 89: s. Wonder; the act of admiring.
ADMIRAL=äd'-mîr-ä-l, 105: s. The chief commander of a fleet; an officer or magistrate that has the government of the king's navy; the ship which carries the admiral; figuratively, any great ship.
Ad-mî-ral-ship, s. The office of admiral.
Ad-mî-ral-ty, 105: s. The power or officers appointed for the administration of naval affairs.
ADMISSIBLE. See five words lower.
To ADMIT=äd-mit', v. a. To suffer to enter; to suffer to enter upon an office; to allow an argument or position; to allow or grant in general.
Ad-mit'-ta-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be admitted.
Ad-mit'-tance, s. The act of admitting; permission to enter; the power or right of entering; custom; concession of a position.
Ad-mit'-ter, 36: s. He that admits.

AD-MIS'-SI-BLE, (-mîs'-el-bl, 105, .01) a. That may be admitted.
Ad-mis'-si-bly, 105: ad. In an admissible manner.
AD-MIS'-ION, (-mîsh'-ün, 90) s. The act of admitting; admittance; the allowance of an argument.
To ADMIX=äd-micks', 154: v. a. To mingle with something else.
Ad-mix't, (-micks't, 114, 143) part. Mingled.
Ad-mix't-ion, (-yün, 146: hence, coll. äd-micks't-shün, 147) s. The union of one body with another.
Ad-mix'-ture, (-türe, 147) s. That which has been formed by admixtion.
To ADMONISH=äd-mön'-ish, v. a. To warn of a fault, to reprove gently.
Ad-mon'-ish-er, 36: s. He that admonishes.
Ad-mon'-ish-ment, s. Admonition; notice of faults or duties.
Ad-mon'-itive, (-tív, 105) a. That admonishes.
Ad-mon'-i-tor, 38: s. An adviser; one who reminds or warns.
Ad-mon'-i-tor-y, (-tör-ty, 129, 105: a. That admonishes.
Ad'-mo-ni'-ion, (-mô-nîsh'-ün, 89: s. The hint of a fault or duty; gentle reproof.
Ad'-mo-ni'-i-on-er, s. A general adviser. [Lauderous.]
ADMORTIZATION, äd-mor'-tè-zä'-shün, 85, 105, 89: s. The reducing of lands or tenements to mortmain.
To ADMOVE, äd-mööv', 107: v. a. To bring one thing to another.
ADMURMURATION, äd-mur'-mü-rä'-shün, 85, 89: s. The act of murmuring to another.
ADNASCENT=äd-näs'-cënt, 59: } a. Growing
ADNATE=äd'-näte, } upon.
ADNOUN=äd'-noun, 32: s. An adjective.
ADO, ä-dö', 107: s. Trouble; difficulty; bustle; tumult.
ADOLESCENCE=äd'-ô-lës'- } s. The age be-cence, } tween childhood
ADOLESCENCY, äd'-ô-lës'- } and manhood.
cën-cy, 105: }
To ADOPT=ä-döpt', v. a. To take a son by choice; to make him a son who is not so by birth; to take or assume generally, what was another's.
Ad-opt'-ed-ly, 105: ad. After the manner of something adopted.
Ad-opt'er, 36: s. He that adopts.
Ad-opt'-ive, (-tív, 105) a. That adopts or is adopted.
Ad-opt'-ion, 89: s. The act of adopting; the state of being adopted.
To ADORE=ä-döre', 47: v. a. To worship with external homage; to love intensely.
Ad'-ô-ra-ble, 47, 98, 101: a. Worthy of adoration; divine.
Ad'-ô-ra-ble-ness, s. Worthiness of adoration.
Ad'-ô-ra-bly, 105: ad. In an adorable manner.
Ad'-ô-rer, s. He that adores; a devoted lover.
Ad'-ô-ra-tion, 85, 89: s. Divine worship; homage.
To ADORN=ä-dorn'=ä-däurn', 37: v. a. To dress; decorate; embellish.
Ad-dorn'-ing, 72: s. Ornament; embellishment.
Ad-dorn-ment, s. Ornament; embellishment.
ADOWN=ä-down', 32: prep. and ad. Down towards the ground:—ad. Down on the ground.
ADREAD, ä-drëd', 120: ad. In a state of fear.
ADRIFT=ä-drift', ad. Floating at random.
ADROIT=ä-droit', 29: a. Skilful; active.
Ad-droit'-ly, 105: ad. Dextrously; cleverly.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

A-droit'-ness, s. Dexterity; readiness; activity.
ADRY=ā-dry', a. Athirst, thirsty.
ADSCITIOUS, ad'-cē-tish'-ūs, 105, 90, 120 : a. That is taken in to complete something else.
ADSTRICTION, ad'-strick'-shūn, 89 : s. The act of binding together.
ADULATOR=ād'-ū-lā'-tor, 147 : s. A flatterer.
Ad'-u-lā'-tress, s. She that flatters.
Ad'-u-lā'-tor-y, (-tōr'-ēy, 129, 105) a. Flattering.
Ad'-u-lā'-tion, 85, 89 : s. Flattery.
ADULT=ād-dūlt', a. and s. Grown up:—s. A person grown up.
Adult'-ness, s. The state of being adult.
To ADULTER=ād-dul'-ter, 36 : v. n. To commit adultery.
Ad-dul'-ter-ant, 129, 12 : s. That which adulterates.
Ad-dul'-ter-er, s. The person guilty of adultery.
Ad-dul'-ter-ess, s. A woman that commits adultery.
Ad-dul'-ter-ine, (-inc) s. The child of adultery.
Ad-dul'-ter-ous, 120 : a. Guilty of adultery.
Ad-dul'-ter-y, 105 : s. Violation of the marriage bed.
To Ad-dul'-ter-ate, v. n. and a. To commit adultery:—ad. To corrupt by some foreign mixture; to stain; to pollute.
Ad-dul'-ter-ate, a. Corrupted; polluted; debased.
Ad-dul'-ter-ate-ly, 105 : ad. In an adulterate manner.
Ad-dul'-ter-ate-ness, s. The quality or state of being adulterate.
Ad-dul'-ter-a'-tion, 85, 89 : s. The act of adulterating; the state of being adulterated.
To ADUMBRATE=ād-ūm'-brāte, v. a. To shadow out faintly.
Ad-um'-brant, 12 : a. Giving a slight resemblance.
Ad-um'-bra'-tion, 85, 89 : s. The giving a faint sketch; a shadow.
ADUNATION, ād'-ū-nā'-shūn, 85, 89 : s. The being united; union.
ADUNCOUS, ād-dūng'-cūs, 158, 120, } a.
ADUNQUE, ād-dūng'-k', 158, 145, } Crooked.
Ad-dunc'-i-ty, 105 : s. Crookedness, hookedness.
 According to the natural powers of the letters, this word is ad-dunc'-se-ty; but unless pronounced ad-dūng'-ce-ty, as if the c were double, its relationship to the foregoing words, and consequent meaning, will scarcely be understood.
To ADURE=ād-dūre', v. a. To burn up. [Obs.]
Ad-ur'-t, a. Burnt up; scorched : generally applied to the humours of the body.
Ad-dust'-ed, a. Burnt; dried with fire.
Ad-dust'-i-ble, 105, 101 : a. That may be burnt up.
Ad-dust'-ion, (-yūn, 146 : hence, colloq. ād-dūst'-shūn, 147) s. A burning up or drying.
To ADVANCE=ād-vānc', v. n. and new. To bring forward; to raise; to improve; to heighten; to propose; to pay beforehand; to aggrandize:—n. To come forward; to make improvement.
Ad-vance', 82 : s. The act of coming forward : a tendency to come forward to meet a lover; progression; rise from one point to another; improvement; progress towards perfection; in commerce, anticipation in time.
Ad-vance'-ment, s. The act of coming forward; the state of being advanced; preferment; improvement.
Ad-van'-cer, 36 : s. He that advances.
Ad-van'-cive, (-civ, 105) a. Tendency to advance, or promote.
ADVANTAGE, ād-vān'-tāg, 99 : s. Superiority; favourable circumstances; convenience; benefit; gain.
Ad-van'-tage-ground', s. Ground that gives superiority, and opportunities of annoyance or resistance.
To Ad-van'-tage, v. a. To benefit; to promote; to bring forward.

Ad-van'-taged, (-tāg'd, 114) part. a. Possessed of advantages.
Ad'-van-tage'-ous, 85, 90, 120 : a. Profitable; useful.
Ad-van-tage'-ous-ly, 105 : ad. Conveniently; opportunely.
Ad'-van-tage'-ous-ness, s. Profitableness; usefulness.
To ADVENE=ād-vēn', v. n. To accede to some thing, to come to; to be superadded.
Ad-ve'-ni-ent, 105 : a. Superadded.
Ad-van'-tine, (-vēn'-tīn, 105) } a. Adven-
Ad-ven'-tive, (-tīv, 105) } ing; extrin-
Ad'-ven-ti'-tious, (-tish'-ūs, 90, 120) } sically add-
 The first two are in little use.
Ad-ven'-tu-al, 147 : a. Relating to the season of Advent.
Ad'-vent, 81 : s. A coming; appropriately, the coming of Christ, a season of devotion during four weeks before Christmas.
Ad-vēn'-ture, (tūrt, colloq. -ch'oor, 147) s. An accident; a chance; a hazard; an enterprise in which something is at hazard; in commerce, goods sent to a foreign market at a venture.
To Ad-ven'-ture, v. n. and v. To put into the power of chance:—n. To try the chance; to dare.
Ad-ven'-tu-rer, 36 : s. He that adventures.
Ad-ven'-tu-rous, 120 : a. Inclined to adventures; bold; daring; courageous; danger us.
Ad-ven'-tu-rous-ly, 105 : ad. Boldly; daringly.
Ad-ven'-tu-rous-ness, s. The act of being adventurous.
Ad-ven'-ture-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Adventurous.
Ad-ven'-ture-some-ness, s. The quality of being adventurous.
ADVERB=ād'-verb, 36 : s. A word joined to a verb or adjective, in such a manner that the two have one meaning.
Ad-verb'-i-al, 105, 146 : a. Pertaining to an adverb.
Ad-verb'-i-al-ly ad. In the manner of an adverb.
ADVERSARIA=ād-ver'-sār'-ē-d, 41, 105 : s. A common-place book named from the placing of accounts in opposition to each other. Compare the following.
ADVERSE=ād'-verse, 36, 153, a. Turned against; acting with contrary directions; calamitous; afflictive, opposed to prosperous.
Ad'-verse-ly, 105 : ad. Oppositely; unfortunately.
Ad'-ver-sar-y, (-sār'-ēy, 129, 105) s. and a. An opponent; an enemy:—a. Adverse; hostile.
To Ad-verse', 81 : v. a. To oppose. [Obs.]
Ad-verse'-ness, s. Opposition.
Ad-ver'-sa-tive, (-sā-tiv, 98, 105) a. That makes or induces variety; e.g. but is an adversative conjunction.
Ad-ver'-si-ty, 105 : s. Affliction; calamity; misfortune; misery.
To ADVERT=ād-vert', 35 : v. n. To turn or attend to; to regard; to observe.
Ad-ver'-tent, a. Attentive.
Ad-ver'-tence, } s. Attention to.
Ad-ver'-ten-cy, 105, }
To ADVERTISE, ād-ver'-tīze, 85, 137 : v. a. To inform; to give public notice.
Ad'-ver-ti'-ser, (-zer) s. He that advertises.
Ad'-ver-ti'-sing, 72 : a. Giving intelligence.
AD-VER'-TISE-MENT, (ād-ver'-tīz-mēnt, 105) 86
s. Intelligence; information; notice of any thing published in a paper of intelligence; legal notification.
 This word, if use would permit, should have its primary accent on the first syllable, and a secondary accent lengthening the i on the third; as in the words preceding it.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-un, i. e. mission, 165 vīzh ūn, i. e. vision, 165 thēn, 166

- 7. ADVESPERATE = ăd-vēs'-pēr-ătu, 129: v. n. To draw towards evening.
- To ADVISE, ăd-vīz', 137: v. a. and n. To counsel, to inform, to make acquainted:—acc. To consult, to deliberate.
- Ad-vīz'd', (-vīz'd, 114) part. a. Acting with deliberation and design: prudent, wise: performed with deliberation, acted with design.
- Ad-vīz'er, (-zer) s. One that advises.
- Ad-vīz'e-ment, s. Counsel, information, prudence, circumspection.
- Ad-vī-sa-ble, (-z'd-bl, 98, 101) a. Prudent, expedient, fit.
- Ad-vī-sa-ble-ness, s. The being advisable.
- Ad-vī-sed-ly, (-zēd-lē, 105) ad. Deliberately, purposely, by design, prudently.
- Ad-vī-sed-ness, s. Deliberation, prudent procedure.
- Ad-vīck', (-vīck, 137) s. Counsel, instruction, intelligence.
- Ad-vīce-boat, 108: s. A vessel employed in bringing intelligence.
- To ADVOCATE = ăd'-vō-căte, v. a. and n. To plead the cause of another, to support, to defend:—neu. To perform the office of an advocate.
- Ad-vō-cate, s. He that pleads the cause of another; an intercessor, a defender; formerly the patron of a church.
- Ad-vō-cate-ship, s. The duty or place of an advocate: the assistance or support of a great person in a suit.
- Ad-vō-ca'-cy, (-cā-cēy, 105) s. Vindication, defence, apology.
- Ad-vō-ca'-tion, 85, 89: s. Act or office of pleading; defence.
- ADVOLUTION, ăd'-vō-lă'-shūn, 89: s. The act of flying to something.
- ADVOLUTION, ăd'-vō-l'w'-shūn, 109, 89: s. The act of rolling to something.
- ADVOU'RY, ăd-vow'-trēy, 31, 105: s. Adultery.
- Ad-vou't-ter, 36: s. An adulterer.
- Ad-vou't-tress, s. An adulteress.
- ADVOWSON = ăd-vow'-sūn, 116: s. A right to present to a benefice.
- Ad-vow-ee', s. He that has the right of advowson.
- ADZ = ădz, s. The same as Adice, which see.
- ÆDILE, ÆNIGMA, &c. See Edile, Enigma, &c.
- ÆGILOPS, ē'-gē-lōps, 105: s. A tumor in the corner of the eye; a plant so called.
- ÆGIS, ē'-gis, 103: s. A shield.
- ÆGYPTIACUM, ē'-gīp-tī'-d-cūm, 103: s. An ointment of honey, verdigris, and vinegar.
- ÆTITES, ē-tī-tēcz, 103, 101, 151: s. Eagle stone.
- AERIE, or ÆRIE, ē'-rēy, 103: s. A nest of hawks or other birds of prey; a brood of such birds.
- AER = ă'-r, f = ă'-ur = ăir, 41: s. The classical word for air, used in various compounded words.
- Aer-i-form, (ăir'-ē-fărm, 37) a. In the form of, or resembling air.
- To A'er-ate, (ă'-ēr-ăte) v. a. To combine with fixed air.
- A-e'-ri-al, (ă-ē'-rē-ăl, 2, 90, 105) a. Belonging to the air; placed in air; high.
- Aer'-o-man-cy, (ăir'-ō-măn-cēy, 87) s. The art of divining by the air.
- Aer'-o-naut, (-năwt, 123) s. One who sails through the air.
- Aer-og'-ra-phy, (-ră-fēy, 98, 163, 105) 87: s. The description of the air.
- Aer-ol'-o-gy, 87, 105: s. The doctrine of the air.
- Aer-om'-e-ter, s. A machine for measuring the air.
- Aer-om'-e-try, 87, 105: s. The art of measuring the air.
- Aer-os'-co-py, 103: s. The observation of the air.
- Aer'-o-sta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The science of weighing the air; the art or power of sustaining and guiding machines in and through the air. Or Aerostatics.
- AFAIR = ă-far', ad. At or to a great distance.
- AFEARD = ă-ēard', part. a. Afraid. [Obs. or vulgar.]
- AFER = ă'-fēr, 36: s. The south-west wind.
- AFFABLE, ăf-fă-bl, 98, 101: a. Easy of manners, courteous, complaisant.
- ăf-fă-ble-ness, s. Courtesy, affability.
- ăf-fă-bly, 105: ad. Courteously, civilly.
- ăf-fă-bil'-i-ty, 105, 81: s. The quality of being affable.
- AFFABROUS, ăf-fă-brūs, 120: a. Skillfully made: complete.
- AFFABULATION, ăf-făb-ū-lă'-shūn, 85, 89: s. The moral of a fable.
- AFFAIR = ăf-fār', 100, 41: s. Business; something to be managed or transacted.
- To AFFEAR or AFFEER = ăf-fēr', 103, 43: v. a. To confirm, to establish. [Obs.]—See AFFIRE.
- To AFFECT = ăf-fēct', v. a. To act upon; to move the passions; to aim at; to be fond of; to make a show of something: see lower.
- ăf-fēct', s. Affection. [Obs.]
- ăf-fēct'-ed, part. a. Moved.—See also lower.
- ăf-fēct'-ing, 72: part. a. Moving the passions, moving the sensibility.
- ăf-fēct'-ing-ly, 105: ad. In an affecting manner.
- ăf-fēct'-ive, (-tīv, 105) a. That affects; that strongly touches.
- ăf-fēct'-ive-ly, 105: ad. In an impressive manner.
- ăf-fēct'-u'-tion, 89: s. Fondness. [Obs.] The act or quality of assuming a manner not one's own.
- To ăf-fēct', v. a. To imitate unnaturally.
- ăf-fēct'-ed, a. Full of affection.
- ăf-fēct'-ed-ly, ad. In an affected manner.
- ăf-fēct'-ter, or ăf-fēct'-tor, 36, 38: s. One that is guilty of affection.
- ăf-fēct'-tion, 89: s. Love; kindness; desire; good will.
- ăf-fēct'-tioned, (-shūnd, 114) a. Affected: con-cited. [Obs.] Inclined, mentally disposed.
- ăf-fēct'-tion-ate, a. Full of affection; zealous; fond.
- ăf-fēct'-tion-ate-ly, 105: ad. Fondly; tenderly.
- ăf-fēct'-tion-ate-ness, s. Fondness, tenderness, good will.
- ăf-fēct'-tu-ous, 147, 120: a. Full of passion. [Obs.]
- To AFFERE = ăf-fēr', v. a. To confirm. (See AFFEAR.) Also to assess a penalty, or reduce it to precise sum.
- ăf-fē'-rora, (-rorz, 38, 151) s. pl. Persons appointed to assess or reduce a penalty.
- AFFETTUOSO, ăf-fē-tu-ō-sō-zō, [Ital. adj.] 170: ad. A direction in music to play or sing tenderly.
- AFFIANCE. See under Affy.
- AFFIDATION, ăf-fē-dă'-shūn, 85, 105, 89: s. Mutual con-tract; mutual oath of fidelity.
- AFFIDATURE, ăf-fē-dă-tūre, 85, 147: s. A declaration upon oath.
- AFFILIATION, ăf-fīl'-ē-ă'-shūn, 85, 89: s. Adoption; assignment of a child to its father.
- AFFINAGE, ăf-fē-năge, 105, 99: s. The act of refining metals by the cupel.
- AFFINED = ăf-fīnd', 114: part. a. Related to another.
- ăf-fīn'-i-ty, (-fīn'-l-ēy, 81, 105) s. Relation by marriage; relation to, or connection with.
- To AFFIRM, ăf-fēr'm', 35: v. n. and a. To declare, to assert confidently; opposed to the word Deay

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

—act. To ratify or approve a former law or judgment.

Af-firm'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be affirmed.

Af-firm'-ant, s. One that affirms.

Af-firm'-ance, s. Confirmation; opposed to repeal.

Af-firm'-a-tive, (-d-tiv, 103) a. and s. That affirms; that can or may be affirmed: positive, dogmatical;—s. That which contains an affirmation.

Af-firm'-a-tive-ly, 105: ad. On the positive side, not negatively.

Af-firm'-er, 36: s. He that affirms.

Af-fir'-ma'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of affirming: in law, the solemn declaration of a Quaker answering to an oath.

To AFFIX, āf-ficks', 154: v. a. To unite to the end; to subjoin.

Af-fix'-ion, (-fick'-shūn, 154) s. The act of affixing; the state of being affixed.

Af'-fix, 81: s. A particle united to the end of a word.

AFFLATION, āf-fā'-shūn, 89: s. The act of breathing upon any thing.

Af-fla'-tus, s. Communication of the power of prophecy.

To AFFLICT=āf-flict', v. a. To put in pain; to grieve; to torment.

Af-flict'-ed-ness, s. Sorrowfulness, grief.

Af-flict'-er, 36: s. One that afflicts.

Af-flict'-ing-ly, 105: ad. In an afflicting manner.

Af-flic'-tive, (-tiv, 105) a. Painful, tormenting.

Af-flic'-tive-ly, 105: ad. Painfully.

Af-flic'-tion, 89: s. The cause of pain or sorrow; calamity; the state of sorrowfulness, misery.

AFFLUENT, āf-f'oo'-ēnt, 109: a. Flowing to any part; abundant; exuberant; wealthy. See Supp.

Af'-flu-ence, } s. Riches; plenty; abundance.

Af'-flu-en-cy, 105: }

Af'-flu-ent-ly, 105: ad. In an affluent manner.

Af'-flux, (-flücks) } 154: s. Act of Af-flux'-ion, (-flück'-shūn) } flowing to.

AFFORAGE=āf-fōr'-āge, 129, 99: s. A duty paid in France to the lord of a district for permission to sell wine, &c. within his seignory.

To AFFORD, āf-fōrd'=āf-fō'urd, 130, 47: v. a. To yield or produce; to grant or confer; to be able to bear expenses.

To AFFOREST=āf-fōr'-ēst, 129: v. a. To turn [ground] into forest.

Af-fōr'-es-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. Turning ground into forest.

To AFFRANCHISE, āf-frān'-chiz, 63, 105, 137: v. a. To make free.

To AFFRAY=āf-frā'y', v. a. To fight. [Obs.]

Af-fray', 82: s. A quarrel, disturbance, tumult.

To AFFREIGHT, āf-frā'te', 100, 162: v. a. To hire a ship for freight.

AFFRICTION, āf-frick'-shūn, 89: s. The act of rubbing one thing upon another.

To AFFRIGHT, āf-frit'e', 115, 162: v. a. To alarm; to terrify.

Af-fright', 82: s. Terror; fear.

Af-fright'-ed-ly, 105: ad. Under the impression of fear.

Af-fright'-ful, 117: a. Full of affright; terrible.

Af-fright'-ment, s. Fear; terror; fearfulness.

To AFFRONT, āf-frūnt', 116: v. a. To insult; to offend; to meet face to face, Hamlet III. 1.

Af-front', 82: s. Insult; outrage.

Af-front'-er, 36: s. He that affronts.

Af-front'-ing, 72: part. a. Contumelious.

Af-front'-ive, (-frūn'-tiv, 105) a. Causing affront.

Af-front'-ive-ness, s. The quality that gives affront.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thū, 166: thēn. 166.

To AFFUSE, āf-fūz'e', 137: v. a. To pour one thing on another.

Af-fu'-sion, (-zhūn, 90) s. The act of affusing.

To AFFY=āf-fy', v. a. and n. To betroth in order to marriage:—n. To put confidence or trust in.

Af-fied', (-fid, 114) part. a. Affianced.

Af-fi'-ance, s. A marriage contract; trust in general, confidence; trust in the divine providence and protection.

Af-fi'-an-cer, 36: s. He that makes a contract of marriage between two persons.

To Af-fi'-ance, v. a. To betroth, to bind any one by promise to marry another; to give confidence.

AFIELD, ā-fēld', 103: ad. To the field; in the field.

AFLAT=ā-fāt', ad. Level with the ground.

AFLOAT=ā-float', ad. Floating.

AFOOT, ā-fōot', 118: ad. On foot, not on horseback; in action, as, A design is afoot.

AFORE=ā-fōre', 47: prep. and ad. Before; sooner in time; nearer in place:—ad. In time past; in front.

Afore'-go-ing, 72: part. a. Going before.

Afore'-hand, ad. By previous provision; prepared.

Afore'-men-tioned, (-shūnd, 89, 114) a. Mentioned before.

Afore'-named, 114: a. Named before.

Afore'-said, a. Said before.

Afore'-time, ad. In time past.

AFRAID=ā-frāud', part. a. Struck with fear, terrified; fearful.

AFRESH=ā-frēsh', ad. Anew; again.

AFRONT, ā-frūnt', 116: ad. In front; in direct opposition.

AFTER=āf-ter, 11, 36: prep. and ad. Following in place; in pursuit of; behind; posterior in time; according to; in imitation of:—ad. In succeeding time; following another.

Aft, ad. [A sea term.] Aft; behind.

Af'-ter-a'-ges, (-giz, 113, 151) s. pl. Succeeding times; posterity.

Af'-ter-all, (-āul, 112) ad. At last; in fine; in conclusion.

Af'-ter-birth, (-berth) s. The secundine.

Af'-ter-clap, s. Unexpected event, happening after the affair is supposed to be at an end.

Af'-ter-cost, (-cōst) s. The expense incurred after the original plan is executed.

Af'-ter-crop, s. Second harvest.

Af'-ter-game, s. Methods taken after the first turn of affairs.

Af'-ter-hours, (-owrz, 56, 143) s. pl. The hours that succeed those usually devoted to business.

Af'-ter-math, (-māth) s. Second crop of grass, mown in autumn.

Af'-ter-most, (-mōst, 116) a. Hindmost.

Af'-ter-noon, s. The time from the meridian to the evening.

Af'-ter-pains, 143: s. pl. Pains after giving birth.

Af'-ter-part, s. The latter part.

Af'-ter-piece, (-pēce, 103) s. A farce or any other short entertainment after the play.

Af'-ter-proof, s. Posterior evidence; realities known by subsequent experience.

Af'-ter-state, s. The future state.

Af'-ter-taste, 111: s. Taste remaining on the tongue after the draught.

Af'-ter-thought, (-thāwt, 126, 162) s. Reflections after the act; expedients formed too late.

Af'-ter-times, 143: s. pl. Succeeding times.

Af'-ter-ward, or af'-ter-wards. (-word=wurd, 38 ad. In succeeding time.

Af'-ter-wit, s. Contrivance of expedients, after the occasion of using them is past.

AGA=ā'-gd, s. A military title in Turkey.

AGAIN, ā'-guēn', 119: ad. A second time; once more; in return; noting re-action. In old authors, Agēn.

AGAINST, ā'-guēn'st, 119: prep. In opposition to; contrary; in contradiction to; opposite.

AGALAXY=ā'-gāl-āck'-sēy, 154, 105: s. Want of milk.—See A.

AGAPE=d-gāp', 97: ad. Staring with eagerness.

AGARIC=āg'-d-rīc, 92: s. A drug of use in physic, and the dying trade.

AGAST.—See Aghast.

AGATE=d-gāt', ad. On the way. [Provincial.]

AGATE=āg'-āt'=āg'-gūēt, 99: s. A precious stone of the lowest class.

Ag'-a-ty, 98, 105: a. Of the nature of agate.

To AGAZE=d-gāz', v. a. To strike with amazement.

AGE=āgt, s. Any period of time; a generation of men; a hundred years; maturity; decline of life.

A'-ged, a. Old, stricken in years.

A'-ged-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of an old person.

AGEN, ā'-guēn', 77: ad. Again; in return.—See Again.

AGENT=ā'-gēnt, a. and s. Acting upon; active:—s. A substitute; a deputy; a factor; that which has the power of operating.

A'-gen-cy, 105: s. Action; acting for another.

A'-gēn'-dā, 98: s. pl. Things to be done:—s. sing. The pocket or memorandum-book in which agenda are noted down.

AGGELATION, ā'-d-gē-lā'-shūn, 143, 85, 89: s. A concretion of ice.

AGGENERATION, ā'-d-gēn'-ēr-ā'-shūn, 143, 85, 89: s. The state of growing to another body.

AGGER, ā'-d-ger, 143, 38: s. A heap; the elevated part of a military way; a fortress; a trench.

To Ag'-ger-ate, 129: v. a. To heap up.

Ag'-ger-ose, (ā'-gē, 152) a. Full of heaps.

To AGGLOMERATE=āg'-glōm'-ēr-āt', v. a. and s. To gather up in a ball, as thread:—neu. To grow into one mass.

Ag'-glom'-er-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. A growing or heaping together.

To AGGLUTINATE, āg'-gl'ō'-tē-nāt', 109, 105: v. a. To unite one part to another.

Ag'-glu'-ti-nant, a. Uniting parts together; agglutinants are medicines having power to unite parts.

Ag'-glu'-ti-na'-tive, (-tīv, 105) 85: a. Having the power of procuring agglutination.

To AGGRANDIZE, āg'-grān-dīz', v. a. To make great; to enlarge; to exalt.

Ag'-gran-dī'-zer, 85: s. He that aggrandizes.

Ag'-gran-dīz'-ment, 85: s. The state of being aggrandized.

67 The last word, like advertisement, deviates in the mouths of many speakers from the accentuation here given, which is obviously suggested by its foregoing relations; but in this word the irregularity is not so general as in advertisement, and may be opposed without pedantry.

Ag'-gran'-dī-za'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of aggrandizing or exalting.

To AGGRAVATE=āg'-grā-vāt', v. a. To make any thing worse; to enhance guilt or calamity.

Ag'-gra-va'-tion, 89: s. The act of aggravating.

To AGGREGATE=āg'-grē-gāt', v. a. To collect together; to heap many particulars into one mass.

Ag'-gre-gate, a. and s. Framed by the collection of particular parts into one mass:—a. The result of the conjunction of many particulars.

Ag'-gre-gate-ly, 85, 105: ad. Collectively.

Ag'-gre-ga'-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Taken together.

Ag'-gre-ga'-tor, s. He that aggregates materials.

Ag'-gre-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. Collection; the act of collecting many into one whole.

To AGGRESS=āg'-grēss', v. a. To commit the first act of violence.

Ag'-gres-sive, 105: a. Making the first attack.

Ag'-gres-sor, s. The person who commences the hostility.

Ag'-gress-ion, (-grēsh'-ūn, 90) s. The first act of injury.

To AGGRIEVE, āg'-grēv', 103: v. a. and s. To give sorrow; to vex; to impose; to hurt in one's right:—neu. To mourn; to lament.

Ag'-grieved, (-grēvd', 114) part. a. Afflicted; injured.

Ag'-griev'-ance, 12: s. Injury, wrong.

To AGGROUPE, āg'-grōop', 125: v. a. To bring together.

AGHAST, d-gāst', 162: a. Struck with horror, as at the sight of a spectre. More correctly, but less usually, agast, as from the verb To Agaze.

AGILE, ād'-gīl, 64, 105: a. Nimble; ready; active.

Ag'-ile-ness, } 81, 105: s. Nimbleness; quick.

Ag'-il'-i-ty, } ness; activity.]

AGIO, ād'-gē-ō, [Ital.] 170: s. A mercantile term for the difference between the value of bank-notes and current money, in Venice and Holland.

To AGIST=d-gīst', 64: v. a. To take in and feed cattle in the king's forest, and to gather the money.

Ag'-gist'-ment, s. The feeding of cattle in a common pasture for a stipulated price; tithe due for the profit made by agisting; an embankment, earth heaped up.

Ag'-gist'-or, 38: s. The officer appointed to take the cattle into the king's forest.

To AGITATE, ād'-gē-tāt', 64, 105: v. a. To put in motion; to actuate; to move; to affect with perturbation; to bandy; to discuss; to controvert; to contrive; to revolve.

Ag'-i-ta-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be agitated.

Ag'-i-ta'-tor, 85: s. He that manages affairs; a term used of certain military counsellors, who managed the affairs of the parliament army during the rebellion; generally, one who causes agitation.

Ag'-i-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The state of being agitated; discussion; violent motion of the mind.

AGLET=āg'-lēt, s. A tag of a point carved into some representation of an animal; the pendants at the ends of the clives of flowers.

AGMINAL, āg'-mē-nāl, 105: a. Belonging to a troop.

AGNAIL=āg'-nāl, s. A whitlow.

AGNATE=āg'-nāt', a. Akin from the father's side.

Ag-na'-tion, 89: s. Descent from the same father in a direct male line; alliance generally.

Ag-na'-ic, 93: a. Relating to kindred by descent from the father.

To AGNIZE=āg'-nīz', v. a. To acknowledge; to own.

AG-NIT'-ION, 89, 95: s. Acknowledgement. This word, though classically related to the preceding, is not formed from it, or it would have been agnisum, rhyming with revision.

To AGNOMINATE, āg'-nōm'-ē-nāt', 92, 94, 105: v. a. To name.

Ag-nom'-i-na'-tion, 85, 105, 89: s. A surname, allusion of one word to another.

AGNUS=āg'-nūs, s. The image of a lamb used in Catholic devotions.

Ag-nus-cas'-tus, s. A tree so called.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāte-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'; lāw; gōd; j'ōw, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, &c. mute, 171.

ALEXIPHARMIC, ǎ-lěck'-ě-far"-míc, 154, 105, 163: a. and s. That drives away poison; antidotal:—s. An antidote.
ALEX-TER-IC, 154, 88, 129: a. and s. That drives away poison:—s. An antidote.

ALGA=ǎl'-gǎ, 142: s. Sea weed. pl. Algæ (jěe)
Al'-gæ, 120: a. Abounding with sea weed.

ALGATES, ǎl'-gátus, 112: ad. On any terms; although. [Obs.]

ALGEBRA=ǎl'-gě-brǎ, 142: s. Universal arithmetic, or a method of computation by signs, commonly the letters of the alphabet. It takes an unknown quantity sought, as if granted; and by means of quantities given, proceeds till the quantity sought is discovered.

Al'-ge-brā"-ic, 88: } a. Relating to algebra.

Al'-ge-brā"-i-cal, 105: } a.

Al'-ge-brā"-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. By means of algebra.

Al'-ge-brā"-ist, 85: s. A person that understands or practises the science of algebra.

ALGID=ǎl'-gíd, 142, 64: a. Cold; chill.

Al'-gid-ness,

Al'-gid'-i-ty, 81, 105: } s. Chiliness; cold

Al'-gid'-ic, 64, 88: a. That produces cold.

Al'-gór, 142, 77, 38: s. Extreme cold; chiliness.

ALGORISM, ǎl'-gǒ-ríz-m, 158: } 142: s. Arabic

ALGORITHM=ǎl'-gǒ-ríth-m, } words implying computation by numbers, in general only so far as the first simple rules extend.

ALGUAZIL, ǎl'-gǎ-zē-l', [Sp.] 170: s. An inferior officer of justice in Spain: a constable.

ALIAS, ǎl'-lē-áss, ad. A Latin word signifying otherwise, as, Smith, alias Brown; a writ of capias issued a second time.

ALIBI, ǎl'-lē-bý, 92, 6: s. Elsewhere. In law, the plea of a person who alleges that he was elsewhere than at the place stated in the charge against him.

ALIBLE.—See under Aliment.

ALIEN, ǎl'-yě-n, 146: a. and s. Foreign, or not of the same family or land; estranged from, not allied to:—s. A foreigner, not a citizen; a stranger; in law, an alien is one born in a strange country, and never enfranchised.

Al'-lien-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Of which the property may be transferred.

To Al'-lien-ate, v. a. To transfer the property in anything to another; to withdraw the heart or affections.

Al'-lien-ate, a. and s. Withdrawn from; estranged:—s. One estranged.

Al'-lien-a-tór, 85, 38: s. He who alienates.

Al'-lien-a"-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of transferring property; the state of being alienated; change of affection.

ALIFEROUS, ǎl'-fě-ěr-ús, } 81, 129, 120: a.

ALIGEROUS, ǎl'-líd'-gě-ěr-ús, } Having wings. Sup.

To ALIGHT, ǎl'-lít', 105, 162: v. n. To come down, as from a horse or carriage; to fall upon.

ALIKE=ǎl'-lík', ad. With resemblance; in the same manner.

ALIMENT, ǎl'-lē-měnt, 105: s. Nutrition; food.

Al'-i-men"-tal, a. That has the quality of aliment, that nourishes.

Al'-i-men"-tal-ly, 105: ad. So as to serve for nourishment.

Al'-i-men"-tar-y, (-tār-ě-y, 129, 105) a. Belonging to aliment; having the power of nourishing.

Al'-i-men"-tar-i-ness, s. The quality of being alimentary.

Al'-i-men-ta"-tion, 85, 89: s. The power of affording aliment; the state of being nourished.

Al'-i-ment, 105, 101: a. Nutritive; nourishing.

Al'-i-mō"-ni-ous, 90, 105, 129: a. Nourishing.

Al'-i-mon-y, (-mōn-ě-y, 18, 105) s. That which is to support or nourish, being the legal portion of the husband's estate set apart for the wife on a separation.

Al'-i-ture, 105, 147: s. Allment; food.

ALIQUNT, ǎl'-lē-kwǎnt, 105, 76, 145, 142: a. Aliquant parts of a number are such as will never make up the number exactly, as 3 is an aliquant of 10.

Al'-i-quot, (-kwōt, 141) a. Aliquot parts of any number or quantity, are such as will exactly measure it without any remainder, as 3 is an aliquot part of 12.

ALIVE=ǎl' līv', a. In the state of life, not dead; unextinguished; undestroyed; active; cheerful, sprightly; it is used for emphasis; as The best man alive.

ALKAHEST=ǎl'-kǎ-hěst, 142: s. A pretended universal dissolvent. It is sometimes used for fixed salts volatilized.

ALKALI, ǎl'-kǎ-lě-y, 105: s. sing. } 142. Pot.

ALKALIES, ǎl'-kǎ-lě-z, 120: s. pl. } ash, soda, and ammonia, were the substances to which this name was confined; but all substances now come under the denomination that have a caustic taste, are volatilizable by heat, capable of combining with and destroying the acidity of acids, soluble in water even when combined with carbonic acid, and capable of converting vegetable blues into green. Al'kaloid is a subs. like alkali.

67 The terminating i (a monster in English orthography) holds exactly the situation of its equivalent y in dignity, &c. and is correctly pronounced in the same manner. The word cannot, as a noun singular, class with the Latin plurals, literati, genii, &c. which are admitted exceptions. 6.

Al' ka line, (-lín, 105) a. That has the qualities of alkali.

Al'-ka-lin'-i-ty, 105: s. The quality which constitutes an alkali.

To Al'-ka-lize, (līze,) v. a. To make alkaline; to communicate the properties of an alkali to, by mixture; formerly, to alkalinize.

Al'-ka-les"-cent, a. That has a tendency to the properties of an alkali.

Al'-ka-les"-cen-cy, 105: s. A tendency to become alkaline, or to take the properties of an alkali.

Al'-ka-lig"-e-nous, (-líd'-gě-nus, 120) a. Generating alkali.

Al'-ka-lim"-e-ter, s. An instrument for ascertaining the strength of alkalies. Hence, Alkalim'etry.

Al'-kal'-i-ty, (ǎl'-kǎl'-ě-ty) v. a. To convert into an alkali.

Al'-kal'-i-zate, a. Impregnated with alkali. [Obs.]

Al'-kal'-i-za"-tion, s. The act of rendering alkaline.

ALKANET=ǎl'-kǎ-nět, 142: s. The plant bugloss.

ALKEKENG, ǎl'-kě-kě-n'-gě-y, 105: s. The winter cherry.

ALKERMES, ǎl'-kě-r'-mě-z, 142, 35, 101: s. A conffection of which kermes berries are the basis.

ALKORAN=ǎl'-kǎ-rǎn, 142: s. The Mahometan bible, the book written and left for faith and practice by Mahomet.

67 Orientalists in general pronounce this word al-korawn'.

ALL, ǎl, 112: a., s., and ad. The whole of; every one of; the whole quantity of; every part of:—s. The whole; every thing:—ad. Quite, completely; altogether, wholly.

All-fours, (-fō-urz, 133, 47, 143) s. A low game at cards, played by two.

All-hail, (-hǎil') int. and s. All health

All-hal'-lou-n, (-hǎl'-lōn, 142, 125) } s. The time

All-hal'-lou-mas, (-lō-más) } about All

All-hal'-lou-tide, (-tīde) } Saints' day, which is on the 1st of November.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mǐsh-ŭn, i. e. mission, 165: vǐzh-ŭn, s. e. vision, 165: thǐn, 166: thěn, 166.

Air'-pipe, s. A pipe used to extract foul air.

Air'-poise, (-poi^z, 137) s. An instrument for weighing the air.

Air'-pump, s. A machine by means of which the air is exhausted out of proper vessels.

Air'-shaft, s. A passage for the air into mines.

Air'-tight, (-tīt, 115, 162) a. Impervious to the air.

aisle, īle, 106, 157: s. A wing of the choir in a church; a walk in the church.

ait=āit, s. A small island in a river.

AIZOUM=āi-zō'-ūm, s. The name of an aquatic evergreen.

ajar, d-jar', 33: ad. Partly opened.

AJUTAGE, ād'-joo-tāje, 64, 109, 99: s. An additional pipe to water works.

AKE.—See Acha.

AKIN=d-kīn', a. Related to; allied to by blood.

ALABASTER, āl'-d-bās'-ter, 85, 11: s. and a. A kind of soft marble less hard and easier to cut than the other kinds:—a. Made of alabaster.

LACK=d-läck', int. Alas, an expression of sorrow.

A-lack'-a-day', int. Denoting sorrow;

ALACRITY, d-läck'-krē-tēy, 105: s. Cheerfulness; sprightliness; gaiety. A-lac'-ri-ous, a. whence A-lac'-ri-ous-ly, (-ūs-lēy, 120, 105) ad. With alacrity.

d-lac'-ri-ous-ness, s. Briakness, alacrity.

ALAMODE=d-lā-mōde', [Fr.] 170: ad. According to the fashion.

ALARM=d-larm', 33: s. A cry of danger; sudden terror.

To A-larm', v. a. To call to arms; to surprise with the apprehension of any danger; to disturb.

A-larm'-ing, 72: part. a. Terrifying, awakening; surprising.

A-larm'-ing-ly, 105: ad. In an alarming manner.

A-larm'-ist, s. An exciter of alarms.

A-larm'-bell, s. The bell that is rung to give the alarm.

A-larm'-post, (-pōst, 116) s. The post appointed to appear at, in case of alarm.

A-larm'-watch, (-wōtch, 140) s. A watch that strikes the hour by regular movement.

A-lar'-um, 129: s. An alarm clock.—See Alarm.

ALAS=d-lās', 11: int. A word of lamentation or pity.

ALATE=d-lāte', ad. Lately. [Obs.] A'late, Supp.

ALB=ālb, 142: s. A surplice worn by Catholic priests.

ALBATROSS=āl'-bd-trōss, 142: s. A large south sea bird.

ALBE, i. e. all-be, āl'-bē, } 112: ad.

ALBEIT, i. e. all-be'-it, āl'-bē'-it, } Although; notwithstanding.

ALBESCENT=āl'-bēs' cēnt, 142: a. Becoming white or whitish.

AL-BI'-NO, s. An African unnaturally white.

AL-BU'-GO, s. A disease in the eyes, by which the corner contracts a whit-ness.

AL-bu-giu''-e-ous, 142, 85, 105: a. Like the white of an egg.

AL-BUM, s. A blank book for the insertion of autographs, &c. still preserving its name blank or filled.

ALBIGENSES, āl'-bē-gēn''-cēz, 142, 85, 105: s. pl. A sect of Protestants, so called from Albi in Upper Languedoc, where they originated.

ALCAHEST.—See Alkahest.

ALCAIC=āl-cā'-ic, 142: a. and s. Agreeing in measure with a verse first used by Alcaeus:—s. The measure itself.

ALCAID=āl-cāid', 142: s. In Barbary, the governor of a castle; in Spain, the judge of a city.

ALCANNA=āl-cān'-nd, 142: s. An Egyptian plant used in dyeing.

ALCHYMY, āl'-kē-mēy, 142, 161, 105: s. The pretended science of the transmutation of metals occult chemistry; a mixed metal so called.

Q The spelling of what was formerly written chymistry, is now changed to chemistry; but alchymy and its relations retain the old orthography.

Al'-chy-mist, 105: s. A professor of alchymy.

Al'-chy-mist''-i-cal, 85, 105: a. Acting like an alchymist.

Al'-chym'-i-cal, 81, 92: a. Relating to alchymy.

Al'-chym'-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of an alchymist.

ALCOHOL=āl'-cō-hōl, 142: s. Highly rectified or pure spirit; formerly it meant any thing reduced to impalpable powder.

To Al''-co-ho-lize', 142, 85: v. a. To rectify spirits till they are wholly dephlegmated.

Al'-co-hol''-i-za''-tion, 85, 105, 89: s. The act of alcoholizing or rectifying spirits.

ALCORAN.—See Alkoran.

ALCOVE=āl-cōve', 142, 107: s. A recess of a chamber or library; an arbour in a garden.

ALDER, āl'-dēr, 112: s. A tree resembling the hazel.

Al'-dern a. Made of alder.

ALDERMAN, āl'-der-mān, 112: s. Among our Saxon ancestors, the same as a senator, governor, or magistrate, chosen on account of years and experience. At present, the term is generally applied to the members of a town or city corporation.

Al'-dēr-man-ly, 105: }

Al''-der-man-like', (-līke) } a. Resembling an alderman.

ALE=āle, s. A liquor made by infusing malt in hot water, and then fermenting the liquor.

Ale'-ber-ry, 129, 105: s. A beverage made by boiling ale with spice and sugar and soups of bread.

Ale'-brewer, (-broor, 133, 52) s. One that professes to brew ale.

Ale'-con-ner, 36: s. An officer in the city of London who inspects the measures of public houses.

Ale'-house, 152: s. A house where ale is sold.

Ale'-knight, (-nīte, 157, 162) s. A pot companion; a tippler. [Obs.]

Ale'-wash, (-wōsh, 140, 143) a. Soaked in ale.

Ale'-wife, s. A woman that keeps an alehouse.

Ale'-vat, s. The tub in which ale is fermented.

A'-lish, (āl'-ish) a. Having the qualities of ale.

ALe'-cost, (-cōst) s. The herb costmary.

ALe'-hoor, s. Ground ivy.

Al'-e-oar, (āl'-ē-gar, 38) 92: s. Sour ale.

ALECTRYOMACHY, d-lēc'-trē-ōm''-d-kēy, 87, 105, 161: s. Cockfighting.

A-lec'-try-o-man'-cy, 87, 105: s. Divination by a cock. Alectorides, &c., see Supp.

ALEMBIC=d-ēm'-bic, s. A vessel used in distilling.

ALENGTH=d-lēnth', 72: ad. In full length.

ALERT=d-lert', 35: a. Watchful; brisk; pert; petulant.

A-lert'-ness, s. The quality of being alert; briskness.

ALEXANDERS, āl'-ēgz-āu''-dērz, 85, 154, 143: s. The name of a plant.

Al'-er-an''-ders-foot, 118: s. The name of an herb.

Al'-EX-AN''-DRINE, (-drīn, 105) 154: s. A kind of verse borrowed from the French, first used in a poem called Alexander. This verse consists of twelve syllables.

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gātē-wāy: chāp'-mān: pē-pā': lāw: gōōd: jōō, i. e. jē-cē, 55: a, e, i, &c. note, 17'.

ALEXIPHARMIC, ă-lěcks'-ē-far"-míc, 154, 165, 163: a. and s. That drives away poison; antidotal:—s. An antidote.

ALEXI-PHAR"-IC, 154, 88, 129: a. and s. That drives away poison:—s. An antidote.

ALGA=ăl'-gă, 142: s. Sea weed. pl. Algæ (-jēe)

AL'-gæms, 120: a. Abounding with sea weed.

ALGATES, ăwł'-gātes, 112: ad. On any terms; although. [Obs.]

ALGEBRA=ăl'-gē-bră, 142: s. Universal arithmetic, or a method of computation by signs, commonly the letters of the alphabet. It takes an unknown quantity sought, as if granted; and by means of quantities given, proceeds till the quantity sought is discovered.

Al'-gē-brā"-ic, 88: } a. Relating to algebra.

Al'-gē-brā"-i-cal, 105: } a. Relating to algebra.

Al'-gē-brā"-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. By means of algebra.

Al'-gē-brā"-ist, 85: s. A person that understands or practises the science of algebra.

ALGID=ăl'-gid, 142, 64: a. Cold; chill.

Al'-gid-ness, } s. Chillness; cold.

Al'-gid'-i-ty, 81, 105: } s. Chillness; cold.

Al'-gid'-ic, 64, 88: a. That produces cold.

Al'-oor, 142, 77, 38: s. Extreme cold; chillness.

ALGORISM, ăl'-gō-rīzm, 158: } 142: s. Arabic

ALGORITHM=ăl'-gō-rīthm, } words implying computation by numbers, in general only so far as the first simple rules extend.

ALGUAZIL, ăl'-gă-zēl', [Sp.] 170: s. An inferior officer of justice in Spain: a constable.

ALIAS, ăl'-lē-ăss, ad. A Latin word signifying otherwise, as, Smith, alias Brown; a writ of capias issued a second time.

ALIBI, ăl'-ē-bī, 92, 6: s. Elsewhere. In law, the plea of a person who alleges that he was elsewhere than at the place stated in the charge against him.

ALIBLE.—See under Aliment.

ALIEN, ăl'-yēn, 146: a. and s. Foreign, or not of the same family or land; estranged from, not allied to:—s. A foreigner, not a kinsman; a stranger; in law, an alien is one born in a strange country, and never enfranchised.

Al'-lien-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Of which the property may be transferred.

To Al'-lien-ate, v. a. To transfer the property in anything to another; to withdraw the heart or affections.

Al'-lien-ate, a. and s. Withdrawn from; estranged:—a. One estranged.

Al'-lien-a'-tor, 85, 38: s. He who alienates.

Al'-lien-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of transferring property; the state of being alienated; change of affection.

ALIFEROUS, ă-līf'-ēr-ūs, } 81, 129, 120: a.

ALIGEROUS, ă-līd'-gēr-ūs, } Having wings. Sep.

To ALIGHT, ă-līk', 105, 162: v. n. To come down, as from a horse or carriage; to fall upon.

ALIKE=ă-līk', ad. With resemblance; in the same manner.

ALIMENT, ăl'-ē-měnt, 105: s. Nutrition; food.

Al'-i-men"-tal, a. That has the quality of aliment, that nourishes.

Al'-i-men"-tal-ly, 105: ad. So as to serve for nourishment.

Al'-i-men"-tar-y, (-tār-ēy, 129, 105) a. Belonging to aliment; having the power of nourishing.

Al'-i-men"-tar-i-ness, s. The quality of being alimentary.

Al'-i-men-ta"-tion, 85, 89: s. The power of affording aliment; the state of being nourished.

Al'-i-BLE, 105, 101: a. Nutritive; nourishing.

Al'-i-mō"-n-ous, 90, 105, 129: a. Nourishing.

Al'-i-mon-y, (-mōn-ēy, 18, 105) s. That which is to support or nourish, being the legal portion of the husband's estate set apart for the wife on a separation

Al'-i-ture, 105, 147: s. Alimony; food.

ALICQUANT, ăl'-ē-kwānt, 105, 76, 145, 142: a.

Aliquant parts of a number are such as will never make up the number exactly, as 3 is an aliquant of 10

Al'-i-quot, (-kwōt, 141) a. Aliquot parts of any number or quantity, are such as will exactly measure it without any remainder, as 3 is an aliquot part of 12.

ALIVE=ă līv', a. In the state of life, not dead; unextinguished; undestroyed; active; cheerful, sprightly; it is used for emphasis; as The best man alive.

ALKAHEST=ăl'-kă-hěst, 142: s. A pretended universal dissolvent. It is sometimes used for fixed salts volatilized.

ALKALI, ăl'-kă-lēy, 105: s. sing. } 142. Pot.

ALKALIES, ăl'-kă-lēz, 120: s. pl. } ash, soda, and ammonia. Were the substances to which this name was confined; but all substances now come under the denomination that have a caustic taste, are volatilizable by heat, capable of combining with and destroying the acidity of acids, soluble in water even when combined with carbonic acid, and capable of converting vegetable blues into green. Alkaloid is a subs. like alkali.

Al' The terminant i (a monster in English orthography) holds exactly the situation of its equivalent y in dignity, &c. and is correctly pronounced in the same manner. The word cannot, as a noun singular, class with the Latin plurals, literati, genii, &c. which are admitted exceptions. 6.

Al' ka line, (-līn, 105) a. That has the qualities of alkali.

Al'-ka-lin"-i-ty, 105: s. The quality which constitutes an alkali.

To Al'-ka-lize, (līze,) v. a. To make alkaline; to communicate the properties of an alkali to, by mixture; formerly, to alkalinize.

Al'-ka-les"-cent, a. That has a tendency to the properties of an alkali.

Al'-ka-les"-cen-cy, 105: s. A tendency to become alkaline, or to take the properties of an alkali.

Al'-ka-lig"-e-nous, (-līd'-gē-nus, 120) a. Generating alkali.

Al'-ka-lim"-e-ter, s. An instrument for ascertaining the strength of alkalies. Hence, Alkalimetry.

Al'-kal'-a-fy, (ăl'-kă-l'-ē-fy) v. a. To convert into an alkali.

Al'-kal'-i-zate, a. Impregnated with alkali. [Obs.]

Al'-kal'-i-za"-tion, s. The act of rendering alkaline.

ALKANET=ăl'-kă-nět, 142: s. The plant bugloss.

ALKEKENGİ, ăl'-kē-kēn"-gēy, 105: s. The winter cherry.

ALKERMES, ăl'-kēr'-mēz, 142, 35, 101: s. A confection of which kermes berries are the basis.

ALKORAN=ăl'-kō-răn, 142: s. The Mahometan bible, the book written and left for faith and practice by Mahomet.

Al' Orientalists in general pronounce this word al-korān'.

ALL, ăl, 112: a., s., and ad. The whole of; every one of; the whole quantity of; every part of:—s. The whole; every thing:—ad. Quite, completely; altogether, wholly.

All-fours, (-fō'urz, 133, 47, 143) s. A low game at cards, played by two.

All-hail, (-hăil') int. and s. All health

All-hail'-loun, (-hăil'-lōne, 142, 125) } s. The time

All-hail'-low-mos, (-lō-măs) } about All

All-hail'-low-tide, (-tīde) } Saints' day, which is on the 1st of November.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ŭn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ŭn, s. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

All'-saints-day s. The day dedicated to all saints, namely, the 1st of November.

All'-souls-day, (-sūlz'-dāy', 108, 143) s. The day on which supplications are made for all souls by the church of Rome, namely, the 2d of November.

All'-heal, 103: s. The popular name of several plants.

All'-spice, s. Jamaica pepper, or pimenta.

All., in the capacity of an adverb, occurs in composition with many other words, as All-accomplished, All-beneficent, All-destroying, &c. to which words it gives the force of superlatives. ALL, in such compounds, is mostly unaccented: a reference to 84 in the principles will show when this rule is liable to exception. In the following compounds, (which see in their proper places,) the word is completely incorporated, and one of the consonant letters dropped: Almighty, Almost, Alnight, Already, Also, Although, Altogether, Always.

To ALLAY=āl-lāy', 142: v. a. To quiet, to pacify, to repress; to mix one metal with another, in order to make it fitter for coinage; to join anything to another, so as to abate its qualities: in the latter senses, the word is now commonly written and pronounced alloy; which see.

Al-lay' s. A baser metal mixed with coins to harden them; this word is now commonly written and pronounced alloy; which see.

Al-lay'-er, 36: s. The person or thing which has the power or quality of allaying.

Al-lay'-ment, s. That which has the power of allaying.

To ALLECT=āl-lēct', v. a. To entice; to allure. [Obs.]

Al-lec'-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. and s. Alluring:—s. An allurement.

Al-lec'-ta'-tion, 85, 89: An allurement.

Al-lie'-rent, (āl lish'-ēnt, 90) s. That which attracts.

Al-lie'-ren cy, (-lish'-ēn-cēy) s. The power of attracting.

ALLEGATION.—See under Allego.

To ALLEGE, āl-lēgd', 102, 64: v. a. To affirm; to declare; to maintain; to plead as an excuse or argument.

Al-lēg'-a ble, 98, 101: a. That may be alleged.

Al-lēg'-er, (lēd'-ger) s. He that alleges.

Al-lēg'-ement, s. The same as allegation.

Al-lē-ga'-tion, (āl-lē-gā'-shūn, 85, 77, 89) s. Affirmation; declaration; the thing alleged or affirmed; an excuse, a plea.

ALLEGIANCE, āl-lē'-jānce, 121: s. The duty of subjects to the government.

Al-le'-grant, a. Loyal. [Obs.]

ALLEGORY, āl-lē-gōr'-ēy, 85, 129, 105: s. A figurative discourse, in which something is intended that is not contained in the words literally taken.

Al-le-gor'-ic, 89: } a. In the form of an al-
Al-le-gor'-i-cal, 105: } legory; not literal.

Al-le-gor'-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. After an allegorical manner.

To Al-lē-go-rize', 82, 85: v. a. To turn into allegory; to form an allegory.

ALLEGRO=āl-lē'-grō, ad. A direction in music to sing or play with briskness and gaiety. In Milton, L'Allegro (the title of a poem) means the cheerful or mirthful man.

Al-le-gret'-to, ad. A direction in music to sing or play less quick than allegro.

ALLELUIAH, āl-lē-lōo'-yāh, 142, 109: int. and s. Praise be to God!—s. The praise so uttered.

ALLEMANDE, āl-lē-mānd', s. A dance known in Germany; a figure in dancing; the measure of the dance.

To ALLEVIATE, āl-lē'-vē-āte, 142, 146, 105: v. a. To make light; to ease; to soften.

Al-lē-vi-a-tive, 105: a. That can alleviate or palliate.

Al-lē-vi-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of making light; that by which any pain is eased, or fault extenuated.

ALLEY=āl-lēy, 142: s. A walk in a garden; a passage in towns, narrower than a street; the stock-market in London.

ALLIACEOUS, āl-lē-ā'-sh'ūs, 85, 105, 90: a. Having the properties of allium or garlic.

ALLIANCE.—See under To Ally.

ALLICIENT.—See under To Allact.

To ALLIGATE, āl-lē-gāte, 142: v. a. To tie one thing to another.

Al-lē-ga'-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. A ligature.

Al-lē-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of tying together; the arithmetical rule that teaches to adjust the price of compounds, formed of several ingredients of different value.

ALLIGATOR, āl-lē-ga'-tōr, 38: s. The crocodile. This name is chiefly used for the crocodile of America.

ALLISION, āl-līzh'-ūn, 90: s. The act of striking one thing against another.

ALLITERATION, āl-lī'-er-ā'-shūn, 85, 90: s. The beginning of several words with the same letter.—See Ad.

Al-lī'-er-a'-tive, 85, 105: a. Pertaining to, or consisting in alliteration.

ALLOCATION, āl-lō-cā'-shūn, 85, 89: s. The act of putting one thing to another; the admission of an article in reckoning, and addition of it to the account. In law, an allowance made upon an account.

Al-lo-ca'-tur, s. In law, the certificate of allowance of accounts by a master, on taxation, &c.

ALLOCATION.—See under All quy.

ALLODIUM, āl-lō'-dē-ūm, 142, 105, 146: s. Possession held in absolute independence, without any acknowledgement of a lord paramount. There are no allodial lands in England.

Al-lō'-di-al, a. Not feudal; independent.

To ALLONGE, āl-lūngē', 116: v. a. To make a pass or thrust with a rapier; commonly, to lounge; and often writt n, as always pronounced, lunge.

Al-lōngē', s. A thrust with a rapier, a lunge; a long rein when a horse is trotted in the hand.

To ALLOO.—See To Hallow.

ALLOPIANE, āl-lō-fānc, 142, 163: s. A mineral of a bluish, but changeable cast.

ALLOQUY, āl-lō-kwēy, 76, 145, 105: s. Address; conversation.—See Ad.

Al-lo-cu'-tion, s. The act of speaking to another.

To ALLOT=āl-lōt', 142: v. a. To distribute by lot; to grant; to distribute; to give each his share.

Al-lōt'-ment, s. The part; the share.

Al-lōt'-er-y, (-ē-rēy, 129, 105) s. That which is granted to any in a distribution.

To ALLOW=āl-low', 142, 31: v. a. To admit; to grant; to yield; to permit; to give to; to pay to; to make abatement.

Al-low'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be allowed.

Al-low'-a-bly, ad. With claim of sanction.

Al-low'-a-ble-ness, s. Exemption from prohibition.

Al-low'-ance, s. Sanction, license, permission; abatement; a grant, or stipend.

To Al-low'-ance, v. a. To put upon an allowance.

To ALLOY=āl-loy', 142, 29: v. a. To reduce the purity of a metal by mixing it with one of less value; to reduce or abate by mixture.

Al-loy', 82: s. The baser metal which is mixed with a finer; the evil which is mixed with good.

Al-loy'-age, 99: s. The act of alloying.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-wāy: chāp'mān: pō-pā': lāw: gōd: j cō: i.e. Jesus, 55: s. v. &c. mute, 171.

ALLUBESCENCY, ăl'-l' ōo-bēs"-sēn-cēy, 109, 105: s. Willingness; content.
To ALLUDE.—See eight words further
ALLUMINOR, ăl-l' ōō-mē-nor, 109, 33: s. One who decorates or paints; a limner.
To ALLURE, ăl-l' ōōr', 109, 51: v. a. To entice; to decoy.
Al-lu'-rer, 36: s. An enticer; an inveigler.
Al-lure'-ment, s. Enticement; temptation.
Al-lu'-ring, 72: a. Enticing
Al-lu'-ring-ly, 105: ad. In an alluring manner
Al-lu'-ring-ness, s. Enticement
To ALLUDE, ăl-l' ōōd', v. n. To have or make some reference to a thing without the direct mention.
Al-lu'-sion, (-zhūn, 90): s. A hint; an implication.
Al-lu'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Hinting at something.
Al-lu'-sive-ly, 105: ad. In an allusive manner.
Al-lu'-sive-ness, s. The being allusive.
ALLUVION, ăl-l' ōō-vē-ōn, 18, 105, 146: s.
ALLUVIUM, ăl-l' ōō-vē-ūm, } Earth carried by the motion of water, and deposited, the action of the water in this process.
Al-lu'-vi-al, a. Carried by water and lodged.
Al-lu'-vi-a, 98: s. pl. Small islands thrown up by a current.
To ALLY=ăl-l'y', v. a. To unite by kindred, friendship, or confederacy; to make a relation between two things.
Al-l'y', 82: s. One that is allied. Allies (ăl-l'īze) are states that have entered into a league for mutual defence.
Al-l'i'-ance, s. The state of connection by confederacy; a league; relation by marriage; relation by any form of kindred; the persons allied to each other taken collectively.
ALMACANTAR=ăl-mă-căn"-tar, 142, 34: s. A circle drawn parallel to the horizon.
Al'-mu-can"-tar's-staff, 143: s. An instrument used to take observations of the sun when it rises and sets. Almag-st, &c., see Nurp.
ALMAGRA=ăl-mă-gră, 142: s. A fine deep red ochre.
ALMA-MATER=ăl-mă-mă"-ter, [Lat.] s. Birth mother; the university whence the milk of learning is or was imbibed by him using the expression.
ALMANAC=ăl-mă-năc, 142: s. A calendar.
ALMANDINE=ăl-măn-dīne, 142: s. An inferior kind of ruby.
ALMIGHTY, ăl-mī-tēy, 112, 115, 162, 105: a. and s. Of unlimited power, omnipotent.—s. The Omnipotent.
Al-might'-i-ness, 105: s. Omnipotence; an attribute of God.
ALMOND, ăl-mōnd, 139, 18: s. The nut of the almond tree.
Al'-monds, 143: s. The two glands of the throat; the tonsils, improperly called almonds of the ears.
ALMOST, ăl-w' mōast, 112, 116: ad. Nearly, well-nigh.
ALMONER=ăl-mōn-er, 142: s. The officer of a prince employed in the distribution of charity.
Al'-mon-ry, 105: s. The place where alms are distributed.
ALMS, (ămz, 139, 143) s. A gift or benefaction to the poor.
Al-m's'-bas-ket, 11: s. A basket to put the alms in.
Al-m's'-deed, s. A gift of charity.
Al-m's'-giv-er, 36: s. He that gives alms.
Al-m's'-house, s. A house given by charity for the use of the poor.
Al-m's'-man, s. A man living upon charity.

Al-m'-ry, 105: s. Almonry, of which it is a contraction.
ALMUG-TREE=ăl-mūg-tre', s. A tree mentioned in Scripture, but of what kind is not known ALNAGE=ăl-nāge, 142, 99: s. Ell measure.
Al'-na-ger, 98, 36: s. A measurer by the ell; an officer who used to inspect the assize of woollen cloth.
ALNIGHT, ăl-nīte, 112, 115, 162: s. A cake of wax which, provided with a wick, burned a long time.
ALOE=ăl-ōe, pl. aloes, ăl'-ōez=ăl'-ōze, 151: s. A precious wood used in the east for perfumes; a tree which grows in hot countries; a cathartic juice extracted from the common aloes tree.
al- The Latin plural of this word is al'-o-es, in three syllables; hence, Al'-o-e't'-ic, 88: } a. Consisting chiefly of Al'-o-e't'-i-cal, 105: } aloes.
ALOFT=d-lōft', 17: ad. and prep. On high; in the air.
ALOGY, ăl-l' ō-gēy, 105: s. Unreasonableness; absurdity.
ALONE=d-lōne', a. Single; without company; solitary.
ALONG=d-lōng', 72: ad. At length; throughout; forward; onward.
Al-long'-side, ad. By the side of a ship.
ALOOFF=d-lōoff', ad. At a distance.
ALOPECY, ăl-l' ō-pē-cēy, 105: s. The fox scurf, a disease in the hair.
ALoud=d-lowd', 31: ad. Loudly; with a great noise.
ALow, d-lō', 125: ad. In a low place; not aloft.
ALP=ălp, 142: s. A mountain; that which is mountainous or durable, like the Alps.
Al'-pine, (-pīn, 105) a. Belonging to the Alps.
ALPHA, ăl'-fă, 142, 163: s. The first letter in the Greek alphabet answering to our A; therefore used to signify the first.
Al'-pha-bet, s. The letters of a language.
To Al'-phu-bet, v. a. To place in alphabetical order.
Al'-pha-bet'-ic, 88 } a. According to the order of Al'-pha-bet'-i-cal, } the alphabet; according to the names of the letters.
Al'-pha-bet'-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. In an alphabetical manner.
Al'-pha-bet-a"-ri-an, 105: s. An A, B, C scholar.
ALPINE.—See under Alp.
ALREADY, ăl-rēd'-lēy, 112, 120: ad. Now, at this time; before the time expected.
ALSO, ăl-sō, 112: ad. In the same manner; likewise.
Als, (ăvls, 153) Also. [Obs.]
ALT.—See after Although.
ALTAR, ăl'-tar, s. 112, 34: The place where offerings to heaven are laid; the table in Christian churches where the communion is administered.
Al'-tar-age, 99: s. An emolument from oblations to the altar.
Al'-tar-piece, (pēce, 103) s. A painting placed over the altar.
To ALTER, ăl'-ter, 112: v. a. and n. To change; to make otherwise than it is.—new. To be come otherwise than it was, to be changed.
Al'-ter-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be altered.
Al'-ter-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being alterable.
Al'-ter-a-bly, 105: ad. In an alterable manner.
Al'-ter-ant, a. Producing changes.
Al'-ter-a-tive, a. and s. Having the quality of altering.—s. A drug that gradually gains upon the constitution, but has no immediate operation.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn. i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn. i. e. vision, 165: ăh'n, 166; thēn 166.

Al'-ter-a-bil'-i-ty, 85, 105 : s. Alterableness.
Al'-ter-a'-tion, 89 : s. The act of altering; change.
ALTERAGE=äl'-tēr'-āge, 142, 129, 99 : s. The fostering of a child. This word has the same origin as Aliment; which see.
To ALTERCATE=äl'-ter-cāte, 142 : v. n. To wrangle; to contend with.
Al'-ter-ca'-tion, 85, 89 : s. Wrangling; debate.
ALTERN=äl'-tern', 142 : a. Acting by turns.
Al'-ter-na-cy, (nd-cēy, 98, 105) s. Action performed by turns.
Al'-ter-na-l, a. First one, then the other.
Al'-ter-na-l-ly, 105 : ad. By turns.
Al'-ter-na-te, a. Being by turns; reciprocal.
To Al'-ter-na-te, 81 : v. a. and n. To perform alternately; to change reciprocally:—neu. To happen alternately.
Al'-ter-na-te-ness, s. The being alternate.
Al'-ter-na-tive, (-nd-tiv, 98, 105) a. and s. In an alternate manner:—i. The choice given of two things.
Al'-ter-na-tive-ly, ad. By turns; reciprocally.
Al'-ter-na-tive-ness, s. Reciprocation.
Al'-ter-ni-ty, 105 : s. Reciprocal succession.
Al'-ter-na'-tion, 85, 89 : s. Reciprocal succession; alternate performance.
ALTHEA=äl'-thē'-d, 142 : s. A flowering shrub.
ALTHOUGH, älw'-thō', 112, 125, 162 : conj. Notwithstanding; however.
ALT=ält, 142 : s. A term signifying high; but used as an uncompounded word only in music in which it signifies the higher part of the scale or gamut.
Al'-t-grade, 105 : a. Rising on high.
Al'-ti-tude, s. Height; elevation.
Al'-til'-o-quence, (äl'-tīl'-ō-kwēnce, 37, 76, 145) s. Pompous language.
Al'-tim'e-try, 105 : s. Art of measuring heights.
Al'-tis'-o-nant, 12 : a. Pompous or lofty in sound.
Al'-tiv'-o-lant, a. High flying.
Al'-to-ra-r-lic'-vo, (-rē'-lē'-vō, 103) s. That kind of relief in sculpture which projects as much as reality.
ALTOGETHER, älw'-to-gwēth'-er, 112, 107 : ad. Completely; without restriction or exception.
ALUDEL=äl'-dē'-lē, 69 : s. A subliming pot used in chemistry, fitted to another without luting. See A.
ALUM=äl'-üm. s. A mineral salt of an acid taste. It is a triple sulphurate of alumina and potassa.
Al'-um-ed, (-ümd, 114) part. a. Mixed with alum.
Al'-um-ish, a. Having the nature of alum.
Al'-um-stone, 107 : s. A stone used in surgery.
Al'-um-mine, (-in, 105) s. A kind of earth, the basis of common alum.
Al'-u'-mi-na, (dē'-wē'-mē'-nd, 98, 109, 105) s. The same as alumine.
Al'-u'-mi-nous, 120 : a. Consisting of, or relating to, alum.
Al'-u'-mi-num, s. The supposed metallic base of alumina.
ALUTATION, äl'-ü-tā'-shün, 85, 69, 89 : s. The tanning or dressing of leather. Allutaceous. see Sup.
ALVEARY, älv'-yār'-ēy, 146, 105 : s. A beehive; the hollow of the external ear.
Alv'-e-o-lar, (älv'-yō-lar) a. Full of sockets or Alv'-e-o-lar-y, 129, 105 : s. pits.
Al'-vine, (äl'-vīn, 105) a. Pertaining to the abdomen.
ALWAYS, älw'-wāy, 151 : ad. Perpetually; constantly. It is sometimes written Alway.
AM=ām. The first person of the verb To be.
AMABILITY.—See under Amiable.

AMADETTO=ām'-d-dēt'-tō, } s. A sort of pear.
AMADOT=ām'-d-dōt, 18 : }
AMADOU=ām'-d-dow, 32 : s. Black match, or pyrotechnical sponge.
AMAIN=d-māin', ad. With vehemence, or vigour.
AMALGAM=d-mäl'-gām, } s. The mixture
AMALGAMA=d-mäl'-gā-d-mā, } of metals produced by a union with quicksilver.
To A-mal'-ga-mate, v. a. and n. To unite metals with quicksilver; to mix different things:—neu. To unite in amalgam.
A mal'-ga-ma'-ted, part. a. Mixed with quick silver; blended.
A-mal'-ga-ma'-tion, 85, 89 : s. The act or practice of amalgamating.
To AMAND=d-mänd', v. a. To send away. [Obs.]
Am'-an-da'-tion, 85, 89 : s. The act of sending on a message.
AMANUENSIS=d-män'-h-ēn'-cīs, s. A person who writes what another dictates.
AMARANTH=ām'-d-rānth, s. The name of a plant; in poetry, an imaginary flower unfolding, in which sense Milton writes it amarant; a colour inclining to purple.
Am'-a-ran'-thine, (-thīn, 105) a. Relating to, or consisting of amarantus.
AMARITUDE, d-mär'-tē-tūde, 129, 105 : s. Bitterness.
A-MAR'-U-LENCE, 109 : s. Amaritude.
To AMASS=d-mäss', v. a. To collect together into one heap or mass; to add one thing to another.
A-mass', s. A heap, a mass.
A-mass'-ment, s. A heap, an accumulation.
To AMATE=d-mäte', v. a. To accompany; also (of different etymology) to amaze; to perplex. [Obs.]
AMATEUR, d-mā-tur', [Fr.] 170 : s. A lover of any particular art or science; not a professor.
AMATIVENESS, AMATORY, &c.—See under Amorous.
AMAUROSIS, ām'-āw-rō'-sis, s. A dimness of sight, causing representations of flies and dust floating before the eyes.
To AMAZE=d-māze', v. a. To astonish; to perplex; to confuse.
A-maze', s. Astonishment; confusion; either of fear or wonder.
A-mazed', (-māzed', 114) part. a. Struck with wonder; confused.
A-mā'-zed-ly, 105 : ad. In an amazed manner.
A-mā'-zed-ness, s. Wonder; confusion.
A-mā'-zing, part. a. Wonderful; astonishing.
A-mā'-zing-ly, 105 : ad. To a degree that may excite astonishment.
A-maze'-ment, s. Confusion; wonder, astonishment; fear, horror; dejection; admiration.
AMAZON=ām'-d-zōn, 86, 18 : s. One of the Amazons, a race of women famous for valour; a virago.
Am'-a-zō'-ni-an, 85, 90, 146 : a. Having the qualities of an Amazon; female, but of masculine manners or warlike propensities; relating to the river Amazon in North America.
AMB, A prefix which, in words of immediate Latin origin, signifies both, or about, around. It is etymologically the same as Amphi.
AMBAGES, ām-bā'-gēc, 101 : s. pl. Turnings or circumlocutions in speech; a beating about in many words. See Amb.
AMBASSADOR=ām-bās'-sā-dōr, 38 : s. A person sent in a public manner from one sovereign to another.
Am-bas'-sā-dress, s. The lady of an ambassador, a woman sent on an embassy.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy chāp-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: j'wō, i. e. jeu, 55: a. i. &c. mu/e, 171.

Am'-bas-sade, } s. An embassy or public mes-
Am'-bas-sage, } sage. [Obs.]
 It has been recommended that all these words should have em for their first syllable, in conformity with embassy, which is always so written; but the practice remains to be established.

AMBER=ám'-ber, s. and a. A yellow, semi-transparent substance supposed to be a fossil resin. It is highly electrical, and is the basis of a varnish:—adj. Consisting of amber.

To Am'-ber, v. a. To scent with amber.

Am'-ber-drink, (-dríngk, 138) s. Drink of amber colour.

Am'-ber-gris, (-grēc, [Fr.] 170) s. A drug fragrant as amber, and gray in colour, that smells almost like wax, used both as a perfume and cordial.

Am'-ber-seed, s. Musk seed; it resembles millet.

Am'-ber-tree, s. A shrub with evergreen leaves.

AMBIDEXTER, ám'-bē-děcks'-tēr, 105, 154: s. One that is equally the use of both his hands; one who is equally ready to act on either side in party disputes.—See Amb.

Am'-bi-dex'-trous, 120: a. Using either hand.

Am'-bi-dex'-trous-ness, s. The being ambidextrous.

Am'-bi-der-ter''-i-ty, 81, 129, 105: s. The being able equally to use both hands; figuratively, double dealing.

Am'-bi-der-ter''-vors, (ám'-bē-lē-lē''-vūs, 85, 105, 120) a. Left handed on both sides. [Out of use.]

AMBIENT, ám'-bē-ěnt, 146: a. Surrounding; encompassing.—See Amb.

AMIGU, ám'-bē-g'oo, [Fr.] 170: s. A medley of dishes.

Am'-mū'-c-ous, (-līg'-ū-ūm, 120) a. Doubtful; having two meanings.—See Amb.

Am'-big'-u-ous-ness, s. Uncertainty of meaning.

Am'-big'-u-ous-ly, 105: ad. Doubtfully.

Am'-bi-gu''-i-ty, 105: s. Uncertainty of signification.

AMBIGUITY, ám'-hīl'-ō-g'ēy, 87, 105: s. Ambiguous discourse.—See Amb.

Am'-bil'-o-quous, (-d-kwūs, 76, 145) a. Using ambiguous expressions.

Am'-bil'-o-quy, (-kwēy, 105) s. Ambiguity of expression.

AMBIT=ám'-bīt, s. The compass or circuit of any thing.—See Amb.

Am'-bi-tude, 105: s. Compass; circuit.

Am'-bit'-ion, (-bish'-ūn, 89, 95) s. Eager desire of superiority, pre-eminence, honour, or power; originally, the act of going about to procure favour and interest.

Am'-bi-t'-ious, (-bish'-ūs, 120) a. Seized with ambition; aspiring.

Am'-bi-t'-ious-ly, 105: ad. In an ambitious manner.

Am'-bi-t'-ious-ness, s. The quality of being ambitious.

To AMBLE, ám'-bl, 101: v. n. To move daintily between a walk and a trot.

Am'-ble, s. A peculiar pace of a horse; an easy pace.

Am'-bler, 36: s. An ambling horse; a pacer.

Am'-bling, 72: part. a. That moves with an amble.

Am'-bling-ly, 105: ad. With an ambling movement.

AMBLYGON, ám'-blē-gōn, 105: s. An obtuse angled triangle.

AMBO=ám'-bō, s. A reading desk or pulpit.

AMBROSIA, ám-brō'-zhē-ā, 90: s. The imaginary food of the gods; the name of a plant.

Am'-bro'-si-al, (-zhē-ā) a. Of the nature of ambrosia; delicious.

Am'-bro'-si-an, (-zhē-ān) a. Ambrosial; also appertaining to St. Ambrose; as the Ambrosian ritual.

AMBRY, ám'-brīy, 105: s. An almonry or almshouse, which see: a place for housekeeping utensils; a cupboard for cold victuals.

AMBS-ACE, ávraz'-āc, 111, 156, 143: s. A double ace: aces at dice.

To AMBULATE=ám'-bū-lāte, v. n. To move hither and thither. [Obs.]

Am'-bu-lant, a. Walking, moving from place to place.

Am'-bu-la'-tor, s. One who walks about; an insect so called.

Am'-bu-la'-tor-y, 129, 105: a. and s. Having the power or faculty of walking; moveable; moving about:—s. A place for walking.

Am'-bu-la'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of walking.

AMBURY, ám'-hū-rēy, 105: s. A bloody wart on a horse's body.

AMBUSCADE=ám'-hūs-cād'', s. A private station in which men lie to surprise others.

Am'-bus-ca'-ded, part. a. In danger from an ambuscade.

Am'-bus-ca'-do, s. An ambuscade.

Am'-bus-ca'-doed, (-dōed, 114) part. a. Ambuscaded.

Am'-brst, (ám'-bōsh, 117) s. The post where soldiers or assassins are placed, in order to fall unexpectedly upon an enemy; the act of surprising another by lying in wait; the state of lying in wait.

To AM-bush, 82: v. n. To lie in wait for the purpose of attacking by surprise.

Am'-bushed, (-bōsht, 114) part. a. Placed in ambush.

Am'-bush-ment, s. Ambush; surprise.

AMBUST=ám'-būst', a. Burnt, scalded. [Obs.]

Am-bus'-tion, (-būst'-yun, 146: hence, colloq. -būst'-shūn, 147) s. A burn; a scald.

AMEL=ám'-ēl, s. Enamel; which see.

AMELCORN.—See Amylaceous.

To AMELIORATE, ā-mēl'-yō-rāte, 146: v. a. To better; to improve.

Am'-e-lío-ra'-tion, 85, 89: s. Improvement.

AMEN=ā'-mēn', ad. and s. An expression by which, at the end of a prayer, we mean so be it, at the end of a creed, so it is:—s. The term itself.

It is remarkable for having two consecutive accents.

AMENABLE, ā-mē'-nd-bl, 101: a. Liable to be brought to account; responsible.

To Am'-en-able, 92, 99: v. a. To keep under, or in a state of accountableness. [Obs.]

Am'-en-ance, 92, 12: s. Conduct as regards the principles to which it is amenable; behaviour; mien. [Obs.]

To AMEND=ā-mēnd', v. a. and n. To correct; to change any thing that is wrong; to reform the life; to restore passages in writings supposed to be depraved:—new. To grow better, to improve, including the notion of something previously wrong, which improve does not.

Am'-mend'-a-ble, 101: a. Reparable.

Am'-mend'-er, 36: s. A corrector.

Am'-mend'-ing, 72: s. The act of correcting.

Am'-mend'-ment, s. A change from bad for the better, reformation of life; recovery of health; in law, the correction of an error committed in a process; in legislative and other assemblies, a change proposed in something previously moved.

Am'-mends, 143: s. Recompense; compensation.

Am'-mends', (ā-mōngd', [Fr.] 170) s. A fine in the way of recompense; amends made in any way.

AMENITY, ā-mēn'-ē-tēy, 92: s. Agreeableness of situation.

To AMERCE=ā-merc', 35: v. a. To punish with a fine or penalty.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish'-ūn, i. e. mission 165: vīzh'-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166

A-mercé-a-ble, 101: a. Liable to amercement.
A-mer'-cr, s. He that sets a fine upon any misde-monor.
A-mercé-ment, s. The pecuniary punishment of an offender.
A-mer'-ci-a-ment, (d-mercé'-yð-měnt, 146, 147) s. Amercement. [A law term.]
AMERICAN, d-mě'r'-ě-cān, 129, 105: s. and a. An aboriginal inhabitant of America; one born in America.—adj. Appertaining to America.
A-mer'-i-ca-nism, 158: s. A preference or predilection for America; an American idiom in speech.
AMES-ACE.—See Amba-ace.
AMETHODICAL, ām'-ě-thōd'-ě-cāl, 105: a. Out of method; irregular.—See A.
AMETHYST=ām'-ě-thist, s. A precious stone of a violet colour, bordering on purple; in heraldry, it signifies purple in a nobleman's coat of arms.
Am'-e-hyst'-me, (-in, 105) a. Resembling an amethyst.
AMIA-BLE, ā-mě'-d-bl, 95, 105, 101: a. Lovely, pleasing, worthy to be loved; in Shakespeare, it occurs in the sense of showing love.
A'-mi-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being amiable; loveliness.
A'-mi-a-bly, 105: ad. In such a manner as to excite love.
A'-MA-BIL'-i-ty, s. Amiability.
AMIANTH, ām'-ě-ānth, } s. An in-com-
AMIANTHUS, ām'-ě-ānth'-ūs, } bustle mineral substance, somewhat resembling flax.
AMICABLE, ām'-ě-cā-bl, 92, 105, 101: a. Friendly, kind, obliging.
Am'-i-ca-ble-ness, s. Friendliness, goodwill.
Am'-i-ca-bly, 105: ad. In a friendly way.
Am'-i-ty, 105: s. Friendship.
AMICE, ām'-is, 105: s. The undermost part of a Roman Catholic priest's shoulder-cloth or alb.
AMID, d-mīd', } pr p. In the midst or mid-AMIDST, d-mīdst', } dñ; mingled with, surrounded by; among.
AMISS, d-mīss', ad. and a. Faultily, criminally:—a. Wrong, not according to the perfection of the thing; impaired in health. As an adjective, it always follows the substantive. It is also found, though very rarely, as a substantive.
To AMIT, d-mīt', v. a. To lose, to dismiss.
A-miss'-ion, (d-mīsh'-ūn, 90) s. A loss, a dis-mission.
AMITY.—See under Amicable.
AMMONIA, ām mō'-nē-d, 90, 105: s. A gaseous substance formed from the combination of hydrogen with azote.
Am-mo'-ni-ac, s. Gum ammoniac is a fat resinous substance brought from the East; sal ammoniac is a volatile salt, popularly called hartshorn.
Am-mo-ni'-a-cal, (-nī'-d-cāl) 81: a. Having the properties of ammonia or ammoniac.
AMMUNITION, ām-mū-nīsh'-ūn, 89, 95: s.
 Military stores; the word is usually confined to powder, balls, shells, and other stores used for guns and artillery.
Am'-mu-ni'-ion-bread', (-brēd, 120) s. Bread for the supply of an army.
AMNESTY, ām-nēs'-ty, 105: s. An act of general pardon or oblivion.
AMNION, ām'-nē-ōn, } 105: s. The innermost AMNIOS, ām'-nē-ōs, } membrane that covers the fetus in the womb.
AMOB-EAN=ām'-ě-bē'-ān, 86: a. Responsive.
AMOMUM -d-mō-mūm, s. A spicy fruit so called.

AMONG, d-mūng, } 116: prep. Mingled AMONGST, d-mūngst', } with, conjoined with others, so as to make part of the number.
AMOROUS, ām'-ō-rūs, 81, 92, 120: a. Ena-moured; naturally inclined to love; belonging to love.
 Compare Amateur, Amiable, Amicable, and their subjected words, with the present class, all of which have a common origin, but are very different in practical application. The words of the present class uniformly refer, more or less intensively, to physical or sexual love.
Am'-o-rous-ness, s. The quality of being disposed to love.
Am'-o-rous-ly, ad. In an amorous manner.
Am'-o-rist, s. A lover, a gallant.
Am'-o-ro'-so, (-zō, [Ital.] 170) s. A lover.
Am'-o-ro'-sa, (-zā, [Ital.] 170) s. A wanton.
A-MOUR, (d-mōr', [Fr.] 170) s. A love intrigue.
Am'-A-TIVE-NESS, (-tīv-ness, 105) s. A term in phrenology applied to a part of the brain, the cerebel-lum, supposed to be the seat of sexual passion.
Am'-A-TOR-y, (-tōr-ēy, 129, 105) a. Relating to,
 or causing love.
Am'-a-to'-ri-al, (-tō'-rē-āl, 105) } a. Relating Am'-a-to'-ri-ous, (-tō'-rē-ūs, 120) } to love.
Am'-A-TOR'-CU-ISTY, s. A little insignificant lover.
AMORPHOUS, d-mor'-fūs, 163: a. Shapeless.
To AMORTISE, d-mor'-tiz, 105, 137: v. a.
 To transfer to mortmain; that is, to alien lands or tenements to a corporation, of which the law contemplates no decrease or termination.
A-mor-tize-ment, 105: } s. The right or ac-
A-mor-ti-za'-tion, 85, 89: } of transferring lands to mortmain
A-MORT, ad. Depressed, spiritless.
To AMOUNT=d-moun't, 31: v. n. To rise to in the accumulative quantity; to compose in the whole.
A-moun't, s. The aggregate or sum total.
To A-MOVE=d-mōv', 107: v. a. To remove from a post or station in a juridical sense; as a word of more general use, it is obsolete.
AMPHI-, A- prefix in words of Greek origin, signifying both, about, around. Compare Amb.
Am-PHIB-I-A, (-fīb'-ē-ā, 163, 146) s. pl. That class of animals which are so formed as to live on land, and for a long time under water. [Lat.]
Am-phib'-i-ous, 120: ad. Having the faculty of living in two elements; of a mixed nature.
Am-phib'-i-ous-ness, s. Capability of living in different elements.
Am-PHI-BOL'-O-GY, (-fē-bōl'-ō-gēy, 163, 105) s.
 Phrase or discourse of doubtful meaning, owing to the order of the words, and hence distinguished from equivocation, or ambiguity in the meaning of the words.
Am'-phi-bo-log'-i-cal, (-lōd'-gē-cāl, 105) a.
 Doubtful.
Am-PHIB'-O-LY, 105: s. Ambiguous discourse.
Am-phib'-o-lous, 120: a. Tossed from one to another.
Am-PHI'-O-GY, s. Equivocation.
Am'-PHI-BRACH, (ām'-fē-bräck) } 163, 161
Am-PHIB'-RA-CHYS, (ām'-fīb'-rē-kīs) } s. A foot of three syllables, the middle long, both the others short.
Am-PHIS-BÆ'-N-A, (-bē-nā, 103) s. A serpent which, being supposed to have a head at each extremity, goes forward both ways.
Am-PHIS'-CH, (ām'-fīsh'-yī, 163, 146, 147) s. pl.
 People of both shadows.—See Asci.
Am-PHI-TH'-A-TRE, (-thē'-d-tur, 163, 159) s. a.
 A building of a circular or oval form, having rows of seats one above another, round about its area.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāc: gōd: jīw, i. e. jeu, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute. 171.

AM'-PHO-NA, (ām'-fō-rā, 163) s. A jug or measure with a double ear or spout. See other words in Supp.

AMPLE, ām-pl, 101: a. Large, wide, extended; great in bulk; without restriction; without parsimony; effusive, not contracted.

Am'-ple-ness, s. Largeness, liberality.

Am'-ply, ad. Largely, liberally; copiously.

Am'-pli-tude, 105: s. Largeness, copiousness, abundance.

To Am'-pli-a-te, v. a. To enlarge, to extend. [Little used.]

Am'-pli-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. Enlargement. [Little used.]

To Am'-pli-fy, (ām'-plē-fy, 6) v. a. and n. To enlarge, to extend; to exaggerate any thing; to improve by additions:—n. To speak largely in many words; to form pompous representations.

Am'-pli-fi-er, (-fī-er) s. One that enlarges in description or narration.

To Am'-pli-fi-cate, 105: v. a. To amplify. [Little used.]

Am'-plif-i-ca'-tion, 85, 89: s. Enlargement; rhetorical exaggeration.

To AMPUTATE=ām'-pū-tāt, v. a. To cut off a limb or branch.

Am'-pu-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The operation of amputating.

AMULET=ām'-ū-lēt, s. A charm; a thing hung about the neck for preventing or curing a disease.

To AMUSE, ā-mū-zē, 137: v. a. To entertain with tranquillity; to draw on from time to time; to keep in expectation.

A-muse'-ment, s. That which amuses; entertainment.

A-mu'-ser, (-zer) s. He that amuses.

A-mu'-sing, (-zing, 137, 72) a. That has the A-mu'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) } power to amuse.

AMYGDALATE=d-nūg'-dā-lāt, a. and s. Made of almond.

A-myg'-da-line, 105: a. Resembling almonds.

A-myg'-da-loid, 30: s. Almond or toad stone.

AMYLACEOUS, ām'-ē-lā'-shūs, a. Starchy, or pertaining to the farinaceous part of grain, from which starch is made; this was done formerly by another process than grinding; and the corn used for the purpose was called amylocorn or ameleorn.—See A.

Am'-y-line, (ām'-ē-līn, 105) s. A substance between gum and starch. A-myl'-ic (88) epith. of an acid.

AN=ān. The same article as a. and used instead of it when the next word begins with a vowel sound, as: an umpire, an hour; and also when it begins with h sounded, if the accent should be on the second syllable, as, an harangue. But note, it is proper to say, a unit, such a one, &c. a heathen, &c.; for unit and one, though they begin with vowel-letters, do not begin with vowel-sounds: (see Principles 9 and 57); and heathen, not being accented on the second syllable, takes a, not an, because the h is sounded.

AN, In our old writers, is often a conjunction signifying the same as if.

AN, As an initial syllable, is often used for a privative, See A.

ANA=ā'-nd, s. A termination annexed to the names of authors, to denote a collection of their memorable sayings; as, Johnsoniana.

ANA, A prefix in words of Greek origin, implying repetition, upward motion, inversion, distribution, parallelism, or proportion. In the first of these cases, it often stands by itself in physician's prescriptions.

37 For any word formed with Ana, which is not in its alphabetical place, search to the word Anatomist.

AN'-A-BAP'-TIST, 92, 98: s. One who holds that adults should be re-baptized.

AN'-A-CAMP'-TIC, 156: a. Re-flecting, or re-flected. As a substantive plural, Ana-camp'tics, it signifies the same as catoptrics.

37 For any word formed with Ana, which is not in its alphabetical place, search to the word Anatomist.

AN'-A-CLAS'-TIC, a. Re-fracting or re-flected. As a substantive plural, An-a-clas'tics, it signifies the same as dioptrics.

AN'-A-CEPH'-A-I-X'-O-SIS, (-cēf'-d-lē'-ō-cīs, 163, 103) 86: s. Re-capitulation.

AN'-A-MOR'-PHO-SIS, (-fō-cīs, 163) 86: s. A re-formation of the elements of a picture, by being seen in a particular point of view, or reflected in a mirror, so that what was confused and unintelligible becomes an exact representation, and vice versa.

AN'-A-DI'-PLO'-SIS, 105, 86: s. Re-duplication; particularly applied to that form of speech in which the words that end one verse or sentence, also begin the next.

AN'-A-LEP'-SIS, s. The re-taking of strength; recovery.

An-a-lep'-tic, a. Restorative.

AN'-A-P-EST, (-pēst, 120) s. A foot of re-doubled strokes, namely, of two short syllables finishing with a long one.

AN'-a-pus'-tic, (-pēs'-tīck) a. Formed of anapaests.

ANAPH'-O-NA, (ā-nāf'-ō-rd, 163) s. A figure of speech which brings again and again the same words to begin successive clauses.

AN'-A-PLE'-ROT'-IC, 88: a. and s. Re-plenishing:—s. A medicine re-plenishing the flesh.

ANAT'-O-CISM, 158: s. Interest upon interest.

ANACATHARTIC=ān'-d-cā-thar'-tic, a. and s. Purgative upwards:—s. The medicine so acting.—See Ana.

ANAD'-RO-MOS, 120: a. Passing upwards, applied to fish that, at stated seasons, pass from the sea into rivers.

AN'-A-GOG'-I-CAL, (-gōd-gē'-ē-cāl) a. That leads upward, applied to such interpretation of scripture as, by its mysteriousness, produces rapture.

An-a-gog'-ics, s. pl. Mysterious considerations.

AN'-A-STO-MAT'-IC, 88: a. An epithet applied to medicines intended to remove obstructions by passing up through the mouths of vessels.

ANACHRONISM, ān-āck'-rō-nīzm, 161, 158: s. An inversion of time, by the assignment, either intentionally or ignorantly, of a false era to some event.—See Ana.

AN-ack'-ro-nis'-tic, 85: a. Erroneous in date.

AN-ach'-o-ret, (-āck'-ō-rēt) } 161: s. One who retires, who retreats; a monk who removes to greater solitude than the convent; a hermit; the word is generally shortened into, and pronounced anachorite.

AN'-A-GRAM, s. An inversion or re-distribution of the letters of a word or sentence; as of Roma into amor; Plute, quid est veritas into Est vir qui adest.

An'-a-gran'-ma-tize, v. n. To make anagrams.

An'-a-gran'-ma-tism, 158: s. The art of making anagrams.

An'-a-gran'-ma-tist, s. A maker of anagrams.

An'-a-gram-mat'-i-cal, 85, 105: a. Making an anagram.

AN'-A-TRO'-PHE, (ā-nās'-trō-fēy, 163, 101) s. An inversion of the words of a sentence into some unusual order.

ANACOLUTHON.—See after the compounds of Ana.

ANACONOSIS, ān'-d-cō-nō'-sis, 103, 86: s. A communication proposed as to each of the auditors, being the name of that figure in which the speaker asks the opinion of his opponents; as, Were the case yours, how would you act?—See Ana.

AN'-A-GRA-PH, (-grāf, 163) s. That which has engraved or embossed ornament distributed throughout. 37 For any word formed with Ana, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Ana to Anatomist.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Comments: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-un, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

→ For any word formed with Ana-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Ana- to Anatomist.

An-a-glyp'-tic, a. Relating to embossing or engraving. Or An'-a-glyph'-ic.

An-A-SAR'-CA, s. That which is distributed throughout the flesh, being the name of a species of dropsy.

AN'-A-LECTS, s. pl. Things gathered up from different places into one heap, generally applied to literary fragments.

ANACREONTIC.—See after the compounds of Ana-.

ANALEMMA=ān'-d-lēm-mā, s. That which is taken with a level [sight] being the name given to a projection of the sphere orthographically made by straight lines and ellipses, the eye being supposed at an infinite distance, and in the east or west point of the horizon.—See Ana-.

ANALOGY, ā-nāl'-ō-jē, s. Proportion or parallelism between things which in some respects are different; similitude of ratios; similarity of grammatical inflection, or principle of pronunciation, &c. as opposed to anomaly.—See Ana-.

An-a-log'-i-cal, (-lōd-gē'-ē-cāl) a. Used by way of analogy.

An-a-log'-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. In an analogous manner.

To A-nal'-o-gize, v. a. To explain by analogy.

A-nal'-o-gism, 158: s. An argument from the cause to the effect.

A-nal'-o-gous, (-gūs, 77, 120) a. Having something parallel.

To ANALYZE=ān'-d-līze, v. a. To solve distributively into elementary parts.—See Ana-.

AN'-a-lyt'-zer, s. The person or thing having power to analyze.

A-NAL'-Y-SIS, (ā-nāl'-ē-cīs) s. A resolution of any thing, whether an object of the senses or of the intellect, into its first elements: it stands opposed to Synthesis.

AN'-a-lyst, s. One who analyzes.

A-n-lyt'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to analysis;
An-a-lyt'-i-cal, 105: } opposed to synthetic; algebraic, as opposed to geometric.

An-a-lyt'-ics, s. pl. The science of analysis.

An-a-lyt'-i-cal-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of analysis.

ANANAS, ANARCHY, &c.—See after the compounds of Ana-.

ANATHEMA=ā-nāth'-ē-mā, s. That which is placed or hung up as a memorial in a temple or church, or which is set apart and devoted; the word is now understood only as the name of a curse pronounced with religious solemnity by ecclesiastical authority.—See Ana-.

To A-nath'-e-ma-tize, v. a. To curse, to excommunicate.

A-nath'-e-mat'-i-cal, 85: a. Having the properties of an anathema.

ANATIFEROUS.—See after the compounds of Ana-.

ANATOMY, ā-nāt'-ō-mē, 98, 105: s. The art of dissecting animal bodies; the structure of the body learned by dissection; a skeleton; any thing dissected.—See Ana-.

An-a-tom'-i-cal, a. Belonging or consonant to anatomy.

An'-a-tom'-i-cal-ly, ad. In an anatomical manner.

To A-nat'-o-mize, (-mīze) v. a. To dissect a body; to lay open minutely.

A-nat'-o-mist, s. One skilled in anatomy.

→ Here end the classes of words compounded with the prefix Ana-, which are chiefly in use. See others in Sup.

ANACOLUTION, ān'-d-cō-l'wōn, 109: s. A want of grammatical consequence or connection, when the latter part of a sentence designedly breaks into a different construction from that which the beginning promised.—See Ana-.

ANACREONTIC=ā-nāck'-rē-ōn'-tīck, a. and s. After the manner of the poet Anacreon; joyous.—s. A little poem in praise of love and wine.

ANAL=ā-nāl, a. Placed below the tail.

ANANAS=ā-nā-nāss, s. The pine-apple.

ANARCHY, ān'-ar-kē, 161, 105: s. Want of government; a state without magistracy; confusion.—See Ana-.

An'-arch, (-ark) s. An author of confusion.

An'-ar-chist, (-kīst) s. He who occasions confusion, who lives without rule, who defies government.

An-ar'-chi-al, (-kē-āl) } a. Confused, ungoverned.
An-ar'-chic, (-kīck) }

ANATIFEROUS, ān'-d-tīf'-ēr-ūs, 129, 120: a. Producing dunks.

→ Other words which commence with Ana-, must be sought for under the compounds of Ana-.

ANCESTOR=ān'-cēs-tor, 38: s. One who has gone before in a family; a forefather.

An'-ces-try, 105: s. Lineage, a series of known ancestors; the honour of descent, birth.

An'-ces-tral, a. Claimed from, or relating to, ancestors.

ANCHENTRY.—See Ancientry.

ANCHOR, āng'-kor, 158, 161, 38: s. A heavy iron with two barbed arms to fasten in the ground and hold a ship; that which confers stability or security.

To ANCHOR, v. n. and a. To cast anchor:—a. To place at anchor, to fix.

An'-chored, (āng'-kurd, 114) part. a. Held by the anchor; in the form of an anchor.

An'-cho-rage, 99: s. Ground to anchor on; the anchors of a ship; duty paid for anchoring.

An'-chor-hold, (-hōld, 116) s. The hold which the anchor takes; security.

ANCHORET, āng'-kō-rēt, } 158, 161: A her- ANCHORITE, āng'-kō-rīt, } mit.—See Ana- choret.

An'-cho-ress, s. A female hermit.

ANCHOVY, ān'-chō'-vē, 63, 105: s. A little fish much used as a sauce.

→ The accent of this word is tending to the first syllable, and will finally fix itself there.

ANCIENT, ān'-sh'ēnt, 111, 147: a. and s. Old, not modern; that has been of long duration; past; former:—a. An old man, a man of former times; the Ancients are those of past times, as opposed to the Moderns.

An'-cient-ly, 105: ad. In old times.

An'-cient-ness, s. Antiquity.

An'-cient-ry, s. The honour of ancient lineage.

→ This word is also written anchentry, but even 'then is pronounced as above.

ANCIENT, ān'-sh'ēnt, 111, 147: s. A flag or streamer; also the bearer of a flag, now called an ensign.

ANCILLARY, ān'-cīl-lār-ē, 129, 135: a. Subservient, as a handmaid.

AND=ānd, 176: conj. A particle implying addition.

ANDANTE, ān-dān'-tā, [Ital.] 170: a. and s. A direction in music to play moderately slow:—a. A piece or passage having that movement.

ANDIRON, ān'-d-ī-urn, 159: s. The iron at each end of a grate in which the spits turn.

ANDROGYNUS, ān-drōd'-gē-nūs, 64, 105: s. A being of double sex, an hermaphrodite.

An-drog'-y-nal,

An-drog'-y-nous, 120, } a. Of both sexes.

An'-droid, 30: s. An automaton like a man.

ANECDOTE=ān'-ēc-dōtē, s. Originally, unpublished history; (See Ana-) at present, a biographical fragment, or minute passage of any one's private life.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāti-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'wō, i. e. jew. 55: a, e, i, &c. mute. 171.

AN'-ec-lotⁿ-i-cal, a. Pertaining to anecdotes.
To ANE, E=ā-nēl, v. a. To give extreme unction. [Obs.]
ANEMOGRAPHY, ān'-ē-mōgⁿ-rā-fē-y, 87, 163: s. The description of the winds.
AN-E-MOMⁿ-ē-TEIT, s. An instrument for measuring the force and velocity of the wind.
ANEM-O-SCOPE, s. An instrument which shows the course and changes of the wind.
ANEM-O-NR, (-nēy, 101) s. The wind flower.
NENT=ā-nēntⁿ, prep. Concerning, about; opposite to. [A Scotticism.]
ANEURISM, ān'-ū-rīzm, 110, 158: s. A disease of the arteries, in which they become excessively dilated. This word is formed with the prefix Ana-, and would class with Anasarca.
ANEW=ā-nūⁿ, ad. Over again: in a new manner.
ANFRACTUOUS, ān-frāckⁿ-tū-ūs, 147, 120: a. Full of breaks or turnings.
AN-fracⁿ-tu-ous-ness, s. Fullness of turnings.
ANGEL, ān'-jēl, 111: s. and a. Originally a messenger; a spirit employed by God in human affairs; more rarely, one of the infernal spirits; a name given emphatically to a beautiful person; an ancient piece of money that bore the stamp of an angel:—a. An gelic.
AN'-gel-like, a. Resembling angels.
AN'-gel-shot, s. Chain-shot, so called from the corresponding French name, ange.
AN-gel'-ic, (ān-gēl'-ic, 84) } a. Resembling
AN-gel'-i-cal, (ān-gēl'-ē-cāl) } angels, of the nature
AN-gel'-i-cal-ness, s. Excellence more than human.
AN-gel'-i-ca, s. The name of a plant.
AN'-GE-LOT, s. A musical instrument somewhat like a lute; a gold coin value half an angel; a cheese made in Normandy.
Except in the second sense, the last word has no etymological claim to class with those preceding it.
ANGER, āng'-gēr, 158, 77: s. Discomposure of mind on receipt of an injury, with a present purpose of revenge; smart of a sore.
AN'-ger-ly, 103: ad. In an angry manner.
To AN'-ger, v. a. To provoke, to enrage.
AN'-gerrd (-gurd, 114, 36) } part. a. Made angry.
AN'-gred, (-gurd, 159)
AN'-gry, (āng'-grēy, 158, 105) a. Touched with anger; provoked; painful, inflamed.
AN'-gri-ly, 103: ad. In an angry manner.
ANGINA=ān'-jī-nā, s. Quinsy, sore throat.
ANGIOGRAPHY, ān'-jē-ōgⁿ-rā-fē-y, 87, 103, 163: s. A description of vessels in the human body.
AN'-GI-OIⁿ-O-GY, 87: s. The doctrine of arteries and other vessels of the body.
AN'-GI-OTⁿ-O-MY, s. A cutting open of vessels.
AN'-GI-O-SPERMⁿ-OUS, 120: a. A term applied to plants having their seed included in a pod or vessel.
ANGLE, āng'-gl, 158, 101: s. The inclination of two lines or planes to each other, which meet together at a point called the vertex or angular point; a corner.
AN'-gled, 14: part. a. Having angles.
AN'-gu-lar, 34: a. Having angles, consisting of an angle.
AN'-gu-lar-ly, 105: ad. With angles.
AN'-gu-lar-ness, } s. The quality of being AN'-gu-lar-i-ty, 129, 105: } angular.
AN'-gu-lar'-ted, a. Formed with angles.
AN'-gu-lous, 120: a. Hooked, angular.
ANGLE, āng'-gl, 158, 101: s. A hook: an instrument to take fish, consisting of a rod, a line, and a hook.

To AN'-gle, v. n. and a. To fish with an angle; to try to gain by some bait or insinuation:—act. To entice
AN'-gl-r, 36: s. He that fishes with an angle.
AN'-gling, 72: s. The art or practice of fishing with a rod and hook.
ANGLES, āng'-glz, 158, 101, 143: s. pl. A people of Germany; an ancient name of the English.
AN'-gli-can, 103: a. and s. English:—s. A member of the church of England.
To AN'-gli-cize, (-cīze) v. a. To make or convert into English.
AN'-gli-cism, (cīzm, 158) s. An English idiom.
AN'-glo-Daⁿ-nish, a. Relating to English Danes.
AN'-glo-Norⁿ-man, s. An English Norman.
AN'-glo-Saxⁿ-on, 188: s. An English Saxon.
ANGOBER, āng'-gō-ber, 133: s. A kind of pear.
ANGOR.—See under Anguish.
ANGRY.—See under Anger.
ANGUIFORM, ān-gwīl'-lē-fārm, 145, 33: a. Formed as an eel, without scales.
ANGUINEAL, ān-gwīn'-lē-āl, 145: a. Belonging to, or like a snake.
ANGUISII, āng'-gwīsh, 158, 145: s. Excessive pain of body or of mind.
To AN'-guish, v. a. To distress with extreme pain.
AN'-guished, (-gwīsh, 114, 143) part. a. Excessively pained.
AN'-gor, 38: s. Intense pain.
ANGULAR, &c.—See under Angle.
ANGUST=ān-gūstⁿ, a. Narrow, strait. [Obs.]
AN'-gus-taⁿ-tion, 153, 85, 89: s. The state of being narrow.
ANHELATION, ān'-hē-lāⁿ-shūn, 85, 89: s. The act of panting, the state of being out of breath.
AN'-he-lose, (-lōce, 152) a. Out of breath.
ANHYDROUS, ān-hīⁿ-drūs, 120: a. Destitute of water.—See A.
AN'-hy-drite, s. A species of sulphate of lime.
ANIENCED, ān'-ē-ēn-tēd, 103: a. Brought to nothing.
ANIGHTS, ān'-nītsⁿ, 162: ad. In the night time.
ANIL=ān'-īl, s. The indigo plant.
ANILE=ān'-īle, a. Old-womanish.
AN'-ile-ness, 98: } s. The state of being an
AN'-il'-i-ty, 92, 105: } old woman; dotage.
ANIMABLE.—See under Animate.
To ANIMADVERT, ān'-ē-mād-vertⁿ, v. n. To turn the mind with intent to notice; to censure. It is commonly followed by upon.
AN'-i-mad-vertⁿ-er, s. One who censures.
AN'-i-mad-vertⁿ-sive, (-civ, 105) a. That has the power of perceiving. [Obs.]
AN'-i-mad-vertⁿ-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Perception; the act or power of taking notice; reproof, punishment. In an ecclesiastical sense it differs from censure; for the latter respects a spiritual punishment, but animadversion, a temporal one.
ANIMAL, ān'-ē-māl, 105: s. and a. A living, sensitive, locomotive creature; in popular use it is often, incorrectly, inclusive of irrational creatures only:—a. That belongs or relates to animals; and in this way capable of being correctly used to distinguish the merely sentient part of a creature from the rational part. Animal Magnetism, see Magnetism.
AN'-i-malⁿ-cule, s. A minute animal.
AN'-i-malⁿ-cu-laⁿ, s. pl. Minute animals.
English word Animalcule being seldom used in the plural, this, the Latin plural of animalculum, generally serves the purpose. Note, that animalcule is a barbarism.
AN'-i-malⁿ-cu-lar, 34: a. Belonging to, or of the nature of an animalcule.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Corsonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: vīzh-un, i. e. vision. 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

An'-i-mai''-i-ty, s. The state of animal existence.
To AN'-I-MATE, v. a. To quicken, to make alive; to give powers to; to encourage.
An'-i-mate, [Poet.] } a. Alive, lively, vigorous.
An'-i-ma'-ted, } spirited.
An'-i-ma'-ting, 72: a. Quickening, enlivening.
An'-i-ma'-tive, 105: a. Of power to quicken.
An'-i-ma'-tion, 89: s. The act of animating; the state or quality of being animated.
An'-i-ma'-tor, 38: s. That which animates.
An'-i-ma-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be animated.
An'-i-mos, (-mōc, 152) a. Full of spirit, hot, resolute.
An'-i-mos''-u-ty, (ān'-ē-mōss''-ē-tēy) s. Violent hatred; active enmity.
ANISE, ān'-is, 152, 105: s. A species of parsley.
An'-ise-seed, or An'-i-seed, s. The seed of anise; an extract from it used for cordial or for medicine.
ANKER, āng'-ker, 158: s. A Dutch measure of liquids, about thirty-two gallons.
ANKLE, āng'-kl, 158, 101: s. The joint which connects the foot and leg.
An'-kle-bone, s. The bone of the ankle.
ANNALS, ANNATS, &c.—See before Anniver-sary.
To ANNEAL=ān-nēl', 105: v. a. To temper glass or metals by heat.
An-neal'-ing, 72: s. The art of tempering glass or metals.
To ANNEX, ān-nēcks', 154: v. a. To unite to at the end; to add a smaller to a greater thing.
An-nex', 82: s. The thing annexed. [Obs.]
An-nex'-ment, s. The act of annexing; the thing annexed.
An-nex-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. Conjunction, addition, union.
An-nex'-ion, (-nēck'-shūn, 154, 147) s. The act of annexing.
To ANNIHILATE, ān-nī'-hē-lāte, 105 v. a. To reduce to nothing; to destroy; to annihilate.
An-nī'-hi-la-ble, 101: a. That may be annihilated.
An-nī'-hi-la'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of reducing to nothing; the state of being reduced to nothing.
ANNALS, ān'-nālz, 143: s. pl. [The singular is scarcely used.] The events of a history in series according to the years; the book containing such narration.
An-nal-ist, s. A writer of annals.
An'-NATS, s. pl. A year's income of a living, or the first fruits accruing to the new incumbent.
An'-ni-ver-sar-y, 129, 105: s. and a. A day celebrated as it returns each year:—a. Annual.
An'-no-Dom''-i-ni, adv. In the year of our Lord.
An-nu-a-l, a. and s. That comes yearly; that is reckoned by the year; that lasts only a year:—s. A plant that lasts but one season; a yearly periodical work.
An-nu-al-ly, ad. Yearly.
An-nu'-i-ty, 105: s. A yearly rent or allowance.
An-nu'-i-tant, s. One that has, or receives an annuity.
ANNOMINATION, ān'-nōm-ē-nā''-shūn, 85, 89: s. A pun, an alliteration.—See Ad.
To ANNOTATE=ān'-nō-tāte, v. a. To make comments.
An-nō-ta'-tor, 85, 38: s. A writer of notes; a commentator.
An-nō-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. Explication, note.
To ANNOUNCE=ān-nounc', 31: v. a. To publish, to pronounce, to declare to.
An-noun'-cer, 36: s. A declarer, a proclaimer.

An-nounce'-ment, s. A declaration, an advertisement.
To AN-NUN'-ci-ate, (-nūn'-shē-āte, 147) v. a. To announce, to bring tidings.
An-nun'-ci-a'-tor, 85, 38: s. One who announces.
An-nun'-ci-a'-tion, 150, 85, 89: s. The act of proclaiming or announcing; a name given to the day (March 25) celebrated in memory of the angel's salutation of the Virgin Mary.
To ANNOY=ān-noy', 29: v. a. To incommode, to vex.
An-noy', s. Injury, molestation.
An-noy'-ance, s. The act or state of being annoyed; the thing that annoys.
An-noy'-er, 36: s. He that annoys.
An-noy'-ing, 72: a. Teasing, molesting.
ANNUAL, ANNUITY, &c.—See under Annals.
To ANNUL=ān-nūl', v. a. To make void, to abolish, to nullify, to reduce to nothing.
An-nul'-ment, s. The act of annulling.
ANNULAR=ān'-nū-lar, a. Formed as a ring.
An'-nū-lar-y, 129, 105: a. Having the form of rings.
An''-nu-la'-ted, part. a. Furnished with rings or circles. An'-nu-lose'' (152) made up of rings.
An'-nu-let, s. A little ring.
To ANNUMERATE=ān-nū'-mēr āt, 129 v. a. To add to a former number.—See Ad.
An-nū'-mer-a'-tion, 89: s. Addition to a number.
To ANNUNCIATE.—See under To Announce.
ANODYNE=ān'-ō-dīnē, a. and s. That takes away pain:—s. A medicine to assuage pain.—See A.
To ANOINT=ān-noint', 29: v. a. To rub over with unctuous matter; to consecrate by unction.
An-noint'-er, 36: s. He that anoints.
An-noint'-ment, s. The state of being anointed.
The An-noint'-ed, s. CHRIST; which see.
ANOMALY, ān-nōm'-d-lēy, 92, 105: s. Irregularity, deviation from rule.—See A.
An-nōm'-a-lism, 158: s. An irregularity.
An-nōm'-a-lis''-ti-cal, 105: a. Irregular.
An-nōm'-a-lous, 120: a. Deviating from rule or analogy.
An-nōm'-a-lous-ly, ad. Irregularly.
ANOMY, ān'-ō-mēy, s. Breach of law.—See A. [Little used.]
ANON=ān-nōn', ad. Quickly, soon: EVER AND ANON. Every now and then.
ANONYMOUS, ān-nōn'-ē-mūs, 105, 120: a. Wanting or not giving a name.—See A.
An-nōn'-y-mous-ly, ad. Namelessly.
ANOREXY, ān'-ō-rēck-sēy, 154: s. Want of appetite.—See A.
ANOTHER, ān-ūth'-er, 116: a. Not the same; one more; not one's self; different.
An-oth'-er-gates, a. Of another kind. [Obs.]
↗ The phrase Anotherques is a corruption either of this, or of Anotherwise.
ANSATED=ān-sā-tēd, 2. a. Having handles.
ANSERINE=ān'-sēr-inē, a. Like a gouse, or the skin of a gouse.
To ANSWER, ān'-ser, 145, 36: v. n. and act To speak in return, or in opposition; to be accountable for; to vindicate; to give an account; to correspond to; to suit; to be equivalent to; to bear proportion to; to succeed; to appear to a call or summons; to act reciprocally; to stand as opposite or correlative to something else:—act. To speak in return to a question or petition; to be equivalent to; to satisfy any claim or demand; to perform what is endeavoured; to comply with.
An'-swer, s. That which is said in return to a ques-

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: jōw, i. e. jew, 55: a. c. i. &c. mule, 171.

tion; an account to be given to justice; a c. n. f. utation of a charge.

AN'-suer-a-ble, 129, 98, 101: a. Admitting a reply: liable to give an account; correspondent to; proportionate; suitable; equal to; equivalent.

AN'-suer-a-bly, 105: ad. In due proportion, suitably.

AN'-suer-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being answerable.

AN-swer-er, s. He that answers; he that opened a controversy, and has to reply to the opponents.

A'NT, änt, v. n. A vulgar contraction or substitute for am not, are not, and is not. Webster says it is a legitimate relic of the Gothic dialect.

ANT, änt, conj. A contraction for an it, i. e. if it.

ANT=änt, 11, 111: s. An emmet, a pismire.

Ant'-hill, s. The small protuberance of earth raised by ants in making their nests.

ANTE=än'-tē-, } Prepositions, etymologi-

ANTI-, än'-tē-, 105, } cally the same, the former Latin, the other Greek. They are much used in the composition of words, ante in general signifying before, either in place or time; and anti implying opposed to, or in place of.

ANTAGONIST=än-täg'-ō-nist, s. [Anti-agonist.] One who contends against: an opponent. In anatomy, the antagonist is a muscle that counteracts another.

An-täg'-o-nis'-tic, a. Contending as an antagonist.

An-täg'-o-nize, v. n. To contend.

An-täg'-o-nism, 158: } s. Contest, opposi-

An-täg'-o-ny, 105: [Obs.] } tion

ANTALGIC=änt-äl'-jick, a. [Anti-algic.] Good against pain.

ANT'-APH-RO-DIT'-IC, (-äf-rō-dīf'-ick, 163, 88) a. [Anti-aphro-dit'-ic.] Antivenereal.

ANT'-AP-O-PLEC'-TIC, a. [Anti-apoplectic.] Good against apoplexy.

ANT'-AR-THRIT'-IC, a. [Anti-arthritis.] Good against the gout.

ANT'-ANTH-MAT'-IC, (-äst-mät'-ick, 166) a. [Anti-asthmatic.] Good against asthma.

ANTANACLASIS=änt'-än-d-clä'-cīs, s. [Antianac-lasis.] The reflecting of opposed senses in a word; as, While we live, let us live: also, taking up, after a long parenthesis, or intervening clause, the words which immediately preceded it, so as to rejoin the interrupted part.

ANTARCTIC=änt-arck'-tīck, a. [Anti-arctic.] That is opposite the north pole; relating to the south pole.

ANTE-ACT=än'-tē-äct, s. That which was done before.

AN'-TE-AM'-BU-LA'-TION, 85, 89: s. A walking before.

To ANTECEDE=än-tē-cēdē', v. a. To precede, to go before.

An-te-ce'-dent, a. and s. Going before:—s. That which goes before; in grammar, the noun to which the relative refers; in logic, the first proposition of an enthymeme.

An-te-ce'-dent-ly, 105: ad. Previously.

An-te-ce'-dence, } s. The act or state of going

An-te-ce'-den-cy, } before.

AN-TE-CES'-SOR, 38: s. One who goes before; in law, one that possessed the land before the present possessor.

ANTE-CHAMBER, än'-tē-chäüm'-ber, 111: s. The room before or leading into the principal apartment.

AN'-TE-CHAP'-EL, s. The part of the chapel leading to the choir.

AN'-TE-CUR'-SOR, 38: s. One who runs before; a precursor.

To AN'-TE-DATE, v. a. To date earlier than the real time; than the present time.

AN'-TE-DIL-U-VI-AN, (-dē-l'wō-vē-än, 105, 109) a. and s. Existing before the deluge:—s. One that lived before the flood.

ANTELOPE=än'-tē-lōpe, s. A species of goat, the gazelle. It is not unlike, and therefore may be taken for, or in place of (anti-) a deer. Such is the supposed origin of the name.

ANTE-LUCAN, än'-tē-l'wō-cän, 109: a. Before daylight.

AN'-TE-ME-MID'-I-AN, 146, 147: a. Before noon.

AN'-TE-MUN'-DANE, a. That was before the world.

ANTEMETIC=änt-ē-mēt'-ick, a. [Anti-emetic.] Good against vomiting.

ANT'-EP-I-LEP'-IC, a. Good against epilepsy.

AN'-TEPH-I-AL'-TIC, a. Good against night-mare.

ANTENNAE, än-tēn'-nä, [Lat.] 169: s. pl. The horns or feelers of insects, so named from being in front, or projecting from the head. Antennary, a.

ANTEPASCIAL, än'-tē-pä'-cäl, 161: a. Before Easter.

AN-TE-PAST, s. A foretaste.

AN'-TE-PE-NULT'-I-MATK, 85: a. Pertaining to the last syllable but two.

An-te-pe-nult', s. The last syllable but two.

To AN'-TE-PONE, v. a. To set before, or to prefer to.

AN'-TE-PHE-DIC'-A-MENT, s. A question requiring discussion before entering on the main doctrine; an introduction to the categories.

ANTERIOR, än-tē-rē-or, 105, 38: a. Going before.

An'-te-ri-or'-i-ty, 129, 105: s. Priority, the state of being before.

ANTEROOM=än'-tē-room, s. The room leading to a principal room.

AN'-TE-TEM'-PLE, 101: s. What is now called the nave in a church.

AN'-TE-STOM-ACH, (-stüm' äck, 116, 161) s. A cavity that leads into the stomach.

To AN'-TE-VERT, v. a. To prevent.

ANTES, än'-tēz, 101: s. pl. Square pillars on each side of the doors of temples.

ANTHELMINTHIC=än'-thēl-mīn'-thīck, 85: a. [Anti-helminthic.] Good against worms.

ANTHEM=än'-thēm, s. [Anti-hymn.] Originally the opposed or alternate hymn; now it means any hymn or holy song.

ANTHER, ANTHOLOGY, &c. ANTHONY'S-FIRE, ANTHRAX, ANTHROPOLOGY, &c.—See after the compounds and other relations of Ante- and Anti-.

ANTHORISM, än'-thō-rīzm, 158: s. [Anti-orphism.] In rhetoric, a definition opposite to the opponent's.

AN'-THY-PNOT'-IC, 88: a. [Anti-hypnotic.] Counteracting sleep.

AN'-THY-P-O-CHON'-DRI-AC, 161: a. [Anti-hypochondriac.] Good against low spirits.

AN'-THY-P-OPH'-O-RA, (-öf-ō-rä, 163) s. [Anti-hypophora.] The statement of an adversary's positions with the arguments which the speaker opposes to them.

AN'-THY-S-TER'-IC, a. [Anti-hysterical.] Good against hysteria.

ANTIACID, än'-tē-äs'-cīd, 85, 105, 59: a. and s. Opposing acidity:—s. An alkaline absorbent.

AN'-TI-BAC'-CHI-US, (-bäck'-ē-üs, 161) s. The bacillus is a foot of one short and two long syllables the same, in contrary order, two long and one short, is the antibacillus.

AN'-TI-BA-SII'-I-CAN, (-zīl'-ē-cän, 152) a. Opposed to royal state.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ün, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: thūn, 166: thēn, 166.

ANTIC=ăn-tic, a. and s. Originally, perhaps, it meant ante-dated or out of fashion; at present it signifies odd, ridiculously wild:—s. A buffoon.

AN-tic-ly, 105: ad. Drollly.

ANTICACHECTIC, ăn-tê cđ-kêck—tick, 161: a. Good against an ill habit of body.

AN-ti-CA-TAR—RHAL, (răl, 164) a. Good against catarrh.

AN-ti-CHRIS—TIAN, (-cris—yăn, 161, 146, 147) a. and s. Opposite to Christianity:—s. An enemy to Christianity.

To ANTICIPATE, ăn-tis-cđ-păt, 59, 105: v. n. To take up beforehand; to go before so as to preclude others; to enjoy in expectation; to forestall.

AN-tic—i-pa—tor, 38: s. A preventer, a forestaller.

AN-tic—i-pa—tor-y, 120, 105: a. Coming in beforehand.

AN-tic—i-pa—tion, 89: s. The act of anticipating.

ANTICLIMAX, ăn-tê-cl-măck, 154: s. A sinking in thought, or bathos, as opposed to climax, which is a rising.

AN-ti-COR, s. A swelling opposite the heart, which horses are liable to.

AN-ti-COS-MET—ic, 158, 88: s. Destructive of beauty.

AN-ti-DOTE, s. That which is given against, or to expel poison.

AN-ti-do—tal, } a. Having the qualities of an
AN-ti-do—tar-y, } antidote.

AN-ti-FEB—RHE, (-rîl, 105) a. Good against fever.

AN-ti-LOG—A-RITHM, s. The number standing against the logarithm to make up ninety degrees; or the complement of the logarithm of any sine tangent, or secant.

AN-ti-L-O-GY, 105: s. Contradiction of passages in the same author.

AN-ti-ME-TAB—O-LE, 101: s. A figure of speech in which things are changed contrariwise; as, A poem is a speaking picture; a picture a mute poem.

AN-ti-ME-TATH—E-IS, s. A change to a contrary position, or to a position over against; being the name of more than one of the figures of speech.

AN-ti-M-E-TER, s. An optical instrument for measuring angles.

ANTIMONY, ăn-tê-môn-êy, 18, 105: s. A metallic, solid, heavy, brittle substance, probably so called because, being seldom found pure, but mostly mixed with other metals, it seems repugnant to solitude.

AN-ti-mo—ni-al, 90: a. and s. Composed of, or of the nature of antimony:—s. A medicine of which antimony is an ingredient.

AN-ti-mon—ic, (-môn-ic) } a. Pertaining to an-
AN-ti-mo—ni-ous, 95, 120: } timony.

AN-ti-mo—ni-ate, s. A salt composed of antimoniac acid and a base.

ANTINEPHRITIC, ăn-tê-nê-frît—ic, 88, 163: a. Good against diseases of the reins and kidneys.

ANTINOMIAN, ăn-tê-nô-mê-ăn, 90: a. and s. Pertaining to the doctrine of the Antinomians:—s. He who holds that faith alone is necessary to salvation, against the law which requires good works.

AN-ti-no—mi-a-nism, 158: s. The tenets of the Antinomians.

AN-ti-NOM-y, s. A contradiction between two laws.

ANTI-PATHY, ăn-tip—d-thêy, 105: s. A natural contrariety to any thing, opposed to sympathy; aversion.

AN-ti-pa-thet—ic, 88: } a. Having a natural con-
AN-ti-pa-thet—i-cal, } trariety.

ANTIPERISTASIS, ăn-tê-pê-ris—tê-sis, s.

The opposition of a contrary quality, by which the quality it opposes becomes heightened.

AN-TIPH—O-NE, 105, } 163: s. The chant or al
AN-TIPH—O-NE, 101, } ternate singing in cathedrals

AN-TI-PHON, 105, 18, }

AN-TIPH—HA-SIS, 163, 98: s. A figure by which a word signifies the opposite of what it originally means as wiseacre, to signify a fool.

AN-ti-phras—tic, a. Pertaining to antiphrasis.

AN-TIP—O-DES, (-dêcz, 101) s. pl. They who, living on the opposite side of the globe, have their feet opposite to ours; direct opposition.

AN-ti-pode, s. One of the antipodes.

AN-tip—o-dal, a. Pertaining to the antipodes; opposite.

AN-TIP—TO—SIS, 86: s. The putting of one case in grammar in place of another.

ANTI-QUE, ăn-têk—ic, 104: a. and s. Ancient, not modern; of genuine antiquity; of old fashion:—s. An ancient rarity.

AN-tique—ness, s. The quality of being antique.

AN-ti-QUA—RY, (-kwâ-rêy, 76, 145, 105) s. A man studious of antiquity.

AN-ti-qua—ri-an, a. and s. Pertaining to antiquity:—s. An antiquary.

AN-ti-qua—ri-a-nism, 158: s. Love of antiquities

To AN-ti-quate, v. a. To make obsolete.

AN-ti-qua—ted-ness, s. The state of being obsolete.

AN-ti-QUA—RI-TY, (ăn-tick—wê-têy) s. Old times; the people of old times; a relict of old times; old age; ancientness.

ANTISCI, ăn-tish—yî, 146, 147: s. pl. People of shadows contrary at noon-day to those of some other people.—See Âscii.

ANTISEPTIC, ăn-tê-sêp—tick, a. Good against putrefaction.

AN-TIS—PA—SIS, s. A contrary drawing, a revulsion of humor to another part of the body.

AN-tis-pas—tic, 88: a. Causing a revulsion of humors.

AN-TIS—TA—SIS, s. An anti-statement.

AN-TIS—TRO-PHIC, 101: s. The stanza opposed to the strophe; in rhetoric, the changing of things mutually dependent.

AN-TI—STRUC—MAT—ic, 105, 109, 88: a. Good against the king's evil.

ANTITHESIS=ăn-tîh—ê-cis, s. Opposition of words or sentences; contrast.

☞ In the plural, -sis becomes -ses, pronounced ceez, 101.

AN-ti-thet—ic, 88: } a. Placed in contrast.

AN-ti-thet—i-cal, }

ANTI-TYPE, ăn-tê-tîpe, s. That which is prefigured by the type; and therefore stands opposed to, or correlative with it.

AN-ti-ty-p—i-cal, 92, 105: a. That explains the type.

ANTLER=ăn-t—ler, 36: s. Branch of a stag's horn: so called from being in front of his head.

ANTECEI=ăn-tê-cî, 103: s. pl. People who, with respect to north and south, not east and west, live in opposite parts of the globe.

ANTONOMASIA, ăn-tô-nô-mâ-zhê-d, 90: s. A form of speech in which some general term is put in place of the proper name; as, the Stagyrite, for Aristotle.

☞ Here end the compounds and other relations of ante- and anti- so far as it is thought necessary to exhibit them. Such obvious compounds as Anti-convulsive, Anti-pope, Anti-ministerial, are omitted, because the meaning of the latter part of each word being ascertained, that of the whole compound cannot but be plain. See however a few other related words in Sup.

ANTHER=ăn-t—her, 36: s. That part of a flower which contains the pollen. See also in Sup.

AN-ther—it—er-ous, 120: a. Producing at there.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gâ-tê-wâ-y: chăp-măn: pđ-pâ: lăw: gđod: jw, i. e. jw, 55: a, e, i, o, u, and 171.

AN-THOI' o-ay, 105: s. The doctrine of flowers: a collection of flowers: a collection of any kind, to which the name flowers may be figuratively applied.

AN'-tho-log''-i-cal, a. Relating to anthology.

ANTHONY'S FIRE, án'-tò-níz'-fíre'', 166, 151: s. The disease erysipelas.

ANTHRAX, án'-thrácks, 154: s. A carbuncle; originally, a burning coal; a dipterous insect.

AN'-thra-cite, s. A lustrous kind of coal.

ANTHROPOLOGY, án'-thró-pòl''-ò-g'ly, 105: s. A discourse on human nature; the doctrine of the structure of the human body.

AN'-THRO-POS''-O-PHY, (-f'ly, 163) s. The knowledge of the nature of man.

AN'-THRO-PO-MOIR''-PHIRE, s. One who believes that God has a human form.

AN'-THRO-POPH''-A-oi', s. pl. Man-eaters; cannibals.

ANTRE, án'-tur, 159: s. A cavern, a den.

Other words commencing with Ant. must be sought for under the compounds of Ante and Anti.

ANVIL=án'-víl, s. The iron block which smiths use.

ANXIOUS, ängk'-sh'üs, 154, 120: a. Disturbed about some uncertain event; unquiet; careful, as of a thing of great importance.

AN'-xious-ly, 105: ad. In an anxious manner.

AN'-xious-ness, s. The quality of being anxious.

AN-XI'-E-TY, (äng'-zíl'-è-t'ly, 154) s. Trouble of mind about some future event; lowness of spirits.

ANY, én'-n'ly, 119: a. Every, whoever, whatever.

AN'-y-wise, (-wíze) ad. In any manner.

AONIAN, á'-v-né'-án, 2: a. Pertaining to the fabled residence of the muses, or the hill Parnassus.

AORIST=á'-ò-ríst, s. An indefinite tense in grammar.—See A.

AORTA=á'-or-tá, s. The great artery rising immediately out of the left ventricle of the heart.

APACE=d-pácc', ad. Quick, speedily, hastily.

APAGOGUE. APARITHMESIS.—See under the compounds of Apo-.

APART=d-part', 33: ad. Separately; in a state of distinction; distinctly; at a distance from.

APART'-MENT, s. A room.

APATHY, áp'-d-th'cy, s. Want of sensibility; exemption from passion.—See A.

Ap'-a-thet''-ic, 88: a. Having no feeling.

APE=ápe, s. A kind of monkey; an imitator.

To Ape, v. a. To imitate, as an ape imitates a man.

Ap'-pr, 36: s. One who imitates ridiculously.

Ap'-pish, a. Having the qualities of an ape, imitative, foppish.

Ap'-pish-ly, ad. In an apish manner.

Ap'-pish-ness, s. Mimicry, foppery.

APeAK=d-péke', 177: ad. So as to be up in a point: so as to be pointing at.

APENNINE=áp'-én-níne, s. and a. The common name of some high mountains running through Italy:—a. Pertaining to the Apennines.

APEPSY, d-pép'-s'cy, 105: s. Want of digestion.—See A.

APERIENT, d-pérf'-l-ént, 43, 105: a. and s. Gently purgative:—s. A purgative.

Ap-per'-i-tive, 129, 105: a. Opening, aperient.

APERT=d-perf', 35: a. Open. [Obs.]

Ap-perf'-ly, 105: ad. Openly

Ap-perf'-ness, s. Openness.

Ap-perf'-tion, 89: s. An opening; the act of opening.

Ap'-PÉ-TURE, (-t'ure, 147) s. An opening; a hole through any solid substance.

APETALOUS, d-pét'-d-lüs, a. Without flower leaves.—See A.

APEX, á'-pécks, 154: s. sing. } 95: The tip or APICES, áp'-è-cécz, 101: s. pl. } tips, point or points of any thing. Apic'ial (nish'-'al) having an apex.

APHÆRESIS, APHELION, APHORISM,

APHITHONG.—See under the compounds of Apo-.

APHILANTHROPY, áp'-è-lán''-thró-p'cy, 163: s. Want of philanthropy; dislike of society.—See A.

APHONY, áp'-ò-n'cy, 163: s. Loss of voice.—See A.

APHRODISIACAL, áp'-ró-d'è-sí''-d-cál, 163, 81: a. Pertaining to Aphrodite, or Venus; venereal.

APHYLLOUS, d-fíl'-lüs, 163, 120: a. Leafless.—See A.

APIARY, áp'-è-är-éy, 105, 129: s. The place where bees are kept.

APIECE, d-pécc', 103: ad. To the part or share of each.

APITPAT=d-pít'-pát, ad. With quick palpitation APLANATIC=d'-pl-d-nát''-ic, 83, 88: a. Without, or corrective of, aberration.—See A.

APLUSTRE, d-plüs'-tur, 159: s. The ancient naval streamer.

APO-, A prefix found in words originally Greek, signifying from. It is etymologically the same as the Latin ab. See some other examples in Supp.

APAGOGUE=áp'-ò-gò'-j'cy, 101: s. [Apo-agoge.] The carrying or deriving of one thing from another. In logic, abduction; reductio ad absurdum; in mathematics, the progress or passage from a proved proposition to another.

Ap'-a-gog''-i-cal, (-g'rd'-g'c-cál) a. Proving indirectly.

Ap'-A-RITH''-ME-SIS, s. [Apo-arithmesis.] Enumeration.

APHÆRESIS, d-fé'-ré-sis, 163: s. [Apo-æresis.] Removal from; as the first syllable from a word.

APHE'-LI-ON, (d-fé'-lè-ón) s. [Apo-helion.] The point of a planet's orbit which is most distant from the sun.

APH'-O-RISM, (áp'-ò-rízm, 92, 158) s. [Apo-horism.] Generally, a dividing or distinguishing from; also the thing distinct or separate; appropriately, a precept or principle expressed in few words.

Ap'-o-ris''-tic, 88: } a. In short unconnected sen
Ap'-o-ris''-ti-cal, } tences.

Ap'-o-ris''-ti-cal-ly, ad. In the manner of aphorisms.

APH'-THONG, (áp'-thöng, 163, 72) s. [Apo-thong.] Letters from which the sound is taken, silent letters.

APOCALYPSE, d-pòc'-kd-líps, s. Disclosure, revelation.—See Apo.

A-poc'-a-lyp''-tic, 88: } a. Appertaining to revela-
A-poc'-a-lyp''-ti-cal, } tion, or the book of Revelations.

A-poc'-o-pe, 101: s. Abscission of the last syllable of a word.

To A-poc'-o-pate, v. a. To leave out the last syllable.

Ap'-O-CRUS''-TIC, a. That drives from, or repels; astringent.

A-poc'-RY-PhA, (d-pòck'-ré-fá, 105, 163) s. pl. Literally, things hidden from sight; appropriately, writings whose authors are not known, whose authenticity, as inspired writings, is not admitted, or is held in doubt.

A-poc'-ry-phal, a. Not canonical; of doubtful authenticity.

A-poc'-ry-phal-ly, ad. Uncertainly.

A-poc'-ry-phal-ness, s. Uncertainty.

Ap'-O-DIX''-is, 154: s. Demonstration.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mîsh-ün, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: thên, 166.

Ap'-o-dic'-ti-cal, 105: a. Demonstrative.

Ap'-o-sis, s. The latter part of a period, which explains or gives meaning to the protasis, or former part; also, the application of a similitude.

Ap'-o-gee, s. That point in the heavens in which the sun or a planet is at the greatest distance from the earth.

Ap'-o-graph, 163: s. A copy from, opposed to autograph.

APOLOGY, ā-pōl'-ō-gēy, s. Primarily, defence; commonly, excuse.—See Apo.

To Ap-pol'-o-gize, (-gīzē) v. n. To make an excuse for.

Ap-pol'-o-gist, s. One who apologizes.

Ap-pol'-o-get'-ic, 85, 88: } a. That is said in defence or excuse.

Ap-pol'-o-get'-i-cul, }

Ap'-o-logue, (-lōg, 107) s. A fabulous moral story.

Ap'-o-me-com'-e-try, s. The art of measuring from a distance.

Ap'-o-neu-ro'-sis, 110, 86: s. Expansion of a nerve into a membrane.

Ap-poh'-a-sis, 163: s. A figure in which the speaker seems to set aside or waive what he really insinuates.

Ap'-o-phleg-mat'-ic, 163, 88: a. Drawing away phlegm.

Ap-poh'-y-ge, (d-pōl'-ē-gēy, 163, 101) s. The column where it springs from its base.

Ap-poh'-y-sis, 163: s. The process of a bone.

APOPHTHEGM, ā-pō-thēm, 143, 157: s. A remarkable saying that has come from a distinguished person.—See Apo.

APOPLEXY, ā-pō-plēck'-sēy, 154: s. A sudden deprivation of sense and voluntary motion, through some interruption of the action of the nerves on the muscles. The literal meaning is, a percussion.—See Apo.

Ap'-o-plec'-tic, 88: } a. Relating to, or disposed to apoplexy.

Ap'-o-plec'-ti-cal, }

APOREMA=ā-pō-rē-mā, s. A problem; a difficulty. See A: not Apo.

Ap'-o-tu-a, s. A figure in which the speaker doubts where to begin.

AP-OS-I-O-PE'-SIS, s. Suppression of what the speaker was about to say when he feels too strongly to go on, or fears to do so, or chooses to insinuate rather than express. See Apo. [from.]

AP-O-RRHŒ-A, (-rē-ā, 164, 103) s. A fluxion

APOSTATE=ā-pōs-tātē, s. and a. One who has departed from what he once professed; who has wholly turned from his religion or principles:—a. False, traitorous. See Apo.

Ap'-os-tat'-i-cal, a. After the manner of an apostate.

To Ap-pos'-ta-tize, v. n. To forsake one's principles.

Ap-pos'-ta-sy, 152, 105: s. Departure from professed principles.

APOSTEME=āp'-ōs-tēme, s. That which gathers or takes a stand from some source or cause; an abscess; corruptly, imposthume.—See Apo.

To Ap-pos'-te-mate, v. n. To gather into an aposteme.

Ap'-os-tem'-a-tous, a. Pertaining to, or of the nature of, an abscess.

Ap-pos'-te-mat'-ion, 85, 89: s. The process of gathering into an abscess.

APOSTLE, d-pōs'-sl, 156, 101: s. Literally, one sent from another; appropriately, one of the twelve deputed by Christ.—See Apo.

Ap-pos'-tle-ship, s. The office or dignity of an apostle.

Ap'-o-stol'-ic, 88: a. Appertaining to, or taught

Ap'-o-stol'-i-cal, } by the apostles.

Ap'-o-stol'-i-cal-ly, ad. In an apostolic manner.

Ap'-o-to-late, s. Apostleship; the papacy.

APOSTROPHE, d-pōs'-trō-fēy, 163: s. In rhetoric, a turning from the real auditors to an imagined one; in grammar, the comma which turns the reader's notice to an absent letter.—See Apo.

To Ap-pos'-tro-phize, (-fīzē, 163) v. a. To address by an apostrophe.

Ap'-o-stroph'-ic, a. Pertaining to an apostrophe.

APOSTUME=āp'-ō-stūme, s. An aposteme.—See Apo.

APOTHECARY, d-pōth'-ē-cār-ēy, 129, 105: s.

Literally, one who keeps a warehouse; appropriately, a dispenser of medicines, having also a license to practise medicine, and so distinguished from a dispensing chemist.—See Apo.

Ap-OTH'-e-sis, s. A repository; the reduction of a dislocation.

APOTHEGM.—See Apophthegm.

To Ap'-o-theg'-m-d-tize, v. n. To utter remarkable sayings.

APOTHEOSIS=āp'-ō-thē'-ō-sis, 86: s. Deification.—See Apo.

APOTOME=d-pōt'-ō-mēy, 101: s. That which is cut off, a term applied to the difference of incommensurable quantities in mathematics, and tones in music.—See Apo.

Ap'-o-zem, s. A decoction from herbs.

☞ Here end the compounds of Apo. Ap- in most of the following words is a form of Ad-, which see.

To APPAL, āp-pāl', 112: v. a. To fright.

Ap-pal'-ment, s. Impression of fear.

APPANAGE=āp'-pā-nāge, s. Lands set apart by princes for the maintenance of younger children.

APPARATUS=āp'-pā-rā'-tūs, s. The furniture or means provided for the accomplishment of some purpose; equipage, show. Apparatus in the plural.

APPAREL=āp-pār'-ēl, 129: s. Dress; vesture.

To Ap-par'-el, v. a. To dress, to clothe, to deck.

APPARENT, āp-pār'-rēnt, 92: a. Plain, indubitable; seeming, not real; visible; open, discoverable; applied to the heir of a throne, certain, not presumptive; in which last sense the word inclines to shorten the second syllable.

Ap-pa'-rent-ly, ad. Evidently, seemingly.

APPARITION, āp'-pār'-rīsh'-ūn, 85, 89, 95: s. Appearance, visibility; a visible object, a spectre; something only apparent; the visibility of a luminary, opposed to occultation.

APPARITOR, āp-pār'-l-tor, 105, 38: s. Formerly, an officer attending the judge of any court; now, the messenger of an ecclesiastical court.

To APPAY=āp-pāy', v. a. To satisfy. [Obs.]

To APPEACH=āp-pēach', 103: v. a. To accuse, to censure.

Ap-peach'-ment, s. Accusation.

To APPEAL=āp-pēl', 103: v. n. and a. To transfer a cause from one tribunal to another; to refer to another judge; to call another as witness:—act. To transfer to another tribunal; in criminal law, to charge with crime, to call to a defence.

Ap-peal', s. The removal of a cause to a superior tribunal; in common law, an accusation; a call upon any as witness.

Ap-peal'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be appealed; that may be removed to a higher tribunal.

Ap-peal'-er, 36: s. He who appeals.

Ap-peal'-ant, 12: s. He who appeals. [Obs.]

Ap-peal'-lant, s. and a. A challenger; one that summons another to answer either in the lists or in a court of justice; one that appeals from a lower to a higher power:—adj. Appealing, relating to an appeal or the appellant.

Ap-pel'-late, s. and a. A person appealed or prosecuted:—adj. Pertaining to appeals.

Ap-pe'-lor, 38, 177: s. He who appeals and is an appellant.

Ap-pel'-lee, s. He who is appealed.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Diktionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: jōw, v. e. Jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

Ap-pel-la tor-y, 98, 129, 105: a. Containing an appeal.

Ap-pel-la-tion, &c.—See after Appease.

To APPEAR=ap-pēr', 103, 43: v. n. To be in sight; to become visible, as a spirit; to stand in presence of another; to be the object of observation; to exhibit one's self; to be made clear by evidence; to seem, in opposition to reality; to be plain beyond dispute.

Ap-pear'-ance, s. The act of coming into sight; the thing seen; phenomena; semblance, not reality; outside show; presence; mien; probability.

Ap-pear'-er, 36: s. The person that appears.

To APPEASE, ap-pēz', 103, 137: v. a. To quiet, to pacify.

Ap-pear'-er, (-zer) s. He that pacifies.

Ap-pear'-ment, s. The act of appeasing; a state of peace.

Ap-pear'-sa-ble, (-zā-bl, 101) a. Reconcilable.

Ap-pear'-sa-ble-ness, s. Reconcilableness.

Ap-pear'-sive, (-civ, 152) a. Mitigating, quieting.

APPELLATION, ap'pēl-lā''shūn, 89: s. Name.

Ap-pel'-la-tive, (-lā-tiv, 105) a. and s. Common, usual, opposed to proper or peculiar:—s. A common name as opposed to a proper one; a. appellation or title.

Ap-pel'-la-tive-ly, 105: ad. In the manner of a common name.

☞ See the other etymological relations of these words under To Appeal.

To APPEND=ap-pēnd', v. a. To hang to, to add accessorially.

Ap-pen'-dage, 99: s. Something annexed or attached to.

Ap-pen'-dent, a. Hanging to something else; concomitant.

Ap-pen'-dant, 192, 12: s. An accidental or adventitious part.

Ap-pen'-dence, } s. That which is by right and Ap-pen'-den-cy, } annexed. [The latter is chiefly in use.]

Ap-pen'-dix, 154: s. sing. } A thing or things ap-

Ap-pen'-di-cies, (-cēz) pl. } pended, generally applied to the supplementary matter of literary works.

☞ The English plural, Appendixes, is also in good use.

To Ap-pen'-de-cate, v. a. To append. [Little used.]

Ap-pen'-di-ca-tion, s. An appendage.

Ap-pen'-di-cle, 101: s. A small appendage.

APPERCEPTION, ap'per-cēp''shūn, 89: s. Consciousness.

To APPERTAIN=ap-per-tān', v. n. To belong to as of right; to belong to by nature or appointment.

Ap'per'-tain-ment, s. That which belongs.

Ap-per'-tinent, a. and s. Belonging:—s. That which belongs.

Ap-per'-te-nence, s. Appurtenance.

Ap-pur'-te-nant, a. Joined to. [A law term.]

Ap-pur'-te-nance, s. An adjunct; that which appertains. [Law.]

APPETENCE=ap'pē-tēncē, } s. Desire; car-

APPETENCY=ap'pē-tēn-cēy, } nal desire.

Ap-pe'-tent, a. Desiring.

Ap-pe'-ti-ble, 101: a. Desirable.

Ap-pe'-ti-ble-ity, 105: s. The quality of being desirable.

Ap-pe'-tite, (-tītē) s. Desire; the desire of sensual pleasure; violent longing; keenness of stomach; hunger.

Ap-pe'-ti-tive, 105: a. That desires.

Ap-pe'-ti-tion, (-tīsh-ūn, 89, 95) s. Desire.

To APPLAUD=ap-plāwd', 123: v. a. To praise by clapping the hands; to praise in general.

Ap-plaud'-er, 36: s. He that applauds.

Ap-PLAUSE, (-plāwz, 151) s. Approbation loudly expressed.

Ap-PLAU-SIVE, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Applauding.

APPLE, āp'pl, 101: s. The fruit of the apple tree; the pupil of the eye.

Ap'ple-john, (-jūn, 160) s. A species of apple said to keep two years, so as to become very much shrivelled.

☞ The sense of other compounds of Apple, as Apple-graft, Apple-pie, Apple-tree, Apple-sauce, Apple-tart, Apple-woman, Apple-yard, will be easily understood from the component parts.

To APPLY=ap-plī', v. a. and n. To put to; to suit to; to study; to address to; to busy; to keep at work:—new. To suit; to agree with.

Ap-plī'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Capable of being applied.

Ap-plī'-ance, s. The act of applying; the thing applied.

Ap-plī'-er, s. One who applies. [Obs.]

Ap'pli-cant, 105, 12: s. One who applies.

Ap'pli-ca-ble, 98, 101: s. That may be applied; suitable.

Ap'pli-ca-ble-ness, s. Fit-ness to be applied.

Ap'pli-ca-bly, ad. Fitly; so as to be applied.

Ap'pli-ca-ble-ity, s. Fitness to be applied.

Ap'pli-cate, s. That which is applied; appropriately, an ordinate in conic sections.

Ap'pli-ca-tion, 89: s. The act of applying; solicitation; intense study; great industry.

Ap'pli-ca-tive, (-tiv, 105) a. Relating to application.

Ap'pli-ca-tor-y, 129, 105: a. and s. Including application:—s. That which applies.

APPOGIATURA, āp-pōd'-jī-tūr'-rā, [Ital.] 170:—s. A grace note in music taken out of the time of another note.

To APPOINT=ap-point', 29: v. a. and n. To fix any thing; to settle by compact; to establish by decree; to furnish in all points, to equip:—new. To decree.

Ap-poin'-ter, 36: s. He that fixes.

Ap-poin'-ment, s. Stipulation; decree; direction, order; equipment.

To APPORTION, āp-pōr'-shūn, 130, 89: v. a. To set out in just proportions.

Ap-por'-tion-er, s. One who apportions.

Ap-por'-tion-ment, s. A dividing into portions; particularly rents, costs, &c. in law.

To APOSE, āp-pōz', 137: v. a. To apply to; to put questions to. [Obs.]

Ap-po'-ser, s. An examiner, a questioner. [Law.]

Ap-pov'-itive, (-pōz'-tīv, 105) a. Fit to be applied.

Ap-po'-sute, (-zīt, 105) 81: a. Proper as applied; well adapted.

Ap-po'-site-ly, ad. Properly, fitly, suitably.

Ap-po'-site-ness, s. Fitness, propriety, suitability.

Ap-po'-si-tion, 85, 89, 95: s. The act of adding to; in grammar, the placing of one noun or pronoun by the side of another of the same meaning, and in the same sense.

To APPRAISE, āp-prāiz', 137: v. a. To set a price upon. To Ap-prize' (obs.) means the same.

Ap-prāiz'-er, s. He who sets a price; one skilled in, and sworn to, the duty of appraising.

Ap-prāiz'-ment, s. The act of appraising; valuation.

APPRECIATION, āp-prē-cā''shūn, 89: s. Earnest prayer.

Ap-pre'-ca-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Praying or wishing any good.

To APPRECIATE, āp-prē-shē-ātē, 90: v. a. To estimate justly.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: nūsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision. 165: thūn, 166: thēn, 166.

Ap-pre-ci-a-ble, (-shē-d-bl, 98, 101) a. That may be estimated.
Ap-pre-ci-a-tion, 150, 89: s. Valuation, estimation.
To APPREHEND=āp-prē-hēnd', v. a. To lay hold on; to seize in order for trial or punishment; to conceive by the mind; to think on with fear.
Ap-pre-hen-der, 36: s. One who apprehends.
Ap-pre-hen-si-ble, 105, 101: a. That may be apprehended.
Ap-pre-hen-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Quick to understand; fearful.
Ap-pre-hen-sive-ly, ad. In an apprehensive manner.
Ap-pre-hen-sive-ness, s. The quality of being apprehensive.
Ap-pre-hen-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Seizure; conception; fear.
APPRENTICE, āp-prēn'-tiss, 105: s. One that is bound to serve a man of trade a certain number of years, on condition that the master shall instruct him in his art.
To Appren-tice, v. a. To put out to a master as an apprentice.
Appren-tice-ship s. The state or term of being an apprentice.
Appren-tice-hood, 118: } s. Apprenticeship.
Appren-ti-sage, 99: } [Obs.]
To APPRISE=āp-prīz', v. a. To inform.
To APPROACH=āp-prōach', v. a. and n. To draw near, locally; to draw near, as to time; to come near by natural affinity or resemblance:—new. To draw near.
Ap-proach', 82: s. The act or state of drawing near; access.
Ap-proach'-a-ble, a. Accessible.
Ap-proach'-er, 36: s. He that approaches.
Ap-proach'-ment, s. The act of coming near.
APPROBATION, APPROOF, &c.—See under To APPROVE.
To APPROPINQUATE, āp-prō-ping'-kwāt, 158, 76, 145:—v. a. To draw near to. [Obs.]
To Ap-pro-pin-que', (-pingk) v. a. A ludicrous contraction of the foregoing. [Butler.]
To APPROPRIATE, āp-prō'-prē-āt, v. a. To consign to some use; to take as one's own; to make peculiar. In law, to alienate a benefice.
Ap-pro'-pri-ate, a. Peculiar; fit; adapted to.
Ap-pro'-pri-ate-ly, ad. Fitly; peculiarly.
Ap-pro'-pri-ate-ness, s. Fitness.
Ap-pro'-pri-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Capable of being appropriated.
Ap-pro'-pri-a-tion, 85, 89: s. Application to a particular purpose; the taking or setting apart for one's own use; in law, a severing of a benefice ecclesiastical to the use of some religious house, or dean and chapter, bishoprick, or college.
Ap-pro'-pri-a-tor, 38: s. One possessed of an appropriated benefice.
To APPROVE, āp-prōv', 107: v. a. To like; to express liking; to prove; to make worthy of approbation; in law, to improve.
Ap-pro'-ver, s. He that approves; he that makes trial; in law one who, being indicted, confesses the fact, and accuses his accomplices.
Ap-prove'-ment, s. Approbation, liking.
Ap-pro'-va-ble, 101: a. Meriting approbation.
Ap-pro'-val, 12: s. Approbation.
Ap-pro'-vance, s. Approbation. [Obs.]
Ap-pro'-bas, s. Approbation. [Obs.]
Ap'-PROBATION, 85, 89: s. The act of approving; the liking of any thing; attestation; support.
Ap'-pro-ba-tive, 105: a. Approving.

APPROXIMATE, āp-prōcks'-ē-māt, 154, 105: a. Near to.
To Ap-prox-i-mate, v. a. and n. To bring near.—new. To draw near.
Ap-prox'-i-ma-tive, 85, 105: a. That approaches.
Ap-prox'-i-ma-tion, 89: s. Approach to any thing; in mathematics, continual approach nearer still, and nearer to the quantity sought.
APPULSE=āp-pūlc', 153: s. The act of striking against; in astronomy, the approach of any planet to a conjunction with another body.
Ap-pul'-sive, 105: a. Striking against; driving towards.
Ap-pul'-sion, 90: s. The act of striking against.
APPURTENANT, &c.—See under To APPERTAIN.
APRICITY, ā-prīas'-ē-tēty, s. Sunshine.
APRICOT, ā'-prē-cōt, 105: s. A kind of wall-fruit.
APRIL=ā'-prīl, s. The fourth month of the year.
APRON=ā'-prōn, 18: colloq. ā'-purn, 159: s. A cloth worn before, to keep the other dress clean; a covering worn over the lap in a chaise; the fat skin covering the belly of a goose; a piece of lead covering the touchhole of a great gun.
Ap'-proned, (114) part. a. Wearing an apron.
APROPÓS, āp'-rō-pō, [Fr.] 170: ad. Opportunely.
APSIS=āp'-sis, s. sing. The pl. is } The apsides
APSIDES, āp'-sē-dēz, 105, 101: } are the two points in a planet's orbit, which are at the greatest and the least distance from the sun or the earth. The former is termed aphelion or apogee; the latter, perihelion or perigee.
APT=āpt, a. Having a tendency to; inclined to; ready, quick; qualified for.
Apt'-ness, s. Fitness, suitability; disposition to any thing; quickness of apprehension; tendency.
Apt'-ly, ad. Properly; justly; readily; acutely.
Ap'-ti-tude, s. Fitness, tendency, disposition.
To Ap'-tate, v. a. To make fit. [Obs.]
APTOTE=āp'-tōtē, a. A noun without cases.—See A.
AQUA, ā'-kwā, 76, 145: s. Water. [Lat.]
Ā'-qua-for'-tis, s. Nitric acid.
Ā'-qua-re'-gi-a, s. Nitro-muriatic acid.
Ā'-qua-vi'-tē, (-tē, 103) s. Brandy.
Ā'-qua-ma'-ri'-na, s. The beryl.
Ā'-qua-tin'-ta, s. A species of engraving imitating drawings made with Indian ink or bistre.
Ā'-que-ous, (ā'-kwē-ūs, 120) a. Watery.
Ā'-que-ous-ness, s. The quality of being watery.
Ā'-quose, (ā'-kwōc', 98, 152) a. Watery.
Ā'-quos-i-ty, 92, 105: s. The quality of being watery.
Ā'-qua'-ri-us, s. The water-bearer, a sign of the zodiac.
Ā'-quat'-ic, a. Pertaining or proper to the water.
Ā'-ua-tile, (āck'-wā-tīl, 105) a. That inhabits the water. [Obs.]
Ā'-ue-duct, (-wē-dūct) s. An artificial channel for water.
AQUILA, ack'-wē-lā, 76, 145: s. The eagle, one of the constellations.
Ā'-ui-line, (-wē-līn, 105) a. Hooked, as an eagle's beak.
ARABIC=ā'-d-bīck, 81, 129: a. and s. Arabian:—s. The language of Arabia.
Ā'-a-besque, (-hēsk, 76) a. In the manner of the Arabians; applied to fancy ornaments of foliage, stalks, plants, &c. but always excluding animals.
ARABLE, ār'-d-bl, 129, 101: a. Fit for tillage.
Ā'-a-tor-y, 105: a. That contributes to tillage.
Ā'-ra-tion, 89: s. The act or practice of ploughing

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

Vowels: gātī'-wāy; chāp'mān; pā-pā': lāu; gōōd; j'w. i.e. j'w, 55: a. e. i. &c. mute, 171.

ARACHNOID, ă-răck'-noid, 161, 30: s. One of the tunics of the eye, so called from its resemblance to a cobweb; also, a fine thin transparent membrane, lying between the dura and pia mater.
ă-ră'-NE-ŌŪ, 120: a. Resembling a cobweb.
ă-RAIGN'-EE, (ă-ră-ŋ'-yā, [Fr.] 170) s. A part of a mine in fortification.
ARBALIST=ar'-bă-līst; s. A cross-bow.
Ar'-ba-līst-er, s. A cross-bow-man.
ARBITER, ar'-bē-ter, 33, 105, 36: s. One appointed by contending parties to decide a point in dispute, an arbitrator; one who holds in his will the destiny of another.
Ar'-bi-tress, s. A female arbiter.
Ar'-bit'-ra-ment, s. Will, determination; choice.
Ar'-bit'-re-ment, s. Decision, compromise.
To Ar'-bi-trate, v. a. and n. To decide; to judge of;—æu. To give judgement.
Ar'-bi-tra-tor, s. He that has the power of deciding and determining; in law, an extraordinary judge chosen by the litigants.
Ar'-bi-tra-tris, 154: s. A female arbitrator.
Ar'-bi-tra-tion, 85, 89: s. The determination of a cause by reference to arbitrators.
Ar'-bi-tra-BLE, 98, 101: a. Depending on the will, determinable.
Ar'-bi-trar-y, (ar'-bē-tră-r-ē, 129, 105) a. Appertaining to the will alone; despotic, absolute; voluntary.
ARBOUR, ar'-bur, 33, 120, 40: s. A place covered with branches of trees; a bower.
Ar'-bo-rous, 120: a. Belonging to trees.
Ar'-bo-ris-t, s. A naturalist who particularly studies trees. Ar'-bor-i-cul-ture, art of an arborist.
Ar'-bo-ret, s. A small tree or shrub.
Ar'-bo-rar-y, 129, 105: a. Belonging to a tree.
Ar'-bo-ra-tor, s. A planter or pruner of trees.
Ar'-bo-re-ous, 90, 120: a. Belonging to, or growing on trees.
Ar'-bo-res-cent, 85, 59: a. Growing like a tree.
Ar'-bor-i-cal, (-bōr'-l-cāl) a. Relating to trees.
Ar'-bus-CLE, (ar'-būs-sl, 156, 101) s. A little tree or shrub.
Ar'-BUS-TUM, s. A copse.
Ar'-bus-tive, 105: a. Covered with shrubs.
Ar'-BUTE, s. The strawberry tree.
ARC=ark, s. Any part of a curve line, so called from resembling a bow; a segment of a circle: an arch.
 ☞ See ARCANUM, &c. which has no relationship to this word, under ARK.
Ar'-CADE, s. A long or continued arch.
 ☞ See ARCADIAN, which has no relationship to this word, after the present class.
Ar'-CU-ATE, a. Bent in the form of a bow.
Ar'-cu-a-tion, 89: s. The act of bending; the state of being bent.
Ar'-CU-BA-LIS-TER, s. A cross-bow-man.
ARCH, (artch, 33, 63) s. Part of a circle or ellipse. an arc: a concave or hollow structure supported by its own curve.
 ☞ See ARCH (waggish) and the prefix ARCH- in the adjoining column, and ARCHES COURT, (none of which have any relationship in meaning to this word,) after the classes of words annexed to ARCHAIC.
To Arch, v. a. and n. To cover with an arch; to form with a curve;—æu. To make an arch.
Arch'-wise, (-wīz, 151) ad. In the form of an arch.
ARCH'-ER, s. He who uses a bow.
Arch'-er-ess, 129: s. A female archer.
Arch'-er-y, 105: s. The use of the bow; the skill of an archer; the art of shooting with a bow.

ARCADIAN, ar-că'-dē-ăn, 146: a. Pertaining to Arcadia in Greece; pastoral.
ARCANUM, &c.—See under ARK.
ARCH=artch, 33, 63: a. Waggish, mirthful.
 ☞ See its other senses under ARC, and in the next class Arch'-ness, s. Sly humour, shrewdness.
Arch'-ly, ad. Slyly, jocosely.
ARCH=artch, 33, 63, 161: a. Chief: in this sense it is used as a prefix in many compounded words, of which the following are among the best established:
 ☞ Words in which Arch- is sounded Ark, as Archangel, &c. must be sought in the ensuing class; except Archaic and its relations, which form a third class, following the word Archon.
ARCH-BISHOP, 18: s. A metropolitan bishop who, besides exercising authority in his own diocese, superintends the other bishops, his suffragans.
Arch-bish'-op-ric, s. The state or province of an archbishop.
Arch-dea'-con, (-dē'-kn, 114) s. One that supplies the bishop's place and office.
Arch-dea'-con-ry, s. The office, jurisdiction, or residence of an archdeacon.
Arch-dea'-con-ship, s. The jurisdiction of an archdeacon.
ARCH-DUKE, s. A title given to some sovereign princes.
Arch-du'-cal, a. Belonging to an archduke.
ARCH-BEN'-E-MER, 105: s. A principal enemy.
 ☞ In this manner are compounded many other words, whose meaning will be evident from that of their component parts. And note that, in all new or modern compounds, the initial syllable is pronounced as in these examples.
ARCH-, ark, 161: A prefix which, like the adjective in the last class, signifies chief: or it signifies principal, beginning, and hence ancient, as in the class after the ensuing. Under this mode of pronunciation, it mostly prevails in words whose other component part is Greek; though some of these, as Architrave, have only a remote or an apparent affinity with such as come immediately from Greek.
ARCH-AN'-GEL, (ark-ăn'-gēl, 111) s. One of the highest order of angels.
Arch-an'-gel-ic, (-ăn'-gēl'-ic) a. Belonging to archangels.
AR'-CHE-TYPE, (ar'-kē-tīpe) s. The original from which any copy is made.
Ar'-che-ty'-pal, a. Original.
AR'-CHI-DI-AC'-O-NAL, (ar'-kă-dī-ăk'-ô-nāl) a. Pertaining to an archdeacon.
AR'-CHI-E-PIS'-CO-PAT, a. Belonging to an archbishop.
Ar'-chi-e-pis'-co-pa-cy, s. The state of an archbishop.
AR'-CHI-PRI'-A-GO, s. A chief sea with many islands.
AR'-CHI-RECT, s. A chief or master builder; a builder.
Ar'-chi-tec-ture, 147: s. The art or science of building; the effect of the science.
Ar'-chi-tec-tu-ral, a. Relating to architecture.
Ar'-chi-tec-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Pertaining to the work of architecture.
AR'-CHI-TRAVE, s. The chief beam, being that which lies immediately upon the capital, and is the lowest of the entablature.
AR'-CHON, s. A chief magistrate of ancient Athens.
ARCHAIC, ar-kă'ic, 161: a. Relating to antiquity.
 ☞ Primary, original, is the first,—chief, principal, the secondary meaning of ARCA-.
AR'-CHAI-OI'-O-GY, 100, 187, 85, 105: s. Learning in, or knowledge of, ancient things; a discourse on antiquity.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound

Consonants: mīsh-ŭn, i. e. missis, 165: vīzh-ŭn, i. e. visio, 165: mīn, 166: thēn, 166

The schemes entire, and the principles to which Vowels: gāte'-wā : chiāp'-mān : pā-pā' : lāw

: good: j'w, i. e. four, 55: a, e, i, &c, make .71

Ar^o-ith-met''-i-cal. 92: a. According to arithmetic.
Ar^o-ith-met''-i-cal-ly, ad. In an arithmetical manner.
ARK=arc, 76: s. A small close vessel, chest, or coffer: the repository of the covenant; a close large vessel or ship.
AR-CA-NUM, s. sing. } A thing or things shut up or AR-CA-NAL, s. pl. } kept in secrecy.
ARM=arm, 33: s. sing. } The limbs reaching ARMS, armz, 143: s. pl. } from the hands to the shoulders; the large bough of a tree; an inlet of water from the sea; power, might, as the secular arm; the instruments wielded by the arms for offence and defence; in heraldry, the ensigns armorial of a family; in the last two senses the word occurs only in the plural.
To ARM, v. a. and n. To furnish with means of offence or defence; to provide against; to furnish or fit up;—meu. To take arms.
Ar^o-med, a. Furnished with arms; in heraldry, the beaks, talons, teeth, &c. of birds and beasts are called arms of different colour from the rest; capped with iron Ar^o-let, s. A little arm; a bracelet.
Arm^o-pit, s. The cavity under the shoulder.
AR-MA-DA, s. A naval armament.
AR-MA-DILL^o-i-o, s. A small inoffensive animal of Brazil, so called from being armed with a bony shell.
AR-MA-MENT, s. A force equipped for war.
AR-MA-TURN, 147: s. Armour. [Little used.]
AR-MI-GER, s. One bearing arms; a gentleman.
AR-mig^o-er-ous, (-mīd^o-gēr-ūs) a. Bearing arms.
AR^o-mil-LA^o-TED, a. Wearing bracelets.
Ar^o-mil-lar^o-y, a. Consisting of rings like bracelets.
AR-MIP^o-O-TENT, a. Mighty in war.
Ar-mip^o-o-tence, s. Power in war.
AR-MI-STICK, (-mē-stīk, 105) s. A short truce.
AR-MOUR, (-mur, 120) s. Defensive arms.
Ar^o-mour-bear^o-er, (-bār^o-er, 100, 41) s. He that carries another's armour.
Ar^o-mur-er, 129, 38, 36: s. He that makes, or fits with, armour.
Ar^o-mo-ry, 105: s. The place in which arms are deposited; armour; ensigns armorial.
Ar-mo^o-ri-al, a. Belonging to the warlike ensigns of a family; heraldic.
Ar^o-mo-ris, s. One skilled in heraldry.
AR^o-MY, 105: s. A multitude of armed men under a general; a multitude.
ARMENTAL=ar-mēn^o-tāl, } a. Belonging to ARMENTINE=ar-mēn^o-tīn, } a. A herd or drove of cattle.
Ar^o-men-tose^o, (-tōc, 152) a. Abounding in cattle.
ARMINIAN, ar-mīn^o-yān, 146: a. and s. Pertaining to the doctrines of Arminius, or those especially opposed to Calvinism;—s. A follower of Arminius.
Ar-min^o-ia-nism, (-yā-nīzm, 155) s. The doctrine of Arminius; chiefly remarkable as opposing absolute predestination.
ARMORIC=ar-mōr^o-ic, 129: a. Pertaining to Armorica in France, now called Brittany.
AROMA=ā-rō^o-mā, s. The odorant principle in plants.
To A-ro^o-ma-tize, v. a. To scent with spices; to scent.
Ar^o-o-mat^o-i-za^o-tion, ēs, 89: s. The mingling of aromatic spices with any medicine.
Ar^o-o-mat^o-ic, a. and s. Sweet-scented;—s. That which is sweet-scented.
AROSE, ā-rōz^o.—See To Arise.
AROUND=d-rownd^o, 31: ad. and prep. In a circle; on every side;—prep. About.
To AROUSE, d-rowz^o, 31, 137: v. a. To wake from sleep; to raise up; to excite.
AROW, d-rō^o, 125: ad. In a row.

AROYNT=d-roint^o, 29: interj. Begone; away.
ARPEGGIO, ar-pēd^o-jō, [Ital.] 170: s. The distinct instrumental chords to the voice in singing.
ARQUEBUSE, ar-kē-bōz, [Fr.] 170: s. A gun or carbine of an old fashion.
Ar^o-que-bu-sier^o, (ar^o-kē-boo-zēr^o, [Fr.] 170) s. A soldier armed with an arquebuse.
Ar^o-QUE-BU-SADR^o, s. Originally, the shot of an arquebuse; now, by a strange appropriation, applied to a distilled water used for the cure of bruises or other wounds.
ARRACK=ār^o-rāck, 129: s. A spirit distilled from the juice of the cocoa-tree: or from rice or sugar.
To ARRAIGN, ā-rān^o, 157: v. a. To set a thing in order, or in its place; to set forth and accuse, as in a court of justice.
Ar-raign^o-ment, s. The act of arraigning, a charge.
To ARRANGE, ā-rānġ^o, 111: v. a. To put in the proper order for any purpose.
Ar-range^o-ment, s. Order: the act of putting in order.
Ar-ran^o-g^o-er, 36: s. He who arranges.
ARRANT=ār^o-rānt, 129: a. Notorious, in a bad sense.
Ar^o-rant-ly, ad. Impudently, shamefully.
ARRAS=ār^o-rās, 129: s. Tapestry.
ARRAUGHT, ā-rāwt^o, 123, 162: part. As from to arreath, or seize; a verb out of use.
To ARRAY=ār^o-rāy, 129, 100: v. a. To put in order, to deck; in law, to set a jury in order, or call them man by man.
Ar-ray^o, s. Order, chiefly of war; dress; the setting forth of a jury.
Ar-ray^o-ers, 143: s. pl. Officers whose duty was to see the soldiers properly appointed in their armour.
ARREAR=ār^o-rēr^o, 103: s. That which remains unpaid; the rear. It is very commonly used in the plural.
Ar-rear^o-age, 99: s. Arrears; any sum remaining after payment of a part.
AR-RERE^o, (ār^o-rēr^o, [Fr.] 170) s. The last body of an army.
To ARRECT=ār^o-rēct^o, v. n. To raise or lift up. [Little used.]
Ar-rect^o, a. Erected, upright. [Obs.]
ARRENTATION, ā-rēn^o-tā^o-shūn, 89: s. Licence to enclose forest land on payment of a yearly rent.
ARREPTITIOUS, ā-rēp^o-tīsh^o-ūs, 90: a. Snatched away, crept in privacy.
To ARREST=ār^o-rēst^o, v. a. To seize under a legal process; to seize, stay, or obstruct generally.
Ar-rest^o, 82: s. A stop or stay; legal apprehension.
To AR-RET^o, v. a. To assign, to allot, to summon. [Obs.]
Ar-ret^o, s. That which is assigned; a decree.
To ARRIDE=ār^o-ride^o, v. a. To laugh at, to please well. [Obs.]
Ar-ris^o-ion, (-rīzh^o-ūn, 147) s. A smiling upon.
To ARRIVE=ār^o-rive^o, v. n. To come to any place to reach any point; to gain any thing; to happen.
Ar-riv^o-val, s. The reaching of any place or point.
Ar-riv^o-vance, s. Company coming. [Obs.]
To ARRODE=ār^o-rōde^o, v. a. To gnaw or nibble.
Ar-ro-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. A gnawing.
To ARROGATE=ār^o-rō-gāt^o, v. a. To claim proudly or vainly; to assume.
Ar^o-ro-ga^o-tion, ēs, 89: s. A claiming with pride and injustice.
Ar^o-ro-ga^o-tive, 105: a. Claiming in an unjust manner.
AR^o-RO-GANT, a. Haughty, proud.
Ar^o-ro-gant-ly, ad. In an arrogant manner.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Ar'-ro-gance, } s. Assumption of too much im-Ar'-ro-gan-cy, } portance; haughty self-sufficiency;
 insolence of bearing.

ARRONDISSEMENT, ār-rōang'-dēct-mōng',
 [Fr.; 170: s. A circuit; a district or territory in France for the exercise of a particular jurisdiction.

ARROW, ār-rō, 129, 125: s. The pointed weapon which is shot from a bow.

Ar'-row-y, 104: a. Consisting of or like arrows.

Ar'-row-head, (-hēd, 120) s. The head of an arrow; a water plant so named from its resemblance to an arrowhead.

Ar'-row-root, s. The starch of an Indian plant.

ARSENAL=ar'-sē-nal, s. A magazine of military stores.

ARSENIC=ar'-sē-nīc, s. A mineral substance, which is a violent corrosive poison. White arsenic is that commonly seen, which is not the pure metal, but the oxide of arsenic.

Ar-sen'-ic, 88: } a. Containing arsenic.
Ar-sen'-i-cal, 105: } Arsenic acid differs from Ar-sē-ni-ous, 95, 120: } arsenious by its greater proportion of oxygen.

To Ar-sen'-i-cate, v. a. To combine with arsenic.

Ar-sē-ni-ate, 95, 105: s. A name for salts formed by the combination of arsenic acid with different bases.

Ar'-se-nite, s. A name for salts formed by arsenious acid with different bases.

ARSON=ar'-sōn', 18, 114: s. The crime of house burning, including that of barns, ricks, &c.

ART, 33: s. The power of doing something not taught by nature; practical skill as opposed to theory; practical skill as directed by theory or science; a trade; artfulness; skill; dexterity; cunning.

Art'-ful, 117: a. Performed with art; cunning.

Art'-ful-ly, ad. Skillfully; cunningly.

Art'-ful-ness, s. Skill; cunning.

Art'-less, a. Unskillful; void of fraud; simple.

Art'-less-ly, ad. In an artless manner; naturally;
 sincerely.

Art'-less-ness, s. Want of art; simplicity.

Ar'-ti-FICE, (-tē'-fiss, 105) s. Trick, fraud; art, trade.

Ar'-ti-fic'-ial, (-fīsh'-yāl, 147) a. Made by art, not natural; fictitious, not genuine; artful, contrived with skill.

Ar'-ti-fic'-ial-ly, ad. By art; with skill; not naturally.

Ar'-ti-fic'-ial-ness, s. Artfulness.

AR-TIF-I-CER, s. A mechanic, or manufacturer; a contriver.

Ar'-ti-SAN, (-zān, 151) s. One skilled in an art; a handicraftsman.

AR-TIST, s. He that exercises any art; he that exercises one of the elegant arts, but particularly that of painting likenesses. Hence, Artist'-ical, a.

ARTERY, ar'-tēr'-ē, 105: s. One of the cylindrical tubes which convey the blood from the heart to all parts of the body.

Ar-tē'-ri-al, 43: a. That relates to, or is contained in, artery.

Ar'-TE-RI-OT'-O-MY, s. The operation of bleeding from the artery.

ARTHRITIC=ar'-thrit'-ic, 88: s. } Relating to ARTHRITICAL, ar'-thrit'-ē-cāl, a. } the joints;
 gouty.

ARTICHOKE, ar'-tē-chōke, 105: s. A plant like a thistle, but with large scaly heads like the cone of the pine-tree.

ARTICLE, ar'-tē-cl, 101: s. Generally, something distinct; appropriately, one of the parts of speech; a single clause of an account; a particular or item; one in a series of things; in the plural, it often means terms, stipulations.

To Ar'-ti-cle, v. n. and a. To stipulate:—act. To draw up, or bind by, articles of agreement.

AR-TIC'-U-LAR, 38: a. Belonging to the joints.

AR-TIC'-U-LATE, a. Distinct; branched into articles; in anatomy, belonging to the joints.

To Ar-tic'-u-late, v. a. and n. To utter words so that the syllables are distinct; to speak; to treat;
 to joint; very rarely it signifies to draw up articles, to make terms:—neu. To speak distinctly.

Ar-tic'-u-lā'-ted, part. a. With distinct utterance of syllables; in anatomy and botany, having joints.

Ar-tic'-u-late-ly, ad. Distinctly; article by article.

Ar-tic'-u-late-ness, s. The quality of being articulate.

Ar-tic'-u-lā'-tion, 85, 89: s. Distinct utterance;
 a consonant, as being the chief means of distinctness;
 in anatomy, the juncture, or joint of bones; in botany,
 the knots in some plants, as in the cane.

ARTIFICIAL, ARTISAN, ARTLESS, &c.—

See under Art.

ARTILLERY, ar-til'-lēr'-ē, 81, 129, 105: s.

Weapons of war: cannon, ordnance; gunnery.

ARUNDELIAN, ār'-ūn-dēle'-yān, 146: a. An epithet applied to the celebrated marbles containing the Parian chronicle. They were procured by an earl of Arundel, and subsequently presented to the university of Oxford.

ARUNDINEOUS ā-rūn'-dē-nā'-sh'ūs, 147:

a. Of, or like reeds.

Ar-un-din'-e-ous, 120: a. Abounding with reeds.

ARUSPEX=ā-rūs'-pēcks, 154: } s. A diviner

ARUSPICE, ā-rūs'-piss, 105: } by the entrails of victims; a soothsayer. The latter is the proper anglicised, though less usual word. The plural number, Aruspices, is the same in both instances.

Ar-us'-pi-cy, 105: s. The act of prognosticating.

AS, āz, 152: conj. and adv. In the same manner, in like manner; in the manner that; that:—adv. Similarly, equally; like to; in respect that; in respect of; for example. It is sometimes, by reason of an ellipsis, equivalent to a relative pronoun; as, He welcomed such as [those that] came.

ASAFETIDA, ās'-sā'-fēt'-ē-dā, 120: s. A fetid gum-resin, brought from the east, much used as an anti-pasmodic.

ASBESTOS, āz-bēs'-tōss, 151: s. An incom-bustible substance, (see A.), which, being manufactured into a cloth, was formerly used to preserve the ashes of the body burned on the funeral pyre. It is a mineral, but, being fibrous, has the appearance of a vegetable.

As-bes'-tine, (-tīn, 105) a. Something incombustible.

ASCARIDES, ās-cār'-ē-dēez, 129, 101: s. pl.
 Little worms in the rectum.

To ASCEND=ās-sēnd', 59: v. n. and a. To rise; to move upwards; to proceed from one degree of good to another:—act. To climb up.

Asc-end'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be ascended.

As-cen'-dant, s. and n. Superiority or commanding influence; the degree of the ecliptic which, rising at a person's nativity, was supposed, by astrologers, to influence his fate: in law, ascendants are the relations gone before and reckoned upwards:—adj. Superior, predominant; above the horizon.

As-cen-den-cy, 105: s. Influence, power.

AS-CEN'-SION, (-shūn, 147) s. The act of ascending, the visible rising of Christ to heaven; the festival in commemoration of which, is called Ascension-day, or Holy Thursday.

As-cen-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Prone to ascend; ascending.

AS-CEN'-t, 82: s. The act of rising; the way in rising; the elevation itself.

To ASCERTAIN=ās-ser-tān', 59, 100: v. a.

To make certain; to establish; to make confident.

As-cer-tain'-a-ble, 101: a. That can be ascertained.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā; lāu; gōōd; j'ōō, i. e. jēu, 55: a. e. &c. music, 171.

As-cer-tain'-er, s. He that ascertains.

As-cer-tain'-ment, s. A settled rule; a standard.

ASCETIC=äs-sët'-ic, 59, 88: a. and s. Exercising mortifications of the flesh:—s. He that retires to a life of seclusion and severity.

As-cet'-i-cism, 158: s. The state of an ascetic.

ASCI, äsh'-yi, 146, 147: s. pl. People who, at twelve at noon, are shadowless. (See A.) This can happen only to the inhabitants of the torrid zone, and to them it happens twice in the year. They are also called Amphiscii, because, when not shadowless, their shadows will, at one time of year, point north at mid-day, at another time, south. The inhabitants of the north temperate zone will always have their shadows north, and those of the south temperate zone always south, at mid-day: and these are called Antiscii. In the frigid zones, during the time the sun is above the horizon, the shadows are directed to every point around the compass; and the inhabitants are accordingly called Periscii. The four words are anglicised by some writers into Asians, Amphiscians, Antiscians, and Periscians.

ASCITES, äs-si'-tez, [Lat.] 170: s. A kind of dropsy. See Asci, &c. in Supp.

As-cit'-ic, 88, } a. Dropical

As-cit'-i-cal, }

ASCITIOUS=äs-së-tish'-üs. 147: a. Adscititious.

ASCLEPIAD, äs-clë'-pë-äd, s. The Choriambic verse in which the first, and other odes of Horace, are written.

To ASCRIBE=äs-crîb', v. a. To attribute to, as a cause; to attribute as a quality.—See Ad.

As-crî'-ba-ble, 101: a. That may be ascribed.

As-crîp'-tion, 89: s. The act of ascribing.

As'-crip-ti'-ious, (-tish'-üs, 120) a. That is ascribed.

ASH=äsh, s. A tree; the wood of the ash.

Ash'-en, a. Made of ash-wood.

ASHAMED, ä-shämd', 114: part. a. Touched with shame.

A-sha'-med-ly, 105: ad. Bashfully.

ASHES, äsh'-ez, 113, 151: s. pl. The remains of any thing burnt; the remains of a body burned on the funeral pyre; and hence, generally, the remains of the dead.

Ash-we'-nes'-day, (-wënz'-däy, 167) s. The first day of Lent, so called from the ancient custom of sprinkling ashes on the head.

Ash'-y, 105: a. Light-grey, like ashes: turned to ashes.

Ash'-y-pale', a. Pale as ashes.

ASHLAR=äsh'-lar, 34: s. Common or freestone as it comes in various length, breadth, and thickness, from the quarry.

Ash'-ler, 36: s. A facing made of squared stones.

Ash'-ler-ing, s. The act of bedding ashlar in mortar.

ASHORE=ä-shör', ad. On shore; stranded.

ASIAN, äsh'-yän, 147: a. Asiatic.

A'-si-at'-ic, (ä'-shë-ät'-ick, 85, 88) a. and s. Pertaining to Asia:—a. A native of Asia.

ASIDE=ä-sid', ad. To one side; away from those present.

ASININE.—See under Ass.

To ASK=äsk, 11: v. a. and n. To petition; to demand; to question; to inquire; to require:—adv. To petition to make inquiry.

As'-ker, s. Petitioner, inquirer:—also, (of different etymology,) a water-pew.

ASKAUNCE, äs-känc', 122: ad. Sideways, obliquely.

As'-kaunt', ad. Sideways, askaunce.

ASKEW, äs-kü', 110: ad. Awry, contemptuously.

ASLAKE=ä-släke', v. a. To slacken. [Obs.]

ASLANT=ä-slänt', 11: ad. Obliquely.

ASLEEP=ä-slëp', a. and ad. Sleeping; dead:—adv. Into sleep.

ASLOPE=ä-slöp', ad. With declivity; obliquely.

ASOMATOUS, ä-sö'-mä-tüs, 120: a. Without a body; incorporeal.—See A.

ASP=äsp, 11, } s. A small poisonous serpent

ASPIC=äs'-pick, } of Egypt and Lybia.

ASPARAGUS=äs-pär'-ä-gus, 129, 167: s. An esculent plant. Asparagus, &c., see Supp.

ASPECT=äs'-pëct, s. Look; countenance; view; position; relation; disposition of a planet to other planets.

☞ Since the middle of the 17th century, the accent of this word has shifted from the last to the first syllable; the common tendency of accent as to nouns.—See 81.

To As-pect', v. a. To behold. [Obs.]

As-pect'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be seen. [Obs.]

As-pec'-tion, 89: s. The act of viewing.

ASPEN=äs'-pën, s. and a. A species of poplar, the leaves of which always tremble; it is sometimes called an Asp:—adj. Belonging to, or made of, the aspen; resembling an aspen.

ASPER=äs'-per, 36: a. Rough, rugged. [Little used.]

To As'-per-ate, (-për-ätë, 129) v. a. To make rough.

As'-per-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. A making rough.

As'-per-ous, 120: a. Rough, uneven

As'-per'-i-ty, 105: s. Unevenness; roughness of sound; roughness of temper; sharpness.

As'-per'-i-ty'-ous, 90, 105, 120: a. An epithet of plants that have rough leaves.

ASPERNATION, äs'-per-nä'-shün, 85, 89: s. Neglect, disregard.

To ASPERSE=äs-peice', 35, 153; v. a. To vilify; to slander; to bespatter with censure or calumny; to sprinkle.

As'-per-ser, s. One who vilifies.

As'-per'-sion, 90: s. A sprinkling; calumny.

ASPHALTOS, äs-fäl'-tös, 18, } 163, 142: s.

ASPHALTUM, äs-fäl'-tüm, } Jews' pitch; a solid, brittle, ponderous substance, of a discutient, emollient, and agglutinant quality. When pure, it burns without leaving any ashes. It is found in a soft or liquid state on the surface of the Dead Sea.

As-phäl'-tic, a. Gummy, bituminous.

ASPHODEL, äs'-fö-dël, 163: s. The day-lily. The ancients planted it near graves to supply the manes of the dead with nourishment.

ASPHURELATES, äs-fü'-rë-lätüs, s. pl. A name given to a series of semi-metallic fossils, because, in their pure state, they are not malleable. (See A.) as, bismuth, antimony, cobalt, zinc, and quicksilver.

ASPHYXY, äs-fick'-sëy, 163, 154: s. A swooning.—See A.

ASPIC.—See Asp. It also means a piece of ordnance.

ASPIRANT.—See in the ensuing class.

To ASPIRATE, äs-pë-räts, 105: v. a. To mingle the breath unvocalized with the vocal elements of speech.

As'-pi-rate, a. and s. Pronounced with an audible breathing:—s. The mark of such breathing.

To A-spire', v. n. Literally, to breathe hard, to pant; to desire with eagerness; to rise; to tower.

As'-pi-rer, s. One that aspires.

As'-pi-rant, s. An aspirer; an ambitious candidate.

As'-pire'-ment, s. The act of aspiring.

As'-pi-ra'-tion, (-pë-rä'-shün, 105, 89) s. A breathing after; an ardent wish; the act of aspiring

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants mîsh-ün, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

the pronunciation of a vowel so that the breath is previously heard unvoiced.

ASPORTATION, ăś-pôre-tăⁿ-shŭn, 130, 85, 89: s. A carrying away; a felonious removal, whether or not from the house or apartment.

ASQUINT, ă-skwin^t, 76, 145: ad. Obliquely; not in the straight line of vision.

ASS=ăś, 11: s. An animal of burden; a stupid fellow.

Ass-head, (-hăd, 120) s. A blockhead.

As-i-nine, (ăś-ăe-nîne,) a. Pertaining to an ass.

As-i-nar-y, 129, 105: a. Asinine.

To ASSAIL=ăś-săil', v. a. To attack in a hostile manner; to fall upon; to attack with argument.

As-sail'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be attacked.

As-sail'-er, s. He that attacks another.

As-sail'-ant, s. and a. He that attacks:—a. Attacking.

As-sail'-ment, s. Attack.

ASSAPANIC=ăś-ăd-pănⁿ-îck, s. The flying squirrel.

ASSART=ăś-sart', s. The offence of grubbing up trees.

ASSASSIN=ăś-săś'-sîn, s. One who kills, or attempts to kill, by secret assault.

To As-sas'-si-nate, 105: v. a. To murder by sudden assault; to waylay.

As-sas'-si-na'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of assassinating.

As-sas'-si-na'-tor, 38: s. A murderer; a way-layer.

As-sas'-si-nous, 120: a. Murderous.

ASSATION, ăś-să-shŭn, s. A roasting.

ASSAULT=ăś-ăult', 25, 123: s. Attack; storm; opposed to sap, or siege; hostile violence; invasion. In law, injury offered to a man's person.

To As-sault', v. a. To attack; to fall upon with violence.

As-sault'-ter, 36: s. He who attacks; he who offers injury.

ASSAY=ăś-săy', s. A trial or attempt at anything; a trial of a metal by the separation of whatever may be mixed with it: in law, the examination of weights and measures by the proper officers.

To As-say', v. a. and n. To make trial of; to ascertain the purity or alloy of metals:—v. a. To endeavour.

As-say'-er, s. One who assays metals.

ASSECTATION, ăś-săc-tăⁿ-shŭn, 89: s. Attendance.

ASSECUATION, ăś-săc-cŭⁿ-shŭn, 89: s. Acquaintance.

ASSEMBLANCE=ăś-săm'-blănce, 12: s. A representation.

To ASSEMBLE, ăś-săm'-bl, 101: v. a. and n. To bring together:—adv. To meet together.

As-sēm'-blage, 99: s. A collection of individuals; the state of being assembled.

As-sēm'-bly, 105: s. A company; an assemblage.

ASSENT=ăś-sănt', s. The act of agreeing to any thing; consent.

To As-sent', v. n. To concede, or agree to.

As-sent'-ter, 36: s. One who assents.

As-sent'-ting-ly, ad. In a manner expressive of assent.

As-sent'-ment, s. Consent.

As'-sen-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. Compliance with opinions out of flattery.

As'-sen-ta'-tor, 85, 38: s. A flatterer.

To ASSERT=ăś-sert', 35: v. a. To maintain; to affirm; to claim.

As-ser'-tue (-tŭv, 105) a. Positive, peremptory.

As-ser'-tue-ly, 105: ad. Affirmatively, positively.

As-ser'-tor, 38: s. Maintainer, vindicator, affirmer.

As-ser-tor-y, 129: a. Asserting, supporting.

As-ser'-tion, 89: s. The act of asserting; position advanced.

To ASSEVER=ăś-serv', v. a. To serve, to help. [Obs.]

To ASSESS=ăś-ăss', 59: v. a. Originally, to sit; hence to determine at a sitting a charge or sum to be paid; and hence, generally, to rate, to fix the proportion which a person has to pay of a particular tax.

As-sessed, (-săst', 114, 143) part. a. Rated or fixed by authority.

As-sess'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be assessed.

As-sess'-ment, s. The act of assessing; the sum levied.

As-ses'-sor, 38: s. One that sits by another as an assistant in council; one appointed to assess property for taxation.

As-ses'-sion, 89: s. A sitting down by a person.

ASSETS=ăś'-săts, s. pl. Goods and chattels sufficient (assez) for the discharge of all legal claims; goods answerable for payment.

To ASSEVER=ăś-săv'-er, 36: } v. a. To affirm

To ASSEVERATE=ăś-săv'-ēr- } with great so-ate, 129: } emnity.

As-săv'-er-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. Solemn affirmation, as upon oath.

ASSIDENT, ăś'-să-dănt, 105: a. That frequently seats itself with, or accompanies: applied to such signs of a disease as usually accompany it, but not always. Assidean, see Supp.

As-sid'-u-ate, a. That seats itself as a constant companion: daily. [Obs.]

As-sid'-u-ous-ly, 120: a. Applying constantly.

As-sid'-u-ous-ly, 105: ad. Diligently, continually.

As-sid'-u-ous-ness, s. Constant or diligent application.

As-si-du'-i-ty, (ăś-să-dŭ'-ă-tăy, 84, 105) s. Diligence.

ASSIENTO, ăś-să-ăn'-tă, s. The name of a convention between the king of Spain and other powers relative to the supply of slaves.

To ASSIGN, ăś-săne', 115, 157: v. a. To mark out; to appropriate; to fix the quantity or value: in law, to make over a right to another; to appoint a deputy.

As-sign', s. The person to whom property, or an interest, is, or may be, assigned; an assignee.

As-sign'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be assigned.

As-sign'-er, 36: s. He that assigns.

As-sign'-ment, s. The appointment of any thing to some end or person: in law, the thing assigned, or the deed which assigns.

As-si-gnee', (ăś'-ăl-nă', 105, 157) s. He to whom any right is assigned, or who is appointed by another to do any act. Assignat, see Supp.

As-si-gnor', 177: s. An assigner.

As'-sig-na'-tion, (ăś'-sig-nă'-shŭn, 89) s. An appointment to meet, used generally, of love appointments; the making over of any thing to another.

To ASSIMILATE, ăś-sim'-ă-lăte, 105: v. n. and a. To grow like:—act. To bring to a likeness.

As-sim'-i-late-ness, s. Likeness. [Little used.]

As-sim'-i-la'-tive, 85, 105: a. Having the power of assimilating.

As-sim'-i-la-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be converted to a similar nature.

ASSIMULATE, ASSIMULATION.—See Si-mulate, &c.

To ASSIST=ăś-sist', v. a. To help.

As-sis'-tant, a. and s. Helping, aiding:—s. One who assists under a principal; a helper.

As-sis'-tance, 12: s. Help, furtherance.

ASSIZE=ăś-săz', s. Literally, a sitting, and of

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: găt'-wăy: chăp'-măn: pđ-pă': lăw: gŭd: j'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, &c. note, 171.

the same origin with Assess, Assident, &c.; appropriately, a court of judicature held twice a year in every county, in which causes are tried by a judge and jury;
the word, in this sense, is generally used in the plural number; as a noun singular, it often means an ordinance or statute determining the weight, or fixing the price of some article of common consumption.

To Assess, v. a. To fix a rate of weight or price.

Assessor, s. An officer acting under an assize of weight or price; in Scotland, a jurymen or member of assize, in which sense the word is often spelled assisor.

To Associate, ās-sō'-shē-āt, 90; v. a. To unite with another; to join in company; to accompany.

Associate, a. and s. Confederate:—s. A confederate, a companion.

Assuative, 105; a. Having the quality of assuaging.

Assuable, 93, 101; a. Capable of being associated; sociable.

Assuative, 85, 89, 150; s. Union; confederacy; partnership; connection; apposition; an assembly of persons.

To Assolve, ās-soil, 29; v. a. To solve; to answer.
[Obs.] Also, (of different etymology,) to soil. [Obs.]

Assonant, ās-sō-nānt, a. Having a resemblance in sound.

Assonance, s. Resemblance of sound without rhyming.

To Assort, ās-sort, 37; v. a. and n. To arrange in classes:—new. To agree or class with.

Assortment, s. The act of classing; a quantity properly selected.

To Assot, ās-sōt, v. a. To infatuate. [Little used.]

To Assuage, ās-swāgē, 145; v. a. and n. To mitigate; to soften; to appease; to ease:—new. To abate or subside.

Assuager, s. One who assuages.

Assuagement, s. That which mitigates; mitigation.

Assuative, (-civ, 105) a. Softening, mitigating.

Assuetude, ās-swē-tūde, 145; s. Custom.

Assuetude, 85, 89; s. The state of being accustomed.

To Assume, ās-sūme, v. a. and n. To take; to take upon one's self; to arrogate; to take for granted without proof; to appropriate:—new. To be arrogant.

Assumptive, 36; s. An arrogant man.

Assumption, 72; part. a. Arrogant, haughty.

Assumptive, (-sūm-tiv, 156, 105) a. That is or may be assumed.

Assumption, 89; s. The act of taking; taking any thing upon one's self; supposition; the minor preposition in a syllogism; the taking into heaven of the Virgin Mary, and the festival of that event in the Greek and Roman churches.

Assumptive, s. Literally, he has taken on himself;
appropriately, the legal term for a voluntary promise by which a man takes on himself to perform for or pay to, another; the action founded on an assumption.

To Assure, d-shōō, 143, 61, 149; v. a. To give confidence by promise; to secure to another; to make confident; to make secure.

Assured, (d-shōōd, 111) part. a. Certain; convinced.

Assuredly, 105; ad. Certainly.

Assuredness, s. Certainty.

Assurer, (d-shōō-ter, 51, 36) s. He that assures.

Assurance, 12; s. Certain expectation; secure confidence; freedom from doubt; firmness; confidence; want of modesty; spirit; intrepidity; testimony of credit; conviction; insurance, or security to pay a sum on a certain event; in theology, security with respect to acceptance with God.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165; vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165; thīn, 166; thēn, 166.

Assurgent, ās-sur-gēnt, a. Rising arcwise.
Asterism, ās'-tē-izm, 158; s. Delicate iron or dilation.

Asteriated, ās-tēr-ē-ā-tēd, 143; a. Radiated, as a star.

Asterisk, 129; s. A little star (*) in printing.

Asterism, 158; s. A constellation.

Asterial, (ā-tē-āz, 101) s. A kind of glittering opal.

Asteroid, s. The common name of the four newly-discovered planets between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter; pl. Asteroids or Asteroids.

See other relations of this class under Astral.

Astern, d-stērn, 35; ad. In the hinder part of the ship; behind the ship.

To Astert, d-stērt, v. a. To startle, to fright.
[Obs.]

Asthenic, ās-thēn-ic, 88; a. Without strength; feeble.—See A-.

Asthenology, s. The doctrine of diseases arising from weakness.

Asthma, āst'-mā, 156; s. A frequent, difficult, and short respiration, with cough and wheezing.

Asthmatic, 85; a. Troubled with an asthma.

Asthmatical, a. Troubled with an asthma.

Astonied, ās-tōn-id, 114; part. a. Astonished [Millon.]

To Astonish, v. a. To amaze, to surprise.

Astonishing, 72; part. a. That astonishes.

Astonishingly, ad. In an astonishing manner.

Astonishment, s. The quality that excites a astonishment.

Astonishment, s. Amazement.

To Astonish, (ās-tōn-id) v. a. To astonish, to strike with fear and wonder.

Astraddle, d-strād-dl, 101; ad. With a leg on each side.

Astragal, ās'-trā-gāl, s. The little ring-like moulding which surrounds the top and bottom of an architectural column.

Astral, ASTRIFEROUS, &c.—See before Astrography.

Astray, d-strāy, ad. Out of the right way.

To Astrict, d-strict, v. a. To bind fast, to astringe.—See Ad-.

Astrict, a. Bound, astricted. [Little used.]

Astrictive, (-tiv, 105) a. Binding, styptic.

Astrictory, 129, 105; a. Astringent.

Astriction, 89; s. A binding, a compression.

To Astringe, 71, 64; v. a. To draw together, to make parts contract.

Astringent, a. Binding, contracting; contrary to laxative.

Astringency, s. The power of binding; the power of giving firmness.

Astride, d-strīde, ad. With legs wide open.

Astral, ās-trāl, a. Starry, relating to the stars.

Astrial, ās-trī-āl, 87, 129, 120; a. Bearing or containing stars.

Astrial, 64; a. Bearing stars.

Astrial, ās-trī-āl, (-tēy, 163, 105) s. The science of describing the stars.

Astrolabe, s. An instrument formerly used to take altitudes: a particular projection of the sphere;
the instrument now called the armillary sphere.

Astrology, 105; s. The pretended science of the influence of the stars on the destinies of men sometimes it means astronomy.

Astrology, 36; s. A professor of astrology.

Astrology, 85, 90; s. One addicted to astrology.

As-tro-log'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to astrology.
 As'-tro-log'-i-cal, }
 As'-tro-log'-i-cal-ly, ad. In an astrological manner.
 To As-trol'-o-gize, v. n. To practise astrology.
 As-TRON'-o-m-y, 87, 105: s. The science of the heavenly bodies, and of the laws by which they are directed.
 As-TRON'-o-mer, 36: s. One skilled in astronomy.
 As'-tro-nom'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to astronomy.
 As'-tro-nom'-i-cal, }
 As'-tro-nom'-i-cal-ly, ad. In an astronomical manner.
 To As-tron'-o-mize, v. n. To practise astronomy.
 [Little used.]
 As'-TRO-SCOPE, s. An instrument for seeing the stars, not singly, but as they form the hemispheres.
 As'-TRO-THE-OI'-o-GR, s. Theology founded on the observation of the heavenly bodies.
 ASTRUT=d-strút', ad. In a strutting manner.
 ASTUTE=d-stúté', a. Cunning; penetrating.
 ASUNDER=d-sün'-der, 36: ad. Apart; not together.
 ASYLUM=d-sí'-lüm, s. A sanctuary, a refuge.
 ASYMMETRY, d-sím'-mè-trèy, s. The want of symmetry or proportion.—See A.
 A-sym'-me-tral, a. Not agreeing.
 As'-ym-met'-ri-cal, 92: a. Disproportionate.
 ASYMPTOTE, äs'-ím-tóté, 156: s. As'-ymp-totes (three syllables in the plural as in the singular) are right lines which continually approach a curve, without ever meeting it. (See A.) In other words, an asymptote is a tangent to the curve at an infinite distance.
 As'-ymp-tot'-i-cal, 84: a. That approaches, but can never meet.
 ASYNDETON=d-sín'-dè-tôn, s. The dispensing with conjunctions in speech; as veni, vidi, vici.—See A.
 AT=ät, prep. Primarily, this word denotes presence, nearness, direction towards; from which original import all its various uses are derived: at sight, at peace, at war, at ease, at play, imply peace, war, &c. being present, or now existing; at arms, signifies furnished with, or present with arms; at hand, within reach of the hand, and therefore near; at my cost is with my cost; the peculiar phrases in which this word occurs, at first, at all, are numerous; in all of them some noun originally used has been dropped: in such phrases as, He runs at him, He points at him, at signifies direction towards; in the phrase, He longs to be at him, the meaning is, present or with him in attack.
 ATABAL=ät'-d-bäl, 142: s. A Moorish tabor.
 ATARAXY, ät'-d-räck-sy, 154, 105: s. Absence of all vexation of mind; stoical tranquillity.—See A.
 ATAXY, ät'-äck-sy, 54, 105: s. Want of order; disturbance.—See A.
 ATE, ät, 119.—See To Eat.
 ATHANASIAN, äth'-än-ävzh'-l-än, 146, 147: s. and s. Pertaining to Athanasius, the putative compiler of a creed adopted by the Roman, Lutheran, and other churches, in which a most explicit avowal is made of the doctrine of the Trinity, as opposed to the Arian doctrine.—s. One who adopts the Athanasian creed; an uncompromising Trinitarian.
 ATHANOR=äth'-d-nor, s. A furnace formerly used by chemists.
 ATHEIST=ä-thé'-íst, s. and a. One that denies the existence of a God:—a. Atheistical.—See A.
 A'-the-is'-tic, 88: } a. Given to atheism; impious.
 A'-the-is'-ti-cal, }
 A'-the-is'-ti-cal-ly, 105: ad. In an atheistical manner.

A'-the-is'-ti-cal-ne-ss. s. The quality of being atheistical.
 A'-THE-ISM, 158: s. The habitual denial of a God.
 A'-the-ous, 120: a. Godless.
 ATHELING, äth'-él-íng, s. A noble youth. [Obs.]
 ATHEROMA=äth'-l-rö'-md, s. A sort of wen.
 Ath'-e-rom'-a-tous, 92, 120: a. Having the nature of an atheroma.
 ATHIRST, d-thérst', 35: a. Thirsty.
 ATHLETE. äth'-lèt', s. A contender for victory of strength; a wrestler.
 Ath'-le'-tæ, (-tèz, [Lat.] 169) s. pl. Athletes: a word often used for the latter, which is the proper English plural.
 ATH-LET-IC, 88: a. Strong of body, robust; vigorous; appetitizing to wrestling.
 ATHWART, d-thwärt', 37, 140: ad. Across; transverse to; through.
 ATILT=d-tílt', ad. With the manner of a tilter or of one that thrusts; in a raised or tilted posture, as a barrel.
 ATIMY, ät'-l-mèy, 105: s. Disgrace.—See A.
 ATLAS=ät'-läs, s. Originally, the mountain, or the fabled god that bears up the world; hence applied to a collection of maps: a large square folio resembling such a collection; the supporters of a building; a kind of silk; a large kind of drawing paper, &c.
 At-lan'-tè-an, 86: a. Strong, gigantic.
 At-lan'-tes, (-tèz, [Lat.] 169) s. pl. Male figures supporting any part of a building.
 At-lan'-tic, a. and s. Pertaining to Atlas; or to Atlantis, an isle mentioned by the ancients as situated west of Gades, now Cadiz; pertaining to the ocean called the Atlantic:—s. The ocean which is between Europe and Asia on the east, and America on the west.
 ATMOMETER=ät-móm'-l-ter, 36: s. An instrument to measure the quantity of exhalation from a humid surface in a given time; an evaporimeter.
 AT'-mos-PHERE, (-fèrè, 163) s. The air that encompasses the earth.—See Air.
 At-mos-pher'-ic, 88, } 129: a. Belonging to the
 At-mos-pher'-i-cal, } atmosphere.
 ATOM=ät'-óm, 18: s. A particle of matter that cannot be divided.—See A.
 A-tom'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to atoms. The ato-
 A-tom'-i-cal, } mical philosophy, which was upheld chiefly by the ancient Epicureans, taught that atoms are endued with gravity and motion, by which all things are formed, without the aid of a supreme intelligent being. The atomic theory, in modern chemistry, is the doctrine of definite proportions, teaching that all chemical combinations take place between the ultimate particles of bodies, and that these unite either atom with atom, or in proportions expressed by some simple multiple of the number of atoms.
 At'-o-mist, s. A follower of the atomical philosophy.
 At'-o-my, s. A minute being; [Shaks.] an abbreviation of anatomy.
 To ATONE=d-tóné', v. n. and a. To agree; [Obs.] to stand as an equivalent for something; to answer for:—act. To reduce to concord; to expiate.
 A-tone'-ment, s. Agreement, concord, expiation.
 A-to'-ner, 36: s. He that reconciles or atones for.
 ATONY, ät'-d-nèy, 105: s. Want of tone or tension; relaxation; debility.—See A.
 A-ton'-ic, 88: a. Wanting tension; relaxed.
 ATOP=d-tóp', ad. On or at the top.
 ATRABILIARIAN, ät'-rd-bè-lärc'-l-än, 92, 105, 90, 41: a. Replete with black bile; melancholy; which disposition the ancients attributed to the bile.
 At'-ra-bi-la'-ri-ous, 120: a. Melancholic.
 AT'-RA-MEN'-TAI, 12: } a. Inky; black as ink.
 AT'-RA-MEN'-TOUS, 120: }

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gät'-wáy: chäp'-mán: pö'-pá: láw: g'öd: i' wö, i. e. ew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

At-t-men-taⁿ-ri-ous, a. Suitable for making ink.
ATROCIOUS, d-trōⁿ-sh'ūs, 147, 120: a. Wicked in a high degree; enormous.
At-trōⁿ-cious-ly, 105: ad. In an atrocious manner.
At-trōⁿ-cious-ness, s. The quality of being enormously wicked.
At-trōcⁿ-i-ty, (d-trōssⁿ-ē-tēy, 92) s. Horrible wickedness.
ATROPHY, ātⁿ-rōⁿ-lēy, 163, 105: s. A wasting away as from want of nourishment.—See A.
To ATTACH=āt-tāchⁿ, 63: v. a. To arrest; to seize in a judicial manner; to lay hold on, as by authority; to gain over, or fix to one's interest.
At-tachⁿ-a-ble, 101: a. That may be legally attached.
At-tachⁿ-ment, s. Adherence; fidelity; union of affection; in law, an apprehension by virtue of a precept, differing from an arrest, inasmuch as it lays hold of the goods as well as of the person.
To ATTACK=āt-tāckⁿ, v. a. To assault; to assail; to impugn.
At-tackⁿ, 82: s. An assault; an onset.
To ATTAIN=āt-tāinⁿ, v. a. and n. To gain; to obtain; to overtake; to come to; to reach.—new. To come to a certain state; to arrive at.
At-tainⁿ-a-ble, 101: a. That may be obtained.
At-tainⁿ-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being attainable.
At-tainⁿ-ment, s. That which is attained; acquisition; the act of attaining.
To ATTAIN=āt-tāinⁿ, 100: v. a. To taint; to corrupt; to disgrace; in law, to find guilty of crime, especially of felony or treason.
At-tainⁿ, 82: s. A taint; any thing injurious, as illness; [Obs.] a writ against a jury for false judgement.
At-tainⁿ-ure, (-tūre, 147) s. A stain; an imputation.
AT-TAINⁿ-DER, s. The act of legally attaining, particularly with respect to treason; conviction of a crime.
To AT-TAMⁿ-i-NATE, v. a. To corrupt. [Not used.]
To ATTEMPER=āt-tēmⁿ-per, 36: v. a. To mingle; to soften; to mix in just proportions; to fit to.
To At-tēmⁿ-per-ate, 129: v. a. To attempt.
To ATTEMPT, āt-tēmⁿ, 156: v. a. To try; to endeavour, to essay; to make experiment; to attack.
At-temptⁿ, 82: s. An essay; an attack.
At-temptⁿ-a-ble, 101: a. That may be attempted.
At-temptⁿ-er, 36: s. He that attempts.
AT-TENⁿ-TATES, s. pl. Proceedings pending suit, and after an inhibition has gone out. [Law.]
To ATTEND=āt-tēndⁿ, v. a. and n. To wait on; to accompany; to be present with in obedience to a summons; to expect; to wait; to regard; to mind.—new. To yield attention; to stay; to wait; to be within reach or call; to remain; to wait, as compelled by authority.
At-tenⁿ-der, 36: s. He that attends.
At-tenⁿ-dant, a. and s. Accompanying, as subordinate:—s. One that attends; one of the train; a suitor or agent; one that is present; in law, one that owes a duty to another; a concomitant or consequent.
At-tenⁿ-dant, s. The act of waiting on; service; the persons waiting; a train; expectation; attention.
AT-TENTⁿ, a. Intent, attentive. [Obs.]
ATTENTATES.—See under Attempt.
At-tenⁿ-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Heedful; regardful.
At-tenⁿ-tive-ly, 105: ad. Heedfully.
At-tenⁿ-tive-ness, s. The quality of being attentive.
At-tenⁿ-tion, 89: s. The act of attending or heeding.
To ATTENUATE=āt-tēnⁿ-ū-āte, v. a. To make thin or slender; to lessen.
At-tenⁿ-u-ate, a. Made thin.
At-tenⁿ-u-ant, a. and s. Making thin:—s. A medicine which thins the humors; a diluent.

At-tenⁿ-u-aⁿ-tion, 85, 89: s. A lessening; the state of being made thin.
ATTER=ātⁿ-tēr, 36: s. Corrupt matter.
ATTERATION, ātⁿ-tēr-āⁿ-shūn, 85, 129, 89: s. A wearing away, as of the land by the encroachment of the sea.
To ATTEST=āt-tēstⁿ, v. a. To bear witness; to call to witness.
At-testⁿ, s. Testimony, attestation. [Little used.]
At-tesⁿ-ter, 36: s. One that attests.
Atⁿ-tes-taⁿ-tion, 85, 89: s. Testimony; the act of attesting or bearing witness to; the signature of the person attesting.
ATTIC=ātⁿ-tick, a. and s. Belonging to Athens; and hence pure, classical, elegant; more particularly applied to an order of small square pillars at the uppermost extremity of a building, as originally used in Athens, and intended to conceal the roof:—s. A native of Attica; the garret, or uppermost room in a house.
To Atⁿ-ti-cise, (cize, 137) v. n. To make use of atticisms.
Atⁿ-ti-cism, 158: s. An Attic idiom; an elegant expression.
ATTIGUOUS, āt-tīgⁿ-ū-ūs, 120: a. Hard by.
To ATTINGE=āt-tingⁿ, 64: v. a. To touch slightly.
To ATTIRE=āt-tīreⁿ, 45: v. a. To dress, to array. In heraldry, attired is used in speaking of the horns of a buck or stag.
At-tireⁿ, s. Clothes; the head dress; the horns of a buck or stag; in the obsolete language of botany, one of the three parts in the flower of a plant, the others being the empalement and the foliation.
At-tiⁿ-r-r, 36: s. A dresser.
At-tiⁿ-r-rings, 72, 143: s. pl. Dress for the head.
ATTITUDE, ātⁿ-tē-tūdē, 105: s. The posture in which a person, statue, or painted figure is placed.
Atⁿ-ti-tūⁿ-dē-nal, a. Pertaining to attitude.
ATTOLENT=āt-tōlⁿ-lēnt, a. That raises or lifts up.
To ATTORN, āt-tūrnⁿ, 130: v. a. and n. To turn or transfer the homage or service of a vassal or tenant:—new. To accept tenancy under a new possessor.
At-tornⁿ-ment, s. The act of a feudatory, vassal or tenant, by which he transfers his service to a new lord.
AT-TORⁿ-NEY, (āt-tūrⁿ-nēy, 130) s. He who by consent, commandment, or request, takes upon him the charge of other men's business; a proxy; a person licensed and sworn by direction of some court of law to act as a substitute for any party concerned in prosecuting and defending actions at law, or other business in which legal rights are involved. Solicitors, or those employed to follow and take care of suits depending in courts of equity, may be, and generally are, sworn and admitted by the judges in order to practise in the common law courts; and attorneys may be admitted solicitors in the courts of equity. Attorney general, is an officer appointed to manage business for the king, and hence is the public prosecutor; the Solicitor general, also the king's officer, and especially the queen's counsel, ranks next to the Attorney-general as a public functionary.
To At-torⁿ-ney, v. a. To perform by proxy; to employ as a proxy. [Out of use.]
At-torⁿ-ney-ship, s. The state or act of being an attorney.
To ATTRACT=āt-trāctⁿ, v. a. To draw to; to allure.
At-tracⁿ-ting, 72: part. a. Engaging, alluring.
At-tracⁿ-ting-ly, ad. In an attracting manner.
At-tracⁿ-tive, 105: a. That draws; inviting.
At-tracⁿ-tive-ly, ad. In an attractive manner.
At-tracⁿ-tive-ness, s. The quality of being attractive.
At-tracⁿ-tion, 89: s. The power of drawing or alluring; the power, principle, or tendency in bodies to

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants • mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

unite, distinguished into the attraction of gravity or gravitation, and the attraction of cohesion.

At-trac-ta-bil'-i-ty, 81, 85, 105: s. The capability of being attracted.

At-trac-ti-cal, a. Having power to attract.

At-trac-tor, 38: s. The person or thing that attracts.

At'-trac-tion, 98: s. That which attracts.

ATTRIBUTION, ât-trêck-tâ'-shûn, 85, 89: s. A frequent handling.

To ATTRIBUTE, ât-trîb'-ûte, 81: v. a. To ascribe, to impute.

At-trîb-u-tive, 105: a. Having the quality of attributing.

At'-rib-ute, 81, 105: s. The thing attributed to another; quality; in theology, one of the properties or excellencies attributed to the Divine being, as self-existence, eternity, &c.

At'-tri-bu'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of attributing; the quality ascribed; commendation.

ATTRITE=ât-trîte', a. Ground or worn by rubbing.

At-trite'-ness, s. The being much worn.

At-tri-tion, (ât-trîsh'-ûn, 89, 95) s. The act of wearing, or the state of being worn by rubbing; such grief for sin as arises only from fear, and so distinguished from contrition.

To ATTUNE=ât-tûn', v. a. To make musical; to adjust to another sound; to tune.

ATWEEN, ATWIXT.—See Between, Betwixt.

AUBAINE, ô-bân', [Fr.] 170: s. In French law, an e-cheat to the king of the goods of an alien dying in his dominions.

AUBURN=âw'-burn, 123: a. Brown, of a tan colour.

AUCTION, âwk'-shûn, 123, 89: s. A public sale of property to the highest bidder, and, regularly, by a person licensed: the things sold at an auction.

Auc-tion-ar-y, 129, 105: a. Belonging to an auction.

Auc-tion-eer', 133: s. The agent that sells at an auction.

AUCTIVE, âwk'-tîv, 105: a. That increases. [Obs.]

AUCUPATION, âw'-ch-pâ'-shûn, 85, 89: s. The art or practice of bird catching.

AUDACIOUS, âw-dâ'-sh'ûs, 147: a. Bold, impudent.

Au-da'-cious-ly, ad. Boldly, impudently.

Au-da'-cious-ness, s. Boldness, impudence.

AU-DAC'-I-ty, (-dâss'-ê-têy, 92, 105) s. Spirit, boldness.

AUDIBLE, âw'-dê-bl, 123, 105, 101: a. Capable of being heard.

Au-di-ble-ness, s. Capableness of being heard.

Au-di-bly, 105: ad. So as to be heard.

AU-DI-ENCE, (âw'-dê-ênce, 146, 147) s. The act of hearing; a hearing; an auditory; the ceremonial hearing of ambassadors or ministers by a sovereign.

Au-di'-tion, (-dish'-ûn, 89) s. A hearing. [Obs.]

AU-DIT, s. The settling of accounts by examining documents, and hearing parties concerned.

To Au-dit, v. a. To settle by an audit.

Au-di-tor, 105, 38: s. A hearer generally; particularly a person appointed to audit accounts.

Au-di-tor-ship, s. The office of an auditor.

Au-di-tress, s. A female auditor.

Au-di-tor-y, (âw'-dê-tôr-êy, 129, 105) a. and s. That has the power of hearing:—s. An audience; the place in which auditors are used to assemble.

AUGEAN=âw-jê'-ân, 90: a. Filthy or thick as the dirt in the stable of Augeas, which had not been cleaned for thirty years; toilsome or effective as the labour of Hercules, who cleaned the stable.

AUGER, âw'-guer, 123, 77, 36: s. A tool to bore holes with.

AUGHT, âwt, 123, 162: s. Any thing.

To AUGMENT=âwg-mênt', 123, 81: v. a. and n. To increase:—acc. To grow bigger.

Aug-men'-ter, 36: s. He that augments.

Aug-men'-to-tive, (-tê-tiv, 105) a. Having the quality of augmenting.

AUG-MENT, 81: s. Increase; state of increase.

Aug-men-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of increasing; the state of being made bigger; the thing added; in heraldry, an especial mark of honour, borne either as an escutcheon or a canton. Augmentation-court, was a court erected by Henry the Eighth for augmenting his revenues by the suppression of monasteries.

AUGUR=âw'-gur, 123: s. One who pretends to predict by omens, especially those drawn from birds.

To Au'-gur, v. n. To predict by signs; to conjecture.

Au'-gur-er, 36: s. An augur. [Shaks. obs.]

Au'-gu-ry, (-gû-êy, 105) s. A prognosticating a prediction; an omen.

To Au'-gu-rate, v. n. To judge by augury.

To Au'-gu-rize, v. n. To practise augury.

Au'-gu-rous, 140: a. Predicting.

Au'-gu-ri-al, 90, 105: a. Relating to augury.

AUGUST=âw-gûst, 123: s. The eighth month of the modern year, so named in honour of Augustus Cæsar.

AUGUSTAN=âw-gûs'-tân, a. Pertaining to Augustus; literary, or pure as to literary taste, like the Augustan age at Rome; the word is also applied to a confession of Protestant principles drawn up at Augusta, or Augsburg, by Luther and Melancthon.

AUGUST=âw-gûst, a. Grand; awful; majestic.

Au-gust'-ness, s. Elevation of look; dignity; majesty.

AUGUSTINES, âw-gûs'-tînz, 143: s. pl. An order of monks so named from St. Augustine. The word was apt to be cont acted, and the monks called Austin friars.

AULARIAN, âw-lâr'-l-ân, 90, 41: a. and s. Appertaining to a hall:—s. A member of a hall as distinguished from a member of a college.

Au'-lic, a. Appertaining to a hall or palace: a term distinctively applied to a council of the German empire, of power to decide without app all causes brought into the emperor's court.

AULD, âuld, 123: a. Old. [Scotch.]

AULETIC=âw-lê't-ick, 88: a. Belonging to pipes.

AULN, âwn, 139: s. A varying French ell measure.

Au'n'-age, 99: s. Measurement by the ell.

To AUMAIL=âw-mau', v. a. To variegate. [Obs.]

AUNT, ânt, 122: s. A father's or mother's sister.

AURA=âw-râw, [Lat.] 2, 169: s. A word employed in English to signify the exhalation of fine particles from a body, constituting effluvia, aroma, &c.

AURATE, âw-râte, s. A combination of the oxide of gold with a base.

AU-RATE, s. A kind of pear, so called, allusively to gold.

Au'-ra-ted, 2: a. Resembling gold.

Au'-re-ate, a. Golden; excellent. [Obs.]

Au'-ric, a. Compounded with gold, as auric acid.

AU-RE-I-J-A, 90: s. The nymph or chrysalis of an insect, from which it changes to a winged state, so called from the colour.

AU-RE-O-LA, s. A circle of rays called a glory.

AU-RIF-ER-ous, 87, 120: a. Bearing or containing gold.

AURICLE, âw-rê-cl, 123, 105, 101: s. The external ear; also two appendages to the heart which cover the ventricles, and resemble ears.

The schemes, entries, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Notes: gûte'-wây: cháp'-mân: pû-pâ': lâ: good: j'oo, i.e. j'oo, 55: &c. mûts, 171.

Au-ric'-u-lar, 38: a. Within the sense of hearing: secret, as conveyed only to the ear; traditional.
Au-ric'-u-lar-ly, 105: ad. In a secret manner.
Au-ric'-u-late, a. Shaped like the ear.
Au-ric'-u-lated, a. Having large or long ears.
Au-ric'-u-la, s. A species of primrose called, from the shape of its leaves, Bear's ear.
Au'-ri-scalp, (-rē-skalp.) s. An instrument used in cleaning, or operating upon, the ears.
Au'-rist, s. A surgeon for disorders of the ear.
Au'-cul-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act or practice of listening to; in medicine, a method of distinguishing some diseases by listening to sounds through a tube applied to the part.
AURIGATION, āw-rē-gā'-shūn, 123, 89: s. The act or practice of driving horses harnessed to carriages.
AURORA=āw-rōrē'-d, 47: s. The goddess that opens the gates of day; the morning: a meteor seen in the north, and hence called Aurora Borealis; a species of crowfoot.
Au-ro'-ral, a. Belonging to the morning, or northern lights.
AUSPICE, āw'-spīas, 123, 105: s. sing. } The AUSPICES, āw'-spīss-ēz, 14, 151: s. pl. } omen or omens of an undertaking, such as used to be drawn from birds: (see Augur, &c.) favourable appearances; protection; influence.
To Au'-spice, 105: v. a. To give a favourable turn to; to foreshow; to begin.
Au-spice'-ial, (āw-spīsh'-āl, 95, 147) a. Relating to prognostics.
Au-spice'-ious, (-spīsh'-ūs, 120) a. Having omens of success; prosperous; favourable; propitious; lucky; happy.
Au-spice'-ious-ly, 105: ad. Prosperously.
Au-spice'-ious-ness, s. Appearance; promising success.
AUSTERE=āw-stērē', 123, 43: a. Severe; harsh; rigid.
Au-sterē'-ly, 105: ad. Severely; rigidly.
Au-sterē'-ness, s. Severity; rigour.
AU-STER'-i-ty (āw-stērē'-ē-tē, 92, 129, 105) s. Severity; mortified life; harsh discipline.
AUSTER=āw-strē', 36: s. The south wind.
Au'-stral, 12: a. Southern.
Au'-strine, (-strīn, 105) a. Southern.
Au'-stral-a'-sian, (-āsh'-yān, 147) a. Belonging to the countries south of Asia, which take the general name Australasia. These words are now commonly contracted into Australia and Australian.
AUTHENTIC=āw-thēn'-tic, 83: } a. Having AUTHENTICAL=āw-thēn'-tē-cāl, } a genuine origin or authority; genuine.
Au-then'-ti-cal-ly, ad. After an authentic manner.
Au-then'-ti-cal-ness, s. The quality of being authentic.
To Au-then'-ti-cate, v. a. To render authentic; to entitle to credit.
Au-then'-ti-ca'-tion, s. The establishing by proof.
Au'-then-tic'-i-ty, (āw-thēn'-tiss'-ē-tē, 95) s. Genuine-ness.
AU'-THOR, (āw'-thor, 123, 38) s. The first beginner or mover; the efficient; he that effects or produces any thing; the first writer of any thing; a writer in general.
Au'-thor-eas, s. A female author. Yet author may be used.
Au'-thor-less, a. Without an author.
Au'-thor-ship, s. The quality of being an author.
Au-tho'-ri-al, 90: a. Pertaining to authorship.

AU'-THOR'-i-ty, (āw'-thōr'-ē-tē, 123, 129, 105) s. Legal or genuine power; influence; rule; support; testimony; credibility.
Au'-thor'-i-ta'-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Having authority; having an air of authority.
Au'-thor'-i-ta'-tive-ly, ad. In an authoritative manner.
Au'-thor'-i-ta'-tive-ness, s. The quality of being authoritative.
To Au'-thor-ize, (-thō-rīzē, 92) v. a. To give authority; to make legal; to establish by authority; to justify; to give credit.
Au'-tho-ri-za'-tion, 85, 89: s. Establishment by authority.
AUTO-DA-FE', āw'-tō-dd-fēy', [Sp.] 170: s. Act of faith, a term appropriated to the burning of heretics by the Inquisition.
AUTOBIOGRAPHY, āw'-tō-bī-ōg'-rā-fī-y, 123, 87, 163: s. A man's life narrated by himself; the practice of writing one's own history.
AU-TOCH'-THON, (āw-tōck'-thōn, 161) s. He who is supposed to have sprung from the soil itself on which he lives. Hence, Au'-toch-thon'-ic, (88) a.
Au-toc'-ra-cr, 92, 98, 101: s. Government residing in, and exercised by, a single person.
Au'-to-crat, } s. An absolute prince or ruler.
Au-toc'-ra-tor, }
Au-toc'-ra-tris, (-tricks, 154) } s. A female ab-
Au-toc'-ra-trice, (-triss, 105) } solute ruler.
Au'-to-crat'-ic, 98: } a. Pertaining to autocracy.
Au'-to-crat'-i-cal, }
AT-TOGRAPH, (-grāf, 163) s. A person's own hand writing.
Au'-to-graph'-ic, 83: } a. Pertaining to an auto-
Au'-to-graph'-i-cal, } graph.
AU-TOM'-A-TON, s. A machine having self-motion by internal machinery.
⚠ The classical plural is au-tom'-a-ta, but the English plural, automatons, may be safely used.
Au-to-mat'-ic, 88: } a. Belonging to an automaton;
Au-to-mat'-i-cal, } also, involuntary, as are certain muscular actions.
Au-tom'-a-tous, 120: a. Automatic.
Au'-ro-MATH, s. A self-taught person.
AU-TON'-O-MY, 105: s. The living according to one's own law.
AU'-TOP-SY, 105: s. The seeing with one's own eyes.
Au-top'-ti-cal, a. Seen with one's own eyes.
Au-top'-ti-cal-ly, ad. By the evidence of one's eyes.
AUTUMN, āw-tūm, 123, 156: s. The third season of the year, astronomically beginning on the 23d Sept., but popularly comprising August, September, and October.
Au-tum'-nal, 12: a. and s. Belonging to autumn: — s. A plant that flowers in autumn.
AUXESIS, āwg-zē'-cis, 154: s. Amplification.
AUXILIAR, āwg-zīl'-yar, 123, 154, 95, 146: }
AUXILIARY, āwg-zīl'-yār-ēy, 129, 105: } a. and s. Assisting; in grammar, assisting to conjugate other verbs: — s. Helper; confederate; the plural, Auxiliaries, often means foreign troops employed in war.
Aux-il'-ia-tor-y, (āwg-zīl'-yā-tōr-ēy, 95) a. Assisting.
To AVAIL=d-vāil', v. a. and n. To profit; to promote: — ncu. To be of use.
A-vail', s. Profit, advantage.
A-vail'-a-ble, 101: a. Profitable, powerful, useful.
A-vail'-a-ble-ness, s. Power to promote the end sought; legal force.
A-vail'-a-bly, 105: ad. Powerfully, legally, validly.
A-vail'-ment, s. Usefulness.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165; thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To AVALE=ā-vā'l, v. a. To let fall, to depress. [Obs.]
AVAN-*AN*CHÉ, (ā-v'ā-d-lōngsh', [Fr.] 170) s. A vast body of snow sliding down a mountain.
AVANT-COURIER, ā-v'ōng-cōōr'ā-er, [Fr.] 170: s. A messenger dispatched before to notify the approach of others.
AVANT-GARD, (d-vōng'-gard, [Fr.] 170) s. The van; the first body of an army.
AVARICE, ā-v'ā-riss, 105: s. Covetousness.
Av'-a-ric'-ious, (rish'-ūs, 95, 147) a. Covetous.
Av'-a-ric'-ious-ly, 105: ad. Covetously.
Av'-a-ric'-ious-ness, s. The quality of being covetous.
AVAST=ā-vāst', interj. Hold! stop! stay! [A sea-term.]
AVATAR=ā-v'ā-tar', s. The incarnation of Hindoo mythology.
AVAUNT=d-vāunt', 123, 122: interj. Hence! begone!
To AVEL.—See before Avulsed.
AVE-MARY, ā-v'ēy-mā-rēy, 41, 105: s. An address to the Virgin in catholic devotion.
AVENACEOUS, ā-v'ā-nā'-sh'ūs, 147: a. Belonging to, or partaking of, the nature of oats.
Av'-e-nage, 99: s. A certain quantity of oats paid to a landlord.
Av'-e-nor, s. Anciently, an officer of the royal stables.
To AVENGE=d-vēngv', v. a. To take vengeance for, without malice; to punish.
Av'-en-ger, 36: s. One who avenges.
Av-enge'-ment, s. Vengeance.
Av-ven-geance, s. Vengeance. [Obs.]
ADVENTURE, d-vēn-tūre, (-tūre, 147) s. A mischance, causing a man's death, without felony.
AVENUE=ā-v'ē-nū, 92, 189: s. A way by which a place may be entered: an alley of trees to an entrance.
To AVER=d-ver', 35: v. a. To declare positively.
Av-ver'-ment, s. Declaration: in law, an offer of the defendant to justify an exception; also, the act as well as the offer.
AVERAGE=ā-v'ēr-āge, 92, 129, 99: s. and a. Originally, the duty which the tenant paid the king or other lord by the service of beasts and carriages: in a more modern sense, the contribution that merchants make toward the losses of such as have their goods cast overboard in a tempest; also, a small duty paid to the master of a ship for his care of goods over and above the freight: and hence its general and common import, viz. medium, mean proportion:—adj. Medial; containing a mean proportion.
To Av'-er-age, v. a. and n. To fix the mean of unequal quantities.—new. To form a medial quantity.
AVERPENNY, ā-v'ēr-pēn'-nēy, 85: s. Money paid toward the king's carriages by rent from land, instead of service by the beasts in kind.
To AVERRUNCATE, ā-v'ēr-rūng'-cāt, 158: v. a. To root up.
To AVERT=d-vert', 35: v. a. and n. To turn aside; to cause to dislike; to put away:—new. To turn away.
Av-ver'-ter, s. The person or thing that turns away.
Av-erse', 153: a. Disinclined to; not favourable.
Av-erse'-ly, 105: ad. Unwillingly, backwardly.
Av-erse'-ness, s. Unwillingness, disinclination.
Av'-er-sa'-tion, 85, 89: s. Aversion. [Little used.]
Av-er'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Hatred; dislike; abhorrence; the cause of aversion.
AVIARY, ā-v'ē-ār-ēy, 90, 146, 129: s. A place enclosed to keep birds in.
AVIDITY, d-vid'-ē-tēy, 105: s. Greediness; eagerness.

Av-vid'-ous, 120: a. Greedy, eager.
Av-vid'-i-ous-ly, ad. Greedily, eagerly.
To AVILE=d-vil', v. a. To depreciate. [Obs.]
To AVISE, d-viz', 137: v. n. To consider. [Obs.]
AVITOUS, ā-v'ē-tūs, 120: a. Left by ancestors. [Obs.]
To AVOCATE=ā-v'ō-cāt, 92, 99: v. a. To call off, or away. [Obs.]
To Av-oke', v. a. To advocate. [Obs.]
Av'-o-ca'-tive, 105: a. That calls away, or employs.
Av'-o-ca'-tion, s. The act of calling away; the business that calls away or employs a man. It should be distinguished from evacuation, or a man's ordinary calling, but is commonly confounded with it.
To AVOID=d-void', 29: v. a. and n. To shun: to escape from; to endeavour to shun; to evacuate: to vacate; to annul:—new. To retire; to become void or vacant.
Av-oid'-er, s. He who avoids.
Av-oid'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be avoided.
Av-oid'-ance, s. The act of avoiding: the course by which any thing is carried off; in law, the act of becoming vacant by death, cession, deprivation, &c.; also, the act of annulling.
Av-oid'-less, a. Inevitable.
AVOIRDUPOIS, ā-v'ēr-dū-poiz', [Fr.] 170, 189: s. and a. A weight of which the pound contains sixteen ounces, and bearing to the pound Troy the proportion of 17 to 14.
AVOLATION, ā-v'ō-lā'-tion, 89: s. A flying away.
To AVOUCH=d-vowtch', 31, 63: v. a. To affirm; to maintain; to vindicate.
Av-vouch', s. Declaration, evidence. [Obs.]
Av-vouch'-er, 36: s. He that avouches.
Av-vouch'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be avouched.
Av-vouch'-ment, s. Declaration; the act of avouching.
To AVOW=d-vow', 31: v. a. To declare openly.
Av-vow'-er, 36: s. He that avows or justifies.
Av-vow'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be avowed.
Av-vow'-a-bley, ad. In an avowable manner.
Av-vow'-al, s. Open declaration; justificatory admission.
Av-vow'-ed-ly, 105: ad. In an avowed manner.
Av-vow'-er, s.—See Advowee.
Av-vow'-er, s. In law, is where one, having taken distress for rent, and the other suing forth a replevin, the taker justifies in his own right, and avows the taking.
AVOUTRY.—See Advoutry.
To AVEL=d-vēl', v. a. To pull out, or away. [Obs.]
Av-vul'-er, (-vūlat, 114, 143) part. a. Plucked out.
Av-vul'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. A plucking out or asunder.
To AWAIT=d-wāit', v. a. To expect; to attend; to remain in expectation of.
Aw-wait', s. Ambush. [Obs.]
To AWAKE=d-wāk',
I Awoke=d-wōk',
AWAKED=d-wākt', 114, 143: } v. a. and n. To rouse out of sleep;
Aw-ake', (-vūlat, 114, 143) } to raise from tor-
Aw-ake', new. To break from sleep.
Aw-ake', a. Not asleep; in a state of vigilance.
To Aw-a'-ken, (-kn, 114) v. a. and n. To awake Aw-a'-ken-er, s. The person or thing that awakes.
To AWARD, d-wārd', 140, 37: v. a. and n. To adjudge:—new. To decree.
Aw-ard', s. Judgement, sentence, determination.
Aw-ard'-er, 36: s. One that awards.
AWARE=d-wāre', 41: a. Vigilant, apprized.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Notes: gāk'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': āw: gōōd: j'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, u, &c. mutr., 171.

To A-ware', v. n. To beware. [Not in use.]

AWAY = d-wāy', ad. and interj. In a state of absence from. I cannot away with, I cannot endure:—interj. Begone!

AWE = āw, s. Reverential fear.

↳ The word is much used in composition, as, awe-band, awe-commanding, awe-struck, &c.

Aw'-ful, 117: n. Striking with awe.

Aw'-ful-ly, 105: ad. In an awful manner.

Aw'-ful-ness, s. The quality of being awful, solemnity.

Aw'-less, a. Wanting reverence; wanting power to awe.

To Aw, v. a. To strike with reverence or fear.

To AWHAPE, d-hwāp', 160: v. a. To strike, to confound. [Obs.]

↳ From this verb comes the vulgar word to whip.

AWEATHER, d-wēth'-er, ad. To the wind side of the ship.

AWHILE, d-hwīl', 160: ad. Some time.

AWKWARD, āwk'-word, 140, 38: a. Clumsy; unhandy; inelegant; unpolite; perverse.

Awk'-ward-ly, 105: ad. In an awkward manner.

Awk'-ward-ness, s. Clumsiness. inelegance.

AWL = āwl, s. A pointed instrument to bore holes.

Awl'-wort, 141: s. A plant with awl-shaped leaves.

AWM, āwm, s. A Dutch measure equal to a tierce.

AWN = āwn, s. The beard of corn or grass.

AWN'-less, a. Without awn or beard.

AWN'-y, 105: a. Having awn or beard.

AWNING = āwn'-ing, s. A slight covering for shade.

AWOKE.—See To Awake.

AWRY, d-rī', 157: ad. Not in a straight direction; obliquely; askant; with oblique vision; not equally between two points; not in a right state; perversely.

AXE, āks, 154: s. A sharp instrument for hewing and chopping.

AXILLARY, āks'-il-lā-r-ēy, 154, 105: a. Pertaining to the arm-pit. See also Supp.

AXIOM, āck'-sē-ūm, 154, 146, 147: s. A self-evident truth; more accurately, a required a priori condition or capability of the mind, laid down in the form of a general proposition.

Ax'-i-o-mat'-ic, 88: a. Pertaining to, or having the nature of an axiom.

AXIS, āks'-is, 154: s. The line, real or imaginary, that passes through any thing, and on which it may be supposed to revolve; the root and stem of a plant.

Ax'-i-e, (āck'-sl, 101) s. The pin or axle on which the wheel turns, also called ax'le tree.

AY, ā'-ēy, 5: ad. Yes.

AYE = āy, ad. Always; for ever.

AYRY.—See Airy, or Ærie.

AZIMUTH, āz'-ē-mūth, 92, 105: s. The arch of the horizon intercepted between the meridian of the place and the azimuth or vertical circle passing through the centre of the object. Magnetical azimuth is the arch of the horizon between the sun's azimuth circle and the magnetical meridian; and the azimuth compass is an instrument for finding the magnetic azimuth.

AZOTE = āz'-ōt, s. Mephitic air, or nitrogen, so called as being destructive of life. See A.

Azot'-ic, 89: a. Pertaining to azote. Azotized, see S.

AZURE, ā'-zh'oor, 147: a. Sky blue; in heraldry, blue.

To A'-zure, v. a. To colour blue

A'-zured, (-zh'oord, 114) part. a. Coloured azure.

AZYMOUS, āz'-ē-mūs, 105, 120: a. Unleavened.—See A.

B, the second letter of the alphabet. Its sound is the 75th element of the schemes prefixed. As an abbreviation in writing, it generally stands for baccanturus, or bachelor, as B. A., B. D., B. L.

BAA, bā, 97: s. The cry of a sheep.

To Baa, v. a. To cry like a sheep.

To BABBLE, bāb'-bl, 101: v. n. and a. To prattle like a child; to talk idly; to tell secrets; to talk much.—act. To prate.

Bab'-bler, 36: s. An idle talker, a teller of secrets.

Bab'-ble, s. Idle talk, senseless prattle.

Bab'-ble-ment, s. Senseless prate.

BABE = bāb, s. An infant.

Ba'-ber-y, 129, 105: s. Finery to please an infant

Ba'-bish, a. Childish.

Ba'-by, (bā'-bēy, vulgarly, bāb'-lēy) s. An infant.

Ba'-by-hood, (-hōōd, 118) s. The state of infancy.

Ba'-by-ish, a. Childish.

BABOON = bd-bōōn', s. A monkey of the largest kind.

BABYLONIAN, bāb'-l-īō'-nē-ān, 85, 90: a. Pertaining to Babylon; like the language of Babel; disorderly.

BAC = bāck, s. A tub for cooling wort; a sort of boat.

BACCA = bāc'-cd. s. In botany, a berry.

Bac'-cu-ted, a. Having berries; beset with pearls.

Bac'-cif-er-ous, (-sif'-ēr-ūs) a. Bearing berries.

Bac'-civ'-orous, a. Feeding on berries.

BACCALAUREATE = bāc'-cd-lāw'-rē-āt, 90: s. The degree of bachelor.

BACCHANAL, bāc'-cd-nāl, 161: s. and n.

BACCHANALIAN, bāc'-cd-nā'-lē-ān, 85, 90: a. A devotee to Bacchus, a drunkard; the former word, in the plural, also signifies the feasts of Bacchus, or Bacchanalia, a. Appertaining to drinking and revelry.

Bac'-chant', s. mus. A bacchanal. The idiom is Bac'-chant', s. fem. French: as English words, they have the same pronunciation, bac'-cant'. The plural, bacchantes, is classical, and is pronounced bac-can'-teez.

Bac'-chic, (-kīck) a. Jovial, drunken.

Bac'-chi-us, s. A poetic foot, such as in ā-vā-rī.

BACHELOR = bātl'-ē-lor, 63, 38: s. A man unmarried; a man who takes his first degree at the university; a knight of the lowest order.

Bach'-e-lor-ship, s. The state of being a bachelor.

BACH'-e-lor's-SUT'-rons, 114, 143: s. The herb camleon.

BACK = bāck, s. a. and ad. The hinder part of the body; the outer part of the hand; the rear; the place behind; the part of any thing out of sight; the thick part of any tool, opposed to the edge; the cover of a book:—a. That is behind, or applied behind; that is out of sight; that has been passed by:—ad. To the place from which one came; backward; behind; towards things past; again; in return; again, a second time.

To Back, v. a. and n. To mount on the back of a horse; to place on the back; to maintain; to justify, to second:—adv. To move or go back.

Backed, (bāckt, 114, 143) part. u. Having a back; seconded.

To BACK'-bite, v. a. To censure the absent.

Back'-bi-ter, 36: s. A privy calumniator.

Back'-bi-ting, 72: s. Secret detraction.

BACK'-BONE, s. The bone of the back.

The sign n is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

BACK'-DOOR, (-dōr, 108) s. The door behind the house.

BACK'-GROUND, s. Ground behind; obscurity.

BACK'-PIECE, (-pēce, 103) s. Armour at the back.

BACK'-SIDE, s. The hind part; the posteriors.

76 BACK-SLIDE, 81: v. n. To fall off; to apostatize.

Back-sli'-der, 36: s. An apostate.

Back-sli'-ding, 72: s. Transgression, apostasy.

BACK'-STAFF, s. A kind of quadrant.

BACK'-STAIRS, 143: s. The private stairs.

BACK'-STAYS, 151: s. Ropes that strengthen the masts.

BACK'-SWORD, (-sōrd, 130, 145) s. A sword with one sharp edge; and a stick with a basket-handle.

BACK'-WARD, (-wōrd, 140, 38) ad. v. and s.

With the back forward; toward the back; in a back direction; toward something past; from a better to a worse state; in time past;—a. Behind in progress; unwilling; hesitating; sluggish; dull;—s. The state behind or past.

Back'-wards, 143: ad. Backward.

Back'-ward-ly, 103: ad. Unwillingly, perversely.

Back'-ward-ness, s. Tardiness; dullness.

BACKGAMMON=bäck-gām'-mōn, 18: s. A Welsh word, signifying a little battle; a game with box and dice.

BACON, hä'-kn, 114, 116: s. The flesh of a hog salted and dried.

BACULOMETRY, häc'-h-lōm'-ē-trēy, 87: s. The practice of measuring by baculi or staves.

BAD=bäd, a. Ill: not good; vicious; hurtful.

Bad'-ly, ad. In an ill manner; not well.

Bad'-ness, s. Want of good qualities.

BADE.—See To Bid.

BADGE=hädgē, s. A mark or cognizance worn; a token by which one is known.

To Badge, v. a. To mark; to distinguish by a badge.

BADGER=bäd'-jer, 64: s. An animal so named.

To Bad'-ger, v. a. To worry as in a badger hunt.

BADGER=bäd'-jer, 64, 36: s. One licensed to buy victuals in one place for sale in another.

BADINAGE, bäd'-ē-nāzh', [Fr.] 170: s. Light, playful discourse.

To BAFFLE, häf'-fl, 101: v. a. and n. To elude, to confound;—adv. To practise deceit.

Baf'-ler, 36: s. One that baffles.

BAG=häg, s. A sack or pouch; that part of animals in which some particular juices are contained; an ornamental purse attached to the hair in a man's full dress; in commerce, a determinate quantity of goods.

To Bag, v. a. and n. To put into a bag;—adv. To swell like a full bag.

BAGGAGE, 99: s. The furniture of an army; a woman that follows an army; jocosely, a pert forward woman.

BAGATELLE, bäg'-d-tēl', [Fr.] 170: s. A trifle; a game resembling billiards.

BAGNIO, bän'-yō, 157, 146: s. A bathing house; a brothel.

BAGPIPE=bäg' pīp, s. A musical instrument consisting of a bag and pipes.

Bag'-pi-per, 36: s. A player on the bagpipe.

BAGUETTE, bā-guēt', [Fr.] s. A little round moulding.

To BAIL=häle, 100: v. a. Originally, to deliver to another; appropriately, a law term, signifying to liberate by giving a prisoner to his friends, who are security that he shall appear and answer in court; in strictness, the magistrate bails the prisoner; but the sureties are also said to bail him by procuring his release: the word is also applied to the delivery of goods in trust.

Bail'-er-ble, 101: a. Capable of being bailed

Bail'-or, 177: s. One who delivers goods in trust.

Bail'-ee, s. One who receives in trust.

BAIL, s. The release of a prisoner on security taken for his appearance in court; the larger term is main-prise; it also means the person or persons who give security; and sometimes the sum of money in which they are bound; also a certain limit within a forest.

Bail'-bond, s. The bond given for appearance in court.

Bail'-piece, (-pēce, 103) s. A slip of parchment or paper, containing a recognizance of bail above, or to the action.

Bail'-ment, s. Delivery of goods in trust.

Bail'-iff, s. Formerly, the officer of a hundred, who administered justice to the people; but the hundred courts, except certain franchises, are swallowed in the county courts, and bailiffs, as to their name and office, are grown into contempt, their office being to arrest persons, to collect fines, to summon juries, attend assizes, and execute writs and process, as officers of the sheriff; also, the under-steward of a manor.

Bail'-i-wick, s. The space within which a bailiff had jurisdiction.

Bail'-y, 105: s. A contraction for bailiff, or for bailiwick. Bailie in Scot. is an alderman.

BAIRN=bäirn, } s. That which was born: a BARN=harn, 33: } child. [Provin.]

BAIT=bäte, s. Any substance for food; hence such substance or its appearance exhibited as a lure: a temptation generally; food taken by men or beasts for refreshment on a journey; white bait is a small fish of the Thames.

To Bait, v. a. and n. To put food as a lure; to give food for refreshment on a journey;—adv. To stop and refresh by food.

To BAIT=bäte, v. a. and n. To attack; to harass with the help of others;—adv. To flutter, hover, or show other symptoms of attacking, as a hawk about to seize its prey; more properly to bate, which see in Supp.

BAIZE=bäze, 189: s. A kind of coarse cloth.

To BAKE=bäke, v. a. and n. To heat in a close place; to cook in an oven; to harden with heat;—adv. To do the work of baking; to be heated or baked.

Ba'-ker, 36: s. One whose business is to bake.

Bake'-house, s. The work place adjoining an oven.

Ba'-ker-y, s. A baker's work-places and oven.

Ba'-king, s. That which is baked, or to be baked.

BALANCE=bäl'-ānce, s. One of the powers in mechanics; a pair of scales; the act of comparing two things; the overplus of weight; that which is wanting to make two parts (of an account even; equipoise; the beating part of a watch; the sign libra.)

To Bal'-ance, 82: v. a. and n. To weigh in scales; to regulate the weight; to counterpoise; to regulate an account; to pay what will make an account even;—adv. To hesitate, to fluctuate.

Bal'-an-cer, 36: s. One that balances.

BALASS=bäl'-āss, s. A variety of spinel ruby.

BALCONY, bäl'-cō-nēy, 81, 105: s. A frame or gallery before the window of a house.

☞ The accent has shifted from the second to the first syllable within these twenty years.

BALD, bälwd, 112: a. Wanting hair; without the usual covering; unadorned; inelegant; mean; naked.

Bald'-ly, 105: ad. Nakedly, meanly, inelegantly.

Bald'-ness, s. The want of hair; meanness of style.

Bald -pate, s. A head without hair.

BALDACHIN, bäl'-dā-kīn, 142, 161: s. A silk canopy; an architectural canopy.

BALDERDASH, bälw'-der-dāsh, 112, 25: s. Any thing jumbled without judgement; jargon.

To Bal'-der-dash, v. a. To mix or adulterate liquors.

BALDRICK, bälw'-drick, 112: s. A girdle

To BALE=bäl, v. a. To lade out. Webster thinks it of the same origin with To bail.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

Words: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā'-pā; lāw; gōōd' j'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, u. &c. mute. !71.

BAL

BALE=bāl, s. A bundle. Seemingly related to Bail.

To Bale, v. a. To make up into a bale, or bundle.

BALE=bāl, s. Misery, calamity. [Obs.]

Bale'-ful, (fōl, 117) a. Sorrowful; pernicious.

Bale'-ful-ly, 105: ad. Grievously; perniciously.

BALEARIC=bāl-ē-ār'-ic, 129, 88: a. An epithet of Majorca and Minorca, because the natives were skilful at casting stones from a sling or bow.

BAL-IST'-TER, s. A cross bow.

Bal'-is'-tic, or Bal'-is'-tic, a. Pertaining to missile engines.

BALK, bāuk, 112, 139: s. A great beam.—See Bulk.

BALK, bāuk, 112, 139: s. A ridge of land left unploughed; a disappointment.

To Balk, v. a. To frustrate; to disappoint;—to heap as on a ridge. [Obs.]

Balk'-er, s. One that balks; also one who, standing on a high ridge or promontory, watches the shoals of herring, and gives notice of their course to the fishermen in boats.

BALL, bāl, 112: s. Any thing made in a round form; a round thing to play with; a globe; the cushions used for inking by printers.

BALL, bāl, 112: s. An entertainment of dancing.

BALLAD=bāl'-lād, 142: s. A song, generally on some historical or popular subject; or of simple melody. It has many compounds, as Ballad-maker, Ballad-singer, Ballad-tune, &c.

To Bal'-lad, v. n. To make or sing ballads.

BAL'-LA-TRY, s. A song; a jig. [Milton.]

BALLAST=bāl'-lāst, 142: s. Weight put at the bottom of a ship to keep it steady; that which keeps steady.

To Bal'-last, v. a. To place ballast; to keep steady.

BAL'-LA-TOON, s. A luggage boat used in the east.

BALL-ET=bāl'-lāy, [Fr.] 170: s. A dance exhibiting a story; a kind of dramatic poem. The word is related both to ball, and balld.

BALLISTIC.—See under Ballister.

BALLOON=bāl'-lōon, s. A glass receiver of a spherical form: an architectural ornament, being a ball placed on a pillar; a large bag, generally of silk, filled with a gas which causes it to rise in the air.

BALLOT=bāl'-lōt, s. Originally a little ball, but now it means that, or any thing else, which is used in giving a secret vote; the act of voting by ballot.

Bal'-lot-box, 154: s. The box used in balloting.

To Bal'-lot, v. n. To choose by ballot.

Bal'-lo-ta'-tion, 89: s. A voting by ballot. [Little used.]

BALLOTADE, bāl'-lō-tād', [Fr.] 170: s. A horse's leap performed between two pillars.

BALM.—See under Balsam.

BALNEAL=bāl'-né-āl, 142: a. Appertaining to a bath.

Bal'-ne-ar-y, 129, 105: s. A bathing room.

Bal'-ne-a-tor-y, a. Belonging to a bath.

Bal'-ne-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of bathing.

BALSAM, bāl'-sām, 112, 12: s. Any unctuous aromatic substance of sanative effect; in modern chemistry, such vegetable juices as are liquid, or spontaneously become concrete, and consist of a resinous substance combined with benzoic acid, or capable of affording it by decoction or sublimation.

Bal'-sam'-ic, (bāl'-sām'-ic, 88) } 142: a. Hav-Bal'-sam'-i-cal, (bāl'-sām'-ē-cāl) } ing the qualities of a balsam.

BALM, (bām, 122, 139) s. Balsam, of which word it is a contraction; any valuable or fragrant ointment: any thing that soothes or mitigates; it is also the appropriate name of several plants, particularly of the genus Melissa. The balm of Gilead is a plant of the genus Amyris, whose leaves yield, when bruised, a strong aromatic scent; and from this plant is obtained the balsam of Mecca, or of Syria, and the balm of Gilead of the shops.

BAN

Bal'-m'-y, 105: a. Having the qualities of a balm; soothing.

To Balm, v. a. To anoint with balm; to assuage.

BAL'TIC, bāl'-tīc, 112: a. and s. A sea so named.

BALUSTER=bāl'-ūs-ter, s. A small column, one of the supporters of the rail to a flight of stairs, or the front of a gallery.

Bal'-us-tered, (-terd, 114) a. Having balusters.

Bal'-us-trade, s. The balusters, collectively, of a gallery, terrace, or top of a building, &c.

BAMBOO=bām'-bōō', s. A plant of the reed kind.

BAM=bām, s. A cheat. [A cant word.]

To Bam'-boō'-zle, 101: v. a. To deceive; to impose on.

Bam'-boō'-zler, 36: s. One who deceives by low tricks.

BAN=bān, s. A public notice or edict; a curse; excommunication; interdiction; suspension of privileges.

To Ban, v. a. and n. To curse; to proscribe.

BAN'-DIT, or BAN'-DIT'-TO, pl.

BAN'-DITS, or BAN'-DIT'-TI, } s. An outlawed (-tēy, 105) } robber, or robbers.

BANANA=hā-nā'-nā, 98: s. A species of plantain.

BAND=bānd, s. A tie; any means of union or connection; something worn about the neck; any thing bound round another; any flat low member or moulding; a company of soldiers; a company of persons joined together, particularly of musical performers.

To Band, v. a. and n. To unite together; to bind with a band; in heraldry, to bind with a band of different colour from the charge: new. To associate. Sup.

Ban'-der, 36: s. One that associates.

Ban'-dage, 99: s. That which binds; a fillet.

BAND'-BOX, 154: s. A slight box for bands and the like.

BAND'-STRING, 72: s. A string appendent to a band.

BAN'-DE-LET. s. A flat moulding or fillet.

BAN'-DER-ET, s. In Switzerland, a general-in-chief.

BAN'-DOG, s. A dog chained up, or bound; a fierce dog.

BAN-DO-LEERS', 143: s. pl. Little cases containing musket charges appended to the band formerly slung over the shoulders of a musketeer.

See Banditti under To Ban.

BANDANA=bān-dān'-d, s. An East India silk handkerchief.

BANDROL.—See Bannerol under Banner.

BANDY, bān'-dēy, 105: s. A club bent at the end for striking a ball at play; the play itself.

To Ban'-dy, v. a. To beat to and fro, or from one to another; to agitate; to toss about.

BAN'-DY-LEGG, 105: s. A bent or crooked leg.

Ban'-dy-legged, 114: a. Having crooked legs.

BANE=bāne, s. Poison; mischief; ruin.

To Bane, v. a. To poison.

Bane'-ful, (-fōl, 117) a. Poisonous; destructive.

Bane'-ful-ly, 105: ad. Perniciously; destructively.

Bane'-ful-ness, s. Poisonousness; destructiveness.

BANE'-WORT, (-wurt, 141) s. Deadly nightshade

*To BANG=bāng, 72: v. a. To beat; to thump about.*

Bang, s. A blow, a thump. [A low word.]

*To BANGLE, bāng'-gl, 158, v. a. To trifle away.*

BANIAN, bān-yān', 146: s. and a. An East Indian, belonging to one of the tribes that abstain from animal food; a morning gown, such as is worn

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: ʾāb-in, i. e. riv-er. 165: thān. 166.

by a Banlan; a tree in the East:—a. An epithet applied to days on which no meat is served out.

TO BANISH=bân'-ish, v. a. To exile; to drive away.

BAN'-ish-er, 36: s. He that banishes.

BAN'-ish-ment, s. The act of banishing; exile.

BANISTER=bân'-is-ter, s. A corruption of Ban-luster.

BANK, bǎngk, 158: s. Originally a bench; whatever is raised and extends in a ridge; an accumulation of money; a place where money is laid up; the persons managing a bank of money.

→ The word is often compounded, as bank-note, bank-bill, bank-stock, &c.

TO Bank, v. a. To raise a bank; to put money in a bank.

Bank'-er, s. One that keeps a bank.

Bank'-ing, 72: s. The business of banking.

BANK'-RUPT, a. and s. That is broken with respect to his bank or stock of money:—s. A trader that breaks.

BANK'-rupt-cy, 105: s. The state of a bankrupt; an act of bankruptcy, is any act that makes a man legally a bankrupt; a commission of bankruptcy, is a warrant granted in consequence of an act of bankruptcy.

BAN'-QUETTE, (bǎng-ke't, [Fr.] 170) s. A foot bank behind a parapet to stand on when firing at the enemy.

BANNER=bân'-ner, 36: s. A flag; a standard; a streamer borne at the end of a lance.

BAN'-nerd, (-nerd, 114) part. a. Displaying banners.

BAN'-NER-ET, 129: s. A knight made in the field with the ceremony of cutting off the point of his standard and making it a banner, a little banner.

BAN'-NER-OL, (-ôle, 116) s. A little flag or streamer

BANNOCK=bân'-nôck, s. A cake of oats or barley meal.

BANQUET, bǎng'-kwët, 158, 76, 145: s. A feast.

TO Ban'-quet, v. a. and n. To treat with feasting:—new. To feast; to fare daintily.

Ban'-quet-er, 36: s. A feaster; one that makes feasts.

Ban'-quet-ing, 72: s. The act of feasting.

→ See Banquette under Bank.

BANSHEE=bân'-shé, } s. An Irish fairy.

BENSIL, bân'-shé, 105: }

BANSTICLE, bân'-sté-cl, 101: s. The fish stickleback.

BANTAM=bân'-tām, a. and s. Of bantam breed:—s. A small fowl with feathered shanks, probably first brought from Bantam.

TO BANTER=bân'-ter, 36: v. a. To play upon; to rally.

Ban'-ter, s. Light ridicule; raillery.

Ban'-ter-er, 129: s. One that banters.

BANTLING=bânt'-lîng, 72: s. A little child.

TO BAPTIZE=băp'-tizé, v. a. Originally, to immerse in water; appropriately, to administer the sacrament of initiation into the christian church, to christen.

Bap'-tizer, 36: s. One that christens.

BAP'-tism, (-tîzm, 158) s. A christian sacrament performed by ablution, or sprinkling, and a form of words.

Bap'-tis-mal, a. Pertaining to baptism.

Bap'-tist, s. A baptizer; also an Anabaptist.

Bap'-tist-ery, 129, 105: s. A place for baptizing.

Bap'-tis-ti-cal, a. Relating to baptism.

BAR=bar, 33: s. A long piece of wood or metal; something which being across a passage hinders entrance: a bolt; obstruction; a gate; a rock or bank of sand at the entrance of a harbour; a tribunal of justice; (see lower down); in law, a peremptory exception against a demand or plea; in heraldry, a horizontal mark across the escutcheon; in music, the line, or the space marked off by the line, which includes one beat in the time.

TO Bar, v. a. To fasten with a bar; to hinder; to shut out; to exclude from use or claim; to prohibit; to except; in law, to hinder the process of a suit; in surgery, an operation on a vein to stop malignant humors.

Bar'-shot, s. Half bullets barred together.

Bar'-ful, 117: a. Full of obstructions. [Shaks.]

BAR-RI-CADE, (bǎr-ré-cā-dé,) } 129, 105: s.

BAR-RI-CA'-DO, (bǎr-ré-cā-dô,) } A hastily made fortification; a bar; an obstruction.

TO Bar-ri-cade, } v. a. To stop up a passage; to

TO Bar-ri-ca'-do, } obstruct.

BAR-RI-ER, s. A barricade; a boundary. Pope, in one place, pronounces ba-reer.

BAR, 33: s. A place inclosed by a bar, as in courts of justice where counsellors plead; also where the criminals stand; and in taverns and inns whence liquors are dispensed.

Bar'-maid, s. The chief servant in an inn.

Bar'-ris-ter, (bǎr'-rîs-ter, 129) s. A counsellor at law.

BARB=barb, 33: s. A Barbary horse; or pigeon.

BARB=barb, 33: s. That which resembles beard, or grows in the place of it; the points that stand backward in an arrow; horse-armour.

TO Barb, v. a. To shave; to furnish horses with armour; to jag arrows with hooks.

Bar'-bed, part. a. Armed; bearded.

Bar'-BER, 36: s. One whose occupation is to shave.

TO Bar'-ber, v. a. To shave and dress.

Bar'-ber-môn'-ger, (mûn'-guer, 116, 77) s. A fop.

Bar'-BA-TER, 98: a. Jagged; bearded.

BAR'-BEL, s. A coarse river fish with a barb.

Bar'-BER-RY, s. A wild fruit, with spines or barbs.

BARBACAN=bar' bǎ-cân, s. A fortification before the town walls, or at the end of a bridge; an opening to shoot out at. It is also spelled Barbican.

BARBAROUS, bar'-bâ-rûs, 120: a. Uncivilized; savage; unlettered; contrary to the rules of speech; cruel, inhuman, brutal; foreign.

Bar'-ba-rous-ly, s. In a barbarous manner.

Bar'-ba-rous-ness, s. The state of being barbarous.

BAR-BA'-RI-AN, 90, 105: s. and a. A man uncivilized; a brutal monster:—a. Savage.

Bar-bar'-ic, (-bǎr'-ick, 129) a. Foreign, uncivilized.

Bar-bar'-i-ty, s. Savageness; cruelty; barbarism.

BAR-BA-RISM, 158: s. Any form of speech contrary to the purity of a language; ignorance of arts; brutality; cruelty.

TO Bar'-ba-rize, v. a. To reduce to barbarism.

TO BARBECUE=bar'-bê-cûé, v. a. To dress a hog whole.

Bar'-be-cue, s. In the West Indies, a hog dressed whole.

BARBED, BARBEL, BARBER, BAR BERRY, &c.—See under Barb. Barbate, &c. see S.

BARD=bard, 33: s. A Celtic minstrel; a poet.

Bar'-dic, Bar'-dish, a. Relating to bards or poets.

BARE, obsolete for bare.—See TO Bare.

BARE=bâre, 41: a. Naked; wanting clothes; uncovered; unadorned; poor; indigent; mere.

TO Bare, v. a. To strip; to uncover.

Bare'-bone, s. A very lean person.

Bare'-faced, (-fâst, 114, 143) a. Shameless.

Bare'-faced-ly, 105: ad. Openly, shamelessly.

Bare'-faced-ness, s. Effrontery; assurance.

Bare'-foot, (-fôot, 118) a. and ad. Without shoes.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gâu'-wâ-y: chǎp'-mǎn: pǎ-pǎ: lǎw: gôod: j'wô, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

Bare-head'-ed, (-héd'-ed 120) a. Uncovered in respect.
Bar'e-ly, ad. Nakedly; poorly; merely.
Bar'e-ness, s. Nakedness; leanness; poverty
BARGAIN=bar'-gáin, 100, 99. s. A contract; the thing bought or sold; stipulation.
To Bar'-gain, v. n. and a. To make a contract:—act. To sell speculatively.
Bar'-gain-ee, s. He that accepts a bargain.
Bar'-gain-er, 177: s. He that makes a bargain.
BARGE=barge, 33: s. A boat used by officers and magistrates; a flat-bottomed boat for burden.
Bar'-ger, s. A bargeman.
Barge'-man, s. He that manages a barge.
Barge''-mas'-ter, s. The proprietor of a barge.
BARILLA=bd'-ríl'-ld, s. A plant cultivated in Spain for its ashes, from which the purest kind of mineral alkali is obtained; the alkali procured from the plant.
BARIUM.—See under Baryta.
BARK=bark, 33; s. A small ship; a ship.
BARK=bark, 33: s. The rind of a tree: Peruvian bark, an astringent medicine.
Bar'-ky, a. Consisting of bark.
Bark'-bared, 114: part. a. Stripped of bark.
Bark'-bound, 123: part. a. Straitened by the bark.
To Bark, v. a. To strip off the bark.
Bark'-er, s. One who barks trees.
To BARK=bark, 33: v. n. To make the noise of a dog; to clamour.
Bark'-er, s. One who clamour; one who stands at a shop-door to invite customers.
BARLEY=bar'-léy, s. A grain of which malt is made.
 (C) The word is often compounded; as bar'-ley-brake, (a rural game); bar'-ley-corn; bar'-ley-mow, (32) bar'-ley-sug'-ur, (so called because the sugar was originally boiled in a decoction of barley); bar'-ley-water, (a cooling medicinal drink.) &c.
BARM=barm, 33: s. Yeast.
Bar'-my, a. Yeasty, fitted to ferment beer or bread.
BARN=barn, s. A building for farming work or stores.
BARNACLE, bar'-nd-kl, 101: s. A shell-fish, or shell adhering to substances under sea water; a bird like a goose, fabulously said to grow on trees; in the plural, an instrument of two tranches to put on a horse's nose while operating on him.
BAROLITE=bár'-d-líte, s. Carbonate of Baryta.
BAROMETER=bd'-róm'-é-ter, 87: s. An instrument for determining the weight of the atmosphere, and hence the actual and probable changes of weather, or the height of any ascent.
Bar'-o-net''-ri-cal, 129: s. Relating to the barometer.
Bar'-o-net''-ri-cal-ly, ad. By means of a barometer.
Bar'-o-scope, s. A sort of barometer.
BARON=bár'-ón, 129, 18: s. A degree of nobility next to a viscount, and the lowest in the house of peers; the title of the judges of the Exchequer; of the representatives in parliament of the cinque ports; the name opposed to feme in law-proceedings instead of husband. A Baron of beef consists of the two sirloins not cut asunder.
Bar'-on-ess, s. A baron's lady.
Bar'-on-age, 99: s. The peerage; the dignity of a baron; the estate which gives the title.
Bar'-o-ny, s. The lordship, honour or fee of a baron.
Bar'-o-n'-al, (bd'-rō'-né-ál, 90) a. Pertaining to a barony.
Bar'-o-net, 129: s. The next title to baron, and the lowest which is hereditary.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ún, i. e. mission, 165. vish-ún, i. e. vision, 165. thín, 166: thén, 166.

Bar'-o-net-age, 99: s. The baronets as a body, the dignity of a baronet.

BAROUCHE, bd'-rōsh', [Fr.] 170: s. A four wheeled open carriage.

BARRACAN=bār'-rd-cān, s. A stuff like camelot.

BARRACK=bār'-răck, s. A building to lodge soldiers.

BARRATOR=bār'-rd-tor, s. A wrangler; an encourager of law-suits.

Bar'-ru-try, 105: s. Foul practice in law.

BARREL=bār'-rēl, s. A round wooden vessel; a particular measure; any thing hollow, as the tube of a gun; a cylinder. The barrel of the ear, is a cavity behind the tympanum.

To Bar'-rel, v. a. To put into a barrel.

BARREN=bār'-rēn, a. Not prolific; unfruitful; not copious; unmeaning.

Bar'-ren-ly, ad. Unfruitfully.

Bar'-ren-ness, s. Incapability of bearing offspring; unfruitfulness; want of invention; aridity.

Bar'-ren-wort, (-wurt, 141) s. A plant so called.

BARRICADE, BARRIER, BARRISTER,

&c.—See under Bar.

BARROW, bār'-rō, 125: s. A carriage moved by the hand.

BARROW, bār'-rō, 125: s. A hillock or mound supposed to have been a burying-place.

To BARTER=bar'-ter, v. n. and a. To traffic by exchanging:—act. To give in exchange for something.

Bar'-ter, s. Traffic by exchange of commodities.

Bar'-ter-er, 129: s. He that traffics by exchange.

Bar'-ter-y, 105: s. Exchange of commodities.

BARTON, bar'-tn, 116: s. The demesne lands of a manor; the manor-house; the out-houses.

BARTRAM=bar'-trām, s. The plant pellitory.

BARYTA=bd'-rít'-td, 169: s. Ponderous earth,

BARYTE=bd'-rit', } the oxide of Barium.

Bar'-ryt'-ic, (-rit'-ic, 88) a. Pertaining to baryta.

Bar'-ry-um, (bār'-é-üm, 90, 41) s. A metal, the basis of baryta.

BARYTONE, bār'-é-tōne, 129, 105: a. and s.

Pertaining to, or noting a grave or deep sound:—s. A male voice running neither so low as a base voice, nor so high as a tenor; in Greek prosody, a word not accented on the last syllable, and therefore not finishing with the sharp tone of such a word.

BASALT, bd'-săwl', 112: s. A grayish black mineral or stone; a porcelain imitating it.

Bas'-al'-tic, 88: a. Having the nature of basalt.

Bas'-al'-tine, (-tín, 105) s. Basaltic hornblend; a column of basalt.

Bas'-al'-tes, (bd'-săl'-tēz, 142, 101) s. Basalt.

BASANITE, băz'-d-nít, 151: s. Lydian stone or black jasper, employed to test the purity of gold.

BASE=băce, 152, 59: a. Low: of low station of mean spirit; illegitimate: as to metals, without value; as to sounds, deep, grave; low, in position or place. Hence, Bas'al, a.

Base'-ly, ad. In a base or unworthy manner.

Base'-ness, s. Meanness; villainess; deepness of sound.

Base'-born, a. Of illegitimate birth.

BASE, s. The bottom or foundation of any thing; the pedestal of a statue; the broad part of any body such as the bottom of a cone, or the foot of a pillar.

Base'-ment, s. A continued base; the ground floor

Base'-less, a. Without foundation.

To Base, v. a. To found, or establish on a base.

Bas'-sis, s. The base, foundation, or principal component part of any thing.

BASS, (băcz, 167) a. and s. In music, low, deep grave;—s. The lowest or deepest part of the composition, which is regarded as the foundation of the harmony. The word is variously compounded, as bas-clef, or cliff, bas-criel; bas-voice, &c.

BASENET=bāz'-ē-nēt, 151: s. A helmet or headpiece, from Bassinet [Fr.] see Supp.

BASHAW=bā'-shāw', s. A Turkish viceroy, properly Pacha; an imperious man.

BASHFUL, bāsh'-fōol, 117: a. Modest, shame-faced, shy.

Bash'-ful-ly, 105: ad. Timorously, modestly.

Bash'-ful-ness, s. Modesty; foolish or rustic shame.

BASIL, bāz'-il, 151: s. The slope of a chisel's edge.

To Bas'-il, v. a. To grind to its proper slope.

BASILAR, bāz'-ē-lar, 34: } 151: a. Chief, prin-

BASILARY, bāz'-ē-lār-ēy, } cipal: [an epithet appropriated by anatomists: it is derived from the Greek word, a king.]

BA-SIL'-I-CA, s. A regal or large hall; a magnificent church; the chief or middle vein of the arm.

BA-sil'-ic, 88, } a. Pertaining to the middle vein of BA-sil'-i-cal, } the arm.

BA-SIL'-I-CON, s. An ointment, of imputed sovereign excellence.

BA-SIL'-I-LISK, s. A crested serpent: a kind of cannon.

BASIN, bā'-sn, 114, 115: s. A small broad vessel for water; a small pond; any hollow place: a deck.

BA'-sined, (-sind, 114) a. Enclosed as in a basin.

BASIS.—See under Base.

*To BASK=bāsk, 111: v. n. and a. To lie in the warmth;—act. To warm by laying out in the heat.*

BASKET=bāsk'-kēt, 14: s. A vessel made of twigs, rushes, or other flexible things interwoven.

The word is often compounded, as basket-bird, basket-woman, &c.

To Bas'-ket, v. a. To put in a basket.

BASS, in music.—See under Base.

BASS=bāss, s. A fish of the perch kind.

BASS=bāss, s. A mat used in churches, &c.

BASS-RELIEF, bāss'-rē-lēf', 103: s. Sculpture standing out from a ground, but not far; demi-relief standing out still further; and full relief exhibiting the figures completely.

BASSET=bāss'-sēt, s. A game at cards.

BASSOON=bāss'-soon', s. A musical wind instrument.

BASTARD=bāss'-tard, 34: s. and a. An illegitimate child; any thing spurious; a piece of ordnance so called; also, in Shakespeare's time, a kind of sweet wine;—a. Illegitimate; spurious.

To Bas'-tar-dize, v. a. To convict of being a bastard.

Bas'-tar-dy, 105: s. The state of being a bastard.

Bas'-tard-ly, a. and ad. In the manner of a bastard.

To BASTE, bāst, 111: v. a. To beat with a stick; to drip butter on meat while roasting; to sew slightly.

BA'-sting, s. The act of beating, of dripping butter, &c.

BAS-TI-NADE', (bās-tē-nāde', 105) } s. The act of BAS-TI-NA'-DO, (bās-tē-nā'-dō) } beating with a cudgel; a Turkish punishment of beating an offender on the soles of his feet.

To Bas-ti-nade', } v. a. To beat with a cudgel;

To Bas-ti-na'-do, } to give the bastinado.

BASTILE, bās-tēl', 104: s. The fortifications of a castle; the castle itself; a state prison formerly in Paris.

BASTION, bāst'-yōn, 146, 147: s. A huge mass of earth standing out from a rampart; a bulwark.

BAT=bāt, s. A stick; a flat club used at cricket.

Bat'-let, s. A piece of wood for beating linen.

BAT'-TLE-DORÉ, 101: s. A bat doré, or gilt, used at playing with a shuttlecock.

BA'-TON, (bā'-tōng, [Fr.] 170) s. A French marshal's staff.

BA-TOON', 98: s. A staff; a baton.

BA-TOON', Baste, Batten, Batter, Battle, &c. are likewise relations of this class.

BAT=bāt, s. A winged animal like a mouse.

Bat'-ty, 105: a. Belonging to a bat. [Shakespeare.]

BAT'-FOWL-ING, 72: s. Bird-catching at night.

BATCH=bāčh', s. The quantity of bread made at one time; any quantity made at once.

BATE=bātē, s. Strife, contention. [Obs.]

Ba'-ti-ble, 101: a. That may be contended for.

Bate'-ful, 117: a. Contentious.

Bate'-breed-ing, 72: a. Breeding strife.

To BATE, BATEMENT, &c.—See Abate, &c.

Ba'-ting, 72: prep. Except. See To Bate also in Supp.

BATEAU, bā-tō', [Fr.] 170: s. A long light boat.

BATH=bāth, pl. bāthz, 68, 166: s. A receptacle of water for the purpose of bathing; a heating by means of water; of vapour; and even of sand; a house containing a bath; a Hebrew measure of seven galls and a half.

To BATHE, (bāthē, 111, 137) v. a. and n. To wash in a bath; to supple or soften by washing; to wash.—new. To have one's body in water.

Ba'-ther, s. One who bathes himself; who bathes another.

Ba'-thing, 72: s. The act or practice of bathing.

BATHOS=bā'-thōss, s. Anti-climax, or sinking in poetry.

BATTALIOUS, BATTALIA, BATTEL, &c.

—See under Battle.

To BATTEL=bāt'-tl, 114: v. a. and n. [See other senses of this word under Battle.] To batten or make fat.—new. To batten or grow fat: to stand indebted, in the college looks at Oxford, for what is expended at the buttery in the necessities of eating and drinking; at Cambridge size is used in a nearly similar sense; hence a batteler or battier at the one, and a sizar at the other.

Bat'-tel, s. A student's account at Oxford.

This word, though placed here, has been supposed to originate from a verb signifying to reckon.

To BATTEN, bāt'-tn, 114: v. a. and n. To make fat.—new. To grow fat. See Battul in Supp.

BATTEN, bāt'-tn, s. A broad thin scantling of wood. The word in this sense is probably allied to Bat.

To Bat'-ten, v. n. To form with battens; to thicken.

See the other senses of this word in the previous class.

To BATTER=bāt'-ter, 36: v. a. To beat down to wear with beating; to wear out with service.

Bat'-ter-er, 129: s. He that batters.

Bat'-ter-y, 105: s. The act of battering; a line of cannon; the raised work on which cannons are mounted; in law, an assault accompanied by any the least violence, such as even touching a man's person in anger.

BAT'-TER-ING-RAM', s. An ancient military engine.

BATTLE, bāt'-tl, 101: s. A fight; encounter of two armies; a body of forces; the main body of an army.

Relations of this class not found underneath, must be sought under Bat, &c.

To Bat'-tle, v. n. and a. To contend in battle.

Bat'-tling, 72: s. A conflict.

Bat'-tle-ment, s. A wall with embrasures or interstices; a breastwork.

Some etymologists ally this word with Bastie or Bastiment.

Bat'-tle-ar-ray', s. Order of battle.

Bat'-tle-axe, (-āks, 154) s. A weapon used anciently.

BAT'-TAIL-OURS, (-tāl ūs, 100, 120) a. Warlike [Milton.]

BAT-ta'-l-i-s, (-tāl'-vd, 90) s. Odds: of battle; the main body of an army.

BAT-tal'-ion, (-tāl'-yōn, 95) s. A division of an army; a troop; a body of forces.

BAT'-TEL, (bāt'-tl, 114) s. This is the ancient way of spelling battle, and is accordingly adopted by Milton in the same general sense; appropriately, it signifies a species of trial of high antiquity in the law of modern nations, determined by the duel or single combat of the parties. The duelling of modern times is a relic of this ancient and barbarous practice.

BATTOLOGY, bāt-tōl'-ō-gy, 105: s. The needless multiplying of words. Battus was a dull tautological Greek poet.

To Bat-tol'-o-gize, v. a. To repeat needlessly.

BAVAROY=bāv'-d-roy, 30: s. A kind of cloak.

BAUBEE=bāv-bē', 123: s. In Scotland, a halfpenny.

BAVIN=bāv'-in, s. A stick for firewood.

BAWBLE, bāv-bl, 101: s. A gewgaw; an article of trifling dexterity; a court-fool's truncheon.

Baw'-bling, 72: a. Trifling, contemptible. [Obs.]

BAWCOCK=bāv'-cōck, s. A fine fellow.

BAWD=bāwd, s. A procurer or procuress.

To Bawd, v. n. To procure.

Baw'-dy, 105: a. Obscene, unchaste.

Baw'-dily, ad. Obscenely.

Baw'-diness, s. Obsceneness.

Baw'-dry, s. Procurement for purposes of lust; obscene practices; obscene language.

Baw'-dy-house, s. A house used for lewdness.

BAWDICK=bāv'-drick, s. A girdle.—See Bal-drick.

To BAWL=bāwl, v. n. and a. To hoot; to shout with vehemence; to cry as a froward child:—act. To proclaim, as a crier.

Baw'-ler, 36: s. One that bawls.

BAWREL=bāv'-rēl, 14: s. A kind of hawk.

BAWSIN=bāv'-cīn, 59: s. A badger.

BAY=bāy, a. Brown approaching to chestnut.

BAY'-ARD, 34: s. A bay horse; a blind horse often mentioned in old romances; hence, bayardly, blind, stupid.

BAY=bāy, s. An arm of the sea; an opening or space caused by the bend of a boundary line; in a barn, a place between the floor and the end of the building.

BAY-WIN'-DOW, (-dō, 125) s. A window which produces a bay or space in a room; it is now generally called Bow-window.

BAY'-SALT, (-sālt, 112) s. Salt formed in pits and basins.

☞ This is, no doubt, the proper place of the word, though some ally it with bay the colour, and others with the proper name Bayonne.

BAY=bāy, s. The female laurel.

Bays, (bāyz, 151) s. A garland, such as rewarded excellence at the ancient games; learning, literary excellence.

BAY=bāy, s. A stand made by one pursued or attacked, during which the enemy holds off; the phrase complete is, to stand at bay.

To BAY=bāy, v. n. and a. To bark:—act. To bark at.

BAYONET=bā'-yōn-ēt, s. A dagger fixed to a musket.

To Ba'-yon-et, v. a. To stab, or to drive, with a bayonet.

BAZAAR, bā-zar', 131: s. An eastern market; a place fitted up for various shops, all under one regulation.

BDELIUM, dēl'-yūm, 157, 146: s. A gummy resinous juice, produced by a tree in the East Indies, slightly bitter, but aromatic.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166

To BE=be, 3: bē, 176:

I AM=ām; thou ART=art; he IS, īz, 151:

We ARE, ar, 132; ar, 176:

Ind. I WAS, wōz, 140, 151; thou WAST, wōst, 140:

Subj. Thou WERT=wert, 35; we WERE, wer, 102:

BEEN, bīn, 119:

ary in conjugating all other verbs; and when it is not separately expressed, its meaning or force is nevertheless included in every other verb. Hence it is called the substantive verb.

Be'-ing, s. Existence; a condition; anything that exists.

BE.—See before To Becalm.

BEACH=bēčtch, 103, 63: s. The shore, the strand.

Beach'-ed, a. Exposed to the waves.

Beach'-y, 105: a. Having a beach or beaches.

BEACON, bē'-kn, 116: s. Something on an eminence to be fired as a signal; marks to direct navigators.

Bea'-con-age, 99: s. Money paid for maintaining beacons.

BEAD=bēd, 103: s. A little ball strung with others, and frequently worn about the neck; they are used by some Christians in counting their prayers; an imitation of them in architectural ornaments.

☞ The word is often compounded: e. g.

Bead'-roll, (-rōl, 116) s. A list of those to be prayed for.

Bead'-man, 143: s. One who prays for others a monk.

BEADLE, be' dl, 103, 101: s. A messenger belonging to a public body; a petty officer in parishes.

Bea'-dle-ship, s. The office of a beadle.

Be'-DEL-ry, (bē'-dl-rēy, 114, 105) s. The extent of a beadle's office.

BEAGLE, bē'-gl, 103, 101: s. A small kind of hunting dog.

BEAK=bēck, 103: s. The bill of a bird; a brass point at the head of ancient galleys; any point like a beak.

Beaked, 114, 143; or beak'-ed, part. a. Having a beak.

Beak'-er, 36: s. A cup with a beaked spout.

☞ This relationship to Beak is denied by Todd, who defines the word, a vessel for drink.

BEAL.—See under Boil.

BEAM=bēam, 103: s. A main piece of timber in a building; any large piece of timber; hyperbolically, the largest substance that can be imagined to enter the eye, and so opposed to mote, a small substance; a part of a balance; the pole between harnessed horses; a part of a loom; the horn of a stag.

Beam'-y, 105: a. Having horns or antlers. [Dryden.]

BEAM'-TREE, s. A species of wild service.

BEAM=bēam, 103: s. A ray of light.

To Beam, v. a. and n. To send forth:—neu. To emit rays, to shine.

Beam'-y, 105: a. Emitting rays; radiant.

Beam'-less, a. Emitting no rays of light.

BEAN=bēn, 103: s. The name of several kinds of pulse.

☞ The word is often compounded; as Bean-caper, (a plant), Bean-fed, Bean-fly, Bean-goose, (a bird, the nail of whose beak is like a bean.)

To BEAR, bāre, 100:

I BARE, BORE=bārē, 41; bōre, 47: To carry as BORN, BORNE, born, 37; bō'rn, a burden; to 130, 47:

v. a. and n. To carry as BORN, BORNE, born, 37; bō'rn, a burden; to 130, 47: convey or carry; to carry as a mark of authority or distinction; to support; to carry in the mind, as love, hatred; to endure; to suffer; to permit; to bring; to produce, as fruit; to bring forth, as a child; to press upon through the impulse of some mental affection:—neu. To suffer pain; to endure; to be patient; to be fruitful; to be prolific in children; to take effect; to succeed; to be directed to a point; to be situated with respect to other places.

Modern usage restricts the pref. BARE to the senses of brought forth, and was prolific; and the part. BORN to the sense of brought forth.

Bear-er, s. The person or thing that carries or supports.
Bear-ing, s. The place or relation of one thing as to another; gesture, behaviour; in heraldry, the charges that fill an escutcheon.

Bore, s. A tide borne on, or swelling above another tide.

BEAR, bārt, 100: s. A rough, savage animal; the name of two constellations, in the tail of the less of which is the pole-star. Bear on St. Exc. See Bull in S.

The word is often compounded; as Bear-baiting, Bear-ward or Bear-herd, (a keeper of bears,) Bear-garden, (a place where bears are kept for diversion,) Bear-whelp, &c. Again, on account of some imaginary or real relationship, many names of plants are formed by combinations with this word; as Bear-bind, Bear-berry, Bear's-breech, Bear's-ear, Bear's-foot, Bear's-wort. A hairy kind of Harley is named Bear or Big-Bear.

Bear-ish, a. Partaking of the qualities of a bear.

Bear-like, a. Resembling a bear.

BEARD=bēard, 103: s. The hair that grows on the lips and chin; prickles on the ears of corn; the barb of an arrow; the chuck of a horse where the curb goes.

To Beard, v. a. To take by the beard; to oppose to the face.

Beard-ed, a. Having a beard; prickly; barbed, jagged.

Beard-less, a. Without a beard; youthful.

Beard-less-ness, s. The state of being beardless.

BEAST=bēast, 103: s. An animal distinguished from birds, insects, fishes, and man; an irrational animal; a brutal man.

Beast-ly, 105: a. Brutal; contrary to the nature and dignity of man; having the nature of a beast.

Beast-li-ness, s. Brutality; filthiness.

Beastings belongs not to this class.—See Blistings.

BEST-I AL, (bēst-ē āl, 146, 147) a. Belonging to a beast.

Best-i-al-ly, 105: ad. In a bestial manner.

To Best-i-al-ize, v. a. To make like a beast.

Best-i-al-i-ty, 84: s. Bestialness; unnatural connection with a beast.

To BEAT=bēat, 103: } v. a. and n. To strike;
BEAT=bēat, 135: } to punish with stripes;

BEATEN, bē-tū, 114: } to bruise; to tread, or make a path; to conquer: To beat down, is to lessen a price demanded; to beat up, to attack suddenly; to beat the hoof, to go on foot;—beat, To move in a pulsatory manner; to dash as a flood or storm; to throb; To beat about, is to try different ways; to beat up fur, to go about in order to procure.

Beat, s. Stroke; manner of striking, or of being struck; a round or course ridden or perambulated.

Beat-er, s. A person that beats; the instrument used.

Beat-ing, s. The act of striking; correction.

To BEATIFY, bē-ā-tī-ē-fy, 6: v. a. To make happy; to bless by celestial happiness.

Be-a-ti-fic, 98, 88: } a. Of power to confer hea-
Be-a-ti-f-i-cal, 105: } venly bliss.

Be-a-ti-f-i-cal-ly, ad. In a manner to complete bliss.

Be-a-ti-fi-ca-tion, 85, 89: s. An acknowledgement by the Pope, that a person is in Heaven, preparatory to canonization.

BE-AT-I-TUDE, s. Blessedness; appropriately, the Beatitudes are the declarations by Christ of blessedness to particular virtues.

BEAU, bō, 108: s. A man of dress.

Beau-ish, a. Befitting a beau; foppish.

BEAU-IDEAL, (bō-ē-dā-āl, [Fr.] 170) s. The ideal excellence that haunts the mind of genius.

BEAU-MONDE, (bō-mōand, [Fr.] 170) s. The fashionable world.

BEAUTY, bū-tēy, 110, 105: s. That assemblage of graces or proportion of parts which produces delight, a particular grace or feature; a beautiful person. A beauty-spot is a spot or foil to heighten beauty.

Beau-ti-ful, (tē-fōl, 105, 117) a. Having the qualities that constitute beauty.

Beau-ti-ful-ly, ad. In a beautiful manner.

Beau-ti-ful-ness, s. The quality of being beautiful.

Beau-te-ous, (bū-tē-ūs=būt-yūs, 146, 147) a. Beautiful.

Beau-te-ous-ly, ad. In a beauteous manner.

Beau-te-ous-ness, s. The quality of being beauteous.

To BEAU-TIFY, 6, 105: v. a. To adorn; to embellish.

Beau-ti-fi-er, s. The person or thing that beautifies.

BEAVER=bē-ver, 103, 36: s. An amphibious quadruped valuable for its fur; a hat made of the fur; also, of different etymology, the part of a helmet which covers the face, and is movable up and down.

Bea-ver, 114: part. a. Covered with beaver.

BECAFICO, bēc-ā-fē-cō, 85, 104: s. A bird like a nightingale that feeds on figs.

BE-. A prefix of genuine Saxon origin, often apparently insignificant, but generally intensive, and to modern ears frequently fitting a word for the expression of ridicule or contempt, particularly in the form of passive participles. But of the words which follow commencing with this prefix, many seem to have lost their character as compounds, and to have assumed the rank of primitives. Such are accordingly distinguished from the rest, of which the whole number extends to the word Beyond inclusively.

To BE-CALM, (-cām, 122) v. a. To keep still or quiet. To calm is, to stop motion; to becalm, to keep from motion.

BECAUSE, bē-cāuz, 151: conj. For; for this reason.

To BE-CHANCE, 63, 111: v. n. To happen.

To BE-CHARM, 63, 33: v. a. To captivate.

To BE-CLIP, v. a. To embrace. [Obs.]

To BE-CLOUD, 123: v. a. To dim, to obscure.

BECK, BED, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix Be.

To BE-COME, bē-cūm, 107: } v. n. To enter BECAME=bē-cām, } into some state or BECOME, bē-cūm, } condition; with of, it signifies to be the fate or end of.

To BE-COME, v. a. To add grace to; to best.

Be-com-ing, 72: part. a. Suitable; graceful.

Be-com-ing-ly, ad. After a becoming manner.

Be-com-ing-ness, s. Decency, propriety.

To BE-CURL=PI-E, 101: v. a. To make lame.

To BE-CURL, 39: v. a. To curl excessively.

To BE-DAB-BLE, 101: v. a. To wet, to sprinkle.

To BE-DAPP, v. a. To make a fool of. [Obs.]

To BE-DAG-GLE, 101: v. a. To drag in the dirt.

To BE-DASH, v. a. To dash over with a liquid.

To BE-Daub, 123: v. a. To daub excessively.

To BE-DAZ-ZLE, 101: v. a. To dazzle by com-temptible means.

To BE-DECK, v. a. To deck greatly or variously.

To BE-DEV-IL, (-dēv-l, 115) v. a. To throw into confusion; to render unfit for christian use or society.

To BE-DEW, (-dū, 110) v. a. To moisten gentry.

BE-DIGHT, (-dīte, 162) part. a. Bedecked. [Obs.]

To BE-DIM, v. a. To make dim, to obscure.

To BE-DI-ZEN, (-dī-zen, 114) v. a. To dress out.

To BE-DRA-GLE, 101: v. a. To soil by dragging in the dirt.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-way: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: j'ō, i. e. j'ō, 55: a, a, i. &c. note, 171.

To BE-DRENCH', (-drēntch, 63) v. a. To soak completely.

To BE-DROP', v. a. To sprinkle over with.

To BE-DUCK', v. a. To duck completely.

To BE-DUNG', 72: v. a. To dung completely.

To BE-DUST', v. a. To dust over and over.

To BE-DWARF', (-dworf, 37, 140) v. a. To stunt in growth.

To BE-DYE', (-dŷ, 106) v. a. To stain completely.

BEDEHOUSE, BEDFAM, BEE, BEECH, BEEF, BEER, BEET, BEETLE, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE.

To BEFAI', bē-fāw', 112: } v. a. and n. To BEFEL=be-fēl', } happen to:—neu.
BEFAILEN, bē-fāwln', 114: } To happen; to come to pass.

To BE-FIT', v. a. To suit, to be suitable to.

To BE-FOAM', 108: v. a. To cover with foam.

To BE-FOOT', v. a. To make a fool of; to infatuate.

BEFORE=bē fō'ur, 47: prep. and adv. Further onward; in the front of; in the presence of; in sight of; under the cognizance of; preceding in time; in preference to; prior to; superior to:—ad. Sooner than; in time past; previously to; hitherto; farther onward in place.

Be-fore-hand, ad. In a state of anticipation; previously; antecedently; at first.

Be-fore-time, ad. Formerly.

To BE-FOUR-TUNE, 147: v. a. To happen to.

To BE-FOUL', 31: v. a. To soil; to pollute.

To BE-FRIEND', (-frēnd, 120) v. a. To favour and assist.

To BE-FRINGE, 64: v. a. To furnish with fringes.

To BE-GAT', (-gæt, 77) } v. a. To generate; to BE-GOT', I Be-got', } produce, as effects; to BE-GOT'-TEN, (-tn, 114) } produce, as accidents.

Be-got'-ter, 77, 36: s. a. A father.

Be-GILT', (gwilt, 77) a. Gilded over.

To BEG, BEGGAR, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE.

To BEGIN, bē-gwīn', 77: } v. a. and n. To enter
I BEGAN=be-gān', } upon something new;
BEGUN=be-gūn', } to commence:—neu.
To do the first act of any thing; to enter upon.

Be-gin'-ner, s. He who begins; an unpractised attempter.

Be-gin'-ning, s. The first original or cause; the first part; the rudiments or first grounds.

To BE-GIRD', (-guerd, 77, 35) v. a. To bind with a girdle; to surround; to shut in.

Be-girt', part. a. Girdled; surrounded.

To BE-GNAW', (-nēk, 157) v. a. To eat away.

BE-GONE', (-gōn, 107) part. a. Far gone in; sunk in.

BE—As an interj. signifying Be thou or ye gone! the word does not belong to this class of words.

To BE-GREASE', (-grēzē, 103, 137) v. a. To grease.

To BE-GRIME', v. a. To soil with soot or dirt.

To BE-GRUDGE', v. a. To envy the possession of.

To BE-GUILE', 55: v. a. To impose upon; to amuse.

Be-gui'-ler, 36: s. s. One that beguiles.

BEHALF, bē-hālf', 122: s. Favour; cause; interest; account; sake; support.

To BEHAVE=bē-hāv', v. a. and n. Originally, to restrain or govern; in modern use to carry or conduct, with a reciprocal pronoun as the object:—neu. To act; to conduct one's-self.

Be-ha'-viour, (-hāv'-yur, 146, 120) s. Manner of conduct; demeanour; conduct; gesture; manner.

To BE-HEAD', (-hēd, 120) v. a. To deprive of the head.

BE-HEST', s. Command; precept; injunction.

BEHEMOTH, BEING, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE.

BEHIND, bē-hīnd', 115: prep. and adv. At the back of; following another; remaining after another's departure; inferior to:—adv. in the rear; backwards; remaining.

Be-hind'-hand, a. and adv. In arrear; backward; tardy.

To BEHOLD, bē-hōkd', 116: } v. a. and n. To
I BEHOLD=bē-hēld', } view; to see in an BEHELD, BEHOLDEN, bē-hōlē'- } emphatical sense:
dn, 114: } —neu. To direct the eyes toward.

Be-hold', interj. See! lo!

Be-hol'-den, part. a. Bound in gratitude.

Be-hol'-der, 36: s. One who beholds or sees.

To BEHOOVE=bē-hōov', 189: } v. a. and n.
To BEHOVE, bē-hōov', 107: } To be fit for; to be met.

Be-hoov'-ful, 117: a. Useful, profitable.

Be-hoov'-a-ble, 101: a. Fit; expedient.

Be-hoof', s. Profit; advantage; benefit.

To BE-JADE', v. a. To tire completely.

To BE-IA'-BOUR, 120: v. a. To beat soundly; to thump.

BE-LACED', (-lāst, 114, 143) part. a. Covered with lace.

BE-IA'-TED, part. a. Overtaken by a late hour.

To BE-LAY', 1: v. a. To block up; to attack; to besiege; to mend or fasten a rope.

To BE-LEA'-GUER, (-lē-guer, 103, 77) v. a. To besiege; to block up; to surround.

To BE-LIE'-BEL, (-lī'-bl, 114) v. a. To traduce.

To BE-LIE', (-lī, 5) v. a. To counterfeit; to give the lie to; to calumniate; to represent falsely; to fill with lies.

BELCH, BELDAM, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE.

To BELIEVE, bē-lēv', 103: v. a. and n. To credit; to put confidence in:—neu. To have a firm persuasion of; to trust in; to exercise faith.

Be-liev'-a-ble, 101: a. Credible.

Be-liev'-er, 36: s. He that believes; he that entertains the christian faith.

Be-liev'-ing-ly, ad. In a believing manner.

Be-lief, (-lēf, 103) s. Credit given to testimony assent to a conclusion on proofs not amounting to demonstration; persuasion; opinion; the thing believed; creed; faith; religion.

BE-LIKE', ad. Probably. [Obs. or vul.]

BE-LIVE', ad. Speedily; in course of time. [Obs.]

To BE-LOCK', v. a. To fasten as with a lock.

BELL, BELLE, BELLIGERENT, BELLOWS, BELLUINE, BELLY, BELT, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE.

To BELONG=bē-lōng', 72: v. n. To be the property of; to appertain to; to be the province or business of; to adhere to; to have relation to; to be the quality of.

To BE-LOUT', 123: v. a. To call names.

BE-LOVED', (-lūvd, 107, 114) part. Much loved.

Be-lov'-ed, 114: a. Dear; much loved.

BELOW, bē-lō', 125: prep. and ad. Under in place, time, or dignity; inferior in excellence; unworthy of:—adv. In a lower place, on earth; in hell.

To BE-MAD', v. a. To make mad.

To BE-MAN'-GLE, (-māng'-gl, 158, 101) v. a. To tear greatly.

To BE-MASK', 111: v. a. To hide, to conceal.

To BE-MAZE', v. a. To bewilder.

To BE-MIRK', v. a. To drag in the mire.

To BE-MIST', v. a. To cover as with a mist; to confuse.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: yīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To BE-MOAN', 108: v. a. To lament.
Be-moan'-er, 36: s. One who laments.
 To BE-MOCK', v. a. To treat with mockery.
 To BE-MOIL', v. a. To soil by dragging in the dirt.
 To BE-MON'-STER, v. a. To make monstrous.
 To BE-MOURN', (-mō'urn, 125, 47) v. a. 1, weep over.
BE-MUSSU', (-mūzud, 137) part. a. Overcome with musing.
BE-NEAPED', (-nēapt, 103, 143) part. Kept from floating out of dock or over a bar by the neap or low water.
BENCH, BEND, BENEFIT, BENIGN, &c.
 —See after all the words with the prefix BE-.
BENEATH=bē-nēthē', 103: prpp. and ad. Under; lower in place; lower in rank, excellence, or dignity; unworthy of:—adv. In a lower place; the earth below as opposed to heaven.
 To BE-NET', v. a. To ensnare.
 To BE-NIGHT', 115, 162: v. a. To overtake with night; to debar from intellectual light.
 To BE-NUMB', (-nūm, 156) v. a. To make torpid.
Be-numb'-ing, part. a. Depriving of sensation.
 To BE-PAINT', v. a. To cover over with paint.
 To BE-PINCH', v. a. To mark all over with pinches.
 To BE-POW'-DER, v. a. To sprinkle or cover with powder.
 To BE-PRAISE', (-prāze, 137) v. a. To praise extravagantly.
 To BE-QUEATH, bē-kwēthē', 76, 145, 103: v. a. to give or leave by will.
Be-queath'-ment, s. The act of bequeathing; a bequest.
Be-quest', (-kwēst) s. A legacy.
 To BE-RATE', v. a. To chide vehemently.
 To BE-RAT'-TLE, 101: v. a. To rattle on every side.
 To BE-RAY', v. a. To make foul, to soil.
BERGAMOT, BERLIN, BERRY, BERTII, BERYL, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE-.
 To BEREAVE=bē-rēvē', 103: } v. a. To strip;
BEREFT=bē-rēft', } to deprive of;
 to take away from.
Be-reave'-ment, s. Deprivation.
 To BE-RHYME', (-rīm, 164) v. a. To make the subject of foolish verses.
 To BE-SCAT'-TER, v. a. To throw loosely about.
 To BE-SCRATCH', v. a. To tear with the nails.
 To BE-SCRAWL', v. a. To scribble over.
 To BE-SCREEN', v. a. To shelter; to conceal.
 To BESECH=bē-sēchē', 59, 63: } v. a. To
I BESOUGHT, bē-sāwt', 125, 162: } entreat; to BESOUGHT, bē-sāwt', } beg.
Be-seech'-er, 36: s. He who beseeches.
 To BE-SEEM', v. a. To become, to besit.
Be-seem'-ing, a. and s. Becoming:—s. Comeliness.
Be-seem'-ly, 105: a. Fit; becoming.
 To BE-SET',
I Be-set', } v. a. To besiege; to hem in; to em-
Be-set', } barrass; to waylay; to full upon.
Be-set'-ting, a. Habitually attending or pressing.
 To BE-SHREW', (-shrō, 110, 109) v. a. To execrate; to happen ill to.
BESIDE=bē-sīdē', } prpp. and ad. At BESIDES, bē-sīdēz', 143: } the side of; over and above: not according to, though not contrary:—adv.
 More than that; not in this number. To be beside one's self; to be out of one's wits.
 To BE-SIEGE, (-sēge, 103) v. a. To lay siege to;
 to hem in.

Be-sie'-ger 36: s. One who besieges.
 To BE-SLUB'-BER, v. a. To daub, to smear.
 To BE-SMEAR, 103: v. a. To smear over.
Be-smear'-er, 36: s. One who besmears.
 To BE-SMIRCH, (-smērtch, 35, 63) v. a. To soil to discolour.
 To BE-SMOKE', v. a. To foul with smoke; to harden or dry in smoke.
 To BE-SMUT', v. a. To blacken with smoke or soot.
BESOM.—See in its place after all the words with the prefix BE-.
 To BE-SORT', v. a. To suit, to fit.
Be-sort', s. Company; attendance, train. [Obs.]
 To BE-SOT', v. a. To make sottish; to infatuate.
Be-sot'-ted-ly, 105: ad. In a foolish manner.
Be-sot'-ted-ness, s. Stupidity; infatuation.
BESOUGHT.—See Beseech above.
 To BE-SPAN'-GLE, 158, 101: v. a. To spangle over; to make shining.
 To BE-SPAT'-TER, v. a. To spot over with dirt or dirty water.
 To BE-SPAWN', v. a. To daub with spittle.
 To BE-SPEAK', 103: } v. a. To order beforehand;
 I Be-spoke', } to forebode; to speak to;
Be-spo'-ken, 114: } to address; to betoken, to fore-show.
Be-speak'-er, 36: s. He who bespeaks.
 To BE-SPECK'-KLE, 101: v. a. To mark over with speckles or spots.
 To BE-SPICE', v. a. To season much with spices.
 To BE-SPIT', v. a. To spit over.
 To BE-SPOT', v. a. To mark over with spots.
 To BE-SPREAU',
I Be-spread', } (-sprēd, 120) v. a. To spread over.
Be-spread',
 To BE-SPRINK'-KLE, 153, 101: v. a. To sprinkle over.
Be-sprink', part. a. Besprinkled.
 To BE-SPURT', 35: v. a. To spit out upon or over.
 To BE-SPUT'-TER, v. a. To daub by sputtering over.
 To BE-STAIN', v. a. To mark over with stains.
 To BE-STEAD, (-stēd, 120) v. a. To profit; to accommodate.
 To BE-STICK',
I Be-stuck', } v. a. To stick over with.
Be-stuck',
 To BE-STIR', 35: v. a. To put into vigorous action.
 To BE-STORM', 37: v. a. To rage at.
BEST, BESTIAL, BET, BETTER, &c.—See after all the words with the prefix BE-.
BESTOW, bē-stō', 125: v. a. To give, to confer.
Be-stow'-al, s. Disposal.
Be-stow'-er, s. One who bestows; a giver.
Be-stow'-ment, s. The act of giving gratuitously.
 To BE-STRAID', 101: v. a. To bestride.
BE-STRAUGHT', (-strāwt, 162) part. a. Distracted, mad.
 To BE-STREW', (-strō, 110, 109) } v. a. To sprin-
Be-strown', (-strōn, 125) } kle over.
 To BE-STRIDE,
 I Be-strid', } v. a. To place one leg
 Be-stride', (-strōd, 135) } over, so that a leg shall be on each side; to
Be-strid'-den, 114: } cross.
 To BE-STUD', v. a. To adorn with studs.
 To BE-TAKE',
I Be-took', (-tōok, 118) } v. a. To have recourse
Be-ta'-ken, 114: } to; to apply; to move;
 To BE-TEEM', v. a. To produce; to give; to deliver

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Founds: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pū-pā': lāw; grōd; j'ō, i e jew; 55: a, ē, &c. mule, 171.

To BE-THINK', 158:

Be-thought', (-thawt, 125, 162) } v. a. and n. To recall to reflection:—neu. To consider.

To BE-THRAL', (thráwl, 112) v. a. To enslave.

To BE-THUMP', v. a. To beat soundly.

To BE-TIDE', } v. a. and n. To happen to; to port- end:—neu. To come to pass.

BE-TIME', } ad. By the time; seasonably;
soon; early in the day.

To BE-TO'-KEN, 114: v. a. To signify; to foreshew.

To BE-TOSS', (-töss) v. a. To disturb; to agitate.

To BETRAY=bé-trāy', v. a. To give up or dis- close treacherously; to discover that which has been entrusted; to secrecy; to entrup.

Betray'-er, 36: s. He who betrays; a traitor.

To BE-TRIM', v. a. To deck; to dress; to grace.

To B-TROUT', (-tröth) v. a. To contract to any one in order to marriage; to pledge marriage to; to nominate to a bishoprick.

Be-troth'-ment, s. The act of betrothing.

To B-TRUST', v. a. To entrust.

BETWEEN=bé-twēn', prep. In the interme- diate space; from one to another; belonging to two in partnership; bearing relation to two; noting difference of one from the other.

Be-twixt', (-twickst, 154) prep. Between.

To BE-WAIL', 1: v. a. To moan for; to lament.

Be-wail'-able, 101: a. That may be lamented.

Be-wail'-ing, 72: s. Lamentation.

To BE-WARE', v. n. To be wary or cautious of.

⚡ This verb scarcely belongs to the large family with which it is here placed. It is the verb to be, and an adjective joined to it.

To BE-WIL'-DER, (-wíl'-der) v. a. To lose in path- less places; to entangle; to perplex.

To BE-WITCH', v. a. To injure by witchcraft; to charm.

Be-witch'-ing, a. Charming, fascinating.

Be-witch'-er-y, 129, 105: s. Fascination.

Be-witch'-ment, s. The power or act of fascinating.

To BE-WRAY', (-ráy, 157) v. a. To betray; to reveal.

Be-wray'-er, 36: s. A betrayer; a discoverer.

BEVEL, BEVERAGE, BEVY, BEY, &c.—See among the words not compounded with Be—

BEYOND=bé-yönd', prep. and ad. On the far- ther side of; farther onward than; before; above; proceeding to a greater degree than; above in excellence; remote from:—ad. At a distance; yonder.

⚡ The preceding list of words formed with Be, might have been increased by others of higher antiquity; as,
To Be-hight, (to promise,) To Be-swike, (to allure:)
 by many more, which, though ancient, are of obvious composition: as To Be-kiss, To Be-tumble; and by still more of modern arbitrary coinage; as, To Be-madim,
To Be-captain; but the list is presumed to be long enough for any useful purpose.

BECALM, BECAUSE, &c.—See above under
Be-c.

To BECK=béck, v. n. and a. To make a sign with the head:—act. To call by a motion of the head.

Beck, s. A sign with the head; a nod of command.

To BECK'-KON, (béck'-kn, 116) v. n. and a. To make a sign without words:—act. To make a sign to.

Beck'-kon, s. A sign without words.

BECK=béck, s. A small stream.

BEDABBLE, BEDAUB, &c.—See above,
 under Be-p.

BED=béd, s. A couch, or something to sleep on;
bank of earth; a division or plot in a garden; the place where any thing is generated or repositied; the channel of a river; any hollow in which something rests; a layer, a stratum. Bed of justice, was the throne of the kings of France when they went to parliament: To bring to bed, is, to deliver of a child; To make a bed, is, to put it in order.

To Bed, v. a. and n. To place in bed; to make partaker of the bed; to sow or plant; to lay in order; to stratify:—neu. To cohabit.

Bed'-ding, 72: s. The materials of a bed.

Bed'-chamber, (-chám-beér, 111) s. A chamber for a bed.

Bed'-clothes, (-clóthéz, 166, 143: colloq. cló-z')
s. pl. Coverlets spread over a bed.

Bed'-fel-low, (-fél-ló, 125) s. One that lies in the same bed.

Bed'-ma-ker, s. One whose office is to arrange the beds and bed-rooms, particularly at college.

Bed'-moul'-ing, (-móit-ding, 125) s. In archi- ture, the members in the cornice which are below the cornet.

Bed'-pres-ser, 36: s. A fat, lazy fellow.

Bed'-rid, a. Confined to bed by age or sickness.

Bed'-rite, s. The privilege of the marriage-bed.

Bed'-stead, (-stéd, 120) s. The frame that sup- ports a bed.

Bed'-time, s. The hour of rest.

Bed'-ward, 140, 38: ad. Toward bed.

⚡ The meaning of other compounds must be too obvious to render their insertion necessary; such as, Bed'-hang- ings, Bed'-mate, Bed'-post, Bed'-room, &c.

BEDHOUSE=béd'-howse, s. An alms-house, where the poor prayed for their benefactors.

BEDLRY.—See under Beadle.

BEDLAM=béd'-lám, s. The name (corrupted from Beth-lehem) of a religious house in London, converted afterwards into an hospital for the mad; a madhouse.

Bed'-la-mite, s. A madman.

BEDRAGGLE, BEDRENCH, &c.—See above, under Be-d.

BEE=bé, s. The insect that makes honey and wax.

⚡ The word is often compounded; as Be'-brad, (the pollen of flowers,) Be'-eater, (a bird,) Be'-garden,
Be'-hire, Be'-master, (one that keeps bees,) &c.

BEECH=béetch, 63: s. A well known forest tree.

Beech'-en, (béet'-shn, 114) a. Belonging to the beech.

BEEF=béef, s. The flesh of an ox, bull, or cow, prepared for food.

Beef, s. sing. An ox, bull, or cow. [Obs.]

Beeves, 189, 143: s. pl. Oxen, bulls, or cows.

Beef'-ea-ter, 103: s. A yeoman of the guard.

⚡ The word, though popularly of this class, is in fact a corruption of Buffetier, or an attendant at the sideboard; or of Burrier, the keeper of a barette.

Beef'-steak', (-stake, 100) s. A slice of beef for broiling.

BEEN.—See the verb To Be.

BEER=béer, 103, 43: s. Liquor made of malt and hops; fermented liquor imitating beer.

⚡ The word is often compounded; as Beer'-barrel,
Beer'-house.

BEET=béet, s. A herb, of which the root is used in salads.

Beet'-rave, } s. Beet.

Beet'-rad-ish, }

BEETLE, bé'-tl, 101: s. An insect, of which there are several sorts, having hard cases or sheaths under which the wings are folded.

BEETLE, bé'-tl, 101: s. A heavy hammer or mallet.

Beet'-le-stock, s. The handle of a beetle or mallet.

Beet'-le-head-ed, (-héd'-éd, 120) a. Loggerheaded.

To BEET'-LE, v. n. To jut, or hang over. It is said of a cliff whose top impends as a beetle over that which it is about to crush.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants · mish ün, i. e. mission, 165: vñh-ün, i. e. vision, 165: thñ, 166: thén. 166.

Beet'-ling, 72: a. Jutting, prominent.
BRE'-TLE-BROW, 101, 32: s. A prominent brow.
Bee'-tle-browed, (-browd, 114; a. Having over-hanging brows.
BEFAL, &c. BEGET, &c.—See abo s. under BE-F, BE-O.
To BEG=bēg, v. n. and a. To live on alms:—act. To ask; to crave; to entreat for.
Beg'-gar, 34: s. One who lives by begging; one who begs.
Beg'-gar-ly, 105: a. and adv. Mean; poor:—adv. Meanly; poorly.
Beg'-gar-li-ness, s. Meanness; poverty.
Beg'-gar-y, s. Indigence.
To BEG'-GAR, 82: v. a. To reduce to beggary; to exhaust.
BEGIN, &c.—See above, under BE-G.
BEGLERBEG=bēg'-ler-bēg, s. In Turkey, the governor of a province, or Beg (lord) of the B-g's; a Beg being the next inferior magis rate. Beg is often written beg, (100,) correspondently to its Turkish pronunciation.
BEGONE, bē-gōn', 107: interj. Go away! hence! Go See also above, among the words formed with BE-.
BEGUILE, &c. BEHALF, &c.—See above, under BE-O, and BE-N.
BEHEMOTH=bē'-hē-mōth, s. An animal described in Job, supposed to be the river-horse.
BEING.—See under the verb To BE.
BELAMY, &c. BELDAM, &c.—See lower, under Belle.
BELABOUR, &c. BELIEF, &c.—See above, under BE-L.
To BELCH=bēltch, 63: v. n. and a. To eject the wind from the stomach; to emit as by eructation:—act. To throw out from the stomach.
Belch, s. An eructation.
BELGIC=bēl'-gick, a. Appertaining to the Netherlands. Bel'gian, has the same meaning.
BELIAL, bēl'-yāl, 146: s. A personification of wickedness.
BELL=bēll, s. A hollow metal vessel for the purpose of emitting a sound by being struck; any thing in the form of a bell.
Bel'-found-er, s. A caster or maker of bells.
Bel'-man, s. One who sounds a hand-bell as a notice in the streets.
Bel'-met-al, s. A mixture of copper and tin, with which bells are made.
Bel'-ring-er, 72: s. He who rings bells.
Bel'-swag-ger, (-swāg'-guer, 77) s. A cant word for a lewd man.—See To SWAG.
Bel'-weth-er, s. The sheep with a bell that leads the flock.
BEL'-FRY, 105: s. The place where the bells are hung or rung.
BEL'-FLOW-ER, s. The plant campanula.
BELLED, 114: part. a. Bearing bells, as a fowling hawk.
BELLE, bēll, [Fr.] 170: s. A gay young lady.
BEL'-LI-TUDE, s. Beauty; worth. [Obs.]
BEL'-A-MY, 98, 105: s. (Bel-ami.) Good friend; a friend.
BEL'-A-MOUR, (-d-mōor', 133) s. A gallant; a sweetheart.
BEL'-DAM, 12: s. Originally, good-lady, a term of respect to an old woman; hence, an old woman in a plain sense; and hence, an old woman opprobriously; a hag.
BEL'-GARD, 34: s. A tender regard or look.
BEL'-LA-DON'-NA, s. The deadly nightshade; to which the Italian name, fair-lady, has been given, because the Italian women are said to use its juice for a cosmetic.

BELLES-LET'-TRES, (bēl'-lēt'-ter, [Fr.] 170) s. pl. The fine or elegant departments of learning, including especially the oric, poetry, and criticism, with the languages in which the standard works in those departments are written; polite literature.
BELLICOSE, bēl'-lē-cōcē, 105, 152: a. Inclined to war; warlike.
BEL-LIG'-ER-ENT, (-līd'-gēr-ēnt) 87: a. and s. Waging war:—s. A state or nation at war.
Bel-lig'-er-ous, 120: a. Belligerent.
BEL-LIP'-O-TENT a. Powerful in war.
To BELLOW, bēl'-lō, 125: v. n. To make a noise as a bull; to roar; to vociferate.
Bel'-low, s. A roar.
Bel'-low-ing, 72: s. A roaring; a loud noise.
BELLOWS, bēl'-lūs, a. A machine to blow with. Though generally considered a plural, some authors join it to a verb singular; and this will justify the pronunciation; for bellows=bellous=bellus, 120.
BELLUINE=bēl'-lū-inē, a. Beastly; brutal.
BELLY, bēl'-lēy, 105: s. That part of the human body containing the bowels, and reaching from the breast to the thighs; the abdomen; the womb; the correspondent part in brutes; that which requires food; that which swells out; that which encloses. The word is allied to Bulge, which see.
Bel'-ly-ache, (-ākt, 161) s. The cholice.
Bel'-ly-band, s. The girth of a horse in harness.
Bel'-ly-bound, 32: a. Costive.
Bel'-ly-ful, 117: s. As much food as fills the belly; plenty.
Bel'-ly-god, s. A belly worshipper; a glutton.
To BEL'-LY, v. n. and a. To become protuberant:—act. To swell out, to fill.
Bel'-ly-ing, 72: part. a. Swelling out.
BELOMANCY, bēl'-ō-mān'-cēy, 87: s. Divination by arrows.
To BELONG, BELOVED, BELOW, &c.—See above, under BE-L.
BELSWAGGER.—See under Bell.
BELT=bēlt, s. A girdle; that which encompasses.
To Belt, v. a. To encompass as with a belt.
BEMA=bē'-mā, s. A chancel; the stage or rostrum in ancient Athens whence the orators addressed the assembly.
BEMAD, &c. BENEAPED, &c.—See under BE-M, BE-N.
BENCH=bēntch, 63: s. A seat to hold several, a seat of justice; the persons sitting on a bench.
Bench'-er, s. A senior member of a society governing any of the inns of court.
To BEND=bēnd, v. a. and n. To make crooked;
BENT=bēnt, to direct to a certain point; to BENT=bēnt, apply to a certain purpose; to incline; to bow; to subsume:—act. To be incurvated; to lean over; to be submissive.
Bend, s. A curve, or flexure; the crooked timber forming the rib of a ship; a term in heraktry for a kind of belt occupying the shield diagonally, of which the diminutive is bendlet.
Bend'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be bent.
Bēn'-der, 36: s. He that bends; the instrument used.
BENT, s. The state of being curved; declivity; inclination; or propensity; tendency or turn.
Bent, s. A kind of grass; in this sense perhaps allied to Band.
BENEDICTINE, bēn'-lē-dīc'-tīn, 85, 105: a. Pertaining to the order or monks of St. Benedict.
BENE, a Latin adverb, familiar in the phrase, no-ta-bē-ne. Its meaning, well, good, enters into that of all the following words as far as Benton, inclusive.
BENEDICT=bēn'-dīc't, a. Literally, well-spoken

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'; lāw; gōōd; j'wō, i. e. jeu, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 17.

of blessed; appropriately, it is an old physical term signifying mild and salubrious.—See Bene.

BEN'-E-DIC'-TION, s. A blessing; an invocation of happiness, thanks; the form of instituting an abbot.

BENEFAC-TION, bĕn'-ĕ-făk'-shŭn, 85, 89: s. The doing of some good to another, or conferring a benefit; the ben'-fit conferred.—See Bene.

BEN'-e-fac'-tor, 38: s. He that confers a benefit.

BEN'-e-fac'-tress, s. She that confers a benefit.

BENEFIC-ENCE, 92, 105: s. Active goodness.

BENEF-ic-ent, a. Kind; doing good.

BENEF-ic-ent-ly, ad. Kindly.

BENEFICE, BENEFICIAL, &c.—See lower.

BEN'-E-FIT, s. A kindness; advantage; profit; use; benefit-of-clergy, is the exemption of clergymen from criminal process before a secular judge; a privilege that has been abridged and modified.

To BEN'-e-fit, v. a. and n. To do good to:—new. To gain advantage.

BEN'-E-FICE, (-fiss, 105) s. Advantage received; appropriately, an ecclesiastical living.

BEN'-e-ficed, (-fist, 114, 143) part. a. Having a church living.

BEN'-e-fic'-i-ar-y, (-fish'-yăr'-ĕy, 147, 146, 105) a. and s. Holding something subalternately to another:—s. He who holds a benefice; he that is benefited by another.

BEN'-E-FIC'-IAL, (-fish'-'äl, 147) a. Advantageous; helpful; medicinal.

BEN'-e-fic'-i-al-ly, 105: ad. Advantageously.

BEN'-e-fic'-i-al-ness, s. Usefulness.

BENEVOLENCE=bĕ-nĕv'-ô-lĕnce, s. Disposition to do good; the good done; an ancient contribution or tax so called.—See Bene.

BEN'-e-v'-o-lent, a. Kind; having good will.

BEN'-e-v'-o-lent-ly, ad. With kind good will.

BENIGHT, &c. BENUMB, &c.—See above, under BE-n.

BENIGN, bĕ-nĭn', 139, 157: a. Kind; generous; gentle.

BENIGN'-ly, ad. Kindly; favourably.

BE-NIG'-NANT, (-nĭg'-nănt) a. Kind; gracious.

BE-nig'-Nant-ly, ad. Graciously.

BE-nig'-ni-ty, 105: s. Graciousness; goodness.

BENISON, bĕn'-ĕ-zn, 151, 116: s. Benediction.—See Bene.

BENT.—See under Bend.

BENZOIN=bĕn-zoin', 29: s. A resinous juice, commonly called gum benjamin, flowing from a tree in Sumatra, &c.

BEN-ZU'-ic, a. Procured from benzoin; as benzoic acid.

BEPAINT, &c. BEQUEATH, &c. BERATE, &c. See above, under BE-r, BE-q, BE-r.

BERBERRY.—See Barberry under Barb.

BERGAMOT=ber'-gă-môt, s. A sort of pear; an essence or perfume drawn from a fruit produced by ingrafting a lemon-tree on a bergamot-pear stock.

BERGMAS-TER=berg'-mă-s-ter, 111, 36: s. The chief officer of the Derbyshire miners; vulgarly, the Barmaster.

Berg'-mote, s. A court among the Derbyshire miners.

BERRY=ber'-lĭn, a. A sort of chariot.

BERRY, ber'-rĕy, 129: s. Any small fruit containing seeds or stones. The word is often heard as a corruption of barrow, a burying place.

BERTH=berth, 3:1: s. A ship's station at anchor; a room in a ship; a sleeping place.

BERYL=ber'-il, 129: s. A precious stone, mostly green.

BESCATTER, &c.—See above, under BE-s.

BESOM, bĕ'-zŭm, 151, 18: s. A broom made of twigs.

BEST=bĕst, a. and ad. The superlative of good;

most good:—ad. The superlative of well; in the best manner; in the highest degree. To do one's best, (best is here a subst.) is to do to the utmost in one's power.

BESTIAL, &c.—See under Beast.

BESTIR, &c. BESTOW, &c.—See under Bz-s.

BET=bĕt, s. A wager.

To Bet, v. a. To lay a wager.

BET'-tor, 38: s. One who lays a wager.

BETAKE, BETHINK, &c.—See above, under BE-t.

BETEL, bĕ'-tl, 114: s. A sort of pepper-plant.

BETONY, bĕt'-ô-nĕy, s. A vulnerary herb.

BETTER=bĕt'-ter, 36: a. and ad. The comparative of good; superior:—adv. The comparative of well; in a greater degree; more; rather. To be better off, is to be in a better condition.

Bet'-ter, s. A superior.

To Bet'-ter, v. a. To improve; to advance.

BETTY, bĕt'-tĕy, s. An instrument to break open doors.

BEVEL, bĕv'-vl, 114: s. A kind of square used by masons and joiners, moveable on a centre.

To Bev'-el, v. u. To cut to a bevel angle.

BEVERAGE=bĕv'-ĕr-ăg, 99: s. Drink.

BE'-ver, 92, 36: s. A luncheon.

BEVV, bĕv'-ĕy, s. A flock; a company, an assembly.

To BEWARE=bĕ-wăr', v. n. To be aware.

BEWAIL, &c. BEYOND.—See above, under BE-w, BE-v.

BEY=băy, 100: s. A Turkish governor.—See Beçlerbeg.

BEZANT=bĕz'-ănt, s. A coin made at Byzantium.

BEZEL, bĕz'-zl, 114: s. The collet of a ring where it encloses the stone.

BEZOAR=bĕ'-zôrt, 108: s. A stone of supposed antidotal qualities.

BEZ'-o-ar'-dic, 88: a. Pertaining to bezoar.

For words commencing with Be, not found above, see previously the compounds with the prefix BE-.

BI-, A Latin prefix signifying two, or two-fold; and so understood in the following words, where reference is made to it. Bis, is another form of the same prefix.

BIANGULATED, bi-ăng'-gŭ-lă-tĕd, 158: a. Having two corners or angles.

BIANGULOUS, bi-ăng'-gŭ-lŭs, 120: —See BI-.

BIAS=bĭ'-ăss, s. The weight on one side of a bowl, which, in rolling, turns it from the straight line; any thing that turns or inclines a man; partiality; prepossession. In Shakespeare, it is found as an adj. meaning swayed.

To Bi'-ass, v. a. To incline to some side.

Bi'-ass'd, (-ăst, 114, 143) part. a. Prejudiced.

For This is the common spelling, but it should be biased.

To BIB=bĭb, v. n. To tipple; to drink frequently.

Bib'-ber, s. A tippler. Bibbler is the same.

BI-BAL'-CIOS, (bĕ-bă'-sh'ŭs, 147, 120) a. Addicted to drinking.

Bi-bac'-i-ty, (-băss'-ĕ-tĕy, 92) s. The quality of drinking much.

BIB, s. A piece of linen worn by an infant to imbibe its mother's.

BIH'-U-LOUS, 120: a. Absorbing; spongy.

BIBLE, bĭ' bl, 101: s. The Book, distinctively, which is accepted as containing the revelations of God, the one part, or the Old Testament, by Jews and Christians; the other part, or the New Testament, by Christians.

Bib'-li-cal, 92, 105: a. Pertaining to the Bible.

Bib'-li-o-man'-cy, 87: s. Divination by means of the Bible.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mĭsh-ŭn, i. e. mission, 165: vĭzh-ŭn, i. e. vision, 165: thĭn, 166: thĕn. 166.

Bib'-li-og'-ra-phy, (-fēy, 163) s. The art or science of describing books; the knowledge of books descriptively.

Bib'-li-og'-ra-pher, s. One skilled in bibliography.

Bib'-li-o-graph'-i-cal, 81: s. Relating to bibliography.

Bib'-li-o-ma'-ni-a, 85, 90: s. Book-madness, a rage for possessing rare and curious books.

Bib'-li-o-ma'-ni-ac, s. One who has a rage for books.

Bib'-li-ol'-o-ist, 87: s. A bookseller.

Bib'-li-o-pole, s. A bookseller.

Bib'-li-o-the'-ca, Bib'-li-o-theke, s. A library.

Bib'-li-oth'-e-cal, 92: a. Belonging to a library.

Bib'-li-oth'-e-car-y, s. A librarian.

BIBULOUS.—See under Bib.

BICAPSULAR=bi-cāp'-sū-lar, a. Having two capsules containing seeds to each flower.—See Bi.

BICE=bicc, s. A colour for painting blue or green.

BICIPITAL, bi-cip'-ē-tāl, 105: } a. Having BICIPITOUS, bi-cip'-ē-tūs, 120: } two heads: having two origins.—See Bi.

To BICKER=bick'-er, 36: v. n. To skirmish; to quarrel; to contend in petulant altercation; to quiver, or exhibit a tremulous motion.

Bick'-er-ing, a. and s. Quivering:—s. A contention.

BICKERN=bick'-ern, 36: s. An iron with a beak or point.

BICORN=bi'-corn, 38: } a. Having

BICORNOUS, bi-cor'-nūs, 120: } two horns.—See Bi.

BICORPORAL=bi cor'-pō-rāl, a. Having two bodies.—See Bi.

To BID=bid, } n. a. To command; to 1 BADE, bād, 135: } offer; to propose; to invite.

BIDDEN, bid'-dn, 114: } Bidden is often made Bid.

Bid'-der, 36: s. One who bids.

Bid'-ding, 72: s. Command; proposal of price.

To BIDE=bide, v. a. and n. To endure:—n. To dwell; to continue in a state.—See Abide.

Bi'-ding, 72: s. Residence, habitation.

BIDENTAL=bi-dēn'-tāl, a. Having two teeth.—See Bi.

BIDET, bē-dāy', [Fr.] 170: s. A little horse; an article of bed-room furniture.

BIENNIAL, bi-ēn'-nē-āl, a. Continuing two years; happening every two years.—See Bi.

BIER, ber, 103: s. (Allied to the verb Bear.) A carriage or frame to bear the dead.

BIESTINGS, bēst'-ingz, 103, 143: s. pl. The first milk given by a cow after calving.

BIFARIOUS, bi fār'-ē-ūs, 41: a. Twofold.—See Bi.

BIFEROUS, bi-fēr'-ūs, 92: a. Bearing twice a year.—See Bi.

BIFID=bi'-fid, 92: } a. Cleft in two.

BIFIDATED, bi-fīd'-tēd, 92: } —See Bi.

BIFLOROUS, bi-flō'-rūs, 120: a. Having two flowers.—See Bi.

BIFOLD, bi-fōld, 116: a. Two fold.—See Bi.

BIFORM=bi'-fārm, a. Having two forms.—See Bi.

Bi'-form'd, 114: a. Compounded of two forms.

BIFRONTED, bi-frūn'-tēd, 116: a. Having two fronts.—See Bi.

BIFURCATED=bi-fur'-cā-tēd, 2: a. Forked.—See Bi.

Bi'-fur-ca'-tion, 99: s. A shooting out into two heads.

BIG=big, a. Great in bulk; huge; teeming; pregnant; full of something; swollen; great in air and mien, great in spirit.

Big'-ly, 105: ad. Tumidly.

Big'-ness, s. Bulk, size.

Big'-bel-ied, (-līd, 114) a. Pregnant; protuberant.

BIG=big, s. A kind of barley.

BIGAMY, big'-d-mēy, 92: s. The crime of having a plurality of wives; literally, of having two.—See Bi.

Big'-a-mist, s. One that has committed bigamy.

BIGARON=big'-d-rōn, s. The large white heart cherry.

BIGGIN, big'-gwin, 77: s. A child's cap; a cap. The same word, from a different root, also signified a building. It is also used as the name of a can, or small wooden vessel; in which sense its origin is doubtful.

BIGHT, bite, 162: s. A bend; a bay between two points of land; the double part or coil of a rope when folded.

BIGOT=big'-ōt, 18: s. A man unreasonably devoted to a party; a blind zealot.

Big'-ot-ed, a. Irrationally zealous.

Big'-ot-ed-ly, ad. With blind zeal; pertinaciously.

Big'-ot-ry, s. Blind zeal; the practice or tenets of a bigot.

BIJOU, bē-zhōw, [Fr.] 170: s. A jewel; an elegant ornament.

BILANDER=bil'-ān-der, 92: s. A vessel used chiefly in Dutch canals, so called as moving close by land.

BILBERRY, bil'-bēr-rēy, s. Whortleberry.

BILBO=bil'-bō, s. A rapier of Spanish origin.

Bil'-boes, 108, 151: s. A sort of stocks for offenders at sea, originally of Spanish contrivance.

BILE, s. (a Tumor).—See Boil.

BILE=bile, s. A thick, yellow, bitter liquor, separated in the liver, collected in the gall-bladder, and discharged by the common duct.

Bil'-iar-y, (bil'-yār-ēy, 95, 146, 129, 105) a. Belonging to, or serving for the bile.

Bil'-ious, (yūs, 120) a. Consisting of bile; affected by bile.

BILGE, BILLAGE, &c.—See under Bulge.

BILINGSGATE, bil'-ingz-gāte, s. A market in London celebrated for fish and foul language; ribaldry; profane, low speech.

BILINGUOUS, bi-līng'-gwūs, 158, 145: a. Having, or speaking two tongues.—See Bi.

BILK=bilk, v. a. To cheat; to deceive.

BILL=bill, s. The beak of a fowl.

To Bill, v. n. To caress; to fondle.

BILL=bill, s. A hatchet with a hooked point; a sword or battle-axe anciently used by foot soldiers.

Bi'l man, s. He who uses a bill.

BILL=bill, s. A written paper of any kind; an account of money due; an advertisement; in law, a declaration in writing expressing the grievance or wrong the plaintiff has sustained; a proposed law brought into parliament before it has passed into an act. A bill of exchange, is a note ordering the payment of a sum of money in consideration of value received.

Bil'-let-ry, 14: s. A small paper or written note, a ticket directing soldiers at what house to lodge.

To Bil'-let, v. a. To send to quarters; to quarter.

Bil'-let-doux, bil'-yā-dōw, [Fr.] 170: s. A love letter.

37 If the final r be pronounced, it must be with the sound of z; and this will be necessary in a passage of the Rape of the Lock.

BILLET=bi'l'-lēt, s. A small log of wood.—See also under Bill.

BILLIARDS, bil'-yardz, 146, 143: s. pl. A game played with balls and maces or sticks on a large table furnished with pockets.

BILLION, bil'-yōn, 146, 18: s. A million of millions.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gātē-wā: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'ōō, i. e. jew. 55: a, e, i, &c. mute. 171.

BILLOW, bîl'-lô, 125: s. A wave swollen and hollow.
Bi'l-low-y, 105: a. Full of billows; swelling.
BILOBATE=bîl'-lô-bâtz, a. Having two lobes.—
 See Br.
BILOCULAR=bî-lôc'-û-lar, 81: a. Having two cells.—See Br.
BIMEDIAL, bi-mêd'-yâl, 90, 146, 147: a. Belonging to a quantity arising from a particular combination of two other quantities.—See Br.
BIMENSAL, bi-mên'-sâl, a. Occurring once every two months.—See Br.
BIN=bîn, s. A cell or chest for wine, corn, or bread.
BINARY, bî-nâr'-ty, a. Two; dual.—See Br.
Bi'-nate, a. Growing in pairs or couples.
To BIND, bind, 115: } v. a. and n. To con-
I BOUND=bownd, 31: } fine with bonds; to BOUND=bownd, } gird; to fasten to;
BOUNDEN, bownd'-dn, 114: } fasten together; to connect closely; to cover a wound with dressings; to oblige by stipulation or oath; to compel; to oblige by kindness; to confine; to restrain; to make captive; to cover books;—new. To contract its own parts together.—See the relations of the participle under Bound.
Bind'-er, 36: s. A man whose trade is to bind books:
 a man who binds sheaves; any thing used to bind.
Bind'-ing, 72: a. and s. Obligatory:—s. A bandage; the cover of a book.
Bind'-weed, s. The convolvulus which binds or attaches itself.
 ☞ See a continuation of this family of words under Bound.
BINNACLE, bîn'-nd-cl, 101: s. The compassbox of a ship.
BINOCULAR=bî-nôc'-û-lar, a. Having two eyes; employing two eyes at once.—See Br.
Bin'-o-cle, 92, 101: s. A telescope for both eyes.
BINOMINOUS, bî-nôm'-ê-nûs, 81, 92, 105,
 120: a. Having two names.—See Br.
Bi-no'-mi-al, 90, 146, 12: a. and s. In algebra, a root of two parts connected by plus or minus.
BIOGRAPHY, bi-ôg'-râ-fy, 163: s. The art or science of describing the lives of individuals; the history of a life.
B-i-og'-ra-pher, 36: s. A writer of lives.
Bi-ô-graph'-i-cal, 81: a. Relating to biography.
BIPAROUS, bîp'-âr-ûs, 81, 129, 120: a. Bringing forth two at a birth.—See Br.
BIPARTITE=bîp'-ar-tî-tê, 92: a. Having two correspondent parts.—See Br.
Bi-p'-ar-ti'-tion, 85, 89, 95: s. Division into two.
BIPED=bî-pêd, s. An animal with two feet.—
 See Br.
Bi-p'-ed-al, 92: a. Having two feet; two foot long.
BIPENNATED=bî-pên'-nd-têd, a. Having two wings.—See Br.
BIPETALOUS, bi-pêt'-d-lûs, 120: a. Having two petals.—See Br.
BIQUADRATE, bi-kwôd'-râtê, 76, 145, 140:
a. The double square, or fourth power in numbers.—
 See Br.
Bi'-qua-drat'-ic, 85, 88: a. and s. Biquadrate.
BIRCH=bertch, 35, 63: s. and a. A well-known tree.—adj. Made of birch.
Bi'r'-chen, 114: a. Made of birch.
BIRD=berd, 35: s. The generic name of the feathered race, of which fowl was the original Saxon denomination.
 ☞ The word is often compounded; as bird'-cage, bird'- cail, 112, (a whistle), bird'-catcher, bird'-lime, (a glue to catch birds), bird'-nest, &c.
Bird'-bolt, (-bôult, 116) s. A small arrow.
Bird'-eye, (berdz'-te, 143, 106) a. Seen from on high, as by the eye of a bird.
BIRGANDER=ber'-gân-dêr, s. A goose-like fowl.

BIRTH=berth, 35: s. The act of coming into life; family; extraction; rank by descent; the condition in which any man is born; production; the act of bringing forth. In other senses the word should be spelled berth, which see.
Birth'-day, 100: s. Anniversary of one's birth.
Birth'-dom, 18: s. Privilege of birth.
Birth'-right, 115: s. The rights to which one is born.
Birth'-wort, (-wurt, 141) s. A plant
 ☞ The word has other compounds, as birth'-night, birth'-place, birth'-song, birth'-strangled &c., whose meaning must be obvious.
BISCUIT, bis'-kît, 121: s. A kind of hard flat bread; a cake.
To BISECT=bî-sêct', v. a. To divide into two.—
 See Br.
Bi-sêc'-tion, 89: s. Division into two.
Bi-sêg'-ment, s. The half of a bisected quantity.
BISEXOUS, bi-sêcks'-ûs, 154: a. Of both sexes.—
 See Br. Bisec'-u-al (-sêck'-shoo al), is the same.
BISHOP=bish'-ôp, 18: s. Literally, an overseer; appropriately, a dignitary of the christian church presiding over the clergy within a district called his diocese.
Bish'-op-ric, s. A diocese; the rule of a bishop.
Bish'-op, s. Cant name for a drink of wine, oranges, &c.
 ☞ The word is compounded for names to certain plants;
 as Bish'ops-wort, Bish'ops-weed.
BISK=bîsk, s. Soup made by boiling various meats.
BISMUTH, bîz'-mûth, 151: s. A brittle, brilliant, white metal, with a slight tinge of red.
Bi'-muth'-al, 12: a. Consisting of, or containing bismuth.
BISON, bîz'-ôn, 151, 18: s. A kind of wild ox.
BISSEXTILE, bis-sêcks'-tîl, 154, 105: s. Leap year, so called because the addition of a day to February was originally accomplished by doubling the sixth of what were called the calends of the ensuing month.—See Br.
BISSON=bîs'-sôn, 18: a. Blind. [Obs.]
BISTOURY, bis'-tûr-ty, 120, 129, 105: s. A surgeon's instrument for making incisions.
BISTRE, bis'-tur, 159: s. A brown pigment made from soot.
BISULCOUS, bi-sûl'-cûs, 120: a. Cloven-footed.
 —See Br. Bi-sul'-cate, is the same.
BIT.—See under To Bite.
BITCH=bîtch, s. The female of the canine kind.
To BITE=bîte, } v. a. To crush or sever
I BIT=bît, 135: } with the teeth; to give BIT=bît, } pain by cold; to hurt or BITTEN, bî't'-tn, 114: } pain by reproach; to wound; to make the mouth smart; to cheat, to trick.
Rite, s. The seizure of any thing by the teeth; the act of a fish taking the bait; a cheat; a trick; a sharper.
Bi'-ter, s. The person or thing that bites; a tricker.
Bi' ting, a. and s. Sharp, sarcastic:—s. The act of biting.
Bi'-ting-ly, ad. In a sarcastic, jeering manner.
Bit, s. That which is bitten off; a mouthful; a small piece of any thing; a West-India silver coin, value sevenpence halfpenny.
BIT, s. The iron part of the bridle which is put in a horse's mouth, with its appearances.
To Bit, v. a. To put a bit on.
BITS, s. pl. The timbers to which the cable is attached.
Bit'-ter, s. A turn of the cable round the bits.
BITACLE, bî't'-d-cl, 101: s. A binnacle which see.
BITTER=bî't'-ter, a. and s. Having a hot acrid

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mîsh-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

taste like wormwood; sharp; cruel; calamitous; painful; inclement; reproachful;—s. That which is bitter; in the plural, a liquor in which bitter herbs have been steeped.

Bit'-ter-ly, ad. In a bitter manner; sharply.

Bit'-ter-ness, s. A bitter taste; malice; sharpness.

Bit'-ter-ish, 129: a. Somewhat bitter.

Bit'-tern, 36: s. A bitter liquor which drains off in making salt.

BITTERN=bit'-tern, 36: s. A bird with long legs of the heron kind, that feeds on fish.

BITUMEN, bi-tū'-mēn, 86: s. The generic name of mineral substances easily combustible with flame, emitting a strong odour when ignited, and greasy to the touch.

Bi-tu'-mi-nous, 105, 120: a. Containing bitumen.

To Bi-tu'-mi-nate, v. a. To impregnate with bitumen.

Bi-tu'-mi-nif'-er-ous, 85, 87: a. Producing bitumen.

BIVALVE=bi'-välv, 189: a. and s. Having two valves, as the shells of an oyster;—s. That which has two valves.—See Bi.

Bi-val'-vu-lar, 34: a. Bivalve.

BIVIOUS, bi'-vē-ūs, a. Having, or leading, two ways.—See Bi.

BIVOUAC=bi'-voo-äck, 125, 145: s. An armed force in a state of watchfulness during the night.

To Bi'-voo-ac, v. n. To pass the night in a state of watchfulness and readiness for military action.

BIZANTINE=bi'-än-tine, s. A royal gift on certain festival occasions, which consisted of a piece of gold value fifteen pounds.—Compare Bezan.

To BLAB=bläb, v. a. and n. To tell what ought to be kept secret;—new. To tattle; to tell tales.

Blab, or Blab'-ber, s. A tattler; a tattler.

BLACK=bläck, a. and s. Of the colour of night; dark; cloudy of countenance; horrible; wicked; dismal;—s. The colour or effect which arises from the privation or absorption of light; a black man or negro; a particle of soot or black dirt; a stain.

Black'-ing, 72: s. Paste or liquid to blacken shoes.

Black' ish, a. Rather black.

Black' ly, 105: ad. Darkly. atrociously.

Black' ness, s. The state of being black; darkness; atrocity.

To Black, v. a. To blacken.

To Black'-ken, 114: v. a. and n. To make black; to darken; to defame;—new. To grow black.

Black'-ken-er, s. He who blackens.

BLACK'-A-MOOR, 52: s. A negro.

BLACK'-BALL, 112: s. A ball of black colour used in balloting.

To Black'-ball, v. a. To reject by negative votes.

BLACK'-BER-RY, s. The fruit of the bramble.

BLACK'-BIRD, s. A bird well known for its colour and voice.

BLACK'-BOOK, 118: s. The original book of this name is an account of the exchequer and its officers in 1175.

BLACK'-CAT-TLE, 101: s. Bulls, oxen, and cows.

BLACK'-COCK, s. The heath-cock.

BLACK'-FRIAR, s. A friar of the Dominican order.

BLACK'-GUARD, (bläg'-gard, 143) s. A mean, abusive, ill-conducted fellow.

BLACK'-JACK, s. The leathern cup of old times; a mineral otherwise called Blend.

BLACK'-LEG, s. A sheep with diseased legs; a gambler and sharper at race-courses.

BLACK'-MAIL, s. A certain rate paid to men allied to robbers for protection.

BLACK-MON'-DAY, 116: s. The day originally so called was Easter Monday, 34 Edward III., which was dark and fatally inclement.

BLACK'-MOUTHED, (-mouthd, 137, 114) a. Using foul language.

BLACK'-PUU'-DING, (-pöod'-ing, 117) s. Food mass with blood and grain.

BLACK'-ROD', s. The usher belonging to the order of the Garter. He is of the king's chamber, and usher of Parliament.

BLACK'-SMITH, s. A smith that works in iron.

BLACK'-TAIL, s. A fish, also called ruff or lope.

BLACK'-THORN, s. The sloe-tree.

BLADDER=bläd'-der, 36: s. A thin membranous bag serving as the receptacle of some fluid secreted in an animal body, but more particularly the urinary vessel; the same vessel detached from the body; any thing resembling a bladder, puffed or swollen; a blister; a pustule. The word is used in composition as the name of some plants; as Blad'-der-nut, Blad'-der-senna.

Blad'-dered, (-derd, 114) a. Swelled like a bladder.

BLADE=bläd-, s. That which grows broad: the spire of grass; the broad part of a sword as it springs from the handle; hence, that part of any thing which cuts; hence, again, whatever is sharp or shining; a gay dashing fellow in cant language. The blade-bone, or Shoulder blade, is the broad upper bone of the shoulder.

Blä'-ded, a. Having blades or spires.

Blade'-smith, s. A sword cutler.

BLAIN=bläne, 100: s. A pustule, a sore, a blotch.

To BLAME=bläme, v. a. To censure; to charge with fault.

Blame, s. Imputation of fault; fault. To be to blame, is to be blamable.

Blä'-ma-ble, 98, 101: a. Culpable; faulty.

Blä'-ma-bly, 105: ad. Culpably.

Blä'-ma-ble-ness, s. Culpability.

Blame'-ful, 117: a. Culpable, guilty.

Blame'-less, a. Guiltless, innocent.

Blame'-less-ly, 105: ad. Innocently.

Blame'-less-ness, s. Innocence.

Blä'-mer, 36: s. A censurer.

Blame'-wor-thy, (wur-thy, 141) a. Culpable.

To BLANCH=bläncht, 63: v. a. and n. To whiten; to whiten by peeling; to leave blank or pass over, a sense now obsolete;—new. To grow white; to remain blank or empty of information; to evade. Compare To Blanch.

Blanch'-er, 36: s. A whitener.

BLAN-CHIM'-E-TER, 63: s. An instrument for measuring the bleaching power of certain chemical agents.

BLANC-MANGER, (büng-möngzh', [Fr.] 170) s. A confectioned white jelly.

BLANK, (blängk, 158) a. and s. White; free from writing, stain or mark; void; empty; void of rhyme; pale; confused;—s. A void space on paper; a lot drawn which is void of figures or value; the spot which a shot is to hit: Point-blank, the level line between the aim and the object.

Blank'-ly, ad. In a blank manner; with confusion.

To Blank, v. a. To damp; to confuse; to efface, to annul.

BLANK'-ET, s. Soft coarsely-woven cloth of wool, commonly used for bed coverings, but perhaps deriving its name from its earlier use in w'iting or keeping white other substances, as in sugar-refining and printing; unless so called because its colour is whitish though not white. Compare Blouket.

To Blank'-et, v. a. To cover with a blanket; to toss in a blanket.

Blank'-et-ing, s. Cloth for blankets; tossing in a blanket.

BLAND=bländ, a. Soft, mild, gentle.

BLAN-DIL'-O-QUENCK, (-kwēnce, 76, 145) s. Pen and flattering speech.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Foues: gātē'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā'-pā': lāw: gōod: j'ōō. i. e. j'w, 55: a, 4, 5, &c. mut., 171.

To BLAN'-ISH, v. a. To soften; to caress; to flatter.
Blan'-ish-er, s. One that flatters with soft words.
Blan'-ish-ment, s. Act of fondness; expression of tenderness by gesture; kind speech; that which soothes and pleases.

BLANK, BLANKET, &c.—See above under To Blanch.

To BLARE=blāre, v. n. To bellow; to roar.

To BLASPHEME, blās-fēm', 163: v. a. and n.
 To speak impiously of; to speak evil of:—acc. To speak reproachfully of God; to arrogate the prerogatives of God; to curse and swear.

Blas'-phe-mer, 163: s. He that blasphemes.

Blas'-phemy, 81, 105: s. The utterance of opprobrious terms towards or concerning God.

Blas'-phe-mous, 120: a. Impiously irreverent.

Blas'-phe-mous-ly, ad. In a blasphemous manner.

BLAST=blāst, 111: s. Something that rushes and strikes, as a gust or puff of wind; the sound made by blowing a wind instrument; the stroke of a malignant planet; the infection of any thing pestilential; blight.

To Blast, v. a. To strike with some sudden plague; to make to wither; to injure; to make infamous; to confound; to blow up by force of gunpowder.

BLATANT=blā-tānt, a. Bellowing as a beast.

Blat'-er-a'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. Noise.

To BLAT-TER, v. n. To make a senseless noise.

Blat'-ter-er, s. A noisy, blustering boaster.

BLAY=blāy, s. A small fish, the bleak, or white bait.

BLAZE=blāze, s. Flame, or the stream of light and heat from any body when burning, an effect which is owing to the combustion of inflammable gas; that which extends and shines as a blaze, as publication with diffusion of report; a mark resembling a blaze, as a white mark on a horse's face.

To Blaze, v. n. and a. To flame; to be conspicuous:—act. To publish; to blazon; to mark trees for being sold or felled.

To BLA'-ZON, (-zn, 114) v. a. To explain in proper terms the figures on ensigns armorial; to deck; to display; to celebrate; to blaze about.

Blā'-zon-er, s. One who blazons.

Blā'-zon, s. The art of drawing coats of arms; divulgarization; celebration.

Blā'-zon-ry, s. The art of blazoning.

BLEA=blēa, 103: s. The wood just under the bark.

To BLEACH=blēatch, 103, 63: v. a. and n.
 To whiten:—acc. To grow white.

Bleach'-er, s. One whose trade is to whiten cloth.

Bleach'-ing, 72: s. The act or art of making white.

Bleach'-er-y, 129, 105: s. A bleacher's office and grounds.

BLEAK=blēke, a. Pale; [Obs.] cold, chill. As a subs. see Blay.

Bleak'-ish, a. Rather bleak.

Bleak'-ly, 105: ad. Coldly.

Bleak'-ness, s. Coldness, chillness; paleness.

BLEAR=blēre, 43: v. n. Dim with rheum or water; dim.

Bleat'-ed-ness, s. The state of being bleat.

Bleat'-eyed, (-ide, 106) a. Having sore eyes.

To Blear, v. a. To make the eyes dim.

To BLEAT=blēte, 103: v. n. To cry as a sheep.

Bleat, or Bleat'-ing, s. The cry of lambs or sheep.

BLEB=blēb, s. A little tumor, vesicle, or blister.

To BLEED=blēde, v. n. and a. To lose

BLEED=blēd, 135: v. n. and a. To lose blood; to die by violence;

BLEED=blēd, v. n. and a. To be in pain as from a puncture; to drop as blood from incision or pressure; to give out, as blood from the operation of a lancet:—act. To draw blood.

Bleed'-ing, s. A running, or a letting of blood

To BLEMISH=blēm'-ish, v. a. To mark with any deformity; to defame.

Blēm'-ish, s. A mark of deformity; reproach; taint.

To BLEND=blēntch, v. n. To shrink; to start back; to give way. To Blend may be found in the same sense, these verbs being originally the same.

Blend, s. A start. [Shaks.]

To BLEND=blēnd, v. a. and n. To mingle.

Blend, part. a. Blended, mingled. [Obs.]

LENDE=blēnd, s. Sulphuret of zinc.

To BLESS=blēss, v. a. To make happy; to wish happiness to.

Blessed, (blēst, 114, 143) part. Bless'-ed, a. Happy; holy; happy in heaven; having received benediction.

Bles'-sed-ly, ad. Happily.

Bles'-sed-ness, s. Happiness; bliss; divine favour.

Bles'-sing, s. Benediction; divine favour.

BLETONIST=blē-tōn'-ist, s. One who has the faculty of perceiving subterraneous springs by sensation; a faculty first observed in one Bleton, of France.

BLEW.—See To Blow.

BLIGHT, blīt, 115, 162: s. Any thing nipping or blasting.

To Blight, v. a. To corrupt with mildew; to blast.

BLIND, blīnd, 115: a. Wanting the sense of sight; intellectually dark; unseen; private; having but one opening where two might be expected.

Blīnd'-ly, 105: ad. Without sight or understanding.

Blīnd'-ness, s. Want of sight; ignorance.

To Blind, v. a. To make blind; to darken; to darken or obscure to the understanding; to eclipse.

Blīnd, s. Something to obscure the light; something to mislead the eye or the understanding.

To BLIND'-FOLD, (fōld, 116) v. a. To cover the eyes; to hinder from seeing.

Blīnd'-fold, n. Having the eyes covered.

BLIND'-MAN'S-BUFF, 143: s. A play in which one blindfold tries to catch others.

BLIND'-SIDE, s. The weak part of one's character.

To BLINK, blīngk, 158: v. n. and a. To wink; to see obscurely, or with frequent winking:—act. To start from as not choosing to look at closely. Compare To Blench.

Blink, s. A glimpse, a glance.

Blink'-ard, 34: s. One with bad eyes; something twinkling.

BLISS=blīss, s. The enjoyment of entire good; the happiness of heaven; happiness.

Blīss'-ful, 117: a. Purely happy; very happy.

Blīss'-ful'-ly, 105: ad. In a blissful manner.

Blīss'-ful-ness, s. Unalloyed happiness; felicity.

BLISTER=blīs'-ter, 36: s. A pustule; a thin bladder on the skin; a plaster to raise blisters.

To Blis'-ter, v. n. and a. To rise in blisters:—act.

To raise blisters; to apply a blistering plaster.

BLITHE=blīthe, 115: a. Gay, airy, joyous.

Blīthe'-ful, 117: a. Full of gaiety.

Blīthe'-ly, 105: ad. In a blithe manner.

Blīthe'-ness, s. The quality of being blithe.

Blīthe'-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Gay, cheerful.

Blīthe'-some-ness, s. The quality of being blithe-some.

To BLOAT=blōtt, 108: v. a. and n. To swell, or make turgid:—acc. To grow turgid.

Bloat'-ed-ness, s. The state of being turgid or swelled.

BLOBBER=blōb'-ber, s. A bubble; blabber.

Blōb'-ber-lipped, (-līpt, 114, 143) a. Thick-lipped.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīsh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

BLOCK=blöck, s. A heavy piece of timber; a mass of solid matter; the piece of wood on which something is formed; the wood on which criminals are beheaded; an obstruction; a sea-term for a pulley.

Block-head, (-héd, 120) s. A stupid fellow.

Block-ish, a. Stupid, dull. Blocking-course, see S.

Block-ish-ness, s. Stupidity, dullness.

Block-house, s. A fortress to defend a harbour.

Block-tin, s. Pure or unmixed tin.

To Block, v. a. To shut up.

Bloc-kade' s. A siege carried on by shutting up the place.

To Bloc-kade', v. a. To shut up by obstruction.

BLONKET, blöng'-kët, 158: a. Gray. [Spencer.]

BLOOD, blüd, 123: s. The fluid which circulates in the bodies of animals: he that has received his blood from another, a child: family connection; high birth; murder; a man of hot spirit; the juice of any thing.

To Blood, v. a. To stain with blood; to inure to blood; to bleed; to exasperate.

Blood'y, 105: a. Stained with blood; cruel.

Blood'-i-ly, ad. Cruelly.

Blood'-i-ness, s. The state of being bloody; proneness to murder.

Blood'-less, a. Without blood.

Blood'-bot-tered, (-böl-terd, 116, 36, 114) a. Blood-soiled. To Bultter is, to swallow.

Blood'-heat, s. Heat of the same degree as the blood.

Blood'-hound, s. A hound of remarkably acute smell.

Blood'-let-ter, 36: s. A phlebotomist.

Blood'-shed, s. The crime of murder; slaughter.

Blood'-shed-der, s. A murderer.

Blood'-shot, a. Inflamed by turgidness of the blood-vessels.

Blood'-stained, 114: a. Stained with blood; guilty of murder.

Blood'-stone, s. An amulet to prevent bleeding at the nose.

Blood'-suck-er, s. Any animal that sucks blood; a murderer.

Blood'-thirsty, 36, 105: a. Murderous.

Blood'-ves-sel, s. A vessel in which blood circulates.

Blood'-y-flux', 154: s. The dysentery.

Blood'-y-mind-ed, 115: a. Disposed to murder; cruel.

Blood'-y-sweat', (-swët, 120) s. The sweating-sickness.

☞ The word is also compounded for the names of some animals and natural substances, as blood'-snake, blood'-flower, blood'-wood, blood'-wort.

BLOOM=blööm, s. Blossom; the state of any thing ripening; the blue colour on plums and grapes newly gathered.

Bloom'y, 105: a. Full of blooms.

To Bloom, v. n. and a. To yield blossoms, to flower; to be in a state of flourishing youth:—act. To put forth.

Bloom'-ing, a. Flourishing with bloom. youthful.

Bloom'-ing-ly, ad. In a blooming manner.

Blos'-som, 18: s. The flower or coral of a plant.

Blos'-som-y, 105: a. Full of blossoms.

To Blos'-som, v. n. To put forth blossoms.

Blos'-soming, u. and s. Blowing:—s. The flowering of plants.

To Blow, blö, 125: v. n. and a. To bloom:—act. [Obs.] To cause to blossom.

Blowth, s. Blossom or blossom. [Obs.]

Blow, s. A blossoming.

BLORE.—See below under the verb, To Blow.

To BLOT=blöt, v. a. To obliterate by a dark spot; to efface, to erase; to make black spots on; to disgrace; to darken.

Blot'-ting-pa-per, s. Soft paper to absorb or dry ink.

Blot, s. A spot or stain; an obliteration; a blur: a spot in reputation.

BLOTCH=blöch, s. A large pustule or spot.

Blotch'-y, a. Having blotches.

To Blotch, v. a. To blacken; to mark with blotches.

To BLOTE=blöte, v. a. To dry by smoke.

BLOW, blö, 125: s. A stroke; the stroke of death; a sudden calamity; the act of a fly by which she lodges eggs in flesh.

To Blow, v. a. To infect with the eggs of flies: to blow upon, to make stale.

Blow'-en, s. A common prostitute; also, Blow'-ess.

To BLOW, blö', 125: } v. n. and a. To make

BLEW, blöw, 110, 109: } a current of air; to

BLOWN, blöng, 125: } pant; to breathe; to blow over, to pass away without effect; to blow up, to fly into the air by force of gunpowder (See other senses under Bloom above):—act. To drive by the wind; to inflate with wind; to swell; to form into shape by the breath; to sound wind music; to warm with the breath; to blow out, to extinguish by wind; to blow up, to raise or swell by breath, to inflate, to burst with gunpowder, to kindle. See also above the verb under the substantive Blow.

Blow'-er, 36: s. One who blows.

Blow'-ing, s. Motion of the wind; act of blowing.

Blowr, s. The act of blowing; a blast. [Obs.]

Blow'-pipe, s. A tube used by various artificers.

BLOWZE=blöwz, 31: s. A ruddy fat-faced wench; a female whose hair is in disorder. Compare Bloom, Blossom, To Blow, &c., and Blush.

Blow'-zy, 105: a. Sun-burnt, high-coloured.

BLUBBER=blüb'-ber, a. A bubble; something swelled, like a bubble; the fat of a whale.

To Blub'-ber, v. n. and a. To weep in such a manner as to swell the cheeks:—act. To swell with weeping.

BLUDGEON=blüdge'-ön, 18: s. A short stick, heavy at one end for offensive use.

BLUE, blöw, 110, 109: a. and s. One of the seven original colours.

Blu'-ish, a. Rather blue.

Blue'-ly, 105: ad. With a blue colour.

Blue'-ness, s. The quality of being blue.

BLUE'-BOT-TLE, 101: s. A flower; a large fly with a blue belly.

☞ The word is compounded with many other words, as Blue'-eyed, Blue'-crined, &c. Blue'-cap is a fish so called; Blue'-throat, a bird; and Blue'-john, a mineral.

BLUFF=bluf, 115: a. Big, surly, blustering.

Bluff'-ness, s. The quality of being bluff.

BLUFF, s. A high steep bank projecting into the sea; something steep and sudden.

To BLUNDER=blünd'-der, 36: v. n. and a. To mistake grossly; to flounder, to stumble:—act. To confound as things of like kind.

Blund'-der, s. A gross mistake.

Blund'-der-er, 129: s. One who blunders.

Blund'-der-head, (-hëd, 120) s. A blockhead.

Blund'-der-ing-ly, ad. In a blundering manner.

BLUND'-DER-BUSS, s. A gun that may be fired blunderingly, and yet do execution, being one of large bore to carry many bullets.

BLUNT=blunt, a. Dull on the edge or point: dull in understanding; rough, not civil; abrupt, not elegant.

Blunt'-ly, 105: ad. Without sharpness; coarsely.

Blunt'-ness, s. Want of edge or point; coarseness.

Blunt'-wit-ted, a. Dull, stupid.

To Blunt, v. a. To dull the edge or point; to repress

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chā'v'-mān: pā'-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'wō, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. note, 171.

BLUR=blur, 39: s. A blot; a stain.

To Blur, v. a. To blot, to stain.

To BLURT=blurt, v. a. To utter suddenly and inadvertently.

To BLUSH=blush, v. n. To redder in the cheeks or face; to redder with shame or confusion.

Blush, s. The red in the cheeks raised by shame or confusion; a red or purple colour; sudden appearance or glance.

Blush'-ing, s. The exhibiting of blushes.

Blush'-ful, 117: a. Full of blushes.

Blush'-less, a. Without a blush.

Blush'-y, 105: a. Having the colour of a blush.

To BLUSTER=bluster, 36: v. a. To roar as a storm; to bully.

Blus'-ter, s. Roar, tumult; boast; boisterousness.

Blus'-ter-er, s. A swaggerer; a bully.

Blus'-ter-ing, 72: s. Tumult, noise.

BO! bō, interj. A word used to terrify.

BOA=bō-d, s. The boa-constrictor, a large striped serpent; a fur tippet resembling a boa.

BOAR=ho-ar, 34=bōre, 134: s. The male swine.

Boar'-ish, s. Swinish, brutal.

Boar'-spear, s. A spear used in boar-hunting.

BOARD=bō-ard, 34=bōrd, 134: s. A piece of wood of more breadth and length than thickness; a table; the deck of a ship: from table it comes to signify what is taken at table, food, entertainment; also, the persons assembled round a table, a council, a court of jurisdiction.

To BOARD, v. a. To lay or spread with boards; to enter by force on the deck of a ship.

Board'-er, s. One who boards a ship in action.

To BOARD, v. n. and a. To live in a house at a certain rate for the board or table:—act. To place at board, that is, to place for food at another's board or table.

Board'-er, s. One who boards in a house.

Board'-ing-school, (-skool, 161) s. A school in which the scholars are boarders.

Board-wa'-ges, 151: s. pl. Wages with which a servant must provide his own board.

To Board, properly, To Abord, v. a. To accost. But this word is not a legitimate member of this family.

BOUR'-LAND, (-bōard-lānd, 130) s. In old law, the demesnes which a lord kept in his hands for the maintenance of his table.

To BOAST=bōast, 108: v. n. and a. To brag, to talk ostentatiously; to exalt one's self:—act. To brag of; to magnify; to exalt.

Boast, s. An expression of ostentation; a cause of boasting.

Boast'-er, 36: s. A bragger.

Boast'-ful, 117: a. Ostentatious.

Boast'-ing, a. and s. Bragging:—s. Bragging speech.

Boast'-ing-ly, ad. Ostentatiously.

Boast'-less, a. Without ostentation.

BOAT=bōat, 108: s. A small open vessel; a ship of inferior size.

Boat'-hook, 118: s. A hook used by boatmen.

Boat'-man, s. He that manages a boat.

Boat'-swain, (collog. Bō'-sn, 167) s. An officer on board ship who has charge of the boats, sails, &c., and has to summon the crew by his whistle.

BOB=bōb, s. Something of a small size; something curtailed; something that plays loosely at the end of a string; the ball of a short pendulum; an ear-ring; words in a song that come again and again, as the swings of a pendulum; a coarse or set of changes in bell-ringing; a worm used in angling; a wig of short cut or make; a sharp slight blow; a jest or jeer.

To Bob, v. a. and n. To clip; to strike as by a regular mechanical motion; to get by bobbing, that is, by a bait or cheating:—neu. To play backward and forward; to bait or angle for.

Bob'-cher-ry, 129, 105: s. A play among children in which the cherry is hung so as to bob against the mouth.

Bob'-tail, s. A tail cut or short; the rabble.

Bob'-wig, s. A wig of short hair.

Bob'-stays, 151: s. pl. The short ropes of the bowsprit.

BOBBINS, bōb-bīnz, 113: s. pl. Little pins of wood with a notch, on which thread, &c. is wound.

Bob'-bin, s. Round tape.

BOCKLAND.—See under Book.

To BODE=bōde, v. a. and n. To portend:—neu. To be an omen.

Bode'-ment, s. Portent, omen.

Bō'-ding, 72: s. An omen.

To BODGE=bōdge, v. n. To bungle or make a botch in any procedure. Compare To Botch.

Bodge, s. A botch.

BODICE.—See below, under Body.

BODKIN=bōd-kīn, s. An instrument to bore holes; an instrument to draw thread through a loop; an instrument to dress the hair; formerly, a dagger.

BODILEAN=bōd'-lēy-ān, a. Founded by Bodley.

BODY, bōd'-lēy, 105: s. The frame of an animal whether living or dead, and therefore considered distinct from the principle of life; the material part of man in contradistinction to the part considered immaterial; (Sic Soul;) a person; a corporation; a collective mass; the main army; the main part; the bulk; strength; substance; any solid figure.

Bod'-i-ly, 105: a. and ad. Corporeal; relating to the body; real, actual:—ad. Corporeally.

Bod'-i-li-ness, s. Corporeality.

Bod'-i-less, a. Incorporeal.

Bod'-y-guard, s. The guard that protects the person.

Bod'-ice, (-iss, 105) s. Stays; a waistcoat.

BOG=bōg, s. A marsh, a morass.

Bog'-gy, (-guēy, 77) a. Marshy, swampy.

To Bog, v. a. To whelm as in mud or mire.

Bog'-house, s. A house of office.

Bog'-trot-ter, s. One who lives in a boggy country.

Ob. The word is compounded for the names of several plants; as Bog'-bean, Bog'-berry, Bog'-rush, Bog'-wort, &c.

BOGGLE, or BOGGLE, bō'-gl, būg'-gl, 101: s. A bugbear; a spectre.

To Bōg'-gl, v. n. To start; to hesitate; to dissemble.

Bog'-gler, 36: s. A doubter, a stumbler, a timorous man.

BOHEA=bō-hēc', 103: s. An inferior black tea.

BOIL=bōil, 29: s. A sore angry tumor terminating in a pustule.

BEAL, 3: s. A boil; a pimple. [Obs.]

To Beal, v. n. To gather matter; to come to a head.

BILE, 5: s. A boil. [Obs.]

To BOIL=bōil, 29: v. n. and a. To be in that state in which a liquid passes more or less rapidly with a bubbling motion into vapour; to be agitated by heat, or as by heat; to be hot or fervid; to be in boiling water in order to be cooked, or for other purpose:—act. To heat to a boiling state; to put into boiling water; to cook by boiling.

Boil'-er, s. He that boils; the vessel used for boiling.

Boil'-er-y, s. A place where salt is boiled.

Boiling, a. and s. Agitated with heat:—s. Ebullition.

BOISTEROUS, bois'-tēr-ūs, 129, 120: a.

Rearing, stormy; turbulent, violent.

Bois'-ter-ous-ly, 105: ad. Violently, tumultuously.

Bois'-ter-ous-ness, s. Turbulence.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166:

BOLARY.—See under Bole.

BOLD, bōld, 116: n. Daring, brave; executed with spirit; confident; impudent; striking to the sight. Bold'-ly, ad. In a bold manner.

Bold'-ness, s. Courage; exemption from caution; confident trust, assurance; impudence.

To Bol'-den, 114: v. a. To make bold, to embolden.

BOLE=bōle, s. The stem of a tree; a six-bushel measure.

BOLE=bōle, s. A friable clayey earth, of which one kind, Bole-Armenic, or Armenian Bole, is much used as a drug.

Bo'-lar-y, 105: a. Partaking of the nature of bole.

BOLIS=bō'-lis, s. That which darts; a plummet; a meteor.

-BOL-. Y. A termination in nouns of Greek origin, signifying a casting or throwing.

BOLL, bōle, 116: s. The pod or capsule of a plant.

To Boll, v. n. To form into a seed vessel.

BOLSTER, bōl'-ster, 116, 36: s. A round long pillow; a pad; a compress for a fracture.

To Bol'-ster, v. a. To support with a bolster or pad; to support; to swell out.

Bol'-ster-ing, s. A propping up, or supporting.

BOLT, bōlt, 7, 116: s. That which is thrown or cast, an arrow or dart; that which is thrust forward, or is straight, like a dart, the bar or pin of a door; that by which a substance is driven or cast out, a sieve; and from the second sense comes a fourth, that which fastens a fetter.

To Bolt, v. a. and n. To fasten with a bolt; to blurt out or utter precipitately; to swallow without chewing; to sift; to examine; to fether;—acc. To spring out with speed and suddenness.

Bolt'-er, s. A sieve to separate meal from bran. Supp.

Bolt'-ing-cloth, s. Cloth of which bolters are made.

Bolt'-ing-house, s. The place where meal is sifted.

Bolt'-ing-hutch, s. A tub for bolting flour.

Bolt'-head, 120: s. A long straight-necked glass vessel.

Bolt'-rope, s. A rope serving as a rod at the edge of a sail.

BOLUS=bō'-lūs, s. A large pill; a pill.

BOMB, būm, 116, 156: s. A hollow iron ball or shell filled with gunpowder, to be thrown out from a mortar.

Bomb'-ketch, or Bomb'-ves-sel, s. A strongly built ship for the purpose of firing bombs.

Bom'-bard, 34: s. A great gun formerly used.

To Bom'-bard, v. a. To attack with bombs.

Bom'-bard'-ment, s. An attack with bombs.

Bom'-BA-DIER, (hūm'-bd-dēer', 103) s. A non-commissioned officer employed on mortar and howitzer duty.

BOMBASIN, būm-bd-zēen', 116, 98, 151, 115: s. A stuff composed of silk and worsted.

BOMBAST, būm-bāst', 116, 111: s. and a. Originally, a stuff of soft loose texture used to swell garments; fustian; big, high-sounding, senseless language;—a. Bombastic.

Bom-bas'-tic, a. Of great sound and little meaning.

BOMBILATION, būm-bē-lā'-shūn, 116, 85, 89: s. Sound, noise.

→ Of the same origin with Bomb.

BOMBYX, bōm'-bicks, 154: s. The silk-worm.

Bom'-bic, a. Pertaining to the silk-worm.

Bom-byd'-i-nous, (bōm-biss'-ē-nūs, 105, 120) a. Silken; of the colour of the silk worm.

BONA-FIDE. BONAIR. BONA-ROBA, &c. —See under Bonity.

BONASSUS=bō-nās'-sūs, s. A kind of buffalo.

BOND=bōnd, s. and a. Any thing that binds, a band, ligament, cord, rope, chain; a writing of obligation to pay a sum, or perform a contract; an obligation; in the plural, it signifies imprisonment;—a. Bond.

Bond'-ed, part. a. That lies under bond to pay duty.

Bon'-dage, 59: s. Slavery; imprisonment; villenage.

Bond'-maid, s. A young female slave.

Bond'-man, s. A man-slave.

Bonds'-man, 143: s. A person giving security for another.

Bond'-ser-vice, (-viss, 105) s. Slavery.

BONE=bōne, s. One of the hard, dry parts which form the frame of an animal body; a bone with some flesh adhering to it; something made of bone, as bobbin, dice, &c.

To Bone, v. a. To take bones out, as from meat in cookery; to put bones in, as whale-bone into stays.

Boned, 114: a. Having large bones.

Bon'-ny, a. Consisting of bones; large boned.

Bone'-less, a. Without bones.

To Bone'-set, v. n. To set or reduce a broken bone.

Bone'-set-ter, 36: s. He who sets bones.

BONE'-LACE, s. A lace woven with bone-bobbins.

BONITY, bōn'-ē-tēy, 105: s. Goodness. [Obs.]

Bon'-i-fy, (bōn'-ē-fy, 6) v. a. To convert into good. [Obs.]

Bo'-NUM-MAG'-NUM, s. Good and great, the name of a plum.

Bo'-NUS, s. A boon, a premium in addition to interest for a loan.

BOON, 27: s. A gift, a grant, a present, a favour granted.

Boon, a. Gay, merry, kind, bountiful.

BON'-NY, (bōn'-nēy) a. Handsome, plump, blithe.

Bon'-ni-ly, 105: ad. Gayly, handsomely.

Bon'-ni-ness, s. Gayety, handsomeness, plumpness.

BON'-AIR, a. Complaisant, yielding. [Obs.]

BON'-VIRE, s. A large fire on festival occasions.

BON'-GRACE, (būn'-grāss, [Fr.] 170) s. A covering for the forehead.

BON'-MOT, (bōang-mō', [Fr.] 170) s. A witty repartee.

BON'-TON, (bōang-tōang', [Fr.] 170) s. High mode or fashion.

Bo'-NA-RI'-DE, (-fī'-dēy, 101) a. and ad. Meant sincerely;—ad. Sincerely. [A Latin phrase.]

Bo'-NA-RO'-BA, 98: s. Good to the value of her gown, an old name for a gay-dressed courtesan. [Ital.]

BONNET, bōn'-nēt, 14: s. A woman's hat; a small work in fortification; a sail attached to another.

BONNYCLABBER, bōn'-nēy-clāb'-ber, s. Sour buttermilk.

BONZE=bōnz, s. A Japanese or Chinese priest.

BOOBY, bōo'-bēy, s. A dull, stupid fellow; a bird.

BOOK, bōok, 118: s. An aggregate of paper leaves bound together in which we read or write; a volume, the literary contents of a book; a division of the contents.

Book'-ful, a. Full of notions gleaned from books.

Book'-ish, a. Given to reading.

Book'-ish-ness, s. Addiction to books.

Book'-less, a. Without books; unlearned.

To Book, v. a. To register in a book.

BOOK'-AC-COUNT, s. A register of debt or credit.

BOOK'-BIN-DEB, (-bīn'-der, 115) s. He whose trade is to bind books.

Book'-bind-ing, s. The trade of a bookbinder.

BOOK'-KEE-PER, s. The manager of a book of accounts.

Book'-keep-ing, s. The art of keeping accounts.

BOOK'-LAND, or BOCK'-LAND, s. A possession or

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Notes: gātē-wāy: chāp'-mān: pī-pā: lāw: gōod: j'wō, i. e. j'wō, 55: a, e, i, &c. mut., 171.

inheritance held by evidence in writing; free socage land.

BOOK'-LEARN-ING, (-lern-ing, 131) s. Learning acquired from books, as opposed to that which arises from experience and intercourse with men.

BOOK'-MAN, s. A scholar by profession.

BOOK'-MATE, s. A schoolfellow.

BOOK'-OATH, s. An oath taken on the book or bible.

BOOK'-SEL-LER, s. He whose profession is to sell books.

BOOK'-WORM, (-wurm, 141) s. A mite that eats holes in books; an intense but mere student.

BOOM=bōom, s. A name given to a tree or heavy beam, from the sound of the wind rushing through or across it; the long pole used to spread out the clue of the studding-sail; a pole with bushes or baskets set up in a shallow; a bar laid across a harbour.

To Boom, v. n. To rush with violence, as a ship under press of sail; to make a noise like the bittorn.

BOON.—See under Bonity.

BOOR=bōor, 51: s. A peasant, a clown, a lout.

Boor'-ish, a. Clownish, rustic, untaught, uncivilized.

Boor'-ish-ly, 105: ad. In a boorish manner.

Boor'-ish-ness, s. Clownishness, rusticity, coarseness.

BOOSE, bōoz, 151: s. A stall for a cow or ox. [Little used.]—See To Bouz (to drink), &c., hereafter.

To BOOT=bōot, v. a. To profit, to advantage, to enrich.

Boot, s. Profit; gain. To boot, ad. Over and above.

Boot'-less, a. Unavailing; without profit.

Boot'-less-ly, ad. Without use or profit.

BOTE, s. Compensation. [An old law term.]

BOOT=bōot, s. A shoe of which the leather or other material is continued, so as to cover the leg or a part of it; a leathern receptacle, or that used to be of leather, as the boot of a coach.

To Boot, v. a. To put on boots.

Boot'-catch-er, or Boots, s. The servant at an inn who pulls off and cleans the boots of travellers.

Boot'-hose, (-hōze, 151) s. Stockings to wear with boots.

Boot'-jack, s. A stock for pulling off boots.

Boot'-tree, s. A last for stretching boots.

BOOTH=bōoth, s. A house or shelter built of slight materials for a temporary purpose.

BOOTY, bōot'-tēy, s. Spoil taken in war; plunder; intentional loss at gaming as a decoy.

BOPEEP=bō'-pēp, s. A play to amuse children, of peeping from behind something, and crying bo!

BORACHIO, bō-rāch'-ō, 61: s. A bottle or cask; a drunkard.

BORAX, bōr-ācks, 47, 154: s. A genus of salts found in Japan, Chili, and Peru. They are slightly caustic, rather ponderous, semi-transparent, and melt into a transparent glass.

Bo-rac'-ic, (bō-rāss'-ic, 59) 88: a. Pertaining to, or produced from borax. Boracic acid is a compound of a base, Boron, with oxygen.

Bo'-ra-cous, (bōr'-d-cūs) a. Popularly, the same as Boracic, but, strictly, Boracous acid is an acid with a determinate less proportion of oxygen than Boracic acid.

Bo'-rate, s. A salt formed by a combination of boracic acid with any base saturated.

Bo'-ra-cite, s. Borate of magnesia.

Bo'-ron, s. The undecomposed base of boracic acid.

BORDEL=bor'-dēl, s. A brothel.

BORDER=bāwr'-der, 37, 36: s. The outer part or edge; the confine or exterior limit of a country or place; the edge of a walk or bed in a garden by some means distinguished.

To Bor'-der, v. n. and a. To confine upon; to approach nearly to:—act. To adorn with a border; to reach to; to keep within bounds.

Bor'-der-er, 129: s. He that dwells on the borders; he that approaches near.

BOR'-DURE, (-dūre, 147) s. A border in heraldry.

To BORE, bōre, 47: v. a. and n. To pierce, to make a hole in, to perforate; to eat out, or make a hollow in, by gnawing or corroding, as a worm; to annoy by reiterated petty acts.—new. To pierce or enter by boring; to be pierced.

Bo'-rer, s. One who bores; the instrument used.

Bore, s. The hole made by boring; the size, diameter, or circumference of any hole; the instrument used in boring; a person or thing that annoys by irritation.

BORE.—See the verb To Bear, and under it.

BOREAS=bōr'-ē-ās, 47: s. The north wind.

Bo'-re-al, a. Northern.

BOREE=bōr'-ēy, s. A figure in dancing.

BORN, BORNE.—See under To Bear

BORON.—See under Borax.

BOROUGH, būr'-ō, 116, 129, 125, 162: s. A corporate town which is not a city, the latter being a town which is or has been the see of a bishop; that is also a borough which sends burgesses to parliament, whether a corporate town or not. In Saxon times, a borough was an association of men who were free pledges to the king for the good behaviour of each other, and to have offenders in their district forthcoming. Ten so associated were a Tithing, and the presiding man the Tithing man, Head-borough, or Hors-holder (i. e. Borough's-elder). The society was also called Frithurg, and Frank pledge; and ten Tithings formed a Hundred; a name still retained by the districts comprehended.

Boi'-ough-ENG'-lish, (-īng'-glīsh, 113) s. A custom in some ancient English boroughs, that estates shall descend to the youngest son, or younger brother.

To BORROW, bōr'-rō, 129, 125: v. a. To take from another for a time on credit; to use as one's own though not belonging to one; in an obsolete sense, to relieve, to redeem.

Bor'-row, s. A borrowing. [Obs.]

Bor'-row-er, 36: s. One who borrows.

BOSCAGE=bōs'-cāge, 99: s. Wood, or woodland.

Bos'-ky, 105: a. Woody. [Shaks.]

Bos'-ket, s. A little wood; an artificial grove.

BOSOM, bōoz'-ūm, 107, 18: s. The breast, as the enclosure of the heart, and the seat of tenderness, or of the passions; the female breasts; the folds of the dress that cover the breast; any receptacle tender close, or secret; embrace, as with the arms; in composition, intimate, confidential, as, a bosom friend.

To Bos'-om, v. a. To enclose in the bosom; to keep with care; to hide or cherish as in the bosom.

BOSON, bō'-an, 114: s. A Boatswain, which see.

BOSS=bōss, s. A prominence or protuberance of any kind, and hence a stud, or knob.

Bossed, (bōst, 114) part. a. Studded.

Bos'-sy, 105: a. Prominent; studded.

Bos'-sive, 105: a. Deformed by humps.

Bos'-sage, 99: s. A stone in a building which has a projection, and is laid rough in order to be carved also rustic work consisting of stones that advance beyond the level of the building.

BOSVEL, bōz'-vēl, 151: s. A species of crowfoot.

BOTANY, bōt'-d-nēy, 105: s. That branch of natural history which treats of the structure, functions, properties, habits, and arrangement of plants.

Bo-tan'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to botany; con

Bo-tan'-i-cal, } taining plants.

Bo-tan'-i-cal-ly, ad. According to the system of botany.

To Bot'-a-nize, v. n. To study plants.

Bot'-a-nist, s. One skilled in botany.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound

Consonants. mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vish-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: shūn 166: then, 166

Bot'-a-nol'-o-gy, 85, 87; s. A discourse on plants.
Bot'-a-no-man'-cy, 87, 85; s. Divination by plants.
BOUCH=bôch, s. A swelling, or eruptive discoloration of the skin; a part in any work ill finished; an adscititious part clumsily added.
Botch'-y, 105; a. Marked with botches.
To Botch, v. a. To mend or patch awkwardly; to put together unsuitably; to mark with botches.
Botch'-er, s. A mender of old clothes; an awkward mender.
BOU.—See under To Boot.
BOTH, bôth, 116; a. and pron. and conj. The one and the other. As a conj. it signifies, (On the one side, And or Also responding in a subsequent member, and signifying, (On the other side.
To BOTHER=bôth'-er, v. a. To perplex, to tease.
To BOTHER=bôth'-er, v. a. To perplex, to tease.
BOTRYOID, bôt'-rê-oid, a. Having the form of a bunch of grapes.
BOTS=bôts, s. pl. Small worms in the entrails of horses.
BOTTLE, bôt'-tl, 101; s. A vessel originally of leather, but now in general of glass, with a narrow neck, to preserve wine or other liquor; the quantity of liquor contained in a bottle; a quantity of hay or grass closely bundled up. This last sense is also expressed by Bottle when the material rolled together is thread, or of the nature of the thread.
To Bottle, v. a. To enclose in bottles.
Bot'-tled, 114; part. a. Preserved in bottles; hunched like a bottle.
Bot'-tling, s. The act of putting into bottles and corking.
BOTTOM=bôt'-tôm, 18; s. The lowest part of any thing; the ground under water; the foundation; the extremity of the trunk of animals; a dale or valley; a ship; the deepest part; stamina, native strength; a ball of thread; for which last sense, however, compare Bottle.
To Bot'-tom, v. a. and n. To found or build upon; to furnish with a seat or bottom; to make a ball of, as by winding thread round and round;—accu. To rest upon for ultimate support.
Bot'-tom-less, a. Unfathomable.
Bot'-tom-ry, s. The act of borrowing money on a ship's bottom, signifying the ship itself.
BOUD=bowd, s. An insect that breeds in malt.
BOUDOIR, boo-dwôr', [Fr.] 170; s. A small private apartment.
To BOUGE, bôgc, 127, 64; v. n. To bulge, which see. [Little used.]
To This word may also be found as a corruption of the French substantive Bouche.
BOUGH, bow, 31, 162; s. An arm or large shoot of a tree.
To This word is allied to Bight, which see.
Bought, (bowt), s. A flexure, a twist, a knot. It is sometimes written Bout, as in Milton's Allegro, near the end. [Obs.]
Bough'-ty, 105; a. Bending. [Obs.]
BOUGHT, bôwt, 126, 162; part.—See To Buy.
BOUGIE, bôc'-zhê, [Fr.] 170; s. A wax-taper; a waxed slip of linen or of other material used in surgery.
BOUILLON, bôw'-yông, [Fr.] 170; s. Broth; soup.
Bowl'-li, (bôw'-yê), s. Meat stewed with vegetables.
To BOUNCE=bownce, v. n. To leap spring, or rush suddenly; to hit against so as to rebound; familiarly, to boast or lie.
Bounce, s. The rebound of a sudden blow; a boast.

Boun'-cer, 36; s. A boaster; a liar.
BOUND=bownd, 31; part. of To Bind, which see.
BOUND, s. That which binds in or limits; that by which any excursion is restrained; a boundary.
To Bound, v. a. To limit, to restrain.
Bound, a. Destined, tending, going, intending to go. This application of the word is taken either from the orders given for the government of the voyage implying obligation, or from the notion of stretching or tending included in the general sense of the participle.
Boun'-dên, a. Limited, appointed; beholden to.
Boun'-less, a. Unlimited.
Boun'-less-ness, s. The quality of being unlimited.
BOUN'-DA-RY, 98, 105; s. A limit or bound; the mark of a limit.
BOUND-BAILIFF, s. An officer appointed by a sheriff, and under bond to act faithfully.
To BOUND=bownd, 31; v. n. and a. To jump, to rebound;—act. To make to bound.
Bound, s. A leap, a spring, a rebound.
Bound-stone, or Bound-ing stone, s. A stone to play with.
BOUNTY, bown' tÿ, 31, 105; s. Generosity, liberality, munificence; a present or gift; a premium given by government for the exportation of home manufactures, &c.; money given to men who enlist. Queen Ann's Bounty, is the provision made in her reign for the augmentation of poor living.
Boun'-te-ous, (boun'-tê-üs, or boun'-yüs, 146; colloq. bount'-chê-üs, 147) a. Liberal, kind.
Boun'-te-ous-ly, ad. Liberally, generously.
Boun'-te-ous-ness, s. Munificence, liberality.
Boun'-ti-ful, 117; a. Liberal, generous, magnificent.
Boun'-ti-ful-ly, ad. Liberally, generously.
Boun'-ti-ful-ness, s. The quality of being bountiful.
Boun'-ti-ful-ty, 120, or Boun'-ti-hood, 118; s. Goodness, virtue. [Obs.]
To Compare Bounty, &c., with the foregoing class of words.
BOUQUET, bôw'-kây, [Fr.] 170; s. A nosegay.
BOURGEOIS, } bur'-joice', [Fr.] 170; s. Print-BURGEOIS, } ing type of a small kind between long primer and brevier.—See also under Burgh and Burgess.
To BOURGEON, bur'-jün, v. n. To sprout.
BOURN=bô'urn, 47, 134; s. A bound, a limit.
BOURN=bô'urn, 47, 134; s. A brook, a torrent, a rivulet. [Obs. except as a common Saxon termination in the names of places. In Scotland, it is Burn.]
BOURSE.—See Burse.
To BOUSE, bôoz, 125, 137; v. n. To drink freely; to guzzle.
Bow'-sy, 105; a. Merry; fuddled.
BOUSTROPHEDON, bow-strôf'-ê-dôn, 31, 163; s. A mode of writing met with in early Greek inscriptions, which returns from right to left, and then proceeds from left to right again, and so on, as an ox ploughs. It is also written Bustrophedon.
BOU=bowt, 31; s. A turn; as much of an action as is performed at one time.—See Bought under Bough.
BOUADE, boo-tâd', [Fr.] 170; s. A whim; an act of caprice.
BOUTEFEU, bôw'-fêoo, [Fr.] 170; s. An incendiary; a strife-kindler.
BOVINE=bô'-vine, a. Pertaining to bulls, cows, and oxen.
To BOW, bow, 31; v. a. and n. To bend; to incline down or towards in token of respect, or of condescension; to depress; to crush;—accu. To bend; to perform an act of salutation or reverence; to sto. p; to sink under pressure.
Bow, s. An act of salutation, reverence, or submission.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gôc-wâg; châp'-mân; pâ-pâ. lâw; gôd; jôo, i. e. jeu, 55; a. a. &c. mate, 171.

also, that part of a ship where her side rounds to the stern or prow. In other cases with a similar sense, viz., as something that has a curve or flexure, this word classes with those members of its family which have ov sounded o.

Bow'-er, 53, 132: s. An anchor carried at the bow of a ship; also, that which bows or bends, as a muscle that bends the joints.

Bow'-man, s. The man who rows at the bow of a boat.

Bow'-piece, (-pěc, 103) s. A piece of ordnance carried in the bow of a ship.

↳ If Bowsprit really derives its name from its situation in the ship, it ought to range with this branch of the family; but it is said to be a corruption of Holtsprit.—See Bolt, &c., and Bowsprit under the next word.

Bow, (bō, 125) s. An instrument for shooting arrows; a rainbow; the instrument with which some stringed instruments are played; whatever rounds itself like a bow, as the Bows of a saddle, except the Bows of a ship, which, with the same general sense, has a different pronunciation.—See above.

Bow'-bent, a. Crooked like a bow.

Bow'-man, 12: s. An archer.

Bow'-shot, s. The space which an arrow shot from a bow may pass.

Bow'-string, s. The string of a bow.

Bow'-yer, s. An archer; one who makes bows.

Bow'-legged, 114: a. Crooked-legged.

To Bow, v. n. To form to the shape of a bow.

Bow'd, 114: part. a. Bent like a bow.

Bow'-win-dow, s. A bay-window, which see.

Bow'-sprit, s. The bolt, boom, or spar, which projects from the bow of a vessel to carry sail forward.—See a note above.

BOWELS, bow'-ělz, 53, 143: s. pl. The intestines; the inner parts including the heart; pity, tenderness, compassion.

Bow'-el-less, a. Without tenderness or pity.

To Bow'-el, v. a. To eviscerate; to penetrate the bowels.

BOWER=bow'-er, 53, 134: s. A shelter in a garden; a retired chamber in a house; a country retreat.

To Bow'-er, v. a. and n. To embower; to enclose:—new. To lodge.

Bow'-er-y, 129, 105: a. Shading; containing bowers.

BOWL, bōwl=bōlt, 125: s. A vessel to hold liquids rather wide than deep; the hollow part of any thing; a basin.

BOWL, bōwl=bōlt, 125: s. A ball, generally of wood, used for play.

To Bowl, v. a. and n. To roll as a bowl; to pelt with any thing rolled:—new. To play at bowls.

Bowl'-er, s. One who plays at bowls.

Bowl'-ing, s. The art or act of bowling.

Bowl'-ing-green, s. A level green for playing with bowls.

Bowl'-der, 36: s. A round stone found in multitudes on the sea-shore at some places, with which they build walls, and sometimes houses.

BOWLINE, bō'-līn, 125, 105: s. A line or rope used to make a sail stand sharp or close to the wind.

BOX, bōcks, 154: s. The tree or shrub of the genus buxus.

Box'-en, 114: a. Made of box.

Box, s. A case; a name originally derived from the tree, but now given to a case of any material; it implies slighter make or smaller size than chest; the box containing the mariner's compass; a money chest, and hence also a small present in money at Christmas time; the quantity which a box contains; an enclosed space with seats in it, in a theatre or other public place.

To Box, v. a. To enclose in a box; to furnish with boxes; to solicit presents for a money box: To box the compass, is, to rehearse the several points of it; To box a tree, is, to make a hole in it in order to get a the sap.

BOX, bōcks, 154: s. A blow on the head given with the hand.

To Box, v. a. and n. To strike with the fist; to fight with the fist.

Box'-er, 36: s. He who boxes: a pugilist.

Box'-ing, s. The act of fighting with the fist.

BOY=boy, 29: s. A male child; one in the state of adolescence; a term used in contempt for a young man.

Boy'-hood, (hōōd, 118) s. The state of being a boy.

Boy'-ish, a. Belonging to a boy, childish, trifling.

Boy'-ish-ly, ad. In a boyish manner.

Boy'-ish-ness, s. Childishness; the manners of a boy.

Boy'-ism, 158: s. Puerility; the state or actions of a boy.

To Boy, v. a. To act a part in the manner of a boy.

BRABANTINE, brā-bān'-tīn, 105: a. Pertaining to Brabant.

BRABBLE, brāb'-bl, 101: s. A brawl, a broil, a wrangle.

To Brab'-ble, v. n. To clamour.

Brab'-bler, 36: s. A clamorous fellow.

BRACE=brāce, s. Any thing that, like an arm, encircles something and so keeps it tight; a cincture or bandage; the strings that tighten a drum; the straps that support a carriage; or that support and keep tight any part of the dress; a piece of timber that extends like an arm from a main post to keep a building from swerving either way; a crooked line in writing and printing to hook in two or more words or lines which have a common explanation or common rhyme; things braced together, and hence the word signifies a couple or pair, as a brace of birds. It likewise signifies armour for the arm; which sense is perhaps the most nearly related of all to the original word.

To Brace, v. a. To bind; to tie close with bandages; to strain up.

Brā'-cer, 36: s. That which binds or makes firm; an astrigent medicine; also (the nearest etymological sense to the original) armour for the arm.

Brace'-let, s. An ornament for the arm.

Brā'-chi-AL, (brā'-kē-āl, 161, 146) a. Belonging to the arm. Brā'-chi-ate, a. Having arms.

BRACH=brāch, s. A bitch hound.

BRACHYGRAPHY, brā-kīg'-grd-fēy, 87, 161 163: s. Short-writing; the art of writing short-hand.

Brā'-chyg'-ra-pher, 36: s. A short-hand writer.

Brā'-chy-lō-gy, 87, 105: s. Short speech; the expressing of any thing in the most concise manner.

BRACK.—See under To Break.

BRACKET=brāck'-ēt, s. A wooden stay, generally angular, fixed to a wall to support something; the cheek of a mortar carriage; hooks to enclose something in writing or printing, as [].

BRACKISH=brāck'-ish, a. Salt, rather salt.

Brack'-ish-ness, s. Saltiness in a moderate degree.

BRAD=brād, s. A sort of nail without a head.

Brad'-awl, s. An awl to make holes for brads.

To BRAG=brāg, v. n. To boast.

Brag'-ging-ly, 77, 72, 105: ad. Boastingly.

Brag, s. A boast; the thing boasted of; a game at cards.

Brag'-gart, 34: a. and s. Boastful:—s. A boaster.

Brag'-gar-dim, 158: s. Boastfulness. [Obs.]

Brag'-ger, (-guer, 77, 36) s. A boaster.

Brag'-go'-dō'-ci-o, (-shē-ō, 147) s. A puffing, boastful fellow.

Brag'-less, a. Without a boast.

Brag'-ly, ad. In a manner to brag of. [Obs.]

To BRAID=brādt, 100: v. a. To weave together; also, (but in this sense obsolete,) to reproach. Compare Upbraid.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision. 165: thīn, 166: thēn. 166.

Braid, s. A texture, a knot; a deceit; also, (but in this sense obsolete,) a start as from sleep. Compare Aloud.

BRAILS, brā'iz, 143: s. pl. Small ropes to the sails of ships.

To Braid up, v. a. To haul up by the brails.

BRAIN=brān', 100: s. The soft whitish mass inclosed in the skull in which the nervous and spinal marrow terminate; and supposed to be the seat of the sensations, of which the eyes, ears, palate, nose, and cuticle, are the exterior organs, and also to be the immediate organ or organs of the passions, the sentiments, the intellect, and (as the result of these) the will; or according to the different phraseology of other writers, to be the seat of the soul, or intelligent principle in man; figuratively, the understanding; the affections; fancy; imagination.

Brain'-less, a. Silly.

Brain'-ish, a. Hotheaded; furious.

Brain'-sick, a. Disordered in mind; giddy.

Brain'-sick-ly, ad. Weakly.

Brain'-pan, s. The skull.

To Brain, v. a. To dash out the brains; to understand. [The last sense is obsolete.]

BRAIT=brāt', 100: s. A rough diamond.

BRAKE=brāke. The old preterit of To Break; which see.

Brake, s. A heavy harrow for breaking clods; a machine for confining horses while shoeing them; a sharp bit or snaffle; a carriage used for horses while breaking in; that part of a moveable battery which enables it to turn; a baker's kneading trough.

BRAKE, s. Fern, sweetbroom, or ling, to which this name seems to be given from the roughness or broken appearance; a place that is overgrown with it; a thicket; a place overgrown with shrubs and brambles.

Bra'-ky, 105: a. Full of brakes; rough, thorny.

Bra'-ken, or Brack'-en, 114: s. Fern.

BRAHMA, } =brān'-mā, 23: s. The chief deity

BRAMA, } of the Indian nations, considered as the creator of all things. See Vishnu in Supp.

Brah'-min, or Bra'-min, s. An Indian priest. It is also written Brahman, but in general without any difference of pronunciation.

Bra'-min'-i-cal, a. Relating to the Brahmins.

BRAMBLE, brām'-bl, 101: s. The blackberry bush; any rough, prickly, wild shrub.

→ The word is often compounded, as Bramble-bush, Bramble-net, (a net used to cover brambles and catch birds,) &c.

Bram'-bled, or Bram'-bly, a. Overgrown with brambles.

Bram'-bling, 72: s. A bird so called.

BRAN=brān, s. The husks of corn; the refuse of the sieve.

Bran'-ny, 105: a. Having the appearance of bran.

BRAN-NEW.—See under Brand.

BRANCARD=brāng'-card, 158: s. A litter borne by horses.

BRANCH=brāntch, s. The shoot of a tree; an offshoot of any thing, as a smaller river from a larger; any part of a family descending collaterally; the shoots of a stag's horn.

Branch'-y, 105: a. Full of branches; spreading.

Branch'-i-ness, s. Fulness of branches.

Branch'-less, a. Without shoots or branches.

Branch'-let, s. A little branch.

To Branch, v. n. and a. To spread or sh. out off into branches; to spread into separate parts; to have horns shooting out:—act. To divide into branches.

BRANCHIOSTEGOUS, brang'-kē-ōs'-tē-gis, 158, 161, 120: a. Having covered gills.

BRAND=brān, s. A stick lighted or fit to be lighted; a brand sword, so called from sparkling as a brand, or else from Brandish, which see; a mark made by burning as a punishment for crime; a note of infamy; a stigma.

To Brand, v. a. To burn with a hot iron; to mark with a brand or note of infamy.

Brand'-iron, (-i-urn, 159) s. A branding-iron; a trivet.

Brand'-ing-i-ron, s. An iron to brand with.

BRAN-NEW, 110: a. Quite new, bright as a brand

TO BRANDISH=brān'-dish, v. a. To wave or shake; to flourish.

→ Johnson allies it with Brand.

Brān'-dish, s. A flourish.

BRANDY, brān'-dēy, s. An ardent spirit distilled from wine.

BRANGLE, brāng'-gl, 158, 101: s. Wrangle, squabble.

To Brān'-gle, v. n. To wrangle, to squabble.

Brān'-gling, s. A quarrel.

BRANK, brāngk, 158: s. Buckwheat; a scolding bridle.

BRANLIN=brān'-līn, s. A fish of the salmon kind

BRASS=brāss, 111, 11: s. An alloy of copper and zinc of a yellow colour; popularly, any metal in which copper has a part, and even copper itself; figuratively impudence.

→ The word is often compounded, as Brass'-cisaged, Brass'-paced, &c.

Bras'-sy, a. Partaking of, or hard as brass; impudent.

Bras'-si-ness, s. Appearance like brass.

To BRAZE, v. a. To solder with brass; to make impudent.

Bra'-zen, 114: a. Made of brass; impudent.

To Bra'-zen, v. n. To be impudent.

Bra'-zen-face, s. An impudent person.

Bra'-zen-faced, (-fāst, 114, 143) a. Shameless.

Bra'-zen-ly, ad. In a bold, impudent manner.

Bra'-zen-ness, s. Brassiness; impudence.

Bra'-zier, (brā'-zh'er, 147) s. An artificer who works in brass; a pan for holding coals.

BRASSICA, brās'-sē-cē, s. Cabbage Latin.]

BRAST=brāst, part. a. Burst. [Obs.]

BRAT=brāt, s. A child, in contempt.

BRAVE=brāve, a. and s. Courageous, gallant; excellent, noble; magnificent, fine, showy:—s. A man daring beyond prudence or fitness; a boast, a challenge.

Brave'-ly, 105: ad. In a brave manner; finely.

Bra'-ver-y, 129, 105: s. Courage, magnanimity, splendor; fine dress; bravado.

To Brave, v. a. To defy, to challenge; to encounter with courage; to set at defiance.

Bra'-vo, s. A bandit; an assassin for hire.

*→ This word is often heard as an exclamation, with the a. Italianized. The proper English exclamation is Oh! bravo! or *Bravo!

BRA-VA'-DO, 98: s. A boast, a brag.

BRA-VU'-RA, brā-vū'-rd, [Ital.] 170: s. and a. A song of difficult execution:—a. Spirited; difficult and brilliant.

To BRAWL=brāwl, v. n. and a. To quarrel noisily; to speak loud and indecently; to make a noise:—act. To drive away by noise.

Brawl, s. A quarrel; formerly a kind of dance.

Brawl'-er, 36: s. A wrangler.

Brawl'-ing, s. The act of quarrelling.

BRAWN=brāwn, s. The flesh of a boar, or the animal itself; the fleshy, protuberant, muscular part of the body; bulk, muscular strength; the arm, from its muscles or strength.

Brawn'-er, s. A boar killed for the table.

Brawn'-y, 105: a. Muscular; fleshy; bulky; hard.

Brawn'-i-ness, s. The quality of being brawny.

To BRAY=brāy, v. a. To pound or grind small.

Bray'-er, 36: s. A pestle; an instrument to temper ink: see also below.

To BRAY, v. n. and a. To make a noise as harsh as in pounding or grinding; to make a noise as an ass:—act. To emit with harsh sound.

Bray'-er, 36: s. One that brays like an ass.

Bray, Bray'-ing, s. The noise of an ass; clamour.

BRAY=brāy, s. A bank or mound of earth. [Obs.]

To BRAZE, BRAZEN, BRAZIER, &c.—See under Brass.

BRAZIL, brāzēl', 115: s. A wood first found in the country afterwards named Brazil.

BREACH.—See under To Break.

BREAD, brēd, 120: s. Food made of ground corn; food in general; support of life at large.

↪ The word is often compounded; as Bread'-corn, Bread'-chipper, (a baker's servant,) Bread'-room, (in a ship,) Bread'-tree, (in the isles of the Pacific,) &c.

Bread'-en, 114: a. Made of bread.

Bread'-less, a. Destitute of bread, or food.

BREADTH.—See under Broad.

To BREAK, brāke, 100: } v. a and n. To part
I BROKE=brōke, } or rend by violence; to

I BRAKE=brāke, [Obs.] } burst by force; to de-

BROKEN, brō'-kn, 114: } stroy by violence; to crush, to shatter, to tame; to make bankrupt; to discard, to dismiss; to violate a contract; to infringe a law; to intercept, to interrupt; to separate company, to dissolve any union; To break off, to stop suddenly in a proceeding; To break up, to dissolve, to lay open, to separate, to dishand; To break wind, to give vent to wind from the body; To break upon the wheel, to stretch upon a wheel, and then break the bones:—new.

To part in two; to burst; to open as the morning; to burst forth; to become bankrupt; to decline in health; to issue out with vehemence; to fall out; To break loose, to escape from captivity, to shake off restraint; To break out, to discover itself in sudden effects, to have eruptions on the body; to become dissolute; To break with, to part friendship with.

↪ This verb carries with it, in all its applications, its primitive sense of straining, parting, severing, bursting, with the consequential senses of injury, defect, and infirmity.

Break, 100: s. State of being broken; an opening; a pause; a line drawn in architecture, a recess of a part behind the ordinary range or projecture. See also Brake, which being identical in sound, and closely allied in other respects, is often confounded with this word in spelling. Break used on a railroad, see Supp.

Break'-er, 36: s. The person or thing that breaks any thing; a wave broken by a rock or sandbank.

Break'-ing, s. A bankruptcy; With in, an irruption; With out, an eruption; With up, a dissolution.

Break'-neck, s. and a. A steep or other thing dangerous to the neck:—a. Endangering the neck.

Break'-wa-ter, 140, 36: s. A wall or other obstacle to protect a harbour from the force of the sea.

To BREAK'-FAST, (brēck'-fāst, 136) v. n. To eat the first meal in the day.

Break'-fast, 136: s. The first meal in the day; the food used at the first meal.

BRACK, (brāck) s. A break, a breach, an opening.

BREACH, (brēcht) s. The act of breaking; the state of being broken; a gap, particularly that which is made in a fortification by battery; violation of a law or contract; difference; quarrel; infraction; injury.

BRICK'-KILN, a. Brittle, easily broken. [Obs.]

BREAM=brēme, s. The name of a freshwater fish.

To BREAM.—See under Broom.

BREAST, brēst, 120: s. The forepart of the body between the neck and the belly; the soft protuberance on the thorax which terminates each in a nipple; a mother's nipples; the part of a beast which is under the neck, and passes between the forelegs; figuratively the disposition of the mind; the conscience; the passions. Breast-summer, see Supp.

↪ The word is often compounded, as Breast'-bone, Breast'-high, Breast'-hooks, (the timbers that strengthen the forepart of a ship,) Breast'-knot, (an ornament,) Breast'-plate, (a piece of armour,) Breast'-plough, (driven by the breast,) Breast'-work, (in fortification,) &c.

To Brest, v. a. To meet in front.

BREATH, brēth, 120: s. The air drawn in and expelled in respiration; life; respite; pause; the time occupied by once breathing: breeze.

Breath'-less, a. Out of breath; dead.

Breath'-less-ness, s. The state of being out of breath.

To BREATHE, (brēthē, 101, 137) v. n. and a. To draw air into the lungs, and expel it; to respire, to live; to pause from action; to pass in as breath:—act. To utter privately; to give vent to.

Breath'-er, s. One that lives; one that utters; an inspirer.

Breath'-ing, s. Aspiration; secret prayer.

Breath'-ing-place, s. A place to pause at.

BRED.—See To Breed.

BREDE=brēde, s. A braid, a knot. [Not used.]

BREECH=brēcht, 103, 63: s. The lower part of the body; the hinder part of any thing, but particularly of a piece of ordnance.

BREECHES, (britch'-ēz, 119, 14, 151) s. pl. The close garment worn by men over the lower part of the body.

Breech, s. sing. Breeches. [Obs.]

To Breech, v. a. To put into breeches; to whip on the breech; to fasten by a rope attached to the breech of a cannon.

To BREED=brēde, 103: } v. a. and n. To pro-

BRED=brēd, 135: } create; to produce from one's self; to give birth to; to educate, to bring up from infancy:—new. To be with young; to produce young.

Breed'-er, s. A producer; one that is prolific.

Breed'-ing, s. Education; manners; nurture.

Breed'-bate, s. A breeder of contention.

Breed, s. Race, offspring, progeny; cast, kind; a subdivision of species; a number produced at once, a hatch.

BREEZE=brēze, 189: s. A gentle gale; also, a stinging fly, so called from the breeze-like noise it makes, and in this sense often spelled Breeze or Brize.

Breeze'-less, a. Having no breezes; calm to excess.

Bree'-zy, 105: a. Fanned with gales; full of gales.

To Breeze, v. n. To blow gently. [A sea term.]

BREHON=brē'-hōn, 18: s. Anciently, the name for a judge in Ireland, and hence Brehon laws, the ancient laws of that country, which were unwritten, like the common law of England.

BRENT=brēnt, part. a. Burnt; from the old verb To Bren.

BREST=brēst, s. The moulding of a column, also called Torus.

BRET=brēt, s. A fish of the turbot kind.

BRETHREN=brēth'-rēn, s. pl.—See Brother.

BREVE=brēve, s. This word, originally an adjective signifying short, compendious, is appropriated in music as the name of the longest note, equal to two semibreves and four minims; a contradiction which may be accounted for by supposing a reference to the whole bar, or whole modulation; in law, it means a compendious precept; see Brief among the words below. See also Semibreve under Semi.

Bre'-vi-ate, 105, 146: s. A compendium, an epitome.

Bre'-vi-a-ture, (-ā-ture, 147) s. An abbreviation.

Bre'-vi-ary, (brēv'-yār-ēy, 146, 129) s. A

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165; vish-ūn, i. e. vision, 165; thūn, 166; thūn, 166.

bridgement: the book containing the daily services of the Roman church.

Brev'-i-ty, (brěv'-ē-tēty, 92, 105) s. Conciseness.

BREVET, s. Originally, a compendious warrant or commission without seal; an appointment in the army, with rank above that for which pay is received. [Fr.]

Brev'-et. a. Taking rank by brevet; as a brevet-colonel is a colonel in rank with the pay of a lieutenant-colonel.

BRE-VIER, (brě-veər', 103, 43) s. A small printing type between bourgeois and minion, so called because originally used in printing a breviary.

BRIEF, (brěf, 103) a. and s. Short, concise, contracted;—s. An epitome, or short writing; a species of writ or precept; an abridgement of a client's case made out for instruction of counsel; letters patent giving licence for collecting charitable contributions.

Brief'-ly, 105: ad. Concisely; quickly.

Brief'-ness, s. Conciseness; shortness.

To BREW, brōō, 109: v. a. and n. In a general sense, to boil or mix; in a more restricted sense, to make a malt liquor; to put into preparation; to mingle; to contrive; to plot;—new. To be in a state of mixing, forming, or collecting; to perform the office of brewing.

Brew, s. That which is formed by brewing.

Brew'-age, 99: s. Mixture of various things.

Brew'-er, 36, 134: s. One whose trade is to brew.

Brew'-ery, 129, 105: s. A place for brewing.

Brew'-house, (-howce) s. A brewery.

Brew'-ing, 72: s. The act of brewing; the quantity brewed at once; the mingling of tempestuous clouds.

Brew'-is, s. Broth, pottage: a sop in the pan. [Obs.]

BRIBE=bribe, s. A reward given to pervert the judgement or corrupt the conduct.

To Bribe, v. a. To give a bribe to; to gain by bribes.

Bri'-ber, 36: s. One that pays for corrupt practices.

Bri'-ber-y, 129, 105: s. The crime of bribery, or being bribed.

BRICK=brick, s. A squared mass of burnt clay; a loaf shaped like a brick. Bricknogging, see Supp.

Brick'-bat, s. A piece of brick.

Brick'-clay, s. Clay used for making bricks.

Brick'-dust, s. Dust made by pounding bricks.

Brick'-kiln, (-kīl, 156) s. A place in which bricks are burned.

Brick'-lay-er, 36, 134: s. A brick-mason.

Brick'-ma-ker, s. One whose trade is to make bricks.

To Brick, v. a. To lay with bricks; to imitate bricks.

BRIDE=bride, s. Originally, a woman betrothed; at present, a woman newly married, or on the point of being married.

Bri'-dal, 12: a. and s. Belonging to a wedding;—s. A wedding.

Bride'-groom, s. A man newly married, or about to be married. Bail'ey and others say he is so called, because, on the wedding day, he waited on the bride as her groom or servant; but the true word is Bride-goom, and goom signifies man.

→ The word Bride is compounded in many other instances; as Bride'-bd., Bride'-chamber, Bride'-cake, Bride'-man or Bride'-s'-man, Bride'-maid or Bride'-s'-maid, (attendants at a wedding,) Bride'-s'-take, (a post to dance round,) &c.

BRIDEWELL=bride'-wēll, s. A house of correction. The original bridewell was a palace built near St. Bride's, i. e. St. Bridget's well, in London, which was turned into an hospital and penitentiary.

BRIDGE=bridge, s. A building raised over water for the convenience of passage; that which resembles a bridge, as the upper part of the nose, the supporter of the strings of a musical instrument, &c.

To Bridge, v. a. To build a bridge.

BRIDLE, bri'-dl, 101: s. The instrument of iron, leather, &c. by which a horse is restrained and governed by the rider; something resembling a bridle in use or form; a restraint, a curb.

To Bri'-dle, v. a. and n. To guide by a bridle; to put on a bridle; to restrain;—new. To hold up the head.

Bri'-dler, s. He who restrains as by a bridle.

BRIEF.—See under Brev.

BRIER=bri'-er, 36, 134: s. A prickly shrub.

Bri'-er-y, 129, 105: a. Rough, full of briars.

BRIG=brig, s. A bridge.—See also under Brigantine

BRIGADE, brē-gādē', 105: s. A division of troops; a brigade of horse generally amounts to eight or ten squadrons; of foot, to four, five, or six battalions.

Brig'-a-dier, (brīg'-ā-dēer', 85, 92, 103) s. The general officer commanding a brigade.

BRIGAND=brig'-ānd, 12: s. One of a band of robbers.

Brig'-an-dage, 99: s. Theft, robbery, plunder.

BRIG'-AN-DINE, (-dīn, 105) s. A coat of mail.

BRIG'-AN-TINE, (105) s. A light vessel such as cor sairs used.

Brig, s. A vessel with two masts square rigged.

BRIGHT, brite, 115, 162: a. Shining; full of light; clear; resplendent; illustrious; promising.

Bright'-ly, 105: ad. Splendidly; with lustre.

Bright'-ness, s. Lustre; glitter; acuteness.

To Bright'-ten, 114: v. a. and n. To make bright; to make luminous; to make gay; to make illustrious; to make acute or witty;—new. To grow bright.

BRIGUE, brēg, 104, 189: s. Cabal; intrigue; contention.

Bri'-gōse, (brē-gōcē', 152) a. Contentious.

BRILLIANT, bril'-yānt, 146: a. and s. Shining; sparkling;—s. A diamond cut into angles, so as to reflect the light and shine more.

Brill'-iant-ly, ad. Splendidly.

Brill'-iant-ness, s. Brilliancy. [Unusual.]

Brill'-ian-cy, 105: s. Lustre, splendor.

BRIM=brim, s. The edge of any thing; the upper edge of any vessel; the bank of a fountain, of a river, or of the sea.

Brim'-ful, 117: a. Full to the brim.

Brim'-less, a. Without a brim.

To Brim, v. a. and n. To fill to the top;—new. To be full to the top.

Brim'-ming, a. Full to the top.

Brim'-mer, 36: s. A bowl full to the top.

BRIMSTONE=brim'-stōne, s. Sulphur.

Brim'-sto-ny, 105: a. Full of brimstone; sulphurous.

BRINDED=brin'-dēd, 14: a. Marked with spots; tabby.

→ Toid wrongly allies this word with brown.

Brin'-dle, 101: s. The state of being brindled.

Brin'-dled, 114: a. Brindled; streaked.

BRINE=brine, s. Water impregnated with salt; the sea; tears.

→ This word is often compounded; as Brin'-pit, also called Brin'-pan, Brin'-spring, &c.

Bri'-ny, 105: a. Salt.

Bri'-nish, a. Like brine; saltish.

Bri'-nish-ness, s. Saltiness.

To Brine, v. a. To steep in brine.

To BRING=bring, 72: } v. a. To fetch from; to
I BROUGHT, brāwt, 126: } convey or carry to; to BROUGHT, brāwt, 162: } convey of one's self, and not by another; to procure, as a cause; to attract;
to draw along; to lead by degrees; to induce; to prevail upon; To bring about, to make to come to pass;
To bring forth, to give birth to; To bring off, to clear from, to acquit from; To bring on, to engage in action.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

To bring over, to convey; To bring out, to draw forth or exhibit; To bring under, to subdue; To bring up, to educate.

Bring'er, 158, 36: s. He that brings.

BRINK, brīngk, 158: s. The edge, as of a cliff or river.

BRISK=brīsk, a. Lively; active; full of spirit; vivid; bright.

Brisk'ly, 105: ad. Actively; vigorously.

Brisk'-ness, s. Liveliness; gayety; vigour.

To Brisk up, v. n. To assume spirit.

BRISKET=brīsk'-kēt, 14: s. A part of the breast of meat under the scrag; the breast.

BRISTLE, brīs'-sl, 156, 101: s. The hair of swine, or any stiff hair like it.

Bris'ly, 105: a. Thick set with bristles.

To Bris'-le, v. a. and n. To erect as bristles:—to erect.

BRISTOL-STONE=brīs'-tōl-stōnt, s. Rock crystal.

BRIT.—See Bret. BAIZE.—See Breeze.

BRITISH=brīt'-ish, a. Relating to Britain.

Brit'-on, 18: s. and a. A native of Britain, a Welchman, as being descended from the ancient Britons:—a. British.

Br-tan'-nic, a. British.

BRITTLE, brīt'-tl, 101: a. Apt to break.—Compare Break, &c.

Brit'-tle-ness, s. Fragility; aptness to break.

BRITZSKA, brīs'-kd, 143: s. An open carriage with shutters to close at pleasure, and space for reclining when used for a journey.

BROACH=brōatch, 108, 63: s. A spit.

Broach'er, 36: s. A spit.

To BROACH, v. a. Originally, to spit; thence, to pierce as with a spit; to tap; to open any store; to give out any thing; to give out or utter: To broach to, to turn suddenly to windward.

Broach'er, 36: s. One who first opens or utters.

BROAD, brāwd, 126: a. Wide, extended in breadth; extensive, vast; gross, coarse; plain, indelicate, obscure; open, unconfined, comprehensive.

Broad'ly, 105: ad. In a broad manner.

Broad'-ish, a. Rather broad.

Broad'-ness, s. The quality of being broad.

Broad'-wise, (-wīz, 151) ad. In the direction of the breadth.

To Broad'en, 114: v. n. To grow broad.

Broad'-cloth, s. A fine cloth of broad make.

Broad'-eyed, (-īd, 106, 114) a. Seeing widely.

Broad'-side, s. The side of a ship; the discharge of all the guns from it; a large sized sheet in printing.

Broad'-sword, (-sōard, 145, 130) s. A broad-bladed sword.

Other compounds of this word occur: as Broad'-are; Broad'-brimmed, (applied to a hat:); Broad'-cast, (applied to seed sown by hand:); Broad'-horned; Broad'-tiled, &c.

BREADTH, (brēdth) s. The measure of a plane superficies from side to side.

BROCADE=brō-cādē', s. A silken variegated stuff.

Bro-ca'-ded, a. Dressed in brocade; woven as brocade.

BROCADE.—See under To Broke.

BROCCOLI, brōc'-cō-lēy, s. A species of cabbage. [Ital.]

BROCK=brōck, s. A badger.

Brock'-er, 14: s. A red deer when two years old.

BRODEQUIN, brōd'-ē-kīn, [Fr.] 170: s. A buskin or half boot.

BROGUE=brōgue, s. A kind of shoe; a cant word for a corrupt dialect; in the plural, it has been used to signify breeches, though its proper meaning still is shoes.

To BROIDER, BROIDERER, &c.—See En-broider, &c.

BROIL=broil, 29: s. A tumult; a quarrel.

To BROIL=broil, 29: v. a. and n. To cook by laying on the coals, or before the fire:—new. To be subjected to heat, as meat at the fire; to be in a heat. Webster believes this word to have a common origin with the previous substantive.

Broil'er, s. One who excites; a gridiron.

BROKE, BROKEN.—See To Break.

Bro'-ken-ly, 114, 105: ad. Without any regular series.

Bro'-ken-ness, s. Unevenness; contrition.

To BROKE=brōke, v. n. To transact for others.

Bro'-ker, 36: s. He who transacts on commission; a dealer in old goods; a go-between.

Bro'-ker-age, 129, 99: s. Commission-fee of a broker. The term Bro' cage occurs in the same sense.

Bro'-ker-ly, a. Subservient; mean. [Obs.]

Bro'-ker-y, s. The business of a broker. [Obs.]

BROME=brōme, s. A liquid of a deep red-brown colour, very volatile, and of an ill smell, obtained from the mother-water of salt works. It has three times the density of water.

Brom'-ic, 88: a. Appertaining to brome.

BRONCHUS, brōng'-kūs, 158, 161: s. The windpipe, or rather the upper part of it.

Bron'-chi-æ, (-kē-ēt, 101) s. pl. The ramifications of the windpipe.

Bron'-chi-al, a. Belonging to the throat.

Bron'-chic, a. Bronchial.

Bron'-cho-cele, 101: s. A tumor in the throat.

Bron'-cho't'-o-my, s. The operation of cutting the windpipe.

BRONTOLOGY, brōn-tōl'-ō-gēy, 87: s. The doctrine of the causes of thunder.

BRONZE=brōnz, 189: s. A fictitious metal of copper, tin, and generally of some other substance; a copper medal.

To Bronze, v. a. To harden as brass; to colour like bronze.

BROOCH, brōach, 108=brōatch, 63: s. A small buckle with a pin attached, generally used for fastening the vest; formerly a gold or silver ornament worn in any part of the dress.

To Brooch, v. a. To adorn with jewels. [Shaks.]

*To BROOD=brōd, v. n. and a. To sit, as on eggs; to cover chickens under the wing; to regard with long anxiety; to mature any thing by care:—act. To cherish by care.*

Brood, s. Offspring, progeny; any thing bred; the number hatched at once; a production; the act of covering the eggs.

Brood'-y, 105: a. Brooding; inclined to brood.

BROOK, brōok, 118: s. A natural stream less than a river.

This word is compounded for the names of some plants; as Brook'-lime, Brook'-mint, Brook'-weed, &c.

Brook'-y, 105: a. Abounding with brooks.

To BROOK, brōok, 118: v. a. and n. To bear, to endure.

BROOM=brōom, s. A shrub so called; a besom made of the twigs from it; any brush having a long handle.

The word is often compounded; as Broom'-land, with the first signification; Broom'-stuff, Broom'-stick, &c. with the second and third.

Broom'-y, 105: a. Abounding in broom.

To Broom, v. a. To clean with a broom.

To BREAM, v. a. To clean a ship.

BROTH=brōth, 17, 116: s. Liquor in which flesh has been boiled.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: tīn, 166: thēn, 166.

BROTHIEL=brōth'-ēl, s. A house for lewdness.

Broth'-el-ler, 36 : s. A frequenter of brothels.

Broth'-el-ry, s. Whoredom, obscenity. [Obs.]

BROTHER, brōth'-er, 116 : s. He who is born of the same parents; any one closely united; associate; fellow-creature.

Broth'-er-ly, a. and ad. As becomes a brother.

Broth'-er-less, a. Destitute of a brother.

Broth'-er-hood, 118 : s. The state of being a brother.

Brēth'-ren, s. pl. Brothers. [Obs. except in theol.]

BROUGHT.—See To Bring.

BROW=brow, 31 : s. The prominent ridge over the eye; the arch of hair upon it; the forehead: the general air of the countenance; the edge of any high place.

Brow'-an-tler, s. The first shoot on a deer's head.

To Brow'-beat, v. a. To depress by severe looks.

Brow'-beat-ing, s. The act of depressing by looks.

Brow'-bound, a. Crowned. [Shaks.]

Brow'-less, a. Without shame. [Little used.]

Brow'-sick, a. Dejected. [Obs.]

To Brow, v. a. To form the edge or border of.

BROWN=brown, 31 : a. and s. Dusky, inclining to redness:—s. A colour resulting from red, black, and yellow.

Brown'-ish, a. Somewhat brown.

Brown'-ness, a. A brown colour.

Brown'-stess-y, 105 : s. Dull thoughtfulness; reverie.

☞ The word is compounded in other instances; as Brown'-bill, (formerly used by English foot soldiers;) Brown'-musket; Brown'-wort, (a plant;) &c.

BROWNIE, brow'-nēy, 103 : s. A spirit supposed to haunt old houses in Scotland.

BROWNI=brow'-nist, s. A follower of Robert Brown, who, in the reign of Elizabeth, maintained that any body of Christians united under one pastor, constitute a church.

Brown'-ism, 158 : s. The tenets of the Brownists.

To BROWSE, browz, 31, 151, 189 : v. a. and n. To eat the object. (aten being the tops of the tender branches or young shoots of trees:—new. To feed on shrubs.

Brows, s. Tender branches which cattle can eat.

To BRUTTE, (brōt, 117) v. a. To browse. [Obs.]

BRUCIA, brō'-cē-d, 147, } 109 : s. An alkali
BRUCINE, brō'-cīn, 105, } obtained from the bark of the brucia antisydeniorica.

To BRUISE, brōoz, 110, 109, 151, 189 : v. a.

To crush or mangle by a heavy blow.

Bruise, s. A hurt with something blunt and heavy.

Bruis'-er, 36 : s. The person or thing that bruises; a boxer; a tool for grinding glasses for telescopes.

Bruise'-wort, (-wort, 141) s. A plant.

BRUIT, brō'-it, 109 : s. Report; rumour. [Obs.]

To Bruit'-it, v. a. To noise or spread abroad. [Obs.]

BRUMAL, brō'-māl, 109 : a. Of or belonging to winter.

Brume, s. Mist, fog, vapours. [Little used.]

BRU-MAL-LIA, 146, 98 : s. pl. Feasts of Bacchus held in winter time.

BRUNETTE, broo-nēt', [Fr.] 170 : s. A woman with a brown or dark complexion.

BRUNION, brōon'-yōn, 27, 18 : s. A fruit between a plum and peach.

BRUNT=brunt, s. The heat or violence of an onset; shock; violence; blow; a sudden effort.

BRUSH=brūsh, s. An instrument for cleaning or rubbing, generally made with bristles; pencils used by painters; the tail of a fox; a rude assault; a thicket
Brush'-y, a. Rough or shaggy like a brush.

Brush'-wood, 118 : s. Rough, low, close thickets.

To Brush, v. a. and n. To sweep with a brush; to pat with a brush; to carry away by an act like that of brushing:—new. To move with haste; to fly over.

Brush'-er, 36 : s. He that brushes.

Brush'-ing, s. A rubbing or sweeping.

BRUSQUE, brōōsk, [Fr.] 170 : a. Rude, abrupt in manner.

To BRUSTLE, brūs'-sl, 156, 101 : v. n. To crackle, to rustle.

Brus'-ling, s. A crackling; a rustling; a vapouring.

BRUTE, brōt, 109 : a. and s. Senseless, unconscious; irrational; bestial; rough, uncivilized:—s. An irrational creature, and therefore comprehending all animals except man, but used in general only for the larger.

Brut'-ish, a. Bestial; ferocious; uncivilized.

Brut'-ish-ness, s. Brutality.

Brut'-tal, 12 : a. Belonging to a brute; savage, cruel.

Brut'-tal-ly, 105 : ad. Savagely; churlishly.

Brut'-tal-ity, 84, 105 : s. Savageness.

To Brut'-tal-ize, v. n. and a. To grow brutal:—act.

To make brutal.

To Brut'-ti-fy, (-fy, 6) v. a. To make a man a brute; to render the mind brutal.

☞ Brutely, ad.; Brutness, s.; Brutism, s. are relations of this class either obsolete or little used.

BRYONY, brī'-ō-nēy, s. A plant of various species.

BUBBLE, būb'-bl, 101 : s. A drop, or vesicle filled with air; any thing empty as a bubble, as a cheating project; a person bubbled.

Bub'-ble, 105 : a. Full of bubbles.

To Bub'-ble, v. n. and a. To rise in bubbles; to run with a bubbling noise:—act. To cheat.

Bub'-bler, 36 : s. A cheat.

To BUB, v. a. To throw out in bubbles. [Obs.]

Bub, s. An old cant word for strong malt liquor.

BUBBY, būb'-bēy, s. A woman's breast. [A low word.]

BUBO=hū'-bō, s. The groin; a tumor in the groin; a tumor.

Bu'-BO-NO-CEL'N, 101 : s. The inguinal rupture.

Bu'-BUK'-LE, 101 : s. A large red pimple. [Shaks.]

BUCANIER, būck'-d-nēar', 103 : s. A pirate of a class which was made up chiefly of English and French in America.

BUCCELLATION, būck'-gēl-lā'-shūn, 89 : s. A division into large pieces; properly such as, being put into the mouth, would distend the cheeks. A trumpet is called Buc'cina because it distends the cheeks; and from this word Buccina are derived the names of certain shells which resemble a trumpet in form. The name Buccina is also given to a vegeto-alkali recently discovered in box-wood.

BUCK=būck, s. Lye in which clothes are soaked in bleaching; the liquor in which clothes are washed; the clothes soaked in lye.

To Buck, v. a. To soak in lye; to wash in suds.

Buck'-has-ket, 11, 14 : s. A basket in which clothes are carried to be washed.

Buck'-ing-stool, s. A washing block.

BUCK=būck, s. The male of the fallow deer, and of some other animals, as the rabbit and the hare; a cant word for a dashing fellow, and hence the cant derivatives Buck'-ish and Buck'-ism.

To Buck, v. a. To copulate as bucks and does.

Buck'-skin, s. Leather made from the skin of a buck.

Buck'-stall, 112 : s. A net to catch deer.

☞ Among the compounds of this word, Buck'-s'-horn is a species of scurvy-grass, and Buck'-thorn a genus of plants whose scientific name is Rhamnus. Buck'-bean, Buck'-mast, Buck'-wheat, are apparent not real derivatives, the first being a corruption of Boz-bean; the second implying Beech'-mast, of the fruit of the beech tree; and the third Beech'-wheat, a sort of grain other wise called Brank or Crap.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, proceed the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy chāp'-mān: pā'-pā' lāw: gōōd: j'wō, i. e. jeu. 55 : a, e, i, &c. mule 171.

BUG

BUCKET=bück ět, 14: s. A vessel for drawing or carrying water.

BUCKLE, бүč-kl, 101: s. Originally, something bent, hooked, or grappled; hence, a link of metal with a tongue or catch made to fasten one thing to another; a curl of hair, or a state of curl and crispness.

To Buckle, v. n. and a. To bend or bow:—act. To fasten with a buckle; to put into curl. To buckle to, to set to determinately, as a man that buckles on his armour; To buckle with, to embrace or grasp with the ardour of contention.

BUCKLER, 36: s. A shield; it was buckled on the arm.

BUCOLIC=bū-cōl'-ick, a. and s. Pastoral:—s. A pastoral poem; a writer of bucolics or pastorals.

BUD=būd, s. The first shoot of a plant.

To Bud, v. n. and a. To put forth young shoots: to be in the bloom:—act. To graft by inserting the bud of a plant under the bark of another.

BUDDHISM, būd'-dizm, 160, 158: s. The worship of the Indian god Buddha. See Sannan in S.

BUDDLE, būd'-dl, s. A large square frame of boards used in washing tin ore.

To Bud'-dle, v. a. To wash ore. [A mining term.]

To BUDGE=budge. v. n. To stir or move off the place.

Bud'-gy, 36: s. One that stirs or moves.

BUDGE=budge, a. Swelling in size and manner. (Compare Bulge.)

Budge-ness, a. Stiffness and severity of appearance.

BUDGE=būdg, s. The dressed fur of lambs.

Bud'-gy, 105: n. Consisting of fur.

Budge-bach'-e-lors, 18, 143: s. pl. Men in long gowns lined with lambs fur at a civic inauguration.

BUDGET=būc'-gēt, 14: s. A bag; a little sack; a store or stock the bag containing prepared documents to lay before an assembly, particularly on financial matters; hence the financial schemes proposed to an assembly.

BUFF.—See under Buffalo, and under Buffet.

BUFFALO=būf'-fā-lō, s. A kind of wild ox.

BUFF, s. A sort of leather prepared from the skin of the buffalo; a military coat made of such-like skin: the colour of buff, a light yellow; the yellow viscid substance which, in inflammation, forms on the blood.

BUFF-WE, 101: s. The same as buffalo.

Buff'-head-ed, 120: s. Having a large head, stupid.

To Buff'-fl, v. n. To puzzle.

BUFFET=būf'-fēt, 14: s. A blow with the fist; a slap.

To Buff'-fet, v. a. and n. To strike:—neu To box.

Buff'-fet-er, 36: s. One who buffets; a boxer.

To Buff, v. a. To buffet. [Obs.]

BUFFET=būf'-fēt, s. A kind of cupboard. [Fr.]

BUFFIN=būf'-fin, s. A coarse stuff formerly worn.

BUFFOON=būf'-fōon, s. A jester or clown; one who uses low jests or antic postures; one who riais indecently.

Buf-foon'-ish, a. Like a buffoon.

To Buf-foon', v. a. To make ridiculous.

Buf-foon'-ing, s. Buffoonery.

Buf-foon'-er-y, 129, 105: s. Vulgar jesting.

Buf'-ro, (bōōf'-fō) [Ital.] 170: s. The comic actor in an opera.

BUG=būg, s. A generic term for many insects, but the stinking house-bug is the species usually meant.

Bug'-gy, 77, 105: a. Abounding in bugs; the word is also used substantively for a low, snug, one-horse chaise.

BUG, or BUGBEAR, būg'-bāre, 100: s. Something that scares; something that raises absurd affright.

BUL

BUGLE, bū-gl, 101: s. A hunting or a military horn.

BUGLE, bū-gl, s. A shining bead of black glass.

BUGLE, bū-gl, s. A sort of wild ox.

BUGLE, bū-gl, s. A genus of plants, Ajuga.

BUGLOSS=bū'-glōss, s. Ox-tongue, a plant.

BUILL, būl, 160, 139: s. Unburnished gold, brass, or mother of pearl used for inlaying.

Buhl'-work, (-wurk, 141) s. Work in which wood is inlaid with metal or pearl, &c.

To BUILD, bīld, 120: v. a. and n. To raise

I BUILT, bīlt, } as a fabric or edifice; to raise BUILT, bīlt, } in any laboured form; to raise on a support or foundation:—neu. To act as an architect; to depend.

Buil'-ded, part. Built; erected. [Little used.]

Buil'-der, s. One who builds; an architect.

Buil'-ding, s. An edifice; the art of raising fabrics.

BULB=būlb, s. Generally, a spherical protuberance; appropriately, a bud formed under ground upon or near the root of certain herbaceous plants; as the tulip, lily, and onion. Bulbo-tuber, a stem like a bulb.

Bul'-bous, 120: a. Containing bulbs; bulbed.

To Bulb, v. n. To bulge, or be protuberant.

BULGE=būlg, s. The broadest part of a cask; a protuberance. The word is allied to Belly.

To Bulge, v. n. To swell out; to be protuberant.

BULGE, s. The broadest part of a ship's bottom.

To Bilge, v. n. To suffer a fracture in the bilge; to let in water; to spring a leak.

Bilge'-wa-ter, 140: s. Water that lies in a ship's bilge.

Bil'-lage, 99: s. The breadth of a ship's floor when aground.

BULIMY, bū-lē-mēy, 105: s. A diseased voracious appetite.

BULK, būlk, s. Originally, the largest part of any thing, the bulge; (see above); hence, whatever juts out, as a part of a building; and hence magnitude of material; substance in general; size; quantity; the gross; the majority.

Bul'-ky, 105: a. Of great size.

Bul'-ki-ness, s. Greatness in bulk or size.

Bulk-head', 120: s. A partition across a ship.

BULL, būl, 117: s. The male of bovine animals; an enemy fierce as a bull. As a cant term, see Supp.

Bul'-lock, 18: s. An ox or castrated bull.

Bul'-chin, 63: s. A bull-calf. [Obs.]

Words compounded with Bull are numerous; the prefix being often used with reference only to the size or make of the animal: as, Bul'-rush is a large rush; Bul'-fash, a flash with a bull neck; while a Bul'-beggar may have been one who begged under the sanction of a pope's bull, or a bellowing beggar. The following are some of the compounds.

Bull'-bait-ing, s. The exciting of bulls with dogs.

Bull'-calf, (-cāf, 122) s. A he calf; a stupid fellow.

Bull'-dog, s. A species of courageous English dog.

Bul'-d-rye, 106: s. A name used in many cases for a circle or circular appearance, as a ring; the star in the head of the constellation Taurus.

Bull'-finch, s. A bird of the sparrow kind.

Bull'-head, (-hēd, 120) s. A stupid fellow.

Bul'-rush, s. A rush growing in the wet.

BULL, būl, 117: s. Originally, a boss, bulb, seal, or stamp; hence, the seal appended to the pope's letter or edict; hence, the edict itself; and hence, from the alleged contradiction between the imperial style of the edict, and its meek terms of subscription a contradiction or blunder generally. Bul'-late, see in Supp.

Bul'-la-ry, 105: s. A collection of papistical bulls

Bul'-lish, a. Partaking of the nature of a blunder

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

BUFLACE, bōōl'-lācē, 117, 99. s. A wild sour plum.

BULLET, bōōl'-lēt, 117, 14: s. A round ball of metal.

BULLETIN, bōōl'-lē-tēn, [Fr.] 170: s. An official report.

BULLION, bōōl'-yūn, 117, 146, 18: s. Gold and silver considered simply as material, and according to weight.

BULLITION, bū-līsh'-ūn, 89: s. Ebullition. [Obs.]

BULLOCK, &c.—See under Bull.

BULLY, bōōl'-lēy, 117, 105: s. A blustering, quarrelsome fellow, with little or no real courage.

To Bul'-ly, v. a. and n. To overbear with menaces: —new. To bluster; to threaten.

BULTEL=būl'-tēl, s. A bolter; the bran after sifting.

BULWARK, bōōl'-work, 140, 38: s. A bastion; a fortification; a security.

To Bul'-wark, v. a. To strengthen with bulwarks.

BUM=būm, s. The part we sit on. [Ludicrous.]

BUMBALIFF=būm-bāl'-iff, s. A bound-bailiff. [Ludicrous.]

BUMBARD, BUMBAST.—See Bombard, Bombast.

BUMBOAT, BUMKIN.—See under Bump.

BUMP=būmp, s. A swelling; a protuberance.

To Bump, v. a. To strike against something. As a verb neuter, it may be found in old authors in the sense of To boom, but with this sense it ought to be written bumb. The bumb-see is a corruption of bumb-see derived from this word. Compare To Boom and Bombilation.

BUM'-KIN, s. An old sea term for what was also called the luff block.

BUM'-BOAT, 105: s. A boat that brings provisions to a ship from shore.

BUM'-PEX, s. A glass with liquor swelling above the brim.

BUM'-KIN, 156: s. An awkward, heavy rustic.

BUM'-kin-ly, 105: a. Clownish.

BUN=būn, s. A kind of light cake.

BUNCH=būntch, 63: s. A hard lump; a cluster; a knot.

Bunch'-y, 105: a. Growing in bunches, having tufts.

Bunch'-backed, (-backt, 114, 143) a. Crook-backed.

To Bunch, v. n. To swell out into a bunch.

BUNDLE, būn'-dl, 101: s. A package of things made up loosely.

To Bun'-dle, v. a. and n. To tie up in a bundle: —new. To prepare for departure; to depart.

BUNG=būng, 72: s. A stopper for a barrel.

Bung'-hole, s. The opening in a barrel.

To Bung, v. a. To stop up with a bung.

To BUNGLE, būng'-gl, 158, 101: v. n. and a. To perform clumsily: —act. To botch.

Bun'-gler, 36: s. A bad workman; an awkward, unskilful person.

Bun'-gling-ly, 105: ad. Clumsily.

Bun'-gle, s. A botch; an act awkwardly done.

BUNT=būnt, s. The middle part or cavity of a sail.

Bunt'-lines, 143: s. pl. Ropes to draw the sails to the yards.

BUNTING=būn'-tīng, s. A thin woollen cloth, of which ships' flags are made.

BUN'-TER, s. A woman that collects from the streets rags of all colours and patches; hence, a low, vulgar woman.

BUNTING=būn'-tīng, s. A bird so called.

BOOY, bwoy, 145, 29: s. A floating object, generally a close empty cask, to indicate shoals, anchoring places, or the place of a ship's anchor.

To Buoy, v. a. and n. To keep afloat; to bear up: —new. To float.

BOY'-ANT, 12: a. Floating; light; elastic.

Booy'-an-cy, 105: s. The quality of floating or rising

BUR=bur, 39: s. The prickly head of burdock.

Bur'-dock, s. A plant of much annoyance as a weed.

Bur'-not, s. A fish full of prickles.

BURDEN, bur'-dn, 114: s. The verse repeated in the parts of a song; the chorus: from a word signifying the base, or droning accompaniment.—See Burthen.

BUREAU, bū-rō', 108: s. A chest of drawers, with conveniences for writing; an office. Bureaucracy, s.

BURGAMOT.—See Bergamot.

BURGANET=bur'-gd-nēt, s. A kind of helmet.

BURGH, burg, 39, 162: s. A borough; which see. The latter word is often spelled Burrow in correspondence with its pronunciation, and the former, Berg, and Burg.

Burgh'-er, 36: s. A member of a borough.

Burgh'-er-ship, s. The privileges of a burgher.

Burgh'-bote, s. A contribution for the defences of a town.—Compare Boat.

Burgh'-mote, s. The meeting or court of a borough.

Burgh'-mas-ter, s. The magistrate of a city; or

Bur'-go-mas-ter, s. one employed in its government.

Bur'-grave, s. An hereditary earl or governor of a town.

Bur'-gage, 99: s. A tenure in socage proper to cities and towns, by which tenements are held of the king, or other lord, for a certain yearly rent.

BUR'-GESS, 64: s. The same as Burgher.

Bur'-gess-ship, s. Burghership.

BURGH-EROIS, bōōr'-zhwāw, [Fr.] 170: s. and a. A burgher: —a. Citizen-like. As the name of a species of type, (probably derived from the name of a type-founder or printer,) it has a technical English pronunciation; for which see the word in its place.

BURGLAR=burg'-lar, 34: s. A thief that enters a house (burg) by night; though the latter circumstance does not enter into the meaning of the original word. The word is also written, though less properly, Burglarer, Burglerer, and Burglayer.

Burg'-lar-y, 99, 105: s. Housebreaking, or the crime of entering a house by night to rob it.

Bur'-glar-ry-ous, (-glār'-rūs, 90, 41, 105, 120) a. Relating to housebreaking.

BURGUNDY, būrg'-gūn-dēy, s. A French wine so called. Burgundy-pitch is from the Spruce fir.

BURIAL, &c.—See under Bury.

BURINE, bū-rīn, 105: a. The tool of an engraver.

*To BURL=burl, 39: v. a. To dress cloth as fullers do.*

Bur'-r, 36: s. A dresser of cloth.

BURLACE=bur'-lācē, s. A sort of grape.

BURLESQUE, bur'-lēsk', 76: a. and s. Tending to excite laughter by contrast between the subject and manner of treating it.—a. Ludicrous contrast: a composition in any of the arts that ridicules a person or thing by contrast.

To Bur'-lesque, v. a. To turn to ridicule.

Bur'-les-quer, (-ker, 36) s. One who burlesques.

BUR'-LET-ty, 98: s. A comic or farcical opera. [Ital.]

BURLY, bur'-lēy, 105: s. Big, bulky, swelled, boisterous.

Bur'-li-ness, s. Bulkiness, bluster.

*To BURN=burn, 39: v. a. and n. To consume with fire; to wound with fire; to warm with fire: —new. To be on fire; to act as fire; to shiue; to be in* flamed with passion; to be in a state of destructive commotion.

Burnt, part. Burned, of which it is the more common form.

Burn, s. A wound caused by fire.

Burn'er, 36; s. He that burns in an active sense; the part of a lamp that holds the wick.

Burn'ing, a. and s. Flaming; vehement; powerful;—s. State of inflammation; act of burning.

Burn'ing-glass, s. A convex glass which collects, or a concave one which condenses the sun's rays.

To BURNISH=bur'-nish, v. a. and n. To polish; to give a gloss to:—acc. To grow bright.

Bur'-nish, s. A gloss.

Bur'-nish-er, s. He that burnishes; a burnishing tool.

BURR=bur, 39, 155; s. The lobe or tip of the ear; the round knob of the horn next a deer's head. It is impossible to trace any connection or general meaning among its other applications: it is a name sometimes given to the sweetbread; among workmen, it means a triangular chisel used to clear the corners of mortises; it is also the name of a round iron ring used with a cannon; and with a lance; it is applied to the guttural pronunciation of the rough r, common in some of the northern provinces: and of a word so indefinitely used, there may be other meanings allied to each of these. See also Bur.

BURREL=bur'-rēl, 129, 14; s. A sort of pear so called.

BURREL=bur'-rēl, 129, 14; a. The burrel-fly is the ox-fly; burrel-shot is a sort of case-shot. It signifies tormenting.

BURROCK=bur'-rōck, s. A small dam for catching fish.

BURROW, bur'-rō, 129, 125; s. A place consisting of various entrances and chambers, which some animals, particularly rabbits, excavate in the earth for shelter and habitation. The word is also sometimes used for Barrow, and also for Borough; which see in their places.

To Bur'-row, v. n. and a. To make holes in, and dwell under the ground:—act. To excavate.

BURSE=burce, 153; s. Originally, a purse; appropriately, an exchange or place for consulting on matters of money and business.

BUR'-sar, 34; s. The treasurer of a college; in Scotland, an exhibitioner.

Bur'-sar-ship, s. The office of a bursar.

Bur'-sar-y, 129, 105; s. The treasury of a college; in Scotland, an exhibition in a college.

To BURST, } =burst, 39; v. n. and a. To break or fly open; to fly asunder;

BURST, } to break away; to come suddenly or with violence:—act. To break open suddenly.

Burs'-ten, 114; part. Burst; ruptured. [Obs.]

Burst, s. A sudden disruption.

BURT=burt, 39; s. A flat fish of the turbot kind.

BURTHEN, bur'-thn, 114; s. Something borne: a load; something grievous; the quantity a ship will carry; a birth. The burthen of a song may be that which a song principally bears or carries; but burden is the original expression.—See Burden. Indeed, all the words of the present class are found with d instead of th, though less properly.

To Bur'-then, v. a. To load.

Bur'-then-ous, 120; a. Grievous; useless; cumbersome.

Bur'-then-some, (-sūm, 107) s. Troublesome to be borne.

Bur'-then-some-ness, s. Weight, heaviness.

BURTON, bur'-tn, s. Certain tackle in a ship.

BURY, bē'-lē, 109; s. The same word, originally, as Borough, Burgh, or Burrow, and to be met with in old authors with the same meaning.

To BURY, bē'-lē, 109; v. a. To deposit in a grave; to deposit with funeral rites; to conceal, to place one thing within another.

Bur'-y-ing, s. Burial.

Bur'-i-al, (bē'-l-āl) s. The act of burying; a funeral.

Bur'-i-al-place, s. A place for graves.

BURY, bū'-rēy, 105; s. A pear of buttery (buerre) or melting quality.

BUSH, būsh, 117; s. A thick shrub; the sign of a tavern, which used to be a bush; a fox's tail.

Bush'-y, 105; a. Thick as a bush; full of bushes.

Bush'-i-ness, s. The quality of being bushy.

To Bush, v. n. To grow thick.

BUSH, būsh, s. The iron in the nave (bouche) of a wheel.

BUSHEL, būsh'-ēl, 117, 14; s. A dry measure of eight gallons; a large quantity.

Bush'-el-age, 99; s. A duty per bushel.

BUSINESS, &c.—See under Busy.

BUSK=būsk, s. A piece of steel or whalebone worn by women to strengthen their stays.

To BUSK=būsk, v. n. and a. To dress; to prepare. [Obs.]

BUSKET=būsk'-kēt, 14; s. A grove; a bundle of sprigs. [Obs.]

Busk'-y, 105; a. Woody. Compare Bosage, &c.

BUSKIN=būsk'-kīn, s. A kind of half boot; in particular, such as was worn, with a raised sole, by the ancient actors of tragedy; figuratively, tragedy itself.

Bus'-kined, 114; a. Dressed in buskins; tragic.

BUSS=būss, s. A kiss. With no alliance to this word, a herring-fisher's boat is also so called.

To Buss, v. a. To kiss. [An old word, but grown vulgar.]

BUST=būst, s. A statue of the human figure as far down as the breast; the corresponding part in the real figure.

Bus'-to, (bōss'-to, [Ital.] 170) s. A bust; the trunk without the head and limbs; a statue.

BUSTARD=būst'-tard, 34; s. A wild turkey.

To BUSTLE, būs'-sl, 156, 101; v. n. To be busy with quickness of motion.

Bus'-tler, 36; s. An active, stirring person.

Bus'-tle, s. A tumult; a hurry; noise in moving about.

BUSY, bīz'-lē, 109; a. Employed with earnestness; bustling; troublesome.

Bus'-i-ly, 105; ad. With hurry; actively.

Bus'-i-less, a. At leisure.

Bus'-i-ness, (bīz'-nēss) s. Employment; an affair; the subject of business; serious engagement; a point; a matter of question; something to be transacted; something required to be done.

Bus'-y-bod'-y, 85, 105; s. A meddling person.

To Bus'-y, v. a. To employ; to engage.

BUT=būt, conj. and ad. Yet; however; nevertheless; further; moreover; except; now; otherwise than that; unless:—ad. Only; no more than.

BUT=būt, s. The end of any thing; a boundary; the end of a plank where it joins another outside a ship.

But'-end, s. The but or blunt end. [A pleonasm.]

To But, v. a. To touch at one end; to abut.

But'-ment, s. That part of the arch that joins the pier.

BUTCHER, būch'-er, 117, 36; s. One that kills animals to sell their flesh; one that delights in slaughter.

Butch'-er-ly, 105; a. Cruel, bloody.

Butch'-er-y, 129; s. The trade of a butcher; slaughter-house; slaughter.

To Butch'-er, v. a. To slaughter; to murder.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165; vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165; ātīn, 166; thēn, 166

BUTLER=büt'-ler, s. A servant in a family employed in furnishing the table.

Etymologists derive this word from the verb To Bottle in its old French form; but the original word was more probably Batteler and Battler, than Buttlér.

—See To Battel.

But'-ler-age, 129: s. A duty on wine that used to be paid to the king's butler.

But'-ler-ship, s. The office of a butler.

But'-ter-ry, 129, 105: s. The old name (butlery) for the butler's pantry; a place where provisions are kept.

BUTT=büt, 155: s. A mark to be shot at; the point to which endeavour tends; the object of aim; a person who is the object of jests; a blow from an animal's horns; a blow of the same kind from a weapon.

But'-shaft, s. An arrow.

To Butt, v. a. To strike with the head or horns.

BUTT=büt, s. A large barrel; a beer measure of 108 gallons.

BUTTER=büt'-ter, s. An unctuous substance of a yellow colour obtained by churning cream; any substance resembling butter.

But'-ter-y, 129, 105: a. Having the qualities or appearance of butter.—See also under Butler.

To But'-ter, v. a. To spread with butter; to add something in the way of advantage or relish.

But'-ter-cup, s. A well-known yellow flower.

But'-ter-fly, s. A beautiful summer insect so named from the yellow species, or from the butter season.

But'-ter-milk, s. The milk which remains when butter has been made.

Butter is compounded with many other words: But'-ter-bump (or bum) is a name given to the bitterness; But'-ter-bur is a plant; But'-ter-print or But'-ter-stamp is a stamp used by retail But'-ter-mongers; But'-ter-tooth is one of the front broad teeth; But'-ter-wife is a But'-ter-woman, or a woman that sells butter; But'-ter-wort is a plant; &c.

BU'-TY-RÁ'-CEOUS, (-sh'ús, 147) } a. Having the BU'-TY-ROUS, (-rús, 120) } qualities of butter; buttery.

BUTTOCK=büt'-töck, 18: s. The rump.

BUTTON, büt'-tn, 114: s. A catch of metal or other substance by which the dress of a man is fastened; any knob, ball, or small round object; the bud of a plant; the sea urchin is also so called.

To But'-ton, v. a. To fasten with a button or buttons; to dress.

But'-ton-hole, s. The hole or loop that receives the button.

There are other compound; as But'-ton-maker; But'-ton-stone; But'-ton-tree; &c.

BUTTRESS=büt'-tréss, s. A mass of stone or brickwork to support a wall; a prop; a support.

To But'-tress, v. a. To prop.

BUXEOUS, búcks'-é-ús, 154, 147: a. Pertaining to the box tree.

BUXOM, búcks'-óm, 154, 18: a. Originally, obedient, flexible; in its more modern sense, gay, lively, brisk; wanton, jolly.

Bux'-om-ly, 105: ad. Gayly, wantonly.

Bux'-om-ness, s. The quality of being buxom.

To BUY, bý, 106: }

I BOUGHT, báwt, 126: } chase; to acquire by

BOUGHT, báwt, 162: } paying a price, strictly, by paying coin, and so distinguished from bartering;
see. To be in the habit of buying.

Buy'-er, 36: s. He that buys; a purchaser.

To BUZZ=büz, 155: v. n. and a. To hum; to make a sound like a bee; to whisper.—ad. To whisper or spread secretly abroad.

Buz'-zer, 36: s. A secret whisperer.

Buzz, s. The noise of a bee or fly; a whisper.

BUZZARD=büz'-zard, 34: s. and a. A sluggish species of hawk; a blockhead;—a. Senseless, undiscriminating.

BY=bý, [as a prep. often bé, 176] prep. ad. and a. Originally, this word is the same as the prefix Be-, or the verb To be: it signifies existence and proximity, and as a preposition is placed before a noun or pronoun of specification in connection with some verb, its alleged various meanings as a preposition being that of the various context, and not of the preposition abstractedly. As an adverb, it likewise signifies near; hence it comes to signify aside; over or neglectingly; away. As an adjective, in composition its most frequent meaning is private, retired: as a By-corner, By-room, By-lane, By-street, By'-turning, By'-walk, By'-way, By'-end, By'-law, By'-view, By'-drinking; in all of which it signifies private. In By-gone, By-past, it signifies over. In By-speech, By-name, By-stroke, By-word, it signifies aside; a speech, a name, a stroke, a word which a person turns aside, or stops for a moment to utter or make. To be a By-name is to be a name which all persons stop in their discourse or way to utter. In the same manner, a By-word is a word of common utterance, a proverb. In By-stander, it has its plain original meaning, near.

BYE, bý, s. A Saxon word signifying a dwelling; village; or town; and hence, according to some etymologists, the term By-laws, namely, the peculiar laws of the place.—See the word above, among the compounds of By. In the expression Good bye, it has been supposed to have the meaning of passage or journey; in which case the phrase is exactly equivalent to Farewell: but is not the sentence a contraction of Good, or God be with you (Good be wi' ye), and so equivalent to Adieu!

BYSSUS=býs'-sús, s. Fine linen or silk in wear.

[Obs.] Bys'-siter, a species of mollusk.

Bys'-sine, 105: s. Made of fine linen or silk.

BYZANTINE.—See Bizantine and Bezan.

C.

C, the third letter of the alphabet. Its sounds are the 76th and 59th elements of the schemes prefixed. The diagraph ch has three sounds (see principles 161), the first, its proper English sound, is the 63d element of the schemes, equivalent to rch; its second, is the 61st element, equivalent to sh; and its third is the 76th element, equivalent to x.

CAB=cab, s. A Hebrew measure about three pints.—See also Cabriolet.

CABALA=cáb'-d-lá, s. The traditional science of the Jewish rabbins, by which every letter, word, number, and accent of the law is supposed to be significant in an extraordinary and mysterious manner.

Cab'-a-lism, 158: s. Science that is part of, or resembles the Cabala.

Cab'-a-list, s. One skilled in Jewish tradition.

Cab'-a-lis'-tic, 88: }

Cab'-a-lis'-i-cal, } a. Having an occult meaning.

Cab'-a-lis'-ta-cal-ly, ad. Mysteriously.

To Cab'-a-lize, v. n. To speak after the manner of the cabalists.

CA-bal', (cá-bal') s. Originally the same as Cabala; at present, it means a junto or small party of men united in close design to effect a party purpose: a political appropriation derived from the initial letters of Clifford, Ashley, Buckingham, Arlington, and Lauderdale, cabinet ministers in the reign of Charles the Second, who, carrying on their designs in secret, received the name which their initials happened to spell.

To Ca-bal', v. n. To form close intrigues.

Ca-bal'-ler, 36: s. An intriguer.

CABALLINE=cáb'-ál-líne, a. Belonging to a horse.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gáú'-wáy: cháú'-mán: pá-pá': iáu: góú: j'ou, i. e. jew. 55: a, e, i, &c. note. 171.

CABARET, cǎb'-d-rǎy, [Fr.] 170: s. A public house or tavern.

CABBAGE=cǎb'-bǎge, 99: s. A broad leaved vegetable.

To Cab'-bage, v. n. To form a head in the manner of a cabbage while growing. See also the next class.

Cab'-bage-net, s. A net for boiling cabbages in.

Cab'-bage-tree, s. A species of palm tree.

To CABBAGE=cǎb'-bǎge, v. a. To purloin or embezzle. See also above.

CABIN=cǎb'-in, s. A small room; a room in a ship; a booth; a cottage or small house.

Cab'-in-boy, s. A servant boy on board ship.

Cab'-in-mate, s. One who occupies the same cabin.

To Cab'-in, v. n. and v. a. To live or be in a cabin:—act. To confine in a cabin; to straiten.

CAB'-in-NET, 105: s. A closet; a small room: a small house; a room in which consultations are held; the collective body of ministers who consult on and determine the measures of government; a set of boxes or drawers for curiosities; any place for keeping things of value.

Cab'-in-net-coun'-cil, s. A council held with privacy; the members of the council.

Cab'-in-net-ma'-ker, s. A maker of all articles of wooden furniture which require nice workmanship.

CABLE, cǎ'-bl, 101: s. The rope of a ship to which the anchor is fastened; a large rope.

Ca'-bled, 114: a. Fastened with a cable.

Ca'-ble-tier, (-tǎr, 103) s. The place where the cables are coiled away.

Ca'-blet, s. A little cable; a tow-rope.

To CABOB, cǎ-bǒb', v. a. To roast in an Asiatic mode.

CABOSHED, cǎ-bǒshé', 114, 143: part. a. Represented as a head only without adding the neck; a term in heraldry.

CABOOSE=cǎ-bōoc', 152: s. The cook-room of a ship.

CABRIOLET, cǎb'-rǎ-b-lǎy', [Fr.] 170: s. A one horse chair with a large hood, and a covering for the legs and lap. The word is very commonly shortened by English mouths into Cab.

CACAO.—See Cocoa.

CACHET, cǎsh'-ǎy, [Fr.] 170: s. A sealed letter or order.

CACHEXY, cǎ-kěck'-sěy, 161, 154: s. Generally, an evil habit; appropriate'y, an evil habit of body in a medicinal sense.

Ca'-chec'-tic, 88: } a. Having an evil state of body.

Ca'-chec'-ti-cil, } a. Having an evil state of body.

CAC'-o-CHYM'-y, (cǎck''-ō-kím'-ěy, 85) s. An evil state of the fluids of the body.

Cac'-o-chym'-ic, 85, 88: } a. Having the fluids

Cac'-o-chym'-i-cal, 12: } of the body, especially the blood, vitiated.

CAC'-o-DĒ'-MON, 103, 18: s. An evil spirit; the devil.

CAC'-o-E''-THES, (-thěz, 101) s. A bad custom; a bad disposition; an incurable ulcer.

CA-COD'-RA-PHY, (-fěy, 163) 87: s. Bad spelling.

CA-COPH'-O-NY, (-cǒf'-ō-něy, 87) 163: s. An uncouth sound; a depraved or altered state of voice; a discord. Hence, Ca-coph'-o-nous, a.

CAC'-o-TECH'-NY, 161, 105: s. A corruption of art.

CA-COT'-RO-PHY, (-fěy, 163) 87: s. Vicious nutrition.

CACHINNATION, cǎck'-l-nǎ'-shūn, 161, 85, 89: s. Loud laughter.

To CACK=cǎck', v. n. A classical but in English a childish word for going to stool.

Cack'-er-el, s. A fish said to void excrements when pursued.

To CACKLE, cǎck'-kl, 101: v. n. To make a noise like a hen or goose; to giggle.

Cac'-kle, s. The noise made by a goose or fowl, idle talk; prattle.

Cac'-kler, 36: s. A goose or hen; a tell-tale; a tattler.

CACOCHYMY, &c.—See after Cachexy.

To CACUMINATE, cǎ-cū'-mē-nǎte, 105: v. a. To make sharp or pyramidal.

CADAVÉR=cǎ-dǎ'-ver, 36: s. A corpse. [Lat.]

Ca-dav'-er-us, 92, 129, 120: a. Corpse-like.

CADDIS=cǎd'-dise, s. Worsted galloon; tape, ribbon.

CADE=cǎde, s. A barrel.

CAD'-DIS, or Cade'-worm, s. A kind of grub.

CAD'-UR, 105: s. A small box mostly used as a tea case.

CADE=cǎde, a. Bred by hand, domesticated.

To Cade, v. a. To bring up by hand; to tame.

CADENT=cǎ'-dēnt, a. Falling down; sinking.

CA'-DENCE, s. Literally, a fall, a decline; the fall of the voice as a sentence draws to its end and closes; the rhythmical fall of the hand or foot real or imaginary in singing or speaking; and hence the modulation of the bars or clauses so divided; the termination of a musical passage in a repose or perfect chord; in horsemanship, an equal measure or proportion which a horse keeps in his motions; in heraldry, the descent and consequently the distinction of families.

CA'-DEN'-ZA, (cǎ-dēnt'-zd, [Ital.] 170) s. A musical cadence.

CADENE=cǎ-dēn', s. Turkey carpet of inferior sort.

CADET=cǎ-dēt', s. The younger of two brothers; the youngest son; a volunteer in the army, who however receives pay, and serves in expectation of a commission; a young man in a military school.

*To CADGE=cǎdge, v. a. To carry a burden; to load. Cad, a coachman's helper, seems an abbrev.*

Cad'-ger, 36: s. One who brings butter eggs and poultry to market; a huckster; one who loads a mill.

CADI, cǎ'-dēy, 105: s. A Turkish magistrate.

CADMEAN=cǎd-mē'-ǎn, 86: a. Relating to Cadmus, who introduced letters into Greece.

CADUCEUS, cǎ-dū'-shě-ūs, 147: s. The rod of Mercury.

Cad'-u-cē'-an, 86: a. Pertaining to the rod of Mercury.

CADUCITY, cǎ-dū'-cě-těy, s. Tendency to fall.

Ca-du'-cous, 120: a. Falling early, as a leaf.

CÆSARIAN, CÆSURA, &c.—See Caesarian, Cæsura, &c.

CAFTAN=cǎf'-tǎn, s. A Persian vest or garment.

CAG=cǎg, s. A small barrel; a keg.

CAGE=cǎge, s. An enclosure of twigs or wire for birds; a place for wild beasts; a prison for petty malefactors.

To Cage, v. a. To put in a cage.

CAGMAG=cǎg'-mǎg, s. Tough old geese sent to market; tough dry meat.

CAIQUE, cǎ-ěck', [Fr.] 170: s. The skiff of a galley; a light boat used in the Bosphorus.

CAIMAN=cǎ'-mǎn, s. The West-Indian alligator.

CAIRN=cǎvrn, s. A heap of stones.

CAISSON.—See under Case.

CAITIFF=cǎ'-tíf, s. and a. A mean villain:—a Base; scurvy.

CAJEPUT=cǎd'-gě-pūt, s. An oil from the East-Indies.

To CAJOLE=cǎ-jōl', v. a. To flatter; to coax to deceive or delude by flattery.

Ca-jō'-ler, 36: s. A flatterer; a wheedler.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mǐsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vǐzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: tǎn, 166: thěn, 166.

Ca-jo'-ler-y, 129, 105: s. Flattery; delusion by flattery.

CAKE=cāke, s. A small mass of dough baked, and generally sweetened; something in the form of a cake rather broad or flat than high; any mass of matter concentered.

To Cake, v. a. and n. To form into a cake or mass:—neu. To concrete or harden as dough in baking.

CALABASH=cāl'-d-bāsh, s. A species of large gourd; a vessel made from the shell of a calabash.

Cal'-a-bash-tree, s. A tree natural to the West-Indies, with the shells of whose fruit the negroes make cups and a sort of musical instrument.

CALAMANCO, cāl'-d-māng'-cō, 158: s. A glossy woollen stuff.

CALAMBAC=cāl'-ām-bäck, s. Aloes-wood.

CALAMINE, cāl'-d-mīn, 105: s. An ore of zinc, much used in the composition of brass.

CALAMINT=cāl'-d-mīnt, s. An aromatic plant.

CALAMITY, cāl'-lām'-tēty, 81, 105: s. A great misfortune, or cause of misery.

Ca-lam'-i-tous, 120: a. Involved in calamity; producing misery.

Ca-lam'-i-tous-ly, ad. Very unfortunately.

Ca-lam'-i-tous-ness, s. Wretchedness.

CALAMUS=cāl'-d-mūs, s. A reed; a pen, which anciently was made of a reed; a sweet-scented cane used by the Jews for a perfume.

Cal'-a-mi'-er-ous, a. Producing reedy plants.

Cal'-a-mit, s. A mineral so called.

CALASH=cāl'-lāsh', s. A light, low-wheeled carriage, with a covering to be let down at pleasure; a sort of hood.

CALCAVALLA, CALCEATED, &c.—See after the ensuing class.

CALX, cālcs=cālks, s. sing. } Lime or chalk;

CALCES, cāl'-cōz, 101: s. pl. } more appropriately, the substance of a metal or mineral which remains after being subjected to violent heat, burning, or calcination, solution by acids, or detonation by nitre, and which is or may be reduced to fine powder. Metallic calces are now called oxides, and are heavier than the metal they are produced from because combined with oxygen.

Cal'-cār, s. A calcining furnace.

Cal'-cār-re-ous, 41, 120: a. Partaking of the nature of chalk or lime.

Cal'-cār-er-ous, (-sīl'-ār-ūs) a. Producing chalk.

Cal'-cār-form (-sē-fārm) a. In the form of calx.

To Cal'-cār-nate, v. a. To calcine. [Obs.]

Cal'-cār-nat-er, s. A vessel used in calcination.

To CAL'-cīne, v. a. and n. To reduce a substance to a powder or to a friable state by the action of heat; to oxidize; to destroy the principles which unite:—neu. To be converted into a powder, or into a calx by the action of heat.

Cal'-cī-na-ble, 101: a. That may be calcined.

Cal'-cī-na'-tion, 89: s. The operation of calcining.

Cal'-cī-um, (cāl'-sē-ūm, 147) s. The metallic basis of lime.

CAL'-cog'-ra-phy, (-fēy, 163) s. Engraving in chalk, or in the likeness of chalk. Chalcography, which is pronounced the same, is engraving in brass.

To CALK=cāl'k, v. a. To cover with chalk the back of a picture, for the purpose of transferring the design by a subsequent process. See also in its place.

CALCAVALLA, cāl'-cō-vāl'-ld, s. A Portuguese sweet wine.

CALCEATED=cāl'-sē-d-tēd, 147: a. Shod, or wearing shoes; a word which also originates from Calx, but Calx the heel, and not Calx, chalk.

CAL'-kin, s. A part prominent in a horse shoe; vulgarly pronounced caw'-kin.

CALCEDONY.—See Chalcedony.

CALCULUS=cāl'-cū-lūs, s. (Plural, Calculi.) A stone, and in this literal sense related to Calx; a stone in the bladder or kidneys; a stone used for calculation or voting. See four words lower.

Cal'-cū-lar-y, a. and s. Relating to the disease called the stone:—s. The accumulation of little stony knots in a pear or other fruit.

Cal'-cū-lose, (-lōcē, 152) } a. Stony; gritty.

Cal'-cū-lous, 120: }

CAL'-cū-lu-s, s. An instrument or means of calculation. In the earliest times this was a pebble or a number of pebbles. In the present state of mathematics, the term is applied to the methods employed in the higher branches of the science; thus, in fluxions, there is the differential, the exponential, and the integral calculus; and algebra has been called the literal calculus.

Cal'-cū-le, s. Reckoning, computation. [Obs.]

To Cal'-cū-late, v. a. and n. To compute; to reckon; to adjust:—neu. To make computations.

Cal'-cū-la-ble, 101: a. That may be computed.

Cal'-cū-la'-tion, 89: s. The art of reckoning; the result of an operation in practical mathematics.

Cal'-cū-la'-tive, 85, 105: a. Belonging to calculation.

Cal'-cū-la'-tor, 38: s. A computer.

Cal'-cū-la'-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Belonging to calculation.

CALDRON, cāl'-drōn, 112, 18: s. A boiler; a very large kettle.

CALEDONIAN, cāl'-dō-nē-ān, 90, 105: a. and s. Scotch; a Scotchman.

To CALEFY=cāl'-lē-fy, 81, 6: v. n. and a. To grow warm or hot:—act. To make warm or hot.

Cal'-e-fac'-cient, (-fā-shēnt, 147) a. and s. Warming; heating:—s. That which warms or heats.

Cal'-e-fac'-tion, 89: s. State of being heated; act of heating.

Cal'-e-fac'-tive, 105: a. That makes hot.

Cal'-e-fac'-tor-y, 129: a. That heats or makes hot.

To CAL'-en-den, 36: v. a. To dress cloth by hot-pressing.

Cal'-en-der, s. A hot press for smoothing cloth.

Cal'-en-derer, s. He who calenders; improperly, a calender.

CAL'-en-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. A sun fever, in which it is common to imagine the sea to be green fields.

Cal'-id, a. Hot; burning; ardent.

Ca-lid'-i-ty, 98, 81, 105: s. Heat.

Cal'-i-duct, s. A pipe or stove to convey heat.

CA-LU'-ric, 98, 47: s. The name applied by some chemists to a supposed fluid as the cause of heat.

Cal'-or-i-fic, 92, 88: a. Heating.

Cal'-or-im'-eter, 36: s. An instrument to measure heat. Calorimotor, see in Supp.

CALENDS=cāl'-ēndz, 143: s. pl. The first day of every month among the Romans.

Cal'-en-dar, 34: s. A yearly register; an almanac.

To Cal'-en-dar, v. a. To enter in a calendar.

See Calendar under Calcy.

CALF, cāl', 122: s. sing. } The young of a cow;

CALVES, cāl'vz, 143: s. pl. } a stupid fellow. The bulbous part of the leg: so named because the original word signified that which issues or swells.

To Calve, v. n. To bring forth a calf.

CALIBER, cāl'-lē-ber, 105, 36: s. The diameter of a body; the capacity of a gun's bore.

Ca-li'-bre, (-cē-ē-br. [Fr.] 170) s. The capacity or compass of the mind. In this figurative sense, usage has not yet Anglicized the word.

CALICE, cāl'-iss, 105: s. A cup or chalice.

The schemes entire, and the principles to show, the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gat'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā'-pā': lāw: gōd: fō. i. e. Jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. note, 174.

CAL-ix, 154: s. A cup; sometimes confounded with Calyx.
CALICO, cāl'-ē-cō, s. A stuff made of cotton.
CALID, CALENTURE, &c.—See under Calify.
CALIGATION, cāl'-ē-gā'-shūn, s. Darkness, cloudiness.
Cd-lig'-i-nous, (cā'-līd'-gē-nūs, 64) a. Obscure; dim.
Cd-lig'-i-nous-ness, s. Obscurity; dimness.
CALIPASH, cāl'-ē-pāsh', } s. Terms of cookery
CALIPÉE, cāl'-ē-pe', } relating to a turtle.
CALIPH, cāl'-līf, 163: s. A title assumed by the successors of Mahomet.
Cal'-i-phate, 92: s. The office or dignity of caliph.
CALIVER, cāl'-ē-ver, 105, 36: s. A hand-gun or arquebuse.
CALIX.—See under Calice; and CALYX after Calypter.
To CALK, cāk, 112: v. a. To stop up the seams of a ship.—See also under Calcea.
Cal'-k'-er, 36: s. The workman that calks a ship.
Cal'-ing-i-ron, (-i-urn, 159) s. A chisel for calking.
Cal'. See Calkin under Calceated.
To CALL, cāl, 112: v. a. and n. To name; to summon; to convoke; to summon judicially; to summon by command; in the theological sense, to inspire with ardours of piety; to inv. & to appeal to; to resume any thing that is in *Al*er hands:—see. To stop without intention of *see*ing; to make a short visit; To call upon, to implore.
Call, s. A vocal address of summons; requisition authoritative and public; divine vocation or summons from heaven; authority; command; a demand; an instrument to call birds; a sort of pipe used by the boat-swain to summon the sailors; a nomination. In parliamentary language, an inquiry what members are absent without leave.
Call'-ing, s. Vocation; profession; proper station or employment; class of persons united by the same employment; divine vocation.
CALLET=cāl'-lēt, 142: s. A trull. Also spelled 'Callat.
To Cal'-let, v. n. To rail, to scold.
CALLID=cāl'-līd, 142: a. Hardened in craft; shrewd.
Cal-lid'-i-ty, s. Worldly-wisdom; craftiness.
Cal'. See Calid, &c. under Calify.
CAL-I-US, s. An induration of the fibres; the hard substance by which broken bones are united.
Cal-lo'-i-ty, 105: s. A hard swelling.
CAL-I-ous, 120: a. Indurated; hardened; insensible.
Cal'-ious-ly, 105: ad. In an unfeeling manner.
Cal'-ious-ness, s. Hardness; insensibility.
CALLIGRAPHY, cāl līg'-rd-fēy, 87, 133: s. Elegant hand-writing.
Cal'-li-graph'-ic, 85, 88: a. Pertaining to fine writing.
CAL-LI-PAX-DI-A, 101, 146: s. A beautiful progeny.
CAL-LIS-THEN'-IC, 88: a. Pertaining to exercises for bodily strength and elegance; gymnastic.
CALLIPERS, cāl'-lē-perz, 143: s. pl. Compasses for taking the caliber of round bodies.—See Caliber.
CALLOSITY, CALLOUS, &c.—See under Callid.
CALLOW, cāl'-lō, 142: a. Unfledged; naked.
CALM, cām, 122: a. and s. Quiet; serene; undisturbed:—s. Serenity; quiet; repose.
Calm'-y, 105: a. Calm. [Spencer: Cowley.]
Calm'-ly, ad. Serenely; without passions.
Calm'-ness, s. Tranquility; mildness.
To Calm, v. a. To still; to quiet.

CALOMEL=cāl'-ō-mēl, s. Chloride of mercury.
CALORIC, &c.—See under Calify.
CALOTTE, cā-lōt', [Fr.] 170: s. A colt that used to be worn by French ecclesiastics; a military skull cap; a round cavity in architecture.
CALOYER=cā-loy'-er, 29, 36: s. One of a sect of Greek monks.
CALP=cālp, s. A sub-species of carbonate of lime.
CALTROP=cāl'-trōp, s. A kind of thistle; a military instrument with prickles to wound horses' feet.
CALUMET=cāl'-ū-mēt, s. An Indian smoking pipe, which is accepted or rejected in token of war or peace.
CALUMNY, cāl'-ūm-nēy, 105: s. Slander; false charge.
To CA-LUM-NI-ATE, v. n. and a. To accuse falsely;—art. To slander.
Ca-lum'-ni-a'-tor, 85, 38: s. A slanderer.
Ca-lum'-ni-a'-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Calumnious.
Ca-lum'-ni-ous, 129: a. Slandorous; false.
Ca-lum'-ni-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. A malicious and false representation.
To CALVE.—See under Calf.
To CALVER, cāl'-ver, 122, 36: v. a. and n. To cut (fish) in slices:—see. To shrink in being cut without falling to pieces.
CALVILLE, cāl'-vīl, [Fr.] 170: s. A sort of apple.
CALVINISM, cāl'-vē-nīzm, 158: s. The tenets of Calvin, divinity professor at Geneva in the 14th century. Absolute predestination, particular election and reprobation, are esteemed its distinguishing features.
Cal'-vi-nist, s. One holding Calvinism.
Cal'-vi-nis'-tic, 88: a. Relating to the doctrines
Cal'-vi-nis'-ti-cal, } of Calvin.
CALVITY, cāl'-vē-tēy, 105: s. Baldness.
CALX.—See before Calcar and after Calash.
CALYPTER=cā-līp'-ter, s. That which covers; appropriately, the calyx of mosses.
CALYX, cāl'-icks, 154: s. The outer covering of a flower.
Cal'-y-cine, 105: a. Pertaining to a calyx.
Cal'-y-cle, 105, 101: s. A row of leaflets at the base of the Calyx.
Ca-lv'-u-late, a. Having a Calycle.
CAMBER=cām'-ber, 36: s. Something arched; as a piece of timber. Compare Gambrel.
Cam'-ber-ing, a. Bending; arching.
Cam'-brel, s. A crooked stick or iron to hang meat on.
CAMBIST=cām'-bīst, s. One skilled in the exchanges of money.
CAMBRIC, cām'-brīc, 111: s. A sort of fine linen.
CAME.—See To Come.
CAMEL=cām'-ēl, s. An animal common in Arabia, &c.
CAM'-EL-O-PARD, 85: s. The giraffe.
CAM'-E-L-OT, 18: s. Camel.
CAMEO=cām'-ē-ō, s. A sort of onyx; a stone so veined as to represent different figures; a kind of painting used in representing bass-relief. The word was originally written Cameau.
CAMERALISTIC, cām'-ēr-ā-līs'-tīc, a. Pertaining to finance. As a substantive plural, Cameralistics, it is the science of public finance. It is related, etymologically, to both the following words.
CAMERA-OBSCURA=cām'-ēr-ā-ōb-scū'-rā, s. A darkened chamber, in which, by optical contrivance, the objects without are exhibited on a white table. [Lat.]
To CAMERATE=cām'-ēr-āte, v. a. To vault.
Cam'-er-a'-ted, a. Arched, vaulted.
Cam'-er-a'-tion, s. A vaulting. Camera, a chamber. [Lat.] and Camber, are relations of these words.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166.

CAMIS=cām'-is, s. A thin transparent dress. [Obsr.]
Cam"-i-sa'-ted, a. Dressed with shirt outward.
Cam'-i-sa'-do, s. An attack by soldiers at night.
CAMLET=cām'-lēt, s. A stuff originally made of silk and camel's hair; now, chiefly of wool.
CAMOMILE.—See Chamomile.
CAMOUS, cā'-mūs, 120: a. Crooked, as to the nose. Ca'-mōys has the same meaning.
CAMP=cāmp, s. Originally, a field; appropriately, the ground on which an army pitches its tents; the order of the tents; the army encamped.
To Camp, cāmp, v. a. and n. To encamp.
Camp'-ing, s. A playing at football.
CAM-PAIGN, (-pān, 157) s. A large, open, level tract of ground; the time during which an army is in the field.
To Cam-paign, v. n. To serve in a campaign.
Cam-paign'-er, 36: s. An old soldier; a veteran.
CAM-PES-TRAL, 12: a. Growing in fields.
Cam-pes'-tri-an, 105, 12: a. Relating to fields; campestrial.
CAMPANA=cām-pā'-nd, s. Originally a bell; appropriately, the pasque flower. Campani'le, see S.
Cam-pan'-i-form, 105, 38: a. Formed as a bell.
Cam-pan'-u-late, a. Like a little bell. [Botany].
Cam'-pa-nol'-o-gy, s. The science of bell-ringing.
CAMPHOR, cām'-for, 38: } 163: s. A CAMPHIRE, cām'-fer, 105, 36: } concrete juice or exudation from the Indian laurel tree, with a bitterish aromatic taste, and very fragrant smell.
☞ The latter spelling begins to be disused. In pronunciation, there is scarcely a difference.
Cam'phor'-ate, 129: a. and s. Impregnated with camphor:—s. A compound of the acid of camphor with different bases
Cam'-phor-a'-ted, a. Impregnated with camphor.
Cam-phor'-ic, 88, 129: a. Pertaining to camphor.
CAMPION, cām'-pē-on, 105, 146, 18: s. The popular name of the Lychin. There may be other names of plants etymologically allied to this, as Campit'ia, &c. Compare Cam-p.
To CAN=cān, } v. n. To be able; in COULD, cōd, 127, 157: } Chaucer, it often means to know.
CAN=cān, s. A metal vessel for liquor.
Can'-a-kin, s. A little can.
CANAILE, cā-nā'-il, [Fr.] 170: s. The rabble.
CANAL=cā-nāl', s. A course of water made by art; a duct in the body through which any of its juices flow.
Can'-a-lic'-u-la'-ted, a. Channelled.
Can'al-Coal.—See Cannel-coal.
CANARY, cā-nāre'-ēy, 41, 105: a. and s. The epithet of certain isles in the Atlantic near Africa:—s.
Wine brought from the Canary islands; a singing bird originally from the same place; an old dance.
To Can-na-ry, v. n. To dance the canary.
To CANCEL=cān'-sēl, v. a. To cross and so deface writing; to efface; to obliterate.
Can'-celled, 114: part. a. Crossed; obliterated.
CAN'-CEL-IA'-TED, 85: a. Cross barred; having cross lines.
Can'-cel-la'-tion, 89: s. Obliteration.
CANCER=cān'-ser, s. A crabfish; one of the twelve signs.
Can'-cri-form, (cāng'-crē-fārm, 158) a. Like a crab.
Can'-crine, a. Having the qualities of a crab.
Can'-crite, s. A fossil or petrified crab.
CAN'-CER, 59: s. A virulent and mostly fatal tumor.
To Can'-cer-ate, v. n. To grow into a cancer.
Can'-cer-a'-tion, 85, 89: s. Formation of cancer.

Can'-cer-ous, 120: a. Of the nature of cancer.
Can'-cer-ous-ness, s. The state of being cancerous
Can'-cri-form, (cāng'-crē-fārm) a. Like a cancer.
CAN'-KER, (cāng'-ker, 158, 36) s. A disease in trees which causes the bark to rot and fall; a number of small eroding ulcers in the mouth that form without previous tumor; a disease in horse's feet; an eating virulent humor, generally; any thing that corrupts or consumes.
To Can'-ker, v. a. and n. To corrupt; to corrode;
to infect:—neu. To grow corrupt; to decay by corruption.
Can'-kered, 114: part. a. Corroded; soured.
Can'-ker-ous, 129, 120: a. Corroding like a canker.
Can'-ker-y, 105: a. Rusty.
Can'-ker-bit, a. Bitten by a cankered tooth.
Can'-ker-worm, 141: s. A worm that eats into plants.
CANDELABRUM.—See under Candle.
CANDENT=cān'-dēnt, a. Glowing hot; brilliantly white.
CANDICANT=cān'-dē-cānt, a. Whitish.
CANDID=cān'-dīd, a. White, and in this original but unusual sense related to Candent, Candicant. Ca- nescent, &c.; fair; ingenuous; sincere; free from prejudice or malice.
Can'-did-ly, 105: ad. Fairly, openly, sincerely.
Can'-did-ness, s. Ingenuousness; candour.
CAN'-DOUR, (cān'-dūr, 120, 38) s. Openness;
frankness; fairness in judging.
CANDIDATE, cān'-dē-dāte, 105: s. One competing for an office. Anciently, in Rome, such a one wore a white gown. Compare Candid.
To CANDIFY, cān'-dē-fy, v. a. To whiten.
Compare Candid.
CANDLE, cān'-dl, 101: s. Wax tallow, or other similar substance surrounding a wick, and used for giving light. Compare Candent.
Can'-dle-stick, s. Instrument to hold a candle.
Can'-dle-mas, s. The feast of the Purification, formerly celebrated by burning many candles.
☞ The word is otherwise compounded; as Candi- holder, Candle-light, Candle-stuff, (stuff for making candles.) Candle-waster, (one who stays up at nights.)
Candle-ends, (scraps or fragments generally,) &c.
CAN'-DE-LA'-BRUM, s. A branched candlestick;
pl. Candelabra
CANDOUR.—See under Candid.
To CANDY, cān'-dēy, 105: v. a. and n. To conserve with sugar; to form into congelations; to incrust with congelations:—neu. To grow congealed.
Can'-dird, (-did, 124) a. Preserved or incrusted with sugar.
CANE=cānt, s. A strong Indian reed; the sugar plant; a walking stick.
Ca'-ny, 105: a. Full of canes; consisting of canes.
To Cane, v. a. To beat with a cane.
Ca'-ning, s. A beating with a stick.
CAN'-NU-LAR, 34: a. Hollow like a bamboo or tube.
CANESCENT=cān'-nēs'-cēt, a. Tending to whiteness. Compare Candid.
CANINE=cān'-nīnē, a. Having the properties of a dog.
CA'-NIC'-U-LA, s. The dog-star.
Ca'-nic'-u-lar, 34: a. Belonging to the dog-star; hot.
CANISTER=cān'-is-ter, 36: s. Originally a small basket; at present a case generally of tin, and thus assuming an apparent relationship to Can.
CANKER, &c.—See under Cancer.
CANNABINE=cān'-nā-bīnē, a. Hempen. This word and Canvas have the same origin.
CANNEL-COAL=cān'-nēl-cōle, 100: s. A

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-wāy; chāp mǎn; pā-pā': lāw; gōd; j'wō, i. e. few, 55: a, s, b, &c. mule, 171.

compact hard coal that burns with a bright white flame like a candle. Compare Candent. It is often written Canal-coal, as if in distinction to sea or sea-borne coal.

CANNIBAL, cǎn'-nē-bǎi, s. A man-eater.

Can'-ni-bal-ly, ad. In the manner of a cannibal.

Can'-ni-ba-lism, 158: s. The practice of men eating human flesh; murderous cruelty.

CANNON=cǎn'-nōn, 18: s. A great gun for battery.

→ The word is often compounded; as Cannon-ball, Cannon-shot, Cannon-proof, &c.

To Can'-non-ade', 85: v. a. To batter with cannon.

Can'-non-ade', s. An attack with heavy artillery.

Can'-non-ier', (-ēr, 103) s. One who manages cannon.

CANNOT=cǎn'-nōt, 18: v. n. To be unable.—See CAN.

CANNULAR.—See under Cane.

CANNY, cǎn'-nēy, a. Neat; nice; clever. [Provin.]

CANOE, cǎ-nōw', 127: s. A rude Indian boat.

CANON=cǎn'-ōn, 91, 18: s. A law, a rule, but especially in matters ecclesiastical; the books of scripture which ecclesiastical law admits to be divine; an ecclesiastic who is paid by rule or law for performing the duties of a cathedral or collegiate church; the catalogue of saints acknowledged by the Romish church; in ancient music, a rule or method for determining the intervals of notes; in modern music, a kind of incessant fugue by the different parts; in mathematics, a general rule arising out of an operation; every last step of an equation is a canon; in surgery, an instrument used in sewing up wounds; in printing, a large sort of type.

→ This word is compounded in Canon-law, which is a collection of ecclesiastical laws; and Canon-bit, which Spenser uses for that part of a bit that is put into a horse's mouth.

Can'-on-ry, 105: } s. A benefice in a cathedral or } collegiate church.

Can'-on-ess, s. A woman who enjoys a prebend.

Ca-non'-i-cal, a. According to canon; ecclesiastical.

Ca-non'-i-cal-ly, ad. Agreeably to canon.

Ca-non'-i-cals, 143: s. pl. The full dress of a clergyman.

Ca-non'-i-cate, s. The office of a canon.

Can'-on-ist, s. A man versed in canon law.

Can'-on-ist'-tic, 85, 88: a. Belonging to a canonist.

To Can'-on-ize, v. a. To enrol as a saint.

Can'-on-i-za'-tion, 85, 89: s. The ranking of a deceased person in the canon of saints.

CANOPY, cǎn'-ō-pēy, 105: s. A covering of state over head; the projecting moulding that surrounds the head of a gothic arch.

To Can'-o-py, v. a. To cover with a canopy.

Can'-o-pied, (-pid, 114) part. a. Covered with a canopy.

CANOROUS, cǎ-nō' rūś, 120: a. Tuneful.—See Cantation, &c.

Ca-no'-rous-ness, s. Musicalness; tunefulness.

CANT=cǎnt, s. An angle; a corner. [Obs.]

CANT=cǎnt, s. A sing-song manner of speaking; (compare Cantation;) whining, hypocritical speech; the repetition of phrases like the burden of a song; the dialect of a sect or set of people; barbarous jargon; slang; a crying out of things for sale, an auction.

To Cant, v. n. and a. To talk in a jargon, or in any kind of affected language.—act. To sell or bid at auction. See also in the next class.

Cant'-er, 36: s. A hypocrite.

Cant'-ing-ly, ad. In a canting manner.

CANT=cǎnt, s. A toss; a jerk; a throw.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Cannots: rǎsh-un, i. e. mission, 165: vǐzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thǐn, 166: thēn, 166.

To Cant, v. a. To toss. See also above.

CAN'-ter, 36: s. An easy gullopp.

To Can'-ter, v. n. and a. To gallop easily:—act To make to canter.

CANTABRIGIAN, cǎn'-tǎ-brīd'-gē-ān, 146: s. A man or scholar of (Cambridge, commonly called a Cantab.

CANTATION, ǎn-tǎ'-shūn, 89: s. The act of singing. [Obs.]

Can'-tion, s. A song; verses. [Spenser.]

CAN-TA'-TA, s. A poem set to music. [Ital.]

CAN-TAB'-i-LE, (cǎn-tǎb'-ē-lēy, [Ital.] 170) ad. In a singing manner; as a song.

CAN-TI-CLE, 105, 101: s. A song; a division of a poem, a canto; in the plural, it is generally applied to the Song of Solomon.

To Can'-ti-LATE, v. a. To recite musically

Can'-ti-la'-tion, 89: s. A chanting.

CAN'-TO, s. A part or section of a poem; the treble part of a musical composition.

CAN'-ZO-NET', s. A little song.

CANTEEN=cǎn-tēn', s. A suttlng house; a tin vessel for liquors which soldiers carry.

CANTER, &c.—See under Cant (sing-song), and Cant (a toss).

CANTHARIDES, cǎn-thǎr'-ē-dēz, 101: s. pl. Spanish flies, used for blistering.

CANTHUS=cǎn'-thūs, s. The corner of the eye. [Lat.]

CANTICLE, &c.—See under Cantation.

CANTILEVERS=cǎn-tē-lē'-verz, 85, 158: s. pl. Pieces of wood framed into a house to support mouldings and eaves.

CANTLE, cǎn'-tl, 101: s. A fragment; a portion. [Obs.]

Cant'-let, s. A piece; a little corner.

To Can'-tle, v. a. To cut into pieces.

CANTON=cǎn-tōn, 18: s. A small parcel of land; a small community or clan; in heraldry, a corner of the shield.

To Can'-ton, v. a. To divide into little parts.

To Can'-ton-ize, v. a. To parcel out.

Can'-ton-ment, s. A part or division of a town or village assigned to a particular body of troops.

CANVAS=cǎn-vās, s. and a. A coarse hempen cloth for sails; for painting on; for tents; and for a finer sort of sieve; the sails of a ship, generally; the material on which a work of art is to be finished, as certain notes of a composer for which a poet is to furnish words:—a. Made of canvas.

To Can'-vas, v. a. To sift, to examine, to debate to discuss.

Can'-vas-ser, s. One who sifts or examines.

To Can'-vas, v. n. To solicit votes.

Can'-vas-ser, s. He who solicits votes.

CANZONET.—See with Canto, &c., under Cantation.

CAOUTCHOUC, cōw'-chōōk, 127: s. India-rubber.

CAP=cǎp, s. A covering for the head; covering generally; an ensign of some dignity; the top; a reverence made by uncovering the head.

To Cap, v. a. and n. To cover; to take off another's cap; to furnish heads as an exercise in verse-making.—new. To uncover the head in respect.

→ The word is used in composition, as Cap'-paper, a coarse paper for covers; Cap'-case, a covered case, &c.

Cap'-A'-PIE, (-pē, 103) ad. From head to foot.

CAPABLE, cǎ-pǎ-bl, 101: a. Able to hold or contain; intellectually capacious; intelligent; susceptible; equal to.

Cap'-pa-bile-neas, s. The state of being capable.

Cap'-pa-bil'-i-ty, s. Capableness, capacity.

Cap'-A'-CIOS, (cǎ-pǎ'-sh'ūs, 147) a. Wide, extensive, equal to great knowledge, or great designs.

Ca-pa'-cious-ly, 103: ad. In a capacious manner.
Ca-pa'-cious-ness, s. The power of holding.
To Ca-pa'-i-tate, (-päss-ë-tätt), v. a. To make capable.
Ca pac'-i-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of making capable.
Ca-pac'-i-ty, (-päss-ë-täty), s. Room; space; power; ability; sense; state.
To Ca-pac'-i-ty, (fÿ, 6) v. a. To qualify.
CAP-A-PIE.—See under Cap.
CAPARISON, cä-pär'-ë-sün, 120, 105, 18: s. A superb dress for a horse.
To Ca-par'-i-son, v. a. To deck with caparisons; to dress pompously.
CAPE=cäp, s. Headland; promontory.
CAPE=cäp, s. The neck-piece of a coat or cloak.
CAPER=cä'-per, 36: s. The bud or flower of the caper-bush, much used as a pickle.
CAPER=cä'-per, 36: s. Originally, a goat: as an English word, a leap, a jump.
To Cap'-er, v. n. To dance frolicsomenly, to skip.
Cap'-er-er, s. A dancer in contempt.
CA'-PRIOLE, s. A leap, such as a horse makes without advancing; a caper in dancing.
CAPIAS, cä'-pë-äs, s. A writ either before judgement to take the body of the defendant, or after judgement, a writ of execution.
CAPILLARY, cäp'-il-lär'-ëy, 129, 105: a. and s. Resembling a hair, fine, minute, applied both to plants, and to vessels of the body:—s. A small tube; a small blood vessel.
Ca-pil'-la-ment, s. One of the small threads or hairs that grow up in the middle of a flower.
Ca-pil'-li-form, a. In the shape of a hair.
Cap'-il-la'-crous, (-sh'üs, 147) a. Capillary.
Cap'-il-la'-tion, 89: s. A small blood-vessel.
CA'-IL-LAIRE', (cäp'-il-lär', [Fr.] 170) s. A sirup extracted from the plant called maidenhair.
CAPITAL, cäp'-ë-täl, a. and s. Relating to the head; affecting the head or life:—s. The upper part of a pillar. Compare Cap.
Cap'-i-tal-ly, ad. So as to affect the head or life.
Cap'-i-tal-ness, s. A capital offence. [Obs.]
Cap'-i-ta'-tion, s. A calculation of the people by heads.
Cap'-i-tate, a. Growing to a head. [Botany.]
CAP-ITAL, a. and s. Chief; principal; first in importance:—s. Whatever is chief, first in size, or in importance; a metropolis; a large letter, the principle or stock for which interest is paid, or by the employment of which profit is proposed.
Cap'-i-tal-ly, ad. Chiefly; principally.
Cap'-i-tal-ist, s. One who employs or has a capital.
IN CAP-IT-TE, [Lat.] 169: ad. Immediately of the king as head of all the lands in the kingdom; an ancient tenure now abolished.
CA'-P-IT-U'-LI-AN, } a. Pertaining to the capitol in Cap'-i-to-line, } Rome; so named because in building it a head was found there, or from its important relation to the city.
CA'-P-IT-ULE, s. A collecting of the heads of a treatise; a recapitulation; a summary. [Obs.]
To Ca-pit'-u-late, v. n. To draw up in heads or articles; to agree on heads or articles; to confederate; hence Capitulation in the sense of reduction into heads or articles.
To Ca-pit'-u-late, v. a. To yield or surrender on stipulations.
Ca-pit'-u-la'-tion, s. A surrender.—See also above.
CA-PIT'-U-LAR, s. A statute or act of an ecclesiastical chapter; the body of the statutes of a chapter.
Ca-pit'-u-lar-ly, ad. In the form of an ecclesiastical chapter.
Ca-pit'-u-lar-y, 129, 105: a. and s. Relating to the chapter of a cathedral:—s. A capitular or statute passed in a general council, and called collectively, Capitularies: a member of an ecclesiastical chapter.

CAP-IV, cä-pë'-vëy, 104: s. Balsam of copaliba.
CAPNOMANCY, cäp''-nō-män'-cëy, 85, 88: s. Divination by the flying of smoke.
CAPON, cä'-pn, 114: s. A castrated cock.
CAPONNIERE, cäp'-pōn-nëär', [Fr.] 170: s. A covered lodgement with a little parapet.
CAPOT=cä-pōt', s. A winning of all the tricks at the game of piquet.
CAPOUCH or CAPOCH, cä-pōutch', 125, 116: s. A monk's hood.
To Ca-poch', v. a. To strip off the hood.
CAPREOLATE=cä'-prë-ö-läte, 90: a. Winding and turning as it grows; a term applied to a plant with tendrils. Compare Capriole under Caper.
CA'-PRIOLE, s. Honey-suckle; woodbine.
CAPRICE, cä'-prëc', 104: s. A sudden start of the mind; a sudden change of opinion; a freak; a fancy, a whim.
Ca-pric'-ious, (cä-prish'-üs, 147) a. Whimsical; fanciful.
Ca-pric'-ious-ly, 105: ad. Whimsically.
Ca-pric'-ious-ness, s. Caprice.
CA-PRICH'-IO, (cä-prit'-ch'ö, 63) s. The old form of the word caprice.
CA-PRIC'-CIO, (cä-prëc'-ch'ö, [Ital.] 170) s. A loose, irregular species of musical composition.
Ca-pric'-ci-o'-zo, ad. A direction in music to play in a fantastic style.
 ☞ All these words, as well as the following, are related in etymology, to Caper.
CAPHINE=cä'-prin, a. Like a goat. In composition, wild, as Capri-ficus, the wild fig tree.
CA'-RI-CORN, 92: s. The goat-like sign of the zodiac. Also a sort of beetle.
CA'-RI-FORM, a. Having the form of a goat.
CA'-RI-FI-CA'-TION, s. A method of ripening figs by the gnats which are bred of the wild fig tree.
CA'-PRIOLE.—See under Caper.
CAPSICUM, cäp'-ëc-cüm, 105: s. Guinea pepper.
To CAPSIZE=cäp'-siz', v. a. and n. To upset. [A sea term.]
CAPSTAN=cäp'-stän, s. A cylinder to draw up a great weight, as an anchor.
CAPSULE=cäp'-sül, s. Originally a little chest; appropriately, the seed vessel of a plant.
Cap'-su-lar, Cap'-su-lar-y, a. Hollow, as a chest.
Cap'-su-late, Cap'-su-la'-ted, a. Enclosed.
CAPTAIN=cäp'-tän, 100, 99: s. The commander of a ship, of a troop of horse, of a company of foot; a chief generally; a man skilled in war. Compare Cap and Capital.
Cap'-tain-cy, 103: s. The office of a captain.
Cap'-tain-ry, s. The power over a certain district.
Cap'-tain-ship, s. The post of a captain.
CAPTION, cäp'-shün, 89: s. The act of taking; appropriately, the act of taking a person by judicial process. Compare Capias.
CA'-TURE, (-türe, 147) s. The act of taking; the thing taken. Ad captan'dum [Lat.] merely to captivate.
To Cap'-ture, v. a. To take as a prize.
Cap'-tured, 38: s. He that takes a prisoner.
Cap'-tive, 105: s. and a. One taken and held in restraint:—a. Made prisoner.
Cap-tiv'-i-ty, 81, 105: s. Subjection by the fate of war; bondage; slavery.
To Cap'-ti-vate, v. a. To take prisoner; to bring into bondage; to charm; to subdue.
Cap'-ti-va'-ting, a. Having power to captivate.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Novels: gäte'-wäy, chäp'-män, pä-pä': läve, gööd: j'öö, i. e. for, 55: a. &c. mut., 171.

CAP-ti-va'-tion, 89: s. The act of captivating; the state of being captivated.
CAP-TA-TION, s. The art or act of catching favour.
CAP-tious, (cāp'-sh'ūs, 147) a. Held out for the purpose of catching or ensnaring.
CAP-tious, a. Catching at faults: eager to object and cavil; proceeding from a spirit of cavil.
CAP-tious-ly, ad. In a captious manner.
CAP-tious-ness, s. Inclination to find fault.
CAPUCHIN, cāp'-ū-shēn'', 104: s. A female garment consisting of a cloak and hood; a monk, so called from his cowl; (compare Capouch;) a pigeon whose head is covered with feathers.
CAPUT-MORTUUM=cā'-pūt-mor''-tū-ūm, s. The residuum, when all that can be extracted is gone. [Lat.]
CAR=c'ar, 76, 33: s. A small carriage of burden; a chariot of war or triumph.—Compare To Carry, &c.
Car'-mon, s. A driver of a carriage of burden.
CARABINE, or CARBINE, car'-bine, s. A sort of fire-arms between a pistol and a musket.
Car'-bi-nier'', 103: s. A sort of light horseman.
CARACK, cār'-āck, 129: s. A large Spanish ship; a galleon.
CARACOLE=cār'-d-cōle, s. An oblique tread of a horse.
To Car'-a-cole, v. n. To move in caracoles.
CARAFE, cār-āf', [Fr.] 170: s. A water bottle or decanter.
CARAT, } cār'-āt, s. A weight of four grains,
CARACK, } with which diamonds are weighed; a word signifying the proportion of pure gold in a mass of metal; thus, gold of 22 carats fine, is gold of which 22 parts are pure out of 24 parts; the other two parts being silver, copper, or other metal.
CARAVAN=cār'-d-vān'', 129: s. A troop of merchants or pilgrims travelling in the east; a large carriage.
Car'-a-van''-sar-y, s. An eastern inn.
CARAVEL, or CARVEL=cār'-vēl, s. A light old fashioned ship; a French herring vessel.
CARAWAY=cār'-d-wāy, s. A spice plant.
CARBON=car'-bōn, s. (Originally, a coal.) Pure charcoal, an un-compounded body, bright, brittle, and inodorous. When crystallized, it forms the diamond, and, by a galvanic apparatus, it is capable of fusion.
Car'-bo-na'-cous, (-sh'ūs, 147) } a. Belating to Car'-bon-ous, 120: } or containing Car'-bon-ic, 88: } carbon. Carbonous acid is carbon not fully saturated with oxygen; carbonic acid gas is the saturated combination otherwise called fixed air and mephitic gas.
Car'-bon-ate, s. A compound formed by the union of carbonic acid with a base.
Car''-bon-a-ted, a. Combined with carbon.
To Car'-bo-nize, v. a. To convert into carbon.
Car'-bon-i-za'-tion, 85, 89: s. The process of carbonizing.
CAR'-BO-NA'-DO, or CAR'-BO-NADE, s. Meat cut across to be broiled on coals.
To Car'-bo-na''-do, v. a. To hack for broiling on the coals.
CAR'-BO-NI-FI-ER-ous, 87: a. Producing carbon.
CAR'-BON-O-HY'-DROUS, a. Composed of carbon and hydrogen.
CAR-BUN-CLE, 158, 101: s. Literally, a little coal; appropriately, a gem of a deep red colour, otherwise called anthrax; also, a round, hard, and painful tumor.
Car'-bun-cled, 114: a. Set with carbuncles; spotted.
Car-bun'-cu-lar, a. Like a carbuncle; inflamed.
CAR-BUN'-CU-LA'-TION, 158, 89: s. The state of being reduced to charcoal or a condition approaching it; said of the blasting of young plants by excessive heat or cold.

CAR'-BU-RET, s. Carbon combined with a metal.
Car'-bu-ret-ted, a. Combined with carbon, or holding carbon in solution.
CARCANET=car'-cē-nēt, s. A chain of jewels.
CARCASS=car'-cāss, s. The dead body of any animal; the body ludicrously: the decayed remains of any thing; the main parts naked without being completed; in gunnery, a kind of bomb, so called from the ribs of iron which form it, resembling the ribs of a human carcass.
CARCERAL=car'-cēr-āl, a. Belonging to a prison.
Car'-ce-lage, 99: s. Prison fees.
CARCINOMA, car'-cē-nō'-mā, s. An ulcer; a disorder in the eye.
Car'-ci-nom''-a-tous, 92, 120: a. Tending to cancer.
CARD=c'ard, 76, 33: s. A small square of paste-board, or thick sort of paper; used for purposes of civility, business, or playing at games of skill and chance; a paper marked with the points of the compass.
To Card, v. n. To game.
CARD=card, 33: s. A comb to prepare wool for spinning.
To Card, v. a. To comb; to mingle; to disentangle.
Car'-der, 36: s. One that cards wool.
CARDAMINE=car'-dd-mint, s. The plant lady-smock, cuckoo-flower, or meadow-cress.
CARDAMOM=car'-dd-mōm, 18: s. A medicinal aromatic seed brought from the East Indies. Contracted from Cardamomum.
CARDIAC, car'-dē-āck, 105, 146: a. and s. Pertaining to the heart; exciting action in the heart by cordial qualities.—s. A cordial.
Car'-di-a-cal, a. Invigorating the spirits; cardiac.
CAR''-DI-AL'-GY, (-jēy) s. The heart-burn.
CAR-DI-oid, s. A curve resembling a heart.
CARDINAL, car'-dē-nāl, 105: a. Principal, chief. The Cardinal virtues are Prudence, Temperance, Justice, Fortitude; the Cardinal points, East, West, North, South; the Cardinal numbers, One, Two, Three, &c. in distinction from the Ordinal, First, Second, Third, &c.
CAR'-DI-NAL, s. A dignitary of the Romish Church next in rank to the pope; a woman's cloak, red like a cardinal's.
Car'-di-na-late, } s. The office of a cardinal.
Car'-di-nal-ship, }
CARDUON=car'-dōon', s. A sort of wild artichoke.
CARE=cāre, 41: s. Solitude; anxiety; charge.
Care The word is often compounded; as Care'-crazed; Care'-defying; Care'-tuned, Care'-worn, &c.
Care'-ful, 117: a. Anxious; provident; watchful.
Care'-ful-ly, 105: ad. Anxiously; heedfully.
Care'-ful-ness, s. Vigilance; anxiety.
Care'-less, a. Free from care; heedless.
Care'-less-ly, ad. Negligently.
Care'-less-ness, s. Heedlessness.
To Care, v. n. To be anxious; to be in concern.
To CAREN=cā'-rēn', v. a. and n. To lay a vessel on one side, in order to calk and; otherwise repair the other;—new. To incline on one side: as a ship under press of sail.
Ca-reen'-ing, s. The act of careening.
CARENTANE.—See Quarantine.
CAREER=cā'-rēr', 43: s. A course; a race; speed; proceed.
To Ca-reer', v. n. To move or run rapidly.
To CARESS=cā'-rēs's', v. a. To endear; to fondle
Ca-ress', s. An act of endearment.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

CARET=cār-ēt, 41: s. A mark thus (A) to denote the place where something has been omitted.

CARGO=car-gō, s. The lading of a ship.

CARICATURE, cār-ē-cā-tūr', 85, 129: s. A painting or description so overcharged as to be ridiculous, without losing the resemblance.

To Car-i-ca-ture', v. a. To ridicule.

Car-i-ca-tū'-rist, s. One who caricatures.

CARICOUS, cār-cē-rūs, 41: a. Resembling a fig.

CARIES, cār-ē-ēz, [Lat.] 169: s. Rottenness in a bone.

Car-ri-ous, 120: a. Rotten.

Car'-ri-ōs'-i-ty, (-ōs'-ē-tēy, 105) s. Rottenness.

CARINATED, cār'-ē-nā'-ted, 85: a. Shaped like the keel of a ship.—Compare Carreen. [Bot.]

CARK=cark, 33: s. Care, anxiety. [Sidney.]

To Cark, v. n. To be careful or anxious.

Car-k'-ing, s. Care, anxiety.

CARLE, carl, 189: s. A brutal man; a. churl.

Car'-lish, a. Rude, churlish. [Obs.]

Car'-lish-ness, s. Churlishness.

Car'-lot, 18: s. A countryman. [Shaks.]

CARLE, carl, 189: s. A kind of hemp.

CARLINGS, car-līngz, 158: s. pl. Timbers lying fore and aft to fortify the smaller beams of a ship.

CARLOVINGIAN, car-lō-vīn'-gē-ān, 90: a. Pertaining to Charlemagne or his race.

CARMELITE=car-mēl'-itē, s. and a. A friar of the order of Mount Carmel.—a. Pertaining to the order of Carmelites; also the epithet of a kind of pear.

CARMINATIVE, car-mīn'-d-tiv, 105: s. and a. Medicine for expelling wind.—a. Warming, antispasmodic.

CARMINE=car-mīn', s. A crimson paint.

CARNEOUS, car-nē-ūs, } 120: a. Having the CARNOUS, car-nūs, } qualities of flesh; fleshy.

Car-nōs'-i-ty, 105: s. Fleishy excrescence.

Car-nage, 99: s. Destruction of flesh; slaughter.

Car-nal'-ion, 89: s. The flesh colour of temperate climes; a flower whose colour approaches that of flesh.

Car-ni-fy, 6: v. n. To form flesh in growth.

Car-ni-fi-ca'-tion, 85, 89: s. A turning to flesh; opposed to ossification, or turning to bone.

Car-niv'-o-rous, 120: a. Flesh-eating.

Car'-ni-val, s. The feast before Lent, that is, before abstinence from flesh is required.

CAR-NAL, a. Fleshly, as opposed to spiritual.

Car'-nal-ly, ad. According to the flesh; not spiritual.

Car-nal-ness, s. Carnality.

To Car-nal-ize, v. a. To debase to carnality.

Car-nal-ist, s. One given to the works of the flesh.

Car-nal-ite, s. A worldly-minded person.

Car-nal'-i-ty, 84, 105: s. Grossness of mind.

CARNEY=car-nēy, s. A disease in horses.

To CARNY, car-nēy, v. n. To interlard discourse with hypocritical terms or tones of endearment. [Colloq.]

CAROCHE, cā-rōsh', [Fr.] 170: s. A coach. [Obs.]

CAROL=cār'-ōl, 129, 18: s. (Originally, a dance with singing.) A song of exultation or praise; a pious song.

To Car'-ol, v. n. and a. To sing; to warble.—act. To celebrate in song.

CAR'-o-ler'-ic, 85, 88: a. Having, as for festive occasions, leaves and branches winding spirally festooned.

CAROMEL=cār'-ō-mēl, s. A French name for the smell of sugar at a calcining heat.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

CAROTID=cā-rōt'-id, a. A term applied to the two principal arteries which convey the blood to the heart.

To CAROUSE, cā-rowz', 137, 189: v. n. and a. To drink largely.

Car-rou-ser, (-zer) s. A drinker.

Car-rouse', s. A drinking match; a quaffing.

Car-rou'-sul, (-zāl) s. A revelling; a drinking bout.

CARP=carp, 33: s. A pond fish.

To CARP, carp, 33: v. n. Literally, to snatch at; hence, to censure, to cavil.

Car-per, 36: s. A caviller.

Car'-ping, a. and s. Captious;—s. Censure.

Car'-ping-ly, ad. In a cavilling manner.

CARPAL=car'-pāl, a. Pertaining to the wrist.

CARPENTER=car'-pēn-ter, s. An artificer in wood; if distinguished from a joiner, it is because the carpenter performs larger and stronger work.

Car'-pen-try, 105: s. The trade or art of a carpenter.

CARPET=c'ar'-pēt, 76, 14: s. A covering on the floor, wrought with the needle or in the loom. To be on the carpet, is to be the subject of consideration. Carpet-knight, is one knighted at court, and not in the field. Carpet-walk, is a walk on the smooth turf as on a carpet, &c.

To Car'-pet, v. a. To spread with carpets.

Car'-pet-ing, s. Carpets in general.

CARPOLOGY, car-pōl'-ō-gy, s. A treatise on fruits.

Car-pol'-o-gist, s. One who writes on fruits.

CAR'-po-lit's, s. A petrification of fruits.

CARRACK, CARRAWAY, &c.—See Carack, Caraway &c.

CARRIAGE, CARRIER, CARROON.—See under To Carry.

CARRICK=cār'-rick, a. A Carrick-brnd (see Carack) is a particular knot used on ship-board; and Carrick-bits are the supports of a windlass.

CARRION, cār-rē-ōn, 18: s. and a. Any flesh not fit for human food.—a. Relating to, or feeding on carcases.

CARRONADE=cār'-rōn-ādē', s. A short iron cannon originally made at Carron.

CARROON, cār-rōon', s. A species of cherry.

CARROT=cār'-rōt, 129: s. A red esculent root.

Car'-rot-y, a. Coloured as carrots; red.

CARROWS, cār'-rōzē, 125, 151: s. pl. Strolling gamblers in Ireland.

To CARRY, cār-rēy, 129, 105: v. a. and n. To bear, convey, or transport, by sustaining the thing carried, or causing it to be sustained. It generally implies motion from the speaker, and so is opposed to bring and fetch. To carry away, in naval language, is to loose; To carry on, is to prosecute, to continue; To carry through, is to accomplish; To carry one's self, is to behave, demean;—new. To deport as regards the body; to convey as a cannon.

Car'-riage, (-rīdē, 120) s. The act of carrying; a vehicle; behaviour, conduct, manners.

Car'-ri-er, 105, 36: s. One who carries; a pigeon often used for transmitting intelligence.

CART=cart, 33: s. A carriage in general; (compare Car; a carriage for luggage with two wheels, and so distinguished from a wagon, which has four.

To Cart, v. a. and n. To carry or place in a cart;—new. To use carts for carriage.

Car'-tage, s. The act of carting, or a charge for it.

Car'-ter, 36: s. One who drives a cart.

CAR'-roon', 129, 27: s. A rent paid for driving a car or cart in the city of London.

CART'-wright, (-rīt, 157, 115) s. A maker of carts.

↳ The word Cart is compounded with many other words, as Cart^h horse, Cart^h jade, (a vile horse fit only for a cart,) Cart^h load, Cart^h rope, Cart^h rut, Cart^h way, &c.

CARTE, cart, 33: s. Literally, a card or slip of paper; appropriately, a bill of fare at a tavern. [Fr.] Carte-blanc^h, (-blāngsh, [Fr.] 170) s. A blank paper intrusted to a person to be filled up as he pleases.

Car-tel^l, s. An agreement between hostile states relative to exchange of prisoners: a ship commissioned to exchange prisoners: a challenge.

To Car-tel^l, v. a. To challenge, to defy.

Car^h-tu-lar-y, 129, 105: s. A place where records are kept.

CAR-TOON^l, s. Generally, a drawing on large paper; more particularly, a design on strong paper to be afterwards calked through, and transferred on the fresh plaster of a wall, and painted in fresco.

CAR-TOUCH^h, (-tūsh, [Fr.] 170) s. Originally, the paper in which charges of powder and ball were made up; hence, a case of whatever kind for holding powder and ball; a wooden bomb filled with shot; a discharge or pass given to a soldier; a roll adorning the cornice of a pillar.

Car^h-tridge, s. A corruption of Cartouch; a case containing a charge for a gun. Cartridges without ball are called blank cartridges.

Car^h-tridge-pa^h-pr, s. The paper in which musket charges are made up.

Car^h-tridge-box, 183: s. The box for cartridges which infantry wear suspended by a belt.

CARTESIAN, car-tē-zh'ān, 90: a. and s. Pertaining to the philosophy of Des Cartes, a Frenchman, who died in 1650, the principal feature in whose doctrine was that of vortices round the sun and planets:—s. A follower of Des Cartes.

CARTHUSIAN, car-tū^h-zh'ān, 90: s. and a. A monk of the Chartrouse, a monastery situated on the top of a mountain near Grenoble in France. The order is, or was, remarkable for austerity:—a. Relating to the Carthusians.

CARTILAGE, car-tē-lāg, 99: s. Gristle, a smooth and solid body, softer than a bone, but harder than a ligament.

Car^h-ti-lag^h-i-nous, (-lād'-gē-nūs, 120) a. Consisting of, or pertaining to cartilage.

CARTOON, CARTOUCH, CARTRIDGE, &c.—See under Carte.

CARUCATE, cār-oo-cāte, 129, 109: s. As much land as a team can plough in a year. The word is related to Cart, &c. and the same meaning is sometimes expressed by Carve: as, a carve of land.

CARUNCLE, cār-ūng-cl, 129, 158, 101: s. A small protuberance of flesh.—Compare Carneous, &c.

Car-run^h-cu-la^h-ted, a. Having a protuberance.

To CARVE=carv, 76: v. a. and n. To cut into elegant forms; to cut in order to distribute at table; to cut generally; to hew:—new. To cut any material; to cut meat.

Car^h-ver, 36: s. A sculptor; one that carves at table.

Car^h-ving, s. The art or act of one that carves.

CARYATES, cār'-ē-ā^h-tēz, 129, } s. pl. Figures of women serving to support

CARYATIDES, cār'-ē-āt^h-ē- } debz, 92: } entablatures.

The practice originated with the Greeks, who, to commemorate the taking of Carya, represented the female captives in this manner. But the account is questioned.

CASCADE=cās-cādē, s. A cataract; a waterfall.

CASE=kāc, 152: s. Literally, that which falls, comes, or happens; an event; hence, the particular state, condition, or circumstances that befall a person, or in which he is placed; question relating to particular persons or things; representation of any fact or question; the variation of nouns, or the forms they fall into: Action on the case, is so called in law, because the whole case is set down in the writ. The relations of this word are under Casual.

CASE=kāc, 152: s. That which encloses or contains; a covering, box, or sheath: the cover or skin of an animal; the outer part of a building.

To Case, (kāc) v. a. To put in a case; to cover.

Ca^h-sing, s. The covering of any thing.

To CASE-HAR-DEN, 114: v. a. To harden on the outside, particularly iron, of which the exterior, by casehardening, becomes steel.

CASE-KNIFE, (-nīf, 157) s. A large knife generally kept in a case.

CASE-SHOT, s. Old iron or balls in cases and so shot from a cannon.

CASE-WORM, 141: s. A worm that makes itself a case.

CASE-MATE, s. A vault in the flank of a bastion.

CASE-MENT, (cāz^h-mēnt, 151) s. Generally, some part of a house, or of that which covers and protects; and hence, appropriately, a window.

Ca^h-seign, (cā^h-zēn, 151) s. A lodgement or small barracks for soldiers between the houses of a fortified town and the ramparts.

Ca^h-son, or Ca^h-soon, s. A chest of bombs or powder; a wooden case or frame [Fr.]

CASEOUS, cā^h-sh'ūs, 90: a. Resembling cheese.

CASH=cāsh, s. Money, properly ready money, or money in a case or box.

It is a word often compounded; as Cash-account^l, Cash-book, Cash^h-keeper, &c.

To Cash, v. a. To turn into money.

Ca^h-shier, (cā^h-shēr, 103) s. He that has charge of the money; or who superintends the books, payments, and receipts of a bank.

CASHEW-NUT, cā^h-shō^h-nūt, 127: s. The nut of the cashew-tree in the East Indies.

CASHIER.—See under Cash and also under Cass.

CASK=cāsk, 11: s. A hollow vessel generally, but appropriately a vessel formed by staves, heading, and hoops; the quantity held in a cask.

To Cask, v. a. To put into a cask.

CASK-ET, 14: s. Originally, perhaps a small cask, but now a small elegant box for jewels or similar articles. It is also used for gasket, the name of a rope.

To Cask^h-et, v. a. To put into a casket.

CASQUE, [Fr.] 170: s. A helmet.

*To CASS=cāss, v. a. To annul; to break. [Obs.]*

To Cas-sate, v. a. To vacate, to invalidate.

Cas-sa^h-tion, 89: s. A making null.

To CA-SHIER, (cā^h-shēr, 103) v. a. To dismiss.

Ca^h-shier^h-er, 36: s. One who cashier.

CASSAVI, cās^h-sā^h-vēy, 105: } s. A plant from CASSADA=cās^h-sā^h-dē, 98: } which a kind of bread, and also tapioca, are made.

CASSIA, cāsh^h-yā, 90: s. A sweet spice extracted from the bark of a tree very like cinnamon; a genus of plants much used in medicine.

CASSIDONY, cās^h-sē^h-dōn^h-ēy, 105: s. The plant stickadore; a mineral of which vases are often made.

CASSIMERE, cās^h-sē^h-mēr^h, s. A thin woollen cloth.

CASSINO, cās^h-sē^h-nō, 104: s. A game at cards.

CASSITERIA, cās^h-sē^h-tēr^h-ē-ā, 105, 2: s. pl. Substances of tin; crystals with an admixture of tin. The word is barbarously formed from Cassiteron, tin.

CASSOCK=cās^h-sōck, s. Originally an outward dress or cloak, and in this sense allied to Case afterwards a vestment worn by clergymen under their gowns.

CASSOWARY, cās^h-sō^h-wā^h-rēy, 105: s. A large bird of prey in the East Indies.

To CAST (pret. and part. the same) =cāst, 11. v. a. and n. To throw, to fling; of this, the original sense of the word, all the other senses are either figurative derivations, or modifications by adverbial particles, such as, about, aside, away, down, forth, off, out.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166

up, upon. Thus, To cast, as a law term, is to throw or fling figuratively, that is, to defeat the party either by criminal or civil process; thus again, To Cast a brazen statue, is, to throw liquid brass into the mould in order to form the statue; so also, to cast the characters in a play, is, to throw the characters into certain hands for representing them; and hence To Cast, may signify to contrive generally. The modified meanings which are given by the adverbial particles, are likewise either plain or figurative. Thus, To cast away, may signify, simply, to throw away, or, figuratively, to make shipwreck; To cast up, is, simply, to throw up, to vomit; or figuratively, to throw the eye up a line of figures, or to throw them into one heap; and hence, to compute generally; and so of the other particles:—new. To throw, the object thrown being figurative and understood, as the mind or the thoughts; to be capable of being thrown or moulded: to receive a certain shape; to warp; to incline or fall off.

Cast, s. The act of casting; a throw; the thing thrown; the distance thrown; a throwing off, as of trained hawks; a stroke or touch; motion of the eye; a squirt; the throw of dice; the chance of a throw; chance; the mould which is to give a form to the thing thrown into it; the form so received; the figure itself; exterior appearance; tendency to some appearance, particularly in colours; manner, air, mien.

Cast-a-way, s. One abandoned by God; a reprobate.

Cast-er, 36: s. A thrower; a calculator; a small box or casket out of which the contents are shaken, as a pepper-caster (often improperly written Cast); a small wheel on a swivel on which furniture is cast or rolled on the floor.

Cast-ing, s. Act of throwing, discarding; or founding.

Cast-ing-net, s. A net which is thrown into the water and then drawn.

Cast-ing-vote, or Cast-ing-voice, s. The vote which casts the balance when opinions were equally divided.

Cast-ling, s. An abortion.

CASTALIAN, cās-tā'-lē-ān, 146: a. Pertaining to the Muses' spring or fountain on Mount Parnassus.

CASTANET=cās'-tā-nēt'', s. An instrument used in pairs to rattle in the hands while dancing.

CASTE, cāst, 189: s. A name by which each tribe or class of Hindoos is distinguished.

CASTELLAN, CASTELLATED, &c.—See under Castile.

To CASTIGATE, cās'-tē-gāte, v. a. To chastise.

Cas'-ti-ga'-tor, 33: s. One who corrects.

Cas'-ti-ga'-tor-y, a. and s. Corrective;—s. A ducking stool.

Cas'-ti-ga'-tion, 85, 89: s. Penance; chastisement.

CASTILE-SOAP, cās-tēil'-sōap, 104: s. A sort of refined soap, generally used as a medicine.

CASTLE, cās'-sl, 11, 156, 101: s. A fortress, or fortified house. Castles in the air, are groundless projects.

☞ The word is variously compounded; as Castle-builder, Castle-croward, Castle-guard, (a feudal tenure so called), Castle-ward, (a tax for the support of watch and ward in a castle), &c.

Cas'-tled, (-sld, 114) a. Having a castle or castles.

Cas'-tle-ry, s. The government of a castle.

Cas'-tlet, s. A small castle.

Cas'-TEL-LAN, 12: s. The governor of a castle.

Cas'-tel-lan-y, s. The lordship of a castle.

Cas'-tel-la'-ted, 85: a. Turreted, like a castle.

Cas'-tel-la'-tion, 89: s. The fortifying of a house.

CASTOR=cās'-tor, 38: s. A beaver; a beaver hat.

☞ Castor and Pollux are two stars also called Gemini. In meteorology the same words signify a fiery meteor which appears sometimes sticking to the side of a ship in the form of balls.

CASTOR-OIL=cās'-tor-oil'', 38, 29: s. An oil obtained from the nuts or seeds of a high plant, Palma Christi, in the West Indies. It is used as a mild cathartic. There is another medicinal substance called Castor, a powerful anti-spasmodic, obtained from the Beaver.—See Castor. The oil is probably so called from the vessel it is kept in;—See Cas or under To Cast.

CASTRA=cās'-trā, s. pl. Soldiers' quarters. [Lat.]

Cas'-tra-me-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of measuring or tracing out the form of a camp.

Cas-tren'-sion, (-sh'ān, 147) a. Relating to a camp.

To CASTRATE=cās'-trāte, v. a. To emasculate; to render imperfect.

Cas'-tra'-tion, 89: s. The act of emasculating.

Cas-TRĀ-to, (-trā'-tō, [Ital.] 170) s. A singer who is a eunuch.

CASTREL=cās'-trēl, s. A kind of hawk.

CASUAL, cāzh'-oo-āl, 147, 62: a. (Compare Case) Accidental, fortuitous.

Cas'-u-al-ly, 105: ad. Accidentally.

Cas'-u-al-ness, s. Accidentality.

Cas'-u-al-ty, s. Accident: an event by chance.

CAS'-U-IST, s. One who studies and resolves cases of conscience.

Cas'-u-is'-tic, 88: } a. Relating to cases of con
Cas'-u-is'-ti-cal, } science.

Cas'-u-is'-try, s. The science of supposing situations and nicely balancing motives of action.

CAT=cāt, s. A domestic animal that catches mice: a sort of vessel, from which, as is supposed, the Cat-water at Plymouth is called; a double tripod which, as a cat is said to do, always falls on its feet.

Cat'-a-moun-tain, s. A wild cat.

Cat'-cal, (-cāwl, 112) s. A squeaking instrument formerly common among the audience in playhouses.

Cat'-gut, s. A string for musical instruments made of the intestines of animals, originally perhaps of the cat: a species of linen or canvas with wide interstices.

Cat'-head, 120: s. A strong beam over a ship's bows.

Cat'-kine, s. pl. Imperfect flowers resembling cats' tails.

Cat'-ling, s. A dismembering knife used by surgeons; literally, a little cat.

☞ The same word Cat, enters into the composition of many other terms and phrases: Cat'-blinch, cat'-harpings, (ropes), Cat'-holes, Cat'-hook, are names used on ship-board; Cat'-eye, Cat'-silver, Cat'-salt, are terms in mineralogy; Cat'-s'-foot, Cat'-mint, Cat'-s'-tail, are plants; Cat'-fish, is a fish found in the West Indies. A Cat in the pan is supposed, by some, to be a corruption of cate in the pan, and means a falsehood given out as coming from one who did not originate it. A Cat-a-nine tails, is a whip with nine, or with several lashes—a Cat's-paw, is one whom another uses in rascality to screen himself: Catsup is improperly used for Catchup, which see.

To Cat'-ER-WAUL, 36, 26: v. a. To make a noise as cats in rutting time.

Cat'-er-waul'-ing, 85: s. The cry of cats; a noise as of cats.

CATA-, A prefix, in words of Greek origin, signifying opposition, against, or contrariety; under, down, or downward; and completion, part by part, or intensive-ness.

☞ For any word formed with Cata-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search to Catholicon.

CAT'-A-BAP'-TIST, s. One who is opposed to baptism; an Antibaptist.

CAT'-A-CHRY'-sis, (-crē'-sis, 161) s. A figure of speech contrary to proper use, or the forcing of a word to stand for an object of one sense, which is proper only for another, as beautiful, in speaking of sounds, and hard, in speaking of colours.

Cat'-a-chres'-ti-cal, a. Forced in expression.

CAT'-A-COUS'-TICS, s. pl. The science of echoes, or of sounds produced opportely.

☞ For any word formed with Cata-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Catabaptist to Catholicism.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'; lāu; gōd; j'wō, i. e. j'wō; 55: a, e, &c. ante, 171.

CATA-

- For any word formed with Cata-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Catabaptist to Catholicon.
- CAT'-A-PHON'-ICS, (-fōn'-icks, 163) s. pl. Cata-onics.
- CAT'-A-PUL'-TA, s. A military engine for throwing stones against an object.
- CAT'-a-pe/-tic, a. Pertaining to a catapulta.
- CAT'-OP'-TRON, 18: s. That which reflects an opposite image; a mirror.
- CAT'-op'-trics, s. pl. The doctrine of reflected rays of light.
- CAT'-op/-tri-cal, a. Relating to catoptrics.
- CAT'-op/-sis, s. A morbid quickness of vision.
- CAT'-a-di-op/-tric, a. Reflecting light.
- CAT'-a-GOR'-Y, (căt'-ê-gôr'-y, 129, 105) s. [Cata-egory.] Something affirmed or opposed to a contrary affirmation; an affirmation; a case or predicament signified by a term of such general import as to contain under it a great number of genera and species; the categories laid down by Aristotle are, substance, quantity, quality, relation, place, time, situation, possession, action, suffering.
- CAT'-e-gor/-i-cal, a. Affirmative; adequate; absolute or positive as opposed to hypothetical. This last, which is the most common meaning of the word, is not contained in the subs. antive Category.
- CAT'-e-gor/-i-cal-ly, ad. Positively.
- CATAMARAN, CATAMITE, CATCH, &c.—
See after all the compounds of Cata:—CATAMOUNTAIN, CATCAT, &c., CATHIRWAUL, see under Cat.
- CATACOMB, căt'-d-côm, 116, 156: s. A cave under ground for the burial of the dead.—See Cata-
- CAT'-a-RACT, s. A rushing down of waters.—See lower the same word with another sense.
- CA-TARRH', (căt'-tar', 164) s. A delusion or running down of mucus from the nose, eyes, &c. the effect of what is commonly called a cold; a cold.
- Ca-tar'-rhal, a. Pertaining to a cold.
- CA-TAS'-TRO-PHE, (-fêy, 163, 101) s. The subversion or fall of events, by which a dramatic or other piece is concluded; a final event; a disaster.
- CA-THE'-DRAL, s. and a. The place where a bishop sits down officially; the see or seat of a bishop; the principal church within the see:—a. Pertaining to a bishop's seat or see.
- Cath'-e-dra-ted, 2: a. Relating to the chair or office of a teacher.
- CATH'-E-TES, s. A surgical instrument which is thrust down into a passage in order to open it.
- To CATENATE, &c.—See after all the compounds of Cata.
- CATACLYSM, căt'-d-clîzm, 158: s. A thorough or violent washing or deluge.—See Cata.
- CAT'-AG-MAT'-IC, 88: a. Having the quality of consolidating thoroughly, or part by part.
- CAT'-A-GRAPH, 163: s. A description part by part; appropriately, the first draught of a picture.
- CAT'-A-LEC'-TIC, s. Having a violent or sudden ending; stopping or halting short, as a verse when the last foot is defective.
- CAT'-A-LYP'-SY, s. A sudden suppression of motion and sensation.
- CAT'-A-LOGUE, (-lôg, 107) s. A list of particulars, part by part, one by one.
- To Cat-a-logue, v. a. To make a list of.
- CA-TAL'-Y-SIS, 105: s. A loosening, part by part; dissolution. Hence, CAT'-a-lyt'-ic, (88) a.
- CAT'-A-ME/-N-AL, a. Month by month; monthly.
- CAT'-A-FASM, 158: s. A powder-mixture for the complete sprinkling of the body.
- For any word formed with Cata-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Catabaptist to Catholicon.
- For any word formed with Cata-, which is not in its alphabetical place, search from Catabaptist to Catholicon.
- CAT'-A-PHRACT, 163: s. Heavy armour for the complete protection of the body; a horseman completely armed.
- CAT'-A-PLASM, 158: s. A plaster or poultice spread completely over the part affected.
- CAT'-A-RACT, s. A substance that completely falls over and covers the pupil of the eye; the disease so produced. See the same word higher with another sense.
- To CAT'-E-CHISE, (căt'-ê-kîze, 161, 137) v. a. [Cata-echise.] To instruct by the intensive exercise of the voice both in asking questions and receiving answers; to question; to try by questioning.
- CAT'-e-chi-sis, (-zer) s. One who catechizes.
- CAT'-e-chi-sing, s. Interrogation.
- CAT'-e-chism, (-kîzm, 158) s. A form of instruction by questions and answers.
- CAT'-e-chist, (-kîst) s. One appointed to catechize.
- CAT'-e-chis-ti-cal, a. Instructing by question and answer.
- CAT'-e-chet'-ic, 88: } a. Consisting of questions CAT'-e-chet'-i-cal, } and answers.
- CAT'-e-chet'-i-cal-ly, ad. In the way of question and answer.
- CAT'-e-chu'-men, s. One who is yet in the rudiments of Christianity; a pupil little advanced.
- CAT'-e-chu-men'-i-cal, a. Belonging to catechumens.
- CA-THAR'-TIC, (căt'-thar'-tick) a. and s. [Cata-har-tic.] That completely cleanses or purges:—s. A purgative medicine.
- Ca-thar'-ti-cal, a. Purgative.
- Cath'-a-rist, s. A puritan.
- CATH'-O-LIC, (căt'-ô-lîck) a. and s. [Cata-holic.] That completely includes or runs through the whole; universal or general; the catholic church, or catholic religion, i. e. literally, the universal christian church of religion; specially, the Roman church or religion hence, catholic, in a special sense, means Roman.
- s.* A papist.
- Ca-thol'-i-cal, a. General, universal.
- Ca-thol'-i-cism, (-sîzm, 158) s. Adherence to the catholic church.
- Ca-thol'-i-con, s. A universal medicine.
- Here end the words compounded with the Greek prefix Cata.
- CATAMARAN=căt'-d-mă-răn', s. A raft.
- CATAMITE=căt'-d-mîte, s. A boy kept for hours then vices.
- CATAMOUNTAIN, &c.—See under Cat.
- CATACOMB, &c., under the compounds of Cata.
- To CATCH=cătch, } v. a. and n. To seize; to
I CAUGHT, căwt, 162: } lay hold on; to seize by CAUGHT, căwt, 162: } pursuit; to intercept fully ing: to ensnare; to entangle; to receive infecting
To catch at, to attempt to catch:—see. To contend gious; to lay hold suddenly.
- This verb also has the regular pret. and part.
- Catch, s. Seizure; an advantage taken; a snatch any thing that catches: a song the parts of which are caught up by different singers; a small swift vessel often written ketch.
- Catch'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be caught.
- Catch'-er, s. One who catches.
- Catch'-up, s. A sauce made from mushrooms.
- CATCH'-PEN-NY, s. A worthless publication.
- CATCH'-POLE, s. A bum-bailiff.
- CATCH'-WORD, 141: s. A word under the last of a page repeated at the top of the next.
- CATECHISE, &c.—See among the compounds of Cata.
- The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.
- Consonants: mîsh-ûn, i. e. mission. 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision. 165: mîsh, 166: thên, 166.

To CATENATE=căt'-ē-nāte, v. a. To connect by links; to chain.
Cat'-e-na-tion, 85, 89: s. Regular connection.
Cat'-e-na-ri-an, 41, 101, 12: a. Relating to a chain: like a chain.
To CATER=căt'-er, 36: v. a. To provide food.
Ca'-ter, s. A caterer. [Obs.]
Ca'-ter-er, 129: s. A purveyor.
Ca'-ter-ess, s. A woman who provides food.
Ca'-ter-y, s. The depository of victuals purchased.
CATRS, s. pl. Viands; provisions; dainties.
Enter, the Anglicized form of quatre, four, has of course no relationship to these words.
CATERPILLAR=căt'-er-pi-lar, 85, 36, 34: s. An insect; a grub; a plant.
CATERWAUL, CATGUT, &c.—See under Cat.
CATHARTIC, &c. CATHEDRAL, &c. CATHOLIC, &c. CATOPTRON, &c.—See among the compounds of Cata.
CATKINS, CATLING, &c.—See under Cat.
CATONIAN, căt-tō-nē-ăn, 90: a. Grave, severe as Cato.
CATSUP, properly Catchup.—See under To Catch.
CATTLE, căt'-tl, 101: s. Beasts of pasture.
CAUDAL=căt'-dāl, a. Relating to an animal's tail.
Cau'-date, a. Having a tail.
CAUDLE, căt'-dl, 101: s. A warm drink mixed with wine, &c. given to women in childbirth.
To Cau'-dle, v. a. To make into caudle; to warm as caudle; to indulge as with caudle.
CAUF=căt'-uf, s. A chest to keep fish alive in water.
CAUK=căt'-uk, s. A coarse kind of spar.
CAUL=căt'-ul, s. A net for the hair; a membrane covering the intestines; a membrane sometimes encompassing the head of a child when born.
CAULIS=căt'-liss, s. A stalk or herbaceous stem.
Cau-les'-cent, a. Having a perfect stem.
Cau-lif'-er-ous, 129, 120: a. Having a stalk.
Cau'-line, 105: a. Growing out of the main stem.
Cau'-li-form, a. Having the form of a stalk.
CAULI-FLO-ER, 119: s. A species of cabbage.
CAULDRON and CAULK.—See Caldron and Calk.
To CAUPONATE=căt'-pō-nāte, v. n. To keep a victualling house.
To Cau'-po-nize, v. n. To sell wine or victuals.
CAUSALTY, căt'-āl-tēty, s. Among miners, the lighter parts of ore carried off by washing.
CAUSE, căt'-z, 151, 189: s. That which produces or effects, a notion arising out of that constitution of the mind by which, when two conditions or events never occur except in sequence, the one which always occurs first is deemed necessary to the other; and since, in every such case, the mind is unable to perceive why they are thus necessarily connected, except by perceiving them to be parts of other sequences or conditions, and so ad infinitum, it rests finally in the belief of a supreme will as the great Cause of all things;—the reason or motive that urges; the object sought, properly called Final cause, and so distinguished from Efficient cause; sake; party; pursuit. See also lower.
To Cause, v. a. To effect as an agent.
Caus'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be caused.
Caus'-al, 12: a. Relating to or implying causes.
Caus'-al-ly, ad. According to the order of causes.
Cau-sal'-i-ty, 81: s. The agency of a cause.
Cau'-sa-tive, 98, 105: a. That expresses a cause or reason; that effects as an agent.
Cau'-sa-tive-ly, ad. In a causative manner.
Cau-sa'-tion, 89: s. The act of causing.
Cau-sa'-tor, 38: s. A causeur.

Cause'-less, a. Original; having no just reason.
Cause'-less-ly, ad. Without cause or reason.
Cause'-less-ness, s. The state of being causeless.
Cau'-ser, 36: s. One who causes.
CAUSE, s. A suit, action, or legal process.
Caus-id'-i-cal, 81: a. Relating to a pleader.
CAUSEY, căt'-zēty, } 151: s. A chaussée,
CAUSEWAY, căt'-zēty, } or way, raised and paved.
CAUTEL.—See under Caution.
CAUTERY, căt'-tēr-ty, s. A burning or searing either by a hot iron, which is called actual cautery, or by a corroding drug, which is called potential cautery; also, the instrument or drug.
Cau'-ter, s. A searing iron.
To Cau'-ter-ize, v. a. To burn; to sear.
Cau'-ter-ism, 158: s. The application of cautery.
Cau'-ter-i-za'-tion, s. The act of using cautery.
CAU'-STIC, a. and s. Burning; pungent;—s. A corroding application. See also in Supp.
Cau-stic'-i-ty, (-stis'-ic-ty) } s. The quality of Cau-stic-ness, (-stick-ness) } being caustic.
CAUTION, căt'-shūn, 89: s. Prudence, care, warning.
To Cau'-tion, v. a. To warn.
Cau'-tion-er-y, a. Given as a pledge; warning.
Cau'-tion-er-y, s. In Scotland, he who bails another.
Cau'-tious, (-shūs, 90) a. Wary, watchful.
Cau'-tious-ly, ad. Warily.
Cau'-tious-ness, s. Carefulness; watchfulness.
CAU'-TEL, s. Cunning, subtlety, caution. [Obs.]
Cau'-tel-ous, 120: a. Cautious, wily, cunning.
Cau'-tel-ous-ly, ad. Cunningly, cautiously.
Cau'-tel-ous-ness, s. Cautiousness, cunning.
CAVALRY, cāv'-āl-rēty, s. Horse troops.
Cav'-al-cade', 85: s. A procession on horseback.
Cav'-A-LIER, (-lēir, 103) s. and a. A horseman, a knight; a gay, military man; a partizan of Charles I. as opposed to a Roundhead; also, a name given to a raised work in fortification;—a. Gay; warlike; generous; disdainful; haughty.
Cav'-a-lier'-ly, ad. Haughtily.
CAVATINA, cāv'-d-tē'-nā, 104: s. A short air in music without a return or second part.
CAVE=cāve, s. A hollow place; a den; a cell.
To Ca'-vate, v. a. To hollow out.
Ca-va'-tion, 89: s. An excavation for cellars, &c.
Cav'-i-ty, 92: s. Hollowness; a hollow place.
Cav'-in, s. A natural hollow, fit to cover troops.
Cav'-ern, s. A hollow place in the ground.
Cav'-erned, 114: a. Full of caverns; living in a cavern.
Cav'-er-nous, 120: a. Full of caverns; hollow.
Ca-vern'-u-lous, 81: a. Full of little caverns.
CAV'-ES-SON, s. A nose-band, generally hollow, which is used in breaking horses in.
CAVEAT=cāv'-vē-ăt, 146: s. A writ or process to stop proceedings; a caution or admonition.
CAVIARE, cāv'-yāre, 146: s. A sauce made from the roes of certain large fish, particularly sturgeon delicate or refined sauce.
To CAVIL=cāv'-il, v. n. and a. To raise cap-tious objections;—act. To receive with objections.
Cav'-il, s. False or frivolous objections.
Cav'-il-er, 36: s. A captious disputant.
Cav'-il-ling, s. A frivolous disputation.
Cav'-il-ling-ly, ad. In a cavilling manner.
Cav'-il-lous, a. Full of vexatious objections.
Cav'-il-la'-tion, 89: s. The practice of objecting:

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-way; chăp'-mân; pđ-pā': lăw; gōod; j'w, i. e. Jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. note, 171.

CAVITY, CAVIN.—See under Cave.

To CAW=cāw, v. n. To cry as a rook or crow.

CAXON, cāk'-ən, 154, 114: s. a wig. [A cant word.]

CAYENNE, cā-yēn', [Fr.] 170: s. A very pungent pepper.

CAYMAN=cā'-mān, 100: s. The American alligator.

CAZIQUE, cā-zēk', 104: s. A petty king among the aboriginal Americans.

To CEASE=sēsē=cōc, 59, 103: v. n. and a.
To leave off; to stop; to be at an end:—act. To put a stop to.

Cease, s. Extinction; failure. [Obs.]

Cease'-less, a. Incessant, perpetual.

Cease'-less-ly, 105: adv. Perpetually.

To Cess, v. n. To neglect a legal duty. [Obs.]

Ces'-ser, s. A neglect to perform the services or payment of a tenure for two years. [Law.]

Ces-sa'-vit, s. A writ to recover lands in consequence of a Cesser.

Ces'-sor, 38: s. He who is liable to a cessavit.

Ces-sa'-tion, 89: s. A stop; a rest; 'vacation; end of action; a pause of hostility not amounting to a peace.

CECITY, cē'-cē-tēty, 105: s. Blindness.

Ce-cu'-ti-en-cy, (-kū'-shē-ēn-cēty, 146, 147) s.
Cloudiness of sight.

CEDAR=cē'-dar, 34: s. A large evergreen tree.

Ce'-darn, 104: } a. Belonging to the cedar-tree.

Ce'-drine, 35: } Ce'-dry may be met with in the same sense.

To CEDE=cēde=sēd, v. n. and a. To submit:—act. To yield; to resign; to give up to.

Ces'-si-BLE, a. Giving way; yielding.

Ces'-si-bil'-i-ty, s. The quality of giving way.

Ces'-sion, (cēsh'-ūn, 90) s. Retreat; resignation; a manner of vacating a benefice.

Ces'-sion-ar-y, a. Implying resignation.

CEDILLA=cē-dil' lā, s. A mark to letter c, thus (ç).

To CEIL=cēl, 103: =sēl, v. a. To cover the inner roof of a building, or room.

Ceil'-ing, s. The inner roof of a building or room.

CELANDINE=cēl'-ān-dīne, s. Swallow-wort.

CELATURE=cēl'-lā-ture, 147: s. The art of engraving; the thing engraved.

To CELEBRATE=cēl'-ē-brāte, v. a. To praise; to distinguish by solemn rites.

Cel'-e-bra'-tor, 38: s. One who celebrates.

Cel'-e-bra'-tion, 85, 89: s. A distinguishing by ceremonies; praise; renown.

Ce-le'-bri-ous, 90, 120: a. Famous, renowned.

Ce-le'-bri-ous-ly, 105: adv. In a famous manner.

Ce-le'-bri-ous-ness, s. Renown, fame.

CE-LEB'-RI-TY, 81: s. Celebrator, fame.

CELERITY, cē-lēr'-ē-tēty, 129, 105: s. Swiftmess.

CELERY, cēl'-ēr-ēty, 105: s. A species of parsley.

Ce-le'-ri-ac, 90: s. Turnip-rooted celery.

CELESTIAL, cē-lēst'-yāl, 146, collug. cē-lēst'-sh'āl, 147: a. and s. Heavenly in place; heavenly in state; heavenly in quality:—s. An inhabitant of heaven.

Ce-le'-stīal-ly, adv. In a heavenly manner.

To Ce-le'-stī-ly, 6: v. a. To give some heavenly quality.

CE-LES'-TINE, 105: s. A delicate blue mineral.

CELESTINS=cēl'-ēs-tīns, s. pl. Monks of the order of St. Celestin and St. Bernard.

CELIAC, cē-lē-āc, a. Relating to the lower belly.

CELIBACY, cēl'-ē-bā-cēty, s. Single life.

Cel'-i-bate, 99: s. Celibacy.

CELL=cēll, s. A small cavity; a cave; a small room.

Cell'-ule, 155, 69: s. A little cell.

Cell'-u-lar, 34: a. Consisting of little cavities.

Cel-lif'-er-ous, a. Bearing or producing cells.

Cel'-u-lif'-er-ous, a. Producing little cells.

CEL'-I-AR, 34: s. A place under ground where liquors and other things are repositied.

Cel'-lar-age, s. Cellar or cellars; space for cellars, charge for cellar room.

Cel'-lar-er, } s. A butler, generally in a religious house.

Cel'-lar-ist, } s. A case of cabinet work for holding bottles.

CELSITUDE, cēl'-sē-tūde, 105: s. Height.

CELT=cēlt, s. One of the primitive inhabitants of Italy, Gaul, Spain, and Britain.

Cel'-tic, a. and s. Pertaining to the Celts:—s. The language of the Celts.

Cel'-ti-be'-ti-an, a. Pertaining to the Celts of the Iberus in Spain; hence, Spanish.

CEMENT=cē-mēnt', 83: s. The matter used to make substances cohere; bond of union.

To Cement, v. a. and n. To unite by a cement:—new. To come into union; to cohere.

Ce-men'-ter, s. A person or thing that unites.

Cem'-en-ta'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. The act of cementing.

Cem'-en-tif'-ious, (-tish'-ūs, 90) a. Conglutinating.

CEMETERY=cēm'-ē-tēr-ēty, 92, 129, 105: s. A place where the dead are repositied.

CENATORY, cē'-nā-tōr-ēty, 129, 105: a. Relating to supper.

CENOBITE=cē-nō-bīte, s. One of a religious order who live in a community, in contradistinction to an anchorite who lives in solitude.

Ce'-no-bit'-i-cal, a. Living in community.

Ce'-no-by, s. The residence of a community.

CENOTAPH, cēn'-ō-tāf, 163: s. An empty or honorary tomb to one buried elsewhere.

To CENSE=cēnce, 153: v. a. To burn perfumes.

Cen'-ser, 36: s. A pan for burning perfumes.

CENSE=cēnce, 153: s. A public rate or tax; rank.

Cen'-sion, 90: s. A rate; an assessment.

Cen'-sor, s. A public officer, originally of Rome, having certain powers of noting and registering persons or effects, and of reproving or restraining offences against manners. See also lower.

Cen'-sor-ship, s. The office of a censor.

Cen-so'-ri-al, } 90, 47: a. Relating to the censor, or the correction of public morals.

Cen-so'-ri-an, } a. Relating to the censor, or the correction of public morals.

Cen'-sus, s. A declaration by the citizens of ancient Rome before the censors, of their names, places of abode, rank, and possessions; at present, a numbering of the population.

Cen'-su-al, (-sū-āl, 147) a. Relating to the census; liable to be taxed.

Cen'-sion, s. A scrutinizing censuring person.

Cen-so'-ri-al, a. Censuring; severe.

Cen-so'-ri-ous, 120: a. Prone to find fault.

Cen-so'-ri-ous-ly, adv. In a severe reflecting manner.

Cen-so'-ri-ous-ness, s. Disposition to blazon faults.

Cen'-sure, (-shoor, 147) s. Blame; judgement.

Cen'-sure, v. a. and n. To blame, condemn:—new. To judge.

Cen'-su-er, 36: s. One that blames.

Cen'-su-ing, 72: s. Blame; reproach.

Cen'-su-ra-ble, 101: a. Deserving censure.

Cen'-su-ra-bly, 105: adv. Blamably.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166.

Cen-su-ra-ble-ness, s. Blamableness.
 CENT=cēnt, s. A hundred, as five per cent, i. e. five in the hundred; an American coin a hundred to a dollar.
 Cen't-age, s. A rate by the hundred.
 Cen'te-nar-y, s. The number of a hundred.
 Cen-ten-ni-al, a. Consisting of a hundred years.
 Cen-tes-i-mal, a. The hundredth.
 Cen-tes-i-mal'-tion, s. A military punishment of one in a hundred.
 Cen-ti-cip'-i-tous, a. Having a hundred heads.
 Cen-ti'-i-dous, a. Divided into a hundred parts.
 Cen-ti-fo'-li-ous, a. Having a hundred leaves.
 Cen-ti-grade, a. Having a hundred degrees.
 Cen-ti'-o-guy, (-kwē, 76) s. A hundred-fold discourse.
 Cen-ti-pede, s. A many-legged insect.
 Cen-tu-ple, 101: a. A hundred fold.
 Tu Cen-ti'-pli-cate, v. a. To make a hundred fold.
 Cen-tu-ry, 147: s. A hundred of men, of years, &c.
 To Cen-tu'-ri-ate, v. a. To divide into hundreds.
 Cen-tu'-ri-a'-tor, s. A chronologer by centuries.
 Cen-tu'-ri-n, s. A captain of a hundred men.
 CENTAUR=cēn'-tor, 131: s. A fabulous monster, partly man, partly horse.
 CEN'-TAU-ry, s. The name of a plant.
 CENTO=cēn'-tō, s. A composition or patchwork formed by verses or passages from various authors.
 CENTRE, cēn'-ter, 159: s. The middle point.
 Tu Cen'-tre, v. a. and n. To place on a centre; to collect in a point;—acc. To be placed centrally; to repose on.
 Cen'-tral, a. Relating to, or placed in, the centre.
 Cen'-tral-ly, ad. In a central manner.
 Cen'-tric, Cen'-tri-cal, a. Placed in the centre.
 Cen'-tri-cal-ly, ad. In a central position.
 Cen'-tri-cal-ness, s. Situation in the centre.
 CEN-TRI'-v-ert, 87: a. Tending from the centre.
 Cen-trip'-e-tal, a. Tending to the centre.
 CENTRY.—See SENTRY: CENTURY, &c., see under Cent.
 CEPHALIC, cē-fāl'-ick, 163, 88: a. and s. Pertaining to the head;—s. A medicine for disorders of the head. Cephalopod, see Supp.
 Ceph'-al-al'-gy, 85: s. The headache.
 Ceph'-al-al'-gic, 88: s. Medicine for the headache.
 CERASITE=cēr'-d-cit, s. A cherry-like petrification.
 Cer'-a-sin, s. Any gummy, cherry-like substance.
 CERASTES, cēr-rās'-tēz, 101: s. Literally, a horned creature; appropriately, a serpent supposed to have horns.
 CERBERIAN=cēr-bēr'-ē-ān, 90: a. As of the dog Cerberus. [Milton.]
 CERE=cēre, s. The naked skin that covers the base of a hawk's bill.
 To CERE=cēre, v. a. To wax or cover with wax.
 Cer'-rate, s. A medicament made chiefly of wax.
 Cer'-ra-ted, a. Covered with wax.
 Cere'-cloth, s. Cloth smeared with wax or bitumen.
 Cere'-ment, s. Cerecloth anciently used in embalming.
 Cer'-re-ous, 43: a. Waxy; like wax.
 Cer'-re-o-lite, s. A mineral resembling wax.
 Cer'-rin, s. That part in wax which dissolves in alcohol.
 Cer'-ru-men, (-rōō'-mēn, 109) s. The wax in the ear.
 CEREBRUM=cēr'-ē-brūm, s. The brain. [Lat.]
 Cer'-e-bral, a. Pertaining to the brain.

Cer'-e-bel'-lum, or Cer'-e-bel, s. The hinder part of the head and brain near the neck.
 CEREMONY, cēr'-ē-mōn-ēy, 129, 105: s. Outward rite; form in religion, in state, in civility.
 Cer'-e-mo'-ni-al, 90: a. and s. Relating to ceremony; formal;—s. Outward form or rite; order for, or book of rites in the Roman church.
 Cer'-e-mo'-ni-al-ness, s. The quality of being ceremonial.
 Cer'-e-mo'-ni-ous, a. Full of ceremony; formal.
 Cer'-e-mo'-ni-ous-ly, ad. In a ceremonious manner.
 Cer'-e-mo'-ni-ous-ness, s. Great formality.
 CERIUM, cēr'-ē-ūm, 43: s. A grayish white metal found in a mineral called Cerite, both of them named from the planet Ceres.
 CERRUS=cēr'-rūs, s. The bitter oak.
 Cer'-ri-al, a. Pertaining to the bitter oak.
 CERTAIN=cēr'-tān, 100=cēr'-tēn, 99: a. Sure, undoubted; resolved; undoubting; unfailing; regular; some or one in particular.
 Cer'-tain-ly, ad. Indubitably; without fail.
 Cer'-tain-ness, s. Certainty.
 Cer'-tain-ty, 105: s. Exemption from doubt; from failure; that which is real; regularity.
 CERN-ERS, cēr'-tēz, 151: ad. Certainly; in truth. [tribs]
 Tu Cer'-ti-fy, 6: v. a. To give assurance of.
 Cer'-ti-fi'-er, s. An assurer; an ascertainer.
 Cer'-ti-fi-ca'-tion, 89: s. The certifying of any thing.
 Cer-ti-fi-cate, s. Testimony in writing.
 CERN'-T-ODE, s. Certainty; freedom from doubt.
 CERN'-TI-O-RAL'-RI, (-shē-ō-rār'-rī, 147) s. A writ issuing out of a superior court to the officers of an inferior one, commanding them to certify or return the records of a cause depending before them, to the end the party may have more sure and speedy justice.
 CERULEAN, cēr-rōō'-lē-ān, 90, 109: a. Sky-colored.
 Ce'-ru'-le-ous, 120, Cer'-ule, 129: a. Blue.
 Cer'-u-lil'-ic, a. Producing a blue colour.
 See Cerumen under Cere.
 CERUSE, cēr-roox, 109, 152: s. White lead.
 Cer'-used, (-roost, 114, 143) a. Washed with white lead.
 CERVICAL, cēr'-vē-cāl, 105: a. Pertaining to the neck.
 CERVINE=cēr-vīnē, a. Pertaining to a stag or deer.
 CESARIAN=cē-zār'-ē-ān, 41, 105: a. The Cesarian operation, said to be that which brought Caesar into the world, is the taking of a child from the womb by cutting.
 CESPITOUS, cēs'-pē-tūs, 120: a. Turfy.
 Ces'-pi-ti'-ious, (-tish'-ūs, 90) a. Pertaining to turf.
 CESS=cēs, s. A rate or tax; a corruption either of Assess or Cense: To CESS, see under To Cense.
 Cess'-ment, s. An assessment.
 Cess'-sor, s. A taxer.
 CESSATION, To CESS, &c. see under To Cense: CESSATION, Cession, &c., see under To Cede.
 CESSPOOL=cēs'-pool, s. A receptacle into which refuse water flows or is yielded. Compare To Cede, &c. Perhaps, however, an assessed pool.
 CESTUS=cēs'-tūs, s. The girdle of Venus: a. a marriage girdle.
 Cestus is a boxing glove.
 Cest, s. A lady's girdle.
 CESURA, cē-zū'-rā, 151: s. A cutting or dividing in verse; either of a verse into two or more parts by appropriate pauses; or of the syllables of different words so as to make each foot consist of a syllable

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gātē-wāy: chāp-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōd: j'wē, i. e. Jew, 55: a, t, y, &c. mode, 171.

CH=TCH

from one word, and a syllable or syllables from another.

Ce-tu'-ral, a. Pertaining to the cetura.

CETACEOUS, cĕ-tā'-sh'ŭs, 90: a. Of the whale kind. Ce-tin is the same as spermaceti.

Ce-tic, a. Pertaining to the whale, or spermaceti.

Ce-tol'-ogy, s. Natural history of the whale kind.

CH=TCH

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

CHACE.—See under Chase.

To CHAFE=chāf, v. a. and n. To warm by rubbing; to heat by rage or hurry; to make angry:—new. To rage; to fret; to be fretted by rubbing.

Chaf'-er, s. One who chafes.—See also below.

Chafe, s. A heat, a rage; a fume.

CHAFE-WAX, 154: s. An officer of the lord chancellor, who fits the wax for sealing writs.

CHA'-FER, s. A hurrying, buzzing insect.

CHA'-FER-Y, 129: s. A forge in an iron-mill.

CHAFF'-VERN, s. A kettle; a chaffing-dish.

CHAFF=chāf, 11, 155: s. The husks of corn.

Chaf'-fy, 105: a. Like chaff; foul; light; bad.

CHAFF-VINCH, s. A bird said to like chaff.

To CHAFFER=chāf'-fer, 36: v. n. and a. To treat about a bargain; to haggle;—act. To buy; to exchange.

Chaf'-fer-er, 36: s. A dealer; a hard bargainer.

Chaf'-fer-y, 105: s. Hagglng traffic.

CHAIN=chān, s. A series of connected links or rings; a manacle; a connected series.

To Chain, v. a. To fasten with a chain; to enslave; to keep by a chain; to unite.

The word is often compounded. A Chain pump, is a pump used on shipboard: Chain-shot are shots fastened by a chain or bar: Chain-work, is work with open spaces like the links of a chain.

CHAIR=chāra, s. A moveable seat: a seat of justice or authority: a sort of ewise; a prop or support.

Chair'-man, s. The president of an assembly; the porter of a sedan-chair.

To Chair, v. a. To carry in a chair after an election.

CHALDRON, chāl'-drōn, 112: s. A coal measure of thirty-six bushels.

CHALICE, chāl'-iss, 105: s. A cup; a bowl.

Chal'-iced, (-ist, 143) a. Having a cup, as a flower.

CHALK, chālk, 112, 139: s. A white calcareous earth.

Chalk'-y, 105: a. Having chalk; white.

Chalk'-i-ness, s. The state of being chalky.

Among the compounds are Chalk-pit, Chalk-stone, (a white concretion in the extremities of a gouty patient,) Chalk cutter, &c.

To Chalk, v. a. To rub, to mark, or to manure with chalk.

To CHALLENGE=chāl'-lēng, v. a. To call to answer for an offence by combat; to accuse; to claim; to exempt to a juror.

Chal'-lēng, s. A summons to combat; a demand; an exception to jurors.

Chal'-lēng-a-ble, 101: a. That may be challenged.

Chal'-lēng-er, s. One that challenges.

CHAMBER, chām'-ber, 111: s. A room; a bed-room; a hall of justice; a cavity holding gunpowder either in a mine, or in a gun; a sort of cannon.

To Cham'-ber, v. n. To reside as in a chamber; to frequent bed-rooms, and hence to intrigue, to be wanton;—act. To shut up as in a chamber.

Cham'-ber-er, 129: s. A man of intrigue.

Cham'-ber-ing, s. Intrigue.

Cham'-ber-lain, 36, 99: s. Literally, an overseer of the chambers, as at an inn or hotel. The lord

CH=TCH

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

chamberlain of England, who is the sixth officer of the crown, is so called because, by ancient usage, he has livery and lodging in the king's court, he dresses and undresses the king on coronation day, and he has the care of providing all things in the house of lords in the time of parliament. The lord-chamberlain of the household, another officer of the crown, is so called because he has the oversight of all officers belonging to the king's chambers, except the precinct of the bed-chamber.

Among the compounds of this word are Chamber-fellow, (one that lies in the same bed or chamber,) Chamber-maid, (a servant who has the care of bed-rooms, or who waits on a lady,) Chamber-counsel, (a counsellor who delivers his private opinion, but does not plead in court,) Chamber-practicer, (the business of a chamber-counsel,) &c.

To CHAMFER=chām'-fer, v. a. To channel architecturally; to flute as a column.

Cham'-fer, s. A small gutter or channel cut in wood; also, a slope.

To CHAMP=chāmp, v. a. and n. To bite with frequent audible action of the teeth; to devour;—neu. To bite frequently.

Cham'-per, 35: s. A biter or nibbler.

CHAMPION, chām'-pē-ōn, 116, 18: s. A single combatant; a judicial combatant either in his own case, or another's; a hero; a bold upholder of a contest.

To CHAMPION, v. a. To challenge; to defend.

CHANCE=chānce, s. and a. The occurrence of an event to the exclusion of some other event which, as far as human experience, judgement, or foresight can calculate, might as easily have occurred; fortune or the imaginary cause of fortuitous events; accident; success; misfortune; possibility of an occurrence;—a. Fortuitous.

To Chance, v. n. To happen.

Chance'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Accidental.

Chance'-fel, 117: a. Hazardous.

Among the compounds are Chance-com'er, and Chance-med'ley; the latter is a law-term signifying the killing of a person by chance when the killer was doing a lawful act.

CHANCEL=chān'-cēl, s. Originally a latticed division of a hall, or other building in which a secretary or other officer sat; or a similar division in a church where the sacrament was administered; now, it is taken generally for the eastern part of the church where the altar stands.

CHAN'-CEL-LOR, 38: s. Originally, a chief notary or scribe under the Roman emperors; an officer presiding in some court; as the lord high chancellor, who presides in the courts of equity, and is keeper of the great seal; the chancellor of the exchequer, who presides in that court, and takes care of the interest of the crown.

Chan'-cer-y, s. The high court of equity.

CHANDLER=chānd'-ler, 11: s. A tallow chandler. [Obs.] See also lower.

Chand'-ry, s. A place where candles are kept. [Obs.]

CHAND'-LER, s. A dealer generally, any particular meaning being determined by a prefix; as Tallow-chandler, Coru-chandler, Ship-chandler, &c.

Webster thinks it a corruption of Handler, rather than a generalization of the head word.

Chand'-ler-y, 129, 105: s. Articles sold by a chandler.

To CHANGE, chāng, 111: v. a. and n. To put in place of somebody or something else; to quit for something else; to give and take reciprocally; to alter; to give smaller money for larger, the value being equal;—neu. To undergo change.

Change, s. Alteration; novelty; small money; also a contraction of Exchange.

Change'-a-ble, a. Subject or possible to be changed; having the quality of appearing different; fickle.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ŭn, i. e. mission

⇒ For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

Change^{-a}-ble-ness, s. Inconstancy; susceptibility of change.

Change^{-a}-bly, ad. Inconstantly.

Change^{-ful}, 117: a. Full of change.

Change^{-less}, a. Constant.

Change^{-ling}, s. A child left or taken in place of another; an idiot; one apt to change.

Chan^{-ger}, s. One who alters; a money-changer.

CHANNEL=chän'-nēl, s. The hollow bed of running waters; a long cavity; a strait; a furrow.

To Chan^{-nel}, v. a. To cut in channels.

To CHANT=chānt, v. a. and n. To sing; to celebrate by song; to sing in the cathedral service: To chant a horse is to advertise it by qualities which on trial must be found wanting.

Chant, s. Song; recitative in cathedrals.

Chan^{-ter}, s. A singer:—fem. Chan^{-ter}-ress.

CHAN^{-TRY}, 105: s. An endowed chapel for priests to sing mass for the souls of the donors.

CHANT^{-I}-CLERK, s. A cock, with reference to his crowing.

To CHAP=chāp, 112: v. a. and n. To break into clefts or gapings by the operation of heat, drought, or cold; in any more general sense, this verb and its derivatives are spelled and pronounced Chop. The words spelled like it, in the classes after the next two words, are etymologically distinct.

Chap, s. A cleft from the operation of heat, cold, &c.

Chap^{-py}, a. Having clefts from dryness, &c.

CHAP, chōp, 112: s. The upper or under part of a beast's mouth; in the plural, the same parts of a man in derision; the entrance to any thing, as the chaps of a channel.

Chap^{-fallen}, (-fā'wln, 112, 114) a. Having the lower chap depressed; hence, dispirited, silenced.

Chap^{-less}, a. Without flesh about the mouth.

To CHAP=chāp, v. n. To cheapen, to bargain. [Obs.]

Chap^{-man}, s. A cheapener; a dealer.

CHAP, s. An abbreviation of chapman, and used familiarly and laxly as the word fellow.

CHAPE=chāpe, s. A thin plate of metal at the point of a scabbard; the catch of a buckle.

Chape^{-less}, a. Without a chape

CHAPEL=chāp'-ēl, s. Primarily, a private building for religious service; a building for religious service, either attached locally to a church, or not attached but subordinate to it; any place of worship which is not called a church; a meeting among printers, so called because a chapel in Westminster was the first English printing office.

Chap^{-el}-ry, s. The jurisdiction of a chapel.

Chap^{-el}-lan-y, s. A chapel and jurisdiction within the precincts of a church, and subordinate to it.

Chap^{-let}, s. A small chapel or shrine.

CHAP^{-LAIN}, 99: s. A priest who does not officiate in a parish church, but is attached to some more domestic establishment.

Chap^{-lain}-cy, s. The office of a chaplain.

Chap^{-lain}-ship, s. Chaplaincy; the revenue of a chapel.

CHAPELET=chāp'-lēt, s. A garland or wreath worn about the head; a string of beads used in the Roman church; in architecture, a little moulding.

CHAPMAN.—See under To Chap (to cheapen.)

CHAPTER=chāp'-ter, s. Literally, a head; hence, the summary stated at the beginning of a new division of a book; and, hence, the division itself; a decretal epistle. Chapter, the old form of the word, see Supp.

CHAP^{-TERN}, s. The prebends and other clergymen who, with the dean of a cathedral church, form a corporation aggregate, with authorities which, under the bishop, entitle them to the designation Head.

⇒ For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

To CHAP^{-TER}, v. a. To bring up to some legal authority for rebuke or punishment; to rebuke; to take to task.

CHAPTREL=chāp'-trēl, s. In architecture the same as impost.

CHAR=char, 33: s. A delicate fish so called.

To CHAR=char, 33: v. a. To burn wood to a black cinder.

Char^{-ry}, (char'-ēy, 33, 129) a. Burned as charcoal.

Char^{-coal}, s. Coal made by burning wood under turf.

To Chark, v. a. The same as To Char.

CHAR, chār, 130: s. Work done by the day; a job.

To Char, v. n. To work at others' houses by the day.

Char^{-wom}-an, (-wōm'-ān, 107) s. She that does char-work.

CHARD=chard, s. A term used of artichoke leaves and white beet in a peculiar mode of cultivation.

To CHARGE=charge, v. a. To load; hence, to intrust; to impute as a debt; to accuse; to command; to enjoin:—new. To make an onset.

Charge, s. Care; precept; mandate; trust; accusation; imputation; expense; cost; onset.

Charge^{-a}-ble, a. Imputable as a debt or crime.

Charge^{-a}-bly, ad. Expensively.

Charge^{-a}-ble-ness, s. Expense; cost.

Charge^{-ful}, 117: a. Expensive, costly.

Charge^{-less}, a. Unexpensive.

CHAR^{-GER}, s. A dish capable of a load, a large dish.

CHAR^{-GER}, s. A horse used in charging the enemy.

CHARILY, &c.—See under Chary.

CHARIOT, chār'-ē-ōt, 105, 18: s. A half-coach; a car formerly used in war.

To Char⁻ⁱ-ot, v. a. To drive as in a chariot. [Milton.]

Char⁻ⁱ-ot-er^{ss}, s. The driver of a chariot.

CHARITY=chār'-ē-tēy, 92, 129, 105: s. Tenderness, kindness, good will, benevolence; the theological virtue of universal love; alms.

Char⁻ⁱ-ta-ble, 101: a. Alms-giving; judging kindly.

Char⁻ⁱ-ta-bly, ad. Kindly; benevolently.

Char⁻ⁱ-ta-ble-ness, s. Exercise of, disposition to, charity.

To CHARK.—See under To Char.

CHARLES'S-WAIN, charlz'-iz-wānⁿ, 151: s. The constellation otherwise called the great bear.

CHARLOCK=char'-lōck, s. A weed in cornfields.

CHARM=charm, s. Sounds, characters, or philtres of occult power; something of power to gain the affections.

To Charm, v. a. To bewitch; to delight; to subdue.

Char^{-med}, a. Enchanted, bewitched.

Char^{-mer}, s. One that charms; an enchanter.

Char^{-ming}, a. Enchanting; delighting; pleasing.

Char^{-ming}-ly, ad. In an enchanting manner.

Char^{-ming}-ness, s. The power of greatly pleasing.

Charm^{-ful}, 117: a. Abounding with charms.

Charm^{-less}, a. Destitute of charms.

CHARNEL=char'-nēl, a. Containing flesh or carcases. Compare Carneous, &c.

Char^{-nel}-houseⁿ, s. A place appended to a church yard as a repository for bones.

CHARRY.—See under To Char.

CHART=chart, s. Literally, a paper; (compare Card, Carte, and Charta:) appropriately, a marine map, or a delineation of coasts, shoals, isles, rocks, &c. for the use of sailors; also a map generally.

Char^{-tu}-lar-y, a. See Cartulary under Carte.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōd: j'wō, i. e. jew, 55: a. e. y, &c. mude, 171.

⇒ For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

CHAR'-TER, 36: s. Any written paper bestowing or confirming privileges; immunity.

To Char'-ter, v. a. To establish by charter; to let and hire a ship on contract.

⇒ Among the compounds of Charter are Charter-land, (land held by charter:); Charter-party, (the duplicate agreement in chartering a ship.) &c.

CHARWOMAN.—See under Char (work.)

CHARY, chā'-ry, 41, 105: a. Careful; cautious.

Cha'-ri-ly, ad. Warily; frugally.

Cha'-ri-ness, s. Caution; nicety.

CHASE=chāc, 152: s. A frame with which printers confine types set in columns. The word is allied to Case.

To CHASE=chāc, 152: v. a. To hunt, to pursue; to drive away.

⇒ To chase metals is a contraction for Enchase, which see.

Chase'-a-ble, a. Fit to be chased.

Cha'-ser, 36: s. A pursuer. See also under Enchase.

CHACK, s. Hunting; pursuit; fitness to be hunted; the game hunted; open ground stored with game; length of a gun's bore determining the extent of its reach.

CHASTE=chāst, 111: a. Pure from fornication or adultery; free from obscenity; pure in taste and style.

Chaste'-ly, 105: ad. Without incontinence; purely.

Chaste'-ness, s. Chastity; purity.

CHAS'-TI-TY, (chās'-tē-tē, 92) s. Purity of body; purity of manners; freedom from bad mixture.

To CHASTEN=chā'-sn, 156: v. a. To correct; to punish.

Cha'-s-en-er, 36: s. He who corrects.

To CHAS-TISE', (chās'-tiz', 137) v. a. To correct by punishing; to reduce to order; to repress.

Chas-ti'-sa-ble, 101: a. Deserving chastisement.

Chas-ti'-ser, (-zer) s. He who corrects by punishment.

CHAS-TISE-MENT, (chās'-tiz-ment, 83, 105) s. Correction; punishment.

To CHAT=chāt, v. n. To prate; to converse at ease.

Chat, s. Idle talk, prate.

Chat'-ty, a. Chattering; conversing freely.

To CHAT'-TER, v. n. To make a noise as a monkey; to chatter the teeth; to talk idly.

Chat'-ter, s. Noise as of a pie or monkey; prate.

Chat'-ter-er, 129: s. An idle talker.

Chat'-ter-ing, s. Idle or unprofitable talk.

Chat'-ter-box, 154: s. An incessant talker.

CHAT=chāt, s. A twig, or little stick. See To Chit.

Chat'-wood, 118: s. Little sticks; fuel.

CHATTEL, chāt'-tl, 114: s. Any moveable property.

CHAUN=chāun, s. A gap. [Obs.]

CHAVENDER, chāv'-ēn-der, s. The chub, a fish.

To CHAW, chāw, v. a. (part. Chawen.) To chew. [Obs. or vulg.]

Chaw, s. The obsolete word for jaw.

CHAW'-DRON, 18: s. That which receives what is chawen the entrails. [Shaks.]

CHEAP=chēp, a. Bearing a low market price; easy to be had; common, not respected.

Cheap, s. A market; a bargain. [Obs.]

Cheap'-ly, 105: ad. At a small price.

Cheap'-ness, s. Lowness of price.

To Chea'-pen, (chē'-pn, 114) v. a. Originally, to ask the price of; at present, to lessen value.—See To Chap.

Cheap' en-er, 36: s. A bargainer.

CHEAR.—See Cheer.

⇒ For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

To CHEAT=chēat, v. a. To defraud, to impose on. Cheat, s. A fraud; a trick; one that cheats.

Cheat'-er, 36: s. One that cheats. [Shaks.]

Cheat'-ing, s. The act or practice of defrauding.

To CHECK=chēck, v. a. and n. To repress; to curb; to improve; to control by a counter-reckoning; —nra. To stop, to clash; to interfere; to keep repressed.

Check, s. Stop; restraint; curb; reproof; the forsaking of her proper game by a trained hawk; the corresponding cypher of a draft or order for money; the order itself. See also under To Chequer.

Check'-er, s. One that checks or restrains.

Check'-less, a. Uncontrollable.

CHECK, s. A term in chess when the king is put in restraint, and must defend himself or lose. This word is said to be the parent of the verb at the head.

Check'-mate, s. A check that finishes the game of chess.

To CHÉQ'-UER, (chēck'-er, 76, 145) v. a. To form into little squares of different colours like a chess-board; to variegate with different qualities, scenes, or events.

Chēq'-uer, (-er) } s. sing. and pl. Cross stripes

Chēq'-uers, (-erz) } of different colours; a game on a chequered board.

CHECK, s. A contraction for Chequer, meaning chequered linen, which would be more consistently written Cheque; a mode of spelling frequently, but with less propriety, adopted when a banker's check is meant; (see the second word of the class:); unless it can be supposed that the name arises from the chequered marks on some of the slips used for writing drafts.

CHEEK=chēck, s. The side of the face under the eye; among mechanics, those part of wrought objects that are double and correspondent.

Cheek'-tooth, s. The hinder tooth or tusk.

CHEER=chēre, 43: s. Entertainment; gaiety, air of the countenance; shout of applause.

To Cheer, v. a. and n. To encourage; to applaud; to comfort; to gladden:—nra. To grow gay.

Cheer'-er, 36: s. Gladdener; giver of gaiety.

Cheer'-y, 105: a. Gay, sprightly, making gay.

Cheer'-ly, a. and ad. Cheerful:—ad. Cheerfully.

Cheer'-i-ly, 105: ad. Cheerfully.

Cheer'-ful, 117: a. Serenely joyful; causing joy.

Cheer'-ful-ly, ad. With cheerfulness; willingly.

Cheer'-ful-ness, s. Serene joy; alacrity.

Cheer'-less, a. Dejected; joyless.

CHEESE, chēz, 151: s. Food made by pressing the curd of milk, and leaving it to dry.

Chee'-sy, (-zēy) a. Having the nature of cheese.

Cheese'-cake, 119: s. A cake made of soft curds, &c.

Cheese'-mon-g'er, (-mūng-g'er, 116, 158, 77) s. A dealer in cheese; and usually in butter and bacon also.

Cheese'-vat, s. A wooden case for pressing curds

To CHEQUER, &c.—See under To Check.

To CHERISH=chēr'-ish, v. a. To treat with tenderness; to nurse; to help and shelter.

Cher'-ish-er, 36: s. A comforter; a supporter.

Cher'-ish-ment, s. Support; comfort. [Spenser.]

CHERRY, chēr'-rēy, s. and a. A small stone fruit:—a. Pertaining to a cherry; coloured as a red cherry.

⇒ Among the compounds are Cherry-tree, Cherry cheek'd, Cherry-pit, (a child's play,) &c.

CHERT=chert, 35: s. A kind of flint, hornstone.

Cher'-ty, 105: a. Like chert; flinty.

CHERUB, chēr' ūb, 129: s. sing. } Celestial

CHERUBIM, chēr'-ōo-bim, 109: pl. } spirits, which in the hierarchy are placed next in order to the

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

cheraphim. The plural is sometimes written with u. The English plural, Cherubs, is the proper word for ordinary use. Shakespeare has Cherubin as an adjective, to signify Cherubic, and Dryden as a substantive to signify a cherub; but their practice is not to be imitated.

Cheru'-bic, 88; } 109: a. Pertaining to cherubs;
Cheru'-bi-cal, } angelical.

CHERUP=chër'-ûp, v. n. To chirp.

CHERVIL=chër'-vil, s. A kind of plants; cow-weed.

CHESIBLE. chëz'-l-bl, 151: s. A Roman priest's vestment. It is also sounded Shër'-e-bl.

CHESLIP, chëz'-lip, 151: s. A small vermin.

CHIESS=chëss, s. A scientific game.—See Check.

Among the compounds are Chess-board and Chess-mana, the latter being the general name for the several pieces. Chess-apple, a sort of wild service, is distinct.

CHESOM=chës'-sôm, 18: s. A mellow earth.

CHEST=chëst, s. A large box; the thorax.

Chest'-ed, a. Having a chest.

CHESTNUT, chës'-nüt, 156: s. and a. The fruit of a kind of beech tree; the tree itself:—a. Bright-brown.

CHEVIN=chëv'-în, s. The chub, a fish.

CHEVERIL=chëv'-ër-îl, s. A kid; kid leather.

To CHEW, chëw, 110, 109: v. a. To crush with the teeth; to masticate:—new. To ruminate. Compare Chaw.

Chew'-et, s. Minced meats, or mince-pie. [Obs.]

CHICK=chick, s. A young chicken; a young person.

Chick'-en, 14: s. The young of a bird, mostly of a hen.

Chick'-ling, s. A chick, or small chicken.

Chick'-pea, s. A kind of degenerate pea.

Chick'-weed, s. A plant; greenmint.

CHICK'-EN-HEART'-ED, (-hart'-ëd, 131) a. Timorous.

CHICK'-EN-POX', 154: s. A mild eruptive disease.

To CHIDE=chide, } v. a. and n. To re-
CHID=chid, 135: } prove; to scold; to

CHIDDEN, chid'-dn, 114: } check; to drive away with reproof; to blame:—new. To clamour; to scold; to make a noise.

Chi'-der, s. A rebuker.

Chi'-ding, s. A scolding.

Chi'-ding-ly, ad. In a reproving manner.

CHIEF, chëf, 103: a. ad. and s. Principal; most eminent:—ad. Chiefly:—s. A leader; the top of any thing.

Chief'-ly, ad. Principally; more than common.

Chief'-less, a. Without a leader; weak.

Chief'-tain, 99: s. A leader; the head of a clan.

Chief'-dom, 18: s. Sovereignty.

CHIEF'-AGE, s. An old poll tribute.

CHIEF'-RE, (-rë, 103) s. A small feudal rent.

CHIEVANCE, chë'-vance, 103, 12: s. Traffic in which money is extorted as discount. Compare Chevisance under CH=SH.

CHILD, child, 115: s. sing. } The descendant

CHILDREN=chil'-drën, s. pl. } of a parent; an infant or young person.

To Child, v. n. and a. To bring forth. [Obs.]

Child'-ish, a. Like a child; puerile; trifling.

Child'-ish-ly, 105: ad. In a childish manner.

Child'-ish-ness, s. Puerility; harmlessness.

Child'-less, a. Without offspring.

Child'-like, a. Resembling a child.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gât'-wáy: cháp'-māu: pā'-pā': lāw: gōod: j'w, i. e. jëw, 55: a-t, i, &c. mafe, 171.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

Child' bearing, (-bäre-ing, 100) s. The bearing of children.

Child'-bed, s. State of a woman in labour.

Child'-birth, 35: s. The time or act of bringing forth.

Child'-hood, 118: s. The time of life between infancy and puberty; the properties of a child.

CHIL'-DER-MAS-DAY', s. The twenty-eighth of December, called also Innocents' day, from the slaying of the children by Herod.

CHILDE, (child, 115) s. A noble youth.

CHILI, chil'-ly, a. Or from Chili; as Chili pepper, &c.

CHILL=chil, 155: a. and s. Cold; dull; depressed; cold of temper:—s. Chiness; cold.

To Chill, v. a. To make cold; to deject; to blast with cold.

Chil'-ly, a. and ad. Somewhat cold; coldly.

Chil'-li-ness, Chil'-ness, s. Shivering; coldness.

CHIL'-BLAIN, s. Sores made by frost.

CHILTERN=chil'-tern, a. An epithet which, joined with Hundreds, designates a hilly district in Bucks, belonging to the crown, by accepting the nominal stewardship of which, a member of parliament vacates his seat.

CHIME=chime, s. Correspondence of sound: correspondence of proportion; the sound, or a set of bells.

To Chime, v. n. and a. To sound in harmony; to jingle; to agree:—act. To strike or sound in harmony.

Chi'-mer, s. One who chimes.

CHIMNEY=chim'-ney, s. A passage for the ascent of smoke; a fire-place.

Among the compounds are Chimney-corner, (the fire-side,) Chimney-money, (a tax once paid for each chimney,) Chimney-sweep or sweeper, Chimney-piece, (a shelf over the fire-place,) &c.

CHIN=chin, s. The lowest part of the face.

Chinned, (chinnd, 114) a. Having a long chin.

CHINCOUGH, chin'-côf, 120, 162: s. The whooping cough.

CHINA=chi'-nd, s. A species of fine porcelain, of which the first specimens came from China.

Among the compounds are China-ware, China-orange, (the sweet orange first brought from China,) China-root, (a species of Smilax,) &c.

Chi'-nese, (-nëz, 151) a. and s. Of China:—s. A China man.

CHINE=chine, s. The back-bone or spine of a beast; the piece of the back-bone and adjoining parts for cooking.

To Chine, v. a. To cut into a chine or chines.

Chined, 114: a. Pertaining to the back

CHINK, chingk, 158: s. A narrow aperture.

Chink'-y, 105: a. Full of narrow clefts.

To Chink, v. n. To crack; to open.

To CHINK, chingk, 158: v. a. and n. To jingle:—new. To sound by striking each other.

Chink, s. Money. [Ladicrous.]

CHINTZ, chints, 143: s. Coloured cotton cloth.

CHIOPPINE, chöp'-pene, 120, 104: s. A high shoe formerly worn by ladies.

CHIP- A Saxon prefix which in the names of places implies a market. Compare Cheap.

CHIP=chip, s. A piece of wood such as might be chopped off easily by an axe; a fragment.

To Chip, v. a. and n. To cut into small pieces; to diminish by cutting away a little at a time:—new. To break or crack.

Chip'-ping, s. A chip; a fragment.

To CHIRP=cherp, 35: v. n. To make a lively noise, as birds, without singing.

Chirp, s. The voice of birds or insects.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

Chirp—er, s. One that chirps.

To CHIRP=cherp, 33: v. a. To cheer up.

CHISEL, chiz'-el, 151, 14: s. An instrument for paring or hollowing wood or stone.

To Chis'-el, v. a. To cut or carve with a chisel.

CHIT=chit, s. A sprout; the first germination of a seed or plant; a freckle; a babe; a young person.

Chit'-ty, 105: a. Childish; like a babe.

To Chit, v. n. To sprout; to shoot as a seed.

CHITCHAT=chit'-chât, s. Prattle; familiar talk.

CHITTERLING=chit'-ter-ling, s. Frill of a shirt. [Obs.]

CHITTERLINGS, chit'-ter-lingz, 143: s. pl. The bowels of an eatable animal. It is rarely found in the singular.

CHIVE=chive, s. A species of small onion.

CHIVES, chivz, 143: s. pl. The threads or filaments in the blossoms of plants. [chokes.]

CHOCK.—See Choke. Chock, is something that

CHOCOLATE=chôck'-ô-lâte, 81: s. The nut of the cocoa-tree; the mass made by grinding the kernel; the liquor obtained by a solution of this mass in hot water.

Choc'-o-late-house', s. House for drinking chocolate.

CHOICE.—See under To Choose.

To CHOKÉ=chôke, v. a. and n. To suffocate; to stop up; to suppress;—new. To be choked; to be offended.

Cho'-ker, s. One that chokes; one that puts another to silence; that which cannot be answered.

Cho'-ky, 105: a. Having a tendency to suffocate.

Among the compounds are Choke'-damp, (a noxious vapour, Choke'-full, (full even to choking,) Choke'-p-ar, (an unpalatable pear, or figuratively, an unanswerable sarcasm,) Choke'-weed, (a plant,) &c.

CHOKÉ=chôke, s. Internal part of an artichoke.

To CHOOSE, chooz, } 137: v. a. and n. To I choose, chôze, } take by way of preference;

CHOSKEN, chô'-zn, 114: } to take; not to refuse; to select;—new. To have the power of choice; to will; to determine.

Choo'-ser, 36: s. One who can choose; an elector.

CHOOSE, 29: s. and a. The power or act of choosing; election; option; the thing chosen; the best part;—a. Select; precious; careful.

Choice'-ness, s. Nicety; particular value.

Choice'-ly, 105: ad. Curiously; valuably; excellently.

Choice'-less, a. Without choice.

To CHOP=chôp, v. a. To cut with a quick blow; to mince or cut into small pieces. It is also used, but less distinctively, for To break into clefts.—See To Chap.

Chop, s. A piece chopped off, particularly of meat.

Chop'-per, s. A butcher's cleaver or axe.

Chop'-house, s. A dining-house.

To CHOP=chôp, v. a. and n. To bargain; in which sense the original spelling and pronunciation was to Chap; (see To Chap, to cheapen;) to change, to barter, to put one thing in place of another; and hence, in a neuter sense, to vers with quick motion.

CHOP, CHOPS, s. The mouth. It is so pronounced, but written chap, chops, which see.

To Chop, v. a. To devour eagerly.

CHOP, CHOPPY, (a Cleft from cold, and Full of clefts,) should be written and pronounced Chap, Chappy, which see under To Chap.

CHOPPING=chôp'-ping, a. Large or stout of birth or growth, as a chopping child.

CHOSE, CHOSEN.—See To Choose.

CHOUGH, chûff, 120, 162: s. A sea bird.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=TCH, seek hereafter under CH=SH, or CH=K.

To CHOUSE, chowce, 31, 152: v. a. To cheat [Obs. or vul.]

Chouse, s. A bubble; a tool; a trick; a sham.

CHUB=chûb, s. A river fish.

CHUB'-BY, 105: a. Plump, short, thick; as a chub.

Chub'-face'd, (—fâst, 143) a. Plump-faced.

To CHUCK=chûck, v. n. and a. To make the noise of a hen or partridge;—act. To call, as a hen her chickens. See also the next class.

Chuck, s. The noise of a hen; a word of endearment.

To CHUC'-KLE, 101: v. a. and n. To chuck, or call as a hen her chickens; to fondle, as a hen her chickens;—new. To laugh with short convulsive iterations.

Chuc'-kle-head'-ed, 120: a. In our old dictionaries, noisy, empty-headed; now, it rather means, large, stupid-headed.

To CHUCK=chûck, v. a. To touch or hit gently, to pitch to a short distance. See also above.

Chuck, s. A gentle hit; a throw.

Chuck'-far-thing, s. A vulgar game.

CHUET, chû'-ët, s. Chewet.—See under To Chew. [Obs.]

CHUFF=chûff, 155: s. A coarse, blunt clown.

Chuf'-ly, 105: a. Blunt; surly; angry.

Chuf'-fi-ly, ad. In a surly, angry manner.

Chuf'-fi-ness, s. Blunt surliness.

CHUM=chûm, s. A chamber-fellow; a mess-mate.

CHUMP=chûmp, s. A short heavy piece of wood.

CHURCH=church, 39, 63: s. A place consecrated by a bishop to public christian worship, and having administration of the sacraments and sepulture annexed; the collective body of christians, called also the catholic church; a particular body of christians having a common creed and one form of ecclesiastical government; the body of clergy or ecclesiastics in distinction from the laity.

To Church, v. a. To assist as priest in the act of returning thanks in church, particularly in the case of women after child-birth.

Church'-ing, s. Thanksgiving after child-birth.

Church'-dom, 18: s. The authority of the church.

Church'-ship, s. Institution of the church.

CHURCH'-ALE, s. A wake or feast commemorative of the dedication of a church.

CHURCH'-WARDEN, (—wârd-n, 140, 114) s. One of two or more officers chosen according to the custom of each parish to take care of the church, its property, and concerns, and on necessary occasions, to appear or act as the legal representatives of the parish.

CHURCH'-YARD, s. The burial ground of a church.

Among the other compounds of Church are Church-bench, (i. e. in the porch,) Church-burial, Church-founder, Church-goer, Church-land, (i. e. vested in an ecclesiastical body,) Church-man, (a clergyman,) Church-music, Church'-way, &c.

CHURL=churl, 39: s. A rustic; a surly man a miser.

Chur'-ly, a. Rude, boisterous. [Little used.]

Chur'-lish, a. Rude; sour; harsh; selfish.

Chur'-lish-ly, ad. In a churlish manner.

Chur'-lish-ness, s. Brutality; ruggedness.

CHURME, churm, 39, 101: s. A confused sound. [Obs.]

CHURN, churn, 39: s. A tub used in making butter.

To Churn, v. a. To agitate cream in a churn in order to make butter; to agitate as in churning.

Churn'-ing, s. The act of making butter.

Churn'-staff, s. The staff used in making butter.

CHURRWORM, chur'-wurm, 141: s. The fan cricket.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: ûin, 166: thên, 166.

CH=SH.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=SH, seek above under CH=TCH, or hereafter under CH=K.

CHABASITE, shăb'-d-cite, s. A mineral so called, a variety of zeolite also spelled Chabasite.

CHAD, shăd, s. A kind of fish.

CHAGREEN, shăd-grēn', s. A rough-grained leather.

CHAGRIN, shăd-grēn, 104: s. Ill-humour, vexation.

To Cha-grin', v. a. To excite ill-humour in; to vex.

Cha-grined', (-grēnd, 114) part. a. Mortified.

CHAISE, shăiz, 151: s. A light carriage, generally of two wheels.

CHAMADE, shă-măde', s. The beat of a drum denoting a surrender or parley.

CHAMMOIS, shăm-wă, 170: s. An animal of the goat kind whose skin makes leather commonly called Shammy.

CHAMPAGNE, shăm-păn', 157, 139: s. A kind of wine from Champagne in France.

CHAMPAIGN, shăm-păn', 157: s. and a. An open country; an abatement in the shield of one who killed an enemy in the field when he had asked for quarter.—a. Open, flat.

CHAM-PER-TY, s. Literally, a division of land; appropriately, a maintenance of any man in his suit on condition of having part of the thing when it is recovered.

Cham-per-tor, 38: s. One who moves suits and pursues at his proper costs to have part of the gains.

CHAMPIGNON, shăm-pin'-yon, 170: s. A kind of mushroom.

CHANCRE, shăng'-cur, 158, 159: s. A peculiar ulcer.

Chan-crous, 120: a. Having chancres.

CHANDELIER, shăn'-dê-lêr', 85, 103: s. A branch for candles.

CHANSON, shăwng'-sông, 170: s. A song. [Shaks.]

CHAPERON, shăp'-ēr-ông, 170: s. A hood or cap distinguishing a knight, or other person capable of acting as a protector.

To Chap-er-on, v. u. To wait on a lady in a public assembly.

CHIARADE, shă-răd', s. A species of riddle; as, my first is the action of fear; my second is used in war; my whole is the name of a poet; viz. Shake-spear.

CHARLATAN, shar'-lă-tăn, s. A quack.

Char-la-tan-ry, s. Quackery; deceit.

Char'-la-tan'-i-cal, a. Quackish.

CHASSELAS, shăs'-sê-lăs, s. A sort of grape.

CHATEAU, shă-tô', 170: s. A castle; a country seat.

CHAT-EL-LAN-Y, s. Castellan.—See Castle, &c.

CHATOYANT, shă-toy'-ânt, a. Having a changeable undulating lustre, like that of a cat's eye in the dark.

CHAUMONTELLI, shô-môn-têl', 170: s. A sort of pear.

CHEMISE, shêm-êze', 104, 151: s. A shift; in fortification, a wall that lines a bastion.

CHEVAL, shêv'-ăl', s. A horse; in the plural Chev-aux', (-ô-) often used in the compound Chev-aux-de frise, (freeze,) which means, literally, frizzled horses, and appropriately, a piece of timber traversed with spikes. A cheval-glass, is a swing glass of large size.

Compare Cavalry, &c., with the present class of words.

Chev'-a-lier', (-lêr, 103) s. A knight; a gallant man.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=SH, seek above under CH=TCH, or hereafter under CH=K.

CHIV'-AL-RY, s. Knighthood; the qualifications of ancient knighthood; the system of knighthood; in law, a tenure of land by knight's service.

Chiv'-al-rous, 120: } a. Relating to chivalry; gal-

Chi-val'-ric, 88: } lant; warlike; adventurous.

CHEVIVANCE, shêv'-ê-zănse, s. Enterprise; bargain.

CHEVRON, shêv'-rôn, 18: s. An heraldic representation of two rafters of a house meeting at the top. Chev'-ron-el, a small chevron.

Chev'-roned, a. Having a chevron, or formed as one.

CHICANE, shê-căn', s. Shift, turn, or trick in law proceedings; sophistry; wrangling.

Chi-ca'-ner-y, 129, 105: s. Trickery.

To Chi-cane, v. n. To prolong a contest by tricks.

Chi-ca'-ner, s. A petty sophister; a caviller.

CHIMINAGE, shîm'-ê-năge, s. A toll for passage through a forest. [Law.]

CHIVALRY.—See above under Cheval.

CH=K.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=K, seek above under CH=SH, or CH=TCH.

CHALCEDONY, căl-sêd'-ô-nêy, s. A precious stone of the agate kind, originally brought from Chalcedon.

CHALCOGRAPHY, căl-côg'-ră-fêy, 163: s. Engraving on brass.

Chal-cog'-ră-pher, s. An engraver on brass.

CHALDAIC, căl-dă'-ic, a. Pertaining to Chaldaea.

Chal-dee', a. and s. Chaldaic.—s. The Chaldaic language.

CHALYBEATE, că-lîb'-ê-ăt, 95, 99: a. Impregnated with iron or steel.

CHAM. CHAMBREL. CHAMLET.—See Khan, Gambrel, Camlet.

CHAMELEON, că-mê'-lê-ôn, s. A kind of lizard changeable in hue, and fabled to live on air.

CHAMOMILE, căm'-ô-mîle, s. A medicinal plant.

CHAOS, că-ôs, s. The confused matter out of which all things are supposed to have been made at the Creation; confusion; any thing whose parts are undistinguished.

Cha-ot'-ic, 2, 88: a. Resembling chaos; confused.

CHARACTER, căl'-ăc-ter, 92, 129: s. A mark; a stamp; a letter used in writing or printing; the manner of writing; stamp of mind; representation of personal qualities; the person with his assemblage of qualities; the assemblage simply.

Char'-ac-ter-y, s. Impression, distinction. [Obs.]

To Char'-ac-ter, v. a. To inscribe; to engrave

To Char'-ac-ter-ize', v. a. To describe by peculiar qualities; to exhibit the peculiar qualities of.

Char'-ac-ter-is'-tic, 85, 88: a. and s. Constituting the character:—s. That which constitutes or marks the character: The characteristic of a logarithm is the same as the exponent.

Char'-ac-ter-is'-ti-cal, a. Characteristic.

Char'-ac-ter-is'-ti-cal-ly, ad. Suitably as to character.

Char'-ac-ter-is'-ti-cal-ness, s. The state or quality of being peculiar to a character.

CHARTA, căr'-tă, s. A charter; literally a paper or parchment: compare Card and Carte.—See Chart under CH=TCH.

CHASM, căzm, 158: s. A breach unclosed; a cleft; an opening; a vacuity.

Chasm-ed, (căzmd, 114) a. Having clefts.

CHELONIAN, kê-lôn'-nê-ăn, a. Of the tortoise.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: găt'-wăy: chăp'-măn: pđ-pă': lăw: gôod: j'w, i. e. jaw, 55: a, e, i, &c. mule, 171.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=K, seek above under CH=SH, or CH=TCH.

CHELY, kě-lěy, 105: s. The claw of a shell-fish.
Che-li-form, a. Having the form of a claw.

Che-lif-er-ous, 87, 120: a. Furnished with claws.

CHEMISTRY, kím'-is-trěy, 15: s. The science which is cognizant of all changes in the constitution of matter whether effected by heat, by mixture, or other means; the art of decomposing and of combining substances by the application of various natural agents.

Chem'-ist, s. One versed in chemistry.

Che-mis'-ti-cal, a. Relating to chemistry.

Chem'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to chemistry; resulting Chem'-i-cal, } from the operation of natural agents.

Chem'-i-cal-ly, ad. In a chemical manner.

CHERSONESE, ker'-sò-něc, 152: s. A peninsula.

CHIARO-OSCURO, kě-ar'-ò-òs-còò'-rò, [Ital.] 170: s. Lights and shades in painting, or Chiaroscuro.

CHILIAD, kil'-ě-ăd, 90, 146: s. A thousand.

Chil'-a-he'-dron, s. A figure of a thousand sides.

Chil'-i-arch, (-ark, 161) s. Commander of a thousand. Chil'-i-ast, s. A millenarian.

CHILIFACTIVE.—See Chylifactive under Chyle.

CHIMERA, kě-mě-rě'-d, 43: s. A fabled monster of inconsistent parts; a vain, idle fancy.

Chim'-er-i-cal, a. Imaginary, fanciful, unreal.

Chim'-er-i-cal-ly, ad. Vainly, wildly.

CHIRAGRA, ki-ră'-gră, s. Gout in the hand.

CHI-ROG'-RA-PHY, (-fey, 163) s. Hand writing.

Chi-rog'-ra-pher, s. One who practises hand writing; an engrosser of lines in the Common-Place.

Chi'-ro-graph'-ic, 88: a. Pertaining to chirography.

CHI-ROL'-O-GY, 87: s. The art of discoursing with the hands, as practised by the deaf and dumb.

Chi'-rol'-o-gist, s. One who practises chirolgy.

CHI'-RO-MAN'-CY, 87: s. Divination by inspecting the lines of the hand.

Chi'-ro-man'-cer, s. A common fortune-teller.

CHI'-RO-PLAST, s. A hand-former, used by some learners of the piano forte.

CHI-RUK'-O-DIST, s. One who handles the feet; a surgeon for the feet; a corn-cutter.

CHI-RUK'-OR-ON, s. An operator by the hand: the original of Surgeon; and so, Chirurgical, and Chirurgery, are the originals of Surgical and Surgery.

CHLAMYS, clăm'-iss, s. A cloak, a tunic.

CHLOROUS, clòr'-rūs, 47: a. Literally, green; appropriately, pertaining to chlorine.

Chlo'-ris, s. The greenfinch.

Chlo'-rine, (-rîn, 105) s. An undecomposed gaseous body of greenish hue.

Chlo'-ric, a. Pertaining to chlorine.

Chlo'-rate, s. Chloric acid with a base.

Chlo'-ride, s. Chlorine with a combustible body.

Chlo'-rite, s. A mineral of grass green hue.

Chlo'-ro-PHYL, 163: s. The green matter in leaves.

Chlo'-ro-sis, s. The green sickness.

CHOIR.—See lower under Choral.

CHOLER, chî'-er, 36: s. The bile, the humor supposed to produce irascibility.—See also lower.

Chol'-er-a, s. A disease from overflow of bile.

Chol'-a-gogue, (-gòg, 107) s. A medicine for driving out bile.

Chol'-er-ic, s. Irascibility, anger, rage.

Chol'-er-ic, a. Angry, irascible.

Chol'-er-ic-ness, s. Irascibility.

CHOLIAMBIC, ch'-lě-ăm'-bíc, s. A lame iambic or seazon.

For words beginning with CH, not found under CH=K, seek above under CH=SH, or CH=TCH.

CHONDRODITE, chôn'-drò-dit, s. A mineral so called because it occurs in grains; it is also named Brucite.

CHORAL, chòr'-ăl, 47: a. Belonging to a chorus; singing or sung in a choir.

Cho'-ral-ly, ad. In the manner of a chorus.

Cho'-rist, s. A singer in a choir.

Cho'-is-ter, (chò'-is-ter, 92) s. A chorist.

CHOIR, (kwir, 132) s. An assembly or band of singers; the part of a church in which the choir-service is performed.

Cho'-rus, s. Originally, a company of singers; the person or persons supposed to behold the acts of a tragedy, who sing or speak their sentiments between the acts; verses of a song in which the company join the singer.

Cho'-ra'-gus, s. The leader of the chorus; (see also Coryphaeus); a maker or keeper of stage dresses.

CHORD, cord=cărd, 37: s. An intestine of which strings were originally made; the string of a musical instrument; an accord or harmony resulting from certain proportions in the vibrations of two or more strings or notes; in geometry, a right line drawn or supposed to be drawn from one extremity of an arc to another.

To Chord, v. a. To furnish with musical strings.

CHOR-DEI, s. A contraction of the frœnum.

CHOREUS, chò-rě'-ūs, (also Cho-ree') s. A poetic foot as in fr̄-cūs, otherwise called a trochee.

Cho'-ri-am'-bus, s. (also Cho'riamb,) A foot formed of a choree and an iamb.

Cho'-ri-am'-bic, a. Pertaining to a choriamb.

CHORION, chòr'-ě-ôn, 47: s. The exterior membrane which invests the fetus.

CHO'-ROID, s. Any membrane resembling the chorion.

CHOROGRAPHY, chò-ròg'-ră-fey, 87, 163 s. The description of places; it is less in its object than geography, and greater than topography.

Cho'-rog'-ra-pher, s. One skilled in choroigraphy.

CHO'-RE-PIS'-O-C-PAL, a. Pertaining to a local or suffragan bishop.

CHRISM, crizm, 158: s. Consecrated oil; an unguent used in sacred services.

Chris'-mul, a. Relating to chrism.

Chris'-ma-tor-y, s. A vessel for chrism.

Chris'-om, (criz'-ôm, 18) s. A child that dies within the month, so called from the anointed cloth formerly put over it; the cloth itself.

CHRIST, crist, s. The Anointed, the Messiah.

To Chris'-ten, (cris'-sn, 114, 156) v. a. To baptize; to initiate into the church of Christ; to name.

Chris'-ten-ing, s. The ceremony of baptism.

Chris'-ten-dom, 18: s. The regions inhabited by Christians; the whole body of Christians.

Christ'-ian, (cris' jân, colloq. crist'-sh'ân, 147) s. and a. A believer in the religion of Christ;—a. Believing or professing the religion of Christ.

Christ'-ian-ly, a. and ad. Becoming, or like a Christian.

Chris' ti-an'-i-ty, s. The religion of Christians.

Christ'-ian-ism, 158: s. The Christian doctrine.

To Christ'-ian-ize, v. a. To convert to Christianity.

CHRIST'-MAS, (cris'-măs, 143) s. The celebration of Christ's nativity; the season about December 25.

Chris'-mas-box, s. A Christmas present. See Box.

CHROMATIC, crò-măt'-ic, 88: a. Relating to colours.

Chro-mat'-ics, s. The science of colours.

Chro-ma-tog'-ra-phy, 163: s. A treatise on colours.

Chro-mat'-ic, a. and s. Relating to musical sounds

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mîs'-i-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh ūn, i. e. vision, 163: thîn, 166; thên, 166.

For words beginning with CH. not found under CH=K, seek above, under CH=SH, or CH=TCII.

whose differences may be said to be shades of each other, as a flat, a natural, and a sharp of the same note; hence, the chromatic scale is a scale of semitones.—s. That kind of music which proceeds by semitones.

CHROME, crōn'ic, s. An acidifiable metal derived from an ore called the red lead of Siberia, also called Chrom' mate, s. Chrom'ic acid with a base. [mium.]

CHRONIC, crōn'ic, 88: } a. Relating to CHRONICAL, crōn'ic-cāl, } time, or duration;

long in duration: periodical.

CHRON'-I-CLE, 101: s. A register of events in the order of time; a history.

To Chron'-i-cle, v. a. To record in a chronicle.

CHRON'-I-CLER, 36: s. A writer of chronicles.

CHRON'-O-GRAM, s. An inscription in which an epoch is expressed by letters contained in it, as the year of queen Elizabeth's death, MDCIII, in "My Day is Closed in Immortality."

CHRO-NOG'-RA-PHY, 87: s. Description of past time.

CHRO-NOL'-O-GY, 105: s. The science of computing dates, or the periods of time.

CHRO-nol'-o-g'ist, } s. One that studies or explains
CHRO-nol'-o-gist, } the science of computing past times.

CHRO-no-log'-i-cal, (-lōd'-gē-cāl) a. Relating to the doctrine of computing events.

CHRO-no-log'-i-cal-ly, ad. In a chronological manner.

CHRO-NOM'-E-TER, s. A term inclusive of all instruments that measure time, but used particularly of one contrived to act with great nicety. Chron'oscope has been used in the same sense.

CHRYSALEIS, crīs'-d-līs, s. Aurelia, or the form of certain insects, as the butterfly, &c. before they become winged, so named because the colour is generally golden. Compare Aurelia.

CHRY'-O-LITE, s. A dusky green mineral or precious stone, having in general a golden cast.

CHYLE=kīle, s. A milky juice formed in the stomach by digestion, and afterwards changed into blood.

Chy'-lous, 120: a. Consisting, or partaking of chyle.

Chy'-li-fac'-tive, 105: a. Having the power of Chy'-lo-po-er'-ic, } making chyle.

Chy'-li-fac'-tion, s. The process of making chyle.

Chy'-li-f'er-ous, 120: a. Transmitting chyle.

CHYME, (kīme) s. The modification of food in the preparation of chyle by the digestive organs. Among the older authors, the word is used in its general sense of juice, whence they derived Chymistry as then spelled.

CIBARIOUS, cē-bār'ic-ūs, 105, 41, 120: a. Relating to food.

CICATRICE, cick'-d-triss, s. A scar; a mark.

Cic'-a-tri'-give, (-civ, 105) a. Inducing a cicatrice.

To Cic'-a-trize, v. a. and n. To heal a wound by inducing a skin:—neu. To heal and form a skin.

Cic'-a-tri'-zant, s. A cicatrific application.

Cic'-a-tri'-za'-tion, 89: s. The act or state of healing.

CICELY, ciss'-t-lēy, s. A sort of herb.

CICERONIAN, cis'-sē-rō'n-nē-ān, 90: a. Resembling Cicero in style and action; eloquent, flowing.

Ci-cē-ro'-nē, (chē-chāv-rō'-nāy, [Ital.] 170) s. A guide who explains curiosities.

CICISBEO, chē-chis-bā'-ō, [Ital.] 170: s. A dangle about females; the male friend of a married woman.

To CICURATE=cick'-h-rātē, v. a. To tame.

Cic'-u-ra'-tion, 89: s. A reduction from wildness.

CICUTA, cē-kū'-tē, s. Water hemlock.

CID=cid, s. A chief; a commander. [Span.]

CIDER=cī'-der, s. Fermented apple juice.

Cī'-der-kin, s. An inferior kind of cider.

CIERGE, cē-erge, 103: s. A candle or wax taper.

CIGAR, cē-gar, s. A roll of tobacco for smoking.

CILIARY, cīl'-yā-rēy, a. Belonging to the eyelids.

CILICIOUS, cē-līsh'-ūs, 90: a. Made of hair.

CIMBRIC=cīm'-bric, a. and s. Pertaining to the Cimbrī.—s. The language of the Cimbrī.

CIMELIARCH, cī-mē'-lē-ark, 161: s. A church warden.

CIMETER.—See Scimitar.

CIMMERIAN, cīm-mēr'-ā-ān, 90, 43: a. Extremely dark: the Cimberii inhabited a valley in Italy which was said to be never visited by the sun.

CIMOLITE=cīm'-ō-līte, s. A kind of white clay.

CINCTURE, cīng'-tūre, collq. cīng'-ch'oor, 147: s. A band worn round the head or body; an enclosure; the ring at the top and bottom of the shaft of a column.

CIN'-GLE, s. A girth for a horse.

CINDER=cīn'-der, 36: s. That which has been ignited and quenched without being reduced to ashes; a hot coal that has ceased to flame.

Cin'-drous, 120: a. Like a cinder.

Cin'-er-al'-TION, 85, 89: s. A reduction to ashes.

Cin'-er-ī'-ious, (-ish'-ūs, 90) a. Like ashes.

Cin'-er-u-lent, (cē-nēr'-oo-lēnt, 109) a. Full of ashes.

Ci-ne'-re-ous, 90: a. Having the colour of ashes.

CINNABAR=cīn'-nē-bar, s. Vermilion, which is an ore of quicksilver; or a composition of mercury and sulphur; or gum of an Indian tree, otherwise called dragon's blood; or is derived from a soft red stone, and otherwise called minium.

CINNAMON=cīn'-nē-mōn, 18: s. The fragrant bark of a tree in the island of Ceylon.

CINQUE, cīngk, 158, 189: s. A five on dice, &c.

Cinque'-foil, 30: s. A kind of five-leaved clover.

Cinque'-pace, s. A dance named from the steps in it.

Cinque'-ports, (-pōrts, 130) s. pl. Originally, Dover, Sandwich, Hastings, Romney, and Hythe; to these Winchester and Rye have been added.

CION.—See Scion.

CIPHER, cī'-fer, 163: s. Generally, an arithmetical figure; particularly 0, which, placed at the right hand of another figure in whole numbers, increases it tenfold, and at the left in decimals decreases it in the same proportion; an intexture of letters, as the initials of a name; a secret manner of writing, or the key to it; a character in general.

To Cī'-pher, v. n. and a. To practise arithmetic:—act. To write in occult characters.

Cī'-pher-ing, s. Arithmetic.

CIPPUS=cīp'-pus, s. A low monumental column

CIRCEAN, cer-cē'-ān, 81: a. Magical; venomous from the enchantress Cīr'-ce.

CIRCENSIAN.—See in the next class, under Circus; and CIRCINAL also, in the next class, after Circution.

CIRCLE, cer'-kl, 35, 101: s. A curve continued till it ends where it began, having all its parts equidistant from a common centre; the space included in a circular line; a round body; an orb; compass; a surrounding company; a series ending as it begins; a sophism in which two or more unproved propositions are used to prove each other; circumlocution.

To Cīr'-cle, v. a. To move round anything; to enclose; to surround; To circle in, is to confine:—neu. To move circularly.

Cīr'-clrd, 114: a. Round; encircled.

Cīr'-clet, s. A little circle.

Cīr'-cuit.—See lower after Circulation.

Cīr'-cu-lar, a. and s. Round; successive; ending

To Cīr'-cu-late, v. n. and a. To move round; to circulate.

To Cīr'-cu-late, v. n. and a. To move round; to circulate.

To Cīr'-cu-late, v. n. and a. To move round; to circulate.

To Cīr'-cu-late, v. n. and a. To move round; to circulate.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Exels: gātē-wāy: chāp-mān: pō-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'wā, i.e. free 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

in itself Circular lines are the lines of sines, tangents, and secants on the plane scale and sector: Circular sailing is that performed on the arch of a great circle; Circular letter or a Circular, is a letter of which a copy is sent to several persons on some common business.

Cir'-cu-lar-y, 129, 105: a. Ending in itself.

Cir'-cu-lar-ly, ad. In the manner of circles.

Cir'-cu-lar'-i-ty, s. The state of being circular.

To Cir'-cu-late, v. n. and a. To move in a circle; to be dispersed:—act. To travel round; to put about.

Cir'-cu-la'-tor-y, 85, 129, 105: a. Circular:—s. A chemical vessel.

Cir'-cu-la'-tion, 85, 89: s. Motion in a circle; a series in which the same order always occurs; a reciprocal interchange: the act of going and returning, as the blood in the arteries and veins; and coin in paying and receiving.

Cir'-cuit, (cer'-kīt, 121) s. The act of moving round; the space enclosed in a circle; space or extent measured by travelling round; the journey of a judge in holding assizes; the tract of country visited by a judge.

To Cir'-cuit, v. n. and a. To go round.

Cir'-cuit-er', s. One that goes a circuit. [Pope.]

Cir'-cu'-i-tous, (cer'-kū'-tūs, 81, 84) a. Round about.

Cir'-cu'-i-tous-ly, ad. In a circuitous manner.

Cir'-cu-i'-ty, s. An indirect or orbicular course.

Cir'-cu-i'-tion, 85, 89: s. The act of going round.

Cir'-ci-nal, (cer'-cē-nāl) a. Formed as if by going round and round; rolled in spirally downwards.

To Cir'-ci-nate, v. a. To make a circle; to turn round; to roll inward from the point to the base. [Bot.]

Cir'-ci-na'-tion, s. An orbicular motion.

Cir-cum-, (cer'-kūm) a Latin prefix corresponding to the Greek ΠΕΡΙ or ΑΜΦΙ.

Cir'-cum-am"-bi-ent, 105: a. Surrounding.

Cir'-cum-am"-bi-en-cy, s. The act of encompassing.

Cir'-cum-am"-bu-late, v. n. To walk round about.

To Cir'-cum-cise, (-cīz, 137) v. a. To cut the foreskin, according to the law given to the Jews.

Cir'-cum-ci'-ser, s. One who circumcises.

Cir'-cum-ci'-sion, (-cīzh'-ūn, 90) s. The rite of cutting off the foreskin.

Cir'-cum-cur-sa'-tion, s. The act of running about.

To Cir'-cum-duct, v. a. To contravene; to nullify.

Cir'-cum-duc'-tion, s. Nullification; a leading about.

Cir'-cum-ver-ence, 87: s. The periphery or external part of an orbicular body; a circle: the space included.

Cir'-cum-fer-en'-tial, (-shāl, 147) a. Circular.

Cir'-cum-fer-en'-tor, 38: s. A circular instrument for measuring angles.

To Cir'-cum-flact, v. a. To utter with a turn of voice which includes two accents; to mark with a circumflex.

Cir'-cum-fer, (-fēcks, 154) s. A mark thus (^).

Cir'-cum-ful'-ent, (-fī'oo-ent, 109) a. Flowing round.

Cir'-cum-flu-ence, s. An inclosing with waters.

Cir'-cum-flu-ous, 120: a. Enveloping with waters.

Cir'-cum-vo-ra'-ne-ous, a. Going from door to door.

To Cir'-cum-fuse, (-fūz, 137) v. a. To pour round.

Cir'-cum-fu'-sile, (-zīl, 105) a. That may be poured round.

Cir'-cum-fu'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. A pouring around.

Cir'-cum-ge-sa'-tion, 85, 89: s. A carrying about.

Cir'-cum-gy-rate, (-gē-rāt, 105) v. a. To wheel about.

Cir'-cum-gy-ra'-tion, s. A rolling or turning about.

Cir'-cum-17'-ion, (-īsh'-ūn) s. The act of going round.

Cir'-cum-ja'-cent, a. Lying round.

Cir'-cum-11-ga'-tion, s. A binding round; a band.

Cir'-cum-10-cu'-tion, s. A circuit or compass of words; periphrasis; the use of indirect expressions.

Cir'-cum-loc'-u-tor-y, a. Periphrastical.

Cir'-cum-mured, (-mūrd, 114) a. Walled round.

To Cir'-cum-nav'-i-gate, v. a. To sail round.

Cir'-cum-nav'-i-ga-ble, a. That may be sailed round.

Cir'-cum-nav'-i-ga'-tor, s. One that sails round.

Cir'-cum-nav'-i-ga'-tion, s. A sailing round.

Cir'-cum-pli-ca'-tion, s. A wrapping around.

Cir'-cum-po-lar, 34: a. Round the pole.

Cir'-cum-po-si'-tion, (-zīsh'-ūn, 151, 89) s. The act of placing circularly; the state of being so placed.

Cir'-cum-ra'-tion, (-rā'-zhūn, 90) s. A parring round.

Cir'-cum-ro-ta'-tion, 85, 89: s. A rolling round.

Cir'-cum-ro'-ta-tor-y, a. Wheeling round.

To Cir'-cum-scribe, 85: v. a. To write around; to bound, to limit; to enclose.

Cir'-cum-scrip'-tive, a. Enclosing the superficies.

Cir'-cum-scrip'-tion, 89: s. Determination of particular form; limitation; a circular inscription.

Cir'-cum-spect, a. Cautious; attentive; discreet.

Cir'-cum-spect-ly, 105: ad. Vigilantly; cautiously.

Cir'-cum-spect'-ness, s. Vigilance; caution.

Cir'-cum-spec'-tive, 105: a. Attentive; cautious.

Cir'-cum-spec'-tion, s. Watchfulness; caution.

Cir'-cum-stance, s. Adjunct of a fact; accident; incident; event; condition; state of affairs.

To Cir'-cum-stance, v. a. To place relatively.

Cir'-cum-stant, a. Surrounding. [Little used.]

Cir'-cum-stant'-ial, (-shāl, 147) a. and s. Accidental; not essential; detailed; minute:—s. A thing incidental to the main subject, but not essential.

Cir'-cum-stant'-ial-ly, ad. Incidentally; minutely.

Cir'-cum-stant'-i-al'-i-ty, (-shē-āl'-ē-tēy, 147, 81) s. The state of a thing as modified by circumstances.

To Cir'-cum-stant'-i-ate, v. a. To describe exactly.

Cir'-cum-ter-ra'-ne-ous, 90: a. Around the earth.

To Cir'-cum-val'-late, v. a. To fortify around.

Cir'-cum-val-la'-tion, s. The art of casting up fortifications around a place; the fortification itself.

Cir'-cum-vec'-tion, 89: s. A carrying round.

To Cir'-cum-vent, 85: v. a. To deceive; to cheat.

Cir'-cum-ven'-tive, 105: a. Overreaching.

Cir'-cum-ven'-tion, 85, 89: s. Fraud; prevention.

To Cir'-cum-vest, v. a. To cover round with a garment.

Cir'-cum-vo-la'-tion, s. A flying round.

To Cir'-cum-volve, 85: v. a. and n. To roll round.

Cir'-cum-vo-lu'-tion, 109: s. A turning round.

Cir'-cus, (cer'-kūs,) } s. An open space or area for sports, with seats around for the spectators.

Cir'-cen'-sian, (-cēn'-shān, 147) a. Pertaining to the circus.

CIRROUS, cir'-rūs, 129, 120: a. Terminating in a curl or tendril; as a cirrous leaf.

Cir'-rif'-er-ous, a. Producing tendrils.

CISALPINE, cīz-āl'-pīn, 151, 105: a. On the Roman side of the Alps.

CIST.—See Cyst.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: shēn, 166: shēn, 166.

CISTERCIAN, cis-ter'-shé-án, 90: s. A monk of Cîteaux in France, a reformed Benedictine.
CISTERN=cis'-tern, s. A receptacle of water; a reservoir; an enclosed fountain.
CISTUS=cis'-tús, s. The rock rose.
CIT, CITADEL, CITIZEN.—See under City.
To CITE=cite, v. a. To summon to answer in a court; to call on another authoritatively; to quote.
Cit'-tal, s. Impeachment; summons; citation.
Cit'-ter, 36: s. One who cites in a court; a quoter.
Cit'-ta-tor-y, a. Having power or form of citation.
Ci-ta'-tion, 89: s. The calling of a person before an ecclesiastical judge; a quotation; an enumeration.
CITHERN=cith'-ern, s. A kind of harp or guitar.
Cit'h'-ar-is'-tic, 88: a. Pertaining to the harp.
CITRON=cit'-rôn, 18: s. A kind of lemon.
Cit'-rine, 114: a. Lemon-coloured; like a citron.
Cit'-rine, s. A species of yellow crystal.
Cit'-ri-na'-tion, s. The turning to a yellow colour.
Cit'-ric, a. Belonging to lemons or limes.
Cit'-rate, s. A neutral salt formed by a union of the citric acid with a base. Cit'rus, generic name of lemon fruit.
Cit'-rul, s. The pumpkin, so named from being yellow.
Cit'-ron-wa'-ter, (-wáw'-ter, 140) s. A distilled liquor.
CITY, cit'-ty, s. and a. Primarily, a union of men for the sake of society and mutual help; properly, a large town; a town corporate that has a bishop; the inhabitants of a city:—a. Pertaining to, or like a city or citizens.
Cit'-i-cism, 158: s. The manners of a citizen. [B. Jonson.]
Cit'-A-DEL, s. A fortress in or near the city.
Cit'-i-ZEN, (cit'-é-zn, 114) s. A freeman of a city; a townsman not a gentleman: an inhabitant of a city.
Cit. s. A citizen, used in contempt.
Cit'-i-zen-ship, s. The freedom of the city.
Civ'-il, a. Literally, pertaining to a city or citizens; extensively, civil as distinguished from military.
Civ'-il, s. Municipal; relating to the community; political as opposed to criminal; intestine as opposed to foreign; lay as opposed to ecclesiastical; municipal, commercial, legislative, &c. as opposed to military; in common language, complaisant, well-bred. Civil law, in a general sense, is the law of a state or country, but, appropriately, the institutes of the Roman law as administered in the ecclesiastical courts; Civil suit, or action, is a suit between citizen and citizen, as opposed to a criminal process, which is between the king or state and a citizen; Civil list is that of the royal household, officers of state, judges, &c. who are paid out of the king's revenue in his own distinct capacity; Civil war is intestine war; Civil year is the year of 365 or 366 days, as distinguished from the exact solar year.
Civ-il'-ian, (cé-vil'-yán, 146) s. A professor of the old Roman law, and of general equity; a university student; one in a civil not military capacity.
Civ-il-ly, ad. In a manner relating to government; politely, complaisantly, without rudeness.
To Civ'-il-ize, v. a. To reclaim from savageness.
Civ'-il-i-zer, s. He that reclaims from barbarity.
Civ'-il-i-za'-tion, 85, 89: s. A law which renders a criminal process civil; the act of civilizing; the state of being civilized.
Ci-vil'-i-ty, 105: s. Freedom from barbarity; politeness; rule of decency; partaking of the nature of a civilized state.
Civ'-ism, 158: s. Love of country, patriotism.
CIVET=civ'-ét, 14: s. Perfume from the civet cat.
To CLACK=clack, v. a. To make a sudden sharp noise; to let the tongue run. To clack wool is to cut off the sheep's mark, and defraud the customs.
Clack, s. A sharp abrupt sound continually repeated; the instrument that makes the noise; the noise of a talkative tongue. The clack or clacker of a mill is a bell which gives notice that the hopper is empty; or the instrument which strikes the hopper and promotes the running of the corn. A Clack-dish is a wooden bowl with a cover which beggars formerly used to clack.

CLAD.—See To Clothe.

To CLAIM=clām, v. a. Originally, to call loudly; to demand of right; to require authoritatively.

Claim, s. Originally, a loud call; a demand as of right; a title to a privilege or possession in the hands of another; the thing claimed.

Claim'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be claimed.

Claim'-ant, s. One who claims, or has a right to claim.

Claim'-er, s. One that claims.

CLAM'-OUR, (clām'-or, 120, 38) s. Outcry; noise.

To Clam'-our, v. a. To make outcries; to vociferate.

Clam'-o-rous, 120: a. Vociferous; noisy.

Clam'-o-rous-ly, ad. Vociferously.

CLAM'-O-ROUS-NESS, s. Vociferation; a noisy call.

To Clam, v. n. A term in ringing; to unite sounds in the psal.

CLAM'-MANT, a. Crying out; beseeching. [Thomson.]

To CLAM=clām, v. a. and n. To clog with any glutinous matter:—acc. To be moist.

Clam'-my, 105: a. Viscous, glutinous.

Clam'-mi-ness, s. Viscosity; stickiness.

To CLAMBER=clām'-ber, v. n. To climb difficultly.

CLAMOUR, &c.—See under To Clam.

CLAMP=clāmp, s. A piece of wood or iron used to strengthen something; a quantity of bricks.

To Clamp, v. a. To strengthen by means of a clamp.

CLAN=clān, s. A family; a race; a tribe.

Clan'-nish, a. Disposed to adhere closely.

Clan'-ship, s. Association of persons or families.

CLANDESTINE, clān-dēs'-tīn, 105: a. Hidden.

Clan-des'-tine-ly, ad. Secretly; privately.

Clan-des'-tine-ness, s. Secrecy; state of concealment.

CLAN'-CU-LAR, (clāng'-cū-lar, 158, 34) a. Clandestine.

CLANG=clāng, 72: s. A loud resonant noise.

To Clang, v. n. and a. To sound resonantly.

Clang'-ous, 120: a. Making a clang.

CLANG'-OR, s. Resonance of harsh sounds; a clang.

Clang-or-ous, 129, 120: a. Producing clangor.

CLANK, 158: s. A metallic sound vibrating imperfectly.

To Clank, v. a. To strike so as to make a clank.

To CLAP=clāp, v. a. and n. To strike together with quick motion, so as to make a noise; to applaud with the hands; to thrust together suddenly; to place suddenly in, into, under, over, &c.; to give disease or infect suddenly; in a venereal encounter: To clap up is to complete hastily; also, to imprison:—acc. To move nimbly with a noise; to begin briskly; to strike the hands in applause.

Clap, s. A noise made by sudden collision; a sudden act or motion; an explosion; an act of applause; a venereal infection; (see the verb) the word does not need a separate head for this sense, though at first etymologically distinct; a sudden misfortune.

Clap'-per, s. He or that which claps; the tongue of a bell; the clack of a mill.

To CLAP'-PER-CLAW, v. a. To lash with the tongue; to abuse.

CLARENCEUX, CLARENCEUX, clār'-ēnce-yō', 170: s. The second king at arms, appointed by Edward IV. on the death of the duke of Clarence.

CLARITY, clār'-ē-tēty, 129, 105: s. Clearness, splendor.

Clar'-i-tude, s. Brightness, splendor. [Little used.]

CLARK'-OB-SCURK', s. Light and shade in painting.

CLARK'-ET, s. Bourdeaux wine of a clear pale red.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gā'te'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā'-pā'; lā'a; gōd; i'jō; i. e. jew 55; wā'y, &c. note, 171.

- To CLAR'-IFY, (-fī), v. a. and n. To purify or clear; to brighten or illuminate.—new. To clear up; to grow bright.
- Clar'-i-fi-ca'-tion, s. The act or state of clearing.
- CLAR'-Y-ON, (clār'-ē-ōn, 129, 105, 18) s. A kind of trumpet of shrill clear tone.
- CLAR'-i-o-net', s. A shriller kind of hautboy.
- CLAR'-Y-CHORD, 161: s. An ancient sort of spinet.
- CLARY, clār'-ēy, 41: s. A herb of the sage genus.
- To CLASH=clāsh, v. n. and a. To make a noise by mutual collision; to act with opposite power or contrary direction:—act. To strike one thing against another so as to produce a noise.
- Clash, s. Noisy collision; opposition.
- CLASP=clāsp, 11: s. A hook for holding any thing close; an embrace.
- To Clasp, v. a. To shut with a clasp; to catch hold by twining; to enclose between the hands; to embrace.
- Clas'-per, s. That which clasps; a tendril.
- Clas'-s-knife, (-nife, 157) s. A knife that shuts in.
- CLASS=clāss, 11: s. A rank or order either of things or persons; a set of students of the same form or degree.
- To Class, v. a. To range methodically.
- Clas'-sis, [Lat.] s. Class. [Clarendon, Milton.]
- Clas'-si-cal, Clas'-sic, a. Of the first rank.—See lower.
- Clas'-si-cal-ly, ad. In classes.—See also lower.
- To Clas'-si-fy, (-fī), v. a. To arrange in classes.
- Clas'-si-fi-ca'-tion, s. A ranging into classes.
- CLAS'-SI-CAL, a. Greek or Roman as regards the language, the merit, or taste of a work; because what is Greek or Roman is, generally, in these respects, of the first order or rank.
- Clas'-sic, a. and s. Greek or Roman:—s. A Greek or Roman author or work. As a substantive, it must be qualified to have a different meaning; s. g. a modern classic; a French classic, &c.
- Clas'-si-cal-ly, ad. According to Greek or Roman taste.
- To CLATTER=clāt'-ter, v. n. and a. To make a noise by knocking two or more sonorous bodies frequently together; to utter a noise by being struck together; to talk fast and idly:—act. To strike so as to produce a rattling.
- Clat'-ter, s. A rattling noise; a confused noise.
- Clat'-ter-er, 129: s. One that clatters; a babbler.
- Clat'-ter-ing, s. A clatter; a confusion of sounds.
- CLAUDENT=clāw'-dēnt, a. Shutting; enclosing.
- Clau'-sure, (-zh'oor) s. Confinement.
- CLAU'-STRAL, 12: a. Relating to a cloister.
- CLAUSE, (clāwz, 151) s. Literally, an inclosure; hence, that which is included; as the words in a sentence which come between two commas or other stops; an article or stipulation under one item or division.
- Clau'-su-lar, a. Consisting of, or having clauses.
- CLAVATED=clāv'-vā-tēd, a. Having the form of a club; set with knobs, as with little clubs.
- Clav'-el-la'-ted, 92: a. An epithet applied to the ashes called potash, from the billets or little clubs used in making it.
- CLAV'-Y-GER, 92: s. A club bearer.—See also under Claviary.
- CLAVE.—See To Cleave, v. n.
- CLAVIARY, clāv'-yār'-ēy, 95: s. An index of keys, or a scale of lines and spaces in music.
- Clav'-i-chord, 92, 105, 161: s. An instrument with keys that strike the chords, the same as Clavichord.
- CLAV'-I-CLE, s. A small bone of which there are two, fastening the shoulder-bone and breast-bone; being as it were keys at the basis of the neck.
- CLAV'-Y-GER, 92: s. A key bearer.—See also higher
- CLAW=clāw, s. The sharp hooked nail of a beast or bird; the whole foot with the hooked nails: the holders of a shell fish: an incision or scratch made with a claw.
- To Claw, v. a. To tear with claws; to pull as with the nails; to tear or scratch; to flatter; (a cant use of the word now obsolete.)
- Clawed, (clāwd, 114) a. Furnished with claws; scratched.
- Claw'-back, s. A flatterer. [Obs.]
- CLAY=clāy, s. The general name of earths which are firmly coherent, weighty, compact, and hard when dry, stiff, viscid, and ductile when moist, not readily diffusible in water, and when mixed, not easily subsiding in it; in poetry and scripture, earth in general; figuratively, that which is frail.
- To Clay, v. a. To cover with clay.
- Clay'-ey, a. Consisting of clay; like clay.
- ☞ Among the compounds are Clay'-cold, Clay'-pit, Clay'-mart, Clay'-slate, Clay'-stone, &c. The last two are mineralogical substances.
- CLAYES, clāyz=clāz, 151: s. pl. Wattles or hurdles used in fortification to cover lodgements.
- CLAYMORE=clā'-more, 100: s. A large sword.
- CLEAN=clēnz, 103: a. and ad. Free from dirt or filth; free from moral impurity, or from loathsome disease; elegant; neat; dexterous; not bungling; entire:—ad. Quite; perfectly; without miscarriage.
- Clean'-ly, ad. Elegantly; neatly; dexterously.
- Clean'-ness, s. Neatness; purity; innocence.
- To Clean, v. a. To free from dirt.
- CLEAN'-LY, (clēn'-lēy, 120, 105) a. Free from dirtiness; neat; pure; nice; clever.
- Clean'-li-ly, ad. In a cleanly manner.
- Clean'-li-ness, s. Freedom from dirt; neatness.
- To Cleanse, (clēnz, 120, 137) v. a. To free from filth; to purify from guilt; to free from noxious humors by purgation; to scour; to rid of offensive things.
- Clean'-ser, (-zer), s. One that cleanses; a detergent.
- Clean'-sing, s. A purification.
- Clean'-si-ble, a. Capable of being cleansed.
- CLEAR=clēre, 103, 43: a. and ad. Bright; serene; pure; perspicuous; indisputable; manifest; distinct; innocent; free:—ad. Plainly; clean; quite. It is also used as a substantive by builders to signify the space within a house from wall to wall.
- To Clear, v. a. and n. To make bright; to free from obscurity; to vindicate; to cleanse; to remove any encumbrance; to free from any thing offensive; to clarify; to gain without deduction: To clear a ship is to satisfy all demands at the custom-house:—new. To grow bright; to obtain transparency.
- Clear'-age, s. The removing of any thing.
- Clear'-ance, s. The act of clearing; a certificate that a ship has been cleared at the custom-house.
- Clear'-er, 36: s. Brightener; purifier.
- Clear'-ing, s. Justification; defence.
- Clear'-ly, ad. Brightly; plainly; evidently.
- Clear'-ness, s. Transparency; splendor; lustre, distinctness; sincerity; freedom from imputation.
- CLEAR'-SIGHT-ED, (-si-tēd, 162) a. Discerning.
- Clear'-sight-ed-ness, s. Discernment.
- To CLEAR'-STARCH, v. a. To starch and then spread out in order to clear.
- Clear'-star-cher, s. One who clearstarches.
- CLEAT=clēat, s. A piece of wood to fasten ropes on.
- To CLEAVE=clēvz, } v. n. To adhere; to hold CLAVE=clāvz, } to; to unite aptly.
- ☞ The irregular preterit here given is nearly obsolete

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-un, i. e. vision, 165: zhīn-166: thēn, 166.

To CLEAVE=clēve, } v. a. and n. To di-
CLOVE or CLEFT, } vide with violence; to CLEFT or CLOVE, 114: } split; to divide:—neu.
 To suffer division.
Clave, another form of the preterit, is now obsolete.
Clea=vage, 99: s. The act or manner of splitting.
Clea-ver, s. One who cleaves; a butcher's axe.
CLEFT, s. A space from the separation of parts.
To CLEFT-GRAFT, v. a. To ingraft by cleaving the stock of a tree, and inserting the scion.
CLEDGE=clēdge, s. The upper stratum of fuller's earth.
CLEF, clif, 113: s. A mark for the key in music.
CLEG=clēg, s. The horse-fly.
To CLEM=clēm, v. a. To starve. [B. Jonson.]
CLEMENT=clēm'-ēnt, a. Mild, gentle, merciful.
Clem'-ent-ly, 105: ad. In a merciful manner.
Clem'-en-cy, s. Mercy, mildness, leniency.
CLEMENTINE, clem-ēn'-tīn, a. Relating to St.
 Clement, or the constitutions of Clement V.
To CLENCH.—See To CLINCH.
To CLEPE=clēpe, v. a. To call, or name. [Obs.]
CLEPSYDRA=clēps'-ē-drā, s. Literally, a waterhider or stealer; it was a kind of water clock among the ancients; a chemical vessel.
Cleps-am'-mē-a, s. A sand glass for measuring time.
CLERK, clark, 130: s. A clergyman.—See also below.
Cler'-gy, (cler'-gē, 35, 105) s. The body of men set apart by ordination for the offices of religion.
Cler'-gi-cal, a. Clerical. [Out of use.]
Cler'-gy-a-ble, a. Entitled to, or admitting benefit of clergy: which see under Benefit.
Cler'-gy-man, s. A man in holy orders.
Cler'-ic, (clēr'-ic, 88) } 129: a. Relating to the Cler'-i-cal, (clēr'-ē-cāl) } clergy.
CLERK, (clark, 130) s. A scholar; a man that can read; a layman who leads the responses in the church service; a writer employed in a public or private office under a superior; one employed under another.
Clerk'-ly, a. and ad. Scholarlike:—Learnedly.
Clerk'-ship, s. Scholarship: the office of a clerk.
Clerk'-ale, s. The feast of the parish-clerk.
CLEROMANCY, clēr'-ō-mān'-cēy, 87, 92: s.
 Divination by casting lots.
CLERON'-O-MY, 87: s. That which is given as his lot to any one, his heritage or patrimony.
CLEVER=clēv'-er, 36: a. Dexterous, ingenious.
 In America, it also signifies good-natured.
Clev'-er-ly, ad. Dexterously.
Clev'-er-ness, s. Dexterity, skill, ingenuity.
CLEW, cl'w, 109: s. A ball of thread; the thread that forms the ball; the thread used to guide one in a labyrinth; any thing that guides or directs one in an intricate case.
To Clew, v. a. To direct. [Unusual.]
CLEW, cl'w, 109: s. The corner of a sail.
To Clew, v. a. To truss up to the yard by clew-garnets or clew-lines, in order to furling.
To CLICK=click, v. n. To make a succession of small sharp sounds.
Click, s. A small sharp sound; that which makes a clicking noise, as the latch of a door; a piece of iron falling into a notched wheel; &c.
Click'-er, s. A horse that clicks with his feet; a knocker; the servant of a salesman who stands at the door inviting customers.
CLIENT=clī'-ēnt, s. Originally, one who sought and lived under the protection of a patron or man of rank; at present, one who has the assistance or advocacy of a lawyer.
Clī-en'-tal, 84: a. Dependent. [Burke.]

Clī'-en-ter, a. Furnished with clients.
Clī'-en-tele, s. Clientship. [Obs.]
Clī'-ent-ship, s. The condition of a client.
CLIFF=clif, 155: s. A steep rock.
Clif'-fy, 103: a. Having cliffs; craggy.
CLIFF, a term in music.—See Clef.
CLIFT=clift, s. A cleft; a cliff.
Clift'-ed, a. Cleft or broken.
Clift'-ty, a. Clifty.
CLIMACTER, &c.—See under Climax.
CLIMATE=clī'-māte, s. Geographically, a portion being a belt of the globe parallel to the equator, the longest day at one side of which is half an hour shorter than at the other side; or, within the polar circles, a portion comprehended between two circles, at one of which the longest day is a month shorter than at the other; popularly, a tract of land, a region, or country, differing from another in the temperature of the air;
 also the temperature itself which is thus different.
To Clī'-mate, v. n. To reside in some region.
 [Shaks.]
Clī'-ma-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Climate. [Little used.]
Clī'-mat'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to a climate; limited
Clī'-mat'-i-cal, } by a climate.
CLIME, s. Climate. [Poetic, but not exclusively so.]
CLIMAX, clī'-mācks, 154: s. Gradation; ascent;
 a rhetorical gradation either in the thought, the expression, or both.
CLIMAC'-TER, 36: s. A step or gradation in the years of life, supposed to determine a bodily change;
 the space of years concluded by the critical year.
Clim'-ac-ter'-ic, 88: a. and s. Pertaining to the critical years in life:—s. The same as Climacter, and now more frequently used. The grand climacteric is the number 7 multiplied into 3 times 3, or the 634 year.
Clim'-ac-ter'-i-cal, a. Climacteric.
To CLIMB, clime, 115, 156: v. n. and a. To ascend with labour:—act. To ascend, to mount.
Climb was once an irregular verb, (pret. I clomb, part.
 clomb), but is now regular.
Climb'-a-ble, (clīm'-ā-blē) a. Ascendable.
Climb'-er, (clīm'-er=clī'-mer) s. He who climbs;
 a plant that creeps and rises on some support.
CLIME.—See under Climate.
To CLINCH=clīntch, v. i. and n. To grasp in the hand; to contract or double the fingers; to rivet, or bend the point of a nail on the other side; to confirm, to fix; acc. To clinch an argument:—acc. To hold fast upon.
Clinch, s. That which holds both ways; hence, a word with double meaning, a pun, an ambiguity; a part of a cable; a kind of knot.
Clinch'-er, s. A cramp or piece of iron bent down to fasten any thing; that which makes fast, fixes or settles; he who makes a smart reply.
To CLING=clūg, } v. n. To hang upon by CLUNG=clūg, } twining round; to adhere. In CLUNG=clūg, } Shakspear it may be found as an active verb, signifying to wither.—See To CLING.
Cling'-y, (cū, 105) 72: a. Apt to cling; adhesive.
CLINICAL, clīn'-ē-cāl, a. Pertaining to a bed;
 Clinical lectures are those delivered at patients' bed-sides; a clinical convert is a death-bed convert.
Clīn'-ic, 83: a. and s. Clinical; bed-ridden:—s.
 A patient that keeps his bed; anciently, one who was baptized on his death-bed.
Clīn'-i-cal-ly, ad. By the bed-side. Clīnoid, see Supp.
To CLINK, clīngk, 158: v. a. and n. To strike so as to make a small sharp noise, the same which is expressed by Click, with the addition of a slight ringing or vibration:—acc. To emit a small sharp noise.
Clīnk, s. A sharp, successive noise.
CLINK'-ER, 36: s. A kind of brick; a cinder.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Power: gāw'-wāy' chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. mut., 171.

CLINOMETER=clī-nōm'-ē-ter, s. An instrument for measuring the dip in mineral strata.

CLINQUANT, clīng'-cānt, a. Glittering; dressed in embroidery or tinsel. [Shaks.]

To CLIP=clīp, v. a. Formerly, to embrace, hug, or enfold; hence, also, to confine or limit; at present, to separate by a sudden stroke; to cut with shears or scissors; to diminish coin by paring the edges; to curtail, to cut. It had a neuter sense in falconry, signifying to move fast.

Clip-per, s. A debaser of coin; a barber.

Clip-ping, s. A part cut off.

CLIQUE, clēck, [Fr.] 170: s. Party, gang, set, coterie.

CLIVERS, clī-verz, 151: s. A wild plant.

CLOAK=clōk, s. A loose outer garment; a concealment; a cover.

To Cloak, v. a. To cover with a cloak; to hide.

Cloak-bag, s. A portmanteau; a travelling bag.

CLOCK=clōck, s. Properly, a bell; an instrument which tells the hour; a beetle that flies about in the evening, in a circular direction, with a loud noise. What's o'clock. What is the hour of the clock.

Clock-work, (-wuk, 141) s. Movements by weights or springs; well adjusted work.

CLOCK OF A STOCKING: The embroidery work about the ankle.

To CLOCK.—See To Cluck.

CLOD=clōd, s. That which is collected into a lump, a hard mass of earth cohering; a turf; the ground; any thing conereted; any thing base or earthy; a dull gross fellow.

To Clod, v. n. and a. To gather into concretions:—act. To pelt with clods.

Clod'-dy, a. Consisting of clods; mean; gross.

Clod'-hop-per, s. A dull, heavy clown.

Clod'-pate, Clod'-poll, (-pōl, 116) s. A stupid fellow.

Clod'-pa-ted, a. Stupid, dull.

CLOT, s. Concretion, coagulation.

To Clot, v. n. To form clots or clods; to concretize; to coagulate; to become gross.

Clot'-ted, a. Coagulated.

Clot'-ty, a. Full of clots.

To Clot'-ter, v. n. To clot. [Dryden.]

CLOFF=clōf, 155: s. In commerce, an allowance of two pounds in every hundred-weight.

☞ In the dictionaries this word is written Clough, but practically as here given.

To CLOG=clōg, v. a. and n. To load with or encumber; to hinder, to obstruct; to burden; to embarrass:—new. To coalesce; to adhere; to be encumbered.

Clog, s. An encumbrance, a weight; a kind of additional shoe worn to keep from wet; a wooden shoe.

Clog'-ging, (-gūng, 77) s. An obstruction.

Clog'-gy, 77: a. Adhesive; obstructing; loaded.

Clog'-gi-ness, s. The state of being cloggy.

CLOISTER=clōy'-ster, 29, 36: s. Literally, an enclosed place (compare Claudent, &c.) a religious retirement; a monastery; a nunnery; in a more limited sense, the square shut in by the church, chapter-house, refectory, &c. By Cloisters is also meant the peristyle or piazza at any side of the square.

To Cloi'-ster, v. a. To shut up in a cloister; to immure.

Cloi'-stered, (-sterd, 114) a. Solitary; inhabiting a cloister; built with peristyles or piazzas.

Cloi'-ster-al, 129, 12: a. Solitary.

Cloi'-ster-ess, s. A nun.

CLOKE.—See Cloak.

CLOMB, clōm, 156: pret. and part.—See To Climb.

CLONIC=clōn'-ic, a. Shaking; not ulsive; irregular.

To CLOOM=clōm, v. a. To glue up. [Obs.]

To CLOSE, clōze, 137: v. a. and n. To shut; to conclude; to enclose; to join; to unite fractures:—new. To coalesce: To Close with, to come to an agreement with; to grapple with as in wrestling.

Close, s. The manner or time of closing; a grapple as in wrestling; pause; cessation; a conclusion. See also lower.

Clo'-ser, (-zer) s. A finisher; a concluder.

Clo'-sing, s. Period; conclusion.

Clo'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. The act of shutting up, that which encloses; enclosure; end.

Clo'-et, (clōz'-ēt) s. A small private room; a cupboard.

To Clo'-et, v. a. To shut up in a closet; to take into a closet for a secret interview.

CLOSE, (clōce, 137) a. ad. and s. Shut fast; having no vent; confined; stagnant; compact; solid; joined without space between; approaching nearly; undiscovered; hidden; secret; trusty; sly; retired; penurious; applied to the weather, dark, cloudy, oppressive:—ad. Nearly, densely; completely; secretly:—s. A place made close by fences; a small field.

Close'-ly, ad. In a close manner; secretly.

Close'-ness, s. The state of being close; straitness; connectedness; want of air; secrecy; sly avarice.

Close'-bod'-ied, (-id, 114) a. Fitting close to the body.

Close'-hand-ed, Close'-fist-ed, a. Penurious.

Close'-stool, s. A chamber utensil.

CLOSH=clōsh, s. A disease in the feet of cattle.

CLOT, To CLot, &c.—See under Clod.

CLOTH=clōth, 17: s. Any thing woven for dress; the piece of linen spread upon a table; a texture of wool; a clergyman's dress, and figuratively his function.

☞ In any of these senses, the plural is regular in spelling and pronunciation.—See Clothes lower.

Cloth'-shear-er, s. One who trims cloth.

To CLOTHE, (clōthē, 137) } v. a. To invest with
I Clad, or Clothed, 114: } garments; to adorn Clad, or Clothed, 114: } with dress; to invest, to furnish with clothes.

Clothes, (clōthēz, 143) s. pl. Garments; raiment; coverings of a bed.

Clo'-th'-er, 105, 146, 36: s. A seller of clothes; an outfitter; a maker of cloths.

Clo'-thing, s. Dress; vesture.

CLOUD=clōwd, 123: s. A collection of visible vapour suspended in the air at some height; (otherwise it is called a fog;) the veins or stains which, in stones, &c. resemble clouds; any state of obscurity or darkness.

To Cloud, v. a. and n. To darken; to mark as with clouds; to obscure; to defame:—new. To grow cloudy.

Cloud'-y, a. Covered with clouds; dark; obscure.

Cloud'-i-ly, ad. With clouds; obscurely.

Cloud'-i-ness, s. The state of being cloudy.

Cloud'-less, a. Without clouds; clear.

☞ Among the compounds are Cloud'-capt, (capped with, i. e. touching the clouds,) Cloud'-berry, (a Lancashire plant, so called as if it came from the clouds,) Cloud'-compelling, (driving the clouds before him,—an epithet of Jupiter,) Cloud'-kissing, (touching the clouds,) &c.

CLOUGH, clūf, 120, 162: s. The cleft of a hill a cliff. See also Cliff.

CLOUT=clōwt, 123: s. A nail. [Fr. clou.]

To Clout, v. a. To nail; as clouted shoes or shoes.

CLOUT=clōwt, 123: s. Primarily, that which is thrust or clapped on; hence, a cloth for any mean use; a patch; the mark of white cloth at which archers shoot; a plate to keep an axle-tree from wearing; a rude blow.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

To Clout, v. a. To patch; to cover with a cloth; to join coarsely; to beat; to strike.

Clout'-ed, a. Patched; also wrongly for clotied.

Clout'-er-ly, a. Clumsy; awkward.

CLOVE, CLOVEN, pref. and part.—See To Cleave.

Clove, (clōve) s. A part separated; appropriately, the parts into which garlic separates when the outer skin is removed; and also the divisions of a weight or wry of cheese, &c. in Suffolk and Essex, in the former of which 32 cloves (356 pounds) are a wry, in the latter 42 cloves, (336 pounds.) A wry of wool divides into 36 cloves.

Clo'-ven-foot'-ed, 85, 114, 118: } a. Having the Clo'-ven-hoofed, (hōft, 143) } foot cleft or divided into two parts.

CLOVE=clōve, s. A valuable Indian spice.

Clove-gil'-ly-flower, (jīl'-ly-flōwr) s. Carnation pink, a flower that smells like cloves. Webster, however, doubts this relationship, and allies the word to Clout, a nail.

CLOVER=clō-ver, s. A species of trefoil which cattle are very fond of: hence the phrase, To live in clover.

Clo'-vered, (-verd, 114) a. Covered with clover.

CLOWN=clown, 31: s. A rustic; a coarse ill-bred man; the fool or buffoon in a drama.

To Clown, v. n. To play the clown. [Little used.]

Clown'-ish, a. Coarse; rough; ill-bred; ungainly.

Clown'-ish-ly, ad. Coarsely; rudely.

Clown'-ish-ness, s. Rusticity; incivility.

Clown'-er-y, s. Ill breeding; rudeness. [L'Ettrange.]

To CLOY=clōy, 29: v. a. To satiate; to fill to loathing.

Cloy'-less, a. That cannot surfeit or glut.

Cloy'-ment, s. Satiation; fullness; glut.

To CLOY=cloy, 29: v. a. To nail; to spike; to claw as with talons: to wound with a nail. [Fr. Cloquer.]

CLUB=clūb, s. A heavy stick thicker at one end than the other: the name of one of the suits of cards, of which, among the Spaniards, the emblem was a club, though with the Spaniards name we have adopted the French emblem, a trefoil.

To Club, v. a. To beat with a club.

Clubbed, 114: a. Heavy or thick like a club.

Among the compounds are Club-footed, (having a large fist.) Club-footed, (crooked in the foot.) Club-headed, (having a thick head.) Club-law, (the law of brute force.) &c.

To CLUB=clūb, v. n. and a. To contribute to a common expense in settled proportions:—act. To pay into a common collection.

Club, s. The share or proportion each person pays to a common stock: the stock so raised: the persons, collectively, who thus pay; hence, the next word.

CLUB, s. An association of persons who meet under certain self-imposed regulations for the promotion of some common purpose, as of hilarity, science, politics, &c.

To Club, v. n. To join so as to form a club.

Club'-bist, a. A member of clubs [Burke.] Club'-ber is obsolete.

Club'-room, s. The room in which a club assembles.

Club'-house, s. A house occupied by a club.

To CLUCK=clūck, v. n. and a. To call chickens as a hen:—adv. To call as a hen calls.

CLUE.—See Clue.

CLUMP=clūmp, s. A shapeless piece of wood or other matter; a cluster of trees.

Clumps, s. A numskull.

To Clum'-per, v. a. To form into clumps or masses.

Clum'-sy, (-zē, 151, 105) a. Awkward; heavy.

Clum'-sily, ad. Awkwardly; heavily.

Clum'-siness, s. Awkwardness, ungainliness.

CLUNCH=clūntch, s. Hard clay in coal-pits.

CLUNG.—See To Cling.

To CLUNG=clūng, v. n. To shrink; to waste [Obs.]

CLUNIAC, cl'ū-nē-āc, s. A Benedictine monk of Cluni.

CLUSTER=clūs'-ter, s. A bunch or a number of the same things gather'd together.

To Clus'-ter, v. n. and a. To grow in bunches:—act. To collect into bunches.

Clus'-ter-y, 129, 105: a. Growing in clusters.

Clus'-ter-grape, s. A small black grape.

To CLUTCH=clūth, v. a. To gripe. to grasp.

Clutch, s. The gripe; in the plural, the paws, the talons: hands in the sense of rapacity.

CLUTTER=clūt'-ter, s. A noise, a bustle. Compare Clatter.

To Clut'-ter, v. n. To make a noise or bustle.

CLYSTER=clīs'-ter, s. An injection up the rectum.

Clys'-ter-pipe, s. The tube used for a clyster.

CO-, COG-, COL-, COM-, CON-, COR-, is a prefix of Latin origin, and, in most of the words compounded with it, signifies with, together, jointly, mutually, at the same time, union of parts, and the like: its form varying with the letter or sound that follows.

To COACERVATE=cō-āc-er-vāt, 59: v. a. To heap up together. See Co.

Co-ac'-er-va'-tion, 92, 89: s. A heaping together.

COACH=cōach, s. A close four-wheeled vehicle for state, for pleasure, and for travelling, distinguished from a chariot by having seats fronting each other.

To Coach, v. n. and a. To ride in a coach:—act. To carry in a coach.

Among the compounds are Coach-box, (the driver's seat.) Coach-hire, Coach-horse, Coach-horse, (a building for the coach when not in use.) Coach-maker, Coach-man, (the driver.) Coach-manship, &c.

To COACT=cō-āct, v. n. To act together. See Co-Co-ac'-tive, a. Acting together.

Co-ac'-tive, a. Restraining, impelling.

Co-ac'-tion, 89: s. Compulsion; force.

COADJUTOR, cō-ād-jū'tor, 109, 38: s. A fellow helper; in the canon law, one appointed to perform the duties of another. See Co.

Co-ad'-ju'trix, 154: s. A female fellow helper.

Co-ad'-ju-vant, 81: s. Mutual assistance.

Co-ad'-ju-vant, a. Helping. Compare To Adjute, &c.

Co-ad'-ju-van-cy, s. Concurrent help.

COADUNATE=cō-ād-ū-nāt, a. United at the base, as conduplicate leaves. See Co. [Bot.]

Co-ad'-u-nit'-ion, s. Union of different substances

To COAGMENT=cō-āg-mēt, v. a. To heap together.

Co-ag'-men-ta'-tion, s. Co-accretion. See Co.

To COAGULATE=cō-āg-ū-lāt, v. a. and n. To force into concretions:—adv. To run into concretions. See Co.

Co-ag'-u-la'-tive, 105: a. Having power to coagulate.

Co-ag'-u-la'-tor, 38: s. Producer of coagulation.

Co-ag'-u-la'-tion, 89: s. Concretion, conglomeration.

Co-ag'-u-la'-ble, 98, 101: a. That may coagulate.

Co-ag'-u-lum, s. A coagulator, as rennet, curd, &c.; a thick mass, as the clot of blood, &c. [Lat.]

COAL=cōle, s. Primarily, a burning substance chemically, a substance containing oil which has been exposed to a fire in a close vessel till, from the expulsion of its volatile matter, it can sustain a red heat without further decomposition; commonly, a solid, opaque, inflammable fossil. To call over the coals (from the use

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'w, i. e. jaw, 55: a, e, i, &c. ante. 171.

COB

COC

ent orcal) is to call to severe account; To carry coals (live coals) is to bear injuries.

To Coal, v. a. To burn to, to mark with, charcoal.

Coal'-y, 105: a. Containing coal.

Coal'-er-y, s. A colliery.

Among the compounds are, Coal-black, (black as coal); Coal-box or Coal-scuttle, Coal-house or Coal-shed, Coal-meter, (one appointed to see coals measured), Coal-mine, Coal-pit, &c.; also, Coal-stone, (a kind of hard coal), and Coal-fish, (a species of eel, named from the colour of its back.)

Coal'-li-ER, (côl'-lê-er=côl'-yer, 146) s. A digger of coals; a coal-merchant; a coal-ship.

Coal'-ier-y, (-yêr-ty) s. A place where coals are dug; the coal trade.

Coal'-ly, or Col'-low, s. The smut of coal.

To Col'-ly, v. a. To grime.

To COALESCE=cô-d-lês's, 59: v. n. To grow together; to unite in masses; to join. See Co-.

Co-a-les-cence, s. Concretion, union.

Co-a-lit'-ion, (-lîsh'-ûn, 89) s. Union of particles into one mass; union of persons into one party.

COAPTATION, cō-âp-tâ'-shûn, 89: s. The adjustment of parts one with another.—See Co-.

To COARCT=cô-ark't, 35: v. a. To press together; to restrain. See Co-.

To COARCTATE=cô-ark'-tât, } v. a. To press together; to restrain. See Co-.

Co-arc-tâ'-tion, 89: s. Confinement; restraint.

COARSE=côurse, 133, 153: s. Not refined; not soft or fine; rude; uncivil; gross; inelegant; rude; mean.

Coarse'-ly, ad. In a coarse manner.

Coarse'-ness, s. Impurity; roughness; grossness.

COAST=côast, s. Primarily, the side or edge of any thing, a sense now obsolete; the edge of the land next the sea; the shore; the border or frontier of a country.

To Coast, v. n. and a. To sail along the coast:—act. To sail by, or near to.

Coast'-er, 36: s. He that sails near the shore; a small trading vessel.

COAT=côte, s. The upper garment; the habit or vesture; the hair or fur of a beast; any tegument or covering; that on which the ensigns armorial are portrayed.

To Coat, v. a. To cover; to invest.

Coat'-ing, s. That which covers, a covering.

Coat'-card, s. A card bearing a coated figure, now corrupted into Court-card.

To COAX, cōaks=cōkis, 154: v. a. To wheedle.

Coax'-er, s. A wheedler; a flatterer.

COB=côb, s. The head; that which is round like the head; a ball or pellet; a testicle; hence, from these general meanings, the restricted senses, as an individual; a covetous fellow; a foreign coin bearing a head; a pellet made up to feed fowls with; an animal with only one testicle; a horse not castrated; hence, again, Co-b-coals, are large round coals; a Co-b-iron, is an andiron with a knob; a Co-b-lanf, is a loaf with many knobs; and a Co-b-stone, Cob'-ble-stone, Cog'-gle-stone, or Cock'-le-stone, is a stone worn into roundness by attrition of the water; a boulder-stone. Allusively to the head, the Cob'-swan is the leading swan; and the sea'-cob, or sea'-gull, may have been so called from some allusion to the swan.

Co-b'-er, a. Stout; brisk.

Cob, s. A strong, stout poney.

COB=côb, s. A spider. [Obs. or Prov.]

Cob'-web, s. and a. A spider's web; any snare implying weakness:—a. Fine; slight; flimsy.

To COB=côb, v. a. Among soldiers and sailors, to strap or smack with a belt or a flat board as a punishment for petty offences among themselves.

COBALT=cô-bâlt, s. A metal obtained from a mineral of a gray colour, to which the name was at first exclusively applied. Arsenic is obtained from the mineral in great quantities.

Co-bal'-tic, 88: a. Pertaining to cobalt.

To COBBLE, cōb'-bl, v. a. To mend coarsely; to do or make clumsily.

Cob'-bler, s. A mender of shoes; a clumsy workman.

COBCAL=côb'-câl, s. An open slipper used in the East.

COBLOAF, COBIRON, &c.—See under Cob, the head.

COBLE, cōb'-bl, 101: s. A fishing boat.

COCCIFEROUS, cōck-sîf'-êr-ûs, 59, 87, 129, 180: a. Bearing berries.

Coc'-co-LITE, (côc'-kô-lî-t,) s. Berry stone.

Coc'-cu-lus IN'-DI-CUS, [Lat.] s. Indian berry, a poisonous fruit often used in adulterating beer.

COCHINEAL, cōtch-ê-nêal', 105: s. A substance consisting of dried insects brought from South America, and used in the arts as a red dye or tincture.

COCHLEARY, cōck'-lê-âr-ty, 161: a. Having the form of a snail's shell, or of a screw.

Cock'-le-a'-ted, a. Spiral; turbinate.

COCK=côck, s. The male of the domestic hen; hence, the male of other birds; a strutting chief or principal in any affair; that which is perched or set up on an eminence or projection, and which, on that account, is or was frequently surmounted by the figure of a cock; as a weather-vane; the handle which turns a liquid on or off through a spout; and hence the a liquid on or off through a spout; and hence the an indicator, resembles a weather-cock; as the gnomon of a dial; the index of a balance. The word has other senses as a substantive, but many of these probably arise out of the verb in the sense of to set up.—See lower. Cock and Bull, common-place story-telling; cock-a-hop, triumphant, exulting, like a crowing cock.

Cock'-er-el, 129: s. A young cock. [Dryden.]

To Cock, v. n. To train or use fighting cocks.

Cock'-er, 36: s. A cock-fighter.

Cock'-ing, s. The sport of cock-fighting.

To Cock, v. a. and n. To set erect or hold bolt upright, an application suggested by the strutting of a cock; to set up the hat with an air of petulance or defiance; to set up saucily; to set up the lock of a gun for a discharge; to set up in heaps:—neu. To strut; to hold up the head.

Cock, s. The notch for cocking an arrow; that part of a gun which is cocked in order to fire; a small heap of hay; (this is said to have been originally Cyp); a mould or form of the hat; a small boat, or one that cocks itself readily on the waves; though it is said originally to have been Cog'-boat. Cock'-sure, (a low word,) is confidently, saucily certain.

Cock'-et, a. Brisk, pert.—See also lower. [Sherwood.]

COCK-AD'E, s. A ribbon worn in a cock of the hat; a ribbon worn in the hat.

COCK'-A-TOO', s. A kind of parrot bearing a tuft.

COCK'-A-TRICK, s. A serpent supposed to rise from a cock's egg.

COCK'-BROT, s. Broth made by boiling a cock.

COCK'-CROW-ING, (crô-ing, 125) s. The dawn.

COCK'-HOUSE, ad. On horseback; triumphant.

COCK'-LOFT, s. The top loft.

COCK'-CHA-FER, s. The chaffer; the prefix is a mere augment, though literally implying male.

COCK'-ROACH, s. A kind of beetle.—See the preceding.

COCK'-PIT, s. A place where cocks fight; a place on the lower deck of a ship of war where there are sub divisions for the purser and surgeon.

COCKS'-COMB, (-côam, 116, 156) s. The caruncle

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: mîn, 166 then, 166.

or comb of a cock; the plant lobeswort. In its other senses this word is spelled Coxcomb.

COCK'-SHUT, s. The close of day when fowls roost.

COCK'-SWAIN, (collog. Cock'-sn, 167) s. The officer who has the command of such a boat as was formerly called a cock.

→ The word is used for other compounds: Cock'-fight, Cock'-fighting, and Cock'-match, are obvious in meaning; Cock'-paddle is a fish; and Cock'-s'-head, Cock'-spur, Cock'-weed, are plants.

To COCKER=cōck'-er, 36: v. a. To fuddle; to indulge; to pamper. Allied to Coax.

COCKET=cōck'-ēt, s. An official seal; an instrument delivered by the officers of the customs as a warrant that merchandise is entered.

COCK'-ET-BREAD, 120: s. The finest sort of wheaten bread, such as once had a seal or stamp.

COCKLE, cōck'-kl, 101: s. A small shell-fish.

To Coc'-kile, v. a. and n. To contract into wrinkles like the shell of a cockle. Compare Cockleary.

Coc'-kled, a. Shelled; turbinated; cochleated.

Cock'-ler, s. One that takes and sells cockles.

Coc'-kle-stairs, 143: s. pl. Winding-stairs.

COCKLE, cōck'-kl, 101: s. Darnel, a weed growing in corn. But 3 plants are confounded under the name.

COCKNEY=cōck'-nēy, s. A native of London, so called in contempt. Hence, Cock'-neyism.

Cuc'-agne, (cōc'-kānē, 157, 139) s. An imaginary country of idleness and luxury; hence, London and its suburbs. This word, long familiar in Italian and French, is supposed to be the parent of the other.

COCOA=cō'-cō, s. A species of palm-tree; a decoction from a preparation of the nut.

Coc'-coa-nut, s. The nut or fruit of the cocoa.

COCOON=cō'-cōon, s. The egg-shaped case of the chrysalis.

COCTILE, cōck'-tīl, 105: a. Made by heating; appropriately by baking.

Coc'-tion, 89: s. The act of boiling.

COD=cōd, s. A species of fish; codfish.

Cod'-ling, s. A small cod.—See also To Codle.

COD=cōd, s. A case, husk, or envelop; a bag; the scutum; a pillow.

To Cod, v. a. To enclose in a cod.

CODE=cōde, s. Strictly, an appendix; also, a book of laws, because twelve books made by order of Justinian and appended to others were so called.

Cod'-i-cum, s. An appendix to a will.

CODGER=cōd'-ger, s. A clownish miserly fellow.

CODILLE, cō-dīl', [Fr.] 170: s. A term at Ombre.

To CODLE, cōd'-dl, 101: v. a. To parboil; figuratively, to keep warm; to indulge with warmth; to make much of.

Cod'-ling, s. A kind of apple often parboiled or boiled.—See also under Cod.

COEFFICIENT, cō'-ēf-fīsh''-ēnt, 90: a. and s. Co-operating:—s. That which co-operates; in algebra, the known term which is placed before an unknown one as being multiplied into it.—See Co.

Cō'-ef-fīc'-i-en-cy, 105: s. Co-operation.

Co'-er'-vī-ca-cy, 105, 98: s. Joint efficacy.

CELIAC.—See Celiac.

COEMPTION, cō-ēm'-shūn, 156, 89: s. A buying of part with part, that is, of the whole, a buying up.—See Co.

COEQUAL, cō'-ē'-kwāil, 76, 145, 140, 18: a. and s. Jointly equal:—s. One who is jointly equal to another.—See Co.

Co'-e-qual''-i-ty, (-kwōil'-ē-tēy, 140) s. The state of being jointly equal.

To COERCE=cō-erac', 35, 153: v. a. To restrain. Co-er'-ci-ble, a. Capable of being restrained.

Co-er'-cive, 105: a. Restraining by power.

Co-er'-cion, (-shūn, 147) s. Penal restraint; check.

COESSENTIAL, cō'-ēs-sēn''-shāil, 85, 90: a.

Partaking mutually of the same essence.—See Co.

Co'-es-sen'-ti-al''-i-ty, 84, 105: s. Participation of the same essence.

COETANEOUS, cō'-ē-tā''-nē-ūs, 120: a. Agreeing mutually in age.—See Co.

COETERNAL=cō'-ē-ter''-nāl, a. Jointly eternal.

Co'-e-ter''-ni-ty, s. Joint eternity.—See Co.

COEVAL=cō'-ē' vāl, a. and s. Of the same age.—s. A contemporary; properly one not only living at the same time, but of the same time of life.—See Co.

Co-e'-vons, 120: a. Coeval. [Little used.]

To COEXIST, cō'-ēg-zīst', 154: v. n. To exist at the same time.—See Co.

Co'-er-is''-tent, a. Existing at the same time.

Co'-er-is''-tence, s. Existence at the same time.

To COEXTEND, cō'-ēcks-tēnd', 154: v. a. To extend to the same space or duration with another. See Co.

Co'-er-ten''-sive, 105: a. Mutually equal in extent.

Co'-er-ten''-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Joint extension.

COFFEE=cōf'-fēy, s. The berries of the coffee-tree; an infusion or decoction from the berries after they have been roasted and ground.

Cof'-fee-house, s. A house for refreshment where coffee is always kept ready for drinking, a business often united with that of an hotel, or a tavern.

→ Among the other compounds are Coffee-cup, Coffeemans, (a man who keeps a coffee-house; Address.) Coffee-pot, (for boiling coffee;) Coffee-room, (the public room in an inn.) Coffee-shop, (either a shop where ground or unground coffee is sold; or a meaner sort of coffee-house,) &c.

COFFER=cōf'-fer, 36: s. A chest or trunk; distinctively, a chest containing gold or other treasure; the treasure itself; in fortification, a hollow trench or lodgement in a dry ditch; in architecture, a square hollow between the moldings of a cornice; in inland navigation, a sort of lock for receiving a barge; Cofferdam, a case of piling fixed in the bed of a river for building a pier dry.

To Cof'-fer, v. a. To treasure up.

Cof'-fer-er, 129: s. He who coffers; formerly, an officer of the royal household next under the Comptroller.

Cof'-fin, s. A coffer or chest for enclosing a dead body; the paste of a pie which encloses the fruit; paper folded in the form of a cone to enclose grocery; the whole of a horse's hoof above the coronet, enclosing and including the coffin-bone.

To Cof'-fin, v. a. To enclose in a coffin.

To COG=cōg, v. a. and n. To flatter; to wheedle; to obtrude by falsehood; to secure a die so as to direct its fall; to cheat at dice:—new, to lie; to wheedle. [Obs.]

Cog'-ger, (-gwr, 77) s. A flatterer.

Cog'-ger-y, s. Cheating.

Cog'-ging, (-gūng, 77) a. and s. Wheedling:—s. Cheating.

COG=cōg, s. The tooth of a wheel.

Cog'-wheel, 56: s. A wheel with cogs.

To Cog, v. a. To fix cogs in; to furnish with cogs.

COGENT=cō'-gēnt, a. Forceful; powerful.

Co'-gent-ly, ad. Forcefully; powerfully.

Co'-gen-cy, s. Force; strength.

COGGLESTONE.—See under Cob, the head.

To COGITATE, cōd'-gē-tāte, 64, 105: v. s. To think.

Cog'-i-ta-ble, a. That may be thought on.

Cog''-i-ta-tive, 105: a. Thinking; meditative.

Cog'-i-ta-tion, 89: s. Thought; meditation.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Verbs: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā; lāw; gōd; j'wō, i. e. jaw, 55: a. c. h. &c. note, 171.

COH

COGNATE=cōg'-nāte, n and s. (Literally, born with; See Co-.) Allied by blood; related in origin:—s. In Scots law, a male relation through the mother.

Cog-na-tion, 89: s. Descent from the same original; participation of the same nature:—in the civil law, relationship between males and females descended from the same father; as agnation is relationship between the same only who are so descended.

COGNAC, cōn'-yāck, 157, 146: s. The best kind of brandy, so named from a town in France.

COGNITION, cōg-nish'-ūn, s. The knowledge of something from inspection or awakened experience.

Cog'-ni-tive, 105: a. Knowing by having experienced.

Cog'-ni-zance, 12: s. Knowledge, notice generally.

Cog'-ni-zant, a. Competent to know.

COG'-NI-ZANCE, (cōn'-nē-zānce, 167) s. Notice or knowledge in a judicial or legal sense; trial in court; jurisdiction or right to try; an acknowledged confession, as in fines, in which the cognisor in the plaintiff or cognizee by gift or otherwise.

↳ This word and its legal relations are sometimes exhibited to the eye nearly as sounded to the ear. Co'-nizant, &c.

Cog'-ni-zant, a. Competent to take legal notice.

Cog'-ni-za-ble, a. Falling under judicial notice; liable to be tried.

Cog'-ni-zor, Cog'-ni-zee', 177: s. See the explanation of COGNIZANCE in its legal sense.

COG-NOS-CENCE, (cōg-nōs'-cēnce) s. Knowledge.

Cog-nos-ci-ble, a. That may be known.

Cog-nos-ci-tive, 105: a. Having power of knowing.

Cog-nos-cen'-te, (in the pl. Cog-nos-cen'-ti, with no difference of English pronunciation:—s. A man knowing in the arts; a connoisseur. [Ital.]

COG-NO'-VIT, s. Literally, he has acknowledged; a legal acknowledgement of the plaintiff's claim, by which judgement is entered without trial.

COGNOMINATION, cōg-nōm'-ē-nā'-shūn, 89: s. A naming in addition to another name; (See Co-) a surname.

Cog-nom'-i-nal, a. Having the same name with another; pertaining to a surname.

To COHABIT=cō-hāb'-it, v. n. To dwell with another; (See Co-) to live together as man and wife.

Co-hab'-i-tant, s. A joint inhabitant.

Co-hab'-i-ta'-tion, s. The act or state of cohabiting.

COHEIR, cō'-āir, 100, 56: s. A joint heir.—See Co-.

Co-heir'-ess, s. She who is heir with another.

To COHERE=cō-hēre', v. n. To stick together; to suit; to fit; to agree.—See Co-.

Co-he'-rent, a. Sticking together; consistent.

Co-he'-rent-ly, ad. In a coherent manner.

Co-he'-rence, Co-he'-ren-cy, s. A union of parts which resists separation; connection; consistency.

Co-HE'-SIVE, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Having the power of cohering; tending to unite in a mass.

Co-he'-sive-ly, ad. With cohesion.

Co-he'-sive-ness, s. The quality of being cohesive.

Co-he'-si-ble, 101: a. Capable of cohesion.

Co he'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. Act of sticking together; state of union; connection.

COHIBIT=cō-hiv'-it, v. a. To restrain.—See Co-.

To COHOBATE=cō-hō-bāte, v. a. To pour the distilled liquor upon the remaining matter, and distil it again. [Old Chemistry.]

Co'-ho-ba'-tion, s. Re-distillation.

COHORT=cō'-hāwt, 38: s. A body of about five hundred foot soldiers among the Romans; a troop.

COHORTATION, cō'-hor-tā'-shūn, s. Exhortation. [Obs.]

COIF=coif, 29: s. The head-dress; a cap.

Coifed, (coif, 114, 143) a. Wearing a coif.

Coif'-sure, (coif'-f'oor, [Fr.] 170) s. A head-dress.

COIGNE, coin, 156, 29: s. A corner; a quoin.

To COIL=coil, 29: v. a. To gather into a circular heap, as a rope.

Coil, s. A rope wound into a ring; turmoil, tumult, stir, perhaps figuratively, because a stir or tumult is wound up from smaller beginnings; or the word in this sense may be allied to Call.

COIN=coin, s. A corner.—Also Coigne and Quoin.

COIN=coin, s. Money bearing a legal stamp.

To Coin, v. a. To stamp metals for money; to make or invent; to make or forge in an ill sense.

Coin'-age, 99: s. Practice of coining; money coined; forgery; invention.

Coin'-er, s. One that coins; a forger; an inventor.

To COINCIDE=cō-in-cide', v. n. To fall on the same point; to concur.—See Co-.

Co'-in-ci'-der, s. He or that which coincides.

Co'-in-ci-dent, 81: a. Falling on the same point; concurrent, equivalent.

Co-in'-ci-dence, s. Act or state of coinciding.

COINCIDATION, cō-in'-dē-cā'-shūn, 89: s. Concurrence of signs; a concurrent symptom.

COISTRIL=cois'-tril, 29: s. A degenerate hawk; a coward; a young lad. It is also spelled Coystrel.

COIT.—See Quoit.

COITION, cō-ish'-ūn, 89: s. A going together; (See Co-) appropriately, the act of generation.

COJOIN=cō-join', v. a. To join with another.

COJUROR, cō-j'ūr'-or, 109, 38: s. He who swears to another's credibility.—See Co-.

COKE=cōke, s. Fossil coal deprived of its extraneous volatile matter by fire, and thus prepared for exciting intense heat.

COLATION, cō-lā'-shūn, 89: s. Filtration.

Co'-la-ture, (cō'-lā-tūrt, 147) s. The act of straining.

COL'-AN-IER, (cūl'-ān-der, 116) s. A sieve; a strainer.

COLBERTINE, cōl-ber-tēn', 104: s. A kind of lace worn by women.

COLCOTHAR=cōl'-cō-thar, 34: s. The brown red oxide of iron commonly called crocus.

COLD, cōld=cōld, 116, 108: a. and s. Gelid, chill, shivering; having cold qualities; indifferent; frigid; without passion; reserved, coy, chaste; not welcome, not cordial; not hasty, not violent:—s. The sensation produced in animal bodies by the escape of heat, and consequent contraction of the fine vessels; the cause of the sensation; a shivering; an inflammatory disease occasioned by cold, catarrh.

Cold'-ly, ad. In a cold manner.

Cold'-ness, s. Want of heat; unconcern; frigidity of temper; covetous; want of kindness; chastity.

Cold'-heart-ed, (-hart-ēd, 131) a. Wanting feeling.

Cold'-short, a. Brittle when cold, as a metal.

COLE=cōal, s. A name for all sorts of cabbage.

Cole'-seed, s. Cabbage seed.

Cole'-wort, (-wurt, 141) s. A species of cabbage.

COLEOPTERAL=cōl'-lō-op'-tēr-āl, a. Having wings with sheaths, like the beetle.

COLIC=cōl'-ic, s. and a. Strictly, a disorder of the colon or the chief of the intestines; a disorder of the stomach and bowels generally:—a. Affecting the bowels.

To COLLAPSE=cōl-lāps', 189: v. n. To fall together, as the sides or parts of a hollow vessel.—See Co-.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consnants: mish'-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vizh'-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: shūn, 166: thēn, 166

Col-lapse', s. A shrinking or falling together, as the canals or vessels of the body, through disease or age.
Col-lap-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Act or state of collapsing.

COLLAR=col-lar, 34: s. Something worn round the neck; a neck-band: To slip the collar, is to escape from restraint, as a horse from harness: A collar of brass, is the quantity made up in one parcel.—See the verb.

To Col-lar, v. a. To seize by the collar, or throat; to put a collar on.—To collar beef or other meat is to bind it hard and close with a string or collar.

Col-lared, 114: a. Having a collar.

Col-lar-age, s. A duty on the collars of draught horses.

Col-lar-bone, s. The clavicle.

Col-lar-day, s. A day on which knights appear at court in their collars.

Col-lar-er, s. Formerly a collar; at present, the ring in which a stone is set.

To COLLATE=cōl-lāt', v. a. Literally, to bring or lay together; (See Co.) applied in one sense to the comparison of books and manuscripts for the purpose of supplying omissions and ascertaining true readings; and in another sense to the act of placing a clergyman in a benefice.

Col-la-tor, s. One who compares copies; one who presents to a benefice; one who bestows.

Col-la-tive, a. A term applied to livings or advowsons of which the bishop and the patron are the same person.

Col-la-tion, 89: s. A comparison of copies; a bestowing of a benefice; generally, a bringing of things together, and hence, particularly, a request of several things set out.

Col-la-tious, (-tish'-ūs, 90, 120) a. Contributed from many parts, or by many persons.

COLLATERAL=cōl-lāt'-ēr-āl, a. Side to side, running parallel or together; (See Co.) diffused on either side; not direct; not immediate; concurrent; descending from the same stock or ancestor, though not lineally related; as the children of brothers.

Col-lat-er-al-ly, ad. In a collateral manner.

To COLLAUD=cōl-lāwd', v. a. To join in praising.—See Co.

COLLEAGUE.—See under To Colligate.

To COLLECT=cōl-lēct', 81: v. a. and n. To gather together; (See Co.) to gain by observation; to infer as a consequence: To collect one's self, is to collect the powers of the mind from confusion, or for determination; hence, collected signifies cool, calm, undisturbed;—new. To run together; to accumulate.

Col-lect-tor, 18: s. A gatherer; a compiler; a receiver of dues.

Col-lect-tor-ship, s. The office of a collector.

Col-lēc-ta'-ne-ous, 90: a. Gathered together.

Col-lect-ted, part. Gathered; calm. (See the verb.)

Col-lect-ted-ly, ad. In one view; in a body.

Col-lect-ted-ness, s. State of being collected.

Col-lect-ti-ble, 101: a. That may be collected.

Col-lect-tion, 89: s. A gathering together; a contribution; an assemblage; a collorary; a deduction.

Col-lect-ti'-ious, (-tish'-ūs, 90, 120) a. Gathered up.

Col-lect-tive, 105: a. Gathered into one body; expressing a multitude, though having the form of the singular number.

Col-lect-tive-ly, ad. In a body.

Col-lect-tive-ness, s. State of union; a mass.

COLLECT=cōl-lēct', s. A prayer read with other parts of the service, either usually, or on a particular occasion.

COLLEGATARY, cōl-lēg'-ā-tār-ēy, 105: s. A joint legatee.—See Co.

COLLEGE, cōl-lēdgē, 102: s. Primarily, a collection, an assembly, or community; and thus the word is allied to the verb To Collect; appropriately, a society of men collected for learning or religion; the house in which they reside.

Col-lē-gi-al, 105, 146, 12: a. Relating to a college.

Col-lē-gi-an, s. A member of a college.

Col-lē-gi-ate, a. and s. Containing a college; instituted as a college; applied to a church, it signifies one that, not being a cathedral, or the seat of a bishop, has nevertheless its college or corporation of dean, canons and prebends, and is regulated, in matters of divine service, as a cathedral;—s. A member of a college; a university man.

COLLET.—See under Collar.

COLLETIC=cōl-lēt'-ic, a. and s. Agglutinant;—s. Glue.

To COLLIDE=cōl-līdē', v. a. To strike mutually.

Col-li-dion, (-līzh'-ūn, 147) s. A mutual striking against; a clash; opposition; in reference.—See Co.

COLLIER, &c.—See under Coal.

COLLIFLOWER.—See Cauliflower under Cauli.

To COLLIGATE, cōl-lē-gāt', 105: v. a. To bind together.—See Co.

Col-li-ga'-tion, 89: s. A binding together.

Col-league, (-lēag, 189) s. A partner.

Col-league-ship, s. Partnership. [Milton.]

To Col-league', 83: v. n. To join in league.

COLLIMATION, cōl-lē-mā'-shūn, s. The aiming at a mark or limit.—See Co. Collimator, see S.

COLLINEATION, cōl-līn'-ē'-shūn, 89: s. The act of directing in a line to a fixed object.—See Co.

To COLLIQUATE, cōl-lē-kwāt', 76, 145: v. a. and n. To melt; to dissolve;—new. To be dissolved.—See Co.

Col-li-quāt, a. Having the power of melting.

Col-li-quā'-tion, 89: s. The act of melting; a lax or diluted state of the fluids in animal bodies.

Col-liq'-ua-ble, (-līck'-wā-bl, 81, 98, 101) a. Easily dissolved.

Col-liq'-ua-ment, s. The substance to which any thing is reduced by being melted.

Col-liq'-ua-tive, 105: a. Melting; dissolvent.

Col-liq'-ue-fac'-tion, 89: s. A melting together.

COLLISION.—See under To Collide.

To COLLOCATE=cōl-lō-cāt', v. a. To place.—See Co.

Col-lō-ca'-tion, 89: s. A placing, or being placed.

To COLLOGUE=cōl-lōgū', v. a. To wheedle; to flatter. [Obs.]

COLLOQUY, cōl-lō-kwēy, 76, 145, 105: s. Mutual discourse of two or more; (See Co.) conversation.

Col-lō-quist, s. A speaker in a dialogue.

Col-lō'-qui-al, a. Relating to common conversation.

Col-lō'-qui-al-ly, ad. In a colloquial manner.

Col-lō-cu'-tion, 89: s. Conference; conversation.

Col-lō-cu'-tor, 38: s. A speaker in a dialogue.

COLLOP=cōl-lōp, 18: s. A small slice of meat; a piece of flesh; in burlesque, a child.

COLLUCTANCY, cōl-lūc'-tān-cēy, 105: s. A tendency to contest with; (See Co.) opposition of nature.

Col-luc-ta'-tion, 89: s. Contrariety; opposition.

To COLLUDE, cōl-lūd', 109: v. a. To play into each other's hand; to conspire in a fraud.—See Co.

Col-lu'-der, s. One who colludes, or acts in concert.

Col-lu'-sion, (-zhūn) s. A secret agreement for a fraudulent purpose.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gā-tā-wā; chāp'-mān; pā-pā; lāw; gōd; j'w, &c. jeu, 55: a, i, u, &c. note, 171.

COL

Col-lu-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Fraudulently con-sorted.

Col-lu-sively, ad. By collusion.

Col-lu-sive-ness, s. The quality of being collusive.

Col-lu-sor-y, (-sor-ty) a. Containing collusion.

COLLY, or COLLOW.—See under Coal.

COLLYRIUM, cōl-līr'-ē-ūm, 129, 105: s. An ointment for the eyes.

COLMAR, cōl'-mar, 116, 34: s. A kind of pear.

COLOCYNTH=cōl'-ō-sīnth, s. Coloquintida.

COLON=cōl'-lōn, s. Literally, a member or part; appropriately, one of the larger members into which a period is divided, as also the mark thus (:), by which the division is signified; or the largest and widest member of the intonations.

COLONEL, cōl'-nēl, 167: s. The commander of a regiment, ranking next below a brigadier-general. The spelling is French; the pronunciation comes from the Spanish, Coronel.

Colo-nel-cy. Colo-nel-ship, s. The office, rank or commission of a colonel.

COLONNADE=cōl'-ō-nād'-ē, 85: s. A series of columns disposed in a circle; any series of columns.

COLONY, cōl'-ō-nēy, s. A body of people drawn from the mother country to inhabit some distant place; the country planted.

Col-o-nist, s. An inhabitant of a colony.

To Col-o-nize, v. a. To establish a colony in.

To Col-o-ni-za-tion, s. The act or practice of colonizing.

Col-o-ni-al, 90: a. Relating to a colony or colonies.

COLOPHON, cōl'-ō-fōn, 163: s. A city of ancient Ionia, one of those that claimed the honour of being the birth-place of Homer; it was likewise known for a resin brought from thence; and for a species of garnet. Probably some copy or edition of Homer's poems alluded to the first circumstance in some striking tail-piece; hence Colophon has become the name for the conclusion of a book where any device occurs, or the printer's name and abode are stated.

Col-o-pho-n-y, s. Black resin.

Col-o-pho-ni-te, s. A kind of garnet.

COLOQUINTIDA, cōl'-ō-kwīn'-tē-dā, s. A purgative drug, otherwise called the bitter apple.

COLORATE, &c.—See under Colour.

COLOSSUS=cōl'-ōs'-ūs, s. A gigantic statue.

Co-lōs-sal, a. Gigantic; huge in size.

Col'-ōs-se'-um, s. A building of huge proportions; particularly the amphitheatre of Vespasian at Rome.

This, however, is otherwise written Coliseum, from the name Calisto the Italians gave it with reference to the statue of Nero which stood near, the reference being either to the relative position of the theatre, or to the colossal size of the statue.

COLOUR, cūl'-ūr, 116, 120, =cūl'-ūr, 38: s. The effect produced on the organs of sight by different power of different bodies or surfaces of bodies to reflect and refract the rays of light. Bodies called to reflect the rays of light, but do not separate them; white reflect the rays of light, but do not separate them; those called black absorb the rays; the primary colours only in common parlance; blue, indigo, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, colours are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, blue; the appearance of blood in the colours and violet;—hue, dye; the appearance of superficial cover, palliaface; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

tion; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

face; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

tion; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

face; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

tion; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

face; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

tion; the tint of the painter; superficial cover, pallia-

Col'-our-a-ble, a. Specious; plausible.

Col'-our-a-bly, ad. Speciously.

Col'-our-ing, s. Specious appearance; that part of painting which especially regards the effect of colours.

Col'-our-ist, s. A painter who excels in colouring.

Col'-our-less, a. Without colours; transparent.

Col'-or-ate, a. Tinged; dyed; coloured.

Col'-or-i-f'-ic, a. Able to give colour.

Col'-or-a-tion, 89: s. The act of colouring.

Col'-or-a-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Graces in music; compare Chromatic in its musical sense.

COLSTAFF=cōl'-stāf, s. A staff by which two men carry a burden on their shoulders.

COLT, cōlt, 116: s. A young horse; a foolish young fellow; a person without experience.

To Colt, v. n. and a. To frisk, to frolic;—act. To befool.

Colt-ish, a. Like a colt; frisky, wanton.

Colt's-tooth, s. An imperfect tooth in young horses; a love of youthful pleasure.

Colt's'-root, (-root, 113) s. A genus of plants.

COLTER, cōl'-ter, 116: s. The sharp iron of a plough.

COLUBRINE, cōl'-ū-brīnē, 69: a. Relating to a serpent; cunning, crafty.

COLUMBIAN, cō-lūm'-bē-ān, 146: a. Pertaining to the country discovered by Columbus; American.

Co-lum'-bi-um, s. An acidifiable metal. Colum'bic, a.

Co-lum'-bite, s. An ore first found in America.

COLUMBINE=cōl'-ūm-bīnē, a. Like or pertaining to a pigeon or dove; dove-colour.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

Co-lum'-bin-y, 129, 105: s. A dove-cote.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: mīn, 166: thēn, 166

Com-bi'-na-ble, 101: a. That may be combined.
Com'-bi-nate, a. Settled by compact, betrothed.
[Shaks.]

Com'-bi-na'-tion, 89: s. Union for some purpose; commixture; union of two or more substances in such a manner as to form a new compound, in distinction from a mere mechanical mixture, in which each substance retains its properties: the union of numbers or quantities in every possible manner.

COMBUST=cōm-būst', 18: a. Literally, burnt with; (see Co-:) appropriately, it is applied only to a planet when in conjunction with, or apparently near to the sun.

Com-bus'-ti-ble, 105: a. and s. Capable of being burnt:—s. A substance that will take fire and burn.

Com-bus'-ti-ble-ness, } s. Aptness to take fire.
Com-bus'-ti-bil'-i-ty, }

Com-bus'-tion. (cōm-būst'-yōn, 146, 18; colloq. cōm-būst'-shūn, 147) s. Conflagration; burning.

To COME, cūm, 107: } v. n. To advance nearer,
I CAME=cāme, } as opposed to go; to arrive;
COME, cūm, 107: } to rise; to reach; to happen;

to appear in sight; to become: in the imperative it is often used interjectionally, in order to encourage, excite, or command attention: it is often used with an ellipsis, as Come Friday, that is, when Friday shall come. As to the numerous senses it expresses by prepositions, these differences should be sought for in the added particle, and not in the verb, which retains its meaning, either plainly or figuratively, in all the phrases it helps to form. Thus, To come by, expresses either a plain meaning—as, "He came by the door," that is, he advanced on his way by or near the door; or a figurative meaning—as, "He came by his death," that is, he arrived at, or happened on, his death: and so of other phrases. In the expression, "The better comes," the meaning is figurative: it advances nearer to us as butler from the state it was in.

Com'-er, 36: s. One that comes.

Come-off', s. An evasion.

Com'-ing, a. and s. Advancing near; ready to come; forward; forward in fondness; future:—s. The act of coming; approach; state of being come; arrival.

Com'-ing-in', s. That which comes in, revenue; income; act of yielding.

Com'-i-ly, (cūm'-lēy) a. That comes together, or meets suitably in all its parts; decent; graceful.

Com'-li-ly, ad. Decently; suitably.

Com'-li-ness, s. That which is becoming, fit, or suitable in form or manner; grace; beauty; dignity.

COMEDY, cōm'-dēy, s. A dramatic representation of the lighter passions and actions of mankind.

Com'-e-di-an, 18, 105, 146, 12: s. A player of comic parts; a player in general; a writer of comedies.

Com'-ic, a. Relating to comedy; raising mirth.

Com'-i-cal, a. Comic; diverting; sportive; droll.

Com'-i-cal-ly, ad. In a comical manner.

Com'-i-cal-ness, s. The quality of being comical.

COMESSATION, cōm'-ēs-sā'-shūn, 89: s. Feasting; revelry.

Com'-es'-ti-ble, 18, 105, 101: a. and s. Eatable:—s. That which is fit to be eaten with something else; (see Co-:) a sauce.

COMET=cōm'-ēt, 14: s. Literally, a hairy star; an opaque body like a planet whose orbit is elliptical, and whose appearance varies with its relative position to the sun.

Com'-et-a'-ri-um, 85, 41: s. A machine for showing the motion of a comet about the sun.

Com'-et-ar-y, or Com'-et'-ic, a. Relating to comets.

Com'-et-og'-rd-phy, (-fēy, 163) s. Description of comets.

Co'-ma, 2: s. The hairy appearance that surrounds a planet; the turf or hair of a plant.

Com'-ate, a. Hairy; appearing hairy.

COMFIT and CONFITURE.—See under To Confect.

To COMFORT, cūm'-fort, 116, 38: v. a. To strengthen; to enliven; to invigorate; to console.

Com'-fort, s. Support; countenance; consolation; that which gives consolation.

Com'-fort-a-ble, 98, 101: a. Receiving, or susceptible of, comfort; cheerful; dispensing comfort.

Com'-fort-a-bly, ad. With comfort; without despair.

Com'-fort-a-ble-ness, s. State of comfort.

Com'-fort-er, 36: s. One that comforts.

Com'-fort-less, a. Without comfort.

CON'-FOR-TA'-TION, s. The act of strengthening. [Obs.]

COMFREY, cūm'-frēy, 116: s. A medicinal plant.

COMIC. &c.—See under Comedy.

COMITAL, cō-mish'-āl, 147: a. Relating to the Comitia, or assemblies of the Roman people; relating to assemblies.

COMITY, cōm'-ē-ty, 105: s. Courtesy; civility.

COMMA=cōm'-mā, s. Literally, a segment; the point (,) which notes the subordinate causes of a sentence; in music, an enharmonic interval, or the difference between a major and minor semitone; division, distinction.

Com'-ma-tium, 158: s. Conciseness, brevity.

To COMMAND, cōm-mānd', 18, 11: v. a. and s. To govern; to order; to direct to be done; to overlook; to lead as a general:—seu. To have the supreme authority.

Com-mand', 82: s. The right of commanding; power; cogent authority; the act of commanding; the order given; the power of overlooking.

Com-mand'-ing, a. Powerful; dignified in demeanour.

Com-mand'-a-tor-y, a. Having the full force of command.

Com-mand'-er, s. A commandant, (which see lower;) in the navy, a captain not yet posted.

Com-man'-dress, s. A female commandant.

Com-man'-der-y, 129, 105: s. The body of knights of any one order; the revenue, benefice, or house belonging to them.

Com-mand'-ment, s. Mandate, command; authority; precept, law, especially of the decalogue.

COM-MAN-DANT', 23: s. A chief commanding a place or body of troops.

COMMARK=cōm-mark', s. Frontier of a country.

COMMATERIAL, cōm'-mā-tē-ri-āl, 43, 105: a. Consisting of the same matter. See Co-.

Com'-ma-tē-ri-al'-i-ty, s. Participation of the same matter.

COMMATISUR.—See under Comma.

COMMEASURABLE, cōm-mēz'h'-ōr-ā-bl, 18, 120, 147, 101: a. Reducible to the same measure. See Co-.

COM-MEN'-SU-RA-BLE, (-sū-rā-bl, 147) a. Commensurable; that have a common measure.

Com-men'-su-ra-ble-ness, } s. Capacity of having

Com-men'-su-ra-bil'-i-ty, } a common measure, or of being measured by another.

To Com-men'-su-rate, v. a. To reduce to a common measure.

Com-men'-su-rate, a. Reduced to a common measure; equal, coextensive.

Com-men'-su-rate-ly, ad. With the capacity of measuring, or being measured by.

Com-men'-su-ra'-tion, 150, 89: s. Reduction to some common measure; proportion.

To COMMEMORATE, cōm-mēm'-ō-rā-tē, v. a. To call to remembrance by a solemn act.

Com-mem'-ō-ra-tive, a. Tending to preserve remembrance.

Com-mem'-ō-ra'-tion, s. An act of public celebration.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā'-pā; lāw; gūōd; j'ōō, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. made, 171.

wise; a title, by courtesy, to the senior captain, whose three or more ships of war are in company; the leading ship of a fleet of merchantmen.

COMMUNICABLE, cōm'-mōd-ū-lā'-shūn, 86: s. Mutual agreement or measure. See Co.

COMMON=cōm'-mōn, a. ad. and s. Belonging equally to more than one; having no possessor or owner; vulgar, mean, easy to be had; of no rank; of little value; not scarce; public, general, serving the use of all; frequent; usual, ordinary; in grammar, signifying both actively and passively, both masculine and feminine:—ad. Frequently; usually; jointly:—s. An open ground equally used by many persons: Is common, equally to be participated by a certain number; equally or in like manner with another; indiscriminately; in law, a distinct tenure, but with unity of possession.

To COM-mōn, v. n. To have a joint right with others in some common ground; to eat in company.

COM-mōns, 143: s. pl. The common people; the lower house of parliament; food provided at a common table: Ductors' Commons is a college for the professors of the civil law, where the civilians common together.

COM-mōn-ly, 105: ad. Frequently; usually.

COM-mōn-ness, s. The quality or state of being common.

COM-mōn-a-ble, 101: a. Held in common.

COM-mōn-age, 99: s. The right of feeding on a common.

COM-mōn-al-ty, 12, 105: s. The common people.

COM-mōn-er, 36: s. One of the common people; a man not noble; a member of the House of Commons; one having a joint right in common ground; a student of the second rank at Oxford; a prostitute.

COM-mōn-coun'-cil, s. The council of a city or corporate town, empowered to make by-laws for the government of the citizens. Their place of meeting is called the common hall.

COM-mōn-law, s. The unwritten law, as it was generally held before any statute was enacted in parliament to alter the same, and therefore distinguished from statute law.

COM-mōn-pleas, 151: s. One of the king's courts, now held at Westminster, though formerly moveable. All civil cases are or were tried in it, but it has no cognizance of pleas of the crown, and common pleas are all pleas that are not such.

COM-mōn-place, s. and a. This name arises from the common topics laid down by the ancient rhetoricians, from which matter might be found for any discourse; an ordinary topic; a memorandum:—a. Trite; ordinary.

COM-mōn-place'-book, 118: s. A book in which things to be remembered are ranged under general heads.

COM-mōn-weal, 85: s. The public good.

COM-mōn-wealth, (-wēlth) s. The commonweal; an established form of civil life; the public; a government in which the supreme power is lodged in the people.

COM-mune, s. The French word answering to Common in English. It frequently occurs as the name of the lowest subdivision of the country introduced at the Revolution. A commune is sometimes a single town, and sometimes a union of several villages. All the considerable cities are divided into several communes.

COM-mu'-ni-ty, 18, 105: s. Common possession; the commonwealth; the body politic.

To COM-mune, 81: v. n. To impart sentiments, or make them common to two or more; to converse; to talk together.

COM-mu'-nion, (cōm'-mūn'-yūn, 146) s. Fellowship; intercourse between two or more persons; common possession; interchange of transactions; union in the common worship of any church; the body of people who so unite. See also lower under Communion.

To COM-mu'-ni-cate, 18, 105: v. a. To impart; to participate; to reveal;—new. To have something in common with another; to partake of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Hence, Communication, &c.

COM-mu'-ni-ca-ble, 98, 101: a. That may become of common possession; that may be imparted.

COM-mu'-ni-ca-ble-ness, } s. The quality of being COM-mu'-ni-ca-bil'-i-ty, } communicable; capability of being imparted.

COM-mu'-ni-ca-tive, 105: a. Inclined to make advantages common; liberal of knowledge.

COM-mu'-ni-ca-tive-ness, s. The quality of being communicative.

COM-mu'-ni-ca-tor-y, a. Imparting knowledge.

COM-mu'-ni-cant, s. A partaker; (see the neuter sense of the verb communicate) especially, a partaker of the Lord's Supper.

COM-mu'-ni-on, s. The celebration of the Lord's Supper.

COMMUNITION, cōm'-mō-nish'-ūn, 89: s. Advice with warning; (see Co.) instruction.

COM-mōn-i-tive, 18, 105: a. Advising; warning.

COMMORANT=cōm'-mō-rānt, 12: a. Dwelling with fixed residence; (see Co.) ordinarily residing.

COM-mo-rance, or COM-mo-ran-cy, s. Residence.

COM-mo-ra-tion, 89: s. A staying or tarrying.

COMMORIENT, cōm'-mōr'-ē-ent, 47, 105: a. Dying at the same time with. See Co.

COMMOTION, cōm-mō'-shūn, 89: s. Motion of parts with parts; (see Co.) agitation; tumult; disorder.

COM-mo-tion-er, 36: s. An exciter of commotion.

To COM-mov'e, (cōm-mōv', 107) v. a. To put in motion; to agitate; to unsettle. [Thomson.]

To COMMUNE, COMMUNICATE, &c.—See under Common.

To COMMUTE=cōm-mūt', 18: v. a. and n. To exchange; to buy off, or ransom one obligation by another; (see Co.)—new. To bargain for exemption.

COM-mu'-ta-tive, 105: a. Relating to exchange.

COM-mu'-ta-tive-ly, ad. In the way of exchange.

COM-mu'-ta-ble, 101: a. That may be exchanged.

COM-mu'-ta-bil'-i-ty, s. Capability of exchange.

COM-mu'-ta-tion, 89: s. Change; alteration; ransom.

COMMUTUAL, cōm-mū'-tū-āl, 18, 147: a. Jointly mutual; (see Co.) reciprocal.

COMPACT=cōm'-pāct, s. A mutual contract; (see Co.) an accord; an agreement; anciently, structure, compacture. Originally, the noun, as well as all the following words, was accented on the second syllable.

To COM-pact, 18, 83: v. a. To join together with firmness; to consolidate; to league.

COM-pact, a. Firm; solid; close; held together.

COM-pact-ly, 105: ad. Closely; densely; neatly.

COM-pact-ness, s. Firmness; close completeness.

COM-pac-ted-ly, ad. Closely.

COM-pac-ted-ness, s. Firmness; density.

COM-pac-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Structure.

COM-pa'-ges, (cōm-pā'-gēz, [Lat.] 169) s. A system or structure of many parts united.

COM-pag-i-na'-tion, 64, 89: s. Union; structure.

COMPANY, cūm'-pā-nēy, 116, 98, 105: s. Persons assembled together; fellowship; a band; a society; a body corporate; subdivision of a regiment, (this is said to be the parent sense: To bear company, To keep company, to associate with: the latter phrase also signifies to frequent assemblies.

To COM-pa-ny, v. a. and n. [Obs.] To accompany; to be companion to:—new. To associate one's self with; to be gay; to have sexual intercourse with.

COM-pa-na-ble, a. Companionable. This word is obs. and its derivatives are therefore omitted.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Verbs: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pō'-pā; lāu; gūōd; j'ōō, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. mate, 171.

- COM-PAN-ION, (cōm-pān'-yōn, 18, 92, 146) s. One with whom a man frequently keeps company; a partner; an associate: in old authors, it is often a word of contempt in the sense of a companion for any body; a term applied to some knights as a distinction from the knight's commanders of the same order. See S.
- Com-pan-ion-a-ble, (cōm-pān'-yōn-d-bl) a. Social; agreeable.
- Com-pan-ion-a-bly, ad. In a social manner.
- Com-pan-ion-a-ble-ness, s. Sociableness.
- Com-pan-ion-ship, s. Company; fellowship.
- To COMPARE=cōm-pār', 18: v. a. To set things together materially or in contemplation in order to ascertain for one's self or show to others how far they agree or disagree; in Spenser this word is found in the Latin sense of To get, to procure; and also as a neuter verb.
- Com-pare', s. The state of being compared; comparison; simile, similitude.
- Com-par-er, 41, 36: s. He who compares.
- Com-par-a-tive, (cōm-pār'-d-īv, 129, 98, 105) a. Estimated by comparison; having the power of comparing; in grammar, expressing more or less, as distinguished from positive and superlative.
- Com-par-a-tive-ly, ad. In a state of comparison.
- Com-par-i-son, (-sōn, colloq. sn, 114) s. The act of comparing; the state of being compared; a comparative estimate; a simile in writing or speaking; the formation of an adjective in its degree as stronger, stronger.
- COM-PAR-A-BLE, (cōm-pār'-d-bl, 86) That may be compared; being of equal regard.
- Com-par-a-bly, ad. Of equal regard.
- Com-pa-rates, s. pl. In logic or rhetoric, the two things compared with one another.
- To COMPART=cōm-part', 18, 33: v. a. To divide into parts; to mark out a general design into various parts and subdivisions.
- Com-part-ment, or Com-part-ment, s. Division; separate part of a design.
- Com-part, 81: s. A member. [Obs.]
- Com-par-ti-tion, (-tish'-ūn, 89) s. The act of dividing; a part divided off.
- To COMPASS, cūm-pāss, v. a. To encircle, to environ; to walk round; to besiege; to grasp, to enclose in the arms; to obtain, to procure, to attain; to go about to perform, but in mind only, to contrive.
- Com-pass, s. A circle; grasp; space; enclosure; extent of key in singing; the magnetic apparatus for steering ships by; the instrument for describing circles, generally called compasses.
- COMPASSION, cōm-pāsh'-ūn, 18, 90: s. A suffering with another; (see Co.) pity; commiseration.
- To Com-pas-sion, v. a. To be compassionate. [Obs.]
- Com-pas-sion-a-ble, a. Deserving of compassion.
- To Com-pas-sion-ate, v. a. To pity; to commiserate.
- Com-pas-sion-ate, a. Inclined to pity; merciful.
- Com-pas-sion-ate-ly, ad. Mercifully; tenderly.
- Com-pas-sion-ate-ness, s. The state or quality of being compassionate.
- COMPATERNITY, cōm-pā-ter'-né-tēty, 105: s. The state of being a godfather or father with another. See Co.
- COMPATIBLE, cōm-pāt'-ē-bl, a. That may exist with; (see Co.) suitable; fit; consistent; agreeable.
- Com-pat-i-bly, ad. Fitly; suitably.
- Com-pat-i-bil-ness, } s. Consistency; the quality
- Com-pat-i-bil-i-ty, } or power of coexisting with something else.
- COMPATIENT, cōm-pā-shēnt, 18, 90: a. Suffering together.—See Co.
- COMPATRIOT, cōm-pā-trē-ōt, 18, 105: s. and a. One of the same country;—a. Of the same country.—See Co.
- COMPEER, cōm-pē'r, 18: s. An equal; a mate.—See Co.
- To Com-peer', v. a. To match; to be equal with. [Shaks.]
- To COMPEL=cōm-pēl', 18: v. a. To force to some act; to oblige; to constrain.
- Com-pel'-ler, 36: s. He that compels.
- Com-pel'-la-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be compelled.
- Com-pel'-la-bly, ad. By compulsion.
- COM-PUL-SION, (cōm-pūl'-shūn, 18, 90) s. The act of compelling; force; violence suffered.
- Com-pul-sive, (-cīv, 152, 105) } a. Having the
- Com-pul-sive-ness, 98, 105: } quality of com-
- Com-pul-sive-ly, 98: } peling. [The latter is little used.]
- Com-pul-sive-ly, 98: } ad. By force; by violence
- Com-pul-sive-ly, } [The latter is the least used.]
- Com-pul-sive-ness, s. Force; compulsion.
- Com-pul-sor-y, 129: } a. Having the power or
- Com-pul-sor-y, } quality of compelling. [The
- Com-pul-sor-y, ad. By violence.
- COMPENDIOUS, cōm-pēn'-dē-us, 18, 105; 146, 120: a. Short; summary; abridged; comprehensive.
- Com-pen-di-ous-ly, ad. Shortly; summarily.
- Com-pen-di-ous-ness, s. Shortness; brevity.
- Com-pen-di-um, } s. An abridgement; a sum-
- Com-pend, 81: } mary; an epitome; a work con-
- Com-pend, 81: } taining the general principles of a larger work.
- Compendious, a. Compendiously, s. and To Com-pend, n. a. are found only in old authors.
- To COMPENSATE=cōm-pēn'-sāte, 18: v. a. and n. To recompense; to make amends for;—neu. To make amends.
- Com-pen'-sa-ble, a. Susceptible of recompense.
- Com-pen'-sa-tive, 105: a. Making amends.
- Com-pen'-si-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Serving to compensate.
- To Com-pense', v. a. To compensate. [Obs.]
- Com-pen-sa-tion, 89: s. Recompense; amends.
- To COMPERENDINATE, cōm-pēr'-ēn'-dē-nāte, v. n. To delay.
- To COMPLETE=cōm-pēt', 18: v. n. To seek or strive for a thing with another.—See Co.
- Com-pet-i-tor, 92, 101, 38: s. A rival; an opponent.
- Com-pet-i-tor-y, a. Pursuing the same object.
- Com-pe-ti-tion, 89: s. Rivalry; contest; double claim.
- COM-PE-TENT, a. Fit, suitable, adapted, convenient; which meaning has been derived from that of the foregoing words by considering fitness to be a com-pletion of means to some one end.
- Com-pe-tent-ly, ad. Adequately; suitably.
- Com-pe-tence, } s. Fitness, suitableness; but
- Com-pe-tency, } this primary meaning is giving
- Com-pe-tency, } way to one derived from its sufficiency, &c. or such a
- Com-pe-tency, } fit quantity as may furnish the conveniences of life
- Com-pe-tency, } without superfluity; power or capacity of a judge or
- Com-pe-tency, } court to take cognizance of an affair.
- COM-PET-I-BLE, 105, 101: a. Suitable to; con-
- Com-pet-i-ble, } sistent with. This is now written compatible.
- Com-pet-i-ble-ness, s. Suitableness; fitness.
- To COMPILE, cōm-pīl', v. a. To form literary

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

works by collecting parts or passages from various authors; to write; to compose.

Com-pi-ler, s. He that compiles; in old language, Compiler.

Com-pile-ment, s. The act of compiling.

Com-pi-la-tion, 105, 89: s. A collection from various authors; a book made up by the scissors.

COMPLACENT=cōm-plā-cēnt, 18: a. Civil; affable.

Com-pla-cent-ly, ad. In a soft or easy manner.

Com-pla-cence, } s. Pleasure, satisfaction; civility;
 Com-pla-cen-cy, } complaisance; mildness.

Com-pla-cen-tial, (-sh'āl, 147) 2: a. Accommodating.

Com-plai-sant, (cōm-plā-zānt, 100, 151) a. Seeking to please by exterior manners; civil, courteous, polite.

Com-plai-sant-ly, 85: ad. Civilly.

Com-plai-sant-ness, s. Complaisance. [Little used.]

Com-plai-sance, s. Civility; courteousness.

To COMPLAIN=cōm-plān, 18: v. n. and a. To utter expressions of grief; of censure; of uneasiness; to lament; to charge; to murmur; to inform against;—act. [Unusual.] To lament; to bewail.

Com-plain-er, 36: s. One who complains generally.

Com-plain-ont, 12: s. One who complains in a legal sense; one who urges a suit.

Com-plain-a-ble, 101: a. That may be complained of.

Com-plain-ful, 117: a. Full of complaint. [Obs.]

Com-plain-ing, s. Expression of grief or injury.

Com-plaint, s. Representation of pains or injuries; the cause of complaint; a malady; remonstrance against; information against.

COMPLAISANCE, &c.—See under Complacent.

To COMPLANATE=cōm-plā-nāte, } v. a. To
 To COMPLANE=cōm-plān, 18: } level part with part.—See Co.

To COMPLETE=cōm-plēt, 18: v. a. Literally, to fill up; (See Co.): to perfect; to finish.

Com-plete, a. Full; perfect; finished; ended.

Com-plete-ly, ad. Fully; perfectly.

Com-plete-ment, s. The act of completing.

Com-plete-ness, s. Perfection.

Com-ple-tion, 89: s. Accomplishment; act of fulfilling; utmost height; perfect state.

Com-ple-tive, 105: a. Making complete.

Com-ple-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Fulfilling.

Com-PLÉ-MENT, s. That which completes something else, as 25 with respect to 65, 90 being the number to be completed; also the full number; as a ship's complement; that is the full number required to man her.

Com-plé-men-tal, a. That fills up; that completes a quantity or number.

Com-plé-tor-y, s. The last or complemental prayer of a breviary or set service.

Com-PLIN, (-plin, 105) s. The complotory.

COMPLEX, cōm-plēcks, 154: a. and s. Intricate, complicated; of many parts; not simple;—s. [Obs.] Assemblage; complication.

Com-plex-ly, 105: ad. In a complex manner.

Com-plex-ness, s. Complexity.

Com-plex-ed-ness, 18: s. Complication; involution of many parts in one integral.

Com-plex-i-ty, 105: s. The state of being complex.

Com-plex-ure, (-plēck-sh'oor, 154, 147) s. The involution or complication of one thing with another.

Com-plex-ion, (-plēck-shūn, 154, 147) s. Complication; particularly that complication of parts or elements, out of which arise the temperament, habitude, or disposition of the body, and with it the colour of the skin.—See the next word.

COM-PLEX-ION, s. The colour of the skin; the temperament, habitude, or natural disposition of the body.

Com-plex-ion-al, a. Depending on the complexion or temperament.

Com-plex-ion-al-ly, ad. By complexion.

Com-plex-ion-ar-y, 129, 105: a. Pertaining to the complexion, or the care of it.

To COM-PLI-CATE, 105: v. a. Literally, to interweave, to fold and twist together; to entangle; to join; to involve.

Com-pli-cate, a. Compounded of a multiplicity of parts; complex.

Com-pli-cate-ly, ad. In a complicated manner.

Com-pli-cate-ness, s. Intricacy; perplexity.

Com-pli-ca-tion, 89: s. The involving of one thing into another; the state of being involved; the integral of many things involved.

COM-PLICE, (-plīss, 105) s. One involved with another in crime: now written Accomplice. [Shaks.]

COMPLIANCE, &c.—See under To Comply.

To COMPLICATE, &c.—See above under Complex.

COMPLIMENT, cōm-plē-mēt, s. An act or expression of civility, usually understood to mean less than it declares. This word is etymologically the same as complement, but it comes to us from the French, and has now a distinct meaning.

To Com-pli-ment, v. a. and n. To praise; to flatter; to congratulate; to manifest kindness or respect for by a present;—new. To pass compliments.

Com-pli-men-tal, 12: a. Expressive of respect.

Com-pli-men-tal-ly, ad. In the nature of a compliment; also, Complimentary & Complimentarily.

Com-pli-men-ter, 36: s. One who compliments.

COMPLINE.—See under To Complete.

To COMPLORE=cōm-plōr, 18, 47: v. n. To lament together.—See Co.

COMLOT=cōm-plōt, s. A plotting together; a joint plot.—See Co.

To COM-plot, 18, 83: v. n. To form a plot.

Com-plot-ter, 36: s. A conspirator.

Com-plot-ment, s. A conspiracy.

To COMPLY=cōm-plī, 18: v. n. To yield accord; to yield performance.

Com-pli-ance, s. The act of yielding; submission.

Com-pli-ant, a. Yielding; bending; civil.

Com-pli-a-ble, a. That can bend or yield.

Com-pli-er, 36: s. One of yielding temper.

COMPONENT.—See under To Compose.

To COMPORT, cōm-pōrt, 18, 130, 47: v. n. and a. To agree; to suit; to bear;—act. To endure; to behave.

Com-port-a-ble, 101: a. Consistent.

Com-port-ance, 12: s. Behaviour; bearing.

Com-port-ment, s. Mien; demeanour.

Com-port, 81: s. Behaviour; conduct.

COM-PO-SI-TION, 89: s. A bringing together. (See Co.) an assemblage.

⚡ This word exhibits the original literal meaning of the whole class.

To COMPOSE, cōm-pōz, 18, 137: v. a. Literally, to put together; (See Co.): to form a compound; to join part to part as a literary author; as a musical author; as a printer; &c.—See also below Component.

Com-po-ser, 36: s. Generally, he that composes; specially and usually, a musical author.

Com-pos-i-tor, 38: s. He that ranges and adjusts the types in printing.

Com-pos-i-tive, (-tīv, 105) a. Compounded, or having the power of compounding.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

- Com-po-si'-tion, (côm'-pô-zish'-ün, 89) s.
Generally, the act of composing; the thing composed; specially, the arrangement of various figures in a picture; a literary work; a musical work; the act of setting types in the composing stick; a mixture or mass employed by workmen in the arts; synthesis as opposed to analysis in logic, in mathematics, in chemistry, &c.; among the old writers, orderly disposition, congruity.—See also lower under To Compound.
- Com-po'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. Among the old writers, the same as composition; see its modern sense lower.
- Com-poi'-ite, (côm-pôz'-it, 105) a. Compounded, applied especially to the last of the five orders in architecture, which is compounded of the Ionic and Corinthian; and to such numbers as are compounded of other numbers than unity; as 6, which is compounded of two, or of three; not simple, not single.
- Com-post, (côm-pôst, 18) s. A mixture for manuring the ground; any mixture or composition, particularly one used for plastering the exterior of houses, usually called Com-po.
- To Com-post', v. a. To manure; to plaster.
- Com-pos-ure, (-tûr, 147) s. Soil; manure. [Shaks.]
- Com-po'-nent, a. and s. That goes to constitute the compound body.—s. An elementary part of a compound.
- To Com-pose, (côm-pôze) v. n. To put disturbed parts together, or in order; to settle, to quiet, to allay, to adjust.—See also above.
- Com-posed', 114: part. a. Calm; serious.
- Com-po'-sed-ly, ad. Calmly; sedately.
- Com-po'-sed-ness, s. Sedateness; tranquillity.
- Com-po'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. Sedateness.—See also above.
- To Com-pound, (côm-pownd', 18) 31: v. a. and n.
To mingle; to combine; to adjust: the old authors also use it in many of the other senses of To Compose;—adv. To come to terms of agreement; to bargain in the lump.
- Com-pound'-a-ble, a. That can be compounded.
- Com-pound'-er, 36: s. One who makes a compound; one who compounds for a debt; one who compounds a felony, that is, agrees with a felon to let him escape; one who brings parties to terms; one who, at a university, pays extraordinary fees proportioned to his estate for the degrees he takes.
- Com-pound, 83: a. and s. Formed out of many ingredients; not simple; composed of two or more words.—s. The mass or whole formed of many ingredients or parts.
- Com-po-si'-tion, 89: s. An agreement to receive or pay a debt in lieu of the whole; the part so accepted.—See its other senses above.
- COMPOSSIBLE, côm-pôz'-sê-bl, 18, 105, 101: a. That can exist with another thing.—See Co.
- COMPOTATION, côm-pô-tâ'-shûn, 89: s. A drinking or tipping together.—See Co. [tippler.]
- Com'-po-ta'-tor, or Com-po'-tor, s. A fellow
- To COMPREHEND=côm'-pê'-hend'. 85: v. a. Literally, to hold as with one grasp: (See Co.) to comprise; to include; to contain in the mind; to understand; to conceive.
- Com'-pre-hen'-s-i-ble, (-cê-bl, 105, 101) a. That may be comprehended; intelligible. Comprehensibility, s.
- Com'-pre-hen'-s-i-bly, ad. With great embrace of comprehension, or signification.
- Com'-pre-hen'-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Embracing much; capacious.
- Com'-pre-hen'-sive-ly, ad. With comprehension.
- Com'-pre-hen'-sive-ness, s. The quality of including, or of understanding much.
- Com'-pre-hen'-sion, (-shûn, 147) s. The act or quality of comprising or containing; inclusion; summary; epitome; knowledge; capacity.
- Com'-pre-hen'-sor, s. One perfected in knowledge. [Obs.]
- To COM-PRISE, (-prîze, 137) v. a. To contain; to include.
- Com-prî'-sal, (-zâi, 137) s. The act of comprising.
- To COMPRESS=côm'-prêss', 18: v. a. To force into a narrow compass; to condense; to embrace.
- Com-pres'-s-i-ble, 105, 101: a. That may be compressed; yielding to pressure.
- Com-pres'-s-i-ble-ness, s. Capability of being compressed.
- Com-pres'-s-i-bil'-i-ty, s. Pressed.
- Com-pres'-sive, 105: a. Able to compress.
- Com-pre'-sure, (-prêsh'-oor, 147) s. The act or force of bodies pressing together.—See Co.
- Com-pres'-sion, (prêsh'-ûn, 147) s. Act of compressing.
- COM-press, s. A bolster of soft linen cloth used in surgery.
- COMPRINT=côm'-prînt, s. A surreptitious printing of another bookseller's copy. (See Co.) If used as a v. b., the accent is on the last syllable. Principles, 81.
- To COMPRISE.—See under To Comprehend.
- To COMPROBATE=côm'-prô-bât, v. n. To concur in proof.—See Co.
- Com'-pro-ba'-tion, 89: s. Full proof; attestation.
- COMPROMISE, côm'-prô-mîze, 151: s. A mutual promise (See Co) of parties at difference to refer their controversies to arbitrators; a compact in which concessions are made on each side.
- To Com'-pro-mise, v. a. and n. To adjust by mutual concessions; to pledge or engage by some act or step, and hence, to put to hazard.—an application of the word borrowed from French usage;—adv. [Unusual.] To accord; to agree.
- Com'-pro-mis'-er, (-zer, 151) s. One who compromises.
- Com'-pro-mis'-e-ri-al, (-sôr'-ê-âl, 90, 47) a. Relating to a compromise.
- To Com'-pro-mit, v. a. To pledge; to promise. See the second sense of To Compromise, which sense ought perhaps to be expressed only by the verb in this latter form; and such is the usage of American, but not generally of English writers.
- COMPROVINCIAL, côm'-prô-vîn'-sh'âl, 90: a. Belonging to the same province.—See Co.
- COMPT, côm't, 156: a. Neat; spruce. [Obs.]
- Compt'-ly, ad. Neatly. Compt'-ness, s. Neatness. [Obs.]
- COMPT, Compt, &c.—See To Count, &c., the latter being always the pronunciation, and in modern books, the spelling also. The same remark applies to the following word.
- To COMPTROL, &c.—See To Control, &c.
- COMPULSIVE, &c.—See under To Compel.
- COMPUNCT, côm-pûngkt', 18, 158: a. Pricked, stimulated. [Obs.]
- Com-punc'-tive, (-tiv, 105) a. Causing remorse.
- Com-punc'-tion, 89: s. The act of pricking; remorse.
- Com-punc'-tious, (-shûs, 105) a. Repentant; sorrowful.
- COMPURGATION, côm'-pur-ga'-shûn, 89: s. A joint purifying or clearing: (See Co.) the practice, in law, of justifying any man's veracity by the testimony of another.
- Com'-pur-ga'-tor, 38: s. One that by oath justifies another's innocence; a conjurer.
- To COMPUTE=côm-pûte', 18: v. a. To reckon to calculate; to count.
- Com-pu'-ter, s. A reckoner. Computist is obs.
- Com-pu'-ta-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be computed.
- To COM-PU-TATE, v. a. To compute. [Obs.]

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Com'-pu-ta'-tion, 89: s. Act of reckoning; estimate.

COMRADE, côm'-râd, 116, 99: s. A companion.

CON: An abbreviation of Contra, against; quite distinct from the prefix Con-, which see at Co-. To dispute pro and con, is to dispute for and against.

To CON=côn, v. a. To know; [Obs.] to study; to commit to memory.

CON-AMORE, côn-d-môre'-ây, [Ital.] 170: ad. With predilection; with inclination.

To CONCAMERATE=côn-câm'-êr-âte, v. a. To arch over.—See Co-, and Camerate.

To CONCATENATE, côn-cât'-ê-nâte, v. a. To link together.—See Co-

Con-cât'-e-na'-tion, 89: s. A series of links; an uninterrupted succession.

CONCAVE, côm'-câve, 158: a. Hollow without angles, opposed to convex; hollow, generally:—s. A hollow; a cavity.

Con'-cave-ness, s. Hollowness.

Con'-ca-va'-tion, 89: s. The act of making concave.

Con-ca'-vous, 120: a. Concave; hollow.

Con-ca'-vous-ly, 105: ad. With hollowness.

Con-cav'-i-ty, 92, 105: s. Internal surface of a hollow spherical or spheroidal body.

Con-ca'-vo-Con'-cave, a. Concave on both sides.

Con-ca'-vo-Con'-vex, 154: a. Concave on one side and convex on the other.

To CONCEAL=côn-sêal', v. a. To hide; to secrete.

Con-ceal'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be concealed.

Con-ceal'-ed-ness, s. Privacy; obscurity.

Con-ceal'-er, 36: s. He that conceals.

Con-ceal'-ing, s. A hiding or keeping close.

Con-ceal'-ment, s. The act of hiding; privacy; hiding place; retreat.

To CONCEDE=côn-sêd', v. a. and n. To yield; to admit; to grant.

CON-CESS-IVE, 103: a. Implying concession.

Con-cess'-ive-ly, ad. By way of concession.

Con-cess'-ion, (-cêsh'-ûn, 147) s. A granting or yielding; a grant; the thing yielded.

Con-cess'-ion-ar-y, 129, 105: a. Given by indulgence.

CONCEIT, &c.—See under the next word.

To CONCEIVE=côn-sêv', 103: v. a. and n. Literally, to receive into, to take and retain; appropriately, to receive into the womb and breed; hence, figuratively, to form an idea in the mind or imagine; to receive a suggested thought into the mind, or understanding:—aux. To become pregnant; to think; to have an idea of.

Con-ceive'-a-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be conceived.

Con-ceive'-a-bly, ad. In a conceivable manner.

Con-ceive'-a-ble-ness, s. The quality of being conceivable.

CON-CEPT-A-CLE, s. A receptacle; a follicle.

Con-cept'-ti-ble, a. That may be conceived.

Con-cept'-tive, 103: a. Capable of conceiving.

Con-cept'-tion, 89: s. Act of conceiving; the thing conceived; notion; image in the mind; purpose; thought.

Con-cept'-tions, (-shûs, 90) a. Fruitful; pregnant. [Obs.]

CON-CEPT', (côn-sêp'te') s. Conception; fancy; imagination; opinion; idea; pleasant fancy; fantastical, affected, or forced allusion; for which the Italian word Conceito, pl. Concetti, is often used. To be out of conceit with, to be no longer pleased with. See also lower.

To Con-cept', v. a. To conceive; to imagine.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Con-cept', v. a. To conceive; to imagine.

Con-cept', v. a. To conceive; to imagine.

Con-cept', v. a. To conceive; to imagine.

Con-cept', v. a. To conceive; to imagine.

Con-cept'-ed, a. Endowed with fancy. [Obs.] See lower.

Con-cept'-ed-ly, ad. Whimsically. [Obs.]

CON-CERT', s. Opinionative pride. See also above.

Con-cept'-ed, a. Ridiculously opinionative.

Con-cept'-ed-ly, ad. With foolish vanity.

Con-cept'-ed-ness, s. Pride; opinionativeness.

CONCENT=côn-sên't, s. Harmony; consistency.

Con-cen'-tu-al, (-tô-âl, 147) a. Harmonious.

To CONCENTRATE=côn-sên'-trâte, 18: v. a.

To drive into the centre, or into a narrow compass; to bring into closer union, including often the effect produced of increased power.

Con-cen'-tra'-tion, 89: s. The act of concentrating; the state of being concentrated.

To CON-CERN'-TRE, (-tur, 159) v. n. and a. To tend to a common centre:—act. To direct to a centre. See Co-.

Con-cen'-tric, 88: a. Having a common centre.

Con-cen'-tri-col, } a. Having a common centre.

CONCEPTACLE, CONCEPTIBLE, &c.—See under To Conceive.

To CONCERN=côn-cern', 35: v. a. To belong to; to affect; to interest.

Con-cern'-ed, 114: part. a. Interested; anxious; moved at heart.

Con-cern', 81: s. Business; affair; interest; care.

Con-cern'-ing, prep. Relating to.

Con-cern'-ment, s. Concern; care; business; interposition; emotion of mind.

To CONCERT=côn-sert', v. a. and n. Literally, to strive in union or for one purpose; (see Co-:) to settle; to contrive; to adjust:—aux. To consult; to contrive.

Con-cept'-ted, part. a. Planned. See also lower.

Con'-cert, s. Communication of designs; accordance.

CON'-CERT, s. A symphony of musical parts or players; an entertainment which consists of a concert.

Con-cept'-to, [Ital.] 170: s. A piece of music of which the harmonies or parts are essential, as distinguished from melody alone. Concertante, see Supp.

Con-cept'-ted, a. Composed with a view to harmony of parts, and not to melody alone.

CON-CESS-ATION, 89: s. A mutual striving; not exactly the literal sense of the rest of the class. Because this word signifies striving against each other. [Obs.]

Con-cept'-ta-tive, a. Contentious; quarrelsome.

CONCESSION, CONCESSIVE, &c.—See under To Concede.

CONCH, côm'gk, 158, 161: s. A shell.

Con-chil'-i-ous, a. Belonging to shells.

Con-chol'-o-gy, 87: s. The doctrine or science of shells.

Con-chom'-e-ter, 87: s. An instrument for measuring shells.

Con'-chy-la'-ceous, (côm'gk'-lâ'-sh'ûs) a. Pertaining to shells; resembling a shell.

CON'-CHOID, s. A mathematical curve of curious properties, suggested by the curve line of certain shells.

CON'-CHITE, s. A petrified shell.

CONCILIABLE, CONCILIAR.—Words from Council, with which they are in meaning connected, though etymologically also with the following words.

To CONCILIATE, côn-sil'-ê-âte=côn-sil'-yâte, 146: v. a. To win; to gain; to reconcile.

Con-cil'-i-a'-tor, 38: s. A peacemaker.

Con-cil'-i-a'-tor-y, 146, 98, 129, 105: a. Tending to reconciliation. Conciliar, a. Relating to a council.

Con-cil'-i-a'-tion, s. The act of gaining or reconciling. Conciliable, a. A little council.

CONCINNOUS, côn-sîn'-nûs, 120: a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-nous, a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-nous, a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-nous, a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-nous, a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-nous, a. Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Con-cin'-ni-ty, s. Fitness, neatness. It has been used to signify a jingling of words.

CONCINATION, cōn'-shē-ō-nā'-tor, 147, 38: s. A preacher.

Con'-ci-o-na'-tor-y, (-tōr-ēy, 129) a. Used in preaching or discourse to public assemblies.

CONCISE=cōn'-sīc', 152: a. Brief; short.

Con-cise'-ly, 105: ad. Briefly; shortly.

Con-cise'-ness, s. Brevity; shortness.

Con-cis'-ion, (cōn'-sīzh'-ūn, 90) s. Cutting off; excision: the literal meaning of the whole class is included in the meaning of this word.

→ The s would be sounded sh if the unvocalized s of the previous words were regarded; but the pronunciation properly regards the relationship to incision, &c.

To CONCITE=cōn'-sīt', v. a. To excite. [Obs.]

Con'-ci-ta'-tion, 105, 89: s. A stirring up.

CONCLAMATION, cōng'-clā-mā'-shūn, 158, 89: s. An outcry, or shout of many together. See Co.

CONCLAVE, cōng'-clāv', 158: s. Literally, that which is shut up with a key, a hall or place in which an affair that concerns the public is privately discussed and determined; particularly, the place in which the cardinals elect the pope.

To CONCLUDE, cōn'-clūd', 109: v. a. and n. To shut; to include; to collect or infer from premises; to determine; to end; to stop or restrain as by a final determination. —n. n. To end; to infer; to determine.

Con-clu'-der, a. One that concludes.

Con-clu'-dent, a. Decisive.

Con-clu'-dence, s. Inference; logical deduction.

Con-clu'-ding-ly, ad. Conclusively.

Con-clu'-si-ble, a. Determinable.

Con-clu'-sive, (-cīv, 152, 105) a. Final; decisive; regularly consequential.

Con-clu'-sive-ly, ad. Decisively; unanswerably.

Con-clu'-sive-ness, s. Power of determining the opinion; state of being conclusive.

CON-CLU'-SION, (cōn'-cl'ō-zhūn, 147) s. The end or close; the determination; consequence or inference; event; in Shakespeare, conclusion of thought.

To CONCOAGULATE, cōng'-cō-āg'-ū-lāte, 158: v. a. To congeal one thing with another. See Co.

Con-co-ag'-u-lā'-tion, 89: s. A coagulation in which different bodies are joined in one mass.

To CONCOCT=cōn'-cōck', v. a. To digest; to purify or refine by heat; to ripen.

Con-coc'-tive, 105: a. Having a concocting power.

Con-coc'-tion, 89: s. Digestion in the stomach, or the turning of food to chyle; maturation by heat.

CONCOLOUR, cōn'-cū'-or, 116, 38: a. Agreeing in colour with others of the kind. See Co.

CONCOMITANT, cōn'-cōm'-tānt, 12: a. and s. Accompanying; concurrent; (See Co:)—s. A person or thing collaterally connected Con-com'-i-tant-ly, 105: ad. Concurrently.

Con-com'-i-tance, } s. State of subsistence or con-

Con-com'-i-tan-cy, } nection with something else.

To Con-com'-i-tate, v. n. To be concomitant. [Obs.]

CONCORD, cōng'-cārd, 158, 38: s. Agreement; peace; union; a compact; harmony; grammatical agreement of words which relate to each other.

Con-cor'-dant, 12: a. Agreeable; agreeing.

Con-cor'-dan-cy, s. Agreement.

Con-cor'-dance, s. Concordance; formerly the same as concord in grammar; appropriately and commonly, a dictionary which brings all the passages of the bible together that contain the words alphabetically arranged in it.

Con-cor'-dat, s. A compact; a convention.

To CONCORPORATE=cōn'-cor'-pō-rāt', v. a.

and n. To unite in one mass or body. See Co.

The sign n is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consomant/s: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision. 165: āin, 166: thēn, 166.

CONCORP'-oral, 12: a. Of the same body.

CONCORP'-po-ra'-tion, 89: s. Union in one mass.

CONCOURSE, cōng'-cōurse=cōng'-cōarse, 158, 47: s. The confluence of many; the multitude assembled; the point of junction.

CONCREMATION, cōng'-crē-mā'-shūn, 158, 89: s. The act of burning many things together. See Co.

CONCREMENT, CONCRESCENCE, &c.—

See in the next class.

To CONCRETE=cōn'-crēt', v. n. and a. To coalesce into one mass; to grow with inherent qualities, (see Co.) or be so united with them as one thing, that no separation can be made except mentally; this sense belongs to the verb neuter, and extends only to some of the related words:—ad. To form by concretion.

Con-cré'-ment, s. Coagulation.

Con-cré'-ture, (-tūrt, 147) s. A mass formed by concretion.

CONCRE'-tion, 89: s. The act of concreting; the mass formed by the coaction of separate particles.

CON-CRÉTE, (cōng'-crēt, 81, 158) a. and s. Formed by concretion; not abstract, not mentally separated, as a quality not separated from its subject:—s. A mass concreated; a compound; the whole subject taken with that in which it inheres; as a man; or the inherer in distinction from what it inheres; as the reason of man, when stated or thought of separately from man.

CON-CRÉ-ment, s. A mass formed by concretion.

CON-CRÉS'-cence, s. The act of growing by spontaneous union, or the coalescence of separate particles.

CON-CRÉS'-ci-ble, 105, 101: a. Capable of concreting.

CONCUBINE, cōng'-cū-bīn, 158: s. A woman kept by a man for cohabitation, but not his wife.

Con-cu'-bi-nage, 105, 99: s. The act or state of living together as man and wife without being married.

Con-cu'-bi-nate, s. Fornication. [Obs.]

To CONCULATE=cōn'-cū'-cāt, v. a. To tread or trample under foot.

Con'-cul-ca'-tion, 158, 89: s. A trampling upon.

CONCUPISCENT=cōn'-cū'-pīs-cēt, a. Li- bidious.

Con-cu'-pīs-cence, s. Lust; carnal appetite.

Con-cu'-pī-cen'-tial, (-shāl, a. Relating to concupiscence.

Con-cu'-pī-sci-ble, 105, 59, 101: a. Inclining to the enjoyment of pleasure.

To CONCŪR=cōn'-cūr', 39: v. n. To meet in one point; to agree; to contribute with joint power. (See Co.)

Con-cūr'-rent, 129, a. and s. Acting in conjunction; uniting:—s. A joint or contributory cause.

Con-cūr'-rent-ly, 105: ad. Unitedly.

Con-cūr'-rence, s. Union; combination; joint action; help; equal claim.

CONCUSSION, cōn'-cūsh'-ūn, 90: s. The act of shaking; agitation; the state of being shaken.

Con-cus'-sive, (-cīv, 103) a. Having the power of shaking.

Con-cus'-sa'-tion, 158, 89: s. Violent agitation.

To CONDEMN, cōn'-dēm', 156: v. a. To find guilty; to doom to punishment; to censure; to blame.

Con-dem'-d, (-dēm'd, 114) a. Adjudged; blamed.

Con-dem'-na-ble, (-dēm'-nā-bl.) a. Culpable.

Con-dem'-na-tor-y, a. Implying condemnation.

Con-dem'-ner, 36: (colloq. Cōn-dēm'-ēr, s. A blamer, a censurer.

Con-dem-na'-tion, s. Sentence of punishment.

To CONDENSE=cōn'-dēnc', 153: v. a. and n. To make dense by pressing the elements together. (See Co:)—n. n. To grow dense.

Consomant/s: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission. 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision. 165: āin, 166: thēn, 166.

117

Con-dense', a. Thick; compact; close.
 Con-den'-ser, 36: s. He, or that which condenses.
 Con-den'-su-ty, 105: s. Condensation; denseness.
 Con-den'-sa-ble, a. That may be condensed.
 Con-den'-sa-tive, 105: a. That can condense.
 To Con-den'-sate, v. a. and n. To Condense.
 Con-den'-sate, a. Condensed. [Obs.]
 Con-den'-sa-tion, 89: s. The act of making or becoming more dense or compact as opposed to rarefaction or expansion.
CONDER, cōn'-der, s. One employed to direct herring-fishers: see Balker; also, one who directs a helmsman, from To Cond, that is, to conduct.
 To CONDESCEND=cōn'-dē-ōnd", v. n. To descend from the privileges of superior rank or dignity; to yield; to submit; to stoop.
 Con'-de-scend"-ing, a. Yielding; courteous.
 Con'-de-scend"-ing-ly, ad. By way of concession.
 Con'-de-scen"-dence, s. A voluntary yielding.
 Con'-de-scent", s. Condescension. [Obs.]
 Con'-de-scen"-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Courteous.
 Con'-de-scen"-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Descent from superiority; voluntary humiliation.
CONDIGN, cōn'-dīn', 115, 157: a. Deserved; merited.
 Con-dign'-ly, 105: ad. Deservedly; according to merit.
 Con-dign'-ness, s. Suitableness to deserts.
 Con-di'-ni-ty, (-dīg'-nē-tēy, 105) s. Equality of actions and of merit ascribed; (See Co.); desert.
 To CONDITE=cōn'-dīt', v. a. To pickle; to preserve.
 Con'-dite, 83: a. Preserved with sugar or salt, &c.
 Con'-dite-ment, 105: s. A preserve; seasoning.
 Con'-di-ment, 105: s. Seasoning; sauce.
CONDISCIPLE, cōn'-dē-sī'-pl, s. A school-mate.—See Co.
CONDITION, cōn'-dīsh'-ūn, 89: s. State, quality; temper; rank; stipulation; terms of compact.
 To Con-di'-tion, v. n. and a. To contract; to make terms; to stipulate:—act. To agree upon.
 Con-di'-tion-al, 12: a. By way of stipulation; not absolute; expressing a condition or supposition.
 Con-di'-tion-al-ly, 105: ad. Not absolutely.
 Con-di'-tion-al"-ly-ty, s. Limitation by terms.
 Con-di'-tion-ar-y, 129: a. Stipulated.
 Con-di'-tion-ate, a. Conditional. [Obs.]
 To Con-di'-tion-ate, v. a. To qualify. [Obs.]
CONDITORY, cōn'-dē-tōr-ēy, 105, 129, 38: s. A receptacle; a repository.
 To CONDOLE=cōn'-dōlē', v. n. and a. To lament with: (See Co.) —act. To bewail with another.
 Con-dole'-ment, s. Grief; sorrow with others.
 Con-dol'-er, 36: s. One who condoles.
 Con-dol'-ence, s. Grief for another's sorrow.
 Con-dol'-la-tor-y, a. Expressing condolence.
CONDONATION, cōn'-dō-nā"-shūn, 89: s. The act of pardoning; forgiveness.
CONDOR=cōn'-dōr, 38: s. The largest of birds.
 To CONDUCE=cōn'-dūce', v. n. To lead or tend; to contribute. As an active verb for To Conduct, it is obsolete.
 Con-duce'-ment, s. A leading to; a tendency.
 Con-du'-cent, a. Contributing; tending.
 Con-du'-ci-ble, 105, 101: a. Promoting; tending to.
 Con-du'-ci-ble-ness, s. The quality of promoting.
 Con-du'-cive, 105: a. That may forward or promote.
 Con-du'-cive-ness, s. The quality of conducting.
 Con-duct', s. Management; guidance; an act or warrant of convoy; the convoy itself: economy; regular life.

 To Con-duct', 83: v. a. To lead, to direct; to manage. Conductive, &c., see Supp.
 Con-duc'-tor, 38: s. A leader; a director; he who attends as overseer or manager of a public travelling carriage; a surgical instrument; any substance capable of receiving and transmitting the electric fluid.
 Con-duc'-tress, s. A directress.
 Con-duc'-tion, 89: s. Act of training up. [Obs.]
 Con'-duc-ti'-ous, (-tish'-iūs, 147) a. Employed for wages,—hired as at statute-session, and conducted to employment. It is to ancient Roman customs, however, that the word owes this peculiar meaning.
 Con'-duit, (cūn'-dīt, 116, 120) s. A water pipe; a vessel of any kind for conducting fluids.
 To CONDUPLICATE, cōn'-dū'-plē-cate, v. a. To fold together.—See Co. [Obs.]
 Con-du'-pli-cate, a. Doubled.
 Con-du'-pli-ca-tion, 89: s. A folding; a duplicate.
CONDYL=cōn'-dīl, s. The protuberance at the joint of a bone.
 Con'-dy-loid, a. Like to or of the nature of a protuberant joint or knuckle.
CONE=cōne, s. A solid of which the base is a circle, and the summit a point; fruit in the shape of a cone, as of the fir-tree, and a species of strawberry.
 Co-nif'-er-ous, 87: a. Bearing cones as the fir.
 Co'-ni-form, 105, 38: a. Shaped like a cone.
 Co'-noid, 30: s. That which resembles a cone; a solid formed by the revolution of a conic section about its axis. [conic form.]
 Co-noid'-al, or Co-noid'-i-cal, a. Approaching to a Cone.
 Co'-nic, 93, Co'-i-cal, a. Having the form of a cone.
 Con'-i-cal-ly, ad. In form of a cone.
 Con'-i-cal-ness, s. The state of being conical.
 Con'-ic-Sec'-tions, 89, 143: or Con'-ics, s. pl. That part of geometry which treats of the cone, and the curves formed by its sections.
CONEY.—See Cony.
 To CONFABULATE=cōn'-fāb'-ū-lāt, v. n. To talk easily together: (See Co.); to chat.
 Con-fab'-u-la'-tor-y, a. Belonging to talk.
 Con-fab'-u-la'-tion, 89: s. Cheerful careless talk.
CONFARRATION, cōn'-fār'-rē-ā"-shūn, 89: s. The solemnizing of marriage by eating bread together.—See Co.
 To CONFECT=cōn'-fēct', v. a. Generally, to compose; to form; specially, to make up into sweet meats.—See Co. [Obs.]
 Con-fec'-tor-y, a. Pertaining to making sweetmeats.
 Con-fec'-tion, 89: s. A sweetmeat; a mixture.
 Con-fec'-tion-er, 36: s. A maker of sweetmeats.
 Con-fec'-tion-ar-y, s. Formerly, a confectioner; at present, sweetmeats in general, or the place where they are kept.
 Con'-fect, 83: s. A confection or sweetmeat.
 Con'-fi-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. A confection.
 Cox'-fi-ture, (cūm'-fē-tūre, 116, 147) s. A confection.
 Con'-fit, s. A confection; generally of small size and dry.
 To CONFEDERATE=cōn'-fēd'-ēr-āte, v. n. and a. To join in a league.
 Con-fed'-er-ate, a. and s. United in a league:—s. an ally; an accomplice.
 Con-fed'-er-a-cy, 98, 105: s. A league; federal compact.
 Con-fed'-er-a"-tion, 89: s. League; alliance.
 To CONFER=cōn'-fer', 35: v. n. and a. I. terally, to bring together; (See Co.); to bring opinions together, or discourse on a stated subject; to consult —act. To compare; [this, the original sense, is obs.]; to conduce to; [obs.] to give or bestow.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāu'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'w, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

Con-fes'-ter, 129: s. A con'strictor; a bestower.
CON-FER-ENCE, 81, 129: s. Formal discourse; oral discussion; an appointed meeting for debate;
 among old authors, comparison.

CONFERVA, côn-fér'-vâ, 2:
CONFERVÆ, côn-fér'-væ, 103:
s. sing. and pl. River-weed, or sponge of the river. [Lat.]

To CONFESS=côn-fêss, v. a. and n. To acknowledge; to own; to avow; to open the conscience to a priest; to hear the avowal of the conscience as a priest.—nes. To make confession.

Con-fessed, (-fêst, 114, 143) part. a. Open; known; acknowledged. It is often written as well as sounded Confest.

Con-fes'-sed-ly, ad. Avowedly; indisputably.

Con-fes'-set, s. One that confesses a fault.

Con-fes'-sion, (-fesh'-în, 89, 12) s. Avowal; acknowledgement; profession; the act of confessing as a priest or penitent.

Con-fes'-sion-al, s. The seat or box in which a priest confesses a penitent.

Con-fes'-sion-ary, 129, 105: s. and a. A con- fessional.—adj. Belonging to auricular confession.

Con-fes'-sion-ist, s. One who professes his faith.

CON-FES-SOR, 81, 38: s. One who, in the face of whatever danger, professes the christian faith; a priest who hears and absolves a penitent.

CON-FI-RENT, 105: s. One who confesses his sins.

CONFIDANT, CONFIDANTE.—See in the ensuing class.

To CONFIDE=côn-fid', v. n. and n. To trust.

Con-fi'-der, 36: s. One who trusts.

CON-FI-DENT, (côn'-fê-dênt, 105) a. and s.
 Having full belief, relying; positive; daring; bold;
 impudent.—s. One trusted with secrets; a bosom friend. Compare with Confidant below.

Con-fi'-dent-ly, ad. Without doubt or fear.

Con-fi'-dent-ness, s. Confidence.

Con-fi'-den'-tial, (-sh'âl, 147) a. Trusty; private; admitted to special confidence.

Con-fi'-den'-tial-ly, ad. In a confidential manner.

Con-fi'-dence, s. Firm belief; reliance; boldness; unwarranted assurance.

CON-FI-DANT, s. mas. A person entrusted with Con-fi-dante, s. fem. matters pertaining to the lighter commerce of life, as those of love, gallantry, and fashion. The masculine and feminine are pronounced alike as English words.

To CONFIGURE=côn-fîg'-ûr, v. a. To dispose of form with a certain relation of the parts.—
 See Co.

To Con-fîg'-u-rate, v. a. To dispose as with the relationship of different planetary aspects.

Con fîg'-u-ra'-tion, 89: s. Form depending on the relationship of distinct parts; the form of the horoscope arising out of the aspects of the planets to each other.

CONFINE=côn-fînc, s. and a. A joint limit, or that at which two regions or districts finish; (See Co.)
 border; edge.—adj. Bordering on.

To Con-fîne, v. n. To border upon.

The noun was originally accented on the last syllable, and of course the verb. The accent of the noun being now on the first, the neuter verb, as retaining the meaning of the noun (Prin. 82), is, by the best speakers, made to follow its parent.

Con-fî'-ner, 6: s. A borderer.

To CON-FINE, v. a. To bound; to limit; to shut up;
 to imprison; to restrain; to tie up.

Con-fî'-ner, s. A shutter up; a restrainer.

Con-fîne'-less, a. Boundless; without end.

Con-fîne'-ment, s. Imprisonment; restraint.

CON-FIRM-I-TY, (-fîn'-ê-tî-y, 92, 105) s. Neighbourhood.

To CONFIRM=côn-ferm', 35: v. a. To make firm, or more firm; to put past doubt; to settle; to establish; to fix; to strengthen; in a more particular sense, to admit fully into the christian communion.

Con-firm'-er, 36: s. One that confirms.

Con-fîr'-ma-ble, a. Capable of being established.

Con-fîr'-ma-tive, a. Having power to confirm.

Con-fîr'-ma-tory, a. Giving additional testimony relating to the rite of confirmation.

Con-firm'-ed-ness, s. The state of being confirmed.

Con-firm'-ing-ly, ad. Corroboratively.

CON-FIRM-ATOR, 83, 38: s. An attestor.

CON-FIRM-ATION, 89: s. The act of establishing a convincing testimony; an ecclesiastical rite.

To CONFISCATE=côn-fis'-cate, 81: v. a. T.
 To adjudge the forfeiture of private property to the prince or public as a penalty for an offence.

Con-fis'-cate, a. Adjudged as forfeited.

Shakespeare accents this on the first.

CON-FIS-CABLE, 98, 101: a. Liable to forfeiture.

Con-fis'-ca-tory, a. Consigned to forfeiture.

CON-FIS-CATOR, 85, 38: s. One who is concerned in confiscating property.

CON-FIS-CATION, s. The act of transferring the goods of criminals to public use.

CONFITENT.—See under To Confess.

CONFITURE.—See under To Confect.

To CONFIX, côn-ficks', 154: v. a. To fix down.

Con-fîr'-ure, (-fick'-sh'oor, 154) s. The act of fastening.

CONFLAGRANT=côn-fla'-grant, 12: a. Burning together; (See Co.) involved in a general fire.

Con-fla'-gra'-tion, 89: s. A general fire.

CONFLATION, côn-fla'-shûn, 89: s. A blowing together; (See Co.) as of many instruments in a concert; or many fires in the casting of metals.

CONFLEXURE, côn-fleck'-sh'oor, 154, 147: s.
 A joint bending or turning. (See Co.)

To CONFLICT=côn-flict', v. n. To strive; to contest; to fight.

CON-FLICT, 83: s. A violent collision of two substances; a combat; contest; strife; struggle.

CONFLUENT=côn-fl'oo-ênt, 109: a. Running into each other; (See Co.) meeting.

Con-flu'-ence, s. The junction or union of several streams; the act of crowding to a place; a concourse; collection; concurrence.

Con-flux, (-flux, 154) s. A confluence.

Con-flux-i-bil'-i-ty, 105: s. The tendency of fluids to run together.

To CONFORM=côn-fôrm, 37: v. a. and n.
 To make the same form with; (See Co.) —acu. To assume a form suitable; to comply with.

Con-form', a. Made to resemble; resembling. [Obs.]

Con-form'-a-ble, 101: a. Having the same form; agreeable; suitable; consistent; compliant.

Con-form'-a-bly, 105: ad. Agreeably; suitably.

Con-form'-er, s. One that conforms; particularly as regards religious doctrine, or the established church.

Con-form'-i-ty, 105: s. Resemblance; consistency.

Con-fôr-ma'-tion, s. The form of things as relating to each other; structure; the act of conforming.

CONFORTATION.—See under To Comfort.

To CONFOUND=côn-fownd', 31: v. a. T.
 To mingle so that the things are no longer distinguishable to perplex; to astonish; to stupefy; to destroy; to overthrow.

Con-foun'-ded, part. a. Mingled; abashed: but both this word and Confoundedly, ad. are often used colloquially to express the notion of hateful excess as a Confounded prodigal.

The sign = is used after mode of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: nîsh-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

Con-foun'-ded-ness, s. State of being confounded.
Con-foun'-der, 36: s. He who confounds.

CONFRATERNITY, cōn'-frd-ter'-né-tē, 105: s. A brotherhood, generally a religious one.—See Co.

CONFRICATION, cōn'-frē-cā'-shūn, 89: s. A mutual rubbing; (See Co.) the act of rubbing against something.

To CONFRONT, cōn-frūnt', 116: v. a. To stand in presence of, front to front; (See Co.;) to face; to oppose; to compare.

Con' fron-ta'-ti-n, 89: s. The act of bringing two persons face to face for the discovery of truth.

To CONFUSE, cōn-fūz', 137: v. a. To disorder; to disperse irregularly; to mix; to perplex; to confound.

Con-fu'-sed-ly, ad. Indistinctly; tumultuously.

Con-fu'-sed-ness, s. Want of distinctness.

Con-fu'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. Irregular mixture; tumult; disorder; overthrow; astonishment.

CON-FUSU', (-fūcē, 137) a. Mixed; confounded. [Obs.]

Con-fuse' ly, 105: ad. Obscurely. [Obs.]

To CONFUTE=cōn-fūte', v. a. To convict of error or falsehood; to disprove.

Con-fu'-ta-ble, 101: a. That may be disproved.

Con-fu'-tant, Con-fu'-ter, s. One who confutes.

Con-fute'-ment, s. Disproof. [Milton.]

Con-fu'-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of confuting.

CONGE=cōn-jē, 170: s. An act of reverence; bow; courtesy; leave; farewell; also, a sort of quarter round moulding in architecture.

Con-ge-d'e-lire', (cōn'-jē-dē-lērē, 104) s. The king's permission to a dean and chapter to choose a bishop.

To Con'-ge, v. a. [Con'-geed, (cōn'-jīd, 114) pret. and part.] To take leave. In our old authors, both noun and verb are often written Congie, and as our language has long adopted the word, it is a pity their practice is not followed.

To CONGEAL=cōn-jēal', v. a. and n. To change from a fluid to a solid state by the abstraction of heat; to fix as by cold;—new. To concreate by cold, or as by cold.

Con-geal'-a-ble, a. Susceptible of congelation.

Con-geal'-ment, s. The mass formed by congelation.

Con-ge-la'-tion, s. The act or state of congelation.

CONGENER=cōn-jē-ner, 36: s. He or that which has a common origin.—See Co.

Con-gen'-er-ous, 81, 120: a. Of the same kind.

Con-gen'-er-ous-ness, } s. The quality of having a }
Con-gen'-er-a-cy, } common origin.

Con'-ge-ner'-ic, 88: a. Being of the same kind.

CON-GE-NI-AL, 90, 12: a. Cognate; partaking of the same nature; kindred; allied in genius.

Con-ge'-ni-al-ness, } s. Cognation; state }
Con-ge'-ni-al'-i-ty, 84: } of being congenial.

CON-GEN-I-TAL, 105, 12: } a. Of the same birth;

Con-gen'-ite, (-it, 105) } like as to manner of } production.

CONGER, cōng'-gwr, 158, 77: s. The sea-eel.

CONGERIES.—See in the ensuing class.

To CONGEST=cōn-jest', v. a. To heap up.

Con-ges'-ti-ble, 105, 101: a. That can be heaped up.

Con-gest'-ion, (-yūn, 146, 147) s. A gathering together, particularly of humors or of blood in the body, and forming a tumor.

CON-GE-RI-ES, (-gērē-dē-z, 43, 101) s. A collection of particles or small bodies into one mass. [Lat.]

CONGIARY, cōn'-jē-ār-ēy, s. A gift to the Roman people, at first of corn and wine measured in a Congrat; afterwards of money.

CONGLACIATE, cōn-glā'-shē-ātē, 90: v. n. To become ice.

Con-glā'-ci-a'-tion, 150, 89: s. The state of being changed into ice.—See Co.

To CONGLOBE=cōn-glob', v. a. and n. To gather into a round mass.—See Co.

To CON'-GLO-BATE, (cōng'-glō-bātē, 158) v. a. To gather into a hard firm ball.

Con'-glo-bate, a. Moulded into a firm ball.

Con'-glo-bate'-ly, ad. In a spherical form.

Con'-glo-ba'-tion, 89: s. Collection into a round mass.

To CON-GLOB'-U-LATE, v. n. To gather into a small mass.

To CONGLOMERATE=cōn-glōm'-ēr-ate, 92: v. a. To gather into a ball, as of thread.—See Co.

Con-glōm'-er-ate, a. and s. Gathered together or twisted as a ball of thread.—s. A sort of sandstone.

Con-glōm'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. Collection into a ball; intertexture.

To CONGLUTINATE, cōn-gl'w'-tē-nātē, 109, 105: v. a. and To Cement;—new. To coalesce.—See Co.

Con-glū'-ti-nant, 12: a. and s. Gluing; uniting;—s. A medicine that heals wounds.

Con-glū'-ti-na'-tive, 105: a. Having power to unite.

Con-glū'-ti-na'-tor, 38: s. That which joins or heals.

Con-glū'-ti-na'-tion, 89: s. The act or state of uniting or healing; junction; union.

CONGO, cōng'-gō, 158: s. A fine sort of black tea; it is also written Congou (-gō.)

To CONGRATULATE=cōn-grāt'-ū-lātē, 92, 147: v. a. and n. To compliment on any happy event;—new. [Obs.] To rejoice in participation.

Con-grat'-u-lant, a. Rejoicing in participation.

Con-grat'-u-la'-tor, s. He who congratulates.

Con-grat'-u-la'-tory, 129, 18: a. With congratulation.

Con-grat'-u-la'-tion, 89: s. The act of congratulating; the form in which joy is expressed.

To CONGREE=cōn-grē', v. n. To agree. [Shak.]

To CONGREET=cōn-grē', v. n. To salute reciprocally.—See Co. [Obs.]

To CONGREGATE, cōng'-grē-gātē, 158: v. a. and s. To collect together;—n. To meet together.—See Co.

Con'-gre-gate, a. Collected; compact.

Con'-gre-ga'-tion, 89: s. A collection; an assembly, particularly of persons for divine worship.

Con'-gre-ga'-tion-al, 12: a. Pertaining to a congregation; also, to the sect of independents; public.

Con'-gre-ga'-tion-a-list', s. One who belongs to an independent or congregational church.

CON-GRĒSS, (cōng'-grēss, 158) s. A meeting; a shock or conflict; a meeting of ambassadors or deputies; the legislature of the United States.

Con-gres'-sive, (cōn'-grēs-siv, 105) a. Meeting; encountering; coming together.

Con-gres'-sion, (-grēsh'-ūn, 147) s. A company; an assembly; a meeting together. [Little used.]

Con-gres'-sion-al, 12: a. Pertaining to a congress.

To CONGRUE, cōn-grw', 109: v. n. To agree; to suit.—See Co. [Obs.]

Con-grū'-i-ty, 105: s. Suitableness; consistency; fitness; apt relation between things.

CON-GRU-ENT, (cōng'-gru-ēnt, 81) a. Agreeing

Con'-gru-ent, s. Agreement; consistency.

Con'-gru-ous, 120: a. Agreeable; fit; meet.

Con'-gru-ous-ly, ad. Suitably; pertinently.

Con'-gru-ment, s. Fitness; adaptation.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

Vowels: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'; lāw; yōōd; j'w, i. e. jew, 55: a. c. h. & c. note, 171.

CONIC, CONIFEROUS, &c.—See under Cone.
To CONJECT=côn-jêct', v. a. To cast together; (see Co-) to throw. [Obs.]
Con-ject'-or, 38: s. One who casts or throws together, particularly his thoughts. [Obs.]
To CON-JEC-TURE, (-tûre, 147) v. a. To guess.
Con-jec'-ture, s. Guess; imperfect knowledge.
Con-jec'-tu-ra-bl'e, 98, 101: a. That may be guessed.
Con-jec'-tu-ral, 12: a. Depending on conjecture.
Con-jec'-tu-ral-ly, ad. By guess.
Con-jec'-tu-rer, 36: s. One who forms opinions without proof: a guesser.
To CONJOIN=côn-join', 29: v. a. and n. To unite; to associate:—new. To league.—See Co-.
Con-join't, a. United.
Con-join't-ly, ad. In union.
CON-JUGAL.—See lower in this class.
To CON-JUGATE, (côn-j'oo-gâte), v. a. To yoke or join together.—See also lower.
Con-jug'a-tion, 89: s. The act of uniting; a couple; a pair.—See also below.
Con'-ju-gal, 12: a. Matrimonial.
Con'-ju-gal-ly, ad. Matrimonially.
To CON-JUGATE, v. a. To connect by repetition all the inflections of a verb with its theme: or first person indicative; to exhibit in any similar way the original connecting principle of derivatives.
Con'-ju-gate, a. and s. United by some principle or part; as leaflets by a common pinnule: cross lines by the point in which they intersect; &c.:—s. A word agreeing in derivation; as Merciful is a conjugate of Mercy.
Con'-ju-ga'-tion, s. The form of inflecting verbs.
CON-JUNCT, (-jûngkt, 158) a. Conjoined; concurrent.
Con-junct-ly, 105: ad. Jointly.
Con-junc'-tive, 105: a. Closely united; subjunctive; connecting together, as a conjunction.
Con-junc'-tive-ly, ad. In union.
Con-junc'-tive-ness, s. The quality of joining.
Con-junc'-ture, (-tûre, 147) s. A joining together; mode of union; occasion; critical time.
Con-junc'-tion, 89: s. Union; congress of two planets in the same degree of the zodiac, part of speech used to join sentences and sometimes words.
To CONJURE, côn-j'oor', 109, v. a. and n. To summon in a sacred name; to enjoin with the highest solemnity; among the old authors, to bind many by an oath to some common design:—new. [Obs.] To conspire.
Con'-ju-rer, 36: s. He who enjoins; See also lower.
Con'-ju-ror, 38: s. He who is bound by oath with others.
Con-jure'-ment, s. Serious injunction.
Con'-ju-ra'-tion, s. Conjurement; conspiracy. [Obs.]
To CON-JURE, (côn-j'ur, 116, 109.) v. a. and n. To produce an apparently supernatural effect upon:—new. To practise the arts of a conjurer.
Con'-jur-er, 36: s. An enchanter; a juggler, or exhibitor of legerdemain; in banter, a shrewd fellow.
Con'-jur-a'-tion, s. The art of performing feats as by supernatural means.
CONNASCENCE=côn-nâs'-sence, 59: s. Common birth; (See Co-) the act of growing together.
CON-NATE, a. Born with another; united in origin.
CON-NAT'-URAL, (-nât'-û-râl=-nât'-shoo-râl, 147) a. Connected by nature; participant of the same nature.
Con-nat'-u-ral-ly, ad. By nature; originally.
Con-nat'-u-ral-ness, } s. Participation of the Con-nat'-u-ral'-i-ty, 84: } same nature; natural union.

To Con-na'-u-ral-ize: v. a. To connect by nature to make natural.
To CONNECT=côn-nêct', v. a. and n. To join to link; to unite:—new. To cohere Con-nec'-tive, 105: a. and s. Having the power of connecting:—s. That which connects; a conjunction.
Con-nec'-tive-ly, 105: ad. In conjunction.
Con-nec'-tion, 89: s. Union; junction; relation.
To CON-NECT, v. a. To connect. [Obs.]
Con-nec'-ive, (-nêcks'-iv, 154, 105) a. Connective.
Con-nec'-ion, (-neck'-shûn, 147) s. Connection.
CONNECTION, See in the ensuing Class.
To CONNIVE=côn-niv'e, v. n. To wink; to close the eyes in a figurative sense; to allow by pretending blindness or ignorance.
Con-ni'-vance, 12: s. The act of conniving.
Con-ni'-vent, a. Forbearing to see; also, formed like, or winking like the eyelids; converging.
Con-ni'-ver, 36: s. One who connives at.
CON-NIC-TATION, 89: s. The act of winking.
CONNOISSEUR, côn-nâs-sur, [Fr.] 170: s. A judge in the arts; a critic.
CON-nâs-séur'-ship, s. The skill of a connoisseur
To CONNOTE=côn-nôt'e, v. a. To make known together: (See Co-) to imply; to betoken; to include.
To CON'-NO-TATE, v. a. To imply; to betoken.
Con'-no-ta'-tion, 89: s. Implication of something more.
CONNUBIAL, côn-nû-bê-âl, a. Matrimonial.
CONNUMERATION, côn-nû-mêr-â'-shûn 89: s. A reckoning together. See Co-.
CONNUSANCE, See Cognizance (legal) and Cognition.
CONOID, &c. See under Cone.
To CONQUASSATE, côn-kwâs'-sâte, 76, 145, 142: v. a. To shake; to disorder. See Co-.
Con'-quas-sa'-tion, 89: s. Concussion; agitation.
To CONQUER, công-ker, 158, 76, 145: v. a. and n. To gain by conquest; to overcome; to subdue:—new. To overcome.
Con'-quer-a-ble, 129, 98, 101: a. That may be conquered.
Con'-quer-or, 38: s. He who conquers.
CON'-QUEST, (công-kwêst) s. The act of conquering; acquisition by victory; victory; in old writers the same as acquisition, or the acquirement of property by purchase, or otherwise than by inheritance.
CONSANGUINEOUS, côn'-sâng-gwîn'-t'-ûs, 158, 146, 120: a. Of the same blood; (See Co-) near of kin.
Con'-san-gwîn'-i-ty, 105: s. Relation by blood.
CONSCARINATION, côn-sar'-cê-nâ'-shûn, 89: s. The act of patching together. See Co-.
CONSCIENCE, &c. See under the next word.
CONSCIOUS, côn'-sh'ûs, 147, 120: a. Literally, knowing jointly. (See Co-) involving the notion of holding converse with one's self; endowed with the power of knowing one's own thoughts and actions; knowing from memory; admitted to the knowledge of any thing.
Con'-scious-ly, ad. With knowledge of one's own thoughts or actions.
CON'-scious-ness, s. The knowledge which an individual possesses of the sentient state, or of the sentient and intellectual state, in which he is actually existing, a knowledge necessarily involving a reminiscence of other states of the same kind: a merely sentient state does not of necessity include consciousness; it would be an abuse of the term to say a creature is conscious of pleasure or pain when we are supposing it merely existing in such a state without a reminiscence of any other: we know only by comparison, and in this case we suppose none: consciousness.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consumant: mîsh-ûn. i. e. mission, 163: vîzh-ûn. i. e. vision, 165: shîn. 166: thên. 166.

CON-SCIENCE, (cōn'-sh'ēnce, 147) s. Generally, consciousness; specially, the knowledge of one's thoughts and of one's actions committed or premeditated with reference to some rule or standard of right and wrong; justice, equity; private thoughts; scruple; difficulty. Court of Conscience, a court for the recovery of small debts.

Con'-sci-ent'-ious (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Regulated by conscience; scrupulous; in an obsolete sense, conscious.

Con'-sci-ent'-iously, ad. According to conscience.

Con'-sci-ent'-iousness, s. Tenderness of conscience; exactness of justice or equity.

CON-SCION-A-BLE, (cōn'-sh'ūn-ē-bl, 147, 98, 101) a. According to conscience; reasonable; just.

Con'-scion-a-bly, 105: ad. Reasonably; justly.

CON-SCION-A-BLENESS, s. Reasonableness; equity.

CONSCRIPT=cōn'-skript, a. and s. Written down or enrolled with others. (See Co.) a term applied originally to the enrolled members of the Roman senate.—s. An enrolled soldier, particularly in France.

CON-SCRIPT-ION, 89: s. An enrolling or registering.

To CONSECRATE=cōn'-sē-crate, v. a. To declare sacred; to appropriate to sacred uses; to canonize; to set apart; to render venerable.

Con'-se-crate, a. Consecrated, sacred, devoted.

Con'-se-cra-tor, 38: s. One that consecrates.

Con'-se-cra-tor-y, 129, 18, 105: a. Making sacred.

Con'-se-cra-tion, 89: s. A dedication to sacred use or purpose; canonization.

CONSECUTARY, CONSECUTIVE. See under Consequent.

To CONSEMINATE, cōn-sēm'-ē-nāte. v. a. To sow different seeds together. See Co.

CONSENESCENCE=cōn'-sē-nēs'-sēnce, 59: s. A decay throughout with age. See Co.

CONSESSION. See in the class following.

CONSENT=cōn-sēnt', s. A yielding to something proposed; concord; agreement; joint operation.

To Con-sent', v. n. To be of the same mind; to cooperate to the same end; to yield.

Con-sent'-er, 36: s. He that consents.

Con'-sen-ta'-ne-ous, a. Accordant, suitable.

Con'-sen-ta'-ne-ous-ly, ad. Accordantly.

Con'-sen-ta'-ne-ous-ness, s. Agreement; consistency.

CON-SEN-TIENT, (-sh'ēnt, 147) a. Agreeing.

CON-SERN-SION, (-shūn, 90) s. Concord; agreement. (Bentley.) Consent'ian, see Supp.

CONSEQUENT, cōn-sē-kwēnt, 76, 145: a. and s. Following as joined with something that precedes; (See Co.) specially as joined with a cause; and as joined with premises in reasoning.—s. An effect; an inference.

Con'-se-quent'-ly, ad. By consequence; necessarily; in consequence; pursuant.

Con'-se-quent-ness, s. Regular connection.

Con'-se-quence, s. An event; an effect; the last proposition of a syllogism; a rational deduction or inference, generally; concatenation of causes and effects; hence, importance or moment.

Con'-se-quen'-tial, (-sh'āl, 147) a. Produced by the connection of effects with causes; conclusive; important. See also lower.

Con'-se-quen'-tial-ly, ad. With just deduction of consequences; in the order of events.

CON'-SE-QUEN'-tial-ness, s. Consecution.

CON'-SE-QUEN'-tial-ty, a. Assuming the airs of a person of consequence; pompous.—See also above.

CON'-SE-QUEN'-tial-ly, ad. Pompously. Also above.

CON-SEC-TAR-Y, (-sēc'-tār-ēy, 129, 105) a. and s. Consequent.—s. Deduction; corollary.

CON-SEC-U-TIVE, (-tīv, 105) a. Following in train.

CON-sec-u-tive-ly, ad. By way of consequence or succession; not antecedently; not casually.

CON'-se-cu'-tion, 89: s. Train of consequences; succession. Month of consecution is the lunar month as reckoned from conjunction with the sun to the next conjunction.

CONNECTION, cōn-ser'-shūn, s. Junction adaptation.

To CONSERVE=cōn-serv', v. a. To preserve particularly fruit by sugar or salt.

CON-ser-ver, 36: s. One that conserves.

CON-ser-va-ble, 98, 101: a. Preservable.

CON-ser-vant, 12: a. Preserving.

CON-ser-van-ty, s. Preservation, particularly of fish in the river Thames; for which the Lord Mayor holds Courts of Conservancy.

CON-ser-va-tive, 105: a. and s. Having power to oppose diminution or injury.—s. One opposed to changes in the state, a Tory.

CON-ser-va-tor-y, 129, 105: a. and s. Having a preservative quality.—s. A place where any thing is kept in a manner proper to its peculiar nature.

CON-SERVY, 83: s. That which is conserved, particularly fruit by means of sugar.

CON'-ser-va-tor, 38: s. A preserver; one that has the care or office of keeping from detriment.

CON'-ser-va'-tion, 89: s. The act of preserving; the state of being preserved.

CONSESSION, cōn-sēsh'-ūn, 90: s. A joint sitting for inquiry or judgement. See Co.

CON-SES-SOR, (-sēs'-sor, 38) s. He who sits with others.

To CONSIDER=cōn-sid'-er, 36: v. a. and n. To think upon; to ponder; to have regard to; to require.—n. To think maturely; to deliberate with doubt.

CON-sid'-er-er, 129: s. He who ponders.

CON-sid'-er-a-ble, a. Worthy to be considered; hence, important, valuable; not unworthy to be considered, and hence, with a sort of negative meaning, more than a little, though not great.

CON-sid'-er-a-bly, ad. In a considerable degree.

CON-sid'-er-a-ble-ness, s. Importance; moment.

CON-sid'-er-ance, 12: s. Consideration.

CON-sid'-er-ate, a. Thoughtful; prudent; quiet.

CON-sid'-er-ate-ly, ad. Calmly; prudently.

CON-sid'-er-ate-ness, s. Calm deliberation.

CON-sid'-er-a-tive, a. Considerate. [Obs. used.]

CON-sid'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of considering; prudence; contemplation; importance; compensation; in law, the material cause of a compact, without which no compact binds.

To CONSIGN, cōn-sin', 157, 115: v. a. and n. To give to another in a formal manner; to transfer; to commit; to intrust.—n. [Obs.] To yield; to sign; to consent.

CON-sign'-er, 36: s. He who consigns. See lower.

CON-sign'-ment, s. The act of consigning; the writing by which any thing is consigned.

CON-SIG-NEE', (cōn-sē-nē, 105, 177) s. A person to whom something is consigned.

CON-sig-nor', 177: s. A consigner with special reference to legal forms.

CON'-SIG-NA'-TION, s. Consignment. [Obs.]

CONSIGNIFICATION, cōn-sig-nif'-ē-cā' shūn, 89: s. Joint signification. See Co.

CONSIMILAR, cōn-sim'-ē-lar, 105, 34: a. Having one common resemblance. See Co.

CON'-si-mil'-i-tude, s. Joint resemblance.

To CONSIST=cōn-sist', v. n. (Compare with Constant and Constitute.) To stand together; (See

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gūts'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: kōd: j'w, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mule, 171.

Con-) to continue fixed; to be comprised; to be contained; to be composed; to co-exist; to be compatible.

Con-sis'-tent, a. Firm, not fluid; standing or agreeing together, not opposed to, not contradictory.

Con-sis'-tent-ly, ad. In a consistent manner.

Con-sis'-tence, } s. That state in which the parts

Con-sis'-ten-cy, } of a body remain fixed; a degree of density; substance; durable or lasting state; congruity; uniformity.

CONSISTORY, cōn'-sis-tōr-ēy, 129, 18, 105: s. The place of justice in the ecclesiastical court; the court itself; the assembly of cardinals; any solemn assembly.

Con-sis-to'-ri-al, 90, 47, 105: a. Relating to the ecclesiastical court.

Con-sis-to'-ri-an, a. Relating to an order of presbyterian assemblies.

To CONSOCIATE, cōn-sō'-shē-āte, 90: v. a. and n. To unite, to join, with; (See Co-) to cement: —new. To coalesce

Con-so'-ci-ate, s. A confederate; a partner.

Con-so'-ci-a'-tion, s. Alliance; union.

To CONSOLE=cōn-sōl', v. a. To comfort, to cheer.

Con-so'-ler, 36: s. One that gives comfort.

Con-so'-la-ble, 93, 101: a. That admits of comfort.

Con-so'-la-tor-y, 92, 98, 129, 105: a. and s. Tending to give comfort:—s. A consolatory discourse.

To CON-SO-LATE, v. a. To console. [Obs.]

Con'-so-la-tor, 38: s. A comforter.

Con-so-la'-tion, s. Comfort; alleviation of misery.

CONSOLE=cōn-sōle, s. A bracket, or sort of coin in architecture; or an ornament on the key of an arch with a projecture. [Fr.]

To CONSOLIDATE, cōn-sōl'-ē-dāte, v. a. and n. To form into a compact body; to harden; to unite or combine into one:—new. To grow firm, hard, or solid.

Con-sol'-i-date, a. Formed into a compact body.

Con-sol'-i-dant, 12: a. and s. That has the quality of consolidating:—s. That which has the quality of uniting wounds.

Con-sol'-i-da-tive, 105: a. Consolidant.

Con-sol'-i-da'-tion, 89: s. The act or state of consolidating.

CON-SOLS', 143: s. p. Certain funds in the British stock market bearing 3 per cent. interest.

CONSONANT=cōn-sō-nānt, 12: a. and s. Sounding with something else; (See Co-) accordant; agreeing; consistent:—s. That which is sounded with a vowel, being of itself only an obscure sound of breath or voice; a letter standing for a consonant.

Con'-so-nant-ly, ad. Consistently; agreeably.

Con'-so-nant-ness, s. Consistency.

Con'-so-nance, } s. Accord of sounds; consistency;

Con'-so-nan-cy, } congruence; agreement; concord.

Con'-so-nous, 120: a. Symphonious.

To CONSOPATE, cōn-sō'-pē-āte, 90: v. a. To lull asleep.

Con-so'-pi-a'-tion, 89: s. A lulling asleep.

To Con'-so-pite, v. a. To consopate. [Obs.]

CONSORT=cōn-sort, 33: s. A companion; a wife or husband; an accompanying ship; concurrence; in old authors, an assembly; a company of musicians; a concert.

Con-sort-ship, s. Fellowship; partnership.—See Co-.

To Con-sort, 83: v. n. and a. To associate:—act. To join; to mix; to marry; to accompany.

Con-sort'-a-ble, a. To be ranked with; suitable.

Con-sort'-ion, 89: s. Fellowship; society. [Obs.]

CONSPICUOUS.—See under CONSPICUOUS.

CONSPERION, cōn-sper'-shūn, s. A sprinkling.

CONSPICUOUS, cōn-spick'-h-ūs, 92, 120: n. Obvious to the sight; obvious to the mental sight, eminent; distinguished.

Con-spic'-u-ous-ly, ad. Remarkably; eminently.

Con-spic'-u-ous-ness, s. Obviousness; eminence.

Con'-spic'-u-ous-ty, s. Conspicuousness. [Obs.]

CON-SPEC'-TION, s. A seeing; a beholding. [Obs.]

Con-spec'-ta-ble, a. Easy to be seen. [Obs.]

Con'-spec'-tu'-i-ty, s. Sight; view. [Obs.]

To CONSPIRE=cōn-spir', v. n. Literally, to breathe together, or to band together; (See Co-) to plot; to hatch treason; to agree to indict an innocent person of felony; to concur to one end; to tend.

Con-spi'-rant, 12: a. Conspiring; plotting.

Con-spi'-rer, 36: s. A plotter.

CON-SPIR'-A-CY, (-spir'-d-ēy, 129, 98, 105) s. A plot; a combination of persons for an evil purpose; a tendency of many causes to one event.

Con-spi'-ra-tor, 38: s. A man joined in a plot.

Con'-spi-ra'-tion, 103, 89: s. Conspiracy.

CONSPIRATION, cōn'-spis-sā'-shūn, 89: s. A thickening.

CONSPURCATION, cōn'-spur-cā'-shūn, 89: s. Pollution.

CONSTABLE, cūn'-stā-bl, 116, 101: s. Originally, a master of the horse, or commander of cavalry; thence applied to other officers, at first of high grade, and subsequently to a peace officer generally. To outrun the constable, is to outrun the bounds of income

Con'-sta-ble-ship, s. The office of a constable.

Con'-sta-ble-wick, s. The district over which the Con'-sta-ble-ry, } authority of a constable extends.

Con-stab'-u-lar-y, a. Pertaining to constables.

CONSTANT=cōn-stānt, 12: a. (Compare with Consist and Constitute) Literally, whose parts consist or stand firm in union; firm, not fluid; (a sense almost obsolete) fixed; unvaried; unchanged; unchanged in affection; determined; certain.

Con'-stant-ly, ad. Firmly; perpetually; patiently.

Con'-stan-cy, s. Firmness; lasting affection.

CONSTELLATION, cōn'-stēl-lā'-shūn, 89: s. A cluster of fixed stars; an assemblage of excellencies.

To Con'-stel-late, v. n. and a. To shine with united radiance:—act. To unite in one splendor.—See Co-.

CONSTERNATION, cōn'-ster-nā'-shūn, 89: s. Astonishment; amazement; surprise; terror.

To CONSTIPATE, cōn'-stē-pāte, 105: v. a. To crowd; to condense; to stop up; to make costive.

Con'-ste-pa'-tion, s. Condensation; costiveness.

To CONSTITUTE, cōn'-stē-tūt, 105: v. a. (Compare Consist and Constitute) To set or fix; to form or compose; to appoint, depute, or empower.

Con'-sti-tu'-ter, 36: s. He that constitutes.

Con'-sti-tu'-tive, 105: a. That enters into or forms a part of the nature of something; that has power to enact or establish.

CON-STI-TU-ENT, a. and s. Elemental; essential; constituting or forming:—s. The person or thing that constitutes; an elemental part; he that deposes another.

CON-STI-TU'-TION, 89: s. The act of constituting; the thing constituted; as the corporeal frame; the temper of body or mind; a form of government, but particularly that form or that part of a form, which is constituted by the people; a system of laws and customs; a particular law; an established usage.

Con'-sti-tu'-tion-ist, s. An adherent to the constitution. [Bolingbroke.]

Con'-sti-tu'-tion-al, 12: a. Inherent in, consistent with, the constitution; legal.

Con'-sti-tu'-tion-al-ly, ad. Legally.

Con'-sti-tu'-tion-al-ist, s. A framer or supporter of new constitutions; [Burke:] also, a constitutionalist.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To CONSTRAIN=côn-strain', v. a. To urge by force; to confine by force; to necessitate; to press. to constringe.

Con-strain'-a-ble, a. Liable to be constrained.

Con-strain'-ed-ly, 105: ad. By constraint.

Con-strain'-er, 36: s. He that constrains.

Con-strain'-t, s. Compulsion; confinement.

Con-strain'-tive, 105: a. Having power to compel.

To Con-string'e, v. a. To compress; to contract.

Con-strin'-gent, a. Hindering or compressing.

Con-stric'-tion, 89: s. Compression; contraction.

To Con-strict', v. a. To bind; to contract; to cramp.

Con-stric'-tor, 38: s. He or that which compresses.

To CONSTRUCT=côn-struct', v. a. To build; to conform; to compile: to constitute.

Con-struct'-er, 36: s. He that constructs.

Con-struct'-ive, 105: a. Created by construction; not expressed but inferred.

Con-struct'-ive-ly, ad. By construction.

Con-struct'-ure, (-tûr, 147) s. Edifice. [Obs.]

Con-struct'-ion, 89: s. Act of building; fabrication; the form of building; the act of forming a sentence grammatically; the form itself: the drawing of schemes, figures, &c., in geometry: Construction of equations is the reducing of algebraic equations to geometric forms. —See other senses under the next word.

To CON-STRUE, (côn-stroo, 109) v. a. Primarily, to put into order; to put into such order as may render intelligible; hence, to interpret, to explain.

Con-struct'-ion, s. The act of interpreting; the interpretation itself; the sense, the meaning. —See its other senses above.

Con-struct'-ion-al, a. That respects the meaning or interpretation.

To CONSTUPRATE=côn-stû-prat', v. a. To violate; to debase; to defile.

Con'-stu-pra'-tion, 89: s. Violation.

CONSUBSTANTIAL, (côn-sûb-stân'-sh'âl, 147: a. Having the same essence or substance. —See Co.

Con'-sub-stan'-ti-al'-i-ty, 84, 85, 105: s. Existence of more than one in the same substance.

To Con'-sub-stan'-ti-ate, v. a. To unite in one common substance or nature.

CON-SUB-STAN'-TI-A'-TION, 89: s. The substantial presence of the body and blood of Christ in the eucharist together with the substance of the bread and wine, according to the doctrine of the Lutherans.

To Con'-sub-stan'-ti-ate, v. n. To profess the doctrine of Consubstantiation. [Dryden.]

Con'-sub-stan'-tial-ist, s. He who believes in consubstantiation.

CONSUETUDE, (côn-swê-tûd, 145: s. Custom.

Con'-sue-tu'-di-nar-y, a. and s. Customary:—s. A ritual of customary devotions.

CONSUL.—See under the next word.

To CONSULT=côn-sult', v. n. and a. To take counsel:—act. To ask advice of; to seek information of; to regard, in a sense now obsolete, to plan, to contrive.

Con-sult', 82: s. The act of consulting; the effect of consulting; a council. [Obs. except in poetry.]

Con-sult'-er, 36: s. One that asks counsel.

Con-sult'-ta-tive, 105: a. Having the privilege of consulting; relating to consultation.

Con-sult'-a-tion, 89: s. The act of consulting; secret deliberation; a council.

CON-SUL', s. One of the two chief magistrates of the ancient Roman republic; an officer commissioned in foreign parts to judge between the merchants of his nation and protect their commerce. Bacon has used the word for an adviser.

Con'-su-lar, 34: a. Relating to the consul.

Con'-su-lage, s. A duty paid by merchants for the protection of their commerce in a foreign place.

Con'-su-late, } s. The office or jurisdiction of a Con'-sul-ship, } consul; the term of his office.

To CONSUME=côn-sûm', v. a. and n. To waste; to spend; to destroy:—new. To waste away.

Con-su'-ma-ble, 101: a. That may waste away.

Con-su'-mer, 36: s. He that wastes or destroys.

CON-SUMP'-TION, 156, 89: s. The act of consuming; the state of being consumed; a wasting away, particularly through a diseased state of the lungs the disease itself.

Con-sump'-tive, 105: a. Destructive; wasting; diseased by consumption.

Con-sump'-tive-ness, s. Tendency to consumption.

To CONSUMMATE, (côn-sûm'-mât, 81: v. a. To complete; to perfect.

Con-sum'-mate, 82: a. Complete; perfect.

Con-sum'-mate-ly, ad. Completely; perfectly.

Con'-sum-ma'-tion, 89: s. Completion; perfection the end of the present system of things, end of life.

CONSUMPTION, &c.—See under To Consume.

CONSUTILE, (côn-sû-til, 105: a. Stitched together.

To CONTABULATE=côn-tâb'-û-lât, v. a. To floor with boards. Contabulation, s. A boarding.

CONTACT=côn-tâct', s. Touch; close union.

Con-tac'-tion, 89: s. The act of touching.

CON-TA'-GION, (côn-tâ-'jûn, 146) s. The communication of disease, strictly, by contact; as infection is a communication either by actual contact, or by the miasmata which one body gives out and the other receives. This strictness, however, is seldom regarded; and contagion is usually defined as infection; pestilence; venomous emanation; propagation of mischief generally.

Con-ta'-gious, (-'jûs, a. Caught by actual contact; caught by approach, infectious. Though infectious and contagious are confounded, they must be distinguished from epidemic, which refers to disease caught through a general predisposition either of the human body at particular seasons to receive it, or of the air to give it.

Con-ta'-gious-ness, s. The quality of being contagious.

To CONTAIN=côn-tân', v. a. and n. To hold as a vessel; to comprehend; to comprise as a writing: to restrain; to withhold:—new. To live in continence.

Con-tain'-a-ble, a. That can be contained.

CON-TENT', s. (Often used in the plural Contents.) That which is contained; the thing or things held within limits, as of a vessel, of boundaries, of lines, &c.; the power of containing. Content, in the sense of satisfied or quiet, is also identical with this word originally; for To be content means, literally, to be restrained as to the mind within certain limits.

CON-TI-NENT, 105: a. That is restrained as to appetite, or that restrains appetite; chaste; temperate; in old authors, continuous or connected.

Con'-ti-nent-ly, ad. Chastely; temperately.

Con'-ti-nence, } s. Restraint generally; specially
Con'-ti-nen-cy, } and usually, restraint of the sexual appetite; moderation; temperance; in old authors, continuity.

CON-TI-NENT, s. That which contains many countries; a large extent of land not disjoined by a sea.

Con'-ti-nen'-tal, a. Relating to the continent, particularly that of Europe.

To CONTAMINATE, (côn-tâm'-ê-nât, 105: v. a. To defile; to pollute; to corrupt.

Con-tam'-i-nate, a. Polluted; defiled.

Con-tam'-i-na'-tion, 89: s. Pollution; defilement.

CONTECK, [Spenser.]—See under To Contend.

CONTECTION, (côn-têck'-shûn, 89: s. A coveting.

To CONTEMN, (côn-têm', 156: v. a. To despise; to consider mean and worthless.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gât'-wâ; châp'-mân; pâ-dâ; lâw; gôod; j'w, i. e. jaw, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

CON

CON

Con-tem'-ner, (Colloq. Cōn-tēm'-er) s. One that contemns; a scorner.

Con-tem'-ning-ly, ad. With contempt or slight.

CON-TEMPT', (cōn-tēm't, 156:) s. The act of despising; state of being despised; scorn; violence; disobedience to a court of law.

Con-temp'-ti-ble, 105, 101: a. Worthy of contempt; despised; scorned.

Con-temp'-ti-bly, 105: ad. Meantly.

Con-temp'-ti-ble-ness, s. Meanness; baseness

CON-TEMP'-TU-ous, (-tēm'-tū-ūs, 147, 120) a. Scornful; apt to despise; insolent.

Con-temp'-tu-ous-ly, ad. With contempt.

Con-temp'-tu-ous-ness, s. Disposition to contempt.

To CONTEMPER=cōn-tēm'-per, 36: v. n. To moderate; to reduce to a lower degree.—See Co-

Con-tem'-per-a-ment, s. Temperament.

To Con-tem'-per-ate, v. a. To moderate; to temper.

Con-tem'-per-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of moderating; proportionate mixture; proportion.

To CONTEMPLE=cōn-tēm'-plāte, 81: v. r. a. and n. To consider with continued attention; to study.—See To muse.

Con-tem'-plative, 98, 105: a. Addicted to, or employed in thought; having the power of thought.

Con-tem'-plative-ly, ad. Thoughtfully.

Con-tem'-pla'-tor, 38: s. One employed in study.

Con-tem-pla'-tion, 89: s. Meditation; studious thought; study as opposed to action.

CONTEMPORARY, cōn-tēm'-pō-rā-rēy, a. and s. Living in the same age; born at the same time; existing at the same point of time.—s. One who lives at the same time with another.

To Con-tem'-po-rise, (-rīz, 137) v. a. To place in the same age.—See Co. [Little used.]

CONTEMPT, &c.—See under To Contemn.

To CONTEND=cōn-tēnd', v. n. and a. To strive; to struggle; to vie; to act in emulation; act. To dispute, to contest.

Con-ten'-dent, s. An opponent; an antagonist.

Con-ten'-der, 36: s. A combatant; a champion.

CON-TEN'-TION, 89: s. Strife; debate; contest.

Con-ten'-tious, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Quarrelsome.

Con-ten'-tious-ly, ad. Perversely; quarrelsomely.

Con-ten'-tious-ness, s. Proneness to quarrel.

CON-TRECK, v. Quarrel; contention. [Obs.]

CONTENTEMENT=cōn-tēn'-t-mēnt, s. That which is held with a tenement, as its credit, contiguous land, &c.

CONTENT=cōn-tēnt', a. and s. (Compare Content under To 'contain.) Satisfied, so as not to repine or oppose.—s. Rest or quietness of mind; satisfaction; acquiescence.—See the other senses under To Contain.

Con-ten'-tful, 117: a. Full of content. [Little used.]

Con-ten'-tless, a. Discontented.

Con-ten'-t-ly, ad. Contentedly. [Obs.]

To Con-ten't, v. a. To satisfy; to appease without complete gratification; to please; to gratify.

Con-ten'-ted, a. Content; satisfied.

Con-ten'-ted-ly, ad. In a satisfied manner.

Con-ten'-ted-ness, s. State of being content.

Con-ten'-t-ment, s. Acquiescence without plenary satisfaction; gratification.

CONTENTION, CONTENTIOUS, &c.—See under To Contend

CONTINUOUS, cōn-ter'-mē-nūs, 105, 120: a. Bordering upon.—See Co.

Con-ter'-mi-nu-able, a. Capable of the same bounds.

Con-ter'-mi-nate, a. Having the same bounds.

CONTERRANEOUS, cōn'-tēr-rā'-nē-ūs, 90, 130: a. Of the same country.—See Co.

To CONTEST=cōn-tēst', v. a. and n. To dispute; to litigate.—new. To strive; to contend; to vie.

Con-tes'-ta-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be contested.

Con-tes'-ta-ble-ness, s. Possibility of contest.

Con-tes'-ta'-tion, 89, s. Act of contesting; debate.

CON-TEST, 83: s. Dispute; difference.

To CONTEX, cōn-tēcks', v. a. To weave together. [Obs.]

CON-TEXT, 154: s. The series of sentences that make up a discourse; the parts that precede and follow the sentence quoted.

To Con-text', v. a. To knit together. [Out of use.]

Con-text', a. Knit or woven together.

Con-ter'-ture (-tūre, 147) s. The disposition of parts one amongst others; the system.

Con-ter'-tu-ral, a. Pertaining to texture.

CONTIGNATION, cōn'-tīg-nā'-shūn, 89: s. A frame of beams; act of framing a fabric. See Co.

CONTIGUOUS, cōn-tīg'-ū-ūs, 120: a. Meeting so as mutually to touch; (See Co.) bordering upon. Compare To Continge, from which this word originates.

Con-tig'-u-ous-ly, ad. Without space between.

Con-tig'-u-ous-ness, s. State of contact; nearness.

Con-ti-gu'-i-ty, 84, 105, s. Contact; nearness.

CONTINENT, CONTINENCE, &c. See under To Contain.

To CONTINGE=cōn-tīng', v. n. To touch; to happen.

Con-tin'-gent, a. and s. Touching or dependent on something else, so as to be uncertain; failing out by chance.—s. That which is in the hands of chance; that which reaches a person on a division, his proportion or quota.

Con-tin'-gent-ly, ad. Dependently; casually.

Con-tin'-gent-ness, s. Accidentalness.

Con-tin'-gence, s. The act of reaching to, or touching.

Con-tin'-gen-cy, s. ing; accidental possibility.

CONTINUAL, &c.—See under the following.

To CONTINUE=cōn-tīn'-ū, 189: v. n. and a. To remain in the same state or place; to last; to be durable; to persevere.—act. To protract, to repeat without interruption; to unite without a chasm or intervening substance.

Con-tin'-u-ed-ly, ad. Without interruption.

Con-tin'-u-er, 36: s. One who continues.

Con-tin'-u-al, 12: a. L. cessant; uninterrupted; repeated from time to time within every year or day.

Con-tin'-u-al-ly, ad. Without interruption.

Con-tin'-u-al-ness, s. Permanence.

Con-tin'-u-ance, s. Duration; permanence; abode; progression; in law, prorogation, as Continuance till the next assizes, that is, putting off the trial.

To Con-tin'-u-ate, v. a. To join closely, together.

Con-tin'-u-ate, a. Unbroken; uninterrupted.

Con-tin'-u-a-tive, a. and s. That continues.—s. An expression noting permanence or duration.

Con-tin'-u-a'-tor, 35: s. He that carries on what is begun.

Con-tin'-u-a'-tion, s. Protraction; continuity.

Con-tin'-u-ous, 120: a. Joined together without chasm or interposition.

Con-ti-nu'-i-ty, 105: s. Uninterrupted connection.

To CONTORT=cōn-tort', 37: v. a. To twist.—See Co. Specially, to twist [Bot.] into a like direction

Con-tor'-tion, 89: s. A twist; a drawing awry.

CONTOUR, cōn-tōor', 125, 51: s. The outline, the lines by which a figure is defined. [Fr.]

CONTRA, CONTRABAN)—See after To Contract, &c.

To CONTRACT=cōn-trăct', v. a. and n. To draw together or nearer; to draw the parts together or

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

as to shorten; to abridge; to epitomise; to draw towards one, so as to acquire; as "To contract a habit;" to draw or bring parties together in order to covenant; to bargain for; to betroth, to affianc:—new. To draw together or shrink up; to bargain; to make a mutual agreement.

Con-trac-ted, part. a. Shrank up; abridged; also bargained, affianced, in which sense contract is now obsolete.

Con-trac-ted-ly, ad. In a contracted manner.

Con-trac-ted-ness, s. Contraction; narrowness.

Con-trac-tion, 89: s. The act or state of drawing together; an abridging; a shrinking; the shortening of a word by an omission; abbreviation; in old writers, a contract.

Con-trac-ti-ble, a. That may be contracted.

Con-trac-ti-ble-ness, } s. Possibility of being Con-trac-ti-bil-i-ty, } contracted; quality of suffering contraction.

Con-trac-tile, (-tīl, 105) a. Having the inherent power of contraction.

Con-trac-ti-lity, s. The quality of shrinking.

Con-TRACT, 83: s. Originally, a drawing together for the purpose of a mutual covenant; now, the covenant or bargain itself; also, the writing which contains the stipulations. In our old poetry this word is often accented on the second syllable.

Con-trac-tor, 38: s. One of the parties to a bargain or contract.

CONTRA- A Latin preposition or prefix signifying Against. In opposition, &c. Compare Counter and its compounds.

CON-TRA-BAND, a. and s. Contrary to ban or edict; prohibited from importation or exportation—s. Illegal traffic: Contrabandist, s. a smuggler.

CON-TRA-DANCE, s. A dance in opposite lines.

To CON-TRA-DICT, v. a. To oppose verbally; to deny.

Con-tra-dic-tor, 36: s. One who contradicts.

Con-tra-dic-tion, 89: s. Verbal opposition; opposition; incongruity; contrariety in thought or effect.

Con-tra-dic-tion-al, a. Inconsistent. [Milton.]

Con-tra-dic-tious, (-shūs, 147) a. Filled with contradictions; inclined to contradict; opposite in.

Con-tra-dic-tious-ness, s. Inconsistency.

Con-tra-dic-tor-y, (-tōr-ēy, 129, 105) a. and s. Opposite to; inconsistent with—s. A proposition opposed throughout to another.

Con-tra-dic-tor-i-ly, ad. In a manner opposed to somebody or something.

To CON-TRA-DIS-TING-UISH, (-dīs-tīng-'gwīsh, 158, 145) v. a. To distinguish not merely by differential, but by opposite qualities.

Con-tra-dis-tinct, a. Contradistinctive.

Con-tra-dis-tinct-i-ve, n. Contradistinctive.

Con-tra-dis-tinct-ion, 89: s. Distinction by opposite qualities.

CON-TRA-DIS-TURE, (-'fīsh-'oor, 147) s. A fracture opposite to that side which receives the blow.

To CON-TRA-IN-DIC-ATE, v. a. To indicate some symptom or cure contrary to the general tenor of the malady.

Con-tra-in-di-ca-tion, 89: } s. A symptom that } forbids to treat a disorder in the usual way.

CON-TRA-MURE, s. A counter or outward wall.

CON-TRA-NAT-U-RAL, 147: a. Opposite to nature.

CON-TRA-NAT-U-RAL, s. Resistance against pressure.

To CON-TRA-POSE, (-pōzē, 137) v. a. To place opposite.

Con-tra-po-si-tion, 89: s. A placing over against.

CON-TRA-PUN-TIST, s.—See under Counterpoint.

CON-TRA-RY, (cōn-trā-rēy, 105) a. and s. Opposite; contradictory; inconsistent; adverse; in an opposite direction.—s. A thing of opposite qualities; a proposition opposite to some other; On the Contrary, in opposition, on the other side. In the plural Contraries, things of opposite natures or qualities; propositions which destroy each other.

Con-tra-ri-ly, ad. In a manner contrary.

Con-tra-ri-ness, s. Opposition.

Con-tra-ri-wise, (-wīzē) ad. Conversely.

Con-tra-ri-e-ty, 84: s. Repugnance; opposition.

Con-tra-ri-ant, (cōn-trā-rē-ānt, 90, 41, 105, 12) a. Opposing; inconsistent; contradictory. [Little used.]

Con-tra-ri-ous, 120: a. Opposite; repugnant.

Con-tra-ri-ous-ly, ad. Contrarily; oppositely.

CON-TRAST, s. Opposition and dissimilitude of things, by which those parts that are different in each are set off and heightened.

To CON-TRAST, 83: v. a. To oppose so as to set off.

CON-TRA-TEN-OR, s.—See Counter-tenor.

CON-TRA-VAL-LA-TION, 89: s. A counter-ertification against the sallies of the besieged.

To CON-TRA-VENE, v. a. To oppose; to hinder.

Con-tra-ve-n'er, 36: s. An opposer of something.

Con-tra-ven-tion, 89: s. Opposition; obstruction.

CON-TRA-VER-SION, (-shūn, 147) s. A turning to the opposite side. Literally, it is the same word as Controversy, and has the same relationship to the verb Controvert, &c., but the latter have acquired a peculiar application—See To Controvert, &c.

CON-TRA-VER-SIA, s. A species of birthright that has been reckoned a counterpoison.

CONTRACTATION, cōn-trăck-tā-shūn, 89: s. A touching or handling.—See Co.

To CONTRIBUTE=cōn-trib-'ūtē. v. a. and n.

To give to some common stock:—new. To bear a part.

Con-trib-u-tive, 105: a. Tending to promote any purpose in concurrence with other motives.

Con-trib-u-tor, 38: s. He that contributes.

Con-trib-u-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Contributing to, or promoting the same end.

Con-trib-u-tion, 89: s. The act of contributing; the thing contributed; that which is given by several hands for a common purpose; that which is exacted by an army for its support in a foreign country.

CON-TRIB-U-TARY, a. Yielding tribute as to a chief.

To CONTRISTATE=cōn-tris-tāte, v. a. To sadden.

Con-tris-ta-tion, s. A making sad.—[See Co.]

CONTRITE=cōn-tritē, a. Literally, worn or bruised; worn with sorrow; harassed with the sense of guilt; penitent.

Co. This word is accented both ways, more commonly on the first syllable, more consistently on the last.

Con-trite-ly, ad. In a penitent manner.

Con-trite-ness, s. Contrition; repentance.

Con-tri-tion, (-trish-'ūn, 89) s. The act of rubbing; penitence; sorrow for sin. It is distinguished by some divines from Attrition, which see.

To CONTRIVE=cōn-trivē, v. a. and n. To plan out; to devise.—new. To form or design.

Con-tri-ver, 36: s. An inventor; a schemer.

Con-tri-va-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be planned.

Con-tri-vance, 12: s. The act of contriving; the thing contrived; scheme; plot; artifice.

Con-trive-ment, s. Contrivance; invention.

CONTROL, cōn-trōl, 116=cōn-trōul, 108: s. Originally, a counter-roll or check against another account; at present, check, restraint, power, superintendence.

To CON-TROL, v. a. To check by a counter reckoning to govern; to restrain; to overpower.

Con-trol-la-b'le, 101: a. Subject to control.

Con-trol-ler, 36: s. Generally, one who has the

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāts'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā': lāw: gōd: i'ōo, i, e, i'ou 55: a, e, i, &c. mir. 171.

power of governing or restraining; specially, a director or supervisor appointed to an office and receiving its profits; in this special sense often unnecessarily spelled Comptroller.

Con-trol'-ler-ship, s. The office of a controller.

Con-trol'-ment, s. The act of controlling; control.

To CONTROVERT=cōn'-trō-vert', v. a. (Compare Contraversion under Contra-) To turn against with opposition of mind, to debate, to dispute, to oppose by reasoning.

Con-tro-ver'-ter, Con-tro-ver'-tist, s. A disputant.

Con-tro-ver'-ti-ble, 105, 101: a. Disputable.

Con-tro-ver'-sary, (-cē'y, 152) s. Dispute; debate; agitation of opinions.

Con-tro-ver'-sial, (sh'āl, 147) a. That is meant to controvert; disputations.

Con-tro-ver'-sial-ist, s. A Controvertist.

→ Contraversion for Contravary, and Contraversor for Contravertist, are found only in old authors.

CONTUMACIOUS, cōn'-tū-mā'-sh'ūs, 90: u. Obstinate; perverse; inflexible.

Con-tu-mā'-cious-ly, ad. Obstinately; perversely.

Con-tu-mā'-cious-ness, s. Obstinacy.

Con-tu-mā'-cy, s. Obstinacy; wilful disobedience to any lawful summons or judicial order.

CONTUMELIOUS, cōn'-tū-mē'-lē-ūs, 105, 146, 120: a. Reproachful; rude; insolent; in some old writers, ignominious, shameful.

Con-tu-mē'-li-ous-ly, ad. Contemptuously.

Con-tu-mē'-li-ous-ness, s. Contempt; reproach.

Con-tu-mē-ly, s. Rudeness; insolence; reproach.

To CONTUND=cōn-tūnd', v. a. To Contuse. [Obs.]

To CON-TUSE, cōn-tūz', 137: v. a. To beat together; (See Co) to bruise; to bruise without breaking.

Con-tu-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. The act of bruising; the state of being bruised; a bruise.

CONUNDRUM=cō-nūn'-drūm, s. A sort of riddle in which some odd resemblance is proposed for discovery between things quite unlike; a quibble, a low jest.

CONUSANCE, &c. See Cognizance (legal) under Cognition.

CONVALESCENT=cōn-vā-lēs'-sēnt, a. Recovering strength after sickness, &c. See Co.

Con'-va-les'-cence, Con'-va-les'-cen-cy, s. Recovery.

To CONVENE=cōn-vēn', v. n. and a. To come together; to associate; to assemble for a public purpose.—act. To call together; to assemble; to summon judicially.

Con-ve'-ner, s. One of an assembly; a summoner.

Con-ve'-na-ble, 101: a. That may be convened.

Con-ve'-ni-ent, 146: a. Literally, meeting, or coming together with the occasion; hence, fit; suitable; commodious.

Con-ve'-ni-ent-ly, ad. Commodiously; fitly.

Con-ve'-ni-ence, Con-ve'-ni-ent-ty, s. Fitness; propriety; commodiousness; ease; accommodation.

Con'-vENT, s. An assembly of religious persons; an abbey; a monastery; a nunnery; a religious house.

Con-ven'-tu-al, (-tu-āl, 147) a. and s. Belonging to a convent;—s. A monk.

To CON-VENT', 83: v. a. and n. To call before a judge. [Obs.] new. To meet; to concur. [Little used.]

CON-VEN'-TI-CLE, 105, 101: s. An assembly; particularly for schismatical worship.

Con-ven'-ti-cle, s. A frequenter of conventicles.

CON-VEN'-TION, 89: s. The act of coming together; an assembly, generally for settling political questions; the contract or agreement formed at a Convention.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 163: thīn, 166; thēn, 166.

Con ven'-tion-al, a. Stipulated; agreed on by compact; tacitly understood.

Con ven'-tion-ar-y, 129: a. Acting upon contract.

Con ven'-tion-er, s. A member of a convention.

Con-ven'-tion-ist, s. One who makes a contract.

To CONVERGE=cōn-vergē', v. n. To tend to a point. It is opposed to Diverge.

Con-ver'-gent, } a. Tending to one point from different places.

Con-ver'-ging, } a. Tending to one point from different places.

Con-ver'-gence, s. Tendency to a common point.

To CONVERSE=cōn-verse', 153: v. n. Originally, to keep company, to associate, to cohabit; to have sexual commerce; at present, or usually, to talk familiarly; to converse thought reciprocally.

Con-ver'-sa-ble, a. Qualified for conversation.

Con-ver'-sa-bly, ad. In a conversable manner.

Con-ver'-sa-ble-ness, s. Sociableness; fluency.

Con-ver'-sive, Con-ver'-sa-tive, a. Chatty.

CON-VERSE, 83: s. Familiar acquaintance; conversation; cohabitation.—See also under To Convert.

Con-ver'-sant, a. Acquainted by keeping company; acquainted by study or practice; (in these senses followed by with;) concerning, having concern; (in this sense followed by about.)

Con-ver'-sa-tion, 89: s. Familiar discourse; easy talk; chat; a particular act of discourse; commerce; intercourse; behaviour; practical habits; in the New Test., Phil. iii. 20, citizenship.

Con-ver'-sa-tion-al, a. Relating to conversation; conversable.

Con-ver'-saz'-i-ō'-ne, (-sāt'-zē-ō'-nāy, [Ital.] 170) s. A meeting of company. In the plural, Conversazioni, (r.)

To CONVERT=cōn-vert', 35: v. a. and n. To turn or change to another form, substance, state or purpose; to change or turn to another religion; or to a better course of life; in an unusual but literal sense to turn towards a point;—new. To undergo a change.

Con-ver'-ter, 36: n. One that makes converts.

Con-ver'-ti-ble, 105, 101: a. Susceptible of change; interchangeable.

Con-ver'-ti-bly, 105: ad. Reciprocally.

Con-ver'-ti-bil'-i-ty, s. Possibility of being converted; of being interchanged.

Con-ver'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Change from one state to another; change to a holy life; change to another religion; interchange of term in an argument, as, "No virtue is vice, no vice is virtue;" the change or reduction of a fractional equation to an integral one.

Con-verse'-ly, ad. With change of order; reciprocally.

CON-VERT, 83: s. A person converted.

Con-ver'-tite, s. A convert. [Shaks.]

Con-verse, a. and s. Opposite reciprocally;—s. Opposite reciprocal proposition.—See other senses of this word under To Convert.

CONVEX, cōn-vēks, 154: a. and s. Rising or swelling externally into a spherical form, opposed to concave;—s. A convex body.

Con-ver'-ly, 105: ad. In a convex form.

Con-ver'-ness, s. Convexity.

Con-vex'-al, (-vēcst, 114, 143) a. Made convex.

Con-ver'-ed-ly, ad. In a convex form.

Con-ver'-i-ty, s. Spheroidal protuberance.

Con-ver'-o-con'-cave, 158: a. Convex on one side, and concave on the other.

Con-ver'-o-con'-ver, a. Convex on both sides.

To CONVEY=cōn-vāy', 100: v. a. To carry; to hand from one to another; to remove secretly; to transmit; to transfer; to deliver; to impart.

Con-vey'-a-ble, a. That may be conveyed.

Con-vey'-er, 36: s. He or that which conveys

Con-vey'-ance, 12: s. The act of removing, the thing removed; the means by which it is removed the act of transferring property; the deed which transfers.

Con-vey'-an-cer, s. A lawyer who draws writings by which property is transferred.

Con-vey'-an-cing, s. The business of a conveyancer.

CONVICINITY, cōn-vē-cin'-lē-tē, s. Neighbourhood.

To CONVICT.—See under the next word.

To CONVINCE=cōn-vīnc', v. a. Literally to vanquish or subdue; appropriately, to subdue the opposition of the mind to truth; to force the acknowledgement of a contested proposition; its literal sense will be found in old authors; also, to evince, to prove. (a sense likewise obs.) and I frequently in the bible, to convict.

Con-vin'-cer, s. He or that which convinces.

Con-vin'-ci-ble, a. Capable of conviction.

Con-vin'-cing-ly, ad. So as to compel assent.

Con-vin'-cing-ness, s. The power of convincing.

Con-vince'-ment, s. Conviction. [Obs.]

Con-vic'-tion, 89: s. The act of convincing; state of being convinced; consultation.—See also lower.

Con-vic'-tive, a. Having the power of convincing.

To Con-vict', v. a. To subdue the opposition to truth by proving a charge against one, or to prove him guilty; to show by proof or evidence; in old authors, to convince.

Con-vic'-tion, s. A finding guilty.—See also above.

Con-vic'-tive, a. Having the power of convicting.

Con'-vict, 83: s. One found guilty of crime; a felon.

CONVITIOUS, cōn-vīsh'-ūs, a. Reproachful. [Obs.]

To CONVIVE=cōn-vīve', v. a. To feast. [Obs.]

Con-viv'-i-al, 146: a. Festive; social.

Con-viv'-i-al'-i-ty, 84, 105: s. Festivity.

To CONVOKE=cōn-vōk', v. a. To call together.

To Con'-vo-cate, v. a. To convoke; to summon.

Con'-vo-ca'-tion, 89: s. The summoning of an assembly; an assembly, particularly of the clergy, or of the members or heads of a university.

To CONVOLVE=cōn-vōlv', v. a. To roll together.

Con'-vo-lu'-ted, 109: a. Twisted; rolled upon itself. Con'-vo-lute is also used.

Con'-vo-lu'-tion, 109, 89: s. The act of rolling together; the state of being rolled into; a twisting.

CON-VOL'-VULUS, s. The flower bindweed.

To CONVOY=cōn-voy', 29: v. a. To accompany by land or sea for the sake of defending. (If persons only are to be defended, To escort is specially used.)

Con'-voy, 81: s. An attendant force on a voyage or journey for the purpose of defence; the act of conveying; and in old authors, conveyance. To Convey, and To Convey, being originally related.

To CONVULSE=cōn-vulse', v. a. To draw or contract, as the muscular parts of an animal body; to affect by spasms; to shake by any strong irregular action.

Con-vul'-sive, 105: a. Tending to convulse.

Con-vul'-sive-ly, ad. In an agitated manner.

Con-vul'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Tumult; disturbance; an involuntary contraction of the fibres and muscles by which the body and limbs are distorted.

CONY, cō-nē-y, s. A rabbit. It is familiarly pronounced cūn'-ē-y; (116) the former or regular pronunciation is that proper for solemn reading. See S.

Con'-y-bur'-row, 108: s. Rabbit holes.

To COO=cō, v. n. To cry as a dove or pigeon.

Coo'-ing, s. Iteration, as the note of the dove.

To COOK=cōk, 125: v. n. To cry as the cuckoo.

To COOK, cōk, v. a. To boil, to bake, to roast, or otherwise dress for eating; to prepare for any purpose.

Cook, s. One whose business is to cook.

Cook'-er-y, s. The art or practice of cooking.

Co- Among the compounds are Cook'-room, (in a ship,) and Cook maid.

COOL=cōl, a. and s. Approaching to cold; temperate; not zealous; not ardent; not fond;—s. Freedom from heat.

To Cool, v. a. and n. To make cool; to allay heat to quiet passion;—n. To grow less hot; to lose the heat of excitement or passion; to become indifferent.

Cool'-ly, ad. Without heat or sharp cold; indifferently; calmly.

Cool'-ish, a. Rather cool.

Cool'-ness, s. A moderate degree of cold; indifference; disinclination.

Cool'-er, 36: s. That which cools; a medicine for cooling the body; a vessel for cooling fluids, &c.

COOLY=cōl'-lē, s. An Indian road-porter.

COOM=cōm, s. Soot that gathers over an oven; dust or dirt that works out of a machine.

COOMB, cōm, 156: s. A measure of four bushels.

COOP=cōp, s. Originally, a cask or barrel; hence, a wooden enclosure generally; a pen for small animals; a tumbrel or close cart. In old authors, Cub and Cub are found (pronounced no doubt coob, see 118) with nearly the same sense as Coop and To Coop.

To Coop, v. a. To put in a coop; to confine in a narrow compass; to straiten.

Coop'-er, 118, 36: s. One that makes barrels.

Coop'-er-age, 129, 99: s. The work or workshop of a cooper; allowance or pay for cooper's work.

To CO-OPERATE=cō-ōp'-ē-āt, v. n. To labour jointly; (see Co-) to concur in the same effect.

Co-op'-er-a'-tor, 38: s. A joint operator.

Co-op'-er-a'-tive, 105: a. Promoting a common end.

Co-op'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. Joint operation.

To CO-OPTATE=cō-ōp'-tāt, v. a. To choose jointly.

Co'-op-ta'-tion, 89: s. Choice; adoption.

CO-ORDINATE, cō-ōr'-dē-nā-tē, 105: a. Holding the same rank; not subordinate. It is used as a noun plural, Co-ordinates, in civic sections, to signify the absciss and its ordinates taken in conjunction.

Co-ōr'-di-nate-ly, ad. In the same rank.

Co-ōr'-di-nate-ness, s. Equality of rank.

Co-ōr'-di-na'-tion, s. The state of holding equal rank with regard to what is higher or lower.

COOT=cōt, s. A small black water fowl.

COOP=cōp, s. The head or top of any thing. [Obs.]

Cop'-a-tain, 98, 99: a. High-raised; pointed.

Copped, (cop't, 114, 143) Cop'-pld, a. Rising conically.

Cop'-land, s. Ground terminating in a cop.

COPAL=cō'-pāl, s. A name applied to various resins or gums of Mexico.

CO-PAL'-BA, s. A balsam; also, Copayva, Capivi, &c.

CO-PARCENER=cō-par'-cē-nēr, s. One who has equal share with others in a patrimonial inheritance.

Co-par'-ce-nar-y, (-nār'-ēy, s.) Joint heirship.

Co-par'-ce-n-y, s. An equal share of an inheritance.

CO-PARTMENT.—See Compartment under To Compartment.

CO-PARTNER=cō-part'-ner, 36: s. A sharer.

Co-part'-ner-ship, s. Joint concern in business.

COPE=cōp, s. (Compare Cop.) A cover for the head; a vestment worn in sacred ministrations; any thing spread or extended over the head. In old

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāw'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā'-pā; lāw; gōd; j'w, i. e. jw, 55: 1, 4, 1, &c. mute, 171.

Authors it may be found for Cop in literal and figurative senses.

To Cope, v. a. To cover as with a cope.—See other senses in the next class.

Cop'-ping, s. The top of a wall, which comes over it as a partial shelter.

To COPE=cōp, v. n. To contend, to strive, to deal emulatively; properly followed by with, which, in Shakespeare and other old writers, suffers ellipsis in many passages, but is always understood except when the meaning is that assigned to the verb in the preceding class.

Cope'-man, s. A dealer; a chapman. [Obs.]

Copes'-mate, s. A striver in friendship; a companion. It is less likely to mean one living under the same cope or roof. [Obs.]

COPERNICAN, cō-per'-nĭ-căn, n. Relating to the modern solar system, or that of Copernicus.

COPHOSIS, cō-fō'-sis, 163, 86: s. Dulness of any sense.

COPIER.—See under Copy.

COPING.—See under Cope.

COPIOUS, cō'-pĭ-ŭs, a. Plentiful; not concise.

Cō'-pi-ous-ly, ad. Abundantly; not barrenly.

Cō'-pi-ous-ness, s. Plenty; exuberance; diffusion.

COPLAND, COPPED.—See under Cop.

COPOSS=cōp'-ōss, s. Morbid lassitude.

COPPEL.—See Copel.

COPPER, cōp'-per, 36: s. and a. A metal of a pale red colour tinged with yellow; a vessel made with copper, particularly a large boiler; coin made of copper; in which last senses, it is liable to the plural number:—a. Consisting of copper.

To Cop'-per, v. a. To cover with copper.

Cop'-per-y, a. Containing copper; like copper.

COP'-PER-AS, s. Sulphate of copper or blue vitriol: this would seem the appropriate meaning; yet the name is more frequently used for the sulphate of iron or green vitriol.

Among the compounds are, Cop'-per-bottomed, Cop'-per-nose, (a burly nose;) Cop'-per-plate, (a plate for impressions—also an impression taken,) Cop'-per-smith, Cop'-per-worm, (that eats into the copper of ships,) &c.

COPPICE, cōp'-piss, 105: } s. A wood of small COPPS=cōps, 189: } growth, such as is often cut for fuel.

To Copse, v. a. To preserve underwood.

Cop'-sy, a. Abounding with coppes.

COPPLE.—See under Cop.

COPPLE-DUST.—See Copel-dust.

COPPLE-STONES.—See Cob.

COPTIC=cōp'-tic, a. and s. Pertaining to the Copts or Egyptians:—s. The language of the Copts.

COPULA=cōp'-ū lă, s. That which joins; in logic, that which joins the subject and predicate; in medicine, that which joins the bones, a ligament.

To Cop'-u-late, v. a. and n. To unite, to conjoin:—n. To come together sexually.

Cop'-u-late, a. Joined. [Little used.]

Cop'-u-lă-tive, 105: a. and s. That unites or couples; in grammar, uniting the sense as well as the words:—s. A copulative conjunction.

Cop'-u-lă-tion, s. The act of joining; coition.

COPY=cōp'-y, 105: s. That which is imitated from an original pattern; a transcript; one of a number of books printed from the same original; a picture or statue formed from a pattern: also that which is to be copied, as a pattern to write from; the autograph or original after which the compositor sets his type.

To Cop'-y, v. a. and n. To transcribe; to write after an original; to imitate:—n. To imitate.

Cop'-ier, 36: s. One who copies.

Cop'-y-ist, a. A transcriber; a plagiarist.

Cop'-y-hold, (-hōld, 116) s. A tenure for which the tenant has nothing to show but the copy of the rolls or enrolment made by the lord's court on his admission to any parcel of land.

Cop'-y-right, (-rite, 115, 162) s. The property which an author or his assignee has in a literary work.

COQUETTE, cō-kĕt', [Fr.] 170: s. A vain girl who attracts amorous advances, and rejects them for others.

Co-quet'-tish, a. Beating a coquette.

Co-quet'-ry, s. Deceit in love.

To Co-quet', v. a. and n. To flirt:—n. To trifle in love.

CORACLE, cōr'-d-cl, 101: s. A boat made by leather stretched on wicker-work.

CORACOID=cōr'-d-coid, a. Shaped as a crow's beak, applied to a process of the shoulder-blade.

CORAL=cōr'-ăl, 129, 12: s. and a. A hard substance, red, white, or black, found in the ocean adhering to other substances, formerly supposed a vegetable, but now esteemed a congeries of animals; a piece of coral, generally set in gold or silver with small bells, which children wear about the neck:—adj. Made of coral.

Cor'-al-line, (-lĭn, 105) n. and s. Consisting of coral:—s. The general name of a number of submarine substances of a doubtful nature, under which Coral, the most prominent of the whole class, is included.

Cor'-al-li-form', 38: a. Formed as coral.

Cor'-al-loid, or Cor'-al-loid'-al, a. Like coral.

Cor'-al-lă'-ceous, (-sh'ŭs, 147) a. Partaking of the qualities of coral.

Cor'-al-lite, s. A petrification like a coral.

Among the compounds are, Cor'al-tri-e, and Cor'al-wort, so named from slight resemblances of colour or shape.

CORANT=cō-rănt', s. A word derived from a French verb signifying To run, and found in old authors as the name of a dance otherwise called Coranto; and also used to signify a courier.

CORBAN=cōr'-băn, 12: s. Among the Jews, an offering which had life, in distinction from the Mincha, or an offering without life.—See also in the next class.

CORB=cărb, 37: s. A basket used in conleries.

Cor'-ban, 12: s. An alms-basket.—See also above.

Cor'-bel, (-bĕl, 120) s. A little basket filled with earth, used in numbers on a parapet in a siege.

Cor'-bel, s. The representation of a basket in architecture; the vase of the Corinthian column; a niche in a wall for a figure or statue.

CORD=cărd, s. A rope, or thicker kind of string; a quantity of wood originally measured by the cord that bound it; it is a pile 8 feet long, 4 high, and 4 broad. Cord'-wood is wood piled up for fuel.

To Cord, v. a. To bind with cord.

Cor'-dage, 99: s. Cords and ropes collectively.

Cor'-ded, n. Bound with cord; ready to be measured with a cord; striped or furrowed as by cords.

Cor'-du-ri-en', (-lĕr, 103) s. A Franciscan friar, so named from the cord worn as a girdle.

Cor'-don, cōr'-dōng, [Fr.] 170: s. A row of stones in fortification; a line of military posts.

Cor'-du-roy, s. Stout corded cotton cloth.

CORDATED, CORDIAL, &c.—See under Core.

COROVAN=cōr'-dō-văn, s. A Spanish leather originally from Cordova in Spain: it is often called Cord'-wain.

CORD'-WAIN-ER, s. A shoemaker, though properly a worker in Cordovan: often shortened into Cor'-di-ner.

CORE=cōre, 47: s. The heart or inner part of any thing, particularly of fruit.

Cor'-da-ten, Cor'-di-form, 37: a. In the form of a heart.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Cons-nants: mĭsh-ŭn, i. e. mission, 165: vĭsh-ŭn, i. e. vision, 165: thĭn, 166: thĕn, 166.

→ The former word is not equivalent to the Latin Cor-de-tus.

COR-de-al, (cor-dē-āl, 146, 147) a. and s. Proceeding from the heart, hearty, sincere; giving force to the heart, cheering, invigorating:—s. A medicine or drink for quickening the spirits; any thing that comforts or exhilarates.

COR-de-al-ly, 105: ad. Sincerely; heartily.

COR-de-al'-i-ty, 84, 85: s. Relation to the heart; warmth of manner; sincerity.

CORED=cōurd, 47: s. In the herring fishery, cured to a certain degree CORIACEOUS, cor-ē-ā'-sh'ūs, 48, 147: a. Consisting of leather, or of a substance resembling leather.

CORIANDER, cor-ē-ān'-d-r, 48: s. A plant; a hot seed from it used as a carminative.

CORINTH=cōr'-īnth, s. A city in Greece noted among other things for its fruits, its licentiousness, and architecture. It is the original word for what we now call a currant, which is a corruption of it.

Cor-in'-thi-an, (cōr'-īn'-thē-ān), a. and s. Pertaining to Corinth; of the third kind of Grecian architecture, Doric and Ionic being the others; licentious:—s. A gay licentious person.

CORK=cārk, 37: s. A glandiferous tree growing in Spain and Portugal whose bark is used for making stopples; that which is made of cork, particularly a stopple.

Cor-ky, 105: a. Consisting of cork; resembling cork in colour or fungousness; tough.

To Cork, v. a. To stop with corks; to bung; to stop up or confine.

CORK-SCREW, (-scroo, 109) s. A screw to draw corks.

CORK'-ING-PIN, s. A pin of large size, used formerly in attaching the female head dress to a cork mould.

CORMORANT=cor'-mō-rānt, s. A voracious bird, the water-raven, that preys on fish; perhaps a corruption of Corvus corax: a glutton.

CORN=cārn, 37: s. The seeds that grow in ears, not in pods; grain unwrapped, particularly wheat; more comprehensively, grain of all kinds; any minute particle. See also under Corneous.

To Corn, v. a. To form into grains, to granulate; to sprinkle with grains of salt, to cure by salting.

Corn'-bind, (-bind, 115) s. Climbing buckwheat.

Corn'-crake, s. A bird with a shrill cry that frequents corn-fields.

Corn'-floor, (-flōr, 132) s. A floor for storing corn.

Corn'-ing-house, s. A house where gunpowder is granulated.

Corn'-pipe, s. A pipe made by slitting the joint of a green stalk of corn. Corn-rent, see Supp.

→ The other compounds are numerous; Corn'-blade, Corn'-chandler, Corn'-field, Corn'-land, Corn'-loft, Corn'-meter, and Corn'-mill, explain their own meaning; and Corn'-flag, Corn'-flower, Corn'-marygold, Corn'-parsley, Corn'-rocket, Corn'-rose, Corn'-sallad, and Corn'-violet, are plants. Corn-beef is properly Corned-beef.

CORNELIAN, cor-nē'-lē-ān, 146: s. A stone of a deep red flesh colour, and hence often written Carnelian.

CORNEL, CORNELIAN TREE.—See under the following.

CORNEOUS, cor-nē-ūs, 120: a. Horny.

Cor-ni'-cle, 105, 101: s. A little horn.

Cor-ni'-u-late, a. Horned, a term applied to plants which produce many distinct horned pods.

Cor-ni-form, a. Having the shape of horns.

Cor-nig'-er-ous, (-nīd'-gēr-ūs) a. Having horns.

COR-NY, a. Hard or strong like horn.

Corn, s. An indurated horny wart on the feet.

Corn'-cut-ter, s. One who professes to cure corns.

Cor'-ne-a, s. The horny coat of the eye.

Cor'-nel, or Cor'-ne'-li-an-tree, s. A tree bearing the cornelian cherry, so named from the horny or hard nature of its wood.

COR'-NET, s. An instrument made of horn: an instrument of a winding shape like a horn of the nature of a trumpet. See also lower, and likewise under Coronal.

Cor-net-er, or Cor'-nist, s. A player on a cornet.

Cor'-nage, s. A tenure which obliges the tenant to give notice of an invasion by blowing a horn.

Cor'-na-mute, s. A rustic flute or horn.

Cor'-nu-co'-pi-a, s. The horn of plenty.

COR-NU'-TO, s. He who wears horns, a cuckold.

To Cor-nute, v. a. To bestow horns, to cuckold.

COR'-NET, s. Anciently, a troop of horse, so many as had a cornet belonging to them; also a flag or ensign which the bearer was to move forward when the cornet sounded, the trumpet being the signal for the soldiers to move forward without the ensigns. Hence the modern signification of Cornet, namely, the officer that bears the standard of a cavalry troop.—See also above, and under Coronal.

Cor-net-ey, s. The commission of a cornet.

CORNER=cor'-ner, 36: s. An angle; a secret or remote place; the extremities, the utmost limit.

COR'-nered, (-nerd, 114) a. Having corners.

Cor'-ner-stone, s. The stone which unites the two stones at the corner; the principal stone.

Cor'-ner-wise, (-wīz, 151) ad. Diagonally.

CORNET, &c. CORNETER.—See under Corneous.

CORNICE.—See under Coronal.

CORNICLE, CORNICULATE, &c. CORNY, &c. CORNUTO, &c. CORNUCOPIA.—See under Corneous.

CORNISH, cor'-nīsh, a. Pertaining to Cornwall.

CORODY.—See Corrody, under To Corrode.

COROLLARY, CORONA, &c.—See in the next class.

CORONAL=cōr'-ā nāl, 129: s. and a. A crown; a wreath; a garland. [Spenser].—a. Pertaining to the top of the head.

Cor'-o-nar-y (-nār-ēy) a. Relating to a crown; placed as a crown; resembling a garland or wreath, in which sense it is often used in Anatomy.

Cor'-o-nā'-tion, 89: s. The act or solemnity of crowning a king; the pomp or assembly present.

Cor'-o-ner, s. An officer whose office is concerned principally with pleas of the crown. One chief part of his duty is, to inquire into the manner of any sudden death.

Cor'-o-net, s. A crown worn by the nobility; an ornamental head dress; something that surmounts.

Cor'-net, s. A contraction of Coronet, used as the name of that part of a horse's hoof that circularly surmounts the rest.—See also under Corneous.

Cor'-nice, (cor'-niss, 105) s. The highest projection of a wall or column.

Cor'-o-nule, s. The coronet or downy tuft on seeds.

Co-ro'-na, 2: s. The Latin word for crown, the parent of the preceding words, applied in architecture, to the large flat member of a cornice crowning the entablature; and in bot. to a combination like a disk.

Co-ro-ni'-form, 92: a. Having the form of a crown.

Co-ro-i'-la, 2: s. The Latin word for a little crown, applied in botany to the flower leaves or petals that surround the parts of fructification. It is often shortened into Cor-al.

Cor'-ol-la'-ceous, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Pertaining to a coral.

COR'-OL-LAR-Y, (cōr'-ōl-lār-ēy) s. That which comes as a flush or little crown to the rest, a conclusion or inference from a proposition that has been proved.

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels. gāi'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōōd: j'ōō. i. e. jru, 55: a. e. &c. mute, 171.

CORPORAL=cōr'-pō-rāl, s. The lowest officer of infantry; a naval officer of similar degree. This word is a corruption of Cap'toral: Compare Captain.

CORPORAL=cōr'-pō-rāl, a. Relating to the body; belonging to the body; material not spiritual. In the last sense Corporal is now more commonly used.

Cor'-po-ral, s. A linen cloth used in the Roman church to cover the sacred elements (the body and blood) in the eucharist; it was also called Corpo-ras. Hence the expression, Corporal oath, from the ancient usage of touching the corporal while swearing.

Cor-po-ral'-ly, ad. Bodily.

Co-po-ral'-i-ty, s. The quality of being embodied. —See also lower.

Cor'-po-RATE, a. United in a body or community; enabled to act in legal processes as an individual; general; united.

Cor'-po-rate-ly, ad. In a corporate capacity.

Cor'-po-rate-ness, s. The state of a body corporate.

Cor-po-ral'-i-ty, 84: s. Confraternity.

Cor-po-ral'-tion, 89: s. A body politic chartered to have a common seal, one head officer or more, and members, able by their common consent to grant or receive any thing within the compass of their charter.

Corps, (cōra, [Fr.] 170) s. A body of troops. The orography is the same for the plural, but it is then pronounced as if written cores.

Cor-po-RE-AL, 90: a. Having a body, not spiritual. Corporeous is out of use.

Cor-po-re-al-ly, ad. In a material form or manner.

Cor-po'-re-al-ist, s. A materialist.

Cor-po-re'-i-ty, s. The state of having a body.

Cor'-po-SANT, (-zānt, 151) s. A volatile meteor sometimes seen about the riggings of ships: from the Italian Corpo Santo.

CORPSE, 159: s. A dead body, a corpse.

Cor'-PU-LENT, a. Fleahey; bulky.

Cor-pu-lence, Cor'-pu-len-cy, s. Fleishiness.

Cor'-pus-cu-lē, (cōr'-pūs-sī, 156, 101) s. A small body; a particle of matter.

Cor-pus'-cu-lar, 38: a. Relating to or comprising Corpuscles; the corpuscular philosophy proposes to account for natural phenomena by the motion, figure, &c. of the minute particles of matter.

Cor-pus'-cu-lā'-ti-an, a. and s. Corpuscular:—s. An advocate for the corpuscular philosophy.

Corse, s. Literally the body; appropriately, in poetic language, a corpse.

Corse-let, s. Light armour for the forepart of the body.

Cor'-set, s. That which is worn round the body, a bodice, or stays.

To CORRADE=cōr-rādē, v. a. To scrape together; (See Co-) to rub off.

CORRADIATION, cōr-rādē-ā'-shūn, 89: s. Conjunction of rays in one point.—See Co.

To CORRECT=cōr-rect', v. a. To amend; to rectify; to take away faults; to punish.

Cor-rect', a. Free from faults; accurate.

Cor-rect'-ly, ad. Accurately; without faults.

Cor-rect'-ness, s. Accuracy; exactness.

Cor-rec-tive, a. and s. Having power to obviate any bad qualities:—s. That which has the power of correcting; limitation.

Cor-rec-tor, 38: s. He or that which corrects.

Cor-rec'-tion, 89: s. The act of correcting; punishment; discipline; amendment; reprehension.

Cor-rec'-tion-al, a. Tending, or intended to correct.

Cor'-ru-gr-BLE, 105, 101: a. Capable of being corrected; punishable.

Cor'-ru-grn'-da, [Lat.] s. pl. Things to be corrected.

COR-REGU-LI-DOR, (-rēd'-gū-dor, 105) s. The chief magistrate in a Spanish town.

To CORRELATE=cōr-rē-lātē, v. n. To have a reciprocal relation, as father and son.—See Co.

Cor'-re-late, s. One that stands in the opposite relation. Correlative is now used.

Cor-rel'-a-tive, 105: a. and s. Having a reciprocal relation:—s. He or that which stands in reciprocal relation.

Cor-rel'-a-tive-ly, 105: ad. In a correlative manner.

Cor-rel'-a-tive-ness, s. The state of being correlative.

Cor'-re-la'-tion, s. Reciprocal relation.

CORREPTION, cōr-rēp'-shūn, 89: s. Reproof.

To CORRESPOND=cōr-rē-spōnd', v. n. To suit; to answer; to keep up the interchange of letters.

Cor'-re-spon'-dent, a. and s. Suitable; adapted:—s. One who interchanges letters.

Cor'-re-spon'-dent-ly, ad. In an according manner.

Cor'-re-spon'-dence, (cōr-rē-spōndē, n. n.) s. Relation; reciprocity.

Cor'-re-spon'-den-cy, (cōr-rē-spōndē, n. n.) s. Adaptation; interchange of letters; or of civilities; friendship.

Cor'-re-spon'-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Answerable.

CORRIDOR, cōr-rē-dor', 129, 105: s. An aisle or passage; the common way from many chambers, and passing round or through a building; in a fortification, the covert way lying quite round it.

CORRIGIBLE, CORRIGENDA.—See under To correct.

CORRIVAL=cōr-rī-vāl, s. A fellow rival.—See Co.

Cor-rī-val-ry, s. Competition.

To CORRIVATE, cōr-rē-vātē, v. a. To unite into one stream.

Cor-rī-va'-tion, 89: s. The running of waters into one stream.

To CORROBORATE=cōr-rōb'-ō-rātē, 129: v. a. To confirm; to establish; to strengthen.

Cor-rob'-o-rate, a. Corroborated. [Bacon.]

Cor-rū'-o-rant, 12: a. and s. Strengthening, confirming:—s. A medicine that strengthens.

Cor-rob'-o-ra'-tive, 105: a. and s. Tending to confirm or strengthen:—s. That which increases strength.

Cor-rob'-o-ra'-tion, 89: s. The act of strengthening or confirming; confirmation.

To CORRODE=cōr-rōdē, 129: v. a. To eat away by degrees; to prey upon; to consume.

To Cor-ro'-di-ate, v. a. To corrode. [Little used.]

Cor-ro'-dent, a. and s. Having the power of corroding:—s. That which corrodes.

Cor-ro'-di-ble, 105: a. Capable of corrosion.

Cor-ro'-di-bil'-i-ty, s. The quality of being corroding.

COR-RO-SIVE, (-civ, 105) a. and s. Having the power of wearing away; having the quality to fret or vex:—s. That which has the quality of corroding.

Cor-ro'-sive-ly, 105: ad. With the power of corrosion.

Cor-ro'-sive-ness, s. Acrimony.

Cor-ro'-si-ble, a. Corrodible; which latter is the preferable word.

COR-RO-SION, (-zhūn, 147) s. The state of being eaten into or worn away by degrees.

Cor-ro-DR, s. Literally, a joint consuming; (See Co-) a claim on a religious house by the king or another as due for the sustentation of his chaplains or others.

To CORRUGATE, cōr-roo-gātē, 109: v. a. To wrinkle, or purse up; to contract into little folds or rucks.

Cor'-ru-gate, a. Wrinkled. [Young.]

Cor'-ru-gant, 12: a. Having the power of contracting into wrinkles.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Comments: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: dūn, 165: thēn, 164.

COR'-ru-ga'-tor, s. The muscle that contracts or wrinkles the forehead.
COR'-ru-ga'-tion, s. Contraction into wrinkles.
To CORRUPT=cōr-rūpt', v. a. and n. To turn from a sound to a putrescent state; to deprave; to destroy integrity; to bribe;—new. To become putrid; to lose purity.
Cor-rup't, a. Tainted; un-sound; vicious.
Cor-rup't-er, 36: s. He that taints or vitiates.
Cor-rup't-ly, ad. With corruption; viciously.
Cor-rup't-ness, s. Putrescence; vice.
Cor-rup't-less, n. Insusceptible of corruption.
Cor-rup-tive, 105: a. Having the quality of vitiating.
Cor-rup-tion, 89: s. The principle by which bodies tend to a separation of their parts, putrescence; matter or pus in a sore; depravation, wickedness; the taint derived to a man and his issue by treason or felony.
Cor-rup-ti-ble, 101: a. Susceptible of destruction by natural decay; susceptible of depravation.
Cor-rup-ti-bly, ad. So as to be vitiated.
Cor-rup-ti-ble-ness, }
Cor-rup-ti-bil-i-ty, } s. Possibility to be corrupted.
CORSAIR=cōr'-sāir, s. A pirate; or his vessel.
CORSE, CORSELET, CORSET.—See under Corporal.
CORSNED=cōrs'-nēd, s. The bread of ex-ecration, or ordeal mouthful used formerly by an accused person who wished, in swallowing it, that it might destroy him if guilty.
CORTEGE, CORTES.—See under Court.
CORTEX=cōr'-tēcks, 154: s. Bark or rind.
Cor'-ti-cal, a. Barky; belonging to the rind.
Cor'-ti-cate, Cor'-ti-ca'-ted, a. Resembling bark.
Cor'-ti-cose, (-cōce, 152) a. Full of bark.
Cor'-ti-c'i-form (-tīs-sē-fārm) a. Like bark.
Cor'-ti-cif'-er-ous, 120: a. Producing bark.
CORUNDUM=cō-rūn'-dūm, s. A sort of adamantine earth.
To CORUSCATE=cō-rūs'-cāte, v. n. To glitter.
Co-rus'-cant, a. Glittering by flashes; flashing.
Cor'-us-ca'-tion, s. Flash; quick vibration of light.
CORVETTE, cor-vēt', [Fr.] 170: s. An advice boat; a sloop of war.—See Corvetto under Curve.
CORVUS=cōr'-vūs: s. A military engine with a hook like a crow's beak, used by the ancient Romans in boarding an enemy's vessel; literally, a crow.
Cor'-vine, 105: a. Belonging to a crow or raven.
CORYBANTIC=cōr'-ē-bān'-tīck, a. Madly agitated or inflamed, like the Corybantes or priests of Cybele.
CORYMBUS=cō-rīm'-būs, s. Primarily, a head or cluster; a bunch of berries; a compounded discus flower, such as the daisy or common marigold. It is shortened into Cor'-ymb.
Co-rym'-bous, 120: a. Consisting of corymba.
Co-rym'-bu-lous, a. Having little corymba.
Co-rym'-bi-a-ted, a. Decked with ivy berries.
Cor'-ym-bif'-er-ous, a. Bearing clusters.
CORYPHEUS, cōr'-ē-fē'-ūs, 163: s. The leader of the ancient dramatic chorus; a leader or chief.
COSCINOMANCY, cōs'-sē-nō-mān'-cēy, 87: s. Divination by a sieve.
COSECANT=cō-sē'-cānt, s. The secant of an arc which is the complement of another arc to make up 90 degrees. In the same manner Co'-sine is the sine, and Co-tan'-gent is the tangent, of an arc which, in each case, is the complement of another arc.
COSIER, cō'-zhē-er, 147: s. A butcher. [Obs.]

COSEY, cō'-zēy, 151: a. (Casseur, Fr.) Chatty; comfortably placed for chatting; Co'-si-ly, ad. [Col.]
COSMETIC, cōz-mēt'-ic, 151: s. and a. A preparation for improving beauty;—adj. Beautifying.
COSMICAL, cōz-mē'-cāl, 151: a. Generally, relating to the world; specially, rising or setting with the sun, as opposed to acronycal.
Co'-mi-cal-ly, ad. Not acronycally.
COS-MO-GO-NY, 151: s. The birth of the universe, the science which treats of the origin of the universe.
Co'-mog'-o-nist, s. One learned in cosmogony.
COS-MO-GO-RA-PHY (-fēy, 163) 151: s. The science or art of describing the world with relation to the universe.
Co'-mog'-ra-pher, s. A professor of cosmography.
Co'-mo-graph'-i-cal, a. Relating to cosmography.
Co'-mo-graph'-i-cal-ly, ad. In a manner relating to the structure of the world.
Co'-mo-labe, 151: s. An ancient instrument for measuring distances of the terrestrial or of the celestial spheres.
COS-MOL-A-TOR-Y, 151, 129: s. The worship paid to the world and its parts by heathens.
COS-MOL-O-GY, 151, 87: s. A treatise on, or the doctrine of the universe, its structure and its parts.
Co'-mol'-o-gist, s. One versed in cosmology.
Co'-mo-log'-i-cal, a. Relating to cosmology.
COS-MO-ME-TRY, 151: s. The measurement of the world by degrees and minutes.
Co'-mo-plas'-tic, 151: a. World-forming.
Co'-mo-poi'-i-tan, COS-MO-U-LITE, 151: s. A citizen of the world.
Co'-mo-r'-ma, 151: s. A view or series of views of the world; a comprehensive painting.
COSS=cōss, s. One and a half mile, nearly. [Hindo.] As a distinct word, it means podded, as cos lettuce.
COSSACK=cōs'-sāck, s. One of a military people, skilful as horsemen, who inhabit the Ukraine.
COSSET=cōs'-sēt, s. A house-lamb.
COSSIC=cōs'-sick, a. Relating to Algebra. [Obs.]
COST=cōst, 17: s. Price; charge; expense; luxury; loss. Costs; expenses incurred in a law-suit.
To Cost, } v. a. To be bought for; to be had as I Cost, } the price of; to be obtained by;
Cost, } cp. It is always active. "It cost me much labour;" i. e. "It cost much labour to me."
Cost'-ly, 105: a. Expensive.
Cost'-less, a. Attainable without expense.
Cost'-li-ness, s. Sumptuousness; expensiveness.
COST=cōst, 17: s. A rib or side. [B. Jonson.]
Cost'-tal, a. Belonging to the ribs; Cost'-tate, ribbed COSTARD=cōs'-tard, 34: s. A head; [Obs.] an apple round and bulky like the head.
Cost'-tard-mon'-ger (-mūn'-gēr, 116, 77) s. An apple seller.
Cost'-ter-mon'-ger, s. (A corruption of the foregoing.) An itinerant seller of fruit or vegetables.
COSTIVE, cōs'-tīv, 105: a. Constipated or bound in body; close, hard; impermeable; confined.
Cost'-ive-ness, s. The state of being costive.
COSTLESS, COSTLY, &c. See under Cost.
COSTMARY, cōst'-mār'-ēy, s. A kind of tansy.
COSTUME=cōs'-tūm', s. Style of dress; characteristic dress; in painting it includes something more, namely, the adaptation of the whole detail of a picture to characters, time, and place.
COT=cōt, s. A small house; a hut; a cottage. See also after this class.—See likewise Cotquean.
Cote, s. A cot. [Obs.] a sheepfold; a dove-house.
Cot'-land, s. Land appendant to a cottage.
Cot'-ter, s. A cottager; Cot'-ti-er, is the same, but Obs.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Forcel's gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōōd: j'wō, i. e. jew 55: a, c, &c. mufc, 171.

Cow-wold (-wôld, 116) s. Sheepcotes in an open country.

Cot'-TAGG, 99: s. A hut; any small dwelling. A Cottage ornée (or'-nay) is a small villa.

Cot'-ta-ger, s. One who lives in a cottage; specifically, one who lives rent-free on a common.

COT=côt, s. A little boat. [Spenser. Obs.]

COT=côt, s. A small bed; a cradle: a hammock.

To COTE=côte, v. a. To come up to, and pass by. [Obs.]

COTEMPORARY.—See Contemporary.

CO-TENANT=cô-tên'-ânt, s. A tenant in common.

COTERIE, cô't-êr-ê'', [Fr.] 170. s. A circle or club of fashionables, sometimes consisting only of ladies.

COTHURNUS=cô-thur'-nûs, s. A buskin.

Co-thur'-nate, Co-thur'-na-ted, a. Buskined.

COTICULAR=cô-tic'-û-lar, 34: a. Pertaining to whetstones; like, or suitable for, whetstones.

COTILLON, cô-tîl'-yông [Fr.] 170: s. A lively dance, usually for eight persons; the tune played with it.

COTTAGE, COTTIER, COTSWOLD, &c. See under Cot.

COTQUEAN, cô't-kwê'n, 188: s. A man who busies himself with affairs properly belonging to women. Cot. when a contraction of the same word, has the same meaning.

COTTON, cô't-tôn, 114: s. and a. The soft downy substance growing in the pods of a shrub cultivated in warm climates, particularly in the East-Indies; the cloth made of the down.—adj. Made or consisting of cotton; pertaining to cotton.

Cot'-ton-y, a. Full of cotton; soft as cotton.

To Cot'-ton, v. n. To rise with a nap; To cotton with any one, to unite with him. [Swift.]

Among the compounds are, Cot'ton grass, Cot'ton thistle, Cot'ton-weed, which are all plants; and Cot'ton-mill, Cot'ton-machine, used in preparing Cotton.

COTYLA=côt'-lâ, 5, 2: s. A hollow, but particularly the cavity of a bone which receives the end of another.

Co-ryl'-b'-don, 92, 18: s. The lobe that nourishes the seeds of plants, and then perishes.

Cot'-y-led'-o-nous, 92, 120: a. Having a seed lobe.

To COUCH=cowtch, 31, 63: v. n. and a. To lie down on a place of repose; to recline on the knees, as a beast; to lie down in secret, or in ambush; to stoop, to bend down.—act. To lay in a place of repose; to place close to, or within: to involve, include, or comprize; to fix the spear in the rest in the posture of attack; to depress a cataract or filmy humor obstructing vision, so as to leave the lens free from it.

Couch, s. A seat of repose; a bed; a layer, stratum, or lay.

Among the compounds are Couch'-fellow, a bed-fellow; and Couch'-grass, a weed.

Couch'-ant, 12: a. Lying down; lev'-ant and couchant, with reference to beasts, signifies one complete day or night.

Couch'-er, 36: s. One that couches cataracts; in old statutes, a factor resident in a place while trading.

Couch'-ing, s. The act of bending; the act of depressing the cataract.

COUCH'-EE, côsh'-ê-y, s. A word opposed to Lev'-ee; bed-time, or visits received about bed-time. [Fr.]

COUGH, cōf, 125, 162: s. A convulsive effort of the lungs with noise to get rid of phlegm or other matter.

To Cough, v. n. and a. To have the lungs convulsed; to make the noise of a cough.—act. To eject by a cough.

Cough'-er, 36: s. He that coughs.

COUHAGE, cow'-hage, 99: s. An Indian bean, the pods of which sting like a nettle.

COULD.—See the verb Can.

COLTLER.—See Colter.

COUNCIL=cown'-cil, s. Literally, that which is called together, an assembly met for deliberation, or to give advice; an assembly of divines; the body of privy counsellors of the king or queen.

Among the compounds are Council-board and Council-table, which have the same meaning, namely, the table round which a council sits, or the council itself. Councillor, when not used by a mistake for Counsellor, means a member of a council.

COUNSEL=cown'-sêl, 14: s. Advice, direction; consultation; interchange of opinions; deliberation; prudence; art; secrecy; scheme; purpose; the counsellors, collectively, that plead a cause, and hence a single counsellor when a party's counsel does not include more.

To Coun'-sel, v. a. To give advice; to advise.

Coun'-sel-la-ble, a. Willing to follow advice.

Coun'-sel-lor, 36, 194: s. One that counsels; one whose province is to deliberate on public affairs; (such a one being generally the member of a council, the etymological relationship of the word in this sense is often misapprehended); one who is entitled to plead in a court of law, a barrister. Councillor, see Council, &c.

Coun'-sel-lor-ship, s. The office of a counsellor.

To COUNT=cownt, 31: v. a. To number; to tell; to reckon, to account, to esteem, to impute to:—new. To found an account or scheme; to rely.

Count, s. Number, reckoning; number summed; estimation; in law, a charge in an indictment; or a declaration in pleading.

Count'-a-ble, 101: a. That may be counted.

Count'-less, a. Innumerable; infinite.

Count'-er, s. An imitation of a piece of money used as a means of counting; money in contempt; the table in a shop on which money is counted; in old authors, an officer whose duty was to audit or examine matters of account; a prison in London.

Count'-er-cast, s. A trick; a cheat.

Count'-er-cas'-ter, s. A reckoner in contempt.

Count'-ing-house, s. A room for accounts.

COUNT=cownt, 31: s. A foreign title.

Count'-ess, s. A count's wife; an earl's wife.

COUNTENANCE=cown' tê nânce, 12: s. Form of the face, air, look; exterior appearance; patronage support.

To Count'-te-nance, v. a. To support; to encourage.

Count'-te-nan-cer, s. One that countenances.

COUNTER=coun'-ter, ad. Contrary to; in a wrong way. As a substantive, see above under To Count. As a prefix, compare with Contra.

To COUN'-TER-act', v. a. To hinder by counteraction.

Coun'-ter-ac'-tion, 89: s. Opposite agency.

To COUN'-TER-BAL'-ANCE, v. a. To weigh against.

Coun'-ter-bal'-ance, s. Equivalent power.

COUN'-TER-BOND, s. A bond to save harmless one who has given bond for another.

To COUN'-TER-BUFF, v. a. To repel; to strike back.

Coun'-ter-buff, s. A stroke producing recoil.

Counteract, &c.—See under To Count.

COUN'-TER-CHANGE, (-chânge, 111) s. Reciprocalion.

To Coun'-ter-change, v. a. To exchange.

COUN'-TER-CHARM, s. That which breaks a charm.

To Coun'-ter-charm, v. a. To destroy enchantment.

To COUN'-TER-CHECK, v. a. To oppose; to check.

Coun'-ter-check, s. A rebuke; an opposite account.

COUN'-TER-CUR'-RENT, a. and s. Running in an opposite way:—s. An opposite current.

To COUN'-TER-DRAW, v. a. To trace the lines of a drawing through transparent paper.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound

Consonants: mîsh-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: v'ch-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

COUN'-TER-EV'-I-DENCE, s. Opposite evidence.
To COUN'-TER-VEIT, (-fít, 119) v. a. and n. To copy with intent to pass the copy for an original; to imitate:—new. To feign.
COUN'-ter-fet, a. and s. Forged; fictitious; deceitful:—s. An impostor; a forger.
COUN'-ter-fet-ly, ad. Falsely; fictitiously.
COUN'-ter-fet-er, s. A forger, an impostor.
COUN'-ter-fur'-gence, 151: s. Forgery. [Obs.]
COUN'-ter-fet-ment, s. A contrary ferment.
COUN'-ter-fort, (-fórt, 130) s. A buttress.
COUN'-ter-gage, s. Method of measuring joints.
COUN'-ter-guard, (-gard, 121) s. A small rampart.
COUN'-ter-light, (-lít, 115) s. A light destroying the advantageous effect of another light.
To COUN'-ter-mand, v. a. To revoke a command.
COUN'-ter-mand, 81: s. Repeat of a former order.
To COUN'-ter-march, v. n. To march back.
COUN'-ter-march, 81: s. A retrograde march.
COUN'-ter-mark, s. A second or third mark on a bale of goods consigned to different owners; the mark of the goldsmith's company; a second mark on coin.
To COUN'-ter-mark, v. a. To place a countermark; to hollow a horse's teeth to conceal his age.
COUN'-ter-mine, s. A mine to frustrate the use of one made by an enemy.
To COUN'-ter-mine, v. a. To defeat secretly.
COUN'-ter-mune, s. A wall behind another.
COUN'-ter-pane, s. A coverlet for a bed, so called from that kind which was composed of variegated squares or panes; also, in old authors, a counterpart.
COUN'-ter-part, s. Correspondent part; copy.
COUN'-ter-plea, 103: s. A replication in law.
To COUN'-ter-plot, v. a. To oppose one plot by another.
COUN'-ter-plot, 81: s. A plot against a plot.
COUN'-ter-point, s. A counterpane; in music, the setting of point to point, or the noting of the parts in such order, that each note shall correspond with those that are to harmonize with it in the other parts; the modern science or art of harmony in music.
To COUN'-ter-poise, (-poiz, 151, 189) v. a. To counterbalance; to act with equal power against.
COUN'-ter-poise, s. Equivalence of weight.
COUN'-ter-poi'-son, (zn, 151, 114) s. Antidote.
COUN'-ter-sa'-li-ant, a. Leaping from each other; applied to beasts in a coat of arms.
COUN'-ter-scarp, s. Strictly, that slope of the ditch which faces the fortified place, and is next the enemy's camp; it often signifies, however, not merely the ditch but the covered way that surmounts it.
To COUN'-ter-sign, (-sín, 115) v. a. To sign what has already been signed by a superior.
COUN'-ter-sig'-na-ture, s. Confirming signature.
COUN'-ter-sign, s. A military watchword.
COUN'-ter-sig'-nal, s. A responsive signal.
COUN'-ter-ten'-or, 38: s. The high tenor.
COUN'-ter-time, s. Primarily, a term in horsemanship for the resistance of a horse to his proper paces; hence opposition generally.
COUN'-ter-turn, s. The denouement of a play.
To COUN'-ter-vail, v. a. To act against equally.
COUN'-ter-vail, s. Equal weight or value.
COUN'-ter-view, (-vú, 110) s. Contrast.
To COUN'-ter-work, (-wurk, 141) v. a. To counteract.
COUNTRESS=coun'-tress, s. The lady of an earl of Great Britain or Ireland.—Compare Count.
COUNTING-HOUSE.—See under To Count.
COUNTRY, cūn'-trē, 120: s. and a. Originally an earldom, the district of a count or earl; a tract of land; a shire; a region; one's residence or native soil; rural parts opposed to town or city:—adj. Rustic; rural; rude, untaught.

Coun'-tri-fied, (-fied, 114) a. Rustic, rude.

Coun'-try-man, s. A compatriot; a rustic.

Coun'-try-dance, s. A contradance, which see

COUN'-try, (coun'-trē), s. and a. A shire; a circuit or district; in old authors, a count or lord:—adj. Relating to a county. A county court is incident to the jurisdiction of the sheriff. It is not a court of record, but may hold pleas of debt or damages under forty shillings.

COUP-DE-MAIN, coo'-dā-māng', [Fr.] 170: s. An attack sword in hand by surprise.

COUP-D'ŒIL, (coo'-dōil', [Fr.] 170) s. A view taken at a glance; aspect at first view.

COUP-DE-GRACE, (coo'-dā-grāss', [Fr.] 170) s. The stroke or finishing blow to one dying; a finishing stroke.

COUPEE, (coo'-pāy', [Fr.] 170) s. A step in dancing.

COUPLE, cūp'-pl, 120, 101: s. Primarily, a link or chain; two things linked by generic similarity; two; a brace; the male and female; a man and his wife.

To Coup'-le, v. a. and n. To join; to marry:—new. To join in embraces.

Coup'-let, s. Two lines that rhyme; a pair.

COURAGE, cūr'-rage, 120, 99: s. Bravery, valour.

Cour-a'-geous, (cūr-rā'-jūs, 146) a. Brave.

Cour-a'-geous-ly, ad. Bravely, daringly.

Cour-a'-geous-ness, s. Boldness, spirit, courage.

COURANT, coo-rānt', } 125: s. A dance;

COURANTO, coo-rān'-tō, } (see Corant;) a jig tune; the name of a newspaper from its quick spreading.

COURIER, coōr'-ē-er, 118: s. A messenger sent in haste; an express; a travelling attendant.

COURSE=cō'urse=cōarse, 134, 153: s. Progress forward within prescribed or uniform limits; hence, race; act of running in the lists, and tilting; the place for racing; track in which a ship purposes to sail or has sailed; sails by which she keeps her course; series of methodical procedure in learning or communicating knowledge; series of similar parts; method of life; conduct; career; inclination; number of dishes set upon a table at once; Courses, the menses; Of course, by consequence; by settled rule.

To Co'urse, v. n. and a. To run; to hunt; to move about:—act. To hunt; to pursue.

Co'ur-ser, s. A swift horse; a hunter.

Co'ur-sing, s. Hunting with greyhounds.

COURT=cō'urt, 47: s. A place enclosed in front of a house; a recess from a public street paved and enclosed by houses, often differing from a street only by not being a carriage way.

COURT=cō'urt, 47: s. A hall or place where justice is administered; hence the palace of the king; (see lower;) the person who presides in a court of justice, the judge; the presiding officers of a court collectively; any place, or persons wherein a jurisdiction exists, whether civil, military, or ecclesiastical.

Co'urt-bar'-on, s. A court incident to a manor.

Co'urt-day, s. A day on which a court sits.

Co'urt-hand, s. Hand writing used in records.

Co'urt-leet, s. A court of record held once a year in a particular hundred, wardship, or manor, of which the business is now much declined, and devolved on the quarter sessions.

Co'urt-mar'-tal, (-sh'āl, 147) s. A court consisting of military or naval officers for the trial of offences against the laws of the service.

Co'urt, s. The palace or residence of a sovereign

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gat'-wáy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: j'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

prince; the prince himself in his sovereign capacity; the persons who compose the retinue of a prince.—See also above, and lower.

Court-ly, a. and ad. Relating to a court.

Court-ier, (-yer) s. The frequenter of a court.

Court-ling, s. A hanger on at court.

Court-te-zan, s. A courtier male or female; but it has lost this meaning if as an English word it ever had it, and in its present signification is pronounced Court-te-zan', (cūr-tē-zān') s. A prostitute.

Among the compounds proper to be noticed here are, Court-breeding, Court-chaplain, Court-cupboard, (the magnificent sideboard of ancient days,) Court-day, (day of state at court,) Court-dress, Court-favour, (favour from the prince,) Court-lady, &c.

Court, s. Civility of manners; address; insinuation; flattery, such as is practised at court.—See also above.

Court-li, Court-like, a. Polite; flattering.

Court-li-ness, s. Elegance; politeness.

Court-ier-y, 146: s. Manners of a courtier. [Obs.]

Court-eous, (-yūs, 120, 146) 147: a. Elegant, polite.

Court-eous-ly, ad. Politely; complaisantly.

Court-eous-ness, s. Civility; complaisance.

Court-re-sy, (cūr-tē-sy, 120, 152) s. Elegance of manners, civility, complaisance; an act of civility or respect: By courtesy, not of right, but by indulgence; in some cases, however, such indulgence becomes a legal claim; as tenure by courtesy, which is when a man holds for life what would go immediately to his wife's kin, she being dead and also her child, because this child which he had by her was born alive.

Courte-sy, (cūr-tē-sy, 120) s. The preceding word applied particularly to the act of civility or respect used by women, consisting in a lowering of the body, and corresponding with the bow or bend of the body by men.

To Court-sy, v. n. To make a courtesy.

To COURT, v. n. To pay court to; to solicit; to seek; to woo.

Court-ship, s. The act or course of acts, by which a woman is wooed; its relationship to other words of this class, namely, in the sense of the act of soliciting favour generally, and of civility of manners, are obsolete.

COR-TEGE, (cor-tāzh, [Fr.] 170) s. A train of attendants.

COR-TES, (-tēz, 151) s. pl. The states of the Spanish monarchy composed of nobility, clergy, and representatives of cities.

COUSIN, cūz'-zn, 120, 151, 114: s. In a general sense, anyone collaterally related more remotely than a brother or sister; the children of an aunt or uncle are first cousins or cousins german; the next respective generations are second cousins; and so on; in works not quite modern, it is used generally for a relation; and the king is represented as using it towards all who are noble by blood.

COVE=cōve, s. A small creek or bay; a shelter.

To Cove, v. a. To arch over, or make a shelter.

Cov-ing, s. A projection in a building.

COVENABLE, cō-vē-nd-bl, 101: a. Convenient; fit. This obsolete word has the same origin as the ensuing.

COVENANT, cūv'-ē-n-nt, 116: s. Literally, a coming together, or agreement; a contract; a stipulation; a writing containing the terms of agreement.

To Cov'-e-n-nt, v. n. and a. To bargain, to contract, to agree:—ad. To contract; to stipulate.

Cov'-e-n-nt-er, s. He who makes a covenant; it was specially applied to those who joined in the solemn league and covenant in Scotland against the high church party in the middle of the seventeenth century.

Cov'-e-n-nt-tee', s. The party covenanted with.

COVENOUS.—See Covinous under Covin.

To COVER, cūv'-er, 116: v. a. To overtop; read, to conceal, to hide, to shelter; to put on a cap or hat; to copulate; to extend as far as; to comprehend or include.

Cov'-er, s. That which is laid over something else; a concealment, a screen, a veil; a shelter, a defence; the retreat of a fox or hare.

Cov'-er-ing, s. Dress; vesture.

Cov'-er-let, s. The upper covering of a bed.

Cov'-ert, a. and s. Sheltered; private; traitorous; under protection as a married woman:—s. A shelter; a defence; a thicket. The covert-way in fortification is on the outside of the ditch, ranging round the half moons or other works.

Cov'-ert-ly, ad. Secretly; closely.

Cov'-ert-ness, s. Secrecy; privacy.

Cov'-er-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Shelter; a legal term for the state of being a married woman.

To COVEY, cūv'-ēt, 116, 14: v. a. and n. To desire inordinately:—nem. To have a strong desire.

Cov'-et-a-ble, 101: a. To be wished for.

Cov'-et-ing, s. An eager or inordinate desire.

Cov'-e-tous, (cūv'-ē-tūs; cūv'-ē-chūs is a vul-gari-m) a. Avaricious; greedy.

Cov'-e-tous-ly, ad. Avariciously; eagerly.

Cov'-e-tous-ness, s. Avarice; eagerness of gain.

COVEY, cūv'-ēy, 116: s. A hatch or brood of birds: a set or company.

COVIN, cūv'-in, s. A fraudulent agreement between two or more to the prejudice of a third.

Cov'-i-nous, 120: a. Fraudulent; deceitful.

COW=cow, 31: s. The female of the bull.

Cow'-herd, s. One who tends cows

Cow'-leech, s. A cow-doctor.

Cow'-pox, 154: s. The vaccine disease.

Other compounds are Cow-keeper, Cow-house, and Cow-pen; all of obvious meaning: Cow-bane, Cow-parasit, Cow-quakes, Cow-weed, Cow-wheat, Cow-wort, all of them plants; and Cow-itch, which is a coinage from Cowhage, whose meaning see at the word.

COW=cow, 31: s. The top of a chimney that is made to move with the wind; properly a cowl.

To COW=cow, 31: v. a. To depress with fear.

Cow'-ish, a. Timorous, fearful. [Shaks.]

COWARD=cow'-ard, 31, 34: s. and a. A pol-troon:—adj. Dastardly, timid, base.

Cow'-ard-ly, n. and ad. Fearful:—ad. Fearfully.

Cow'-ard-li-ness, s. Timidity, cowardice.

Cow'-ard-ice, (diss, 105) s. Pusillanimity.

To COWER=cow'-er, 31, 36: v. n. To sink by bending the knees. In Spenser it is also found in the sense of to cower or cherish as a hen her brood.

COWL=cowl, 31: s. A monk's hood; a cover for a chimney which turns with the wind.

COWL=cowl, 31: s. A vessel to carry water. [Obs.]

Cowl'-staff, s. The staff by which a cowl is carried.

COW-LEECH, COW-POX, &c.—See under Cow.

COWSLIP=cow'-slip, s. A species of primrose.

COWRY, cow'-ry, s. A univalve sea-shell.

COXCOMB, cōcks'-cōm, 116, 156: s. A comb resembling that of a cock which licensed fools formerly wore; hence, a fop; also, a flower coloured as a cock's comb.

Cox'-comb-ly, (-cōm-lēy, a. Like a coxcomb.

Cox'-comb-ry, s. Foppishness.

Cox'-com'-i-cal, a. Foppish, conceited.

COY=coy, 29: a. Modest, reserved, shy.

To Coy, v. n. To be reserved or inaccessible.

Coy'-ish, a. Somewhat coy.

Coy'-ly, ad. With reserve; shily.

Coy'-ness, s. Unwillingness to be familiar.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: nish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: ſhīn, 166; thēn, 166.

To COY=coy, v. a. To silture. [Shaks.] See also above.

COYSTREL.—See Coistill.

COZ, cüz, 116: s. Cousin, familiarly.

To COZEN, cüz'-zn, 116, 114: v. a. To cheat.

Coz'-en-er, 36: s. A cheater, a defrauder.

Coz'-en-age, 99: s. Fraud, deceit, trick.

CRAB=cräb, s. A shell fish; a wooden engine with claws; a sign of the zodiac.—See also lower.

Crab'-eyes, 143, 106: s. pl. Concretions formed in the stomach of the crab-fish and used in medicine.

Crab'-louse, s. A body louse.

CRAB, s. and a. A wild apple; the tree producing it:—adj. Wild, sour, or degenerate as applied to fruit.

Crab'-bed, n. Peevish, morose; harsh, difficult.

Crab'-bed-ly, ad. Peevishness.

Crab'-bed-ness, s. Sourness of taste; asperity.

CRABER, crä'-ber, s. The water-rat.

To CRACK=cräck, v. a. and n. To rend or break into chinks; to break partially, or with some things, as a nut, completely; to break or rend with reference to the heart or intellect; to break, diminish, or destroy in a figurative sense; also, to use any thing (as a whip) so as to make the noise of an object that cracks; which meaning may become figurative, as to crack a joke:—new. To burst into chinks; to fall to ruin; to utter a sharp sudden sound; to utter a loud sound; ludicrously, to boast.

Crack, s. A sudden disruption; chink, narrow breach, or flaw; any breach, injury, or diminution; he or she that is cracked in intellect; in purity, &c.; the noise made by a crack; a boast, or boaster; the time occupied by a crack or snap; any thing diminutive, as a boy or child.

Crack'-er, s. A boaster; a firework; a hard biscuit; that which cracks any thing.

Crack'-brained, 114: a. Crazed.

Crack'-hemp, s. One destined to crack or strain a halter; a hangdog [Shaks.]

To CRAC'-KLE, 101: v. n. To make the noise of cracking, slightly but repeatedly.

Crack'-ling, s. The noise of something that crackles; that which makes the noise.

CRACK'-NEL, s. A brittle cake or biscuit.

CRADLE, crä'-dl, 101: s. A moveable bed in which infants are rocked; figuratively, infancy; by analogy, any thing which receives or embeds what is designed to be placed in it, as a bed for a sick person; a case for a broken limb; a frame of timber for a ship, &c.

To Cra'-dle, v. a. and n. To lay or rock in a cradle:—new. [Shaks.] To lodge as in a cradle.

CRAFT=cräft, 11: s. Manual art, trade; fraud, cunning; small vessels, such as are generally used in trading.

To Craft, v. n. To play tricks. [Obs.]

Craft'-ty, a. Cunning; artful; skilful.

Craft'-ti-ly, ad. Artfully; cunningly.

Craft'-ti-ness, s. Craft, cunning, fraud, deceit.

Crafts'-man, s. An artificer, a mechanic.

Crafts'-mas-ter, s. One well skilled in his trade.

CRAG=cräg, s. A rough steep rock, or point.

Crag'-ged, (-güed, 77) a. Rugged; full of breaks.

Crag'-ged-ness, s. Full of rocky prominences.

Crag'-gy, (-gücy, 77) a. Rocky, rugged, rough.

Crag'-gi-ness, s. Fullness of crags.

CRAG=cräg, s. The neck. [Obs.]

CRAKE=cräke, s. The corn-crake, a bird.

To CRAM=cräm, v. a. and n. To stuff with more than can conveniently be held:—new. To eat beyond satiety.

CRAMBO=cräm'-bö, s. A rhyme; a play at finding rhymes.

CRAMP=crämp, s. and a. A spasmodic contraction of the limbs: a restriction.—See also below:—adj. Knotty; difficult.

To Cramp, v. a. To pain with spasms; to restrain, to confine; to hinder from expansion.

Cramp'-fish, s. The torpedo.

CRAMP, s. A piece of iron bent at the ends to fasten two things together, called also a cramp'-iron.

To Cramp, v. a. To fasten with a cramp.

CRAMP'-PIE, s. A piece of metal at the bottom of the scabbard of a sword.

CRAMP'-POONS, 143: s. pl. Iron instruments fastened to the shoes of a storming party.

CRANBERRY, crän'-bër-rëy, s. The mossberry.

To CRANCH.—See To Craunch.

CRANE=cräne, s. A bird with a long beak; a machine for raising weighty goods, so named from its overhanging shape and capacity to pick up its objects; a bent pipe or siphon.

Cra'-nage, 99: s. The liberty of using a crane; money paid for the use of a crane.

Among the compounds are Crane's bill, (the geranium; whose seed vessel has an appendage resembling a crane's bill); and Crane's fly, (an insect.)

CRANIUM, crä'-në-üm, s. The skull.

Cra'-ni-og'-no-my, s. The doctrine that the characteristics of the mind may be known by the conformation of the skull.

Cra'-ni-ol'-o-gy, s. A discourse on, or the science of, the skull, as varying in form in different creatures and different individuals, in connection with the knowledge of their respective propensities and habits. It is now more commonly called Phrenology.

Cra'-ni-oni'-e-ter, s. An instrument for measuring the skull.

Cra'-ni-os'-co-py, s. The art or science of examining the skull, and endeavouring to ascertain by the prominences upon it the several organs of the brain. It is included in Phrenology.

CRANK, crängk, 158: s. A bend or turning out of the way; a turn in an axle with two angular elbows, the farthest part of which being joined to a piston or a saw, &c., moves it up and down when the axle goes round; a hook that turns a bell-wire into and out of a corner; a metal brace; figuratively, a twisting or turning in speech consisting in some conceit of the nature of a pun.

To Crank, v. n. To run in a winding course; to run, bend, or wind.

To Cran'-kle, 101: v. n. and a. To crank:—act To break into bends or angles.

Crank'-kle, s. A bend, turn, or crinkie.

CRANK, crängk, 158: a. Healthy; sprightly.

Crank'-ky has the same meaning.

Crank'-ness, s. Health; vigour.

CRANK, a. Infirm on her keel, liable to overset. This, namely, infirm, sick, is the original meaning of the word, which, by a fate not singular in language, is used by our old authors in the sense directly opposite to the sense assigned to the first word of the class.

Crank'-ness, s. Liability to overset.

CRANNY, crän'-nëy, s. A chink, a cleft, a crevice

CRANTS=cränts, s. pl. Garlands carried before the bier of a maiden, and hung over her grave.

CRAPE=cräpt, s. A thin stuff loosely woven.

CRAPLE=cräp'-pl, s. A caw. [Spenser.]

Crap'-nel, s. A hook or drag.

CRAPULA=crä'-pü-lä, s. A surfeit. [Lat.]

Crap'-u-lence, 92: s. Cropsickness; a surfeit.

Crap'-u-lous, 120: a. Intemperate; sick.

To CRASH=cräsh, v. a. To crush. [Obs.]

To CRASH, v. n. To utter a noise as of things crushed by falling.

The scheme entire and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words gät'-way: chäp'-mön: pä'-pä': läw: gööd: 'w, i. e. few, 55: a, e, i, &c. male, 171.

Crash, } s. A loud noise as of many things.
Crash'-ing, } falling and breaking.
CRASIS=crā'-sis, s. Literally, a mixture; appropriately, that mingling of humors in the animal body which forms the temperament or constitution of the individual; also, the mingling of two vowels into one syllable, otherwise called Synæresis.
CRASS=crāss, s. Gross, thick, coarse.
Crās-si-tude, Crās'-ness, s. Grossness, coarseness.
Crās-si-ment, s. The thick red part of the blood, as distinct from the serum or aqueous part.
CRASTINATION, crās'-tē-nā'-shūn, s. Delay.
CRATCH=cratch, s. A frame for hay to feed cattle.
CRATE=crātē, s. A wicker pannier, or sort of hamper, used especially for crockery ware.
CRATER=crā'-ter, s. A vent or aperture; the bowl or funnel of a volcano.
To CRAUNCH, crānch, 122: v. a. To crush with the teeth; to chew with violence and noise.
CRAVAT=crā'-vāt', s. A neckcloth.
To CRAVE=crāve, v. a. To ask earnestly, submissively, or insatiably; to long for.
Crā-ver, 36: s. One who craves.
Crā'-ving, s. An unreasonable desire.
CRAVEN, crā'-vn, 114: s. A judicial term in the ancient trial by battle by which one party did homage to the other as his superior, and so yielded his cause; hence, a coward, a recreant; a dunghill cock.
To Crā'-ven, v. a. To make cowardly. [Shaks.]
CRAW=crāw, s. The crop or first stomach of birds.
CRAWFISH=crāw'-fīsh, s. The river lobster.
To CRAWL=crāwl, v. n. To creep; to move as a worm; to move on hands and knees; to move slowly.
Crawl'-er, 36: s. Any thing that crawls.
CRAWL=crāwl, s. A pen or enclosure for fish.
CRAYFISH.—See Crawfish.
CRAYON=crā'-ōn, 100, 18: s. A general name for pencils of various colours and substances; a drawing done with crayons.
To Crā'-yon, v. a. To sketch with a crayon; to sketch or plan generally.
To CRAZE=crāze, v. a. To break, crush, or shatter, generally; to shatter the intellect.
Crā'-zed-ness, s. The state of being broken down, or shattered; decrepitude.
Crā'-zy, a. Broken, decrepit; shattered in intellect; feeble; niling; out of order.
Crā'-zi-ness, s. Weakness; disorder of mind.
To CREAK=crēck, v. n. To make a harsh noise.
Creak'-ing, s. A sharp, continuing, harsh noise.
CREAM=crēm, s. The unctuous or oily part of milk; the best part of any thing.
To Cream, v. n. and a. To gather on the surface;—act. To skim off the cream; to take the best of any thing.
Cream'-y, 105: a. Having the nature of cream.
Cream'-faced, (-fāst, 114, 146) a. Pale; cowardly.
CREANCE=crē'-ānce, s. A fine small line fastened to a hawk's leash when she is first lured.
CREASE=crēce, 152: s. A mark left by a fold.
To Crease, v. a. To mark by doubling.
To CREATE=crē-āt', v. a. To cause to exist by the force of original power; to cause by the agency of deputed power; to beget; to produce; to make.
Cre-a'-tive, 105: a. Having the power to create; exerting the act of creation.
Cre-a'-tor, 36: s. A producer; a maker; distinctively, the Maker by the force of original power.
Cre-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of creating; the thing created; the universe.

CREA'-TURE, (crē'-tūre, colloq. crea'-sh'oor, 147) s. A being animate or inanimate created by original power; an animate created being; man distinct from brute; brute distinct from man; something produced, improved, or sustained by a secondary power; sometimes a word of contempt; sometimes of petty tenderness.

CREBROUS, crē'-brūs, a. Frequent.

CREDENCE, &c.—See in the next class.

CREED=crēde, s. That which is believed; a summary of the articles of faith.

Crē'-dent, a. Easy of belief; having credit.

Crē'-dence, s. Belief; credit; reputation.

Cre-den'-tial, (-sh'āl, 147) a. and s. Giving a title to credit;—s. That which entitles to credit; in the plural, Credentia, the letters of commendation and power given to ambassadors and envoys.

Cre-den'-dā, s. pl. Things to be believed. [Lat.]

CRED'-i-BLE, 92: a. Worthy of credit.

Crē'-i-bly, ad. In a manner claiming belief.

Crē'-i-ble-ness, s. Just claim to belief.

Crē'-i-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. Probability.

Crēd'-it, s. Belief; honour, reputation, esteem, good opinion; faith, trust, repose; influence.

To Crēd'-it, v. a. To believe, trust, or confide in; to do honour to; to enter on the credit side of an account.

Crēd'-i-tor, 38: s. A believer; [Obs.] he to whom a debt is owed, the correlative to debtor.

Crēd'-it-a-bly, a. Reputable; honourable.

Crēd'-i-ta-bly, ad. Reputably; without disgrace.

Crēd'-i-ta-bil'-ness, s. Reputation; estimation.

Crēd'-u-LOUS, 120: a. Apt to believe; unsuspicious.

Crēd'-u-lous-ly, ad. With easy belief.

Crēd'-u-lous-ness, } s. Aptness to believe; liability

Crēd'-u-li-ty, } to be deceived.

To CREEK.—See To Creak.

CREEK=crēck, s. A small inlet, bay, or cove; any turn or winding; less properly, the prominence or jut that produces the creek.

Creek'-y, a. Full of creeks; winding.

To CREEP=crēep, } v. n. To move as a worm or 1 CREPT=crēpt, } insect; to grow along the CREPT=crēpt, } ground or on other supports; to move slowly and feebly, secretly, timorously, or reverently; to fawn.

Creep'-er, s. That which creeps; a plant that grows on a support; an insect; a small bird; a grapnel used at sea.

Creep'-ing-ly, ad. Slowly; like a reptile.

Creep'-hole, s. A retreat; a subterfuge.

CREMATION, crē-mā'-shūn, 89: s. A burning.

CREMONA=crē-mō'-nā, s. A superior sort of violin, such as those originally made at Cremona.

CREMOIR=crē'-mor, s. Any thing like cream.

CRENATE=crē'-nātē, a. Notched, indented. [Bot.]

CREOLE=crē'-ōle, s. A native of Spanish America or of the West Indies, descended from European ancestors.

To CREPITATE=crēp'-tātē, v. n. To make a small crackling noise.

Crēp'-i-ta'-tion, s. A repeated snapping noise.

CREPT.—See To Creep.

CREPUSCULE=crē-pūs'-cūle, s. Twilight.

Cre-pus'-cu-lar, 34: } a. Glimmering; in a state

Cre-pus'-cu-lous, 120: } between light and darkness. Crepusculine is obs.

CRESCENT=crēs'-sēnt, a. Increasing; growing

Crēs'-cive, (-siv, 105) a. Crescent. [Shaks.]

Crēs'-cent, s. The moon on the increase; the

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

figure, a symbol of Mahometanism, which is in likeness of the new moon. Hence, Crescent-tive (105) a.
To Cres-cent, v. a. To form into a crescent.

CRASS, s. A rapidly growing herb.

CRESSET=crēs'-sēt, s. A light set upon a beacon; a lamp or torch: Literally, a little cross.

CREST=crēst, s. The feathers or other ornament on the top of the helmet; the helmet itself; the ornament of the helmet in heraldry; s. a tuft: pride, s. i. i.

To Crest, v. a. To furnish with, or serve for a crest; to mark with streaks like the streaming hair of a crest.

Crest-ed, a. Having a crest or tuft.

Crest-less, a. Not dignified with coat-armour.

Crest'-fallen, (-fāl'n, 112, 114) a. Dejected; sunk.

CRIS'-TA-TED, a. Crested. [Botany.]

CRETACEOUS, crē-tā'-sh'ūs, 90: a. Having the qualities of chalk; abounding with chalk; chalky.

Cre-tā'-ted, a. Rubbed with chalk.

CRETIC=crē'-tick, s. Literally, of Crete: a foot, also called Amphimacer, one short between two long syllables.

Cre-tism, 158: s. A falsehood; a Cretan practice.

CRETIN=crē'-tīn, s. An idiot of the Alps.

CREVICE, crēv'-iss, 105: s. A crack, a cleft.

To Crev'-ice, v. n. To crack, to flaw.

CREW, crōō, 110, 109: s. A company associated for any purpose; the company of a ship.

CREW.—See To Crow.

CREWEL, crōō'-ēl, 110, 109: s. Yarn twisted and wound on a knot or ball.

CRIB=crib, s. An enclosure of small dimensions, as the rack or manger of a stable; the stall of an ox; a child's bed; a cottage.

To Crib, v. a. and n. To shut up; to confine:—neu. To be confined as in a crib.

CRIBBAGE=crib'-bāg, 99: s. A game at cards in which the dealer makes up a third hand for himself partly from the hand of his opponent.

To CRIB, v. a. To steal for a petty purpose.

CRIBBLE, crib'-bl, 101: s. A corn-sieve.

To Crib'-ble, v. a. To sift, or pass through a riddle.

CRIB'-TION, 89: s. The act of sifting.

CRIB'-form, 38: a. Resembling a sieve.

CRICK=crick, s. A creaking.—See To Creak.

CRICK=crick, s. A local spasm or cramp.

CRICKET=crick'-ēt, s. A chirping insect.

CRICKET=crick'-ēt, s. A play with bats and ball; with a different etymol. gy, a low seat or stool.

Crick'-et-er, s. A player at cricket.

CRIER.—See under To Cry.

CRIME=crime, s. An infraction of law, but particularly of human law, and so distinguished from (not opposed to) sin; an offence; a great fault.

Crime'-ful, 117: a. Full of crime.

Crime-less, a. Without crime; innocent.

CRIM'-I-NAL, a. and s. Offending law; guilty; tainted with crime: not civil or between individual citizens, but relating to laws under the immediate safeguard of the highest powers of government:—s. A man guilty of a crime.

Crim'-i-nal-ly, ad. Guiltily.

Crim'-i-nal-ness, Crim'-i-nal'-i-ty, s. Guiltiness.

To Crim'-i-nate, v. a. To charge with crime.

Crim'-i-na'-tor-y, a. Accusing; censorious.

Crim'-i-na'-tō-n, 89: s. Accusation; charge.

CRIM'-I-NOUS, 120: a. Iniquitous; full of crime.

Crim'-i-nous-ly, ad. Heinously.

CRIM'-I-NOUS-NESS, s. Atrocity.

CRIMP=crimp, a. That crumbles easily; brittle; not to be depended on.

To CRIMP=crimp, v. a. To pinch up in ridges; to pinch the hair and so frizzle it; to crimp or cause to crimp, as the flesh of a live cod by gashing it; to catch or seize as by a sly gripe.

Crimp, s. In old authors, a game at cards; a sort of agent; one who decoys and catches up recruits for the army.

To Crimp, v. a. To decoy for the army.

To CRIM'-PLE, 101: v. a. To contract or draw together; to cause to shrink to corrugate; to curl.

CRIMSON, crim'-zn, 151, 114: s. and a. Red darkened with blue: red in general.—a. Coloured as crimson.

To Crim'-son, v. a. and n. To dye with crimson:—neu. To be tinged with red; to blush.

CRINCUM, cring'-cūm, 158: s. A cramp; a contraction; a whimsy. [Lucidicrous.]

To CRINGE=crings, 64: v. a. and n. To draw together; to contract: [Little us-d].—neu. To low; to fawn; to flatter.

Cringe, s. A low bow; servile civility.

Crin'-ger, 36: s. One who cringes or flatters.

CRINGLE.—See lower, under To Crinkle.

CRINITE=cri'-nīte, a. Having the appearance of a tuft of hair.

Crin'-g'er-ous, (-nīd'-gēr'-ūs, 120) a. Bearing or having hair; hairy.

Crin'-nose, (-nōc, 152) a. Hairy, covered with hair.

Crin'-nos'-i-ty, 92, 105: s. Hairiness.

To CRINKLE, cring'-kl, 158, 101: v. n. and a. To go in and out; to run in flexures: (Compare Crank and the words under it:)—ad. To form with short turns or wrinkles; to mould into inequalities.

Crin'-kle, s. A sinuosity; a wrinkle.

CRIN'-GLE, s. A ring made at the end of a rope to fasten it to another; an iron ring or hank.

CRINOSE, &c.—See under Crinite.

CRIPPLE, crip'-pl, 101: s. A lame person.

To Crip'-ple, v. a. To lame, to make lame.

Crip'-ple-ness, s. Lameness. Crippings, see Supp.

CRISIS=cri'-ciss, s. sing. } s. Literally, the CRISES, cri'-cēz, s. pl. 101: } forming of a judgement or determination: that point in a disease at which nature or the distemper gives way, and the issue, if nothing new intervenes, is decided; the point at which any affair is at its height.

Crise'-ri-on, 90: pl. Crise'-ri-a, 2: s. A standard by which a judgement or estimate can be formed.

Crise'-ri-cal, a. Pertaining to a crisis, or a decisive turn in a disease or any other event or business.—See also lower.

Crise'-ri-cal-ly, ad. At the exact point.

Crise'-ri-cal-ness, s. Exactness.

CRIT'-IC, s. A judge of literary merit, or of merit in the fine arts generally; a carper or fault-finder.

Crit'-ic, 88: } a. Exact in discriminating the merits

Crit'-i-cal, } and faults of works of art; captious; prone to see and expose faults.—See also above

Crit'-i-cal-ly, ad. In the manner of a critic.

CRIT'-IQUE, (crē-tēkē, 104, 121) s. A critical examination; criticism.

Crit'-ic, s. Critique. [Locke, Pope, Obs.]

To CRIT'-I-CIZE, v. n. and a. To play the critic to judge; to animadvert on as faulty:—ad. To censure.

CRIT'-ICISM, (-cizm, 158) s. A standard of judging well in matters of taste; the art of judging well; animadversion.

CRISP=crisp, a. Curled; indented; winding; brittle; friable; brisk.

To Crisp, v. a. To curl, to contract into knots or curls; to twist; to indent; to make to wave.

Cris'-py, 105: a. Curled; short and brittle.

Crisp'-ness, s. The quality of being crisp.

Crisp'-ing-pin. s. A curling iron.

Cris'-pa-tion, 89: s. Act of curling; state of being curled.

CRISTATED.—See under Crest.

CRITERION, CRITIC, &c.—See under Crisis.

CRITHOMANCY, crī'-thō-mān'-cēy. 87: s. Divination by barley meal.

CRIZZEL, crīz'-zēl, 114: s. Roughness on the surface of glass rendering it dull.

To CROAK=crōak, v. n. To make a hoarse low noise like a frog; to caw as a raven or crow; to utter offensive or discontented murmurs.

Croak, s. The cry of a frog or raven.

Croak'-er, 36. s. A discontented murmurer.

CROCK-I-TA'-TION, 92, 59, 89: s. A croaking.

CROATS=crō'-āts, s. pl. Troops, from Croatia.

CROCALITE, CROCEOUS.—See under Crocus.

CROCKERY, crōck'-ēr-ēy. s. Earthenware.

Crock, s. Any thing of earthenware. [Obs.]

CROCK=crōck, s. The black matter on kettles.

CROCODILE=crōc'-dīlē, s. and a. An amphibious voracious animal, of the lizard kind, sometimes sixteen or eighteen feet long, especially those of the Nile.—adj. Pertaining to a crocodile; of the nature of a crocodile's tears, hypocritical.

CROCUS=crō'-cūs, s. An early flower, saffron; a yellow powder; a metal calcined to a deep reddish yellow colour.

Cro'-ceous, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Like, or of saffron.

Cro'-ca-lite, s. An orange, or brick red mineral.

CROFT=crōft, 17: s. A little home field.

CRUSADE, &c.—See under Crusade

CROMLECH, crōm'-lēck, 161: s. Huge stones placed on others, supposed to have been druidical altars.

CRONE=crōne, s. An old woman; an old ewe.

Cro'-ny, s. A companion of long standing.

CRONET.—See Cornet under Coronal.

CRONYCAL, Acronycal, which see.

CROOK=crōok, 118: s. A bent instrument; a shepherd's hook; a winding trick; a gibbet.

To Crook, v. a. To bend; to turn into a hook; to bend figuratively; to pervert. To Crook is formerly used, but is obsolete.

Crook'-ed, a. Bent; winding; oblique; perverse; untoward; without rectitude.

Crook'-ed-ly, adv. In a crooked manner.

Crook'-ed-ness, s. Curvity; deformity; depravity; perverseness.

Crook'-back, s. A man with a crooked back.

Crook'-backed, 114, 143: a. Bent-shouldered.

CROOP=crōop, s. A disease in the throat to which children are subject, attended with hoarse respiration.

CROP=crōp, s. A bird's craw; the belly.

Crop'-per, s. A pigeon with a large crop.

Crop'-ful, 117: a. Having a full belly.

Crop'-sick, a. Sick with repletion.

CROP=crōp, s. The highest part of any thing, as an ear of corn; [Obs.] the harvest, or what is gathered; that which is to be gathered; any thing that has been cut, as the hair.

To Crop, v. a. and n. To cut off the ends of, to mow, to reap; to gather before it falls.—new. [Obs.] To yield harvest. To crop out, see Nepp.

Among the compounds are Croq'-ear, s. (a horse,) and Crop-eared, a.

CROSIER, CROSLET.—See in the next class.

CROSS=crōss, 17: s. a. and prep. One straight body laid over another so as to form with it four interior angles; the cross especially on which Christ suffered; whatever is drawn or formed in fashion of a cross; whatever bears the image of a cross; the sufferings of Christ; the Christian doctrine respecting his sufferings and death; misfortune, hindrance, vexation, trial, of patience. To take up the Cross is to submit to afflictions with a Christian spirit.—adj. Transverse, oblique, lateral; interchanged; adverse, opposite, unfortunate; perverse; peevish, fractious, contrary, contradictory.—prep. Athwart so as to intersect; over; from side to side.

To Cross, v. a. and n. To lay one body or draw a line athwart another; to sign with a cross; to cancel by making a cross; to pass over, or move laterally, obliquely, or athwart; to thwart, to embarrass, to obstruct, to hinder, to counteract or contravene.—new. To lie athwart; to be inconsistent.

Cross'-ing, s. The act of crossing; a path across; opposition.

Cross'-ly, adv. In a cross manner.

Cross'-ness, s. Transverseness, interception; perverseness, peevishness.

Cross'-wise, (-wīze, 151) adv. Across; transversely.

Among the compounds are Cross'-armed, (with arms across;) Cross'-bar, (a sort of lever;) Cross'-barred, (secured by transverse bars;) Cross'-bar-shot, (shot with a bar of iron through the middle;) Cross'-bill, (a bill or complaint brought by a defendant against a plaintiff;) Cross'-bow, (a bow for shooting which acts by a stock placed across it;) Cross'-breed, (a term applied to animals when produced by parents of different breeds;) Cross'-box, (a cake indented with a cross;) Cross'-examination, (the examination of a witness by the party opposite to that for whom the witness has been called;) Cross'-grained, (having the fibres crossed or irregular; and, figuratively, perverse, troublesome;) Cross'-legged, (having the legs crossed;) Cross'-post, (the post which goes by a cross-road;) Cross'-purpose, (a kind of enigmatical game; figuratively, a contradictory system;) To Cross question, (to cross examine;) Cross'-road, (one which crosses the country, and is not a direct high road;) Cross'-row, (the alphabet with a cross placed at the beginning;) Cross'-staff, (an instrument used at sea for taking altitudes;) Cross'-tree, (timbers fastened to the masts of ships;) Cross'-way, (an intersection of roads;) Cross'-wind, (a side-wind;) Cross'-wort, (a plant.)

CROSS-LET, s. A small cross.

CRO'-SIER, (crō'-zh'er, 147) s. The pastoral staff of a bishop, which has or had a cross on it.

CROI-SADE, 30: s. A Crusade. [Obs.]

Croi'-ses, (croi'-zēz, 151) s. pl. Pilgrims or soldiers belonging to the Crusades.

CRO'-SADÉ, (croo'-sādē, 109) s. An expedition against infidels; a romantic or enthusiastic undertaking; a piece of money stamped with a cross.

Cru'-sa-der, s. One employed in a crusade.

Cru'-CI-AL, (crō'-shē-āl, 147) a. Transverse; intersecting.

To Cru'-ci-ate, v. a. To torture; to torment.

Cru'-ci-a-tion, 89, 150: s. Torture.

Cru'-CI-BLE, s. A chemist or goldsmith's melting pot, so called because formerly marked with a cross.

Cru'-CI-ER-ous, 64 } 87, 120: a. Bearing a cross.

Cru'-ci-form, 38: a. Disposed in form of a cross.

To Cru'-ci-ry, (-fē, 6) v. a. To put to death by nailing the hands and feet to a cross set upright, figuratively, to subdue by the influence of a Christian spirit; to reject; to torment.

Cru'-ci-fi-er, s. One who crucifies another.

Cru'-CI-FIX-ION, (-fīck'-shūn, 154, 147) s. The punishment of nailing to a cross; the last sufferings and death of Christ.

Cru'-ci-flr, (-fīcks, 188) s. An image or painting of Christ on the cross.

CRUTCH'-ED, a. Crossed, badged with a cross, as Crutch'd fears; in some old authors, Crutch'd, from the obsolete verb To Crutch to mark with a cross.

CROTCH=crōtch, s. A fork or forking, the parting of two legs or branches; a hook or crook.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Cry'-al, 12: s. The heron.

Cry'-er, 36: s. The falcon-gentle, a kind of hawk.

CRYOPHORUS, cri-ôf'-ô-rûs, 163: s. Literally, a frost-bearer: an instrument for showing the relation between evaporation at low temperature and the production of cold.

Cry'-o-lite, s. Frost-stone, a mineral.

CRYPTIC=crip'-tick, 89: } a. Hidden, secret,

CRYPTICAL=crip'-tê-câl, } occult.

Cryp'-ti-cal-ly, ad. Occultly, secretly.

Crypt, s. A subterranean cell especially for interment under a church; a chapel under ground; a grave.

Cryp-tog'-a-mous, 120: a. Secretly married, applied to plants whose fructification is concealed.

Cryp-tog'-ra-phy, (-fêy, 163) s. The art of writing secret characters; secret characters or cipher.

Cryp-tol'-o-gy, s. Enigmatical language.

CRYSTAL=cris'-tâl, s. and a. Literally, that which is set or fixed by frost, in the original application of the word, the hard and ice-like transparency of the substances included under it being chiefly considered; at present, the term is applied in chemistry and mineralogy to all inorganic bodies which, by the operation of affinity, have assumed the form of regular solids terminated by a certain number of plane and smooth surfaces; in the manufactures, it is the name of a species of glass much superior in its composition and qualities to common glass; it is also applied to any thing having the form or clearness of a crystal, as to the glass of a watch-case, &c.—adj. Consisting of or like crystal; bright, transparent, pellucid.

Crys'-tal-line, (-lin, 105) a. Consisting of crystal; bright, pellucid, transparent. Crystalline heavens, in ancient astronomy, were two spheres imagined between the primum mobile and the firmament. The crystalline humor, or lens, is a very white transparent firm substance, situated in a depression in the anterior part of the vitreous humor of the eye.

↳ The rhythm of Milton's verse often requires the word to be read as a contraction of the Latin Crystallinus.

To Crys'-tal-lize, (-lîze) v. a. and n. To cause to form crystals:—u. To unite, as being previously in separate particles, and to form, in uniting, a determinate and regular solid.

Crys'-tal-li'-za-tion, a. That may be crystallized.

Crys'-tal-li'-za'-tion, s. The act or process by which the parts of a solid body separated by a fluid or by fusion, again unite, and form a solid body; the mass formed by crystallizing.

CRYS'-TAL-LITE, s. Whinstone after it is fused.

CRYS'-TAL-LOG'-I-A-PHY, (-fêy, 163) 87: s. The doctrine or science of crystallization.

CUB=cûb, s. The young of a beast, generally of a bear or fox; the young of a whale; in reproach, a young boy or girl.—See also Coop.

To Cub, v. n. To bring forth cubs.

CUBATION, cû-bâ'-shûn, 89: s. The act of lying down.

Cu-ba-tor-y, 98, 129, 18, 105: a. Recumbent.

Cu-bic'-u-lar, a. Belonging to a bed-room.

Cu-bic'-u-lar-y, a. Fitted for a lying-down posture.

CUBATURE.—See in the next class.

CUBE=cûbe, s. A regular solid body with six equal sides, and containing equal angles; the product of a number multiplied twice into itself: as, $3 \times 3 \times 3 = 27$. Cube root is the number that produces the cube, as 3 is the cube root of 27.

Cu'-bic, Cu'-bi-cal, a. Having the form or properties of a cube.

Cu'-bi-cal-ly, ad. In a cubical method.

Cu'-bi-cal-ness, s. The state of being cubical.

Cu'-bi-form, 38: a. In form of a cube.

Cu'-BA-TURE, (-tûre, 147) s. The finding exact, the solid or cubic contents of any proposed body.

Cu'-BOID, Cu'-BOID'AL, a. Like a cube.

CUBE=cû'-bêb, s. A pungent berry.

CUBIT=cû' bit, s. The fore-arm; the bone of the arm from the elbow to the wrist; a measure, originally the distance from the elbow to the extremity of the middle finger: the Roman cubit was nearly seventeen inches and a half; the Hebrew cubit, a little less than twenty-two inches; the English cubit, eighteen inches.

Cu'-bi-tal, a. Pertaining to the fore-arm; containing a cubit. Cubited also occurs in the last sense.

CUCKING-STOOL=cûck'-îng-stool, s. A ducking-stool, called also a tumbrel, used anciently for punishment, particularly of unquiet women.

CUCKOLD=cûck'-ôld, 18: s. One whose wife is false to his bed.

To Cuck'-old, v. a. To wrong a husband by unchastity.

Cuck'-old-ly, a. Having the qualities of a cuckold poor, mean; cowardly.

Cuck'-old-dom, s. The act of adultery; the state of being a cuckold.

Cuck'-old-ma'-ker, s. He who makes a cuckold.

CUCKOO, cûc'-koo, 117: s. A well-known bird named from its note in spring.

↳ The compounds include Cuck'-oo-bud or Cuck'-oo-flower, and Cuck'-oo-pint, which are plants; and Cuck'-oo-spittle, an exudation or moisture found on plants, especially about the joints of lavender and rosemary.

CUCQUEAN, cûc'-kwêan, 118, 188: s. A vile woman. [B. Jon. Fr. Coquine.]

CUCULATE=cû-cûl'-lâte, } a. Hooded

CUCULLATED=cû-cûl'-lâ-têd, } cowed; having the shape of a hood.

CUCUMBER=cû'-cûm-ber, 167: s. The name of a plant, and of its fruit.

CUCURBITACEOUS, cû-cur'-bê-tâ'-sh'ûs, 90: a. Resembling a gourd, as the melon and pompon.

Cu'-cur-BIT, s. A chemical vessel, the original shape of which is that of a gourd. It is used in distillation.

CUD=cûd, s. The food which ruminating animals bring from the first stomach to chew again.

Cud'-weed, s. The plant goldy-locks.

CUDDEN, cûd'-dn, 114: s. A clown, a dolt. [Dryden.] Cudda may be found in the same sense.

To CUDDLE, cûd'-dl, v. n. and a. To lie close or snug:—act. To press close to, so as to keep warm.

CUDDY, cûd'-dêy, s. An apartment in a ship.

CUDGE=cûd'-gêl, 14: s. A stick to strike with, lighter than a club, shorter than a pole, thicker than a rod.

To Cud'-gel, v. a. To beat with a stick.

Cud'-ge'-ler, 36: s. One who cudgels.

CUE=cû, 189: s. The tail or end: the last words of a speech in an actor's part forming the intimation for the next speaker to proceed; a part to be acted; an intimation or hint, a short direction; humour, temper of mind; the straight rod used in billiards. In old authors it sometimes means q. that is quadrans or a farthing.

CUERPO, kwêr'-pô, 145: s. Bodily shape; to be in cuervo, is to be without cloak or upper coat.

CUFF=cûff, s. A blow with the fist, a box, a stroke

To Cuff, v. n. and a. To fight, to scuffle:—act. To strike with the fist: in falconry, to strike with talons.

CUFF=cûff, s. The fold at the end of a sleeve.

CUI-BONO, kî-bô'-nô, 145: ad. For what end?

CUINAGE, kwîn'-âge, 145: s. The making of tin, &c., into pigs for carriage.

CUIRASS, kwê'-râss, 144, 104: s. A breast-plate.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

CONSONANTS: mish-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

Cut-ras-sier', (kwé-rās-sēr', 103) s. A soldier armed with a breast-plate.

CUISSE, kwiss, 145: s. Armour for the thigh.

CULDEE=cūl-dē', s. Literally, (by contraction from Lat.) a worshipper of God; a monk in Scotland or Ireland.

CULICIFORM, cū-lis'-ē-fōrm, 81: a. In the shape of a gnat or a flea.

CULINARY, cū-lē-nūr-ēy, 105, 12: a. Relating to the kitchen, or cookery.

To CULL=cūll, 155: v. a. To select from others.

Cull'er, 36: s. One who picks or chooses.

CULLENDER.—See Colander; also Cullis below.

CULLION, cūl-yōn, 146: s. A scoundrel, a mean wretch, a dastard.

Cul'-lion-ly, 105: a. Mean, base. [Shaks.]

Cul'-ly, s. One imposed on by low tricksters; the dupe of a strumpet.

To Cul'-ly, v. a. To befool, to cheat.

To The derivatives Callibility and Calligim are scarcely worth insertion.

CULLION, cūl-yōn, 146: s. A bulbous root.

CULLIS, cūl-lis, s. Broth or jelly strained.

CULM=cūlm, s. A species of coal.

CULM=cūlm, s. The stalk or stem of grasses.

Cul-mif'-er-ous, s. A term applied to plants having a smooth jointed stalk, and their seeds in chaff husks.

To CULMINATE, cūl-mē-nāte, v. n. To be vertical; to be in the meridian.

Cul'-mi-nā'-tion, 89: s. The transit of a planet through the highest point for the day; top or crown.

CULPABLE, cūl-pā-bl, a. Criminal, blameable.

Cul'-pa-bly, ad. Blameably.

Cul'-pa-ble-ness, s. Blame; guilt.

Cul'-pa-bil'-i-ty, 84, 105: s. Blame; guiltiness.

Cul'-prit, s. A man arraigned before his judge.

CULTER.—See Culter.

Cul'-tra-ted, a. Formed like a knife.

To CULTIVATE, cul-tē-vāte, 105: v. a. To till; to prepare for crops; to improve by husbandry; to raise by tillage; to foster; to correct or ameliorate by tuition; to search into by study.

Cul'-ti-va-ble, 101: a. That may be cultivated.

Cul'-ti-va-tor, 38: s. He that cultivates.

Cul'-ti-va'-tion, 89: s. Improvement by tillage; improvement by tuition or study.

Cul'-ture, (-tūre, colloq. -ch'oor, 147) s. The act of cultivating; cultivation.

To Cu'-ture, v. a. To cultivate. [Thomson.]

CUL'-ER=cūl'-ver, s. A pigeon or dove.

To Its compounds are Cul'-er-house, Cul'-er-tail, Cul'-er-tailed, and Cul'-er-key. The last is a name Isaac Walton gives to a flower.

CULVERIN=cūl'-vēr-in, s. A long cannon.

CULVERT=cūl'-vert, s. A tunnel or archway.

CUMBENT=cūm'-bēnt, a. Lying down.

To CUMBER=cūm'-ber, 36: v. a. To embarrass, to entangle, to obstruct; to crowd or load with something useless; to involve.

Cum'-ber, s. Vexation, embarrassment. [Obs.]

Cum'-ber-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Troublesome.

Cum'-ber-some-ly, ad. In a troublesome manner.

Cum'-ber-some-ness, s. Encumbrance; hindrance.

Cum'-brance, 12: s. Burthen; obstruction.

Cum'-brous, 120: a. Troublesome; oppressive; burthenous; jumbled; obstructing.

Cum'-brous-ly, ad. In a cumbrous manner.

CUMFREY=cūm'-frēy, s. A medicinal plant.

CUMIN=cūm'-in, 94: s. An aromatic plant.

To CUMULATE=cū-mū-lāte, v. a. To heap. S.

Cu"-mu-la'-tive, 105: a. Consisting of parts heaped together.

Cu"-mu-la'-tion, 89: s. The act of heaping.

CUNCTATION, cūngk-tā'-shūn, 89: s. Delay.

Cunc'-ta'-tur, 38: s. One given to delay.

CUNEAL=cū-nē-āl, a. Relating to a wedge.

Cu"-ne-a'-ted, a. Made in form of a wedge.

Cu-ne'-i-form, } a. Having the form of a wedge.

Cu'-ni-form, }

CUNNING=cūn'-ning, a. and s. Skillful, knowing; wrought with skill; artfully deceitful, designing; subtle, crafty.—s. Art, skill, knowledge; fraudulent dexterity; artifice, deceit, slyness. A Cunning man, beside its general sense, signifies one who tells fortunes.

Cun'-ning-ly, ad. With cunning.

Cun'-ning-ness, s. Craftiness, slyness.

To CUN, To know. (This is the parent word of the class.) Compare To CUN.

CUP=cūp, a. A small vessel to drink from; the liquor contained in it; that which is to be received and endured; any thing hollow like a cup; a vessel used for drawing blood; Cups in the plural, a merry drinking bout; To be in one's cups, to be drunk.

To Cup, v. n. To supply with cups. [Obs.] To fix a glass vessel on the skin, and draw blood by scarification.

Cup'-per, s. One who lets blood by scarifying.

Cup'-bear-er, (-bāre-er, 100, 41) s. An attendant who pours out and hands wine; an officer of state.

Cup'-board, (cūb'-board, 143) s. A case with shelves originally for cups, now for any thing frequently wanted.

To Cup'-board, v. a. To treasure, to hoard up.

Cup'-oak, 112: s. A gall found on the leaves of oak, which contains the worm of a small fly.

Cup'-rose, (-rōze, 151) s. The poppy.

CUPEL=cū'-pēl, s. A little cup (compare the preceding class) used in refining gold and silver, the substance of the cup, usually phosphate of lime, in order to absorb the baser metals of the mass when the whole is in a fluid state.

Cu'-pel-dust, s. Powder used in purifying metals.

Cu'-pel-la'-tion, 89: s. The process of assaying and purifying gold and silver.

CUPIDITY, cū-pid'-ē-tēy, 105: s. Unreasonable or unlawful longing, particularly for wealth.

CUPOLA=cū'-pō-lā, s. A dome, the hemispherical summit of a building.

CUPPER.—See under Cup.

CUPREOUS, cū-prē-ūs, a. Coppery; of copper.

Cu-prif'-er-ous, a. Producing copper.

CUR=cūr, 39: s. A degenerate dog; in reproach, a mean, or a snappish person.

Cur'-rish, a. Having the qualities of a cur; brutal, sour, quarrelsome.

Cur'-rish-ly, ad. In a currish manner.

Cur'-rish-ness, s. Moroseness, churlishness.

CURABLE, CURACY, &c.—See under Cure.

CURB=curb, s. Part of a bridle, consisting chiefly of an iron chain; restraint.

To Curb, v. a. To guide or restrain with a curb; to restrain, to inhibit, to check, to bend.

Curb'-ing, s. A check.

CURB'-STONE, s. A thick kind of stone at the edge of a pavement which keeps in the other stones.

CURB=curb, s. A tumor at a horse's hoof.

CURD=cūrd, 39: s. The coagulation of milk the concretion of the thicker parts of any liquor.

To Curd, v. a. To turn to curds.

Cur'-dy, a. Coagulated; concreted.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gātē-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā': lāw; gōōd; j'ōō, i, e, j'ew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mule, 171

To CUR-DLE, 101: v. n. and n. To coagulate, to concreate:—ad. To cause to coagulate.

CURE=cūr, s. Primarily and literally, care or teudance.—See the appropriated senses lower.

Cur-ra-tor, 38: s. One that has the care and superintendence of any thing; a guardian.

CURE, s. Tendence in the appropriated sense of remedy; healing; restoration of health.

To Cure, v. a. To heal; to restore to health.

Cur-rer, 36: s. One who cures, a healer.

Cur-ra-ble, 101: a. That may be cured.

Cur-ra-ble-ness, s. Possibility to be healed.

Cur-ra-tive, 105: a. Relating to the cure of diseases.

Cure-less, a. That cannot be cured.

To CURR, v. a. To tend in the appropriated sense of preparing from corruption; to pickle; to salt.

Cur-rer, s. One who pickles.

Cured, (e mute, 114) a. Preserved; pickled.

CURE, s. The tendence or care of souls; the district within which such tendence is required; the beneficent employment of a curate.

Cur-rate, s. A parish priest; a clergyman hired to take part in or perform the duties of another; one who holds a perpetual curacy.

Cur-ra-cy, s. The office or district of a curate. Curateship is the same, but unusual.

CURIALITY, cūr-rē-āl-ē-tē, 105: s. The privileges and retinue of a court. Curia is a place in which public affairs are transacted. Compare the previous class. [Obs.]

CURFEW, cūr-fū, 110: s. An evening bell; originally the signal that fires should be put out, and families go to bed; a cover for a fire.

CURIOLOGIC, cūr-rē-ō-lōg-ick, 88: a. Properly speaking or designating, an epithet applied to a rude kind of hieroglyphics.

CURIOUS, cūr-rē-ūs, 120: a. Careful or solicitous for information; (compare Cure, &c.) inquisitive; attentive to, diligent about; accurate; difficult to please; exact, nice, elegant, neat; artful, laboured; rare, singular.

Cur-ri-ous-ly, ad. Inquisitively; attentively; elegantly; neatly; artfully; exactly.

Cur-ri-ous-ness, s. Curiosity, inquisitiveness, exactness, nicety.

Cur-ri-ous-i-ty, 84: s. Inquisitiveness; the object of inquisitiveness; a rarity; an act of curiosity.

Cur-ri-ō-so, (-zō, [Ital.] 170) s. A curious person, a virtuoso.

CURL=cūrl, 39: s. A ringlet of hair; undulation, wave, sinuosity, flexure.

To Curl, v. a. and n. To turn the hair in ringlets; to writhe, to twist; to rise in undulations:—new. To shrink into ringlets; to rise in undulations.

Cur-ly, a. Having curls; full of ripples.

Cur-li-ness, s. State of being curly.

CURLEW=cūr-lū, 39, 110: s. A water fowl; also a bird that frequents the corn-fields in Spain.

CURMUDGEON=cūr-mūdgē-on, s. An avacious churlish fellow; a niggard; a churl.

Cur-mudge-on-ly, a. Niggardly; churlish.

CURRENT=cūr-rānt, s. The fruit of a well-known shrub growing in our gardens with the varieties of red, white, and black; a small kind of dried grape imported from the Levant:—See Corinth.

CURRENT=cūr-rēnt, n. and s. Literally, running or flowing; hence, passing from person to person, circulating; common, general, or fashionable; passable; now passing, present:—s. A running stream; a progressive motion of the water of the sea at a certain place; course, progression.

Cur-rent-ly, 105: ad. In a constant motion; popularly, generally, fashionably.

Cur-rent-ness, s. Circulation; general receptiveness of pronunciation.

Cur-ren-cy, s. Circulation; general reception; fluency; readiness of utterance; power of passing from hand to hand; the money of a country, or the paper passing as money.

CURRICLE, cūr-rē-cl, 101: s. A course; a chariot an open chaise with two wheels drawn by two horses abreast. It is allied to Course, to Current, to Cursive, &c.

CURRIER.—See lower under To Curry.

CURRISH, &c.—See under Cur.

To CURRY, cūr-rē, 129: v. a. To dress after tanning leather by beating, rubbing, &c.; to beat, to dress; to rub a horse with a scratching instrument so as to smooth his coat; to scratch in kindness, to rub down with flattery: To curry favour, to seek favour by officiousness and flattery.

Cur-rier, s. A dresser of tanned leather.

Cur-ry-comb, (-cōm, 116, 156) s. An iron instrument for currying horses.

To CURSE=curce, 39, 153: v. a. and n. To wish evil to; to exorcise; to devote to perdition; to torment:—new. To imprecate; to exorcise.

Cur-ser, 36: s. One that utters curses.

Curse, s. Malediction; affliction; torment.

Cur-sed, a. Cursed, part. 114, 143: Deserving a curse; hateful; unsanctified; blasted by a curse, vexatious.

Cur-sed-ly, 105: ad. Miserably, shamefully.

Cur-sed-ness, s. State of being under a curse.

Curst, a. Froward, shrewish; snarling. [Obs.]

Curst-ness, s. Peevishness, malignity. [Obs.]

CURSITOR, cūr-sū-tor, 36: s. An officer belonging to the chancery that makes out original writs. There are twenty-four of them; and in the oath they take, they are called clerks of Course.—Compare Course.

Cur-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Primarily, running, hence, hasty. It is allied to the ensu-ing c as.

CURSORY, cūr-sō-rē, 105: a. Primarily, going about, not stationary; appropriately, hasty, quick, inattentive.

Cur-so-r-ly, ad. Hastily; slightly.

Cur-so-r-i-ness, s. Slight attention.

Cur-so-r-i-ān-r, (-rār-ē), a. Cursory. [Out of use.]

CURST, &c.—See under Curse.

CURT=curt, 39: a. Short. [Little used.]

Cur-t-ly, ad. Briefly. [Little used.]

Cur-tal, a. Brief; abridged. [Milton.]—See also lower, and in Supp.

Cur-tail-dog, s. A dog whose tail is cut off according to the forest laws, and hindered from coursing.

Cur-tal, 12: s. A horse with a docked tail.

To CUR-TAIL, 81: v. a. To cut short; to abridge.

Cur-tail-er, 36: s. He who curtails.

CUR-TATE, a. A term applied to the distance from the sun of a point in the ecliptic which is met by a perpendicular line from a planet.

Cur-ta-tion, s. The interval between a planet's distance from the sun, and its curtate distance.

CURTILAGE, cūr-tē-lāg, 99: s. A court-yard of a dwelling house. [Law.]

CURTAIN=cūr-tēn, 119: s. A hanging cloth drawn together or expanded at pleasure: To draw the curtain, may be either to draw it over an object, or to withdraw it: To drop the curtain is to make an end, as at the conclusion of a play; A Cur-tain-lecture, is a lecture given in bed by a wife to her husband; in fortification, the curtain is that part of a wall that lies between two bastions.

To Cur-tain, v. a. To accommodate with curtains.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīrh-ūn i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

CURTATE, &c.—See under Curt.

CURULE, cū'-rool, 109: a. Literally, belonging to a chariot, but appropriately, senatorial. The curule or magisterial chair was carried in a chariot.

CURVE=cūrv, 39: a and s. Crooked; bent: —. Any thing bent.

To Curve, v. a. and n. To bend, to inflect.

Cur'-va-ted, a. Bent, crooked.

Cur'-va-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Crookedness; curve.

Cur'-va'-tion, 89: s. The act of bending or crooking; the state of being curved.

Cur'-vi-ty, 105: s. Crookedness.

Cur'-vi-lin'-ear, (-yār, 146) a. Consisting of a curved line; composed of curved lines.

To Cur'-vet, 14: v. n. To make curves in leaping; to leap, to bound, to frisk; to be licentious.

Cur'-vet, s. A particular leap in horsemanship; a bound; a frolic; a prank.

CUSHAT, cōsh'-āt, 117: s. The wood pigeon.

CUSHION, cōsh'-ūn, 117, 121, 18: s. A pillow or soft pad generally for a seat.

Cush'-ioned, (cōsh'-ūnd, 114) a. Seated on a cushion; accommodated with cushions.

Cush'-ion-et, s. A little cushion.

CUSP=cūsp, s. A point, appropriately of the horns of the moon or other luminary.

Cus'-pa-ted, 2: a. Ending in a point.

Cus'-pi-da'-ted, a. Having a sharp end. [Bot.]

CUSTARD=cūs'-tard, 34: s. A composition of milk and eggs, sweetened, and baked or boiled.

CUSTODY, cūs'-tō-dēy, 105: s. A keeping or guarding; hence, imprisonment; care, preservation, security.

Cus'-to'-di-al, 90, 146, 12: a. Relating to custody.

Cus'-tos, s. Keeper of a seal, or of documents.

CUSTOM=cūs'-tōm, 18: s. Frequent repetition of the same act; practice, or that which generates a habit; the habit acquired; usage, which, in law, constitutes the unwritten law, as having had the consent of ancestors, and is still daily practised; practice of frequenting a shop or factory to buy goods or employ labour; the state of being frequented for such purposes.

Cus'-tom-ed, (-tōmd, 18, 114) a. Accustomed.

Cus'-tom-a-ble, a. Common, habitual, frequent.

Cus'-tom-a-ble-ness, s. Frequency, habit; conformity to custom.

Cus'-tom-ar-y, a. Conformable to established custom; habitual; usual; wonted.

Cus'-tom-ar-i-ly, adv. Habitually, commonly.

Cus'-tom-ar-i-ness, s. Frequency.

Cus'-tom-er, s. An accustomed buyer at a shop or factory; a buyer.

Cus'-tu-mar-y, s. A book of laws and customs.

CUSTOM=cūs'-tōm, s. Literally, cost or charge paid to the government, a tribute, toll, tax, or duty; it is restricted in this country to the tax or duties on goods exported or imported.

Cus'-tom-a-ble, a. Subject to the duties.

Cus'-tom-er, s. A collector of customs.

Cus'-tom-house, s. The place where the duties for exports and imports are collected.

CUSTOS—See under Custody.

CUSTREL=cūs'-trēl, s. A buckler-bearer; a vessel for holding wine.

To CUT=cūt, } v. a. and n. To separate the parts

1 Cut=cūt, } of a substance by an edged instrument either by hewing, by sawing, or by gashing. When an entire separation of the parts is meant, the verb is usually accompanied by off, down, asunder, in two, or in pieces; to cut, hew, divide, or pierce in a figurative sense: out of these general meanings arise the particular applications: to carve, to make by sculpture; to divide a pack of cards; to intersect or cross; to pierce with any uneasy sensation: To cut down, to fell; to overpower: To cut off, to separate from the other parts; to destroy; to put to death untimely; to rescind; to intercept; to put an end to; to take away; to withhold; to preclude; to abbreviate: To cut out, to shape; to form; to scheme, to contrive, to adapt; to delar; to excel: To cut short, to hinder by sudden interruption; to abridge: To cut up, to divide into convenient pieces; to eradicate: —new. To make way by dividing; to perform a surgical operation by the knife: To cut in, to divide and turn up cards for determining the players. Cut and dry, or ready cut, a metaphor from hewn timber, signifies ready for use. In old authors Cut some times signifies drunk. For Cutting as a subs., see Supp.

Cut, s. The action of an edged instrument; the effect of the action; a wound made by cutting; a channel made by art; a part cut off; a near passage; a carving or engraving; the impression taken; the dividing of a pack of cards; fashion, form, shape; in old authors, a fool, a cully; a gelding: Cut and long tail, in old authors, men of all kinds, a metaphor from dogs.

Cut'-ter, s. That which cuts; a light sailing vessel that cuts the water; the teeth that cut the meat; an officer in the exchequer that cuts on the tallies the sums paid; a ruffian, a cut-throat.

Cut'-lass, 12: s. A broad sword. The Cuttle-ax, an old weapon, is not the parent of this word, although both in form and name it has merged into it.

Cut'-ler, 36: s. One who makes or sells knives.

Cut'-ler-y, s. The articles made by cutlers.

Cut'-let, s. A slice of meat for cooking; a steak.

Cut'-ting, s. A piece cut off; a chop; incision; capper, curvet.

Cut'-purse, s. A pickpocket; a thief.

Cut'-throat, s. and a. A ruffian; an assassin: —adj. Cruel, barbarous.

Cut'-wa-ter, (-wā'-ter, 140) s. The fore part of a ship's prow that cuts the water.

Cut'-work, 142: s. Work in embroidery.

CUTE=cūte, a. An abbreviation for acute, or a corruption of euth, which in Saxon is known, famous.

CUTICLE, cū'-tē-cl, 105, 101: s. The first and outermost covering of the body; a thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor.

Cut'-tic-u-lar, 38: a. Belonging to the skin.

Cu'-TA'-NE-ous, 90, 146: a. Relating to the skin.

CUTLER, CUTTER, &c.—See under To Cut.

CUTTLE, cū'-tl, 101: s. A fish which, when pursued, throws out a black liquor; a foul-mouthed fellow.

CYANOGEN=sī'-ān'-ō-gēn, s. Carburet of nitrogen; literally, generator of sky-blue. See Supp.

Cy'-A-NITE, s. A mineral of a blue colour.

CYCLE, sī'-cl, 101: s. A circle; a periodical space of time; a method, or account of a method, continued till the same course begins again; imaginary orbits; a circle in the heavens. Hence, Cy'-cle, a.

Cy'-cloid, 30: s. A geometrical curve.

Cy'-clloid'-al, a. Pertaining to a cycloid.

Cy'-clo-PÆ'-di-a, (pē'-dē-d, 103, 146, 98) s. A circle of the sciences; a book of universal knowledge.

Cy'-clo-GRAPH, 163: s. An instrument for describing the arcs of circles.

CYCLOPEAN, sī'-clō pē'-ān, 86: a. Pertaining to the Cyclops; vast, terrific.

CYDER.—See Cider.

CYNET=sig'-nēt, s. A young swan.

CYLINDER=sīl'-in-dēr, 36: s. A long circular body of uniform diameter, whose surface at each end is a circle parallel to that at the other end.

Cy lin'-dric, 89: } a. Partaking of the nature of a

Cy lin'-dri-cal, } cylinder.

Cyl'-in-droid, 40: s. A figure differing from the cylinder by having its bases elliptical.

The scheme as entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Four-els: gāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā'-pā': lāw: dōd: (wō, i. e. Jew, 55: 2, 5, 1, &c. mute 171.

CYMA=sī'-mā, s. A moulding, commonly called Ogee; also, an aggregate flower composed of several florets. Literally, a wave.

CYMAR, sē-mar', 105, 33: s. A scarf.

CYMBAL=sim'-bāl, s. A musical instrument, like a brazen dish, and used in pairs. As an ancient instrument, its precise form is unknown.

CYMBIFORM, sim'-bē-fā-wim, 105: a. Formed like a boat.

CYNIC=sin'-ic, 88: } a. and s. Having the CYNICAL, sin'-ē-cāl, } qualities of a dog: snarling, satirical.—s. A philosopher of a snarling satirical sect, a follower of Diogenes; a severe, morose man; a misanthrope.

CY-NAN'-THRO-PE, (sī-nān'-thrō-pē), s. A species of madness in which men have the qualities of dogs.

CY-NE-GEI'-ICS, s. pl. The science or art of urging dogs, or hunting.

CY-NO-SURE, (-zūre-zh'oor, 147) s. The polar star in the tail of the dog; as the little bear is sometimes called; any thing which attracts attention.

CYON.—See Scion.

CYOPHORIA, sī'-bō-rōr'-ē-d, 163, 47, 90: s. The time of gestation, or carrying the fetus.

CYPHER.—See Cipher.

CYPRESS=sī'-prēss, s. A tree, anciently used at funerals, and hence the emblem of mourning.

CYPRIAN, sīp'-rē-ān, s. A devotee of Venus; a prostitute.

CYPRUS, sī'-prūs, s. A thin transparent black stuff.

CYRIOLOGIC, sī'-rē-bō-lōd'-gic, a. Relating or pertaining to capital letters.

CYST=sist, s. A bag in animal bodies containing morbid matter. The full word is Cystitis.

Cys-tic, a. Contained in a bag.

Cys-to-cele, 101: s. A hernia formed by the protrusion of the urinary bladder.

Cys-tof'-o-my, s. The art or practice of opening encysted tumors.

CYTISUS, sīt'-ē-sūs, s. A flowering shrub.

CZAR, zar, 144, 33: s. The title of the emperor of Russia. The Russ pronounce it tsar.

Cza-rē'-nd, (-rē'-nd, 104) s. The empress of Russia.

Czar'-ish, a. Pertaining to the Czar.

Czar'-o-witz, (-wīts, 143) s. The title of the Czar's eldest son. The Russ pronounce it tsar'-a vitch.

D.

D is the fourth letter of the alphabet. Its sound is the 79th element of the schemes prefixed. As an abbreviation it frequently stands for doctor, as D. D. doctor of divinity; S. T. D. doctor of sacred theology; M. D. doctor of medicine; L. L. D. doctor of laws. It also stands for denarii, pence.

DA CAPO, dā cā'-pō, [Ital.] 170: ad. Again, or repeat from the beginning; a direction in music.

To DAB=dāb, v. a. To strike gently with something soft or moist; to slap.

Dab, s. A small lump of any thing; a blow with something moist, or soft; something moist or slimy thrown on one; a small flat fish.—See also lower.

DAB-CHICK, s. A small water fowl.

To DAB-BLE, 101: v. a. and n. To smear, to daub, to spatter, to besprinkle.—new. To play in water; to do any thing in a slight shallow manner; to tamper.

Dab'-bler, 36: s. One that plays in water; one that meddles without mastery; a superficial meddler.

The glo is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165; dān, 166; then, 166.

DAB=dāb, s. An adept at any thing. [Vulgar.] See also above.

Dab' ster, s. The same as d. b. [Vulgar.]

DACE=dāce, s. A river fish like a roach.

DACTYL=dāc'-tīl, s. A poetic foot of one long syllable and two short ones, named from the analogy to the joints of a finger.

Dac'-ty-list, s. One who writes flowing verses

Dac-tyl'-ic, 89: a. Relating to the dactyl.

DAC-TRY-LOI'-O-GY, 85, 87: s. The art of conversing by the fingers

DAD=dād,

DADDY, dād'-dēy, } s. A child's way of expressing father.

To DADDIE, dād'-dī, v. n. To totter.—See To Toddle. As a subs. in low language, the foot or the hand.

DADO, dā'-dō, [Ital.] 170: s. The plain part between the base and cornice of a column.

DÆDALIAN, dē-dāl'-yān, 90, 103, 146: a. Intricate; formed with art; maze-like: (Dædalus invented sails or wings, and made the Cretan labyrinth.)

Dæd'-A-LOUS, 120: a. Having a margin with various windings and turnings. [Bot.]

To DAFF=dāf, v. a. To toss aside. [Shaks.] To make DAFFODIL=dāf'-fō-dīl, s. A yellow flower, a species of narcissus. It is also called daffodilly, and daffidowndilly.

DAFT=dāft, 11: a. Silly, stupid [Provin.]

DAG=dāg, s. A loose end of something; a leathern latchet; a slip or shred. [Obs.]

DAGGER, dāg'-gēr, 77: s. A short sword; a poniard; a blunt blade of iron; the obelus, thus, †.

Dag'-gers-draw-ing, 36, 143: s. The act of drawing swords; approach to open violence; a quarrel.

To DAGGLE, dāg'-gl, 101: v. a. and n. To dip negligently in mire or water; to besprinkle.—new. To be in the mire; to run through wet or dirt.

Dag'-gle-tail, a. and s. Bemired.—s. A slattern.

DAHLIA, dā'-lē-d, 56, 146: s. A flower originally from Mexico.

DAILY.—See under Day.

DAINTY, dān'-lēy, a. and s. Pleasing to the palate, delicious; delicate, nice; squeamish; scrupulous; ceremonious; elegant; effeminately beautiful; affectively fine.—s. Something nice or delicate.

Dain'-tily, ad. Elegantly, delicately, deliciously, pleasantly, nicely, ceremoniously, fastidiously.

Dain'-ti-ness, s. The quality of being dainty.

DAIRY, dāre'-lēy, 100, 41: s. The occupation of making various kinds of food from milk; more commonly, the place where milk is kept, and cheese and butter are made; a milk farm.

Dai'-ry-maid, s. She who manages the dairy.

DAISY, dāi'-zēy, 100, 151: s. A spring flower.

Dai'-sied, (-zīd, 114) a. Full of daisies.

DALE=dālē, s. A place between hills; a vale.

DALLOP=dāl'-lōp, s. A tuft or clump. [Provin.]

To DALLY, dāl'-lēy, 105: v. n. Literally, to delay; hence to trifle, to play idly or foolishly; to toy and wait on, to exchange caresses, to fondle; to sport.

Dal'-li-er, s. A trifler; a fondler.

Dal'-li-ance, s. Interchange of caresses, acts of fondness; delay, procrastination.

DAM=dām, s. Female parent; at present seldom used but in speaking of beasts.

DAM=dām, s. A mole or bank to confine water.

To Dam, v. a. To confine or shut up water by dams.

DAMAGE=dām'-āge, 99: s. Mischief, hurt, detriment, loss; in law, any hurt or hindrance that a man suffers in his estate; compensation awarded by a jury for mischief done or loss sustained.

To Dam'-age, v. a. and n. To injure, to impair.—new. To receive harm.

Dam'-age-a-ble, a. Able to receive damage; in some old authors, able to inflict damage.
Dam'-age-fea'-sunt, (-fā'-zānt, 180) s. A doing of hurt or damage. [Law.]

DAMASCENE=dām'-d-sēnt, s. That part of Syria of which Damascus was the capital, now used as the name of a plum originally brought from thence.—See the next word.

Dam'-son, (-zō, 151, 114) s. The name of a plum originally written damascene.

DAM'-ASK, s. Linen or silk invented at Damascus, which, by a various direction of the threads, exhibits flowers or other subjects: also red colour, or that of the Damask rose.

To Dam'-ask, v. a. To form flowers, &c. on stuffs.

To Dam'-as-KERN, v. a. To make incisions in iron, steel, &c. and fill them with gold or silver ornament, according to patterns brought originally from Damascus.

Dam'-as-kin, s. A sabre so called.

DAM'-ASK-PLUM, s. A small black plum.

DAM'-ASK-ROSE, (-rōzē, 151) s. A red rose.

DAME=dāmē, s. Originally, the title of honour for a woman, but particularly for the mistress of a family by rank a lady; the wife of a knight or baronet; in its present more common use, the mistress of a family in humble life, of mature or advanced years; a matron generally; a woman generally.

DAMERS'-VI'-O-LET, 143: s. A fragrant plant, rocket.

To DAMN, dām, 156: v. a. To condemn; to do m to eternal torments in a future state; to procure or cause to be eternally condemned; to hiss or hoot down any public performance. In vulgar profane use it is an adverbial or interjectional expletive.

Damned, (dāmd,) 114: part. Condemned.

Dam'-ned, adj. Condemned; hateful, detestable.

Dam'-ning-ness, s. Tendency to procure damnation.

Dam'-na-ble, 101: a. Deserving damnation; odious, pernicious.

Dam'-na-ble-ness, s. The state of being damnable.

Dam'-na-b'y, 105: ad. In a damnable manner.

Dam'-na-tur-y, a. Containing a sentence of condemnation.

Dam-na'-tion, 89: s. Exclusion from divine mercy; condemnation.

To Dam'-nu-ty, (-fī, 6) v. a. To cause loss or damage to; to injure.

Dam-nif'-ic, 88: a. Procuring loss; mischievous.

DAMP=dāmp, a. and s. Moist, inclining to wet, foggy; dejected, sunk, depressed.—s. Fog, moist air, vapour; dejection, depression of spirit. Damps in wells and pits are noxious exhalations, usually the carbonic acid gas, commonly called choke damp, which instantly suffocates; or some inflammable gas called fire damp.

To Damp, v. a. To wet, to moisten; to depress, to deject; to weaken, to abate, to discourage.

Dam'-py, 105: a. Moist, damp; dejected, sorrowful.

Dam'-per, 36: s. That which damps; a valve in a furnace; a part in a musical instrument to deaden vibration.

Damp'-ness, s. Moisture, foginess.

Damp'-ish, a. Inclining to moist.

Damp'-ish-ness, s. Tendency to moisture.

DANK, (dāngk, 158) a. and s. Damp, humid, wet.—s. Moisture; humidity. [Poetic.]

Dank'-ish, a. Somewhat damp.

Dank'-ish-ness, s. Dampness; humidity.

DAMSEL, dām'-zēl, 151: s. Strictly, a young lady; a young female; a female attendant of the better rank; a country lass.

DAMSON.—See under Damascene.

DAN=dān, s. Master, Don, or Sir. [Obs.]

To DANCE=dāncē, 11: v. n. and a. To move with varied and regulated motions of the feet, generally in accord with music; To Dance attendance, is to wait with suppleness and obsequiousness.—act. To make to dance.

Dance, s. A regulated movement of the feet; a motion of many in concert.

Dan'-cer, s. One that practises dancing.

Dan'-cing, s. The art of moving with regulated steps in accord with music.

Among the compounds are Dan'-cing-master and Dan'-cing-school.

DANDELION=dān'-dē-lī'ōn, s. The name of a plant, literally, lion's tooth.

DANDIPRAT, dān'-dē-prāt, s. Originally, a small piece of money coined by Henry the Seventh; a little fellow, an urchin.

To DANDLE, dān'-dl, 101: v. a. To move an infant up and down on the knees or hands for the purpose of quieting; to fondle with the hands; to treat like a child; in old authors, to dally with.

Dan'-dler, s. One that dandles or fondles.

DANDRUFF=dānd'-rūf, 155: s. Scurf in the head.

DANDY=dān'-dēy, s. A top, a cockcomb. Compare Dandiprat and Jackdandy.

DANE=dānē, s. A native of Denmark.

Da'-nish, a. and s. Pertaining to the Danes.—s. The Danish language.

Dane'-gelt, (-guēlt, 77) s. Danish money, a tax levied by the Danes on our Saxon ancestors.

Dane'-wort, (-wurt, 141) s. The plant wall-wort.

DANGER, dān'-jer, 111: s. Risk, hazard, peril.

To Dan'-ger, 36: v. a. To endanger. [Little used.]

Dan'-ger-less, a. Without hazard or risk.

Dan'-ger-ous, 129, 120: a. Full of danger.

Dan'-ger-ous-ly, ad. Hazardously; with danger.

Dan'-ger-ous-ness, s. Danger, peril.

To DANGLE, dāng'-gl, 158, 101: v. n. To hang loose and waving; to hang on any one; to be an humble follower.

Dan'-gler, s. One that dangles; it is spoken particularly of men who hang about women.

DANK, &c.—See under Damp.

To DAP=dāp, v. n. To let the bait fall gently into the water, to raise and sink it. [Angling.]

DAPATICAL, dā-pāt'-ē-cāl, a. Sumptuous as food.

Dap'-i-fer, s. One who serves food; a server

DAPPER=dāp'-per, a. Little and active; lively without bulk; pretty; neat.

Dap'-per-ling, s. A dwarf, a dandiprat.

DAPPLE, dāp'-pl, a. Marked with various colours, or with lighter and deeper shades of a colour.

To Dap'-ple, v. a. To variegate, to spot, to streak

DAR=dar, s. A fish of the Severn, otherwise Dart.

To DARE=dārē, 41: v. n. To have courage

I DURST=durst, v. n. To have courage for any purpose; not to be afraid; to venture.

DARED=dārd, 114: v. n. To have courage for any purpose; not to be afraid; to venture.

To DARE, v. a. (In this use the verb is regular.) To challenge; to defy. To dare larks, is to catch them by means of a looking-glass.

Dare, s. Defiance; challenge. [Obs.]

Da'-rer, 41, 36: s. One who dares or defies.

Da'-ring, a. Bold, adventurous.

Da'-ring-ly, ad. Boldly, courageously.

Da'-ring-ness, s. Boldness.

Dare'-ful, 117: a. Full of defiance. [Shaks.]

DARK=dark, 33: a. and s. Not light, wanting light; not of a showy or vivid colour; blind; without the enjoyment of light; opaque; obscure; secret; ignorant; gloomy.—s. Darkness; obscurity; want of light; want of knowledge.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Four-ē fāt'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: good: j'wā, i. e. few, 55: a. e. i, &c. mule, 171.

Dark'-ly, 105: ad. Obscurely; blindly.

Dark'-ness, s. The quality of being dark; secrecy; ignorance, uncertainty; infernal gloom; wickedness.

Dark'-ish, a. Dusky, approaching to dark.

Dark'-ling, a. Being in the dark. [Milton.]

Dark'-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Gloomy, obscure.

To DArk'-KEN, (-kn, 114) v. a. and n. To make dark; to cloud; to perplex; to foul:—neu. To grow dark.

Dar'-ken-er, 36: s. That which darkens.

DARLING=dar'-līng, a. and s. Favourite, dear, beloved:—s. One much beloved.

To DARN=darn, 33: v. a. To mend holes by sewing in imitation of the original texture.

Dar'-ning, s. The act or the work of one that darns.

DARNEl.=dar'-nēl, s. A field weed.

To DARRAIN=dar'-rān', v. a. To range for battle; to prepare for combat; to prove. [Obs.]

DART=dart, 33: s. A missile weapon thrown by the hand; any missile weapon.

To Dart, v. a. and n. To throw offensively; to throw; to emit:—neu. To fly as a dart; to fly with hostile purpose.

Dar'-ter, s. One who throws a dart.

Dar'-ting-ly, ad. Swiftly; as a dart.

To DASH=dāsh, v. a. and n. To throw or strike suddenly; to break by collision; to throw in flashes, to besprinkle; to mingle, to adulterate; to form or sketch in haste; to obliterate, to confound; to surprise with shame or fear:—neu. To fly from the surface by a violent motion; to fly in flashes with a loud noise; to rush through water so as to make it fly; to strike as a ship on a rock.

Dash, s. and ad. Collision; infusion; a mark thus — in writing; a sudden stroke, blow, or act; flourish, parade:—ad. An expression of the sound of water dashed.

Dash'-ing, a. Precipitate, rushing; striking with surprise by dress and air.

DASTARD=dās'-tard, s. A coward; a poltroon.

Das'-tar-dy, s. Cowardliness; timorousness.

Das'-tard-ly, a. Cowardly; mean.

Das'-tard-li-ness, s. Cowardice.

To Das'-tar-dize, v. a. To intimidate.

DATA, DATE, &c.—See under Datum.

DATE=dāte, s. The fruit of the date tree.

Date'-tree, s. A species of palm.

DATUM=dā'-tūm, s. A thing given; a proposition given and admitted: pl. da'-ta.

DA'-TA-RY, s. An officer of the chancery of Rome, who affixes to the papal bulls datum Romæ, that is, given at Rome.

DATS, s. Originally, a memorandum of the time when a letter was given to the messenger; at present, the time at which a letter is composed signified in writing at the beginning or end of it; the writing itself which marks the time; the time of any event; a stipulated time; duration; conclusion.

To Date, v. a. and n. To note with the time any thing which is written or done:—neu. To reckon; to have origin.

Da'-ter, 36: s. One who dates writing.

DA'-TIVE, (-tīv, 105) a. That is given or appointed, as dative nobility, a dative executor; that pertains to giving, as the dative case in grammar, whose sign is to.

To DAUB=dāwb, v. a. and n. To smear with something adhesive; to paint coarsely; to lay on gaudily or ostentatiously; to flatter grossly:—neu. [Shaks.] To play the hypocrite.

Daub, s. A coarse painting.

Daub'-er, 36: s. One that daubs; a coarse low painter; a low flatterer.

Daub'-er-y, s. A daubing; any thing artful.

Daub'-ing, s. Plaster; any thing adhesive.

Daub'-y, a. Viscous, glutinous; smeary.

DAUGHTER, dāw'-ter, 162: s. The female offspring of a man or woman; generally, any female descendant; a term of tutelage or kindness: daught'-er-in-law, a son's wife.

Daugh'-ter-ly, a. Like a daughter; dutiful.

To DAUNT=dānt, 122: v. a. To discourage; to fright.

Dau'nt'-less, a. Fearless; not dejected.

Dau'nt'-less-ness, s. Fearlessness.

DAUPHIN, dāw'-fīn, 161: s. The title originally of the counts of Dauphiny, who bore a dolphin for their crest, and ceded with his dominions by count Humbert the Second to the king of France on condition that the heir apparent of the crown should thenceforward bear it.

Dau'-phi-ness, s. The wife of the dauphin.

DRI'-PHINE, (-fīn, 105) a. Pertaining to the dauphin, as a delphine edition, that is, published for the use of the dauphin; pertaining to a dolphin.

DAVIT=dā'-vīt, s. A beam used in hoisting the flukes of an anchor to the top of the bow.

DAW=dāw, s. A bird.

To DAWDLE, dāw'-dl, 101: v. n. To waste time; to act slowly; to trifle.

Daw'-dl-er, 36: s. A trifler; a lingerer.

To DAWN=dāwn, v. n. To begin to show day or daylight; to glimmer; to begin yet faintly; to give some promises of lucre. Our old writers have To Daw in the same sense.

Dawn, s. The time between the first appearance of light, and the sun's rise; beginning; first rise.

Dawn'-ing, s. Break of day.

DAY=dāy, s. The time between the rising and setting of the sun, called the artificial day; the time from noon to noon, or midnight to midnight, called the natural day; light as opposed to darkness or night; sunshine; a specified time; the age then passing, in which the plural is most frequent, as, These days, Those days; time or season in general, life. To win the day, to win the contest of the day; From day to day, without certainty of continuance; Day by day, every day; Days of grace, days granted by a court of law for delay; also those allowed by custom for the payment of a bill after it is due, which in England are three.

To-day', ad. On this day.

Da'-ily, a. and ad. Happening every day:—ad. Every day; very often.

☞ The compounds include Day-bed, (a couch for repose in the day;) Day-book, (a tradesman's journal;) Day-break, or Day-spring, (the dawn;) Day-dream, (a reverie;) Day-light, (light of day;) Day-rule, or Day-verit, (a rule or order of the court permitting a prisoner to go beyond the bounds for one day;) Day-star, (the morning star;) Day-time, (the opposite to night time;) Day-work, (work imposed by the day;) to which may be added the following word now obsolete, DAYS'-MAN, 151, 12: s. An arbitrator or judge. Hence the word day in old authors may be found in the sense of judgement.

To DAZZLE, dāz'-zl, 101: v. a. and n. To overpower with light; to strike or surprise with splendor:—neu. To have the sight overpowered or wavering.

Daz'-zling, a. Striking with splendor.

Daz'-zling-ly, ad. In a manner to dazzle.

Daz'-zle-ment, s. The act of dazzling. [Little used.]

To DAZE, v. a. To dazzle. [Obs.]

Daze, s. Among miners, a glittering stone.

DE-, A Latin prefix generally signifying a moving from; hence it often expresses a negative, as To de-range; it may also mean of or concerning; otherwise it is merely intensive.

DEACON, dēā'-kn, 114: s. One of the lowest of the orders of the clergy, (see Diaconal;) in Scotlarl an overseer of the poor; the master of an incorporated company.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Dea'-con-ess, s. A female officer in the ancient church.

Dea'-con-ry, s. The office, dignity, or ministry of a deacon.

DEAD, dēd, 120: a. (Compare To Die.) Deprived of life; inanimate; senseless; inactive; motionless; useless, unprofitable; dull, gloomy; unemployed; still; obscure; obtuse, not sprightly; frigid; tasteless, vapid, as a liquor; without the natural force or efficacy, as a dead fire; without the power of vegetation, as a dead bough; lying under the power of sin; unvaried.

The Dead, s. pl. Dead men.

Dead'-ly, a. and ad. Destructive, mortal, implacable:—ad. In a manner resembling the dead; mortally, implacably, irreconcilably.

Dead'-ness, s. Want of circulation or of warmth; weakness of the vital powers; frigidity; vapidity; loss of life; inactivity.

Dead'-li-ness, s. The state of being dead.

Dead'-li-hood, 118: s. The state of being dead.

To DEAD-EN, (dēd'-dn, 114) v. a. To deprive of any kind of force or sensation; to make vapid or spiritless.

☞ The compounds include Dead'-doing, (destructive;) Dead'-drunk, (so drunk as to be quite helpless;); Dead'-lift, (a heavy weight, a hopeless exigency;); Dead'-light, (a frame of wood to keep the water from entering the cabin window in a storm;); Dead'-reckoning, (the estimation of a ship's place by the log-book without the observation of the heavenly bodies;); Dead'-water, (the water that closes in with a ship's stern;); Dead'-nettle, (a weed;); with Dead'-ly-car's-rot, and Dead'-ly-night'-shade, (poisonous plants.)

DEAF, dēf, 120: a. Wanting the sense of hearing; deprived of hearing; obscurely heard; unprofitable.

Deaf'-ly, ad. Without sense of sounds; obscurely.

Deaf'-ness, s. Want of ability or of will to hear.

To DEAF-EN, (dēf'-fn, 114) v. a. To deprive of the power of hearing.

To DEAL=dēal, v. a. and n. To divide; to divide in portions, to dis-

DEALT, dēlt, 135: v. To divide in portions, to distribute; to scatter, to throw about; to give gradually; to distribute as cards:—neu.

To transact business; to act between two persons; to intervene; to behave well or ill in any transaction; to act in any manner: To deal by, to treat well or ill; To deal in, to be engaged in, to practise; To deal with, to treat in any manner, to contend with.

Deal, s. Literally, a division; a dole; (compare Dole;) a part or portion; hence an indefinite quantity; degree or extent: formerly, it was usual to qualify the word variously, as some deal, &c.; at present we say a deal or a great deal: the act of dealing cards.—See also lower.

Deal'-er, 36: s. One that has to do with any thing; a trafficker; a person who deals the cards.

Deal'-ing, s. Practice, action; intercourse; measure of treatment; traffic, business.

DEAL, s. The wood of the pine, so called because more than any other sort of wood, it is put out in portions for various purposes; a plank of wood is a deal, which word is now restricted to the pine.

To DEALBATE=dē-āl'-bātē, v. a. To whiten.

De'-al-ba'-tion, 89: s. A whitening or bleaching.—See De.

To DEAMBULATE=dē-ām'-bū-lātē, v. n. To walk abroad. [Little used.] See De.

De-am'-bu-la'-tor-y, 105: a. and s. Relating to the practice of walking abroad:—s. A place to walk in.

De-am'-bu-la'-tion, s. The act of walking abroad.

DEAN=dēan, s. The second dignity of a diocese; also, an officer in each college at Oxford and Cambridge.

Dean'-er-y, s. The office of a dean; the revenue of a dean; the house of a dean.

Dean'-ship, s. The office and rank of a dean.

DECA'-NAL, a. Pertaining to a deanery.—See Decanal under Deca.

DEAR=dēar, 134: a. (From a Saxon verb signifying to hurt.) Hurtful; hateful. [Shaks. Obs.]

DEAR=dēar, 134: a. Scarcely; not plentiful; high in price.—See also lower.

Dear'-ly, 105: ad. At a high price.

Dear'-ness, s. Scarcity; high price.

DEARTH, (dēarh, 131) s. Scarcity which makes food dear; want, need, famine, barrenness.

DEAR, (dēre) a. and s. Of a high value in estimation; precious; beloved.—See also above:—s. A word of endearment, darling; Deary is sometimes used in the same sense.

Dear'-ly, ad. With great fondness.—See also above.

Dear'-ness, s. Fondness; kindness.

Dear'-ling.—See Darling.

To DEARN.—See To Darn.

DEARN=dēarn, a. Lonely, melancholy. [Obs.]

DEARTH.—See above under Dear.

To DEARTICULATE=dē-ar-tick'-ū-lātē, v. a.

To disjoint, to dismember.—See De.

DEATH, dēth, 120: s. (Compare Dead, and To Die.)

The extinction of life; mortality; destruction; the manner of dying; the image of mortality represented by a skeleton; the cause or instrument of death; damnation, eternal torments.

Death'-ful, 117: a. Full of slaughter; destructive.

Death'-ful-ness, s. Appearance of death.

Death'-less, a. Immortal; everlasting.

Death'-like, a. Resembling death.

Death'-s-man, s. An executioner.

Death'-ward, 140, 38: ad. Toward death.

Death'-watch, 140, 18: s. An insect that makes a ticking noise, superstitiously thought to prognosticate death.

☞ Among the remaining compounds are Death'-bed, Death'-boding, Death'-daring, Death'-s-door, Death'-shadowed, and Death'-token.

To DEAURATE=dē-āw'-rātē, v. a. To gild or cover with gold.—See De.

DEBACLE, dē-bā'-cl, [Fr.] 170: s. The geological or pristine deluge.

To DEBAR=dē-bar', v. a. To exclude.—See De.

To DEBARK=dē-bark', v. a. To disembark.—See De.

De'-bar-ca'-tion, 89: s. Act of disembarking.

To DEBASE=dē-bācē', 152: v. a. To reduce from a higher to a lower state; (see De;) to make mean, to degrade, to sink; to vitiate with meanness; to adulterate.

De-ba'-ser, s. He that debases.

De-base'-ment, s. The act of debasing.

DEBATE=dē-bātē', s. Literally, a contention about or concerning; (see De;) a personal dispute; a controversy; a quarrel; a contest.

To De-bate', v. a. and n. To controvert; to dispute; to contend for:—neu. To deliberate; to dispute; to engage in combat.

De-ba'-ta-ble, 101: a. Disputable.

De-ba'-ter, s. A disputant; a controversialist.

De-bate'-ful, 117: a. Of persons, quarrelsome, contentious; of things, contested, occasioning quarrels.

De-bate'-ment, s. Controversy; deliberation; battle, combat.

To DEBAUCH=dē-bāuch', 123, 63: v. a. To corrupt, to vitiate; to corrupt by lewdness; to corrupt by intemperance.

De-bauch', s. A fit of intemperance; luxury; excess; lewdness.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

French: gāte'-way: chāp'-mōn: pā-pā': lā': gōū: j'w, i.e. jar, 55: a. t. &c. mule, 171.

De-bauch'-er, 36: s. One who seduces to lewdness or intemperance.
De-bauch'-er-y, s. The practice of excess; lewdness.
De-bauch'-ment, s. Corruption.
De-bauch'-ed-ly, ad. In a profligate manner.
De-bauch'-ed-ness, s. Intemperance.
Dab'-AU-CHER, (déb'-ô-shêr', 108, 161) s. A lecher; a drunkard. [Fr.]
To DEBEL=déb'-bél', } v. a. To con-
To DEBELLATE=déb'-bél'-lâte, } quer; to wage war.—See De.
Deb'-el-la'-tion, 99: s. The act of debellating.
DEBENTURE.—See under Debit.
To DEBILITATE, déb'-bîl'-ê-tâte, 105: v. a. To weaken, to enfeeble, to make faint.
De-bîl'-i-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of weakening.
Deb'-ile, (déb'-îl, 105) a. Feeble; languid. [Shaks.]
De-bîl'-i-ty, 84: s. Weakness, feebleness, languor.
DEBIT=déb'-it, a. That shows what debts are due, a term applied to that side of an account book which is opposite the credit side. As a substantive the word is contracted into Debt, which see lower.
To Deb'-it, v. a. To charge with debt; to enter an account on the debit side of a book.
Deb'-i-tor, 38: s. A debtor. [Shaks.]
DE-BEN'-TUNE, (-tûr, 147) s. A writing acknowledging a debt; given by a public treasurer, it entitles the holder to a sum of money from the state; given by an officer of customs, it entitles the holder to a draw back of duties on exporting the goods for which duty had been paid. Debentured goods are such as are entitled to debenture.
ДЕБТ, (dê't, 157) s. That which one man owes to another; that which is incurred, and is due to any tribunal.
Debt'-ed, a. Indebted. [Little used.]
Debt'-or, 38: s. and a. One that owes:—adj. Debit.
Debt'-ee, 177: s. A creditor. [Blackstone.]
DEBONAIR=déb'-ô-nâir', a. Elegant; well-bred.
Deb'-o-nair'-ly, ad. Elegantly; with a genteel air.
To DEBOUCH, déb'-bôsh', 125, 161: v. n. To issue or march out of a narrow place, or dellie. [Fr.]
DEBRIS, déb'-rêc, [Fr.] 170: s. pl. Fragments of rocks; ruins, rubbish.
DEBT, &c.—See under Debit.
DEBULIATION, déb'-ûl-i-tâsh'-ûn, 89: s. A bubbling or seething over.
DEBUT, dâ-b'û, [Fr.] 170: s. Entrance upon any thing; first attempt; first step; first appearance.
DECA-, A Greek word signifying ten, occurring as a prefix in many adopted words.
DEKEM-, The same word under a Latin form.
 Words which begin with the letters deca, and are not found among the compounds of the Greek prefix, as Decacuminate, Decalence, Decamp, Decant, Decapitate, &c., must be sought for at the end of this class.
Dec'-A-CHORN, (dêc'-â-kârd, 161, 38) s. A musical instrument of the ancients having ten strings; something having ten parts.
Dec'-ADE, 99: s. The sum or number of ten.
Dec'-a-dal, a. Consisting of tens.
Dec'-A-GON, 18: s. A figure of ten sides.
Dec'-A-GRAM, s. A French weight of ten grains.
Dec'-A-GYN'-IAN, (-jîn'-yân, 146) a. Ten-fold feminine, applied to plants having ten pistils.
Dec'-A-HE'-UDON, s. A figure of ten bases or sides.
Dec'-a-he'-dral, a. Having ten sides.
Dec'-A-IL'-TER, s. A French measure of ten liters.
Dec'-A-LOGUE, (-lôg, 107) s. The ten commandments.

De-cal'-o-gist, s. An expounder of the decalogue.
DE-CAM'-E-KON, s. The name of a book divided into parts corresponding to ten days.
DE-CAM'-E-TER, s. A French measure of ten meters.
Dec'-A-NAI, a. Set over ten canons or prebendaries; this was originally the appointment, and hence the name of a dean.
DE-CAN'-DRI-AN, a. Ten-fold masculine, applied to plants having ten stamens.
DEC-AN'-GU-LAR, 158, 34: a. Having ten angles.
DEC-APH'-Y-LOUS, (-âf'-îl-lûs, 163) a. Ten-leaved.
Dec'-A-STICH, (-stîck, 161) s. A poem of ten lines.
Dec'-A-STYLE, (-stîle) s. In architecture, an assemblage of ten pillars.
DE-CEM'-BER, s. That which, among the early Romans, was the tenth month of the year, though now the twelfth.
DE-CEN'-DEN'-TATE, a. Having ten teeth or points.
DE-CEN'-FID, a. Cleft ten fold.
DE-CEN'-LOC'-O-LAR, a. Having ten cells for seeds.
DE-CEN'-PE-DAL, a. Ten feet long.
DE-CEN'-VIR, (-vêr, 36) s. One of the De-ces'-viri, (-vê-îr), or ten governors of Rome.
De-ces'-vi-rate, s. The dignity and office of the decemviri.
DE-CEN'-NAR-Y, s. A period of ten years; a tithing, which consisted of ten families.
Dec-en'-ni-al, (-cên'-nê-âl, 146) a. Continuing for ten years; happening every ten years.
DE-CEN'-NO-VAL, a. Pertaining to the number nine-teen.
Dec'-I-GRAM, s. Decagram.—See above.
Dec'-IL, (dêc'-îl) s. The aspect or position of two planets which are distant from each other the tenth part of the zodiac.
Dec'-I-MAL, (dêc'-sê-mâl) a. and s. Numbered by ten; multiplied by ten; tenth:—s. A tenth.
Dec'-i-mal-ly, ad. By tens; by decimals.
To Dec'-i-MATE, v. a. To tithe, or take one in ten; to select by lot and punish with death every tenth man.
Dec'-i-ma'-tor, 38: s. He who decimates.
Dec'-i-ma'-tion, 89: s. The act of decimating.
DE-CIM'-E-TER, s. Decimeter.—See above.
Dec'-I-MO-SKX'-TO, (dêc'-sê-mô-sêcks'-tô, 188) s. Sixteen-fold size or half that of octavo.
Dec'-U-PLE, 101: a. and s. Ten-fold:—s. A number ten times repeated.
DE-CU'-RI-ON, 90: s. An officer over ten men.
Dec'-U-ry, 81, 92: s. Ten men under a decurion.
 Here end the words compounded with Deca- and Decem-.
DECACUMINATED, dêc'-câ-cû'-mê-nâ'-têd, a. Having the top cut off from.—See De.
DECADE, &c., DECAGON, &c., DECA-LOGUE, &c.—See above under Deca-.
DECADENCE, &c.—See lower under To Decay.
DECAMERON, DECAMETER.—See above under Decem-.
To DECAMP=dê-câmp', v. n. To shift the camp; to remove from the field; to move off.—See De-.
De-camp'-ment, s. A marching or moving off.
DECANAL, DECANDRIAN, &c.—See under Deca-.
To DECANT=dê-cânt', v. a. Literally, to toss off from, (See Cant, a toss, and De-;) to pour off so as to leave the sediment behind.
De-can'-ter, 36: s. One who decants: the vessel which receives what is decanted.
De-can-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of decanting.
DECAPHYLLOUS.—See under Deca-.
To DECAPITATE, dê-câp'-ê-tâte, v. a. To behead.—See De-.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: nish-ûn, i. e. mission, 155: vîzh-ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thîn, 166: thên, 166.

De-cap-i-ta"-tion, 89: s. A beheading.

To DECARBONIZE=dē-car'-bō-nīzē. v. a.
To deprive of carbon.—See De.

DECASTICH, } See under Deca.
DECASTYLE, }

To DECAY=dē-cāy, v. n. and a. To lose excellence, to decline:—act. To impair, to bring to decay.

De-cay', s. Decline; declension; corruption.

De-cay'-er, s. That which causes decay.

De-cay'-ed-ness, s. State of being impaired.

De-ca'-DENCK, } Decay; fall.—See Decidence
De-ca'-den-cy, } and Deciduons.

DECEASE=dē-cēas', 152: s. Departure; death.

To De-cease', 152: v. n. To depart; to die.

De-ceased', (-cēst, 114, 143) a. Dead.

De-cē'-DENT, s. A deceased person. [Little used.]

De-cēs'-sion, (-shūn, 90) s. Departure [Little used.]

DECEIT, &c.—See in the next class.

To DECEIVE=dē-cēiv', 103, 189: v. a. To cause to mistake; to delude by stratagem; to cut off from expectation; to fail; to deprive by stealth.

De-cēiv'-er, 36: s. One that deceives.

De-cēiv'-a-ble, 101: a. Deceptible.

De-cēiv'-a-ble-ness, s. Liability to deception.

De-cēiv', s. Fraud; a cheat; stratagem; artifice.

De-cēiv'-ful, 117: a. Fraudulent; full of guile.

De-cēiv'-ful-ly, ad. Fraudulently.

De-cēiv'-ful-ness, s. Tendency to deceive.

De-cēiv'-less, a. Free from deceit.

De-cēiv'-TIBLE, 101: a. That may be deceived;
subject to fraud or imposition.

De-cēp'-tī-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. Liability to fraud.

De-cēp'-tive, 103: a. Deceiving; misleading.

De-cēp'-tor-y, 129: a. Tending to deceive.

De-cēp'-tion, 89: s. The act or means of deceiving;
cheat, fraud; the state of being deceived.

De-cēp'-tious, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Deceitful.

DECEMBER,

DECEMENTATE, &c.

DECEMPEDAL, &c.

DECEMPVIR, &c.

DECENNARY, &c.

DECENT=dē-cēnt, a. Becoming, fit, suitable;
grave, not gaudy; modest, not wanton.

De-cent-ly, ad. Properly; suitably, modestly.

De-cent-ness, s. Becomingness; decency.

De-cen-cy, 105: s. Propriety of form; becoming ceremony; suitability; modesty. Decence is obs.

DECEPTIBLE, &c. } See under To Deceive.

DECEPTION, &c.

DECEPT=dē-sep't', a. Cropped.—See De-
[Obs.]

De-cēp'-tī-ble, a. That may be plucked.

De-cēp'-tion, 89: s. A pulling or plucking off.

DECERTATION, dē'-cer-tā'-shūn, 89: s.
Strife; contest for mastery.—See De.

DECESSION.—See under To Decease.

To DECHARM=dē-char'm', v. a. To counteract a charm, to disenchant.—See De.

To DECHRISTIANIZE, dē'-cris't'-ān-ize, 116,
147: s. a. To turn from Christianity.—See De.

To DECIDE=dē-cīdē', v. a. n. and n. To fix the event of; to determine:—new. To come to a conclusion.

De-cī'-ded, a. Determined, clear, unequivocal.

De-cī'-ded-ly, ad. Fixedly; indisputably.

De-cī'-der, 36: s. One who determines.

De-cī'-da-ble, a. Capable of being determined.

De-cī'-sive, (-cīv, 152, 105) a. Having the power of determining; having the power of settling or fixing.

De-cī'-sive-ly, ad. Conclusively.

De-cī'-sive-ness, s. The quality of being decisive.

De-cī'-sor-y, a. Able to determine or decide.

De-cis'-ion, (dē-cīzh'-ūn, 90) s. Determination of a difference, of a doubt, or of an event; report of a determination or judgement in a court of law; the mental quality of firmness; also in the literal sense of the word now obsolete, a cutting off from, a separaration.—See De.

DECIDENCE=dēs'-sē-dēncē, 92, 105: s. A falling off or from; a fall. It is the classical orthography of Decadence, (see under To Decay,) bearing a more literal meaning.

De-cīd'-u-ous, 120: a. Falling every season, not perennial or permanent. [Bot.]

De-cīd'-u-ous-ness, s. Aptness to fall.

DECIGRAM, DECIL, DECIMAL, &c., DE-CIMATE, &c., DECIMO-SEXTO.—See under Deca.

To DECIPHER, dē-cī'-fēr, 163: v. a. To explain what is written in ciphers or secret characters; to unfold, unravel, or explain generally; in a sense now obsolete, to write or mark down in characters; to stamp, to characterize.

De-cī'-pher-er, s. One that deciphers.

DECISION, } See under To Decide.

DECISIVE, &c.

To DECK=dēck, v. a. Primarily, to cover, to put on, or overspread; hence, to dress, to array, to adorn, to embellish.

DECK, s. A covering, but seldom used except for the covering or floor of a ship. A deck of cards is a pack of cards regularly piled.

Deck'-er, 36: s. One who dresses or adorns; of a ship, we say a two-decker, or a three-decker, that is, having two decks or three decks.

Deck'-ing, s. Ornament.

To DECLAIM=dē-clām', v. n. and a. To speak with a sustained tone of voice, as distinguished from a colloquial manner, which is adapted to short sentences, and is therefore unsuitable when the style is raised; to harangue; to speak set orations; to speak with a vicious, inflated tone:—act. To speak with rhetorical force; to deliver with inflation of tone to speak in public; to advocate; as To declaim a cause;
but this last use is obs.

De-clām'-er, s. One that declaims.

De-clā'-ma"-tion, 89: s. A declaiming or speaking aloud for the exercise of the voice; the speech or composition used for the purpose; a speech of a sustained style, that is full of well-connected long sentences; style or manner of declaiming without the sense that should accompany it; a public harangue.

De-clā'-ma"-tor, 85, 92, 33: s. A declaimer.

De-clām'-a-tor-y, 129: a. In the style or manner of a declaimer.

To DECLARE=dē-clārē', 41: v. a. and n. To make known; to tell evidently and openly; to publish; to proclaim; to show in open view, or in plain terms:—new. To make a declaration; to proclaim some resolution or opinion.

De-clā'-red-ly, ad. Avowedly.

De-clā'-rer, 36: s. One that declares.

De-clā'-ring, s. Publication; declaration.

De-clā'-ra-ble, a. Capable of proof.

De-clare'-ment, s. Declaration. [Unusual.]

De-clar'-a-tive, (-clār'-d-tīv, 92, 129, 105) a.
Making declaration; explanatory.

De-clar'-a-tor-y, a. Affirmative; not detactory; not promissory. A declaratory law is a new act confirming a former law.

De-clar'-a-tor-i-ly, ad. In the form of a declaration, not in a detactory form.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gā'tē'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā': lāw; gōōd; j'ōō, i. e. few, 55: &c. &c. mute, 171

Dec-la-ra-tion, 89: s. A proclamation or affirmation; an explanation of something doubtful; in law, a legal specification on record of the cause of action by the plaintiff against the defendant.

DECLENSION, &c.—See in the next class.

To DECLINE=dē-clīn', v. n. and a. Literally, to lean downward, or from a right line; hence, to deviate both in a literal and figurative sense; to run into obliquities; to shun; to avoid doing; to sink; to decay: act. To bend downward; to bring downward; to shun, to avoid, to turn off from; and hence, to refuse.—See also lower.

De-clīn', s. State of tendency to the loss or the worse; diminution; decay.

De-clī-na-ble, a. That may be refused.—See also lower.

De-clī-na-tor-y, a. That turns from or is not liable to: applied to a plea before trial or conviction that the party is exempt from the penalty of the law, or the jurisdiction of the court. Decl'inate, curved down. [Bot.]

DEC-LI-NA-TION, 92, 105, 89: s. A leaning down, or bending from a right line; variation from rectitude; variation from a fixed point; descent; change to a worse state; variation of the needle from the north; variation or distance of a star from the equator; variation or extent of an arc of the horizon which meets a plane and the meridian.—See also lower.

Dec-li-na-tor, 36: s. An instrument for taking the declination of the stars.

De-clīn-a-tor-y, 92: s. An instrument used in dialling for taking the declination of planes.

DE-CLIN-SION, (-shūn, 90) s. Tendency to fall; tendency to a less degree; declination; descent.—See also lower.

To DE-CLINE, v. a. To change or vary a word through all the forms it is liable to fall into; (Compare Case.)

De-clī-na-ble, a. That can be grammatically declined.—See also above.

Dec-li-na-tion, 89: s. The act of declining a word.—See also above.

De-clen-sion, 90: s. A manner or form of inflexion to which certain words are liable when declined.—See also above.

DE-CLIV-VUS, 120: a. Gradually descending; not precipitous.

De-cliv-i-ty, 92: s. Inclination, or obliquity reckoned downwards, as activity is reckoned upwards—gradual descent.

To DECOCT=dē-cōck't', v. a. To prepare by boiling; to digest by the heat of the stomach; to boil in water so as to draw the strength of.

De-coc-ti-ble, a. Capable of being decocted.

De-coc-tive, 105: a. Of power to decoct.

De-coc-tion, 89: s. The act of boiling so as to extract the virtues of the thing boiled; the water in which the extract remains.

De-coc-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. A substance drawn by decoction; a decoction. [Little used.]

To DECOLLATE=dē-cōl-lāt', v. a. To behead.

Dec-ol-la-tion, 92, 89: s. The act of beheading.

DECOLORATION, dē-cūl'-ō-rā'-shūn, 116, 92, 89: s. Absence of colour.

To DECOMPOSE, dē-cōm-poze', v. a. and n. To separate the constituent parts of a body; to dissolve; to decompose:—new. To resolve into elementary particles.

De-com-po-sa-ble, a. That may be decomposed.

De-com-po-si-tion, (-zīsh'-ūn, 89) s. Resolution or separation of parts; it differs from mechanical division, as the latter separates but does not otherwise change the properties of a body, while the former reduces it to elements very different from its original substance; the word also signified re-composition, a sense now obs.

To DE-COM-POUND, v. a. To reduce to simple parts by mechanical division; (See Decomposition) to re-compound, or compound of things already compounded.

De-com-pound, a. Compounded a second time

De-com-pound-a-ble, a. Liable to be decomposed.

DE-COM-POS-ITE, (-pōz'-it, 105) a. Compounded a second time; decomposed.

To DECORATE=dēck'-ō-rāt', v. a. To adorn, to embellish, to deck.

Dec'-ō-ra-tor, 38: s. An adorning.

Dec'-ō-ra-tion, 89: s. Ornament, embellishment.

DE-CO-RUM, s. Grace arising from fitness or suitableness; propriety of speech and behaviour; decency.

DE-co-rous, 86, 120: a. Decent; suitable.

DE-co-rous-ly, 105: ad. In a becoming manner.

To DECORTICATE, dē-cor'-tē-cāt', 105: v. a. To divest of the bark or husk; to peel, to strip.

DE-cor-ti-ca-tion, 89: s. The act of peeling.

To DECOY=dē-coy', 29: v. a. To lure into a net; to entrap.

De-coy', s. Allurement to mischief; temptation.

De-coy'-duck, s. A duck that allures others.

To DECREASE=dē-crēce', 189: v. n. and a. To grow less; to be diminished:—act. To make less; to diminish.

De-crease', 82: s. Decay; the state of growing less; the wane of the moon.

DE-CRESC-ENT, a. Decreasing.

DE-CRE-TION, 89: s. State of growing less.

Dec'-re-ment, 92: s. Gradual decrease; diminution.

To DECREE=dē-crēe', v. a. and n. To doom or assign by a decree:—new. To make an edict.

De-cree', s. An edict, a law, an established rule; a determination of a suit; in canon law, an ordinance enacted by the pope with the advice of his cardinals.

DE-CRE-TAI, 12: a. and s. Pertaining to a decree:—s. A book of decrees or edicts, particularly those of the papacy.

De-crē-tist, s. One who studies the decretal.

DE-crē-tor-y, 92, 129, 105: a. Judicial, official; definitive; critical; in which there is some definitive event.

Dec'-re-tor-i-ly, ad. In a definitive manner.

DECREPIT=dē-crēp'-it, a. Wasted and worn out with age; in the last stage of decay.

De-crep'-i-tude, s. The broken state of body produced by age. Decrepitness is rarely used.

To DECREPITATE, dē-crēp'-ē-tāt', v. a. and n. To roast or calcine in a strong heat with continual hursting or crackling. It is etymologically allied to the last words, with which it agrees in the general sense of breaking:—new. To crackle.

De-crep'-i-ta-tion, 89: s. The act of roasting so as to make a continual crackling noise.

DECREPITUDE.—See above under Decrepit.

DECRESCENT, } See above under To Decrease.

DECRETION, &c. }

DECRETAL, } See above under To Decree.

DECRETORY, &c. }

DECRIAL, &c.—See lower under To Decry.

To DECROWN=dē-crown', v. a. To deprive of a crown.

DECRUSTATION, dē-crūs-tā'-shūn, s. An uncrusting.

To DECRY=dē-crī', v. a. To cry down.

De-crī'-al, s. A clamour against; censure.

De-crī'-er, 36: s. A hasty clamorous censurer.

DECUMBENT=dē-cūm-bēnt, a. Lying or leaning; in botany, declined or bending down.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

De-cum'-bence, } s. The act of lying down.
De-cum'-ben-cy, }

De-cum'-bi-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. The time at which a patient takes to his bed; the aspect of the heavens from which an astrologer draws prognostics of recovery or death.

De-cu'-u-sa'-tion, 89: s. The act of lying down.

DECUPLE, } See under Dece-
DECURION, &c. }

DECURRENT=dē-cūr'-rēnt, 129: a. Running or extending downwards.—See De.

De-cur'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Running down.

De-cur'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. The act of running down.

To DECURT=dē-curt', v. a. To shorten. [Obs.]

De'-cur-ta'-tion, 89: s. A shortening.

To DECUSSATE=dē-cūs'-sāte, v. a. To intersect at acute angles; to intersect generally.

De'-cus-sa'-tion, 89: s. The act of crossing.

DEDALOUS.—See under Dædalian.

To DEDECORATE=dē-dēck'-ō-rāte, v. a. To disgrace; to bring a reproach upon.

De-dec'-o-rā'-tion, 89: a. A disgracing; disgrace.

De-dec'-o-rous, 120, 86: a. Disgraceful.

DEDENTITION, dē-dēn'-tish'-ūn, 89: s. A loss or shedding of teeth.

To DEDICATE, dēd'-ē-cātē, 105: v. a. To devote to some divine power; to consecrate to sacred uses; to appropriate solemnly to any person or purpose; to inscribe to a patron.

Ded'-i-cate, a. Consecrate, devoted, dedicated.

Ded'-i-ca'-tor, s. One who inscribes to a patron.

Ded'-i-ca'-tor-y, a. Comprising a dedication.

DEDITION, dē-dīsh'-ūn, 89: s. A giving up.

DEDOLENT=dē-dō-lēnt, a. Feeling no sorrow.

To DEDUCE=dē-dūce', v. a. To draw in a regular connected series; to form a regular chain of consequential propositions; to lay down in regular order; to subtract, to deduct; to lead forth. The last is the literal though now an unusual meaning.

De-du'-c-ble, 101: a. Collectible by reason.

De-du'-cive, 105: a. Performing a deduction.

De-duce'-ment, s. That which is deduced.

To De-duc'-i, v. a. To subtract, to take away; to separate; to dispart; to reduce; to bring down.

De-duc'-tive, a. Deductible; pertaining to deduction or the deriving of necessary consequences from admitted premises.

De-duc'-tive-ly, ad. By regular deduction.

De-duc'-tion, 89: s. Consequential collection; proposition drawn from principles premised; that which is deducted.—See Induction.

DEED, &c.—See under To Do.

To DEEM=dēm, v. n. and a. To judge, to think, to estimate.—act. To judge, to determine, to suppose.

Deem, s. Judgement, opinion. [Obs.]

Deem'-ster, s. A judge in the Isle of Man.

DEEP=dēep, a. s. and ad. Having length downwards; measured downwards; profound; low in situation; entering or piercing far; far from the outer part; not superficial; not obvious; sagacious, penetrating; full of contrivance; polite; dark-coloured; having a great degree of stillness or gloom; depressed; sunk; bass; grave in sound; applied to soldiers arranged in rank and file, it signifies the extent of the file, as two deep, that is, two ranks one before the other.—s. The sea, the main, the ocean.—ad. Deeply, to a great depth.

Deep'-ly, ad. To a great depth; profoundly

Deep'-ness, s. Depth, profundity; cunning.

To Deep'-en, (dēp'-pn, 114) v. a. and n. To make deep; to sink far below the surface; to darken.

to cloud; to make and or gloomy:—new. To descend gradually, to grow deep.

The compounds of Deep, include Deep'-mouthed, or Deep'-throated, (having a hoarse loud voice;) Deep'-musing, (contemplative;) Deep'-rind, (profoundly versed;) Deep'-toned, (having a very low tone;) Deep'-vaulted, (formed like a deep vault,) &c.

DEPTH, s. Deepness; a deep place, opposed to a shoal; the middle of one season opposed figuratively to the height of another, as the depth of winter or of night; abstruseness; obscurity; sagacity; depth of a squadron is the number of men in the file.

DEER=dear, s. sing. and pl. A genus of animals whose flesh is called venison.

DÆSIS=dē-ē'-cīs, s. In rhetoric, an invocation or entreaty to the supreme powers.

To DEFACE=dē-fāce', v. a. To raze; to disfigure.

De-fā'-cer, 36: s. A destroyer, an abolisher.

De-face'-ment, s. Violation, rasure, injury.

DEFAILANCE.—See under Default.

To DEFALCATE=dē-fāl'-cātē, 142: v. a. To cut off, to lop, to take away part.

De-fal'-ca'-tion, 89: s. The act of cutting off; the part removed; abatement, diminution.

To DEFAME=dē-fāme', v. a. To make infamous; to censure falsely in public; to libel, to calumniate.

De-fā'-mer, s. One that defames or libels

De-fam'-a-tor-y, 92: a. Calumnious, libellous.

Def'-a-ma'-tion, 89: s. A malicious utterance of falsehood to impair any one in his reputation.

To DEFATIGATE, dē-fāt'-ē-gātē, v. a. To weary.

De-fat'-i-gu-ble, 101: a. Liable to be wearied.

De-fat'-i-ga'-tion, 89: s. Weariness [Little used.]

DEFAULT=dē-fāult', s. Omission of a duty; crime, failure, fault, want; in law, non-appearance in court.

To De-fault', v. n. and a. To fail of appearing; to fail in performing a contract:—act. [Obs.] To offend.

De-fault'-er, s. One in default; a speculator.

De-fault'-ance, s. Failure; miscarriage. [Obs.]

DEFEASANCE, &c.—See in the next class.

DEFEAT=dē-fēat', s. Literally, an undoing; overthrow; loss of battle; act of destroying, deprivation, frustration.

To De-feat', v. a. To undo; to frustrate; to abolish; to change, to alter; to overthrow.

De-feat'-ure, 147: s. Defeat.—See also lower. [Obs.]

DE-FEASANCE, (-zānce, 151) s. The act of annulling or abrogating any contract; a condition annexed to a deed, which being performed, the deed is defeated or rendered void: It differs from the common condition of a bond in not being inserted in the bond itself, but drawn separately; also, defeat generally, but in this wide sense obs.

De-feat'-si-ble, (-zē-bl, 151, 105, 101) a. Capable of being annulled or abrogated.

DEFEATURE, dē-fē'-tūre, 147: s. Change of feature.—See also above under Defeat. [Obs.]

To DEFECATE=dēf'-ē-cātē, 81, 92: v. a. To purge from lees or foulness; to purify from any extraneous mixture; to clear, to brighten.

Def'-e-cate, a. Purged from lees or foulness.

Def'-e-ca'-tion, 89: s. Purification.

DEFECT=dē-fēct', s. Want of something necessary; imperfection; fault; mistake; error; blemish failure.

De-fec'-tive, 105: a. Full of defects; imperfect; wanting in the usual parts; faulty, blamable.

De-fec'-tive-ly, ad. With defect.

De fec'-tive-ness, s. State of being defective.

De-fec'-ti-ble 111: a. Imperfect; liable to defect

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gātē-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'; lāw; gōd; j'ōō, i. e. few, 55: a, t, i, &c. mute, 111.

De-fec'-ti-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. State of failing.

De-fec'-tion, 89: s. Want, failure; a falling away; apostasy; an abandoning of a king or state; revolt.

De-fic'-ient, (-fish'-i-ent) a. Failing, wanting, defective: Deficient numbers are such as being added together do not make up the integer whose parts they professedly are.

De-fic'-ient-ly, ad. In a defective manner.

De-fic'-ience, } s. Want; something less than is De-fic'-ien-cy, } necessary; defect; imperfection.

Def'-i-cit, 92: s. Want; deficiency.

DEFENCE, &c.—See in the next class.

To DEFEND=dē-fend', v. a. Primarily, to drive or ward off; hence, to oppose, to resist, to repel a charge or accusation; to vindicate; to uphold; to fortify; to secure; to maintain a place or cause.

De-fen'-der, 36: s. One that defends.

De-fen'-da-ble, 101: a. That may be defended.

De-fen'-dant, a. and s. Defensive, proper for defence: [Little used.]—s. A defender; in law, the person accused or sued.

De-fen'-s, s. Guard; protection; vindication; justification; apology; resistance; in law, the defendant's reply; in fortification, the part that flanks another work: Science of defence, military skill, fencing.

De-fence'-less, a. Naked, unguarded, unarmed; impotent; unable to make resistance.

De-fence'-less-ly, ad. In an unprotected manner.

De-fence'-less-ness, s. State of being unprotected.

De-fen'-sa-tive, 105: s. Guard, defence, defensive; in surgery, a bandage, plaster, or the like.

De-fen'-si-ble, a. Capable of being defended.

De-fen'-sive, (-civ, 105) a. and s. Serving to defend; proper for defence; in a state or posture of defence:—s. Safeguard; state or posture of defence.

De-fen'-sive-ly, ad. In a defensive manner.

To DEFER=dē-fer', 33: v. a. and n. Literally, to carry or bear further; (See De-;) hence, to delay, to put off, to carry or refer to the opinion of another.

De-fer'-er, 129: s. One who puts off.

De-fer'-ment, s. Delay.

De-fer'-ent, a. and s. Bearing:—s. That which carries or conveys. [Little used.]

De-fer'-er-ence, s. The act of deferring to the opinion of another, regard, respect, submission.

De-fer'-en'-tial, (-sh'āl, 147) a. Expressing deference.

DEFIANCE, &c.—See under To Defy.

DEFICIENT, &c., DEFICIT.—See under De-fect.

To DEFIGURE=dē-fīg'-ūre, v. a. To delineate.

De-fig'-u-ra'-tion, (See De-;) s. A disfiguring. [Obs.]

To DEFILE=dē-fīl', v. a. To make foul or impure; to pollute; to corrupt chastity; to taint.

De-fī'-ler, s. One who defiles; one who violates.

De-file'-ment, s. State of being defiled; pollution.

To DEFILE=dē-fīl', v. n. To go off file by file.

De-fīl'-er, 86: s. A narrow passage or way in which troops can march only in file.

To DEFINE=dē-fīn', v. a. and n. Literally, to ascertain or fix the limits; to give the definition; to explain by qualities and circumstances; to circumscribe, to bound:—new. [Obs.] To dē-fīnē.

De-fī'-ner, 36: s. One that defines.

De-fī'-na-ble, 101: a. Capable of definition.

De-fī'-n-ite, (-nīt, 105, 81, 92) a. and s. Certain; limited, bounded; exact, precise:—s. Thing defined.

De-fī'-n-ite-ly, ad. In a definite manner.

De-fī'-n-ite-ness, s. Certainty; limitedness.

De-fī'-n-iti'-on, 89: s. An explanation in words, which separates or distinguishes the thing explained from other things; a nominal definition explains only the meaning of the term by some equivalent expression supposed to be better known; a real definition explains the nature of the thing; again, a real definition is essential or accidental; essential when it explains the constituent parts of the essence or nature of the thing; constituent or descriptive when it merely enumerates its properties or accidents; moreover, an essential definition is either physical or logical; physical, as when a plant is explained by the leaves, stalks, roots, &c., of which every plant is composed; logical, as when it is called "an organized being destitute of sensation," the former expression denoting its genus, the latter its differentia, of which parts a logical definition always consists.

De-fīn'-i-tive, 105: a. and s. Determinate. positive, express:—s. That which ascertains or defines.

De-fīn'-i-tive-ly, ad. Positively; decisively.

De-fīn'-i-tive-ness, s. State of being defined.

To DEFIX=dē-fīcks', 188: v. a. To fix. [Unusual.]

To DEFLAGRATE=dēf'-lā-grāt, 81, 92: v. a. To set fire to.

De-fī'-lā-gra-ble, 101: a. Having the quality of taking fire and burning away.

De-fī'-lā-gra-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. Combustibility.

De-fī'-lā-gra'-tion, 89: s. Rapid combustion.

To DEFLECT=dē-fīlect', v. n. and a. To turn aside; to deviate from a true course:—act. To bend.

De-fīec'-tion, 89: s. Deviation; a bending.

De-fīer'-ure, (-fīeck'-sh'oor, 154, 147) s. A bending down; a turning aside, or out of the way.

To DEFLOW=dē-flow'-er, 134: v. a. Literally, to take away the flower, the first beauty or grace; to ravish, to force away a woman's virginity; to deprive of flowers.

De-flour'-er, s. A ravisher.

De-flō'-rate, 47: a. Having shed the pollen or fecundating dust. [Bot.]

De-flō'-ra'-tion, 89: s. The act of deflowering; rape; a selection of the flower, or of what is most valuable: the last sense is literal.

To DEFLOW, dē-flō', 125: v. n. To flow down. [Obs.]

De-fīl'-i-t-ous, (dēf'-lōo-ūs, 92, 109, 120) a. That flows down; that falls off.

De-flūx', (-flūcks, 188) s. Defluxion. [Obs.]

De-flux'-ion, (-fluck'-shūn, 154, 147) s. A flowing downwards, particularly of the humors of the body.

DEFEDATION, dēf'-ē-dā'-shūn, 85, 92, 103, 89: s. The act of making filthy; pollution.

DEFOLIATION, dē-fō'-lē-ā'-shūn, 89: s. The fall of the leaf; (see De-;) the season of the fall.

To DEFORCE, dē-fōr'-urc, 130, 47: v. a. To keep out of possession by force.

De-force'-ment, s. A withholding by force from the right owner; in Scotland, resistance of an officer of law.

De-for'-ci-ant, (-shē-ānt, 146, 147) s. He who deforces; he against whom a fictitious action is brought in fine and recovery.

De-for'-sor, 38: s. One that casts out by force.

To DEFORM=dē-fōrm', 37: v. a. To disfigure, to spoil the form of; to dishonour; to make ungraceful.

De-form', a. Ugly, deformed. [Milton.]

De-form'-er, s. One that deforms.

De-formed', 114: a. Disfigured, crooked; ugly; base, disgraceful.

De-for'-med-ly, ad. In a deformed manner.

De-for'-med-ness, s. Crookedness; ugliness.

De-for'-ma'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. A disfiguring.

De-for'-m-ty, 105: s. Crookedness; ugliness; ill favouredness; irregularity; odiousness.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consumants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To DEFRAUD=dē-frā'ud, v. a. To rob or deprive of by a wile or trick; to cheat.

De-frau'-der, 36: s. A deceiver, a cheat.

De-fraud'-ment, s. Privation by fraud

To DEFRAY=dē-frā'y, v. a. To bear the charges of.

De-fray'-er, s. One that discharges expenses.

De-fray'-ment, s. Payment of expenses.

DEFT=dēft, a. Neat; handsome; dexterous. [Obs.]

Deft-ly, ad. Neatly; dexterously; nimbly; gently; lightly. Spenser uses Deftly.

DEFUNCT, dē-fūngkt', 153: a. and s. Having finished the occupations of life, dead:—s. A dead person.

De-func'-tion, 89: s. Death.

To DEFY=dē-fy', v. a. To call to combat, to challenge; to dare, to brave, to set at nought, to slight.

De-fy, s. A challenge. [Obs.]

De-fi'-er, 36: s. A challenger; a contemner.

De-fi'-ance, 12: s. A challenge to fight; a challenge to make an impeachment good; a setting at nought.

To DEGARNISH=dē-gar'-nīsh, v. a. To unfurnish; (see De-;) to strip.

To DEGENERATE=dē-gēn'-ēr-ātē, v. n. To fall from the virtue of ancestors; to fall from a nobler state; to fall from its kind, to grow wild.

De-gen'-er-ate, a. Unlike the ancestors; base.

De-gen'-er-ate-ly, ad. Unworthily; basely.

De-gen'-er-ate-ness, s. Degeneracy.

De-gen'-er-a-cy, s. Departure from ancestral virtue; desertion of goodness; meanness.

De-gen'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. Degeneracy; the thing which has degenerated from its primitive state.

De-gen'-er-ous, 120: a. Degenerate.

De-gen'-er-ous-ly, ad. Degenerately.

To DEGLUTINATE, dē-gl'ūt'-tē-nātē, 109, 105: v. a. To glue; to undo; (see De-;) to slucken.

DEGLUTITION, dēg'-l'oo-tīsh'ūn, 85, 92, 109, 89: s. The act or power of swallowing.

To DEGRADE, &c.—See lower under Degree.

DEGRADATION, dēg'-rd-vā'-shūn, 85, 92, 89: s. The act of making heavy.

DEGREE=dē-grē', s. A step; a portion in progression; one of the divisions in ascent towards a whole; hence, the state of progress in which any thing is; distinctively, a high state, station, rank; a step or preparation to another step; state of relationship; order of lineage; rank or title at a university; one of the 360 portions into which a circle is divided; an interval in music: By degrees, by little and little.

To DE-GRADE, v. a. To move to a lower degree; to deprive of rank or title; to reduce to a lower state; to lessen.

De-gra'-ding, a. Dishonouring; debasing.

De-gra'-ding-ly, ad. With depreciation.

De-grade'-ment, s. Deprivation of dignity.

De-g'-ra-da'-tion, 92: s. Deprivation of rank, diminution from office; degeneracy, baseness, diminution.

DEGUSTATION, dē-gūs-tā'-shūn, s. A tasting.

DEHISCENT=dē-hīs-sēnt, a. Gaping or opening, as the capsule of a plant.

De-hīs'-cence, s. A gaping or opening.

To DEHORT=dē-hōrt', 37: v. a. To dissuade.

De-hor'-ter, 36: s. A dissuader.

De-hor'-ta-tor-y, a. Belonging to dissuasion.

De-hor'-ta'-tion, 89: s. Dissuasion.

To DEIGN=dān, 100, 157: v. n. and a. To vouchsafe:—act. To grant, to permit, to allow; to consider worth notice.

To DEINTEGRATE=dē-in'-tē-grātē, v. a. To take from the whole; (see De-;) to spoil.

DEIPAROUS, DEISM, &c.—See under the next class.

DEITY, dē-ē-tēy, 105: s. Divinity, the nature and essence of God; a fabulous god or goddess; the supposed divine qualities of a pagan god.

De-ist, s. One who acknowledges the existence of a God, but disbelieves revealed religion.

De-is'-tic, De-is'-ti-cal, a. Pertaining to deism.

De-ism, 158: s. The doctrine or creed of a deist.

De-i'-cide, s. The murder of a divine being, applied particularly to the crucifixion.

De-i'-form, a. Of a god-like form.

To De-i'-fy, (-fī, 6) v. a. To make a god of; to adore as a god; to praise excessively.

De-if'-ic, a. Making divine; divine.

De-i'-fi-ca'-tion, 89: s. The act of deifying.

De-iv'-a-rous, 120: a. That brings forth a God, an epithet applied to the Virgin Mary.

DEIPNOSOPHIST, dēp-nōs'-sō-fist, 106, 163: s. One of the ancient philosophers who discoursed at meals.

To DEJECT=dē-jēct', v. a. To cast down; to afflict, to grieve; to make to look sad.

De-ject', a. Cast down; afflicted; dejected.

De-jec'-ted, a. Cast down; afflicted.

De-jec'-ted-ly, ad. In a dejected manner.

De-jec'-ted-ness, s. State of being dejected.

De-jec'-tion, 89: s. Lowliness of spirits, melancholy; weakness, inability; the act of casting down; in medicine, a stool.

De-jec'-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. That which is cast out; the excrement.

DEJEUNE, dā'-zhūn-āy', [Fr.] 170: s. A breakfast.

To DEJERATE=dēd'-gēr-ātē, 64: v. a. To swear deeply.

Dej'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. The taking of an oath

DE JURE, dē-j'ūr-rēy, ad. By right; by law [Lat.]

DELACERATION, dē-lāss'-ēr-ā'-shūn, 59, 89: s. A tearing to pieces.

DELACHIRYMATION, dē-lāck'-rē-mā'-shūn, 161, 89: s. A falling down of the humors, or waterishness of the eyes.

DELACTATION, dē-lāck'-tā'-shūn, 89: s. A weaning.

To DELAPESE=dē-lāpsē', 189: v. n. To slide down.

De-lap'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. A falling down of some part of the body from disease.

To DEULATE=dē-lātē', v. a. To bear or carry; to convey; to bear a charge against. [Obs.]

De-la'-tion, 89: s. A carrying, a conveyance; an accusation, an impeachment. [Little used.]

De-la'-tor, 33: s. An accuser.

To DELAY=dē-lāy', v. a. and n. To defer or carry to a future time; (compare the previous class;) to put off; to hinder; to frustrate; to detain or retard the course of;—neu. To stop.

De-lay', s. A deferring; a stay; a stop.

De-lay'-er, 36: s. One that delays; a deferrer.

De-lay'-ment, s. Hindrance. [Obs.]

DELEBLE, dē-lē-blē, 101: a. That may be effaced or hurt. See Supp.

De-le- [Lat. verb imperative.] Blot out; erase.

To De-lete', v. a. To blot out. [Little used.]

De-le'-tion, 89: s. The act of blotting out.

De-le'-tor-y, 92: s. That which blots or hurts.

De-le-tē-r-i-ous, 85, 90, 120: a. Having the quality of destroying; poisonous; injurious.

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gān'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā'-pā': lāx: gōd: jōw, i. e. jew, 55: a, e, &c. mule, 171.

DELECTABLE, dē-lēk'-tā-bl, 101: a. Pleasing; delightful.

De-lect'-ta-bly, 105: ad. Delightfully.

De-lect'-ta-bie-ness, s. Delightfulness.

De-lect'-ta'-tion, 89: s. Pleasure; delight.

To DELEGATE=dēl'-ē-gāte, 92: v. a. To send away; to send upon an embassy; to entrust; to commit to another's power.

Del'-e-gate, s. and a. A deputy, a commissioner; any one sent to act for another: Court of delegates, an ecclesiastical court of appeal:—adj. Deputed.

Del'-e-ga'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. A sending away; a putting in commission; the assignment of debt to another; a number of persons delegated; in this last sense, Del'egacy, formerly used, is now almost obsolete.

To DELETE, &c., DELETERIOUS, &c.—See under Deleble. Delectitious, see Supp.

DELF=dēlf, s. A mine; a quarry.

DELF=dēlf, s. Earthenware, or counterfeit China ware made at Delft.

To DELIBATE=dēl'-ī-bāte, v. a. To sip.

Del'-i-ba'-tion, 85, 6, 89: s. A taste; an essay; an attempt.

To DELIBERATE=dēl'-īb'-ēr-āte, v. n. and a. To weigh in the mind; to think in order to determine; to hesitate:—adj. To balance in the mind; to consider.

De-lib'-er-ate, a. Circumspect, wary, slow.

De-lib'-er-ate-ly, ad. Advisedly; slowly.

De-lib'-er-ate-ness, s. Circumspection.

De-lib'-er-a'-tive, 105: a. and s. Pertaining to deliberation; apt to consider:—s. A discourse, or the kind of oratory, in which questions are deliberated.

De-lib'-er-a'-tive-ly, ad. In a deliberate manner.

De-lib'-er-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of deliberating; thought in order to determine; slowness.

DELICATE, dēl'-ē-cāte, 105: a. Nice, pleasing to the taste; nice or discriminating in taste literally or figuratively; pleasing to the eye by fineness, and the nicety of small parts; not coarse; dainty, choice, select; of polite manners; soft, effeminate, unable to bear hardships; pure, clear:—a. As a substantive plural, DELICATES, it signifies niceties, delicacies; for which our old authors sometimes use Del'i-cies.

Del'-i-cate-ly, ad. In a delicate manner; with nice regard to others' feelings; daintily.

Del'-i-cate-ness, s. The state of being delicate.

Del'-i-ca-cy, s. That which is pleasing, by its fineness, flavour, or softness, to a nicely discriminating sense; also the quality of nice discrimination; daintiness; pleasantness; nicety; feminine beauty; minute accuracy; neatness; elegance; politeness; indulgence; tenderness; scrupulousness; weakness of constitution; smallness; tenuity.

De-līc'-i-ous, (-līsh'-ūs, 147) a. Sweet to the palate or other sense; delightful.—See with its progeny under Delight, to which, as well as to the present class of words, it is related.

DELIGATION, dēl'-ē-gā'-shūn, s. A binding up.

DELIGHT, dē-līte', 115, 162: s. Pleasurable emotion of mind, either pure or mingled with some pleasure of sense; great satisfaction; pleasure of sense; that which gives delight.

To De-light', v. a. and n. To please so as to move the mind with joy or satisfaction; to afford pleasure to; to content:—neu. To have delight or extreme pleasure.

De-light'-ter, s. One who takes or gives delight.

De-light'-ful, 117: a. Pleasant; charming.

De-light'-ful-ly, ad. In a delightful manner.

De-light'-ful-ness, s. The state or quality of being delightful; pleasure, satisfaction.

De-light'-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Delightful.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mishi-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: yizh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To DE-lic'-i-ate, (-līsh'-āte, 146, 147) v. n. To take delight; to feast. [Obs.]

De-lic'-i-ous, (-līsh'-ūs, 120) a. That delights any sense, but especially the taste; sweet; delicate.

De-lic'-i-ous-ly, ad. Sweetly; pleasantly.

De-lic'-i-ous-ness, s. Exquisite pleasure.

To DELINEATE=dēl'-īn'-ē-āte, 146: v. a. To draw lines so as to exhibit the form or shape of; to design; to represent by lines and colours; to describe.

De-līn'-e-a-ment, s. A delineation. [Little used.]

De-līn'-e-a'-tion, 89: s. A drawing; a representation; a description.

DELINIMENT, dēl'-īr'-nē-mēnt, 105: s. A mitigating or assuaging.

DELINQUENT, dēl'-īng'-kwēnt, 158, 76, 145: a. and s. Leaving duty; failing in duty:—s. Literally, one who leaves his duty; an offender; a culprit.

De-līn'-quen-cy, s. A failure in duty; a fault.

To DELIQUATE, dēl'-ē-kwāte, 92, 105, 76, 145: v. n. To melt or be dissolved.

Del'-i-qua'-tion, 89: s. A melting.

To DEL'-i-qu'-sce', (-kwēss, 59), v. n. To melt gradually and become liquid by attracting and absorbing moisture from the air, as certain salts, acids, and alkalies.

Del'-i-ques'-cent, a. Liquefying in the air.

Del'-i-ques'-cence, s. Spontaneous liquefaction.

To DE-lic'-i-ate, (-līck'-wē-āte) v. n. To deliquesce.

De-lic'-ui-a'-tion, s. Deliquescence.

DE-lic'-i-um, (-līk'-ūm, 90, 129, 105) s. A disorder of the intellect, or alienation of mind connected with fever; it is dependent on some temporary disease, and thus distinguished from mania or madness.

De-lir'-i-ous, a. In a state of delirium.

De-lir'-i-ous-ness, s. State of being delirious.

DELITESCENCE, dēl'-ē-tēs'-sence, 105, 59: s. Retirement; obscurity.

To DELITIGATE, dēl'-ē-gāt-, v. a. To scold or chide vehemently.

To DELIVER=dēl'-īv'-er, 36: v. a. To set free, to release; to save, to rescue; to surrender, to put into one's hands, to give; to disburthen of a child; to speak or utter as an oration, to relate: To deliver over, to put into another's hands, to give from hand to hand, to transmit: To deliver up, to surrender.

De-liv'-er-er, 129: s. A saver, a rescuer, a relator.

De-liv'-er-ance, s. The act of setting free, rescue the act of giving to another; the act of bringing forth children; in old authors it is used in other senses, for which delivery is now more usual.

De-liv'-er-y, s. The act of delivering, release, rescue, saving; a surrender; utterance, pronunciation, speech, childbirth.

DELL=dēll, s. A hollow place; a little valley.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

DELP=dēlp, s. Earthenware.

TO DELUDE=dê-l'ôd', 109: v. a. To beguile, to cheat; to disappoint, to frustrate.
De-lu'-der, 36: s. A beguiler, a deceiver.
De-lu'-da-ble, 98, 101: a. Liable to be deceived.
De-lu'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Apt to deceive.
De-lu'-sive-ness, s. Tendency to deceive.
De-lu'-sor-y, 129: a. Delusive.
De-lu'-sion, (-zhûn, 147) s. The act of deluding; a cheat; guile, deceit; the state of being deluded; error.
DELUGE=dê-l'ûgê, 69: s. A general inundation; a laying entirely under water; a large overflowing of a river's bounds; any sudden resistless calamity.
To Del'-uge, v. a. To inundate, to overwhelm.
Di-lu'-vi-um, (dê-l'ôv'-vê-ûm, 109, 105) s. A deposit of superficial loam, sand, &c., caused by the deluge. [Lat.]
Di-lu'-vi-al, Di-lu'-vi-an, a. Pertaining to a flood; effected by the deluge.
 ☞ See the etymological relations of this class under To Dilute.
DELUSIVE, &c.—See above under To Delude.
To DELVE=dêlv, 189: v. a. To dig, to open the ground with a spade; to fathom.
De ve, s. A ditch; a pit; [Obs.] a certain quantity of coals immediately from the mine.
Del'-ver, 36: s. A digger.
DEMAGOGUE, dêm'-d-gôg, 107: s. A ring-leader of the rabble; a popular and factious orator.
DEMAIN or DEMESNE, dê-mênc', 103, 157: s. That land which a man holds originally of himself, opposed to feudum or fee, which signifies lands held of a superior lord; more commonly, the manor-house and lands adjacent which a lord keeps in his own occupation as distinguished from his tenemental lands, called book-land, charter-land, and folk land, or estates held in villenage, from which spring copyhold estates: copyhold estates, however, have been accounted demesnes, because the tenants are judged to have their estate only at the will of the lord: estate in land generally. It is often used in the plural, Demesnes.
To DEMAND=dê-mānd', 11: v. a. To claim, to ask for with authority; to question; to prosecute in a real action.
De-mand', s. A claim, a challenging; a question; requisition; the asking of what is due in a real action.
De-man'-da-ble, 101: a. That may be demanded.
De-man'-der, s. One that demands generally.
De-man'-dant, s. The actor or plaintiff in a suit for the recovery of real property.
DEMARCATIOn, dê-mar-cā'-shûn, 89: s. Division; separation of territory.
To DEMEAN=dê-mênc', v. a. To behave, to carry, (with a reciprocal pronoun): to lessen, to debase to undervalue.
De-mean', s. Demeanour; mien. [Obs.]
De-mean'-our, 120, 40: s. Carriage, behaviour.
To DEMENTATE, dê-mên'-tātê, v. a. To make mad.
De-men'-tate, a. Infatuated; insane.
De-men'-ta-tion, s. The act of making frantic.
To DEMEPHITIZE, dê-mêf'-ê-tîzê, 163, 103: v. a. To purify from mephitic, or unwholesome air.—See De.
DEMERIT=dê-mêr'-it, s. The opposite to merit, ill-desert. In old authors it means merit, the prefix being merely intensive.—See De.
To De-mer'-it, v. a. To deprive of merit.
DEMERSED, dê-mêrs', 114, 143: part. a. Plunged in; drowned.
De-mer'-sion, (-shûn, 147) s. A drowning; the putting of a medicine in a dissolving liquor.

DEMESNE.—See Demain.
DEMI-, A prefix signifying half. See Hemir-.
DEM'-I-CAN'-NON, s. A large sized gun or small sized cannon.
DEM'-I-DÛV'-IL-, (-dêv'-vl, 115) s. A wicked wretch.
DEM'-I-GOD, s. A defiled hero.
DEM'-I-GORGE, s. Half of the gorge or vacant entrance into a bastion. [Fortif.]
DEM'-I-LUNE, 109: s. A half moon; a small flanked bastion placed to strengthen another.
DEM'-I-QUA'-VER, (-kwâ'-ver, 76, 145) s. A haif quaver. Dem'-i-sem'-i-qua'-ver, is the half of this.
DEM'-I-REP, s. A woman of demi-reputation, not living as a courtesan but suspected to be one.
To DEMIGRATE, dêm'-ê-grâtê, v. a. To emigrate.
DEMISE, dê-mîzê', 151: s. Literally, a laying down, or removing from; death, decease.
To De-mîsê', v. a. To grant at one's death; to bequeath.
To DE-mîr', v. a. To let fall; to depress. [Obs.]
De-mîss', or De-mîs'-sive, 105: a. Humble.
De-mîs'-sion, (-shûn, 147) s. Degradation; depression.
DEMOCRACY, dê-môck'-râ-cê-y, 105: s. A form of government in which the sovereign power is lodged in the body of the people: our old authors call it Democracy. See Demos, &c. in Supp.
Dem'-o-crat'-ic, 88: } a. Relating to a popular Dem'-o-crat'-i-cal, } government.
Dem'-o-crat'-i-cal-ly, ad. In a democratical manner.
Dem'-o-crat, 92: } s. One devoted to democracy.
De-moc'-ra-tist, }
To DEMOLISH=dê-môl'-ish, v. a. To throw down buildings; to rare; to destroy.
De-mol'-ish-er, 36: s. One that demolishes.
De-mol'-ish-ment, s. Ruin; destruction.
Dem'-o-lit'-ion, 92, 89: s. The act of overthrowing buildings; destruction.
DEMON, dê-môn, 18: s. A spirit, generally an evil one.
De-mo'-ni-ac, 90: a. and s. Belonging to a demon; influenced by an evil spirit.—s. One possessed by an evil spirit.
De-mo'-ni-an, 90: a. Demoniac.
Dem'-o-ni'-a-cal, 85, 92, 81: a. Demoniac.
Dem'-on-oc'-ra-cy, s. The power or government of demons.
Dem'-on-ol'-a-try, s. The worship of demons.
Dem'-on-ol'-o-gy, s. A treatise on evil spirits.
De-mon'-o-mist, s. One who lives in subjection to a demon; one who obeys the laws of the devil.
To DEMONSTRATE=dê-môn'-strâtê, v. a. Literally, to show fully; (See De-) to show as a necessary consequence; to show experimentally.
De-mon'-stra-ter, 36: s. One who demonstrates.
 ☞ See also lower.
De-mon'-stra-ble, a. That may be fully proved.
De-mon'-stra-bly, ad. Evidently.
De-mon'-stra-ble-ness, s. The quality of being demonstrable.
De-mon'-stra-tive, 105: a. Having the power of demonstration; that is, or that may be proved to be a necessary deduction of something previously admitted, (this is the distinctive meaning): that is, or may be made evident by sensible experiment.
De-mon'-stra-tive-ly, ad. With a demonstrative quality or manner.
De-mon'-stra-tor-y, a. Having the tendency to demonstrate.
DEM'-ON-STRAT'-ION, 89: s. The act of demonstrating; a deduction of which each step is necessarily

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gâtê-wây: chāp'-mân: pā-pā': lāw: gôd: j'w. i. e. Jew, 55: a. e. i. &c. mute, 171.

consequent on the foregoing; (this is the distinctive meaning); an exhibition of facts to the senses in such order as to warrant the induction from them of that which is to be proved. (See Induction.) The first is called a priori demonstration; the other, demonstration a posteriori, or from effects.

Demon'-on-s'tra'-tor, 38: s. One who gives a demonstration; a mathematical or physical demonstrator.

To DEMORALIZE=dē-mōr'-āi-ize, v. a. To deprive of moral qualities; (See De-;) to render corrupt.

De-mor'-al i-ga'-tion, s. Destruction of morals.

To DEMULCE=dē-mūls', v. a. To soothe. [Obs.]
De-mul'-cent, a. and s. Softening, mollifying:—s. A medicine to soften or mollify.

To DEMUR=dē-mur', 39: v. n. and a. To delay a process in law by doubts and objections; to pause in uncertainty; to hesitate; to doubt; to have scruples:—act. [Milton.] To doubt of.

De-mur', s. Doubt; hesitation.

De-mur'-rage, 129, 19, 99: s. An allowance to masters by merchants for their stay in a port beyond the time appointed.

De-mur'-rer, 36: s. A kind of pause in a point of difficulty in an action at law; one who pauses.

DEMURE=dē-mūre', 49: a. Sober, decent, grave; affectedly modest. To demure, for To look demure. may be met with, but should not be imitated.

De-mure'-ly, ad. With demureness.

De-mure'-ness, s. Modesty; soberness; pretended gravity; affected modesty.

DEMY=dē-my', s. (See Demi-) Demi-sized paper, or that which is a degree smaller than medium, and two degrees than royal; a demi-fellow at Magdalen, Oxford.

DEN=dēn, s. A cavern or hollow running with a small obliquity into the earth, or horizontally into a hill; the cave of a wild beast.

To Den, v. n. To dwell as in a den.

DENARY, dēn'-ār-ēy, a. and s. Containing ten:—s. The number ten.

To DENATIONALIZE, dē-nāsh'-ūn-āi-ize, 96: v. a. To deprive of national rights.—See De-.

To DENAY.—See under To Deny.

DENDROLOGY, dēn-drōl'-ō-gēy, 87, 105: s. The natural history of trees.

Den'-drite, s. A mineral in which are the figures of shrubs or trees.

Den'-droid, a. Resembling a tree or shrub.

Den'-dro-lite, s. A petrified shrub.

Den-drom'-e-ter, 87: s. An instrument to measure the height and diameter of trees.

To DENEGATE, } See under To Deny.
DENIAL, &c. }

DENIER, dē-nēr', [Fr.] 170: s. A penny; the twelfth of a shilling.

To DENIGRATE, dēn'-ē-grāte, v. a. To blacken.

Den'-i-gra'-tion, 89: s. A blackening.

DENIZEN, dēn'-ē-zn, 114: s. A freeman; one enfranchised; a stranger made free; a citizen or inhabitant, but not a native, or naturalized.

To Den'-i-zen, v. a. To enfranchise.

Den'-i-za'-tion, 89: s. The act of enfranchising.

To DENOMINATE, dē-nōm'-ē-nāt, v. a. To name; to give a name to.

De-nom'-i-na-ble, 101: a. That may be named.

De-nom'-i-na'-tive, 85, 105: a. That gives a name; that obtains a distinct appellation.

De-nom'-i-na'-tor, 38: s. The giver of a name; the number below the line in a vulgar fraction, as the 4 in $\frac{3}{4}$.

De-nom'-i-na'-tion, 89: s. The act of naming; an appellation chiefly of a general kind.

To DENOTE=dē-nōt', v. a. To mark; to be a sign of; to betoken.

De-nō'-ta-ble, a. Capable of being denoted.

De-note'-ment, s. Sign, indication. [Shaks.]

De'-no-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of denoting.

DENOUEMENT, dēn'-oo-mōng', [Fr.] 170: s. The unravelling or discovery of the plot in a drama or other poem.

To DENOUNCE=dē-nownc', 31: v. a. To threaten by proclamation; to threaten by some outward sign; to give information against; to accuse publicly.

De-noun'-cer, 36: s. One that denounces.

De-nounce'-ment, s. The act of proclaiming a menace.

To De-nun'-ci-ate, (-shē-āt, 146, 147) v. a. To denounce.

De-nun'-ci-a'-tor, 33: s. A denouncer.

De-nun'-ci-a'-tion, 150, 89: s. The act of denouncing; the threat proclaimed.

DENSE=dēnce, 153: a. Close, compact, approaching to solidity.

Den'-si-ty, 105: s. Closeness; compactness.

DENT=dēnt, s. Literally, a tooth or projecting point; but commonly, a mark made as by a tooth or the hard pressure of a blunted point.

To Dent, v. a. To make a dent; to indent.

Dent'-ed, a. Notched; indented.

DEN'-TATE, Dēn'-tā-ted, 2: a. Having points like teeth. Also, Dentary. See Supp.

DEN'-TAL, a. Pertaining to the teeth; sounded chiefly by the aid of the teeth, as dental consonants.

Den'-tist, s. An operator on the teeth.

Den-ti'-tion, (-tish'-un, 89) s. The breeding or cutting of teeth in infancy.

Den'-ti-trice, (-triss, 105) s. Something to rub the teeth with; tooth powder.

Den'-ti-form, a. Formed as a tooth.

Den'-toid, a. Like a tooth.

To Den'-tize, v. n. To renew the teeth. [Obs.]

DEN-TET'-IL, (-lēy, [Ital.] 170) s. pl. Ornaments in cornices bearing some resemblance to teeth; indillions.

DEN'-TI-CLE, s. A small projecting point or tooth.

Den-tic'-u-la-ted, 2: a. Notched.

Den-tic'-u-la'-tion, s. The state of being notched or set with small teeth.

DEN'-TIL, s. A denticle; a modillion.

To DENUDATE=dē-nū-dāt, v. a. To strip.

Den'-u-da'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. A divesting.

To DE-NUDE, v. a. To strip; to divest.

To DENUNCIATE, &c.—See under To Denounce.

To DENY=dē-nŷ', v. a. To contradict, opposed to Affirm; to refuse, not to grant; to disown, to renounce; to disregard.

De-ni'-er, 36: s. One that denies.

De-ni'-al, s. Negation. The contrary to affirmation; negation, the contrary to confession; refusal, the contrary to granting; alijuration, the contrary to acknowledgement of adherence.

De-ni'-a-ble, 101: a. Capable of being denied.

To De-nay', v. a. To deny. [Obs.]

De-nay', s. A denial. [Obs.]

To DEN'-E-GATE, v. a. To deny. [Unusual.]

De-nē-ga'-tion, 89: s. A denial.

To DEOBSTRUCT=dē'-ob-struckt', v. a. To remove obstructions.—See De-.

De-ob'-stru-ent, (-stroo-ēnt, 109) a. and s. Having power to resolve viscidities, or to open the animal passages:—s. A medicine to remove obstructions and open the natural passages for the fluids of the body.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh'-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh'-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

DEODAND=dē-ō-dānd, s. Literally a forfeiture to God; the forfeiture of any personal chattel which has been the instrument of the death of a rational creature. The chattel or its value is appointed, by law, to go to the king in order to be distributed in alms, or for pious uses, by his high almoner.

To DEOPILATE, dē-ōp'-pē-lāte, v. a. To clear from obstructions.—See De. [Little used.]

To DEOSULATE=dē-ōs'-cū-lāte, v. a. To kiss.

De-ōs'-cū-lā'-tion, 89: s. A kissing.

To DEOXYDATE, dē-ōk'-sē-date, 188: v. a. To reduce from the state of an oxyde. To Deoxydize is used in the same sense.

De-ōx'-y-da'-tion, 89: s. The act or process of deoxydating.

To DE-OX'-Y-GE-NATE', v. a. To deprive of oxygen.

De-ox'-y-ge-na'-tion, 89: s. The act or process of deoxydating.

To DLEPAINT=dē-pāint', v. a. To picture; to describe. Spenser writes it Deprinct.

To DEPART, dē-part', 33: v. n. and a. To go away from a place; to desist from a practice; to desert, to revolt, to apostatize; to die or debase:—act. To quit, to leave, to retire from.

De-part', s. The act of going away; death.—See also lower.

De-par'-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. A going away; death, decess; a forsaking, an abandoning.

To DE-PART', v. a. To divide, to separate.

De-par'-ter, 36: s. One that refines metals by separation.

De-part'-ment, s. Separate allotment; province or business assigned to a particular person; a division or extent of country under the same jurisdiction.

Dep'-art-men'-tal, 85, 92: a. Belonging to a department or province.

DEPASCENT=dē-pās'-sēnt, 59: a. Feeding.

To DE-pas'-ture, (-tūre, 147) v. a. and n. To eat up:—acc. To feed; to graze.

To DEPAUPERATE=dē-pāw'-pēr-āte, v. a. To make poor; to impoverish.

DEPECTIBLE, dē-pek'-tē-bl, 105, 101: a. Tenacious and extensible, as thick hair in being combed.

To DEPEND=dē-pēnd', v. n. To hang from; to be in a state influenced by some external cause; to be in a state of dependence; to be connected with any thing as with its cause: To Depend upon, to rely on.

De-pen'-der, s. One who depends; a dependant.

De-pen'-dent, a. Hanging down; relating to something previous; in the power of another.

De-pen'-dant, 12, 192: s. One who lives in subjection; a retainer.

De-pen'-dence, s. The state of hanging down;

De-pen'-den-cy, s. something hanging on another;

state of being subordinate; that which is subordinate; state of being at the disposal of another; the things or persons at another's disposal; connection, connection; trust, reliance.

DEPERDITION, dē-per-dīsh'-ūn, s. Loss.

De-per'-dit, s. That which is lost or destroyed.

To DEPHLEGMATE, dē-flēg'-māte, 163: v. a. To deprive of superabundant water, as by evaporation or distillation; to clear spirits or acids of aqueous matter; to clarify. In the same sense To Deplegm', (dē-flēm', 157) is used by writers not of the modern schools, with its derivative De phlegm', edness.

De-phleg-ma'-tion, (-flēg-mā'-shūn) s. The operation of separating water from spirits or acids by evaporation or repeated distillation; concentration.

To DEPHLOGISTICATE, dē-flō-jīk'-tē-cāte, v. a. To deprive of phlogiston or the supposed principle of inflammability. The word, with the theory it belonged to, is abandoned. Dephlogisticated air is now called oxygen gas or vital air.

To DEPICT=dē-pīct', v. a. To paint, to portray, to describe.

To DE-PICT'-TURE, (-tūre, 147) v. a. To represent in colours; to depict.

To DEPILATE, dēp'-lē-lāte, 92, 105: v. a. To strip of hair.

Dep'-i-lā'-tion, s. The act of pulling the hair off.

Dep'-i-lous, 120: a. Without hair.

De-pil'-a-tor-y, a. and s. Taking away the hair:—s. An application for removing hair.

DEPLANTATION, dē-plān'-tā'-shūn, 89: s. The act of taking up plants from the bed. See De.

DEPLETION, dē-plē'-shūn, 89: s. The act of emptying, particularly of the animal vessels by medicine.

To DEPLORE=dē-plōre', 47: v. a. To lament, to bewail, to mourn.

De-plō'-rer, 36: s. A lamenter, a mourner.

De-plō'-ra-ble, a. Sad; calamitous; despicable.

De-plō'-ra-bly, ad. Lamentably, miserably.

De-plō'-ra-ble-ness, s. State of being deplorable.

DE-PLō'-RATE, a. Lamentable; hopeless. [Obs.]

Dep'-lō-ra'-tion, 89: s. The act of deploring.

To DEPLOY=dē-ploy', 29: v. a. To unfold, to display, to extend. [Military]

To DEPLUME, dē-pl'ōm', 109: v. a. To strip of feathers. See De.

Dep'-lu-ma'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. The act of plucking; a fall of the eye-brows from swelled eye-lids.

To DEPOLARIZE=dē-pō'-lār-īze, v. a. To deprive of polarity. Hence, De-pō'-lar-ī-za'-tion, s.

To DEPONE=dē-pōne', v. a. To lay down as a pledge or security; to depose. [Out of use.]

De-pō'-nent, a. and s. That lays aside its passive meaning, applied to Latin verbs which have a passive form:—s. One that deposes his testimony, an evidence, a witness; a verb deponent.

To DE-POSE', (dē-pōz', 137) v. a. and n. To lay down; to let fall; to displace from a throne or high station; to take away; to divest; to lay aside; to give as testimony:—acc. To bear witness.

De-pō'-ser, (-zer) s. One who deposes.

De-pō'-sa-ble, a. That may be deposed.

De-pō'-sal, s. The act of deposing.

To DE-POS-IT, (dē-pōz'-it, 105) v. a. To lay up; to lodge in any place; to lay up as a pledge or security; to place at interest; to lay aside.

De-pō'-it, s. Any thing committed to the care of another; a pledge, a pawn; the state of a thing pawned or pledged.

De-pō-si'-tion, (-zīsh'-ūn, 89) s. The act of giving public testimony; the act of deposing, whether of a king from his throne, or of an ecclesiastic from his clerical orders.

De-pōs'-i-tor-y, 129, 12, 105: s. One with whom any thing is lodged in trust.

De-pōs'-i-tor-y, 129, 18, 105: s. The place where any thing is lodged.

DE-POS-IT-UM, [Lat.] s. That which is entrusted; a deposit.

DE-POT', (dā-pō', [Fr.] 170) s. A military depository for army stores.

To DEPOPULATE=dē-pōp'-ū-lāte, v. a. and n. To unpeople; to lay waste:—acc. To become depopulated.

De-pop'-u-lā-tor, 38: s. A waster of inhabited countries.

De-pop'-u-lā'-tion, 89: s. Havoc, destruction; waste of people.

To DEPORT', dē-pōrt', 130, 47: v. a. To carry, to demean, to behave.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Forests: gāw-wāy: chāp-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gōd: j'w, 55: a, e, i, &c. note 171.

De-port', s. Department. [Milton.]

De-port'-ment, s. Conduct; management; bearing; demeanour.

DEPORTATION, dē-pōr-tā'-shūn, 130, 89: s. Transportation; exile to a remote part of the dominion; exile.

→ This word has the literal signification, which those in the preceding class have lost

To DEPOSE,

DEPOSIT, } See under To DEPOSE.

DEPÔT,

To DEPRAVE=dē-prāve'. v. a. To vitiate, to corrupt, to contaminate.

De-pra'-ver, 36: s. A corrupter.

De-prave'-ment, s. Vitiated state; corruption.

De-praved'-ly, 114: ad. Corruptly.

De-praved'-ness, s. Corruption.

DE-PRAY'-I-TY, 92: s. A vitiated state; corruption.

DEPR-A-VA'-TION, 89: s. The act of making any thing bad; corruption; degeneracy; depravity.

To DEPRECATE=dēp'-rē-cāte, 92: v. a. To beg off; to pray deliverance from; to avert by prayer; to implore mercy on.

Dep'-re-ca'-tor, 38: s. One that deprecates.

Dep'-re-ca'-tor-y, } a. That serves to depre-

Dep'-re-ca'-tive, 105: } cate; apologetic.

Dep'-re-ca'-tion, 89: s. Prayer against evil, ex-tremity, petitioning; an excusing; a begging pardon for.

To DEPRECIATE, dē-prē-shē-āte, 146, 147: v. a. and n. To bring down to a lower price; to under-value;—neu. To fall in value.

De-pre'-ci-a'-tor, 38: s. He that depreciates.

De-pre'-ci-a'-tive, 105: a. Undervaluing.

De-pre'-ci-a'-tion, 89: s. A lessening or under-valuing of the worth or value.

To DEPREDATE=dēp'-rē-dātē, 92: v. a. To rob, to pillage; to spoil, to devour.

Dep'-re-da'-tor, 38: s. A robber, a devourer.

Dep'-re-da'-tion, 89: s. A robbing, a spoiling; voracity, waste.

To DEPREHEND=dēp'-rē-hēnd, 92, 85: v. a. To take unawares; to discover.

Dep'-re-hen'-si-ble, 101: a. That may be discovered.

Dep'-re-hen'-si-ble-ness, s. Capableness of being caught; intelligibleness.

Dep'-re-hen'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. A discovery; a seizing.

To DEPRESS=dē-prēss', v. a. To press or thrust down; to let down; to humble; to deject; to sink.

De-pres'-sor, 38: s. He that keeps or presses down; an oppressor; a muscle that depresses.

De-pres'-sive, 105: a. Able or tending to depress.

De-pres'-sion, (-prēsh'-ūn, 147) s. The act of depressing; the sinking or falling in of a surface; abasement; a lowering, as of the terms of an equation; or of the polar star in moving from it. The depression of a star is also its distance below the horizon.

To DEPRIVE=dē-prīve', v. a. To take from; to bereave of something possessed or enjoyed, followed by of; to hinder, to debar; to release.

De-priv'-er, 36: s. He or that which deprives.

De-priv'-ement, s. The state of losing.

De-priv'-va-ble, a. Liable to deprivation.

Dep'-ri-va'-tion, 85, 92, 103, 89: s. The act of depriving; state of bereavement; it is applied, particularly, to the deposition of an ecclesiastic from his benefice, or from his orders.

DEPTH.—See under Deep.

DEPULSORY, dē-pūl'-sōr-ēy, 129, 18, 105 a. Putting away; averting.

De-pul'-mon, (-shūn, 147) s. A driving or thrusting away.

To DEPURATE=dēp'-ū-rāte, 92: v. a. To purify; to clear from heterogeneous matter.

De-pū'-rate, a. Depurated. [Glanvil.]

Dep'-u-ra'-tor-y, a. Tending to cleanse or free.

Dep'-u-ra'-tion, 89: s. The separating of the pure from the impure part; removal of the matter from a wound.

To DEPURGE', v. a. To depurate. [Obs.]

To DEPUTE=dē-pūte', v. a. To appoint as a substitute or agent; to send with a special commission.

Dep'-u-ta'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. The act of deputing; the person or persons deputed; viceroyency.

Dep'-u-ty, 105: s. One appointed or elected to act for another; a lieutenant; a viceroy.

To DEQUANTITATE, dē-kwōn'-tē-tāte, 1-8, 140, 103: v. a. To diminish the quantity of.—See De.

To DERACINATE, dē-rās'-tē-nāte, 59, 105: v. a. To pluck or tear up by the roots; to extirpate, to destroy.

To DERAIGN, dē-rāin', 157: } v. a. To prove;

To DERAİN=dē-rāin', } to justify. [Law.]

To derange. [Obs.]

De-raign'-ment, s. The act of proving; derangement; a discharge from a profession; a departure out of religion.

To DERANGE', (dē-rānge', 111) v. a. To turn out of the proper course; to disorder.

De-rānge'-ment, s. Disorder; discomposure of the intellect, insanity.

DE-RAY', s. Tumult; jollity; solemnity. [Obs.]

DERELICT=dē-rē-lic't, 92, 129: a. and s. Willfully relinquished.—s. That which is left or abandoned by its owner; a tract of land left by the sea and fit for use.

Der'-e-lic'-tion, 89: s. The act of forsaking or leaving; the state of being left.

To DERIDE=dē-rīde', v. a. To laugh at, to mock.

De-rī'-der, 36: s. A scoffer.

De-rī'-ding-ly, ad. In a jeering manner.

De-rī'-sive, (-cīv, 152, 105) a. Mocking, scoffing.

De-rī'-sive-ly, ad. In a derisive manner.

De-rī'-sory, a. Mocking; ridiculing.

DE-RIS'-ION, (-rīzh'-ūn, 147) s. The act of deriding or laughing at; contempt; scorn.

To DERIVE=dē-rīve', v. a. and n. To draw from, as in a regular course or channel; hence, to take or receive from a source or origin; to trace from a primitive or root; also, (with a different sense of the prefix,) to turn from its natural course, to divert; hence, to communicate from one to another by descent; to spread in various directions; to cause to flow;—neu. [Unusual.] To come from; to owe its origin to.

De-rī'-ver, 36: s. One that derives.

De-rī'-va-ble, 101: a. Attainable by derivation; deducible as from a root or cause.

De-riv'-A-TIVE, 92, 105: a. and s. Derived or taken from another.—s. The thing or word deduced from another.

De-riv'-a-tive-ly, ad. In a derivative manner.

DER'-I-VA'-TION, 89: s. Deduction from a source; hence, the tracing of a word from its original; the word so traced; also, diversion from a natural or prime channel; hence, the drawing of humors from one part of the body to another; any thing derived.

DERMAL=dēl'-māl, a. Pertaining to the skin.

DERNIER, der'-nē-er, a. The last, the only remaining, as Dernier resort.

To DEROGATE, dē-rō-gātē, 92, 129: v. a. and n. To lessen the extent of a law, distinguished from Abrogate; to diminish, to disparage;—neu. To detract; to lessen reputation; to degenerate.

Der'-o-gate, a. Degraded, damaged.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Comments: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

Der'-o-gate-ly, ad. Derogatively. [Shaks.]

Der'-o-ga-tion, 89: s. The act of diminishing the extent of a law; the act of destroying or lessening the power or effect of any thing; a defamation; destruction.

De-ro-ga-tive, 98, 105: a. Detracting; lessening the honour or value of.

De-ro-ga-tive-ly, ad. In a derogative manner.

De-ro-g-a-tor-y, a. Detracting or tending to lessen by taking from.

De-ro-g'a-tor-i-ly, ad. In a detracting manner.

De-ro-g'a-tor-i-ness, s. The act of derogating; the state of being detracted from.

DERVIS=der'-viss, s. A Turkish monk. Or Dervish.

DESCANT=děs'-cānt, s. A song or tune composed in parts; a disquisition branched into several heads; a discourse.

To DE-SCANT', 83: v. n. To run a division or variety with the voice on a musical ground; to comment on variously; to animadvert upon freely; to harangue.

To DESCEND=dě-sēnd', 59: v. n. and a. To move from a higher place, to come down; to come or fall suddenly, as on an enemy; to invade; to enter; to proceed from an original; to fall in order of inheritance to a successor; to pass from general to particular considerations; to come down in a figurative sense; to come to a lower sound;—act. To move one's self down.

De-scen'-dant, s. The offspring of an ancestor.

De-scen'-dent, 192: a. Coming down; sinking; proceeding as from an original or ancestor.

De-scen'-di-ble, 105, 101: a. That may descend.

De-scen'-di-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. The capability of being transmitted from ancestors. [Blackstone.]

DE-SCEN'-SION, (-shūn, 147) s. The act of going downwards; declension; degradation; in astronomy, the calculation of the setting of a body with relation to a right sphere, and then called right ascension, or to an oblique sphere, and then called oblique ascension.

De-scen'-sion-al, a. Relating to descent.

De-scen'-sive, (-civ, 152) a. Descending; having a descending quality or propensity.

DE-SCENT', s. The act of descending; progress downwards; hostile attack or invasion; transmission by succession or inheritance; birth, extraction; a single step in the order of genealogy; a rank in the order of being.

To DESCRIBE=dě-scrib'e, v. a. To delineate or mark out; to define by properties or accidents; to how or represent by words or other signs; to draw a line; to distribute into divisions. Describer, see Supp.

De-scri'-ber, 36: s. He that describes.

De-scri'-ba-ble, a. That may be described.

DE-Scrip'-TION, 84: s. The act of describing; the passage in which the thing is described; a definition by the mere properties, accidents, or characteristics of the individual; sort according to individual characteristics.

De-scrip'-tive, 105: a. That describes.

De-scrip'-tive-ly, ad. In a descriptive manner.

To DESCRIFY=dě-scrī', v. a. To spy out a distance; to detect; to discover; to perceive by the eye.

De-scrī', s. Discovery. [Shaks.]

De-scri'-er, 36: s. One that discovers.

To DESECRATE=děs-sē-crāte, 92: v. a. To profane by misapplication; to pervert from a sacred purpose.

Des'-e-crā'-tion, 89: s. The abolition of consecration; profanation.

To DESERT=dě-zert', 151, 35: v. c. and n. To forsake; to fall away from; to abandon; to leave;—neg. To quit the army contrarily to the laws of the service.

Des'-ert', s. See under To Deserve.

De-ser'-ter, s. He that abandons particularly, he that abandons a military post.

De-ser'-tion, 89: s. A forsaking or abandoning.

DES'-ERT, (dēz'-ert, 151, 36) 83: s. and a. Literally, that which is deserted; hence, a place originally wild; a waste; a solitude;—adj. Wild, waste, solitary.

To DESERVE, dě-zerv', 151, 35, 189: v. n. and s. To be worthy of, with either good or ill as the object;—neg. To be worthy of reward.

De-ser'-ver, s. One who merits reward.

De-ser'-ving, a. Worthy.

De-ser'-ving-ly, ad. Worthily.

De-ser'-ved-ly, ad. Justly, either as to good or ill.

DE-SERT', (dē-zert', 151, 35) 82: s. Degree of merit or demerit; proportional merit; claim to reward; excellence; right to reward; virtue.

De-ser't'-ful, 117: a. High in desert; meritorious.

De-ser't'-less, a. Without merit; worthless.

De-ser't'-less-ly, ad. Undeservedly.

DESHA BILLE.—See Dishabille.

To DESICCATE=dě-sic'-kate, v. a. and n. To dry up; to exhaust of moisture;—neg. To grow dry.

De-sic'-cant, s. An application to dry a sore.

De-sic'-ca-tive, 105: a. Having the power of drying.

DES-IC-CA'-TION, 92, 89: s. The act of making dry; the state of being dried.

To DESIDERATE=dě-cid'-ēr-ātē, 152: v. a. To want; to miss; to desire in absence.

De-sid'-er-a'-tum, } s. That which is wanted;
De-sid'-er-a'-ta, pl. } that which is desired. [Lat.]

De-sir'-e, (dē-zir', 151, 45) s. Uneasiness of the mind from the absence of real or imaginary good, accompanied by the hope, more or less vivid, of possessing it; wish; eagerness to obtain or enjoy.

To De-sire', v. n. To wish for, to long for; to covet; to express wishes; to ask, to entreat; to require; to demand.

De-sir'-er, 36: s. One that desires.

De-sir'-ra-ble, 98, 101: a. That may be wished for with earnestness; pleasing; delightful.

De-sir'-ra-ble-ness, s. The quality of being desirable.

De-sir'-rours, 120: a. Full of desire; eager; longing after.

De-sir'-rours-ly, ad. Eager; with desire.

De-sir'-rours-ness, s. The state or affection of being desirous.

DESIDIOSE, dě-cid'-ē-ōse, 105, 152, 146: a. Idle; lazy; heavy.

To DESIGN, dě-cīn', 115, 157: v. a. To propose, to intend; to form or order with a particular purpose; to devote intentionally; to plan, to project, to form in idea; to sketch the first draught of a picture.

De-sig'n', 82: s. An intention; a scheme; a plan; a scheme to the detriment of another; the idea which an artist works from; the art of drawing as distinguished from colouring; in music, the invention and conduct of a subject.

De-sig'n'-er, 36: s. One that designs or frames a plan; a plotter.

De-sig'n'-ed-ly, ad. Purposely, intentionally.

De-sig'n'-ing, a. Insidious; treacherous.

De-sig'n'-ing, s. The art of drawing.

De-sig'n'-a-ble, a. That may be designed.

De-sig'n'-ment, s. A purpose. [Little used.]

De-sig'n'-less, a. Without intention.

De-sig'n'-less-ly, ad. Inadvertently.

To DES-IG-NATE, (dēs'-sig-nāte, 92) v. a. To point out; to distinguish.

Des'-ig-na-tive, 105: a. Appointing; snowing.

Des'-ig-na'-tion, 89: s. The act of pointing out marking out; appointment, direction; import, intention.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Four's: gū't-wāy: chāp'-mān: pā-pā: lāw: gū'd: j'w, i. e. j'w. 53: a. c. v. & c. mule 171

DESINENT, dēs'-sē-nēnt, 92, 105: a. Ending; extreme: lowermost.
Des'-i-nence, s. A close; an ending.
DESIPIENT, dē-sīp'ē-ēnt, 105, 146: a. Tripping, foolish; playful.
DESIRE, &c.—See under To Desiderate.
To DESIST=dē-cist', v. n. To cease; to stop.
De-sis'-tive, 105: a. Ending; concluding; final.
De-sis'-tance, s. The act of desisting; cessation.
DESK=dēsk, s. An inclining table for the use of writers or readers.
To DESOLATE=dēs'-sō-lāte, 92: v. n. To deprive of inhabitants; to lay waste.
Des'-o-late, a. Without inhabitants; laid waste: solitary; afflicted; comfortable.
Des'-o-late-ly, ad. In a desolate manner.
Des'-o-lā-tor, 36: s. He or that which desolates.
Des'-o-lā-tor-y, 129: a. Causing desolation.
Des'-o-lā'-tion, s. Destruction of inhabitants; gloominess; sadness; a place wasted and forsaken.
DESPAIR=dē-spāre', 41: s. The expectation of a certain evil, hopelessness; despondence; loss of confidence in the mercy of God.
To Des-pair', v. n. To be without hope; to despond.
Des-pair'-er, 36: s. One without hope.
Des-pair'-ful, 117: a. Hopeless. [Sir P. Sidney.]
Des-pair'-ing, a. Given up to despair.
Des-pair'-ing-ly, 105: ad. In a manner betokening hopelessness or despondency.
DES-PE-RA-TE, 129, 14: a. Without hope; without care of safety; irremediable, insurmountable; mad, hotbrained, furious.
Des-per-ate-ly, ad. Hopelessly; madly.
Des-per-ate-ness, s. Madness; fury.
Des-per-a'-tion, 89: s. Hopelessness; despair.
Des'-per-a'-to, s. One who is desperate; one who is reckless of risks and dangers. [Spanish.]
To DESPATCH=dē-spāch', v. a. To send away hastily; to send out of the world, to put to death; to perform a business quickly; to conclude an affair.
De-spatch', 82: s. Hasty execution; conduct, management; an express or hasty messenger or message.
De-spatch'-er, s. He that despatches.
De-spatch'-ful, 117: a. Bent on haste.
DESPECTION, } See lower under To Des-
DESPECABLE, &c. } pise.
DESPERATE, &c.—See above under To Despair.
To DESPISE, dē-spīze', 137: v. a. To scorn, to contemn.
De-spi'-ser, (-zer) s. A contemner, a scorner.
De-spi'-sa-ble, 98, 101: a. Contemptible, despicable.
De-spi'-sed-ness, s. Despicableness. [Milton.]
Des'-pi-ca-ble, (dēs'-pē-cā-bl, 105, 98, 101) a. Contemptible; vile; worthless.
Des'-pi-ca-bly, ad. Meanly; vilely.
Des'-pi-ca-ble-ness, s. Meanness, vileness, worthlessness.
DE-SPEC'-TION, (-spēck'-shūn, 89) } s. A looking De-spic'-ion-cy, (-spīsh'-ēn-cy) } down upon;
 a despising. [Obs.]
DESPITE=dē-spīte', s. Malice, malignity; anger, defiance, unsolicited opposition; act of malice.
To Des-pite', v. a. To vex; to offend.
De-spite'-ful, 117: a. Malicious; full of hate.
De-spite'-ful-ly, ad. Maliciously; malignantly.
De-spite'-ful-ness, s. Malice; hate; malignity.
To DESPOIL=dē-spoi', 29: v. a. To rob, to deprive; to divest, to strip.
De-spoi'-er, 36: s. A plunderer.

De-spo'-i-ty, (-tī-ty, 89: s. The act of despoiling; state of being despoiled.
To DESPOND=dē-spōnd', v. n. To be cast down; to be depressed in mind; to lose hope; to despair.
De-spon'-der, 36: s. One who desponds.
De-spon'-dent, a. Despairing, hopeless.
De-spon'-den-cy, s. Despair, hopelessness.
De-spon'-ding-ly, ad. In a hopeless manner.
To DESPONSATE=dē-spōn'-sāte, v. a. To betroth; to affiancé. [Little used.]
De'-spon-sa'-ti-n, 89: s. A betrothing.
DESPOT=dēs'-pōt, s. An absolute prince; a tyrant.
Des'-po-tism, (-tīzm, 158) s. Absolute power.
De-spo'-tic, 88: } s. Absolute in power; unli-
De-spo'-i-cal; } mited in authority; tyrannical.
De-spo'-i-cal-ly, ad. Arbitrarily.
De-spo'-i-cal-ness, s. Arbitrary rule.
To DESPUMATE=dē-spū'-māte, v. n. To throw off parts in foam; to froth, to work.
De'-spu-ma'-tion, 89: s. The act of throwing off excrementitious parts in scum or foam.
DESQUAMATION, dē'-akwā-mā'-shūn, 76, 145, 89: s. A scaling or exfoliation of bone.
DESSERT, dēz'-zer', 151: s. That which is served when the substantial parts of a meal are de-served, that is, removed.
To DESTINATE, dēs'-tē-nāte, v. a. To destine.
Des'-ti-nate, a. Destined. [Both words little used.]
Des'-ti-na'-tion, s. The purpose for which anything is appointed; the ultimate design.
To Des'-tine, (dēs'-tīn, 105) v. a. To appoint unalterably to a state or condition; to appoint to any purpose; to devote; in Prior's poems, to doom to punishment or misery.
Des'-ti-ny, s. State or condition appointed or predetermined by human will and power; state or condition appointed or predetermined by Divine will and power; the latter notion is derived from the former, and is probably accompanied in most minds with no further considerations than those of stricter will and power unbounded; hence, fate unavoidable; invincible necessity; hence, among the heathens, the power or powers to whose decrees both men and gods were bound. Compare Fate, Free-Will, Foreknowledge &c.
DESTITUTE, dēs'-tē-tōte, 105: a. Forsaken, abandoned; abject; friendless; in want of. To destitute is used by old authors in the sense of to forsake, to deprive.
Des'-ti-tu'-tion, 89: s. Utter want.
To DESTROY=dē-stroy', 29: v. a. To demolish; to raze; to ruin; to make desolate; to kill; to bring to naught.
De-destroy'-er, 36: s. One who destroys.
De-destroy'-a-ble, a. Destructible [Little used.]
De-struct'-ri-ble, a. Liable to destruction.
De-struct'-u-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. Liability to destruction.
De-struct'-or, 38: s. A destroyer.
De-struct'-ive, 105: a. and s. Having the quality of destroying; wasteful; bringing to destruction. s. A name given by their political opponents to men who call themselves radical reformers.
De-struct'-ive-ly, ad. Ruinously.
De-struct'-ive-ness, s. The quality of destroying or ruining.
De-struct'-ion, 89: s. The act of destroying; the state of being destroyed; ruin; overthrow.
DESUDATION, dēs'-sū-dā'-shūn, 85, 92, 89: s. A profuse and inordinate sweating.—See De-DESUETUDE, dēs'-swē-tūde, 92, 145: s. Cessation from being accustomed; discontinuance of practice or habit.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

To DESULPHURATE, dě-sul'-fur-át, 163: v. a. To deprive of sulphur.—See De.

DESULTORY, děs'-sul-tor'-čy, 105: a. Literally, leaping from; hence, passing from one thing or subject to another; immethodical, wavering: Desultorius, with the same meaning, is out of use.

Des'-ul-tor-i-ly, ad. In a desultory manner.

Des'-ul-tor-i-ness, s. Unconnectedness.

To DESUME=dě-süm', v. a. To take from any thing; to borrow.—See De. [Little used.]

To DETACH=dě-táč', 63: v. a. To separate; to disengage; to send out as a part.

De-tach'-ment, s. The act of detaching; the thing detached; a body of troops sent out from the main army.

To DETAIL=dě-tail', v. a. To relate particularly; to display minutely; to particularize.

De-tail'-er, 36: s. One that details.

De'-tail, 83: s. An account by particulars.

To DETAIN=dě-tain', v. a. To keep another's; to withhold; to restrain from departure; to hold in custody.

De-tain'-er, s. A detainee, which see lower.

De-tain'-er, s. He that detains; a detaining or holding back what is another's; detention, confinement.

De-tain'-ment, s. The act of detaining; detention.

De-tent', s. That which keeps back, being the name of one of the parts in a striking clock.

De-ten'-tion, 89: s. The act of detaining; state of being detained; confinement, restraint.

De-ti'-tutor, s. A writ against a person that unlawfully detains.

To DETECT=dě-těct', v. a. To discover; to find out any crime or artifice; to discover in general.

De-tect'-er, s. The person or thing that detects.

De-tect'-tion, 89: s. Discovery of guilt or fraud; discovery of any thing hidden.

DETENTION, &c.—See under To Detain.

To DETER=dě-ter', 35: v. a. To discourage by terror; to prevent by prohibition or danger.

De-ter'-ment, s. Cause of discouragement.

To DETERGE=dě-terg', 35: v. a. To cleanse, particularly a wound from foul matter.

De-ter'-gent, a. and s. Of power to cleanse:—s. A medicine for cleansing diseased parts or vessels.

De-ter'-sive, (-čiv, 105) a. and s. Detergent.

De-ter'-sion, (-shün, 147) s. The act of cleansing.

To DETERIORATE, dě-ter'-čě-ò-rát', 90, 85, 43, 103: v. a. and s. To make worse, to impair:—new To grow worse.

De-ter'-ri-o-ra'-tion, 89: s. The act of making worse; the state of growing worse.

To DETERMINATE, dě-ter'-mě-náte, 105: v. a. To determine. [Out of use.]

De-ter'-mi-nate, a. Definite; decisive, conclusive; fixed; limited.

De-ter'-mi-nate-ly, ad. Resolutely, certainly, unchangeably.

De-ter'-mi-nate-ness, s. The state of being determinate.

De-ter'-mi-na'-tor, 38: s. One who determines.

De-ter'-mi-na'-tion, 89: s. Absolute direction to a certain end: the result of deliberation; resolution taken; judicial decision; expiration; end.

To DE-TERR-TER-MINE, (-mín, 105) v. a. and n. To fix, to settle, to conclude; to fix ultimately; to bound, to confine, to adjust, to limit, to define; to influence the choice; to resolve; to decide; to put an end to:—new To conclude; to settle opinion; to come to an end; to make a decision; to resolve concerning any thing.

De-ter'-mi-ner, 36: s. One who determines.

De-ter'-mi-na-ble, 98, 101: a. Capable of being certainly decided.

DETERRATION, dě'-těr-rā'-shün, 89:

Discovery by digging up the earth.—See De.

DETERSION, &c.—See under To Deterge.

To DETEST=dě-těst', v. a. To hate, to abhor.

De-tes'-ter, s. One that hates or abhors.

De-tes'-ta-ble, 101: a. Hateful, abhorred.

De-tes'-ta-bly, ad. Hatefully; abominably.

De-tes'-ta-ble-ness, s. Hatefulness.

De-tes'-ta'-tion, s. Hatred; abhorrence.

To DETHRONE=dě-thrōn', v. a. To throw down from the throne; to divest of regality.—See De.

De-thrō'-ner, s. One who helps to dethrone.

De-throne'-ment, s. The act of dethroning.

DETINUE.—See under To Detain.

To DETONATE=děť-ò-náte, 92: v. n. and a.

To make a noise like thunder:—act. To cause to explode; to inflame so as to produce explosion.

Deť-ò-na'-ti-on, 89: s. An explosion or sudden report made by the inflammation of certain combustible bodies.

To DET'-O-NIZE, v. n. and a. To detonate.

To DETORT=dě-tort', 37: v. a. To twist or wind, to wrest from the original import or design. [Dryden]

De-tor'-sion, (-shün, 147) s. A wresting or perversion.

De-tout', (dā-tōot', [Fr.] 170) s. A winding; a turning; a circuitous way.

To DETRACT=dě-tráč', v. a. To derogate; to take away by envy from the reputation of another; to take away; to withdraw. The latter are the literal senses.

De-trac'-ter, 38: s. One that takes away; a slanderer.

De-trac'-tress, a. A censorious woman.

De-trac'-tor, a. Defamatory; derogatory.

De-trac'-tive, 105: a. Of power to draw away disposed to derogate.

De-trac'-tion, 89: s. The act of taking off from any thing; depreciation; scandal.

De-trac'-tious, (-sh'üs, 147) a. Lessening the honour of; detractory. [Little used.]

DETRIMENT=děť-rě-měnt, 92, 105: s. Literally, a part worn off, loss, damage, mischief.

Deť-ri-men'-tal, a. Mischievous; harmful.

De-trit'-ion, (dě-trish'-ün, 89) s. The act of wearing away. Detritus, see Supp.

To DETRUDE, dě-trōd', 109: v. a. To thrust down; to force into a lower place.

De-tru'-sion, (-zhün, 147) s. The act of thrusting down; state of being thrust down.

To DETRUNCATE, dě-trung'-cát, 158: v. a. To lop; to cut off; to shorten.—See De.

De'-trun-ca'-tion, 89: s. The act of lopping.

To DETURPATE=dě-tur'-pát, v. a. To defile. [Obs.]

DEUCE=düce, 110: s. A demon; the devil.

Deu'-ced, a. Devilish. [Vulgar.]

DEUCE=düce, a. A deux or two in cards, &c.

DEUTEROGAMY, dü'-ter-ög'-d-měy, 87: s. A second marriage.

Deu'-ter-ög'-a-mist, s. He who marries again.

Deu'-ter-on'-o-m-y, 87: s. The second book of the law, being the last of the pentateuch.

Deu'-ter-os'-co-p-y, s. The second view or meaning, namely, that beyond the literal meaning.

Deu'-ter-ox'-ide, Deu'-tox'-ide, (-dü-töcks'-ide, 188, 105) s. A substance oxydized in the second degree.

DEVAPORATION, dě-váp'-ò-rā'-shün, 89: s. A change of vapour into water, as in generating rain.—See De.

To DEVAST, dě-vást', 11: v. a. To devastate [Obs.]

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Notes: gāu'-wáy: chāp'-mán: pā-pā': lāw: gōd: j'ōō. i. e. new, 55: a, t, y, &c. mut, 171

To De-vas'-tate, 81: v. a. To lay waste.
 Dev'-as-ta'-tion, 89: s. Waste, havoc, destruction.
 To DEVELOP=dé-vèl'-ôp, v. a. To disengage; to disentangle; to clear from its covering.
 De-vel'-op-ment, s. An unfolding; an unravelling; act of exposing what was unknown.
 To DEVEST. [Law.]—See under To Divest.
 DEVERGENCE=dé-ver'-jence, s. A tending downward. [Not Di-vergence.—See Dev. Not used.]
 DEVEX, dé-vêcks', a. Declivous [Little used.]
 De-vel'-i-ty, 188, 105: s. Incurvation downwards.
 To DEVIATE, dé-vê-âte, 90, 146: v. n. To wander from the way; to go astray, to err, to sin.
 De'-vi-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of quitting the right way; variation from rule; offence; obliquity.
 De'-vi-ous, (dê-vê-ûs, 1:0) a. Out of the common track, wandering, roving, rambling, erring.
 DEVICE, &c.—See under To Devise.
 DEVIL, dêv'-vl, 115: s. A being described in the Scriptures as a fallen angel, whose occupation is to tempt and accuse man; (compare Diabolic;) figuratively, a very wicked person; mischief in a great degree: it is also used adverbially and interjectionally with much looseness of meaning, or as a mere expletive.
 Dev'-il-ing, } s. A young or little devil.
 Dev'-il-kin, }
 Dev'-il-ish, a. Diabolical; mischievous, malicious; communicating with evil spirits; excessive, enormous; in profane or vulgar language it is applied in the last sense to the most incongruous qualities, as "devilish good."
 Dev'-il-ish-ly, ad. In a devilish manner.
 Dev'-il-ish-ness, s. The qualities of the devil.
 Dev'-il-ism, 158: s. The state of devils.
 Dev'-il-ry, s. Extreme wickedness.
 To Dev'-il-ize, v. a. To place among devils. [Bp. Hall.]
 To Dev'-il, v. a. To pepper excessively.
 DEVIOUS.—See under To Deviate.
 To DEVIRGINATE, dé-ver'-jê-nâte, v. a. To deflower, to deprive of virginity.—See Dev.
 To DEVISE, dé-vîze', 137: v. a. and n. To contrive; to form by art; to invent; to plan; to scheme; in law, to bequeath, applied to real property.—See. To consider; to contrive.
 De-vice', s. Primarily, a bequeathing or division; hence the act of bequeathing by will; a will or testament; a share of estate bequeathed.
 De-vî-ser, 36: s. He who devises generally.
 De-vî-sor, 38, 177: s. One who devises by will.
 Dev'-i-see', (dêv'-ê-zêc') s. The person to whom a devise is made, or real estate bequeathed.
 De-vice', 137: s. A contrivance; a stratagem; a design; a scheme formed; the emblem on a shield, the ensign armorial; invention; a spectacle, a show.
 De-vice'-ful, 117: a. Full of contrivances; inventive; full of speculation.
 DEVISIBLE, dêv'-ê-tâ-bl, a. Avoidable. [Obs.]
 DEVOCATION, dêv'-ô-câ-shûn, 89: s. A calling away; a seduction.
 DEVOID=dé-void', 29: a. Empty, void; destitute; free from.
 DEVOIR, dûv-wâw', [Fr.] 170: s. Service; act of civility or of obsequiousness.
 To DEVOLVE=dé-vôlv', 189: v. a. and n. To roll down; to move from one hand to another.—See. To roll down; to fall in succession into new hands.
 Dev'-o-lu'-tion, 85, 92, 109, 89: s. The act of rolling down; successive removal from hand to hand.
 To DEVOTE=dé-vôte', v. a. To appropriate by vow, to dedicate; to addict as to a sect or study; to resign to ill; to exorcise.
 De-vote', a. and s. Devoted:—A devotee. [Obs.]

De-vo'-ter, 36: s. One who devotes; one who worships. Devot is used by some old authors.
 De-vote'-ment, s. Act of devoting. [Unusual.]
 De-vo' tar'-y, s. A votary. [Out of use.]
 De-vo'-ted-ness, s. Consecration; addictedness.
 Dev'-o-tee', s. One given up to superstitious rites; a bigot; Devot, with the same meaning, uses De-vo'-to.
 De-vo'-tion, 89: s. The state of being consecrated; state of mind under a strong sense of dependence on God; piety, devoutness; an act of external worship; prayer, expression of devotion; an oblation devoted to charitable or pious use; an act of reverence or ceremony; strong affection, earnestness, ardour, eagerness state set apart to some service, dependence.
 De-vo'-tion-al, a. Pertaining to devotion.
 De-vo'-tion-ist, s. One outwardly devout.
 De-vout', 31: a. Pious, religious; filled with pious thoughts; expressive of devotion or piety.
 De-vout'-ly, ad. Piously, religiously.
 De-vout'-ness, s. Piety.
 De-vout'-less, a. Destitute of devotion.
 To De-vow', v. a. To devote. [B. Jonson.]
 To DEVOUR=dé-vow'er', 53: v. a. To eat up ravenously; to destroy or consume with rapidity and violence; to swallow up; to enjoy with avidity.
 De-vour'-er, 36: s. He or that which devours.
 De-vour'-ing-ly, ad. In a consuming manner.
 DEVOUT, &c.—See above under To Devote.
 DEW=dûc, 110: s. The moisture, generally in drops, on or near the surface of the earth, which collects by the escape of heat that held the water in solution.
 To Dew, v. a. To wet as with dew; to moisten.
 Dew'-y, 105: a. Partaking of dew; moist with dew; like dew.
 Dew'-lap, s. The flesh about the throat of oxen, &c., that laps the dew in grazing; also, from its resemblance, a lip flaccid with age.
 Dew'-drop, Dew'-bespangled, and Dew'-impearled; also Dew'-berry, (a kind of raspberry;) and Dew'-worm, (otherwise called lob-worm.)
 DEXTER=dêck'-st-r, 188: a. Right as opposed to left, a term applied particularly to the right side of the shield in heraldry, or that which is to the left of the spectator.
 Dex'-tral, 12: a. Right, not left.
 Dex'-tral'-i-ty, 84: s. State of being on the right side.
 Dex'-tror'-sal, a. Rising from right to left as a spiral line.
 DEX'-TER-ous, 120: a. Adroit in the use of the limbs, handy, expert in manual acts; hence, figuratively, expert in mental contrivance; subtle.
 Dex'-ter-ous-ly, ad. Expertly, skillfully.
 Dex'-ter-ous-ness, s. Skill.
 Dex'-ter'-i-ty, 84, 129, 105: s. Readiness of limbs; activity; readiness of contrivance; quickness in expedients.
 DEY=dây, 100: s. The title of the governor of Barbary who is called Dey at Algiers and Bey at Tunis.
 DI-, DIF-, DIS-, The same prefix under different forms. It is immediately from the Latin, but originally from the Greek dis or dicha in some words, and dia (see below) in others. It signifies separation, and hence two or twofold in some instances, manifold, different, or various, in others; sometimes, as tantamount to the particle un, it expresses negation, and at others increases the positive meaning of the word by being merely intensive.
 DIA-, di-â, A prefix in words originally Greek, which signifies through, by, or throughout, in some words; in others, division or diversity; while in others it is merely intensive.

The sign z is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound

Consonants: mishi-ûn, i. e. mission, 165: vizh ûn, i. e. vision, 165: thûn, 166: then 166.

- Di'-a-BA-TRU-AL, 98, 90, 43: a. Passing through or beyond the borders of a place.
- Di'-a-be/-tes, (-bē'-tēz, 101) s. That which passes excessively through, a morbid copiousness of urine.
- Di'-a-bet/-ic, 93: a. Pertaining to diabetes.
- Di'-a-bol/-ic, 88: } a. Primarily, spreading or Di'-a-bol/-i-cal, } causing [evil] throughout; cal-luminating, accusing; hence, devilish.
- Di'-a-bol/-i-cal-ly, ad. Devilishly.
- Di'-a-bol/-i-cal-ness, s. Devilishness.
- Di-ab'-o-lism, 158: s. Possession by the devil.
- Di'-a-CAU/-STIC, 25: a. Proceeding from rays that burn or shine in a diverted or bent course, an epithet applied to curves formed by refraction.
- Di-ACET'-Y-ION, (-äck'-ē-lōn, 161, 105) s. Emollient by or through its juicy qualities, the name of a plaster.
- Di'-a-CO/-DI-UM, 90: s. A sirup by means of, that is, made of, poppy heads.
- Di-AC'-O-NAL, a. Administering by assiduous offices, pertaining to a deacon.
- Di'-a-COU/-STIC, 31: a. and s. Relating to sounds that take a diverted or bent course: in the plural as a substantive. Diacoustics, the science of refracted sounds, called also Diaphonics.
- Di'-a-CRIT/-I-CAL, a. Distinguishing or separating from; applied to a point or mark which separates a letter from its ordinary use or signification.
- Di'-a-DEI/-PHI-AN, a. Brother-like, having the stamens united into two bodies by their filaments. In this word, the first element is rather Di- (see Di-) than Dia-. The word has also the form Diadelphous.
- Di'-a-DEM, s. That which quite encircles or binds, originally, a fillet, at present, a crown significant of royalty; figuratively, empire.
- Di'-a-demed, (-dēmd, 114) a. Wearing a diadem.
- Di'-a-DROM, 18: s. A complete course as of the pendulum, the time in which a vibration of the pendulum is performed.
- Di-EN'-E-SIS, (-ēr'-ē-cis, 120) s. A separation, particularly of one syllable into two; also, the mark which signifies a division, as in aërial.
- Di'-a-GENOS/-TIC, a. and s. By which, or that by which something is known; symptomatic; a symptom.
- Di-aG'-O-NAL, a. and s. That passes through, or that which passes through the corners, or from angle to angle.
- Di-ag'-o-nal-ly, ad. In a diagonal direction.
- Di'-a-GRAM, s. That which is quite delineated, a mathematical figure or scheme prepared for demonstration.
- Di'-a-graph/-i-cal, (-gräff'-ē-cäl, 163) a. Descriptive.
- ☞ See Dial, &c., after the compounds of Dia-.
- Di'-a-I-ECT, s. A diversity or variety in the form of a language, or a mode of speaking or writing it peculiar to a province; also style or language, generally.
- Di'-a-lec/-tic, a. Pertaining to a dialect.—See also lower.
- Di'-a-I-EC/-TICS, s. pl. Originally, argumentation in dialogue; thence, the methods pursued in argumentation laid down in scientific order, of which methods, each of the ancient sects had its own; distinctively, the method by mood and figure laid down by Aristotle in his Organon; logic generally.
- Di'-a-lec/-tic, a. Pertaining to logic.—See also above.
- Di'-a-LOGUE, (-lög, 107) s. A discourse which divides or branches off to two or more speakers.
- Di-al'-o-gist, s. A speaker in a dialogue; a writer of dialogues.
- Di-al'-o-gis/-tic, a. Having the form of a dialogue.
- Di-al'-o-gis/-ti-cal-ly, ad. In manner of a dialogue.
- To Di-al'-o-gize, v. n. To discourse in dialogue.

- Di-AL'-I-SIS, (-äl'-ē-cis, 105) s. A loosening throughout, particularly the resolving of a diphthong into two distinct sounds otherwise called diuresis, which see; it is also used in the same sense as Asyn de-ton: in medicine, debility.
- Di-AM'-E-TER, s. That which passes, or is a measure throughout, particularly of a curvilinear figure, and is terminated at both ends by the circumference.
- Di'-a-met/-ri-cal, a. Describing a diameter; in the direction of a diameter, direct. Diametral may be met with, but is little used.
- Di'-a-met/-ri-cal-ly, ad. In a diametrical direction; directly. Diametrical may be met with.
- ☞ See Diamond, &c., after the compounds of Dia-.
- Di-AN'-DRI-AN, a. Doubly masculine, or having two stamens.—See Di. [Botany.] Diandrous is the same.
- Di'-A-PASM, 158: s. That which sprinkles diversely or about; a powder or perfume.
- Di'-A-PA/-SON, (-zōn, 151, 18) s. A chord which includes all tones, the octave; also a scale by which instrument makers adjust the bore of pipes, &c.
- Di'-A-PEN/-TE, s. The complete fifth in music; in medicine, that which is compounded by five ingredients.
- ☞ See Diaper, &c., after the compounds of Dia-.
- Di-aph/-a-nous, (-äl'-d-nūs, 163, 120) a. Appearing through, transparent. Diaphanous is little used.
- Di'-a-pha-ne/-i-ty, 84: s. Transparency.
- Di'-A-PHON/-IC, 163: a. Diacoustic.
- Di'-A-PHO-RET/-IC, 163: a. and s. That, or that which, carries humors through the body; sudorific.
- Di'-a-pho-re/-sis, s. Augmented perspiration.
- Di'-A-PHRA-OM, (-frām, 163, 157) s. That which breaks off or divides; the midriff, a muscle separating the thorax from the abdomen; a dividing substance generally.
- Di'-A-PO-RE/-sis, s. A division of the mind or doubt how to proceed expressed by the speaker. [Rhet.]
- Di'-AR-RHO/-A, (-rē'-d, 164, 103) s. A flux or flowing through, a purging.
- Di-ar-rho/-ic, (-rēt'-ick, 93, 120) a. Purgative.
- ☞ See Diary, after the compounds of Dia-.
- Di'-A-STAI/-TIC, a. Having the means of dilating an epithet applied by the Greeks to certain intervals in music.
- Di-as-to-le, (dī-äss'-tō-lēy) s. Literally, a sending out; among physicians, a dilatation of the heart, auricles, and arteries; among prosodists, a dilatation of a syllable by making a short one long; in both cases it is opposed to syctole or contraction.
- Di'-A-STEM, s. That by which the next [note] is attained, a simple interval in music.
- Di'-A-STYLE, (-stīle) s. That which has a regular division of its columns, a building in which each column stands with the distance of the diameter of three from the next.
- Di'-A-TEN/-SA-RON, s. In music, that which chords by being a perfect fourth; the harmony of the four gospels; the four gospels.
- Di-UTR'-E-SIS, s. The state of the body, good or bad, through any influencing cause.
- Di'-A-TON/-IC, a. In music, that proceeds by [common] tones as distinguished from Chromatic.
- Di'-A-TRI/-BE, s. A dwelling on each particular throughout; a continued discourse; a dwelling or amplification on some one point.
- Di'-A-ZE/-TIC, 110: a. In ancient music, that disjoins [tones], namely two fourths, one on each side, either of which being joined to the diazeuxis tone made a fifth.
- ☞ Other words compounded with Dia- will occur in their alphabetical places; namely, Diæsis, Diæce &c., Dioptric, &c., Diorama, Diuritic, &c., Diorthosis and Diuretic.
- DIAL=dī'-äl, s. A plate constructed with lines and figures, so that a hand or shadow may show the hour.
- Di'-a-ling, s. The art of constructing dials.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

DY-e-list, s. One skilled in dialling.

☞ See all compounds of Dia- under that head.

DIAMOND=dī'-d-mōnd, colloq. dī'-mōnd, s. and a. The most valuable of all the gems; it consists of carbon, and being heated to 140° Wedgewood is gradually but completely combustible; a very small printing type; the figure otherwise called a rhombus:—adj. Resembling a diamond; constructed with a diamond.

DIAPER=dī'-d-per, 36: s. Linen cloth woven in flowers and other figures, but inferior in quality to damask; a napkin.

To Di'-a-per, v. a. To variegate as on cloth.

☞ See all the compounds of Dia- under that head.

DIARY, dī'-d-rēy, 105: s. An account of every day's transactions, a journal.

Di'-a-rist, s. One who keeps a diary.

Di'-a-ri-an, 90, 41: a. Pertaining to a diary.

☞ See all the compounds of Dia- under that head.

DIBBLE, dīb'-bl, 101: s. A pointed instrument to make holes in the ground for seeds, &c.

To Dīb'-ble, v. a. and n. To plant with a dibble;—adv. To make holes; to dip as in angling.

DICE, &c.—See under Die.

DICACITY, dē-cās'-ē-tēy, 105: s. Sauciness.

DICHOTOMY, dī-cōt'-ō-mēy, 6, 161: s. A division into two; (see Di-) hence, a distribution of ideas by pairs; the half phase of the moon.

Di-chot'-o-mous, 120: a. Regularly divided by pairs. [Botany.]

To Di-chot'-o-mize, v. a. To cut into two parts.

DICKENS, dīc'-knz, 114, 143: interj. Devil. [Vulg.]

DICKER=dīck'-er, s. Ten in quantity. [Obs.]

DICOCCOUS, dī-cōck'-ūs, a. Two-grained.—See Di.

DICOTYLEDON=dī'-cō-tīl-ē'-dōn, s. A plant whose seeds divide into two lobes in germinating.—See Di. Hence, Dicotyledonous, a.

To DICTATE=dīc'-tātē, v. a. To tell with authority; to command; to order what is to be said or written.

Dīc'-tate, s. Authoritative maxim; prescript.

Dīc'-tum, s. A positive assertion. [Lat.]

DIC-TA'-TION, 89: s. The act or practice of dictating; that which is written from one dictating.

DIC-TA'-TOR, 38: s. One who dictates; in ancient Rome, a magistrate invested for a season with absolute power; hence, an absolute magistrate generally.

Dic-ta'-tor-ship, s. The office of a dictator, also called Dictature; authority, insolent confidence.

Dīc'-ta-to'-ri-al, 90: a. Authoritative; dogmatical; overbearing. Milton uses dic'tatory.

DICTION, dīck'-shūn, s. Style, language, expression.

Dic-tion-ar-y, s. A book containing the words of a language arranged alphabetically, with explanations of their meaning; a lexicon, a vocabulary, a word book.

DID.—See To Do.

DIDACTIC=dē-dāck'-tīck, 88: } a. Preceptive;
DIDACTICAL, dē-dāck'-tē-cāl, } intended to instruct.

Di-dac'-ti-cal-ly, ad. In a didactic manner.

Di'-as-cāl'-ic, 85, 92, 88: a. Didactic.

DIDACTYLOUS, dī-dāck'-tē-lūs, 6, 120: a. Having two toes.—See Di.

DIDAPPER=dīd'-āp-per, 92, 36: s. A bird that dives into the water.

DIDASCALIC.—See under Didactic.

To DIDDLE, dīd'-dl, 101: v. n. To totter: See To Toddle. As a verb active, in low language, to cheat.

DIDUCTION, dī-dīck'-shūn, 6, 89: s. A double drawing, so as to pull one part from another.—See Di.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, s. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, s. e. vision, 165: thēn, 166: thēn, 166.

DIFFLATION, dif-flā'-shūn, 89: s. A blowing or blasting to different parts.—See Di.

DIFFLUENT, dif-flū-ō-ēnt, 109: a. Flowing every way; (see Di-): not consistent, not fixed.

Dif-flu-ence, } s. The quality of falling away on Dif-flu-en-cy, } all sides.

DIFFORM=dif-fārm, 38: a. Having inconsistencies of form; (see Di-): dissimilar; unlike; irregular.

Dif-for-mi-ty, s. Diversity of form; irregularity.

DIFFRANCHISEMENT.—See To Diafranchise, &c.

To DIFFUSE, dif-fūz, 137: v. a. To pour out so that the liquor may run every way; (see Di-): to spread abroad; to scatter.

Dif-fused, 114: a. Spread widely; flowing; loose; wild.

Dif-fu'-sed-ly, ad. In a diffused manner.

Dif-fu'-sed-ness, s. The state of being diffused.

Dif-fu'-ser, 36: s. One who disperses.

Dif-fu'-si-ble, 101: a. Capable of being diffused.

Dif-fu'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. Dispersion; the act of pouring abroad; copiousness, exuberance.

Dif-fu-sed, (-fūc) 137: a. Scattered, widely spread; copious, not concise.

Dif-fu'-sive-ly, ad. Widely; extensively; copiously.

Dif-fu'-sive, (-civ, 152) a. Having the quality of scattering every way; scattered, dispersed; in full extension.

Dif-fu'-sive-ly, ad. Widely, extensively.

Dif-fu'-sive-ness, s. Diffusion; want of conciseness.

To DIG=dig, } v. a. and n. (It also has the re-Dug=dug, } gular forms of the preterit and Dug=dug, } participle, though these are almost absolute.) To pierce with a spade or sharp point; to form by digging; to cultivate the ground by using the spade; to pierce with a sharp point: To dig up, to procure by digging:—new. To work with the spade in turning the ground.

Dig'-ger, (-guer, 77) s. One that digs.

DIGAMMA=di-gām'-mā, s. An Eolic letter having the power of F, but called digamma or double G (i. e. F) from its form.

DIGASTRIC=di-gās'-trick, a. Double-bellied; an epithet applied to the muscle of the lower jaw.—See Di.

To DIGEST, dī-jēst', v. a. and n. Primarily, to carry to various places of destination; (See Di-): specifically, to distribute or arrange methodically; to separate and dissolve in the stomach, so as to make fit for nourishing the body; to soften by heat as in a boiler; to range methodically in the mind; to reduce to a plan or method; to receive without repugnance; to dispose a wound to generate its cure:—new. To be prepared by the functions of the stomach, or by heat; to suppurate.

Dig-es'-ter, s. He that digests; a medicine to assist digestion; a strong vessel for reducing bony substances by heat to a fluid state.

Dig-es'-ti-ble, a. That may be digested.

Dig-es'-tive, 105: a. and s. Having power to cause digestion; capable by heat to soften and subdue; methodizing, adjusting:—s. A preparation to aid digestion; also one to procure suppuration.

Di ges'-tion, (-jēst'-yun=jēst'-shūn, 147) s. The act or process of digesting; the state of being digested; preparation by digesting.

Di ges'-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Digestion. [Harvey.]

Dig'-est, (dī-jēst, 83) s. Generally, that which has been methodized; appropriately, the pandect of the civil law; also an arrangement of decisions in the English courts of law, methodized under their respective heads.

Dig'-e-RENT, (dīd'-jē-rēnt) a. Digestive. [Obs.]

IN DIGHT, dīt, 175: v. a. To deck. [Obs.]

Dight, part. a. Dressed out, adorned. [Milton.]

DIGIT=dīd'-jīt, s. Literally, a finger or finger's breadth; accurately, three quarters of an inch; also the twelfth of the diameter of the sun or moon; also any number whose indication is a single figure, viz. 9 and the numbers below it. Digitations are divisions.

Dig'-i-tal, a. Pertaining to a finger.

Dig'-i-ta-ted, a. Branched as fingers. [Botany.]

To DIGLADIATE, dī-glād'-ē-āte, v. n. To fight.

Di-glād'-i-a'-tion, s. A using of swords.—See Di.

To DIGNIFY, dīg'-nē-fy, 105, 6: v. a. To invest with honour; to advance, to prefer, to exalt; to give lustre to.

Dig'-ni-fied, 114: a. Invested with some dignity.

Dig'-ni-fi-ca'-tion, s. Exaltation.

Dig'-ni-ty, 105: s. Elevation of rank; grandeur of aspect; advancement, preferment; among ecclesiastics, a preferment to which any jurisdiction is annexed.

Dig'-ni-tar-y, 129: s. A clergyman of rank above that of a parochial priest.

DIGONOUS, dīg'-ō-nūs, 92: a. Having two angles.—See Di. [Botany.]

DIGRAPH, dī-grāf, 163: s. A double mark, (see Di-) two or more letters for one sound, as ca in pen.

To DIGRESS, dē-grēs', 105: v. n. To step aside or part off into a new road; (see Di-): to depart from the main design of the discourse or argument; to wander, to expatiate, to deviate.

Di-grēs'-sive, 105: a. Tending to digress.

Di-grēs'-sive-ly, ad. In the way of digression.

Di-grēs'-sion, (-grēs'-hūn, 147) s. A passage deviating from the main design of a discourse; deviation.

Di-grēs'-sion-al, a. Deviating from the main purpose.

DIGYNIAN, dī-gyn'-ē-ān, 146: a. Doubly feminine; (see Di-) having two pistils. [Botany.]

DIIHEDRAL=dī-hē'-drāl, a. Having two sides.

To DIJUDICATE, dī-jū'-dē-cātē, v. a. To distinguish between in the capacity of a judge.—See Di.

Di-jū'-di-ca'-tion, 89: s. Judicial distinction.

DIKE=dike, s. A channel to receive water, a ditch; a mound to hinder inundations.

To Dike, v. a. To surround with a dike.

To DILACERATE=dī-lās'-sēr-āte, v. a. To tear asunder; (see Di-): to rend; to separate by force.

Di-lac'-er-a'-tion, s. A rending asunder.

To DILANIATE, dī-lān'-ē-āte, v. a. To tear.

Di-lān'-i-a'-tion, s. A tearing to pieces.

To DILAPIDATE, dē-āp'-ē-āte, v. n. and a.

To go to ruin; to decay:—act. To pull down; to waste.

Di-lap'-i-da'-tion, 89: s. Ruin or decay, especially as regards the edifices of an ecclesiastical living.

Di-lap'-i-da'-tor, s. One who causes decay.

To DILATE=dī-lātē, v. a. and n. To extend, to spread out; to enlarge, to tell diffusely and copiously:—new. To widen; to speak largely and copiously.

Di late, a. Expanded, dilated.

Di-la'-ter, 36: s. One who dilates.

Di-la'-tor, 38: s. A muscle that dilates.

Di-la'-tion, s. An extending; delay.

Di-la'-ta-ble, 101: a. Capable of extension.

Di-la'-ta-bil'-i-ty, 84: s. Capability of extension.

Dil'-a-ta'-tion, 85, 92, 89: s. The act or state of dilating; expansion.

Dil'-a-tor-y, (dīd'-tōr-ē, 92) a. Drawing out or extending the time in which anything is done; hence slow, tardy.

Dil'-a-tor-i-ly, ad. With procrastination.

Dil'-a-tor-i-ness, s. Slowness, sluggishness.

The scheme entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Uppers: gātē-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā'. lāw: g'ōd; j'ōō, i. e. few, 55: a, e, &c. mule, 171.

DILECTION, dī-lēk'-shun, 89: s. The act of loving; kindness.

DI-LĒT-TAN'-TE, (dē-lēt-tān'-tā, [Ital.] 170) s. A lover of the fine arts. In the plural Dilettanti, (-tēc.)

DILEMMA=dī-lēm'-mā, s. A double assumption leading to a proof either way; (see Di-) a situation in which no course free from objection is open DILIGENT, dīl'-ē-gēnt, 105: a. Constant in application, assiduous; constantly applied.

Dil'-i-gent-ly, ad. With assiduity.

Dil'-i-gence, s. Industry, assiduity.

DILL=dill, s. A plant with pungent seeds.

DILUCID, dī-l'ū-sīd, a. Lucid. [Little used.]

To Di-lu'-ci-date, v. a. To elucidate.

To DILUTE, dē-l'ū-tē, 109: v. a. Literally, to wash, but appropriately to make liquid or thin; to attenuate by the admixture of other parts; to make weak.

Di-lute, a. Thin, attenuated, diluted.

Di-lu'-ter, s. That which dilutes.

Di-lu'-tion, s. A making of any thing weak or thin; a weak liquid.

Dil-u-ent, (dīl'-ū-ēnt, 92, 69) a. and s. Having the power to attenuate other matter:—s. That which thins other matter.

Di-lu'-vi-um,

Di-lu'-vi-um, &c. } See under Deluge.

DIM=dīm, a. Not seeing clearly; not clearly seen; obscure, not luminous, somewhat dark; dull of apprehension.

To Dim, v. a. To cloud, to make less bright, to obscure.

Dim-ish, a. Somewhat dim.

Dim'-ly, ad. Not with quick sight; obscurely.

Dim-ness, s. Dulness of sight; obscurity.

DIMBLE, dīm'-bl, 101: s. A dingle. [Obs.]

DIMENSION, dē-mēn'-shūn, 90: s. That which, being measured, is a certain length, or a certain length and breadth, or a certain length, breadth, and thickness; all these together are the dimensions of a body; extent; capacity.

Di-men'-sion-less, a. Boundless.

Di-men'-sive, (-civ, 152) a. Marking boundaries.

Di-men'-si-ty, s. Extent, capacity.

DIMETER=dī'-mē-ter, 36: a. Containing two measures, each of two poetic feet: hence, a dimeter has four feet.

To DIMIDIATE, dī-mīd'-ē-āt, 146: v. a. To divide into two equal parts.

Di-mīd'-i-a'-tion, 89: s. The act of halving.

To DIMINISH, dē-mīn'-ish, 105: v. a. and n. To make less by any means; to impair; to lessen; to degrade:—neu. To grow less; to be impaired.

Di-min'-ish-a-ble, a. That may be diminished.

Di-min'-ish-ing-ly, ad. In a manner to diminish.

Di-min'-u-ent, a. Lessening. [Little used.]

Di-min'-u-ive, 105: a. and s. Small, little:—s. That which has the property of diminishing; a word formed to express littleness; as manikin, a little man.

Di-min'-u-ive-ly, ad. In a diminutive manner.

Di-min'-u-ive-ness, s. Smallness, littleness.

Di-min'-u-ation, 89: s. The act of making less; the state of growing less; discredit, loss of dignity, degradation; in architecture, the contraction of the diameter of a column as it ascends.

DIMISH, &c.—See under Dim.

To DIMIT, dē-mīt', v. a. To allow to go; also to grant to farm. [Out of use.]

Di-mis'-sion, (-mish'-ūn) s. Leave to depart.

Dim'-is-sion, (-sōr'-ēy) a. Dismissing to another jurisdiction; giving leave to depart.

DIMITY, dīm'-ē-tēy, 105: s. A fine kind of stuff, or cloth of cotton.

DIMPLE, dīm'-pl, 101: s. A small cavity or depression in the cheek, chin, or other part.

To Dim'-ple, v. n. To sink in small cavities.

Dim'-pled, 114: a. Set with dimples.

Dim'-ply, 105: a. Dimpled, full of dimples.

DIN=dīn, s. A loud noise; a violent and continued sound.

To Din, v. a. To stun with noise; to impress with violent and continued noise.

To DINE=dīn, v. n. and a. To eat the chief meal of the day:—act. To give a dinner to; to accommodate for dining.

DIN'-NER, 36: s. The chief meal of the day.

Din'-ner-time, s. The time of dining.

DINETICAL, dē-nēt'-ē-cāl, 105: a. Whirling round, vertiginous.

To DING=dīng, v. a. and n. To dash with violence; to impress with force:—neu. To bluster.

☞ This verb is regular; Dang for the preterit being obsolete.

DING-DONG=dīng'-dōng, s. A word by which the sound of bells is imitated.

DINGLE, dīng'-gl, 158, 101: s. A hollow between hills; a dale.

DINGLE-DANGLE, dīng'-gl-dāng'-gl, 158, 101: a. Carelessly pendent.

DINGY, dīn'-jēy, a. Dark; dim; soiled, foul.

Din'-gi-ness, s. The quality of being dingy.

DINNER, &c.—See under To Dine.

DINT=dīnt, s. A blow, but in this sense almost obsolete; the mark or dent made by a blow; (compose Dent;) violence, force; in which last application it is worn down by frequent use into the adverbial phrase, by dint of, meaning by force of.

To Dint, v. a. To mark by a blow; to dent.

DINUMERATION, dī-nū'-mēr-ā'-shūn, 89: s. The act of numbering out one by one.

DIOCESE=dī'-o-cēcē, s. Literally, a residence throughout, (see Dia-) the circuit of a bishop's jurisdiction.

Di-o'-ce-san, (dī-ōss'-ē-zān, 81, 92, 105, 151) s. A bishop as he stands related to his own clergy or flock:—adj. Pertaining to a diocese.

DIOPTRIC, dī-ōp'-trīck, 89: } a. Affording a DIOPTRICAL, dī-ōp'-trē-cāl, } medium for the sight; (see Dia-) pertaining to dioptrics.

Di-op'-trics, s. pl. That part of optics which treats of the refractions of light passing through different mediums, as air, water, or glass.

DIORAMA, dī-ō-rā'-mā, s. That which is seen as through an opening, or which unfolds a landscape as when the clouds break, (see Dia-) the name of an exhibition.

DIORISTIC, dī-ō-ris'-tīck, a. Limiting or defining throughout; (see Dia-) distinguishing.

Di'-o-rism, 158: s. Definition.

DIORTHOSIS=dī'-or-thōs'-sis, s. A making straight throughout the parts. (See Dia-.)

To DIP=dīp, v. a. and n. To immerge, to put into any fluid, to wet; to engage in:—neu. To sink, to immerge; to enter slightly; to choose by chance.

Dip, s. A depression; the sinking or falling in of a surface; a candle made by dipping.

Dip'-per, s. One who bathes another or himself; a ladle.

Dip'-ping-nee'-dle, s. An instrument which shows the inclination of the magnet.

Dip'-chick, s. A small bird that dives.

DIPETALOUS, dī-pēt'-ā-lūs, 120: a. Having two flower leaves.—See Di-

DIPHTHONG, dip'-thōng, 143: s. A double

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh' ūn, s. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: tūn, 166; thēn, 166.

sound, (see Di.) or two vowels so uttered that they are comprehended in one syllable.

Diph'-hon-gal, (-thong-gál) a. Having the nature of a diphthong.

DIPHYLLOUS, dī fī'-lūs, 163 : a. Two-leaved.

DIPLOMA=dē-plō'-mǎ, s. Literally, that which is doubled or folded up, a letter; a writing conferring some privilege on the person to whom it is directed.

To Dip-lo'-mate, v. a. To invest with a privilege.

DI-PLO'-MA-CY, s. The art or practice of treating with foreign states by diplomas, or letters interchanged between the contracting parties; the customs, rules, and privileges of ambassadors; a body of envoys; political cunning.

Di-plō'-ma-tist, s. One skilled in diplomacy.

DI-PLO'-MAT'-ICS, s. pl. The science of diplomas, or of ancient writings, literary and public documents, letters, decrees, charters, &c.

Dip'-lo-mat'-ic, a. Relating to diplomatics; pertaining to diplomacy; having the character or quality of diplomacy.

DIPPER, &c.—See under To Dip.

DIPSAS=dīp'-sās, s. A serpent whose bite produces a mortal thirst.

DIPTERAL=dīp'-tēr-āl, a. Having only two wings.—See Di. [Entomol.] Dipterous, &c., see Sup.

DIPTOTE=dīp'-tōtē, s. A noun with two cases only. All nouns in English are diptotes.

DIPTYCH, dīp'-tick, 161 : s. Literally, that which is double-folded; a public register of men who have held high offices, or have become celebrated as saints or martyrs.

DIRADIATION, dī-rā'-dē-ā'-shūn, 89 : s. The diffusion of rays from a luminous body.

DIRE=dīrē, 45 : a. Dreadful, dismal, mournful.

Dire'-ness, s. Dismalness, heinousness.

Dire'-ful, 117 : a. Terrible, calamitous.

Dire'-ful-ly, ad. Dreadfully, terribly.

Dire'-ful-ness, s. Dreadfulness, horror.

DIRECT=dē-rēct', a. Straight, not crooked; not oblique; not retrograde; not collateral; apparently tending to some end; open, not ambiguous; plain, express.

To Di-rect', v. a. To aim or drive in a straight line; to point against a mark; to regulate, to adjust; to prescribe certain measures; to order, to command.

Di-rect'-ter, 36 : s. He or that which directs.

Di-rect'-ly, ad. In a straight line; immediately; apparently; without circumlocution.

Di-rect'-ness, s. Straightness; tendency to a point.

Di-rec'-tive, a. Having the power of direction; informing, showing the way.

Di-rec'-tion, 89 : s. Aim at a certain point; tendency of motion impressed by a certain impulse; order, command, prescription, adjustment.

Di-rec'-tor, 38 : s. A director, one appointed to transact the affairs of a trading company; one consulted in cases of conscience; an instructor.

Di-rec'-tress, Di-rec'-trix, s. A female director. The latter word also signifies a dirigent.

Di-rec'-tor-y, a. and s. Guiding, commanding:—s. A rule to direct; a book with the directions or addresses of individuals; a book published in the grand rebellion for the direction of religious worship; a board of directors; the supreme council in the French revolutionary government.

Di-rec-to'-ri-al, 90 : a. Giving direction; pertaining to a directory.

DIR'-i-GENT, (dīr'-jēnt, 129) a. and s. Directive:—s. The line along which the hue described is carried in the generation of any figure.

DIREFUL, &c.—See under Dire.

DIRIEMPTION, dī-rēm'-shūn, 156, 89 : s. Separation.—See Di.

DIRECTION, dī-rēp'-shūn, 89 : s. The act of snatching from, or plundering.—See Di.

DIRGE=dērgē, 35 : s. A mournful ditty: a song of lamentation.

DIRIGENT.—See under To Direct.

DIRK=dērk, 35 : s. A kind of dagger.

DIRK=dērk, a. Dark. To dirk, to darken. [Spenser.]

DIRT=dērt, 35 : s. Filth, excitement, mud, mire; meanness, sordidness.

To Dir't, v. a. To foul, to bemire.

Dir'-ty, a. Foul, nasty, filthy, sullied, mean.

Dir'-tu-ly, ad. In a dirty manner.

Dir'-ti-ness, s. Nastiness; meanness; sordidness.

To Dir'-ty, v. a. To foul, to soil; to disgrace, to scandalize.

DIRUPTION, dī-rūp'-shūn, 89 : s. A bursting or breaking asunder.—See Di.

DIS, A prefix etymologically the same as Di, which see. It commonly signifies privation or negation, but not uniformly. Among the words which begin with this prefix, those will stand distinguished which seem to receive from it a peculiar meaning, as well as those which happen to stand at the head of several others. As to the pronunciation of this prefix, the s is unvoiced if the accent primary or secondary is on the syllable; but if the next syllable be accented, and begin with a real vowel (not u) or a vocal consonant, the s is sounded z, unless the word is connected with a principal word in which the s is unvoiced; for in such case the derivative follows its principal.

To Dis'-a-BLE, 151, 101 : v. a. To deprive of force, to weaken; to hinder from action; to impair; to diminish; to deprive of usefulness; to exclude as wanting proper qualifications.

Dis'-a-bil-ment, s. Disability. [Bacon.]

Dis'-a-bil'-i-ty, 84 : s. Want of power, weakness; want of qualifications for a purpose; legal impediment.

TO DISABUSE, dīs'-d-būz', 137 : v. a. To undeceive; to set from a mistake; to set right.

TO DISACCOMMODATE=dīs'-āc-cōm'-mō-date, v. a. To put to inconvenience.

Dis'-ac-com'-mō-da'-tion, 89 : s. The state of being unfit or unprepared.

To Dis'-ac-cōm', 37 : v. a. To refuse consent. [Spenser.]

To Dis'-ac-cus'-tōm, 18 : v. a. To destroy a habit.

DISADVANTAGE=dīs'-ād-vān'-tāge, 99 : s. Loss; injury to interest; diminution; unpreparedness.

To Dis'-ad-van'-tage, v. a. To injure in interest.

Dis'-ad-van-ta'-gous, (-jūs, 147, 120) 90 : a. Contrary to interest or convenience; unfavourable.

Dis'-ad-van-ta'-gous-ly, ad. In a manner contrary to interest or convenience.

Dis'-ad-van-ta'-gous-ness, s. Contrariety to profit; mischief; loss.

DISADVENTUROUS, dīs'-ād-vēn'-tū-rūs, 147 : a. Unhappy; unprosperous. [Obs.]

To DISAFFECT=dīs'-āf-fēct', v. a. To fill with discontent; to dislike; to disdain; to disorder.

Dis'-af-fec'-ted, a. Not disposed to zeal or affection; not disposed to view favourably.

Dis'-af-fec'-ted-ly, ad. In a disaffected manner.

Dis'-af-fec'-ted-ness, s. The quality of being disaffected.

Dis'-af-fec'-tion, 90 : s. Dislike; want of zeal for the government; disorder; bad constitution.

To Dis'-af-firm', (-fērm, 35) v. a. To deny.

Dis'-af-fi'-mance, s. Confutation; negation.

To Dis'-af-fōr', (-fōr, 129) v. a. To throw open or reduce a forest to common ground.

To DISAGREE=dīs'-ā-grē', v. n. To differ, not to be the same; to differ in opinion; to be in a state of opposition.

Dis'-a-grē'-ment, s. Difference; dissimilitude.

The schemes contrive, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary

Dis-a-gree'-a-ble, 101: a. Contrary; unsuitable; unpleasant; offensive.
Dis-a-gree'-a-bly, ad. In a disagreeable manner.
Dis-a-gree'-a-ble-ness, s. Unsuitableness; contrariety; unpleasantness; offensiveness.
To DISALLIEGE, dis'-äl-liej', 103: v. a. To alienate from allegiance. [Milton.]
To Dis-AL-low, 31: v. a. and n. To refuse permission; to deny the authority of; to consider as unlawful; to censure by a posterior act:—neg. To refuse permission, not to grant.
Dis-al-low'-a-ble, 101: a. Not allowable.
Dis-al-low'-ance, s. Prohibition.
To Dis-AL-lig, v. a. To disjoin. [Milton.]
To Dis-AN'-CHOR, (diz-äng'-cor, 151, 158, 161, 38) v. a. To drive from her anchor.
To Dis-AN'-I-MATE, 151: v. a. To deprive of life, to discourage, to defeat.
Dis-an'-i-ma'-tion, 89: s. Privation of life.
To DISANNUI, dis'-än-nüi', v. a. To annul. The prefix is merely intensive.—See Di.
Dis-an-nul'-ment, s. Annulment.
To DISAPPAREL = dis'-ap-pär'-ël, v. a. To strip of raiment.
To Dis-AP-PEAR, 103, 41: v. n. To be lost to view; to vanish from sight; to fly; to go away.
Dis'-ap-pear'-ance, s. An end of appearance.
To DISAPPOINT = dis'-äp-point', 29: v. a. To defeat of expectation; to balk; to deprive or bereave of.
Dis'-ap-point'-ment, s. Defeat of hopes.
To DISAPPROVE, dis'-äp-prüv', 107: v. a. To dislike, to censure; not to confirm by concurrence; to reject.
Dis-ap-pro'-val, s. Disapprobation, dislike.
Dis-ap'-pro-ba'-tor-y, 129, 105: a. Containing disapprobation; tending to disapprove.
Dis-ap'-pro-ba'-tion, s. Censure, condemnation.
To Dis-ARM, 151, 35: v. a. To spoil or divest of arms; to deprive of any thing injurious.
To Dis-AR-RANGE, (-räng, 111) v. a. To unsettle; to put out of order.
Dis-ar-range'-ment, s. Disorder, confusion.
To Dis-AR-RAY, v. a. To undress; to discomfit, to rout, to overthrow.
Dis-ar-ray', s. Disorder, confusion; undress.
DISASTER = diz-äs'-ter, 151, 11, 36: s. The blast or stroke of an unfavourable planet; mishap; misery.
To Dis-as'-ter, v. a. To blast, to afflict.
Dis-as'-trous, 120: a. Unlucky; calamitous.
Dis-as'-trous-ly, ad. Calamitously.
Dis-as'-trous-ness, s. Calamitousness.
To DISAUTHORIZE, diz-äw-thör-ize, 151: v. a. To deprive of credit or authority.
To Dis-A-VOCU, 31, 63: v. a. To retract profession.
To Dis-A-VOW, v. a. To disown; to deny knowledge of.
Dis-a-vow'-al, Dis-a-vow'-ment, s. Denial.
To Dis-BAND, 151: v. a. and n. To dismiss from military service; to break up an army; to dismiss from service:—neg. To retire from military service; to be dissolved.
To Dis-BARK, 151: v. a. To strip off the bark. Pope uses it for To Debarb or Disembark.
To Dis-BE-LIEVE, (-lëv, 103, 189) v. a. Not to credit, not to hold true.
Dis-be-liev'-er, s. One who refuses belief.
Dis-be-lief, s. Refusal of credit.
To Dis-BENCH, 151, 63: v. a. To drive from a seat.
To Dis-BRANCH, v. a. To break off, as a branch.

To Dis-BUR, 151: v. a. To take away, luds.
To Dis-BUR'-DEN.—See four words lower.
To Dis-BURSE, 151, 153: v. a. To take from the purse; to pay out as money, to spend.
Dis-bur'-set, s. One that disburses.
Dis-burse'-ment, s. Act of disbursing; the sum disbursed.
To Dis-BUR'-THEN, (-thn, 114) v. a. and n. To ease of a burthen, to unload; to disencumber or clear; to throw off as a burthen:—neg. To ease the mind.
Dis-bur'-se, s. It is very commonly but less properly spelled Dis-bursea.
To Dis-CAL'-CR-ATE, (-shé-äte, 147) v. a. To put off the shoes or sandals.
Dis-cal'-ce-a'-tion, 150: s. A pulling off the shoes.
To Dis-CAN'-DY, v. n. To dissolve, to melt.
To Dis-CARD, v. a. To throw out of the hand such cards as are useless; hence, to dismiss from service or employment.
Dis-car'-nat, a. Stripped of flesh.
To Dis-CASE, (-cäc, 152) v. a. To strip, to undress.
Dis'-cer-ta'-tion, 89: s. A dispute.
Dis'-cep-ta'-tor, 38: s. A decider, an umpire.
To DISCERN, diz-zern', 151: v. a. and n. To discern, to see; to judge; to have knowledge by comparison, to distinguish:—neg. To make distinction; to have judicial cognizance.
Dis-cer'-ner, 36: s. One that discerns, a judge.
Dis-cern'-ing, a. and s. Judicious, knowing:—s. the power of distinguishing.
Dis-cern'-ing-ly, ad. Judiciously.
Dis-cern'-ment, s. Judgement; power of distinguishing.
Dis-cern'-i-ble, a. Discoverable, perceptible.
Dis-cern'-i-bly, ad. Perceptibly; apparently.
Dis-cern'-i-ble-ness, s. Visibleness.
To DISCERP = dis-serp', 35: v. a. To tear in pieces, to break; to separate, to select. [Little used.]
Dis-cerp'-tion, 89: s. The act of pulling to pieces.
Dis-cerp'-ti-ble, a. Frangible, separable.
Dis-cerpt, s. This word and its derivative, Discerptibility, ought to have been Discerptible, &c., that is, they ought to have been derived from the verb and not the noun.
DISCESSION, dis-esh'-ün, 147: s. Departure.
To DISCHARGE = dis-charj', v. a. and n. To disburthen, to unload; to disembark; to give vent to, to let fly, to let off; to clear a debt by payment; to set free from obligation; to clear from an accusation; to perform, to execute; to put away; to divest of any office or employment; to dismiss; to release; to emit:—neg. To dismiss itself; to break up.
Dis-charge, s. Vent; explosion; dismissal; release; ransom; payment; execution.
Dis-char'-ger, s. He that discharges.
Dis-CINCT, (-singkt, 158) a. Ungirded.
To Dis-CIND, (-sind) v. a. To divide, to cut.
DISCIPLE, dis-si'-pl, 101: s. A scholar, one that professes to receive instruction from another; a follower in doctrine.
To Dis-ci-ple, v. a. To teach, to bring up. Spenser and Milton use it in the contracted form To Dis-ple.
Dis-ci'-ple-ship, s. The state or function of a disciple.
Dis-ci-pline, (diss'-plîn, 155) s. Education, instruction; rule of government; order; military regulation; a state of subjection; any thing taught, art, science; punishment, chastisement, external mortification.
To Dis-ci-pline, v. a. To educate; to regulate; to punish; to advance by instruction.
Dis-ci-plin-a-ble, a. Capable of instruction.
Dis-ci-plin-a-ble-ness, s. Capability of instruction.
Dis-ci-plin'-ant, s. One of a strict religious order.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-un, i. e. mission, 165: vizh-un, i. e. vision, 165: äin, 166: thën, 166

Dis'-ci-plin-a'-ri-an, 90, 41 : a. and s. Pertaining to discipline;—s. One who rules or teaches with strictness; a puritan or presbyterian.

Dis'-ci-plin-ar-y, a. Pertaining to discipline.

To DISCLAIM=dis-clām', v. a. To disown, to deny any knowledge of; to renounce.

Dis-claim'-er, 36 : s. One that disclaims; in law, a plea containing an express denial or refusal.

To DIS-CLOSE, (clōz, 137) v. a. To uncover, to open; to reveal, to tell; to hatch. It may be met with as a noun.

Dis-clo'-ser, (-zer) s. One that discloses.

Dis-clo'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. Discovery; a revealing.

Dis-clu'-sion, (-cl'ō'-zhūn, 109) s. Emission.

DISCOID.—See under Disk after all words in Dis-

To DISCOLOUR, dis-cūl'-ur, 116, 120, 140 : v. a. To change from the natural hue, to stain.

Dis-col'-or-a'-tion, 191, 89 : s. The act of changing the colour; change of colour; stain, dye.

To DISCOMFIT, dis-cūm'-fit, 116 : v. a. To rout, to defeat, to conquer, to vanquish.

Dis-com'-fit, s. Rout, defeat, overthrow.

Dis-com'-fi-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. Defeat.

DISCOMFORT, dis-cūm'-fort, 116, 38 : s. Uneasiness, sorrow, melancholy.

To Dis-com'-fort, v. a. To grieve, to sadden.

Dis-com'-for-ta-ble, a. Uncomfortable; discom-forting. [Little used.]

To DIS-COM-MEND, (-cōm-mend', 18) v. a. To blame.

Dis-com-men'-der, 36 : s. A censurer.

Dis-com-men'-da-ble, a. Consurable.

Dis-com-men'-da-ble-ness, s. Blamableness.

Dis-com-men-da'-tion, 89 : s. Blame, reproach.

To DIS-COM-MODE, 18 : v. a. To put to inconvenience; to molest. To DISCOMMULATE, which would have been a better word, is met with only in old authors.

Dis-com-mo'-di-ous, 90, 105, 120 : a. Inconvenient; troublesome. [Not in good modern use.]

Dis-com-mod'-i-ty, s. Inconvenience. [Bacon.]

To DIS-COM-MON, v. a. To deprive of the right of common; to deprive of the privileges of a place.

To DIS-COM-POSE, (-cōm-pōz', 18, 137) v. a. To disorder, to unsettle, to ruffle; to disturb the temper; to offend.

Dis-com-pō'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. Disorder; perturbation; disagreement of parts.

To DIS-CON-CERT, 35 : v. a. To unsettle the mind; to disturb; to break as a scheme, to defeat a machination.

DIS-CON-FORM'-i-ty, 105 : s. Want of agreement.

Dis-con-gru'-i-ty, 109 : s. Inconsistency.

To DIS-CON-NECT, v. a. To break the ties of.

Dis-con-nec'-tion, 89 : s. Separation.

DISCONSOLATE=dis-cōn'-sō-lāte, a. Void of comfort, hopeless, sorrowful, melancholy.

Dis-con'-so-late-ly, ad. Comfortlessly.

Dis-con'-so-late-ness, s. The state of being disconsolate. Disconsolation is found only in old authors.

DISCONTENT=dis'-con-tēnt', s. and a. Want of content; uneasiness; one who is discontented;—a. Discontented.

To Dis-con-tent', v. a. To dissatisfy.

Dis-con-tent'-ted, a. Dissatisfied; uneasy.

Dis-con-tent'-ted-ly, ad. In a discontented manner.

Dis-con-tent'-ted-ness, s. The quality of discontent.

Dis-con-tent'-ment, s. The state of discontent.

To DIS-CON-TIN'-UE, 109 : v. n. and a. Originally, to lose the cohesion of parts; more commonly, to cease;—act. To leave off; to make an end of.

Dis-con-tin'-u-ance, s. A ceasing; discontinuity.

Dis-con-tin'-u-ous, a. Broken off; separated.

Dis-con-ti-nu'-i-ty, 84 : s. Disunity of parts.

Dis-con-tin'-u-a'-tion, s. Disruption of parts.

DISCORD=dis'-cōrd, 37 : s. Disagreement, opposition, mutual anger; difference or contrariety of qualities, particularly of sounds; a combination of disagreeing sounds.

To Dis-cord', 83 : v. n. To disagree; not to suit with.

Dis-cor'-dant, a. Inconsistent; inharmonious.

Dis-cor'-dant-ly, ad. In a discordant manner.

Dis-cor'-dance, 12 : s. Disagreement; opposition

Dis-cor'-dan-cy, } inconsistency.

DISCOUNT=dis'-cōunt, s. That which is counted back, or refunded in a bargain; a deduction according to the rate or interest for money advanced beforehand; an allowance made on a debt not yet due in order to receive the money for the same.

To Dis-cōunt', 83 : v. n. To count back; to allow discount; to advance money on, with the deduction of a discount.

☞ The accent is proper, but in the mercantile world the verb is very commonly made to bear the same accent as the noun. (82.)

Dis-cōunt'-er, s. One that lends on discount.

Dis-cōunt'-a-ble, a. That may be discounted.

To DIS-COUN-TE-NANCE, v. a. To discourage; to abash; to put to shame.

Dis-coun-te-nance, s. Cold treatment.

Dis-coun-te-nan-er, s. One who discourages.

To DIS-COUR-AGE, (-cūr'-āge, 120, 129, 99) v. a. To depress, to deprive of confidence; to deter; to dissuade.

Dis-cour'-ager, 2, 36 : s. One that discourages.

Dis-cour'-age-ment, s. The act of deterring or depressing hope; the cause of depression or fear.

DISCOURSE, dis-cō'urce, 47, 153 : s. The act of the understanding by which it passes from premises to consequences; conversation, mutual intercourse of language; effusion of language, talk; a treatise, a dissertation.

To DIS-COURSE, v. n. and a. To converse, to talk, to relate; to treat upon in a solemn or set manner; to reason;—act. [Shaks.] To treat of; to discuss; to utter.

Dis-cour'-ser, 36 : s. A speaker, a dissertator.

Dis-cour'-sive, (-cīv, 105) a. Discursive. [Milton.]

Dis-cur'-sive, a. Proceeding by regular gradation from premises to consequences; argumentative; moving here and there; roving; desultory.

Dis-cur'-sive-ly, ad. By due gradation of argument

Dis-cur'-sive-ness, s. Due gradation of argument.

Dis-cur'-sor-y, 129, 18 : a. Argumental.

DISCOURTEOUS, dis-cō'urt-yūs, 47, 146, 147 :

a. Uncivil, uncomplaisant.

Dis-cour'-teous-ly, ad. Uncivilly, rudely.

Dis-cour'-ship, s. Discourtesy. [Obs.]

Dis-cour'-te-ry, (-cūr'-tē-ry, 120, 152) s. Incivility; rudeness.

DISCOUS.—See under Disk after all words in Dis-

To DISCOVER, dis-cūv'-er, 116, 36 : v. a. Literally, to uncover; to show, to disclose, to bring to light; to make visible; to make known; to reveal; to espy; to detect.

Dis-cov'-er-er, s. One that finds out something which existed, but was not known; also, a spy.

Dis-cov'-er-a-ble, a. That may be discovered; apparent, exposed to view.

Dis-cov'-er-y, s. The act of finding any thing hidden; the thing discovered; the act of revealing.

Dis-cov'-er-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. State of being released, or of being free from coverture, that is, of

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers ref., precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāu'-way; chāp'-mān; pā-pā': lāw: gōd: j'ō: c. je, 55; a, e, h, &c. mute. 171.

being a spinster or a widow; [Law:] discovery; de-nouement

DISCREDIT = dīs-crēd'it, s. Want of credit; ignominy, reproach, disgrace.

To Dis-cred'it, v. a. To deprive of credibility; to disgrace, to make less reputable; to distrust; not to credit.

Dis-cred'it-a-ble, 101: a. Disreputable.

DISCREET = dīs-crēt', a. Literally separate, but appropriately in this mode of spelling, wary, prudent, cautious; modest, not forward.—Compare Discrete lower.

Dis-crēt'-ly, ad. Prudently; cautiously.

Dis-crēt'-ness, s. Discretion.

DIS-CRET'-ION, (-crēsh'ūn, 89, 92) s. Prudence, knowledge to govern or direct one's self; wise management; liberty of acting at pleasure: literally, disjunction, separation, but in this sense little used.

Dis-crē'-ion-al, a. Left to discretion or choice.

Dis-crē'-ion-al-ly, ad. At pleasure, at choice.

Dis-crē'-ion-at-y, a. Left to discretion.

DISCREPANT = dīs-crē-pānt, a. Jarring, disagreeing; different.

Dis'-cre-pance, 12: } s. Difference, disagreement;
Dis'-cre-pan-cy, } contrariety.

DISCRETE = dīs-crēt', a. Separate, distinct, not concrete; not continued; disjunctive.

Dis-crē'-tive, 103: a. Disjunctive; noting separation or opposition; a disjunctive proposition is that which is opposed to another by means of but, though, yet, &c., which are called disjunctive conjunctions.

Dis-crē'-tive-ly, ad. In a disjunctive manner.

Dis-crēt'-ion, &c.—See above under Discreet.

TO DISCRIMINATE, dīs-crim'ē-nāt, 105: v. a. and n. To mark with notes of difference; to distinguish by certain tokens; to select or separate:—new. To make a distinction.

Dis-crim'ē-nate, a. Distinguished. [Bacon.]

Dis-crim'ē-nate-ly, ad. Distinctly.

Dis-crim'ē-nate-ness, s. Marked difference.

Dis-crim'ē-nat'-ive, a. That makes a mark of distinction, characteristic; that observes distinction.

Dis-crim'ē-nat'-ive-ly, ad. With discrimination or distinction.

Dis-crim'ē-na'-tion, 89: s. The faculty of distinguishing; the state of being distinguished; distinction; the marks of distinction.

Dis-crim'ē-na-ble, 101: a. Distinguishable by outward marks or tokens.

Dis-crim'ē-nous, 120: a. Having nice differences between safety and danger, hazardous. [Harvey.]

DISCUBITORY, dīs-cū-bē-tōr-ēy, 105, 129, 18:

a. Fitted to the posture of leaning

Dis-cum'ben-cy, s. The act of leaning at meat.

To DISCULPATE = dīs-cūl'-pâte, v. a. To exculpate, which is in better use.

To DIS-CUM'-BER, 36: v. a. To disencumber.

DISCURSION, dīs-cur'-shūn, s. A running or rambling in different ways.

Dis-cur'-sive, &c.—See under Discourse.

Dis-cur'-rent, a. Not current. [Obs.]

DISCUS—See under Disk after all words in Dis-

To DISCUSS = dīs-cūss', v. a. Literally, to shake in pieces, or separate by shaking; hence, in medicine, to disperse or scatter; but appropriately and commonly, to examine or clear by disquisition.

Dis-cus'-sive, 36: s. He that discusses.

Dis-cus'-sive, 103: a. and s. Having the power to discuss, or disperse tumors:—s. A medicine to disperse tumors a discutient.

Dis-cu'-tient, (-sh'ēt, 147: a. and s. Dispersing morbid matter:—s. A medicine to disperse tumors.

To DISDAIN, dīz-dān', 151: v. a. and n. To scorn; to consider as unworthy of one's character:—new. To scorn; to grow impatient or angry.

Dis-dain', s. Contempt; scorn, indignation.

Dis-dain'-ful, 117: a. Haughty, scornful.

Dis-dain'-ful-ly, ad. Contemptuously, haughtily.

Dis-dain'-ful-ness, s. Haughty scorn.

DISEASE, dīs-ēz', 151: s. Distemper, malady.

To Dis-ease', v. a. To afflict with disease; to infect to make uneasy.

Dis-eas'-ed-ness, s. Sickness, morbidity.

Dis-eas'-ful, 117: a. Abounding with disease, producing disease.

Dis-ease'-ment, s. Trouble, inconvenience.

Dis-edged', 114: a. Blunted, made dull.

To Dis'-em-BARK', v. a. and n. To land [troops] from a ship:—new. To land.

Dis'-em-bark'-ment, s. The act of disembarking. Dis-em-bar-ca'-tion is used with the same meaning.

To Dis'-em-BAR'-ness, v. a. To free from clog.

Dis'-em-bar'-rass-ment, s. Freedom from perplexity.

To Dis'-em-BIT'-TER, v. a. To free from bitterness.

To Dis'-em-BOD'-y, v. a. To free from flesh or the body; to discharge from military incorporation.

Dis'-em-bod'-ied, 114: a. Divested of the body; separated, no longer incorporated.

To Dis'-em-BOGUE', (-hōguk) v. a. and n. To pour out or discharge at the mouth, as a stream; to vent, to eject:—new. To gain a vent; to flow.

Dis'-em-bogue'-ment, s. The discharge of waters into the ocean.

Dis'-em-BOS'-OMEN, (-bōoz'ōmd, 107, 151, 18, 114) a. Separated from the bosom [Young.]

To Dis'-em-BOW'-EL, v. a. To take out the bowels of; to draw from the bowels.

To Dis'-em-BROIL', v. a. To free from confusion.

To Dis'-en-A'-BLE, v. a. To deprive of power.

To Dis'-en-CHANT', v. a. To free from enchantment.

To Dis'-en-CUM'-BER, v. a. To disburthen, to exonerate, to free from obstruction.

Dis'-en-cum'-brance, s. Freedom from encumbrance.

To Dis'-en-GAGE', v. a. and n. To separate, to extricate, to clear; to free from what strongly detains the attention:—new. To set one's self free from.

Dis'-en-gaged', 114: a. Vacant, at leisure.

Dis'-en-gaged'-ness, s. The quality of being disengaged; freedom from pressing business; disjunction.

Dis'-en-gage'-ment, s. Release from any engagement or obligation; freedom of attention; vacancy.

To Dis'-en-NO'-BLE, 101: v. a. To degrade.

To Dis'-en-ROLL', (-rōl, 116) v. a. To erase or remove out of a roll or list.

To Dis'-en-TAN'-GLE, 158, 101: v. a. To unravel; to set free from impediments; to disengage.

Dis'-en-tan'-gle-ment, s. An unraveling.

To Dis'-en-THRAL'—See To Disinthal.

To Dis'-en-THRONE', v. a. To dethrone.

To Dis'-en-TIT'-LE, 101: v. a. To deprive of title.

To Dis'-en-FRANCE', v. a. To awaken from a trance.

To Dis'-E-SPOUSE', (-spowz, 137) v. a. To divorce.

Dis'-E-STEEM', s. Slight, dislike, disregard.

To Dis'-e-steem', v. a. To slight, to dislike.

Dis'-es-ti-ma'-tion, s. Disrespect, disesteem.

Dis'-FA'-VOUR, 120, 39: s. Discountenance; unpropitious regard; state of unacceptableness; want of beauty.

To Dis-fa'-vour, v. a. To discountenance; to deform.

To Dis-FIG'-URE, v. a. To deform; to mangle.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound

CONSUMMATA: mīsh-ūn, s. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, s. e. vision, 163: thn, 166: thēn, 166.

Dis-fig-ure-ment, s. A defacement; a deforming.
Dis-fig-u-ra-tion, s. The act of disfiguring; the state of being disfigured; deformity.

To Dis-FOUR-ENT, v. a. To disforest, which s.c.

To Dis-FRAN-CHISE, (-chîz, 105, 137) v. a. To deprive of privileges or communities.

D-s-iran'-chise-ment, s. A depriving of privileges.

To Dis-FUR-NISH, v. a. To unfurnish, to strip.

To Dis-GAR-NISH, 151: v. a. To strip of ornaments.

To Dis-GAR-RISON, (-sh, 114) 151: v. a. To deprive of a garrison.

To Dis-GLO-RI-FY, 151, 6: v. a. To deprive of glory.

To Dis-GORGE, 151: v. a. To vomit; to discharge.

Dis-gorge-ment, a. A disgorging; thing disgorged.

Dis-GRACE, 151: s. State of being out of favour; state of ignominy; dishonour; state of shame; cause of shame.

To Dis-grace, v. a. To bring reproach upon; to dishonour as an agent; to bring to shame; to put out of favour.

Dis-gra-cer, s. One that causes ignominy.

Dis-grace-ful, 117: a. Shameful.

D-s-grace-ful-ly, ad. Ignominiously.

Dis-grace-ful-ness, s. Ignominy.

Dis-GRACE-FOUL, (-sh'ûs, 147) a. Unfavourable.

To DISGUISE, dîz-gw'îz', 151, 77: v. a. To conceal by an unusual dress; to hide by a counterfeit appearance; to disguise; to change the form of.

Dis-guise, s. A dress contrived to conceal the person that wears it; a false appearance; counterfeit show.

Dis-gui-ser, s. He that disguises himself or another.

Dis-guise-ment, s. Dress of concealment.

DISGUST, dîz-güst', 151: s. Distaste; aversion of the palate; aversion; offence conceived.

To Dis-gust, v. a. To raise aversion in the stomach; to strike with dislike; to offend; to produce aversion.

Dis-gust-ing, a. Nauseous; offensive.

Dis-gust-ing-ly, ad. In a disgusting manner.

Dis-gust-ful, a. Nauseous; causing aversion.

DISH, &c.—See after all the words formed with Dis-

DISHABILE, dîsh-â-bîl', 170: s. An undress.
As an adj. it is properly dishabillé (dêz-â-bîl'-yâ-y).

To DISHABIT=dîsh-hâb'-it, v. a. To drive from abode. [Shaks.]

To Dis-HART-EN, (-har'-tn, 131, 114) v. a. To discourage, to deject, to terrify, to repress.

To Dis-HERIT.—See Disinherit.

To DISHEVEL, dê-shêv'-êl, 105: v. a. To spread the hair disorderly; it derives its pronunciation from its original French form.

Dis-shêv'-elled, (-êld, 114) a. Flowing disorderly.

DISHONEST, dîz-ôn'-êst, 151, 56: a. Void of probity or faith; in a classical sense, disgraced, ignominious; in our old writers, unchaste, lewd.

Dis-hon-est-ly, ad. In a dishonest manner.

Dis-hon'-est-y, s. The quality of being dishonest.

Dis-hon'-our, (dîz-ôn'-ur, 151, 56, 120) s. Reproach, disgrace, ignominy; reproach uttered, censure.

To Dis-hon'-our, v. a. To disgrace; to violate the chastity of; to deprive of the ornament of; to refuse the acceptance or payment of.

Dis-hon'-our-er, s. One that dishonours.

Dis-hon'-our-able, a. Shameful, reproachful; void of faith; being in a state of disesteem.

Dis-hon'-our-ably, ad. Ignominiously.

To Dis-HORN, v. a. To strip of horns. [Shaks.]

Dis-HU'-mour, 56, 120: s. Ill-humour.

Dis-IM-PROVE-MENT, (-prôov'-mênt, 107) s. Re-duction from a better to a worse state.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gât'-wâ; châp'-mân; pâ-pâ': lîw: gôod: j'w: s. e. jew 55: a, e, &c. note, 171.

To Dis-IN-CAR-ER-ATE, v. a. To free from prison.

To Dis-IN-CLINE, v. a. To produce dislike to.

Dis-in-cli-na-tion, 89: s. Slight dislike.

To Dis-IN-COR-POR-ATE, v. a. To dissolve from being corporate; to detach from a corporation.

Dis-in-cor-po-ra-tion, 89: s. Deprivation of corporate existence or privileges.

To Dis-IN-FECT, v. a. To purify from infection.

Dis-in-fec-tion, s. Purification from infection.

Dis-IN-GEN-U-OUS, 120: a. Unfair; meanly artful; viciously subtle; sly, cunning; illiberal.

Dis-in-gen'-u-ous-ly, ad. With dissingenuousness.

Dis-in-gen'-u-ous-ness, s. Unfairness; low craft. Disingenuity, in the same sense, is almost obsolete.

To Dis-IN-HER-IT, v. a. To cut off from an hereditary right. Disherit, with the same meaning, is little used.

Dis-in-her'-i-son, (-hêr'-l-zn, 129, 105, 151, 114) s. The act of disinheriting; the state of being disinherited. Disherison has the same meaning.

Dis-IN-TE-GRAL-TION, 89: s. The act of separating integrant parts of a substance, as distinguished from decomposition or the separation of constituent parts.

To Dis-IN-TER, v. a. To unbury; to disclose.

Dis-in-ter'-ment, s. An unburying.

Dis-IN-TER-EST, 151: s. What is contrary to one's wish or profit; indifference to profit, or to private regards.

To Dis-in-ter-est, v. a. To render superior to private advantage.

Dis-in-ter-est-ed, a. Superior to private regards; without personal concern in an affair; free from self-interest. Disinterested, in the same sense, is out of use.

Dis-in-ter-est-ed-ly, ad. With disinterestedness.

Dis-in-ter-est-ed-ness, s. Contempt of private interest. Disinterestedness, in the same sense, is out of use.

To Dis-IN-THEAT, (-thîr'wî, 112) v. a. To set free, to restore to liberty, to rescue from slavery.

To Dis-IN-NURE, v. a. To deprive of habit. [Milton.]

To Dis-IN-VITE, v. a. To recall an invitation.

To Dis-IN-VOLVE, 189: v. a. To disentangle.

To Dis-JOIN, 151: v. a. To separate; to part from each other; to sunder.

Dis-junct, (dîz-jûngkt, 158) a. Disjoined.

Dis-junc-tive, 105: a. and s. Incapable of union; marking separation or opposition; disjoining the sense though joining the words; set in opposition; having parts in opposition.—s. A disjunctive conjunction.

Dis-junc-tive-ly, ad. Distinctly; separately.

Dis-junc-tion, 89: s. Disunion; separation.

To Dis-JOINT, v. a. and n. To put out of joint; to break at junctures; to make incoherent; to break the relation between the parts.—new. To fall in pieces.

Dis-joint, a. Disjointed.

Dis-joint-ly, ad. In a divided state.

Dis-JU'-DI-CAL-TION, 109, 89: s. Act of determining.

Dis-JUNCT, &c.—See above, under To Disjoin.

DISK, &c.—See after all the words formed with Dis-

DISKINDNESS, dis-kind'-nêss, 115, 76: s. Unkindness; injury.

Dis-ILIKE, 151: s. Disinclination; absence of affection; the contrary to fondness; discord.

To Dis-like, v. a. To disapprove; not to like.

Dis-like-ful, 117: a. Disaffected. [Spencer.]

To Dis-li'-ken, 114: v. a. To make unlike. In Shakspeare it may be met with as a verb neuter.

Dis-like'-ness, s. Dissimilitude, unlikeness.

To Dis-LIMB, (-lîm, 156) v. a. To tear limb from limb.

To Dis-LIMN, (-lîm, 156) v. a. To strike from a picture.

To DIS-LO-CATE, v. a. To displace; to put out of joint.
Dis-lo-ca-tion, s. The act of moving from its proper place; state of being displaced; a luxation, or joint put out.
To DIS-LOGUE, 151: v. a. and s. To remove from a place; to drive from a station; to remove to other quarters:—new. To go away to another place.
Dis-loy'-al, 151, 29, 12: a. Not true to allegiance; faithless; treacherous; false in love.
Dis-loy'-al-ly, ad. Faithlessly.
Dis-loy'-al-ty, s. Want of allegiance; or faith.
DISMAL, dīz-māl, 151, 12: a. Sorrowful; dire; horrid; melancholy; uncomfortable; unhappy; dark.
 > The first syllable is supposed to be of other origin than the prefix Dis-, and does not, in consequence, fall under the rule for pronouncing it.
Dis-mal-ly, ad. Horribly; sorrowfully.
Dis-mal-ness, s. Horror; sorrow.
To DISMANTLE, dīz-mān'tl, 151, 101: v. a.
 To strip or divest; to strip of outworks; to break off.
To DIS-MASK, 11: v. a. To divest of a mask.
To DIS-MASS, 11: v. a. To deprive of masts.
To DISMAY, dīz-māy, 151: v. a. To terrify; to discourage; to depress; to deject.
Dis-may, s. Fall of courage; terror; fear.
Dis-may'-ed-ness, s. Dejection of courage.
DISME.—See after all the words formed with Dis-.
To DISMEMBER, dīz mēm'-ber, 151: v. a.
 To divide member from member; to dilacerate.
Dis-mem'-ber-ment, s. Division.
To DISMISS, dīz-miss', 151: v. a. To send away; to give leave of departure; to discard; to discontinue or cease the further hearing of.
Dis-miss, s. Dismissal or dismissal. [Obs.]
Dis-mis-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Causing dismissal; giving leave to depart.
Dis-mis-sal, s. Dismission.
Dis-mis-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. A sending away; an honourable discharge; deprivation; obligation to leave.
To DISMORTGAGE, dīz-mor'-gāg, 151, 136: v. a. To redeem from mortgage.
To DIS-MOUNT, 151: v. a. and n. To throw off from horseback; to throw from an elevation or place of honour; to throw [cannon] from the carriage:—new. To alight from a horse; to descend from an elevation.
To DIS-NAT'-U-RAL-IZE, (-nā'tch'-oo-rāl-ize, 96, 147) 151: v. a. To alienate; to make alien; to deprive of the privileges of birth.
Dis-na'-tured, (-ch'oord, 147, 114) a. Unnatural; wanting natural tenderness. [Shaks]
To DIS-O-BEY, (-bāy, 100) v. a. To break commands or transgress prohibitions.
Dis-o-be'-di-ent, 105: a. That disobeys.
Dis-o-be'-di-ence, s. Violation of lawful command or prohibition; breach of duty to superiors; in-compliance.
To DIS-O-BIGE, 104: v. a. To offend by something contrary to what was expected or desired.
Dis-o-bli'-ging, a. Not obliging; discourteous.
Dis-o-bli'-ging-ly, ad. Rudely; discourteously.
Dis-o-bli'-ging-ness, s. Offensiveness.
Dis-ob'-li-ga-tion, s. Offence; cause of disgust.
Dis-ob'-li-ga-tor-y, a. Releasing obligation: the literal sense, which in the other words is obsolete.
DIS-ORBE, 151, 114: a. Thrown from its orbit.
DIS-OR'-DER, 151, 36: s. Confusion; irregularity; tumult; neglect of rule; distemper of body, or of mind.
To DIS-OR'-der, v. a. To throw into confusion; to disturb; to ruffle; to make sick.
Dis-or'-dered, 114: a. Deranged; indisposed.

Dis-or'-der-ly, a. Confused; lawless; vicious.
Dis-or'-di-nate, a. Not living by good rules.
Dis-or'-di-nate-ly, ad. Inordinately.
To DIS-OUT-GA-NIZE, v. a. To break or destroy the structure or order of; to dissolve the union of parts.
Dis or'-ga-ni-zā'-tion, 89: s. Destruction of system; subversion of order.
To DIS-OWN, (-ōwn, 125) v. a. To deny a property in; to deny; not to allow; to abnegate; to renounce.
To DIS-OX'-Y-DATE, v. a. See To Deoxydate.
To DIS-PAIR, v. a. To part a pair or couple.
To DIS-PAN', v. a. To display. [Unusual.]
Dis-pan'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Diffusion; dilation.
To DISPARAGE=dis-pār'-āg, 129, 99: v. a.
 To match un-qually; to injure by a depreciating comparison.
Dis-par-a-ger, 2, 36: s. One that disparages.
Dis-par-age-ment, s. Injurious union or comparison with something inferior; in law, the matching of an heir beneath his or her degree, or against decency.
Dis-par-ate, a. and s. Unequal; dissimilar:—Disparates, s. pl. are things so unequal or unlike that they cannot be compared.
Dis par'-ty, (dis-pār'-ē-tēy, 129, 105) s. Inequality, difference in rank or excellence; dissimilitude.
To DIS-PARK, v. a. To throw open a park.
To DIS-PART, v. a. To divide, to separate.
DIS-PAS'-SION, (-pāsh'-ūn, 147) s. Coolness of temper; freedom from mental perturbation.
Dis-pas'-sion-ate, a. Cold; calm; impartial.
Dis-pas'-sion-ate-ly, ad. Calmly.
To DIS-PATCH, &c.—See To Despatch.
To DISPEL=dis-pēl', v. a. To drive by scattering; to disperse, to dissipate.
To DISPEND=dis-pēnd', v. a. Originally, to weigh off or distribute by weight; thence to distribute generally; and hence to spend or lay out; for which we now use Expend. [Obs.]
Dis-pen'-der, s. A dispenser. [Obs.]
To DIS-PENSE, v. a. To distribute by weight; to deal out in parts and portions; to make up and deal out medicines. To Dispense with, see lower.
Dis-pen'-ser, s. A distributor.
Dis-pen'-sary, 12, 105: s. The place where medicines are dispensed.
Dis-pen'-sa-tor-y, 18, 105: s. A book in which the composition of medicines is described and directed.
Dis'-pen-sa-tion, 89: s. Distribution; the dealing out of any thing; the method of Providence or distribution of good and evil; that which is dispensed or bestowed.—See also lower.
Dis'-pen-sa-tor, s. A distributor.
To DIS-PENSE-WITH, v. a. Literally, to deal out an indulgence or permission, and hence to excuse, to give leave not to do or observe what is required or commanded; hence, again, to permit the want of a thing which is useful or convenient, to do without it; to set free from obligation; to obtain a dispensation from the use of the word in the last two senses is not to be imitated.
Dis-pense, s. Exemption. [Obs.]
Dis-pen'-sa-ble, a. That may be dispensed with.
Dis-pen'-sa-ble-ness, s. Capability of being dispensed with.
Dis-pen'-sa-tive, 105: a. Granting dispensation.
Dis-pen'-sa-tive-ly, ad. By dispensation.
Dis-pen'-sa-tor-y, a. Having the power of granting dispensation.
Dis'-pen-sa-tion, 89: s. An exemption from a law; a permission to do something forbidden; an allowance to omit something commanded.—See also above.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vish-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thin, 166: then, 166.

To DISPEOPLE, dīs-pē'-pl, 103, 101: v. a. To depopulate, to empty of people.

Dis-pep'-ple, 36: s. A depopulator.

To DISPERGE=dīs-pergē', v. a. To sprinkle.

DISPERMOUS, dīs-per'-mūs, 120: a. Containing only two seeds.—See Di-.

To DISPERSE=dīs-percē', 35, 153: v. a. To scatter, to drive to different parts; to dissipate; to distribute.

Dis-per'-ser, 35: s. A scatterer, a spreader.

Dis-per'-sed-ly, ad. In a dispersed manner.

Dis-per'-sed-ness, s. The state of being dispersed. Disperseness is little used.

Dis-per'-sive, 105: a. Having power to disperse.

Dis-per'-sion, (-shūn, 147): s. The act of sprinkling, scattering, or spreading; the state of being scattered.

To DISPIRIT=dīs-spīr'-it, 129: v. a. To discourage, to deject, to depress; to exhaust the spirits.

Dis-pir'-i-ted-ness, s. Want of vigour.

Dis-pir'-i-ous, 146, 120: a. Cruel. [Spenser.]

To DIS-PLACE, v. a. To put out of place; to put out of any state or condition; to disorder.

Dis-place'-ment, s. The act of displacing.

DIS-PLA'-CEN-CY.—See lower under To Displease.

To DIS-PLANT, v. a. To move a plant; to dishabit.

Dis-plan'-ta-tion, s. The act of displanting.

To DIS-PLAT, v. a. To untwist, to uncurl.

To DISPLAY=dīs-plāy', v. a. To spread wide; to exhibit to view or thought; to set out ostentatiously.

Dis-play', s. An exhibition to the view or the thoughts.

Dis-play'-er, s. He or that which displays.

To DISPLE.—See To Disciple.

To DISPLEASE, dīs-plēx', 137, 189: v. a. To offend, to make angry, to make sad.

Dis-plea'-sing-ness, s. Offensiveness.

DIS-PLĒAS'-ANT, (-plēz'-ānt, 120) a. Unpleasing, offensive.

Dis-plea'-ance, s. Anger, discontent. [Obs.]

Dis-plea'-ure, (-plēzh'-oor, 147) s. Uneasiness; pain received; offence; pain given; anger, indignation; state of disgrace; state of being discountenanced; disfavour.

To DIS-plea'-ure, v. a. To displease.

DIS-PLA'-CEN-CY, s. That which displeases, incivility, rudeness. [Little used.]

To DISPLODE=dīs-plōdē', v. a. To disperse with a loud noise; to vent with violence.

Dis-plō'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Noting disposion.

Dis-plō'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. The act of disploting.

To DISPLUME, dīs-plōom', 109: v. a. To strip of feathers; to strip of the badges of honour.

To DISPONGE, dē-spūngē', 105, 116: v. a. To expunge; to discharge as from a sponge.—See Di-.

DISPORT, dīs-pō'urt, 130, 47: s. Sport, play, pastime. Dis is merely intensive.—See Di-.

To Dis port, v. a. and n. To divert:—neu. To play, to toy, to wanton.

To DISPOSE=dīs-pōzē', 137: v. a. and n. To place, distribute, or arrange; to employ to various purposes; to bestow; to adapt; to incline, with to; to make fit, with for; to regulate; To Dispose of, to apply to any purpose; to put into the hands of another; to give away by authority; to direct; to conduct; to place in any condition; to put away by any means:—neu. [Obs.] To bargain.

Dis-pōzē', 82: s. Disposal; dispensation; disposition. [Obs.]

Dis-pō'-ser, (-zer) s. Distributer; giver; bestower; governor; director.

Dis-pō'-sa-ble, 101: a. Capable of being disposed; free to be used or employed.

Dis-pō'-sion, s. The act of disposing; regulation; management; power of bestowing.

Dis'-po-si'-tion, (-zish'-ūn, 89) v. Order, distribution; natural fitness; tendency; temper; affection of kindness or ill-will; predominant inclination; assortment.

Dis-pō'-sitive, 105: a. That implies disposal [Out of use.]

Dis-pō'-sitive-ly, ad. Distributively. [Obs.]

Dis-pō'-i-tor, s. The planet which is lord of the sign where another planet is. [Astrol.]

Dis-pō'-sure, (-zh'oor, 147) s. Disposal. [Obs.]

To DISPOSSESS, dīs-pōz-zēss', 151: v. a. To put out of possession, to dis seize, to deprive.

Dis'-pos-ses'-sion, (-pōz-zēsh'-ūn, 147) s. The act of putting out of possession.

DIS-PRaise, (-prāiz, 151, 189) s. Blame, censure, dishonour.

To Dis-praise, v. a. To blame, to censure.

Dis-prais'-er, 36: s. A censurer.

Dis-prais'-i-ble, a. Maudable. [Little used.]

Dis-prais'-ing-ly, ad. With censure.

To DISPREAD, dīs-prēd', 120: v. a. and n. To spread different ways:—neu. To extend or expand itself.—See Di-.

Dis-prēad'-er, s. A divulger. [Milton.]

To DISPRIZE=dīs-prizē', v. a. To undervalue.

Dis-prov'-it, s. Loss, detriment.

DIS-PROOF.—See under To Disprove.

To DIS-PROVE=dīs-prōv'-er-ty, v. a. To take away the possession of. [Shakspeare.]

Dis'-pro-por'-tion, (-pō'ur'-shūn, 130, 89) s. Unsuitableness of one thing or part to another; want of symmetry; disparity.

To Dis'-pro-por'-tion, v. a. To mismatch, to join unsuitably.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-a-ble, 101: a. Unsuitable in form or quantity.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-a-bly, ad. Unsuitably, not symmetrically.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-a-ble-ness, s. Unsuitableness to something else.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-a-, ad. Without proportion.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-al-ly, ad. Unsuitably with respect to quantity or value.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-al-i-ty, 84: s. The state of being without proportion.—[Sir T. More.]

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-ate, a. Unsymmetrical; unsuitable either in bulk, form, or value.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-ate-ly, ad. Unsuitably; unsymmetrically.

Dis'-pro-por'-tion-ate-ness, s. Unsuitableness in bulk, form, or value.

To Dis-prov', (-prōv, 107) v. a. To confute, to refute: in old authors, to disapprove.

Dis-pro'-ver, 36: s. One that disproves.

Dis-pro'-va-ble, 101: a. That may be refuted.

Dis-proof, s. Confutation.

DIS-PUN'-ISH-A-BLE, a. Not punishable; without penal restraint. [Swift.]

To Dis-punge.—See To Disponge.

To DISPUTE=dīs-pūtē', v. n. and a. To contend by argument, to debate:—act. To contend for by words or action; to question; to reason about, to discuss.

Dis-pu'te', 82: s. Contest, controversy.

Dis-pu'-ter, s. A controvertist, an arguer.

Dis-pu'-ting, s. The act of contending by words.

Dis-pu'te'-less, a. Indisputable.

Dis-pu'-ta-tive, 105: a. Disposed to dispute [Watts.]

Dis-pu'-tant, s. and a. A controvertist, an arguer; a reasoner:—adj. Disputing; engaged in controversy.

Dis'-pu-ta-ble, a. Liable to contest; controvertible; lawful to be contested.
Dis'-pu-ta'-tion, 89: s. The skill of controversy; argumentation; controversy; argumental contest.
Dis'-pu-ta'-tions, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Inclined to dispute; cavilling.
To DISQUALIFY, dīs-kwōi'-l-ē-fy, 76, 145, 140, 105: 6: v. a. To make unfit; to disabie by some natural or legal impediment; to deprive of a right or claim by some positive restriction; to dis-able.
Dis-qual'-i-fi-ca'-tion, 89: s. That which dis-qualifies or makes unfit.
Dis-qui'-et, (-kwī'-ēt, 189) s. and a. Uneasiness, want of tranquillity, vexation, anxiety:—a. t. Unquiet, uneasy, restless.
To Dis-qui'-et, v. a. To disturb, to harass.
Dis-qui'-et-er, 36: s. A disturber.
Dis-qui'-et-ful, 117: a. Producing uneasiness.
Dis-qui'-et-ly, ad. Without rest; anxiously.
Dis-qui'-et-ness, s. Uneasiness, restlessness.
Dis-qui'-e-tous, 120: a. Causing disquiet.
Dis-qui'-e-tude, s. Uneasiness, anxiety.
DISQUISITION, dīs-kwē-zish'-ūn, 76, 145, 151, 89: s. Literally, a seeking various ways. (see Di.) a formal inquiry into a subject by arguments: examination.
DISREGARD = dīs-rē-gard', s. Slight notice, neglect, contempt.
To Dis-re-gard', v. a. To slight, to contemn.
Dis'-re-gar'-der, s. One who disregards.
Dis'-re-gard'-ful, 117: a. Negligent.
Dis'-re-gard'-ful-ly, ad. Contemningly.
Dis-ri'-ish, 151: s. Bad taste, nauseousness, dislike of the palate, squeamishness.
To Dis-rel'-ish, v. a. To infect with an unpleasant taste; to want a taste for; to dislike.
Dis'-re-pute', s. Ill character, dishonour.
To Dis-re-pute', v. a. To bring into disgrace. [Obs.]
Dis-rep'-u-ta-ble, 92, 101: a. Not creditable.
Dis-rep'-u-ta'-tion, 89: s. Disgrace, dishonour, loss of reputation, ignominy.
Dis'-re-spect', s. Incivility, want of reverence.
To Dis-re-spect', v. a. To show or to feel disrespect to.
Dis'-re-spect'-ful, 117: a. Irreverent, uncivil.
Dis'-re-spect'-ful-ly, ad. Irreverently.
To Dis-robe', 151: v. a. To undress; to divest of.
To Dis-rupt', v. a. To uproot. [Goldsmith.]
DISRUPT = dīs-rūpt', 151: a. Rent asunder.—See Di. [Not much used.]
Dis-rup'-tion, 89: s. The act of breaking asunder; breach, rent, dilaceration.
To DISSATISFY = dīs-sāt'-is-fy, 6: v. a. To discontent, to displease, to fail to please.
Dis-sat'-is-fac'-tor-y, 129, 18, 105: a. Unable to give content.
Dis-sat'-is-fac'-tor-i-ness, s. Inability to give content.
Dis-sat'-is-fac'-tion, 89: s. The state of being dissatisfied; discontent.
To Dis-seat', v. a. To remove from a seat.
To DISSECT = dīs-sēkt', v. a. To cut in pieces; to anatomize; to divide and examine minutely.
Dis-sēc'-tor, 36: s. An anatomist; one who takes to pieces and examines closely.
Dis-sēc'-tion, s. The art of accurately cutting in pieces; anatomy; nice examination.
To DISSEIZE = dīs-sēzē', 103: v. a. To dispossess, to deprive. [Law.]
Dis-sēiz'-or, 177: s. He that dispossesses.
Dis-sēiz'-in, s. An unlawful dispossessing a man of his land, tenement, or other immovable or incorporeal right.

To DISSEMBLE, dīs-sēm'-bl. v. a. and n. To hide under false appearances, to pretend that not to be which really is; to pretend that to be which is not, to simulate, which word better expresses the last meaning;—n. To play the hypocrite; to use false professions, to wheedle.
Dis sem' bler, s. A hypocrite; one who dissembles.
Dis-sem' bling, a. and s. Making a false appearance or resemblance.—s. Disimulation.
Dis-sem' bling-ly, ad. With dissimulation.
Dis-sem'-blance, s. Want of resemblance, the literal meaning of the whole class.
To DISSEMINATE, dīs-sēm'-ē-nate, 105: v. a. To sow in various directions; (see Di-) to spread every way.
Dis-sem'-ē-na'-tor, 38: s. A sower, a spreader.
Dis-sem'-ē-na'-tion, 89: s. A scattering like seed; a sowing; a spreading.
To DISSENT = dīs-sent', v. a. To disagree in opinion, to differ; to differ from the established church.
Dis-sent', s. Difference in opinion; difference of religious opinion from that of the established church.
Dis-sen'-ter, s. One that dissents, particularly from the doctrine or government of the established church.
Dis-sen'-tient, (-sh'ēt, 147) a. Disagreeing;—s. One who declares his dissent.
Dis-sen'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. Disagreement, strife, contention, quarrel.
Dis-sen'-sious, (-sh'ūs, 147) a. Disposed to discord; quarrelsome.
Dis'-sen-ta'-ne-ous, 90, 120: a. Disagreeable; inconsistent. Milton uses Dis-sentany with the same meaning.
To DISSERT = dīs-sert', 35: v. n. To discourse or dispute on a subject. [Little used.]
Dis'-ser-ta'-tor, 38: s. One who writes a dissertation; one who debates.
Dis'-ser-ta'-tion, 89: s. A discourse, a disquisition, a treatise.
To DISSERVE = dīs-serv', 35, 189: v. a. To do injury or mischief to; to hurt.
Dis-ser'-ice, 105: s. Injury, mischief.
Dis-ser'-vice-a-ble, 101: a. Hurtful.
Dis-ser'-vice-a-ble-ness, s. Injury, harm.
To Dis-ser'-tle, 101: v. a. To unsettle. [Obs.]
To DISSEVER = dīs-sēv'-er, 36: v. a. To part in two; to divide. Dis- is merely intensive.—See Di.
Dis-sev'-er-ance, s. Separation.
DISSIDENT, dīs-sē-dēt, a. and s. Not agreeing;—s. A dissenter.
Dis'-si-dence, s. Disagreement; discord.
DISSILIENT, dīs-sīl'-ē-ēt, 90: a. Starting asunder; opening with elastic force.
Dis-sil'-i-ence, s. The act of starting asunder.
Dis'-si-li'-ion, 89: s. Bursting in two, starting different ways.
DISSIMILAR, dīs-sīm'-l-lar, 105, 34: a. Unlike, heterogeneous.—Compare To Dissemble, &c.
Dis-sim'-i-lar'-ty, 81, 129, 105: s. Unlikeness, dissimilitude.
Dis-sim'-i-lar [Lat.] 170: s. An illustration by a contrary, as simile by something which is like.
Dis'-si-mil'-i-tude, s. Unlikeness, want of resemblance.
To Dis-sim'-ule, v. a. To put on a contrary appearance, to dissemble. [B. Jonson.]
Dis-sim'-u-la'-tion, 89: s. The act of dissembling, hypocrisy; strictly, a concealing of something, as distinguished from simulation or a feigning of something.
To DISSIPATE, dīs-sē-pātē, 105: v. a. To scatter every way; (see Di-) to disperse; to squander Dis-si-pa-ble, 101: a. Easily scattered.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mish-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: tshn, 166: thēn, 166.

Dis-si-pa'-tion, 89: s. The act of dispersion; the state of being dispersed; the state of an unfixed mind; dissolute living.

To DISSOCIATE, dis-sō'-shē-āt, 90: v. a. To separate, to disunite.

Dis-sō'-ci-a'-tion, 150, 89: s. Separation.

Dis-sō'-ci-a'-ble, 98, 101: a. Not to be brought to fellowship.

Dis-sō'-cial, (-sh'āl) a. Not social.

DISSOLUBLE, &c.—See in the ensuing class.

To DISSOLVE, diz-zōlv', 151, 189: v. a. and n.

To destroy the form of by disuniting the parts by heat, moisture, or other agency: to melt, to liquefy: to disunite in any manner; to loose; to separate; to break; to solve; to clear.—new. To melt, to liquefy, to sink away.

Dis-sol'-ver, s. That which has the power of dissolving; one who solves a difficulty.

Dis-sol'-va-ble, a. That may be dissolved.

Dis-sol'-vent, a. and s. Having the power of dissolving or melting:—s. That which has the power of dissolving the parts by heat or moisture.

Dis-sol'-u-ble, 109, 101: a. Capable of being dissolved, dissolvable.

Observe the digraph ss is no longer vocal.

Dis-sol'-u-bil'-i-ty, 85, 81, 69: s. Liability to suffer a dissolution of parts.

Dis-sol'-ute, (-l'oot, 109) a. Originally, loose in a general sense, but at present, loose in behaviour and morals; wanton, unrestrained, dissolved in pleasures; debauched.

Dis-sol'-ute-ly, ad. Loosely, wantonly.

Dis-sol'-ute-ness, s. Laxity of manners.

Dis-sol'-u-tion, 89: s. Dissoluteness; [Obs.] the act of liquefying by heat, moisture, or other agency; the state of being liquefied; the substance formed by dissolving a body in a menstruum, now called a solution; the resolution of a body into its constituent elements; death; the act of breaking up.

DISSONANT=dis-sō-nānt, a. Discordant, harsh, inharmonious; disagreeing.

Dis-sō-nance, s. Discord; disagreement.

To DIS-SUADE, (-swādē, 145) v. a. To exhort against; to divert by reason or importunity.

Dis-sua'-der, 36: s. He that dissuades.

Dis-sua'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. and s. Tending to divert or deter:—s. Argument employed to divert from any purpose.

Dis-sua'-sion, (-zhūn, 147) s. Urgency of reason or importunity against any thing; deportation.

To DIS-SWEE'-REN, 114: v. a. To deprive of sweetness.

DISSYLLABLE, dis-sīl'-lā-bl, 101: s. A word of two syllables.—See Di.

Dis-syl'-ab'-ic, 88: a. Consisting of two syllables.

DISTAFF=dis'-tāff, 11: s. The staff from which the flag is drawn in spinning: it is used as an emblem of the female sex. Literally, it seems to mean a double or a divided staff; (see Di.) Junius and others give the whole as a Saxon word, but it does not occur in Lyd's Dictionary.

To DISTAIN=dis-tān', v. a. To stain, to tinge, to sully. Dis is merely intensive.—See Di.

DISTANT=dis'-tānt, a. Literally, standing apart; (see Di.) remote in place; remote in time either past or to come; remote in connexion, or in nature; not obvious; keeping off from, reserved.

Dis-tant-ly, ad. Remotely; reservedly.

Dis-tance, s. Space in length between two things without considering any thing else between them; remoteness in place; space marked out; remoteness in time; ideal disjunction; respect; alienation.

To Dis-tance, v. a. To place remotely; to throw off from view; to leave behind as in a race.

DISTASTE, dis-tāst', 111: s. Aversion of the palate, disrelish; disgust, dislike, alienation of affection;

To Dis-taste', v. a. To disrelish, to dislike, to loathe; to offend, to disgust; to vex, to sour, to displease.

Dis-taste'-ful, 117: s. Nauseous; offensive: in Shakespeare it occurs in the sense of malignant.

Dis-taste'-ful-ness, s. Dislike, disagreeableness.

Dis-ta'-stive, 105: s. That which gives disrelish.

DISTEMPER=dis-tēm'-per, 36: s. Literally, want of temper or proper mixture of ingredients or disturbance from some part being predominant; hence disease, malady; bad constitution of mind; ill humour, depravity of inclination; among our old authors it is often used in its literal sense of want of temper as applied to climate; or of want of balance of parts, as opposed to temper or the due mingling of ingredients.—See also lower.

To Dis-tēm'-per, v. a. To disorder, to disturb, to ruffle; to deprive of temper or moderation; to make disaffected or malignant.

Dis-tēm'-per-ate, a. Immoderate. [Obs.]

Dis-tēm'-per-ance, s. Distemperature.

Dis-tēm'-per-a-ture, (-tūr, 147) s. Intemperate-ness; excess of heat or cold, or other qualities; violent tumultuousness; perturbation of mind; commixture of contraries, confusion; slight illness, indisposition.

Dis-TEM'-PER, s. A way of tempering paint (diff-ferent (see Di.) from the ordinary way, namely, by size, whites of eggs, &c., instead of oil. To paint in distemper, is to paint with colours so mixed.

Dis-tēm'-per-ing, s. The practice of painting in distemper.

To DISTEND=dis-tēnd', v. a. To stretch out in all directions; to spread apart.

Dis-tent', a. and s. Spread, distended. [Thomson.] —s. [Obs.] Breadth.

Dis-tēn'-tion, 89: s. The act of stretching; the state of being stretched; breadth; it is also written Distension.

Dis-tēn'-sive, (-civ, 105) a. That may be distended.

DISTICH, dis'-stick, 161: s. A couplet, or two poetic lines.—See Di.

Dis-ti-chous, (-cūs) a. Having two rows. [Bot.]

To DISTILL=dis-tīl', v. n. and a. To give itself out or fall by drops; (see Di.) to flow gently and silently; also, to practise distillation.—act. To let fall in drops; in an appropriated sense, to draw by distillation.

Dis-tīl'-la-tion, 89: s. Primarily, the act of falling in drops or of pouring out in drops; also that which falls in drops; appropriately and commonly, the act or process of drawing off the more volatile or spirituous parts of a fluid substance in vapour, and then reducing the vapour to a fluid by condensation; that which is obtained by such process.

Dis-tīl'-ment, s. That which is drawn by distillation, a distillation. [Shake.]

Dis-tīl'-la-ble, a. That may be distilled.

Dis-tīl'-la-tory, a. Belonging to distillation.

Dis-tīl'-ler, 36: s. One who distils; one whose occupation is to extract spirit by distillation.

Dis-tīl'-ler-y, 129: s. The place where spirits are distilled.

DISTINCT, dis-tīngkt', 158: a. Literally, having a difference pointed or marked out; different, not the same in number or kind; different or separate, clear, unconfused; specified; in Milton it may be found in the sense of variegated. Originally it was also a verb signifying to distinguish.

Dis-tīngkt'-ly, ad. In a distinct manner.

Dis-tīngkt'-ness, s. Nice observation of the difference between different things; such separation of things as makes them easy to be separately observed.

Dis-tīngkt'-ive, 105: a. Marking a distinction or difference; having the power to distinguish and discern.

Dis-tīngkt'-ive-ly, ad. Particularly, not confusedly.

Dis-tīngkt'-ion, 89: s. The act of discerning differ-

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Words: gāt'-wāy; chāp'-mān; pā-pā; lāw; gōōd; j'ōō; i. e. jeu, 55: a. u. &c. note, 171 ences; note of difference; honourable note; that by which one differs; separation; division; discrimination; discernment.

To Dis-tin'-guish, (-tīng'-gwish, 145) v. a. and n. To note distinctly; to separate; to divide; to mark; to make known:—new. To make distinction.

Dis-tin'-guish-er, s. One that distinguishes.

Dis-tin'-guish-a-ble, 101: a. Capable or worthy of being distinguished; worthy of regard.

Dis-tin'-guish-ing-ly, ad. With distinction.

Dis-tin'-guish-ment, s. Distinction; observation of difference. [Little used.]

To DISTORT=dis-tōrt', 37: v. a. To twist differently from the natural or regular shape; (see Di-); to deform by irregular motions; to put out of the true posture; to wrest from the true meaning.

Dis-tort'-tion, 89: s. The act of distorting; state of being distorted; crookedness, grimace; perversion.

To Dis-TRACT', v. a. To pull different ways at once; (see Di-); to separate, to divide; to turn from a single direction toward various points; to fill the mind with contrary considerations, to perplex, to confound, to make mad. For Distractile as a term in botany, see Supp.

Dis-traught', (-trāut, 162) part. Distracted. [Obs.]

Distract, a. with the same sense, is likewise obsolete.

Dis-trac'-ter, 36: s. One that distracts.

Dis-trac'-ted-ly, ad. Madly, frantically.

Dis-trac'-ted-ness, s. The state of being distracted; madness.

Dis-trac'-tive, 105: a. Causing perplexity.

Dis-trac'-tion, 89: s. Tendency to different parts; confusion; disturbance; madness.

To DISTRAIN=dis-trān', v. a. and n. Originally, to bind fast or strain hard, the prefix, Di-, being merely intensive, and, in some of our old authors, to rend, to tear; but appropriately, to seize for the payment of rent or taxes:—new. To make seizure; (Blackstone writes the word Distrain.) The substantive used in correspondence with the meaning of the verb, is DISTRASS, (a distraining;) but as this belongs to a different etymological branch, however the original stock may be the same, it is placed under the verb below:—new. To make secure; to seize a debtor's goods.

Dis-train', s. A distress or distraining.

Dis-train'-or, 38: s. He that seizes.

Dis-train'-a-ble, a. Liable to be distrained.

Dis-TRIN'-GAS, 158: s. The name of a writ directed to a sheriff or other officer commanding him to distrain. [Lat.]

To Dis-TRESS', v. a. Literally, to press or strain; and, hence, to afflict with pain or anguish, to oppress with calamity, to make miserable.—See also lower.

Dis-tress', s. Calamity, misery, misfortune.—See also lower.

Dis-tres'-sing, a. Harassing, afflicting.

Dis-tres'-sed-ness, s. The state of being distressed.

Dis-tres'-ful, 117: a. Miserable; full of trouble; attended with poverty.

Dis-tres'-ful-ly, ad. Miserably.

Dis-TRESS', s. The act of pressing or straining by the agency of law; a distraining; a compulsion in real actions by which a man is assured to appear in court, or to pay a debt or duty which he refused; the thing seized.

To Dis-tress', v. a. To prosecute to a seizure.

To DISTRIBUTE=dis-trib'-ute, v. a. To divide among two or more, to deal out, to administer; to separate as into classes; in printing, to separate types and replace them in their cells.

Dis-trib'-u-ter, s. One that distributes.

Dis-trib'-u-tive, 105: a. That distributes; that assigns the species; that separates or divides.

Dis-trib'-u-tive-ly, ad. Singly; particularly.

Dis-trib'-u-tion, 89: s. The act of dealing out; dispensation; the dividing and disposing in order the parts of any thing.

DISTRICT=dis-trīckt', s. Literally, that which is pressed or restrained with reference to the authorities it is subject to, the circuit within which a man may be compelled to legal appearance; hence, more largely, any portion of region or territory within given lines.

Dis-TRIC'-TION, 89: s. Sudden display, as in seizing on and drawing out the sword. [An unfrequent Latinism.]

Dis-TRIN'-GAS, 158: s.—See under To Distrain.

To DISTRUST=dis-trūst', v. a. Not to trust, to regard with diffidence.

Dis-trust', 82: s. Discredit; loss of credit; suspicion; want of faith or confidence.

Dis-trust'-ful, 117: a. Apt to distrust, suspicious, diffident, modest, timorous.

Dis-trust'-ful-ly, ad. In a distrustful manner.

Dis-trust'-ful-ness, s. Want of confidence.

Dis-trust'-less, a. Without suspicion.

DISTURB=dis-turb', v. a. To stir greatly, (Dis- is intensive,) to perplex, to disquiet; to interrupt, to hinder; to turn off from any direction. Milton has used the word as a noun.

Dis-tur'-ber, s. He that causes disturbance.

Dis-tur'-bance, s. Perplexity; interruption of a settled state; disorder; violation of peace.

DISUNIFORM, dis-ū-nē-fārm, 105, 38: a. Not uniform, heterogeneous.

To Dis-U-NIRE', v. a. and n. To separate, to divide, to part:—new. To fall asunder; to become separate.

Dis-u-ni'-ter, s. He or that which disunites.

Dis-u-ni'-ty, 81: s. A state of separation.

Dis-u-ni-on, (-fī-nē-ōn=ūn-yūn, 146, 18) s. Separation; disjunction; breach of concord.

Dis-USK', (-ūce, 152) s. Cessation of use, desuetude; cessation of custom.

To Dis-use', (-tize, 137) v. a. To cease to make use of; to disaccustom.

Dis-u-sage, (-ū-zāg, 99) s. The gradual cessation of use or custom.

To Dis-VAL'-UE, 151, 110: v. a. To undervalue.

Dis-val'-ue, s. Disregard, disgrace.

Dis-val'-u-a'-tion, 89: s. Disreputation.

To Dis-VOUCH', 151: v. a. To destroy the credit of.

Here end the classes of words formed with Dis-.

DISH=dish, s. A broad flat vessel in which food is served up at table; the meat served in a dish; any particular kind of food: A dish of tea is a cup of tea; a kind of measure among miners.

To Dish, v. a. To serve in a dish; to send up to table; in cant language, to gudgeon, to render helpless.

Dish-cloth, s. A cloth used in cleaning dishes.

DISK=disk, s. Originally, a piece of stone, iron, or copper, inclining to an oval figure, which the ancients hurled by the help of a leather thong put through a hole in the middle; a quoit; at present, the face of the sun, moon, or any planet, as it appears to a spectator in a different planet: in botany, the whole surface of a leaf; the fleshy circle between the stamens and pistils.

Dis-cus, s. The ancient quoit; a disk.

Dis'-cus, 120: a. Broad, flat, wide; resembling a disk. Dis' cold, a. Shaped as a disk.

DISME, dēme, [Old Fr.] 170: s. A tithe. [Obs.]

DITATION, dī-tā'-shūn, 89: s. The act of making rich. [Bp. Hall.]

DITCH=ditch, s. A trench cut in the ground, usually between fields; any long narrow receptacle of water; the moat with which a town is surrounded.

To Ditch, v. n. To make a ditch.

Ditch'-er, 36: s. One who digs ditches.

DITHYRAMB=dī-thē-rāmb, s. A hymn in honour of Bacchus full of wild transport as if written

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn i. e. mission 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: dīn, 166: thēn, 166.

under the influence of intoxication. The word is one of the names of Barchus.

DIH'-y-ram'-hic, 88: s. and a. A dithyramb; a poem intentionally wild:—a. Wild enthusiastic.

DITTON, di-tŭn, 89: s. Dominion. [Obs.]

DITONE=di'-tōne, s. An interval of two tones in music.—See Di-

DITTANDER=di-tan'-der, s. The plant pepperwort, which is sometimes used in lieu of pepper.

DITTANY, di-tŭn-ēy, s. An aromatic herb.

DITTO=di'-tō, ad. As said; the same. [Ital.]

DITTY, di-tēy, s. A poem to be sung; a song.

DI'-tied, (-tīd, 114) a. Sung; adapted to music.

DIURETIC=di'-ū-rēt'-ick, a. and s. Promoting urine:—s. A medicine to promote urine.—See Dia-

DIURNAL=di'-ūr-nāl, a. and s. Relating to, or constituting the day; daily:—s. A journal, a day book.

Di-ūr-nal-ly, ad. Every day.

Di-ūr-nal-ist, s. A journalist.

DI'-u-rum'-NAL, a. Lasting; of long continuance.

Di-u-tur-ni-ty, 105: s. Length of duration.

DIVAN, dē-vān', 105: s. Among the Turks and other Orientals, a court of justice or council; a council chamber, a hall, a smoking room; a council generally.

To DIVARICATE, di-vār-ē-cāte, 41: v. n. and a. To part itself into two, to stride:—act. To divide into two.—See Di.

Di-va'-ri-ca'-tion, 89: s. A dividing into two; a forking; a crossing of fibres at different angles.

To DIVE=dive, v. n. To sink or go voluntarily under water; to go deep into any question; to immerge into any business.

Di'-ver, 36: s. One that dives; a water-fowl.

Di'-ving-bell, s. A contrivance by which persons may descend and remain below water without being suffocated.

To DIVEL, dē-vēl', v. n. To pull; to sever. [Obs.]

Di-vel'-lent, a. Drawing asunder.—See Di-

Di-vul'-sive, (-civ, 105) a. Pulling asunder.

Di-vul'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. A plucking apart

To Di-vel'-li-cate, v. a. To pull in pieces.

DIVEL=di'-vēl, s. A large cartilaginous fish.

DIVERB=di'-verb, s. A by-word, a proverb.

To DIVERGE, dē-verge', 105, 35: v. n. To tend various ways from one point.—See Di-. It is opposed to Converge.

Di-ver'-ging-ly, ad. In a diverging manner.

Di-ver'-gent, a. Receding from each other.

Di-ver'-gence, s. A proceeding in different directions from a common point.

DIVERS, DIVERSE, DIVERSION, &c.—See In the next class.

To DIVERT, dē-vert', 35: v. a. To turn off from any direction or course, particularly the mind by the attraction of something agreeable; (see under DIVERSION towards the end of the class;) to draw to from a different part.

Di-vert'-er, 36: s. He or that which turns off something.—See also lower.

Di-vert'-ti-cle, s. A turning; a by-way.

To Di-verse, 153: v. n. To turn aside. [Obs.]

Di-vert'-sion, (-shūn, 147) s. The act of turning aside; the act of drawing the attention and force of the enemy in warfare to a part where they will be less hurtful.—See also lower.

Di'-VERSE, a. Turned from one course, and hence various, different, multiform.

Di'-verse-ly, ad. In a diverse manner.

Di'-verse, (-verz, 151) a. Several, sundry, more than one.

Di-ver'-si-ty, s. Difference, dissimilitude; variety; distinct being not identity; variegation.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Foreels: gāte'-wāy: chāp'-mān: pāi pā': lāw: gōod: j'ōō, v. e. j'ew, 55: a, e, i, &c. mute, 171.

To Di-ver'-si-fy, (-fy, 6) v. a. To make different from another, to make different from itself; to vary to variegate.

Di-ver'-si-fi-ca'-tion, 89: s. The act of diversifying; variation; variegation; change.

Di-ver'-si-form, a. Of various form.

Di-ver'-sion, s. That which turns or draws the mind from care; sport, play, pastime.

To Di-vert, v. a. To please, to amuse.

Di-ver'-ter, s. He that pleases.

Di-ver'-ting, a. Amusing, entertaining.

Di-ver'-tive, 105: a. Recreative, diverting.

To Di-ver'-tize, 105: v. a. To amuse. [Dryden.]

Di-ver'-tize-ment, s. Diversion; pleasure; an old word in the language; but, as a modern word, revived with a half French pronunciation by making the last syllable nasal. (-mōnz, 170) to signify a short ballet or other entertainment between the acts of longer pieces.

To DIVEST, dē-vēst', 105: v. a. To strip of clothes, arms, or equipage; opposed to invest; to deprive: in law, to alienate as title or right, and, in a neuter sense, to be lost or alienated: in these legal senses the word is better written To Devest.

Di-vest'-ture, (-tūre, 147) s. The act of putting off.

To DIVIDE, dē-vidē', v. a. and n. To part or separate a whole; to keep apart by standing as a partition between; to disunite; to deal out; to give in shares:—neut. To part, to sunder; to be of different opinions.

Di-vi'-der, 36: s. He or that which divides.

Di-vi'-ded-ly, ad. Separately.

Di-vi'-du-ble, a. That may be divided.

Di-vi'-dunt, a. Different. [Shaks.]

Di-vi'-dend, 92: s. In arithmetic, the number to be divided; commonly, the quotient or share to each of a number of claimants, particularly the share of the interest or profit accruing from any fund, capital, or stock employed in trade; or the share to each creditor of the effects of an insolvent.

Di-vid'-u-al, 146: a. Shared in common with others. [Milton.]

Di-vis'-i-ble, (-viz'-ē-bl, 151, 105, 101) a. Capable of being divided into parts, separable.

Di-vis'-i-bil'-i-ty, 84, 105: s. The quality of admitting division, or separation into parts.

Di-vis'-i-ble-ness, s. Divisibility.

Di-vis'-ion, (-vizh'-ūn, 147) s. The act of dividing into parts; the state of being divided; that which keeps apart, partition; the part separated; disunion, difference; parts into which a discourse is distributed; variation of melody in some given fundamental harmony; in arithmetic, the separation of a given number into any parts required.

Di-vi'-sor, (-zor, 38) s. The number given by which the dividend is divided.

Di-vi'-sive, (-civ, 152, 105) a. Forming division or distribution; creating division or discord.

DIVINE, dē-vinē', 105: a. and s. Partaking of the nature of God; proceeding from God; excellent in a supreme degree; appropriated to God; (see also lower):—s. One appropriated to the service or study of God, a clergyman, a theologian.

Di-vine'-ly, ad. By the agency or influence of God; supremely; in a manner noting a Deity.

Di-vine'-ness, s. Divinity, participation of the divine nature, supreme excellence.

Di-vin'-i-ty, 92: s. Participation of the nature of God; deity, godhead; a celestial being; the science of divine things, or theology.

Di-vine', a. Inspired, presageful. [Obs.]

To Di-vine', v. a. and n. To foretell:—neut. To utter prognostication; to feel presages; to conjecture, to guess.

Di-vi'-ner, 36: s. One that divines or professes divination; a conjurer, a guesser.

Div'-i-na'-tion, 92, 89: s. A prediction or foretelling of future things; conjectural prediction.

Div'-i-na'-tor, 38: s. One who professes divination, a diviner.

Div'-i-na'-tor-y, a. Professing divination.

DIVISIBLE, &c.—See under To Divide.

DIVORCE, dē-vōrce, 105, 130, 47: s. The legal separation of husband and wife; separation, disunion; the sentence by which a marriage is dissolved; the cause of any penal separation.

To Di-vor'ce, v. a. To separate a husband and wife from the other; to force asunder, to separate by violence, to put away.

Di-vor'-cer, 36: s. The person or cause that produces divorce or separation.

Di-vor'ce-ment, s. Divorce.

Di-vor'-cive, 105: a. Having power to divorce.

To DIVULGE, dē-vūl'ge, 105: v. a. To publish; to proclaim; to make known.

Di-vul'-ger, 36: s. One that divulges.

Di-vul'-gate, a. Published. [Little used.]

Div'-ul-ga'-tion, s. A divulging or publishing.

DIVULSIVE, &c.—See under To Diver.

To DIZEN, dī'-zen, 114: v. a. To dress, to deck; to make fine. [Obsolete or vulgar.]

DIZZY, dīz'-zēy, 105: a. Giddy; causing giddiness; whirling; thoughtless.

To Diz'-zy, v. a. To whirl round; to make giddy.

Diz'-zi-ness, s. Giddiness.

Diz'-zard, 34: s. A blockhead, a fool.

DO=dō, s. The first note in the rising scale of the gamut. Some musicians have used it: the other notes re, re, mi, fa.

To DO, dō, 107:

Thou Dost, dūst, 116:

He Dost, } dūz, 120:

Dost, } dūth, 116:

I Did=dīd,

Done, dūn, 107, 116:

v. a. and n. To act or practise; to perform, to achieve, to execute, to transact, to produce any effect; to finish; the phrase what to do with, signifies, How to bestow, What use to make of, What course to take, Which way to get rid of:—new. To act or behave in any manner; to make an end; to fare; to be with regard to sickness or health; to succeed; to fulfil a purpose; to deal with. It is used to save the repetition of another verb, as a pronoun its noun; also as an auxiliary verb for the sake of emphasis, or for the transposition of affirmative into negative or interrogative sentences.

Do, (dō) 189: s. A feat or deed. [Obs.]

Do-er, (dō'-er) s. He that does something

Do-ing, 143: s. pl. Things done, events, transactions; feats, actions good or bad; stir, bustle.

DEED, s. That which is done, an action, exploit, performance; fact, reality, whence the word Inde'd; in law, an instrument under seal, and comprehending a contract between two or more persons.

Deed'-less, a. Inactive, indolent, sluggish.

To DOAT.—See To Dote.

DOCILE, dōc'-il, 94, 105: a. Teachable.

Do-cil'-i-ty, 105: s. Readiness to learn.

Do-c'-i-ble, (dōs'-sē-bl, 101) a. Docile. [Milton.]

Do-c'-i-ble-ness, s. Docility. [Is. Walton.]

DOCIMACY, dōc'-sē-mā-cēy, s. The art or practice of assaying metals; judicial probation in Athens.

Do-c'-i-mas'-tic, 38: a. Pertaining to the proving of metals; pertaining to the ancient docimacy.

DOCK=döck, s. A plant accounted a weed.

DOCK=döck, s. A place for building or laying up ships, into which water is let in and out at pleasure.

To Dock, v. a. To lay up in dock.

Dock'-yard, s. A place or yard where ships are built, and naval stores reposit.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

Consonants: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166

To DOCK=döck, v. a. To cut off or clip; to curtail or shorten; to deduct from; to destroy or bar i cutting off; to cut short a horse's tail.

Dock, s. The tail of a horse after it has been docked.

Dock'-et, 14: s. Literally, a slip or docked piece of paper; a ticket affixed to something; a brief in writing or a piece of paper or parchment containing the effect of a greater writing; a register of cases; To strike a docket, is said of a creditor who gives a bond to the lord chancellor, proving his debtor to be a bankrupt; whereupon a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against him.

To Dock'-et, v. a. To make an abstract or summary of the heads of a writing; to abstract and enter in a book; to mark the contents of paper on the back, to mark with a docket, to ticket.

DOCTOR, &c.—See in the next class.

DOCTRINE, döck'-trīn, 105: s. In a general sense, whatever is taught, learning; hence, a principle or position, or the principles at large, laid down as true by a teacher; also the act of teaching.

Doc'-tri-nal, a. and s. Containing doctrine or something formally taught; pertaining to the act or means of teaching:—s. [Dr. South.] Something that is part of doctrine.

Doc'-tri-nal-ly, ad. In the form of doctrine; positively. For Doctrinaire, see Supp.

Doc'-tor, 38: s. A teacher; one whom a university formally pronounces learned in his respective faculty by admitting to the highest degree of divinity, of law, of physic, or of music.—See also lower.

Doc'-tor-ly, ad. Like a learned man. [Bp. Hall.]

Doc'-tor-al, a. Relating to the degree of a doctor.

Doc'-tor-al-ly, ad. In manner of a doctor.

Doc'-tor-ate, s. The decree of a doctor. Doctorship may also be met with in the same sense.

Doc'-tor-s-com'mons, 151: s. pl.—See Commons.

Doc'-u-ment, s. Precept; dogma. In this sense obsolete.—See the modern sense lower.

To Doc'-u-ment, v. a. To teach.

To DOCT'-OR, 38: v. a. To act as a doctor of medicine, to physic, to cure; to attempt remedies.

Doc'-tor, s. One that doctors.

Doc'-tor-ess, s. She that doctors.

Doc'-u-ment, s. A general name for a writing which contains some precept, instruction, or direction; some evidence, proof, or record.

To Doc'-u-ment, v. a. To furnish with documents.

Doc'-u-men'-tar-y, 129, 12, 105: a. Pertaining to written evidence. Documental is less proper in the same sense: It belongs rather to the ancient use of Document given above, and signifies, pertaining to instruction.

DODDER=död'-der, 36: s. A parasitical plant that draws its nourishment from other plants.

Dod'-dered, (-dērd, 114) a. Overgrown with dodder.

DODECAGON, dō-döck'-ā-gōn, s. A figure of twelve sides.

Do-dec'-a-he'-dron, s. A solid figure contained by twelve pentagons.

Do-dec'-a-gyn'-ian, (-jīn'-yān, 146) a. Twelve-fold feminine, or having twelve pistils. [Bot.]

Do'-de-can'-dri-an, a. Twelve-fold masculine, or having twelve stamens. [Bot.]

To DODGE=dödgē, v. n. To start suddenly aside; to shift place at another's approach; to raise expectations and disappoint them; to use craft; to play fast and loose:—act. To evade by a sudden shift of place.

Dod'-ger, 36: s. One who dodges or evades.

DODMAN=död'-mān, s. A crustaceous fish.

DODO=dö'-dō, s. A scarce and very large bird in the Isles of the Indian ocean.

DOE=dōc, 108: s. A she deer, the female of a buck

DOG

DOE, DOES, DOER, DOINGS — See To DO.

To DOFF=doŋf, 155: v. a. To put or do off; to strip, to put away, to get rid of.

DOG=dōg, s. A well-known domestic animal of numerous species; a reproachful name for a man; a constellation called Sirius or Canicula, during the time of whose continuance above the horizon at the same part of the day with the sun, extend what are called the Dog-days—To give or send to the dogs, to throw away; To go to the dogs, to be ruined. It is used adjectively in some phrases to signify male, as the dog-fox: A pair of dogs, is a couple of irons for burning wood upon. The word is used as a name for many common instruments, e. g. an iron rod used by sawyers to fasten a log of timber to the roller at a saw-pit.

To Dog, v. a. To follow any one watching him with an insidious design.

Dogged, (dōgd, 114) part. Followed as by a dog.

Dog-ged, (-gōd, 77) a. Like a dog; sullen, sour, morose.

Dog'-ged-ly, ad. Sullenly, gloomily, sourly; with an obstinate resolution.

Dog'-ged-ness, s. Gloomly determination of mind; sullenness.

Dog'-gish, 77: a. Churlish, growling, snappish. Dog-ly may be met with in the same sense.

Dog'-gish, (dōg'-gish, 77) s. A small Dutch vessel with one mast, so called from its meanness. For the same reason, inferior alum-stones are called Doggers.

Dog'-ger-man, s. A sailor belonging to a dogger.

Dog'-ger-el, (dōg'-guēr-ēl, 77) a. and s. Mean, despicable; applied in particular to verse of a low, burlesque kind:—s. An irregular mean sort of verse, used in burlesque poetry.

Dog'-cheap, a. Cheap as dogs' meat.

Dog'-draw, s. A term in the old forest laws, signifying the seizure of an offender in the act of leading a hound by whose scent he is tracking the deer.

Dog'-s'-kar, 143: s. The corner of a leaf in a book, turned down to note the page.

To Dog'-s'-ear, v. a. To turn down in dog's-ears.

Dog'-tooth, s. A sharp pointed human tooth which is also called the eye-tooth.

Among the remaining compounds are Dog-fight; Dog-hearted, (pitiless); Dog-hole, (a vile habitation); Dog-kennel or Dog-house; Dog-leach, a dog-doctor; Dog-loose; Dog-mad, (mad as a dog); Dog-sick, (sick as a dog); Dog-skin; Dog-sleep, (pretended sleep); Dog's-meat; Dog-trick, (a vile trick); Dog-trot, (a gentle trot); Dog-vane, (a small vane on ship-board made of a thread, cork, and feathers); Dog-watch, (an evening watch of two hours on ship-board); Dog-wary, (tired as a dog); also, Dog-fish, (a shark); and Dog-fly, (a voracious fly); and as names of plants, Dog-berry; Dog-brar; Dog-cabbage; Dog-rose; Dog's-bane; Dog's-rue; Dog's-stones; Dog-tooth-violet and Dog-wood, (the Cornelian cherry.)

DOGE=dōje, s. The title of the chief magistrate of Venice and Genoa.

Do'-gate, s. The office or dignity of a doge.

DOGMA=dōg'-md, s. A settled opinion; a principle, maxim, or tenet; (compare Doctrine, &c., with which it is allied): a determination to some one way of thinking on a point which others hold doubtful.

Dog-mat'-ic, 88: } a. Pertaining to a settled opi-

Dog-mat'-i-cal, } nion; positive, magisterial.

Dog-mat'-i-cal-ly, ad. Positively.

Dog-mat'-i-cal-ness, s. The quality of being dog-matical.

To Dog'-ma-tize, v. n. To assert positively without advancing proof; to teach magisterially.

Dog'-ma-ti'-zer, s. An assertor; a magisterial teacher.

Dog'-ma-tism, 158: s. Positiveness in opinion; arrogance in stating tenets or principles.

Dog'-ma-tist, s. A dogmatizer.

The schemes entire, and the principles to which the numbers refer, precede the Dictionary.

Vowels: gāte'-way: chāp'-mān: pā-pā': lāw: wōd: j'ō. i. e. j'ew, 55: a. o. u. &c. mufe, 171.

DOM

DOILY, doy'-lēy, 29, 105: s. A species of woollen stuff so called from the name of the first maker; a small napkin, generally figured and folded, placed with the wine glasses after dinner.

DOIT=doit, 29: s. A small piece of Dutch money.

DOLABRIFORM, dō-lāb'-rē-fāwrm, 92, 105, 38: a. Formed as an axe or hatchet. [Botany.]

DOL.E=dōle, s. That which is dealt out: the act of dealing or distributing; provision or money given in charity; portion, lot.

To Dole, v. a. To deal out, to distribute.

DOL.E=dōle, s. Dolor, (see below,) grief, sorrow.

Dole'-ful, 117: a. Sorrowful, dismal, melancholy; afflicted; impressing sorrow.

Dole'-ful-ly, ad. In a doleful manner.

Dole'-ful-ness, s. Sorrow; querulousness.

Dole'-some, (-sūm, 107) a. Melancholy, gloomy.

Dole'-some-ly, 105: ad. In a dolesome manner.

Dole'-some-ness, s. Gloom, melancholy.

Do'-lor, 94, 191, 38: s. Pain, pang, grief, sorrow, lamentation, complaint. Hence, Do'-lo-rous, a.

Do'-lo-rous-ly, ad. Sorrowfully, mournfully.

Dol'-o-riū'-er-ous, a. Producing pain.

Dol'-o-riū'-ic, 88: a. Causing pain or grief.

DOLICHURUS, dōl'-ē-kū'-rūs, 161: a. Literally, short-tailed, applied to a verse with a redundant syllable.

DOLL=dōl, 155: s. A child's puppet or baby.

DOLLAR=dōl'-lar, 34: s. A silver coin of various value in Spain, Germany, Holland and America.

DOLOR, &c.—See above under Dole.

DOLPHIN=dōl'-fin, 163: s. The name of a genus of cetaceous fish, of an oblong body, and a narrow sharp snout, that prey upon other fish, and adhere to whales as they leap out of the water. The female is called Dolphinet.—Compare Dauphin, &c.

DOLT, dōlt, 116: s. A heavy, stupid fellow.

Dolt'-ish, a. Stupid, dull; mean.

Dolt'-ish-ness, s. Folly, stupidity.

DOMAIN=dō-mān', s. Dominion, empire; possession, estate; the land about a mansion house occupied by a lord.—Compare Demain.

DOME=dōme, s. A house; a building or fabric; a hemispherical arch or cupola.

Do-mes'-tic, 88: a. and s. Belonging to the house; private; done at home; inhaling the house; not wild; not foreign; intestine; Domestic is also used:—s. One kept in the same house, a servant.

Do-mes'-ti-cal-ly, ad. Relatively to domestic affairs.

To Do-mes'-ti-cate, v. a. To make domestic; to familiarize; to render as it were of the same family.

Do-mes'-ti-ca'-tion, 89: s. The act of domesticating.

Dom'-i-cile, (-cīl, 105) s. A house, a residence.

To Dom'-i-cile, v. a. To establish a residence. Domiciliate may also be met with.

Dom'-i-cil'-i-ty, (-yā'-lē, 146) a. Pertaining to an abode; intruding into an abode.

To Dom'-i-cil-ize, 6: v. a. To tame; also to divide the heaven into houses, a term in Astrology. [Obs.]

DOMESDAY.—See Doom-day.

To DOMINATE=dōm'-ē-nāte, 105: v. a. and n. To govern:—nes. To predominate, to rule.

Dom'-i-nant, 12: a. and s. Predominant, presiding:—s. That sound in any mode of music which makes a fifth to a final.

Dom'-i-na'-tor, 38: s. The presiding or predominant power, influence, or governor.

Dom'-i-na'-tive, 105: a. Imperious; governing.

Dom'-i-na'-tion, 89: s. Power, dominion; tyranny insolent authority; one holding high authority.

Do-min'-ion, (dō-mīn'-yōn, 146, 18) s. Sovereign authority, power; right of possession or use; territory, region, district; predominance, ascendancy; an order of angels.

To DOM'-t-NEER', v. n. To rule with insolence; to swell, to bluster; to act without control.

DOMINICAL, dō-mīn'-ē-cāl, a. Noting the Lord's day or Sunday; pertaining to the Lord.

DOMINICAN, dō-mīn'-ē-cān, a. and s. Pertaining to St. Dominic:—s. A Dominican friar.

DON=dōn, s. A Spanish title formerly given only to noblemen, but now of general application. Our old writers adopt it under the form Dan. In ludicrous or familiar style, it is used to signify a person of wealth or importance.

To DON=dōn, v. a. To do on, that is, to put on, opposed to Doff. It is used by our old writers.

DONATION=dō-nā'-shūn, 89: s. The act of giving; the grant or legal instrument by which a thing is given; the thing given.

Do'-nar-y, s. A thing given to sacred use.

DON'-ative, 92, 105: s. and a. A gift, a largess, a present; a benefice given by a patron without presentation to the bishop, or institution or induction by his order:—adj. Vested or vesting by donation.

Do'-nor, 177: s. One who gives.

Do'-nee', 177: s. One to whom a donation is made.

DONATIST=dōn'-ā-tist, s. One of a sect established by Donatus early in the fourth century.

DONE, dūn, part. and interj.—See To Do:—interj. Agreed! It is used in concluding a bargain or wager.

DONJON.—See Dungeon.

DONKEY, dōng'-kēy, 158: s. An ass.

DOODLE, dō'-dl, 101: s. A trifle, a simple fellow.

To DOOM=dōm, v. a. Originally to judge; (compare Deem;) at present, to condemn, to send to punishment by authoritative command, to destine.

Doom, s. Judicial sentence, judgement; the final judgement; state to which one is destined; ruin.

Dooms'-day, 143: s. The great day of judgement.

DOOMS'-DAY-HOOK, 118: s. Properly, doom-book, or a book establishing the extent and limits of the lands of England in order that doom or judgement in matters of property might be done. It was compiled by order of William the Conqueror.

DOOR, dōur=dōre, 108, 47: s. The gate of a house; entrance, portal, passage, avenue.

Door'-case, (-cāc), 152: s. The frame of a door-way.

Other compounds are Door'-post, Door'-keeper, Door'-sail, (the nail on which in ancient doors the knocker struck; hence the phrase Dead as a door-nail;) and Door'-stead, (entrance or place of a door.)

DOQUET.—See Docket.

DORÉE=dō'-rēy=dōrē'-lēy, 47: s. A fish with yellow or gilt sides, whence its name. It is commonly called John Dory.

DORIAN, dōr'-ē-ān, 90: } a. Pertaining to Doris,

DORIC=dōr'-ick, 88: } a western district of ancient Greece, or to the second order of architecture invented by the Dorians; Grecian.

Dor'-ic-ism, 92, 153: s. A phrase in the Doric dialect; a provincialism.

DORMANT=dor'-mānt, a. and s. Sleeping; in a sleeping posture; not public; concealed, not divulged; in a leaning posture as the rafters of a roof:—s. A large beam sometimes called a sleeper. Dormar is used in the same sense.

Dor'-man-cy, s. Quiescence.

Dor'-mi-tive, 105: s. An opiate.

Dor'-mi-tory, 129, 18: s. A place to sleep in.

Dor'-ma-k-win'-dow, 34, 125: s. A window in the roof of a house.—See Dormant above.

The sign = is used after modes of spelling that have no irregularity of sound.

CONSUMMANTS: mīsh-ūn, i. e. mission, 165: vīzh-ūn, i. e. vision, 165: thīn, 166: thēn, 166.

Dor'-mouse, (-mowce, 152) s. A small animal which passes much of the winter in a state of torpor.

DORN=dāwn, 37: s. A fish, the thornback.

DORR=dor, 155, 37: s. The hedge chaffer.

DORSAL=dor'-sāl, a. Relating to the back.

Dorse, 153: s. A canopy. [Obs.] Dorsum, the Latin noun, means the back, and is used in English for a ridge.

Dor'-sel, or Dor'-ser, s. A pannier for a beast of burthen. Our old authors also use losser.

Dor'-sif'-er-ous, } 120: a. Bearing or producing

Dor'-sif'-ar-ous, } seeds on the back of their leaves.

DOSE=dōce, s. That which is given, appropriated to the quantity of medicine prescribed for one time; any thing taken in the manner of a dose.

To Dose, 152: v. a. To proportion a medicine properly; to give physic or any thing nauseous.

DOSSIL, dōs'-sil, s. A portion of lint for a sore made into the shape of a date or olive.

DOST.—See To Do.

DOT=dōt, s. A small point or spot made with a pen or sharp instrument.

To Dot, v. a. and n. To mark with specks:—neu To make dots.

DOTAGE, &c.—See under To Dote.

DOTAL=dōt'-āl, a. Given as a portion or dowry. Compare Dose.

Do'-ta'-tion, 89: s. The act of giving a dowry or portion; endowment.

To DOTE=dōte, v. a. To have the intellect impaired by age or passion; to be in love to extremity: To dote upon, to regard with excessive fondness.

Do'-ter, 36: s. One who dotes; or who dotes upon.

Do'-ting-ly, ad. With excessive fondness.

Do'-tage, 99: s. Loss of understanding; imbecility of mind; excessive fondness.

Do'-turd, 34: s. One of intellects impaired by age.

DOTTARD=dōt'-tārd, s. A tree kept low by cutting.

DOTTEREL=dōt'-tēr-ēl, 129: s. A bird of various species, popularly esteemed a foolish bird.

DOUANIER, doo-ān'-ē-āy, [Fr.] 170: s. A custom-house officer.

DOUBLE, dūb'-bl, 120, 101: a. ad. and s.

Two of a sort; in pairs; twice as much; having one added to another; twofold; of two kinds; two in number; having the power of two; acting two parts, the one open the other secret; deceitful:—ad. Twice over doubly:—s. Twice the quantity or number; a turn in running to escape pursuers; a shift, an artifice; a counterpart, as his or her double.

Doub'-ly, 105: ad. Twice; twofold; deceitfully.

Doub'-le-ness, s. The state of being double; duplicity.

To Doub'-le, v. a. and n. To enlarge by the addition of the same quantity; to have twice the quantity to repeat; to add one to another in the same order or parallel; to fold; to pass round a headland:—neu. To increase to twice the quantity; to turn back or wind in running; to play tricks, to use sleights.

Doub'-ler, 36: s. He that doubts.

Doub'-ling, s. The act of making double; a fold; also a trick, an artifice.

Among the compounds are To Double-charge; To Double-dye; To Double-gild; To Double-lock; To Double-shade; also, with double in the sense of deceitful, Double-dealer, Double-dealing; Double-tongue, Double-tongued; Double-eyed; Double-faced; Double-hearted; also, with double in a literal sense, Double-banked or benched; Double-buttoned; Double-octave; Double-plin; Double-threaded, Double-manned. Likewise, Double-biting, (said of an instrument or weapon with a double edge;) Double-minded, (wavering in mind;) Double-quarrel, (a complaint in matters ecclesiastical to the archbishop against an inferior ordinary for delay of justice, which being attended with further delay, is so named, because both ordinaries are now responsible for it;) and Double-meaning, (containing two meanings.) As a substantive, this last phrase frequently takes the following French form:

DOU-BLE-EN-TEN-DEE, (doo-bl-ēng-tōngⁿ-dr, 170) s. A phrase with a double meaning, the more hidden being frequently an obscene one.

DOUB'-LET, (dūb'-lēt) s. A man's garment that folds close round the body, a waistcoat; in the plural, Doublets, the same number on both sides.

DOUB'-LOON, s. A coin, being double the value of the pistole.

To DOUBT, dowt, 31, 157: v. n. and a. To question, to be in uncertainty; to fear; to suspect; to hesitate:—act. To hold questionable; to fear, to suspect, to distrust.

Doubt, s. Uncertainty of mind; suspense; question, point unsettled; scruple, perplexity; suspicion; difficulty objected; dread.

Doubt'-er, 36: s. One who doubts or scruples.

Doubt'-ing-ly, ad. Dubiously; without confidence.

Doubt'-a-ble, a. That may be doubted.

Doubt'-ful, 117: a. Dubious; not settled in opinion; ambiguous; obscure; questionable; uncertain.

Doubt'-ful-ly, ad. With doubt.

Doubt'-ful-ness, s. Doubt; suspense.

Doubt'-less, a. and ad. Free from fear; void of apprehension: [Obs.]—ad. Unquestionably.

Doubt'-less-ly, ad. Doubtless; unquestionably.

DOUCET, (doo'-cēt, s. A little custard. [Obs.]

DOU-CEUR, (doo'-sur', [Fr.] 170) s. Sweetness; a present, a gift; a bribe.

DOUGH, dō, 125, 162: s. Paste leavened or unleavened, but yet unbaked. My cake is dough, my undertaking is immature.

Dough'-ey, (dō'-ēy) a. Soft, like dough.

DOUGHTY, dow'-tēy, 31, 105: a. Brave, noble, able, strong. Now seldom used but ironically.

Dough'-ti-ness, s. Heroic strength.

To DOUSE=dowce, 31, 152: v. a. and n. To put over head and ears in water:—neu. To fall suddenly into the water; to haul down suddenly.

To DOUT=dowt, 31: v. a. To do out, that is, to put out; hence dout'er, an extinguisher. [Obs.]

DOVE, dūv, 107, 189: s. A wild pigeon; a pigeon.

Dove'-cot, Dove'-house, s. A place for pigeons.

Dove'-s'-root, 158, 118: s. A species of geranium.

Dove'-tail, s. An extremity of a board shaped as a dove's tail spread, to be let into the correspondent indentation of another board, and so to join them.

To Dove'-tail, v. a. To join by means of dovetails; to join completely and compactly.

DOWABLE, DOWAGER.—See under Dower.

DOWDY, dow'-dēy, 31, 105: s. and a. An awkward, ill-dressed woman:—adj. Awkward and ill-dressed.

DOWER=dow'-er, 53: s. Primarily, a gift

DOWERY } =dow'-ur-ēy } or endowment; hence,

DOWRY } that which the wife brings to her husband in marriage; at present, more commonly, that portion of her deceased husband's lands or tenements which the widow possesses. In old authors, it is often written Dowre.

Dow'-ered, (-urd, 114, 134) a. Furnished with a dower.

Dow'-er-less, a. Unportioned; without a dower.

Dow'-a-ble, a. Entitled to dower; also, that may be endowed.

Dow'-n-ger, 36: s. A widow with a jointure; hence, generally, a title for ladies who survive their husbands.

DOWLAS=dow'-lāss, a. A coarse kind of linen.

DOWLE, dowl, s. A feather. [Shaks.]

DOWN=dow'n, 31: s. Soft feathers; soft wool or tender hair; the soft fibres of plants which wing the seeds; any thing that gives repose.

Dow'-ny, 103: a. Covered with down or nap; made of down; soft, soothing.

DOWN=dow'n, 31: s. (See Dune.) A large open plain, properly a flat on the top of a hill; a sand-bank in the plural, Downs, such ridges of elevated land as lie along the coasts, particularly of Kent and Sussex; hence the road in which ships lie off the hilly coast of Kent between the north and south Forelands.

DOWN=dow'n, 31: a. prep. ad. and interj.

Downright, [Obs.] dejected:—prep. Along a descent; from a higher place to a lower; from the higher in importance or dignity to the lower; from the source as of a river toward the mouth:—ad. On the ground; tending to the ground, or from higher to lower; from former to latter times; below the horizon; to a total subjection; into disgrace; into declining reputation. Up and down, ramblingly:—interj. Pull down! lay in the dust! destroy!

Down'-ward, (-word, 140, 38) a. Moving on a declivity; tending to the ground, declivous; bending, dejected.

Down'-wards, 143; Down'-ward, ad. Towards the centre: from a higher situation; in a course of successive descent.

DOWN'-CAST, 11: a. Bent down; directed down.

DOWN'-FALL, (-fāl, 112) s. Ruin, calamity; a sudden fall; destruction of fabrics.

DOWN'-FALL, 114: a. Ruined; fallen.

DOWN'-GY'-VEN, (-jī'-vēd) a. Hanging down like the loose clutture of feathers. [Shaks.]

DOWN'-RIGHT, (-rite, 115, 162) a. and ad. Plain; open; direct; honestly early:—ad. Straight down; plainly, bluntly, truly.

Among the remaining compounds are Down'-hearted, (spiritless;) Down'-hill, (a descent, or descending;)

Down'-looking or Down'-looked; Down'-lying, (bed-time; and, as an adjective, about to lie in, or near her time;)

Down'-sitting, (act or time of reposing;) and Down'-trodden.

DOWNY.—See under Down, soft feathers.

DOWRY, &c.—See Dower.

DOWSE=dowce, s. A slap on the face: To Douse, from which it comes, is little used. [Vulgar.]

DOXOLOGY, dōcks'-ō'-gēy, s. The form of giving glory to God, often repeated in the church service.

DOXY, dōck'-ēy, s. A man's wench.

To DOZE=dōz, v. n. and a. To slumber, to be half asleep; to live in a state of drowsiness:—act. [Little used.] To stupify.

Do'-zer, 36: s. A slumberer.

Do'-zy, a. Sleepy, drowsy, sluggish.

Do'-zi-ness, s. Sleepiness, drowsiness.

DOZEN, dūz'-zn, 116, 114: s. and a. The number twelve:—adj. Twelve.

